Scene II. France. Plains in Anjou.

Enter Charles, Burgundy, Alençon, Tarde, Reignier, La Pucelle, and For.

Char. These news, my lords, may cheer drooping spirits: ’Tis said the stout Parisians do revolt And turn again unto the warlike French.

Alen. Then march to Paris, royal Charles, And keep not back your powers in dalliance. Puc. Peace be amongst them, if they turn Else, ruin combat with their palaces!

Enter Scout.

Scout. Success unto our valiant general And happiness to his accomplishes! Char. What tidings send our scouts? I pray speak.

Scout. The English army, that divided Into two parties, is now conjoin’d in one, And means to give you battle presently, Char. Somewhat too sudden, sirs, the ing is; But we will presently provide for them.

So seems this gorgeous beauty to mine eyes.
Fain would I woo her, yet I dare not speak:
I'll call for pen and ink, and write my mind.
Fie, de la Pole! disable not thyself;

Hast not a tongue? is she not here?
Wilt thou be daunted at a woman's sight?

Ay, beauty's princely majesty is such,
Confounds the tongue and makes the senses rough.

Mar. Say, Earl of Suffolk—if thy name be so—
What ransom must I pay before I pass?
For I perceive I am thy prisoner.

Suf. How canst thou tell she will deny thy suit,
Before thou make a trial of her love?

Mar. Why speak'st thou not? what ransom must I pay?

Suf. She's beautiful and therefore to be woo'd:
She is a woman, therefore to be won.

Mar. Wilt thou accept of ransom? yea, or no.

Suf. Fond man, remember that thou hast a wife;
Then how can Margaret be thy paramour?
Mar. I were best to leave him, for he will not hear.

Suf. There all is marr'd; there lies a cooling card.

Mar. He talks at random; sure, the man is mad.

Suf. And yet a dispensation may be had.
Mar. And yet I would that you would answer me.

Suf. I'll win this Lady Margaret. For whom?

Why, for my king: tush, that's a wooden thing!

Mar. He talks of wood: it is some carpenter.

Suf. Yet so my fancy may be satisfied,
91
And peace established between these realms.
But there remains a scruple in that too;
For though her father be the King of Naples,
Duke of Anjou and Maine, yet is he poor,
And our nobility will scorn the match.

Mar. Hear ye, captain, are you not at leisure?
Suf. It shall be so, disdain they ne'er so much:
Henry is youthful and will quickly yield.
Madam, I have a secret to reveal.

Mar. What though I be entrall'd? he seems a knight,
And will not any way dishonour me.

Suf. Lady, vouchsafe to listen what I say.

Mar. Perhaps I shall be rescued by the French;
And then I need not crave his courtesy.

Suf. Sweet madam, give me hearing in a cause—

Mar. Tush, women have been captive ere now.

Suf. Lady, wherefore talk you so?

Mar. I cry you mercy, 'tis but Quo id
Suf. Say, gentle princess, would you not sup

Your bondage happy, to be made a queen?

Mar. To be a queen in bondage is more vile
Than is a slave in base servility;
For princes should be free.

Suf. And so shall you,
If happy England's royal king be free.

Mar. Why, what concerns his freedom unto me?

Suf. I'll undertake to make thee Henry's queen,
To put a golden sceptre in thy hand
And set a precious crown upon thy head,
If thou wilt condescend to be my—

Mar. What? 120

Suf. His love.

Mar. I am unworthy to be Henry's wife.

Suf. No, gentle madam; I unworthy am
To woo so fair a dame to be his wife
And have no portion in the choice myself.
How say you, madam, are ye so content?

Mar. An if my father please, I am content.

Suf. Then call our captains and our colours forth.

And, madam, at your father's castle walls
We'll crave a parley, to confer with him. 130

A parley sounded. Enter Reignier on the walls.

See, Reignier, see, thy daughter prisoner!

Reig. To whom?

Suf. To me.

Reig. Suffolk, what remedy?

I am a soldier and unapt to weep
Or to exclaim on fortune's fickleness.

Suf. Yes, there is remedy enough, my lord:
Consent, and for thy honour give consent,
Thy daughter shall be weded to my king;
Whom I with pain have woo'd and won thereto;
And this her easy-held imprisonment
Hath gain'd thy daughter princely liberty. 140

Reig. Speaks Suffolk as he thinks?

Suf. Fair Margaret knows
That Suffolk doth not flatter, face, or feign.

Reig. Upon thy princely warrant, I descend
To give thee answer of thy just demand.

[Exit from the walls.

Suf. And here I will expect thy coming.

Trumpets sound. Enter Reignier, below.

Reig. Welcome, brave earl, into our territories;
Command in Anjou what your honour pleases.

Suf. Thanks, Reignier, happy for so sweet a child,
Fit to be made companion with a king:
What answer makes your grace unto my suit? 150

Reig. Since thou dost deign to woo her little worth
To be the princely bride of such a lord;
Upon condition I may quietly
Enjoy mine own, the country Maine and Anjou,
Free from oppression or the stroke of war,
My daughter shall be Henry's, if he please.

Suf. That is her ransom; I deliver her;
And those two counties I will undertake
Your grace shall well and quietly enjoy.

Reig. And I again, in Henry's royal name,
As deputy unto that gracious king, 161
Give thee her hand, for sign of plighted faith.

Suf. Reignier of France, I give thee kingly thanks,
Because this is in traffic of a king.

[Aside] And yet, methinks, I could be well content
To be mine own attorney in this case.
I'll over then to England with this news,
And make this marriage to be solemnized.
So farewell, Reignier; set this diamond safe
In golden palaces, as it becomes. 170

Reig. I do embrace thee, as I would embrace

The Christian prince, King Henry, were he —

Mar. Farewell, my lord: good wishes, and prayers
Shall Suffolk ever have of Margaret.  [G]

Suf. Farewell, sweet madam: but hark, Margaret:
No princely commendations to my king?

Mar. Such commendations as becom
A virgin and his servant, say to him.

Suf. Words sweetly placed and modest rected.
But, madam, I must trouble you again;
No loving token to his majesty?

Mar. Yes, my good lord, a pure uns
Never yet taint with love, I send the king.

Suf. And this withal.  [Kiss.] Mar. That for thyself: I will not so pro
To send such peevish tokens to a king.

[Exeunt Reignier and Marg.

Suf. O, wert thou for myself! But, Sir
Thou mayst not wander in that labyrinth;
There Minotaurs and ugly treasons lurk.
Solicit Henry with her wondrous praise:
Bethink thee on her virtues that surmount,
And natural graces that extinguish art;
Repeat their semblance often on the seas,
That, when thou comest to kneel at His feet,
Thou mayst bereave him of his wits with wo.

SCENE IV. Camp of the Duke of York in Anjou.

Enter York, Warrick, and others.

York. Bring forth that sorceress cond to burn.

Enter La Pucelle, guarded, and a Shep.

Shep. Ah, Joan, this kills thy father's outright!
Have I sought every country far and near,
And found it is my chance to find thee out,
Must I behold thy timeless cruel death?
Ah, Joan, sweet daughter Joan, I'll die thee!

Puc. Decrepit miser! base ignoble wret
I am descended of a gentler blood:
Thou art no father nor friend of mine.

Shep. Out, out! My lords, an please
'tis not so;
I did beget her, all the parish knows:
Her mother liveth yet, can testify
She was the first fruit of my bachelorship.

War. Graceless! wilt thou deny thy p age?

York. This argues what her kind of life been,
Wicked and vile: and so her death conclude.

Shep. Fie, Joan, that thou wilt be so ccle!
Go, and know thou art a collop of my flesh;
And for thy sake have I shed many a tear?
Deny me not, I prithee, gentle Joan.

not well,

There were so many, whom she may accuse.

War. It's sign she hath been liberal and free.

York. And yet, forsooth, she is a virgin pure.

Strumpet, thy words condemn thy brat and thee:

Use no entreaty, for it is in vain.

York. Break thou in pieces and consume to ashes,

Thou foul accursed minister of hell!

Enter CARDINAL BEAUFORT, Bishop of Winchester, attended.

Car. Lord regent, I do greet your excellence

With letters of commission from the king.

For know, my lords, the states of Christendom,

Moved with remorse of these outrageous broils,

Have earnestly implored a general peace

Betwixt our nation and the aspiring French;

And here at hand the Dauphin and his train

Approacheth, to confer about some matter.

York. Is all our travail turn'd to this effect?

After the slaughter of so many peers,

So many captains, gentlemen and soldiers,

That in this quarrel have been overthrown

And sold their bodies for their country's benefit,

Shall we at last conclude effeminate peace?

Have we not lost most part of all the towns,

By treason, falsehood and by treachery,

Our great progenitors had conquered?

O, Warwick, Warwick! I foresee with grief

The utter loss of all the realm of France.

War. Be patient, York: if we conclude a peace,

It shall be with such strict and severe covenants

As little shall the Frenchmen gain thereby.

Enter CHARLES, ALÉNÇON, Bastard, REIGNIER,

and others.

Char. Since, lords of England, it is thus agreed

That peaceful truce shall be proclaim'd in France,

We come to be informed by yourselves

What the conditions of that league must be.

York. Speak, Winchester; for boiling choler

chokes

The hollow passage of my poison'd voice,

By sight of these our baleful enemies.

Car. Charles, and the rest, it is enacted thus:

That, in regard King Henry gives consent,

Of mere compassion and of lenity,

To ease your country of distressful war,

And suffer you to breathe in fruitful peace,

You shall become true liege men to his crown:

And, Charles, upon condition thou wilt swear

To pay him tribute, and submit thyself;

Thou shalt be placed as viceroy under him,

And still enjoy thy regal dignity.

Alençon. Must he be then as shadow of himself?
Adorn his temples with a coronet,
And yet, in substance and authority,
Retain but privilege of a private man?
This prerogative is absurd and reasonless.

Char. 'Tis known already that I am possess'd
With more than half the Galliaan territories,
And therein reverence for their lawful king: 141
Shall I, for lures of the rest unvanquish'd,
Detract so much from that prerogative,
As to be call'd but viceroy of the whole?
No, lord ambassador, I 'll rather keep
That which I have than, coveting for more,
Be cast from possibility of all.
York. Insulting Charles! hast thou by secret means
Used intercession to obtain a league,
And, now the matter grows to compromise,
Stand'st thou aloof upon comparison?
Either accept the title thou usurp'st,
Of benefit proceeding from our king,
And not of any challenge of desert.
Or we will plague thee with incessant wars.

Reig. My lord, you do not well in obstinacy
To cavil in the course of this contract:
If once it be neglected, ten to one
We shall not find like opportunity.

Alen. To say the truth, it is your policy
To save your subjects from such massacre
And ruthless slaugthers as are daily seen
By our proceeding in hostiltiy:
And therefore take this compact of a truce,
Although you break it when your pleasure serves.

War. How say'st thou, Charles? shall our condition stand?

Char. It shall;

Only reserved, you claim no interest
In any of our towns of garrison.
York. Then swear allegiance to his majesty,
As thou art knight, never to disobey.
Nor be rebellions to the crown of England,
Thou, mother of kings, to the crown of England.
So, now dismiss your army when ye please;
Hang up your ensigns, let your drums be still,
For here we entertain a solemn peace. [Exeunt.

SCENE V. London. The palace.

Enter Suffolk in conference with the King,
Gloucester and Exeter.

King. Your wondrous rare description, noble earl,
Of beauteous Margaret hath astonish'd me:
Her virtues graced with external gifts
Do breed love's settled passions in my heart:
And like as rigour of temperous gusts
Provokes the mightiest hulk against the tide,
So am I driven by breath of her renown
Either to suffer shipwreck or arrive
Where I may have fruition of her love.

Suf. Tush, my good lord, this superficial tale
Is but a preface of her worthy praise;
The chief perfections of that lovely dame,
Had I sufficient skill to utter them,
Would make a volume of enticing lines,
Able to ravish any dull conceit:
And, which is more, she is not so divine,
So full complete with choice of all delights,
But with a humble lowliness of mind
She is content to be at your command;
Command, I mean, of virtuous chaste intent.
To love and honour Henry as her lord.
King. And otherwise will Henry ne'er same.
Therefore, my lord protector, give consent
That Margaret may be England's royal queen.

Glow. So should I give consent to flat'te
You, know, my lord, your highness is betroth'd
Unto another lady of esteem:
How shall we then dispense with that comitt
And not deface your honour with reproach?
Suf. As doth a ruler with unlawful oath
Or one that, at a triumph having vow'd
To try his strength, forsaketh yet the lists
By reason of his adversary's odds:
A poor earl's daughter is unequal odds,
And therefore may be broke without offensive.

Glow. Why, what, I pray, is Margaret's part?
Her father is no better than an earl,
Although in glorious titles he excel.

Suf. Yes, my lord, her father is a king,
The King of Naples and Jerusalem;
And of such great authority in France
As his alliance will confirm our peace.
And keep the Frenchmen in allegiance.

Glow. And so the Earl of Armagmac may Because he is near kinsman unto Charles.

And therefore, lords, since he affects her
It most of all these reasons bindeth us
In our opinions she should be preferred.
For what is wedlock forced but a hell,
An age of discord and continual strife;
Whereas the contrary bringeth bliss,
And is a pattern of celestial peace.
Whom should we match with Henry, being
But Margaret, that is daughter to a king?
Her peerless feature, joined with her birth,
Approves her fit for none but for a king:
Her valiant courage and undaunted spirit
More than in women commonly is seen,
Will answer our hope in issue of a king;
For Henry, son unto a conqueror,
Is likely to beget more conquerors,
If with a lady of so high resolve
As is fair Margaret he be link'd in love,
Then yield, my lords; and here conclude we
That Margaret shall be queen, and none but King. Whether it be through force of

Here are the articles of contracted peace
Between our sovereign and the French Charles,
For eighteen months concluded by consent.

Item, that the duchy of Anjou and the county of Maine shall be released and delivered during her father’s life

Uncle, how now! Pardon me, gracious lord; I suffer QUALM hath struck me at the heart I dim’d mine eyes, that I can read no further.

Uncle of Winchester, I pray, read on. [Reads] ‘Item, It is further agreed between them, that the duchies of Anjou and Maine be released and delivered over to the king father, and she sent over the King of land’s own proper costs and charges, without any dowry.’

They please us well. Lord marquess, kneel down:
here create thee the first duke of Suffolk, gird thee with the sword. Cousin of York, here discharge your grace from being regent of Parts of France, till term of eighteen months inter expired. Thanks, uncle Winchester, cester, York, Buckingham, Somerset, bury, and Warwick;

thank you all for this great favour done, entertainment to my princely queen, e, let us in, and with all speed provide she her coronation be perform’d.

Brave peers of England, pillars of the state, on Duke Humphrey must unload his grief, grief, the common grief of all the land. If did my brother Henry spend his youth, value, coin and people, in the wars? be so often lodge in open field, inter’s cold and summer’s parching heat, conquer France, his true inheritance? did my brother Bedford till his wits, deep by what policy what Henry got? you yourselves, Somerset, Buckingham, ever deep scars in France and Normandy? thine uncle Beaufort and myself, all the learned council of the realm, ed so long, sat in the council-house late, debating to and fro France and Frenchmen might be kept in awe, had his highness in his infancy in Paris in despite of foes? shall these labours and these honours die? Henry’s, Bedford’s, vigilance, deeds of war and all our counsel die? is of England, shameful is this league! this marriage, cancelling your fame, ng your names from books of memory, roo g the characters of your renown, moniments of conquer’d France, ing all, as all had never been!

Nephew, what means this passionate corroboration with such circumstance?

For France, ’tis ours; and we will keep it still.

Glou. Ay, uncle, we will keep it, if we can;
But now it is impossible we should: Suffolk, the new-made duke that rules the roost, Hath given the duchy of Anjou and Maine Unto the poor King Regnier, whose large style Agrees not with the leanness of his purse.

Sal. Now, by the death of Him that died for all, These counties were the keys of Normandy, But wherefore weeps Warwick, my valiant son?

War. For grief that they are past recovery: For, were there hope to conquer them again, My sword should shed hot blood, mine eyes no tears.

Anjou and Maine! myself did win them both; Those provinces these arms of mine did conquer: And are the cities, that I got with wounds, Deliver’d up again with peaceful words?

Mort Dieu!

York. For Suffolk’s duke, may he be suffocated, That dims the honour of this warlike isle! Should have torn and rent my very heart, Before I would have yielded his own. I never read but England’s kings have had Large sums of gold and dowries with their wives;
And our King Henry gives away his own, To match with her that brings no vantages.

Glou. A proper jest, and never heard before, That Suffolk should demand a whole fifteenth For costs and charges in transporting her! She should have stayed in France and starved in France,

Before—

Car. My Lord of Gloucester, now ye grow too hot: It was the pleasure of my lord the king.

Glou. My Lord of Winchester, I know your mind;

’Tis not my speech that you do mislike, But ’tis my presence that doth trouble ye.

Rancon will out: proud prelate, in thy face I see thy fury: if I longer stay,

We shall begin our ancient bickerings.

Lordings, farewell: and say, when I am gone, I propitious France will be lost ere long. [Exit.

Car. So, there goes our protector in a rage.

’Tis known to you he is mine enemy,

Nay, more, an enemy unto you all,

And no great friend, I fear me, to the king. Consider, lords, he is the next of blood,

And heir apparent to the English crown: Had Henry got an empire by his marriage, And all the wealthy kingdoms of the west, There’s reason he should be displeased at it. Look to it, lords; let not his soothing words Bewitch your hearts; be wise and circumspect. What though the common people favour him, Calling him ’ Humphrey, the good Duke of Glou-

Car. C襁ing their hands, and crying with loud voice, Jesu maintain your royal excellence! With ’ God preserve the good Duke Humphrey!’ I fear me, lords, for all this flattering gloss, He will be found a dangerous protector. Why should he, then, protect our sover-

He being of age to govern of himself?
SECOND PART OF KING HENRY VI.

[Enter Duke Humphrey and his wife Eliza.

Duck. Why droops my lord, like over-ripened corn, Hanging the head at Ceres' plenteous load? Why doth the great Duke Humphrey kneel bow'd, As frowning at the favours of the world? Why are thine eyes fix'd to the sullen earth, Gazing on that which seems to dim thy sight What seest thou there? King Henry's diadem Enchased with all the honours of the world? If so, gaze on, and grovel on thy face, Until thy head be circled with the same. Put forth thy hand, reach at the glorious globe, What, is't too short? I'll lengthen it with my hand, And, having both together heaved it up, We'll both together lift our heads to heaven And never more abuse our sight so low As to vouchsafe one glance unto the ground.

Glend O Nell, sweet Nell, if our last love Lord, Banish the canker of ambitious thoughts, And may that thought, when I imagine ill Against my king and nephew, virtuous Henry Be my last breathing in this mortal world.

Cousin of Somerset, join you with me, And all together, with the Duke of Suffolk, We'll quickly hoise Duke Humphrey from his seat. Caw. This weighty business will not brook delay; I'll to the Duke of Suffolk presently. [Exit. Som. Cousin of Buckingham, though Humphrey's pride And greatness of his place be grief to us, Yet let us watch the haughty cardinal: His insolence is more intolerable Than all the princes in the land beside: If Gloucester be displaced, he'll be protector. Buck. Or thou or I, Somerset, will be protector. Despite Duke Humphrey or the cardinal. [Exit Buckingham and Somerset.

Sal. Pride went before, ambition follows him. While these do labour for their own preferment, Behoves it us to labour for the realm. I never saw but Humphrey Duke of Gloucester Did bear him like a noble gentleman. Oft have I seen the haughty cardinal, More like a soldier than a man o' the church, As proud and proud as he were lord of all, Swear like a ruffian and demean himself Unlike the ruler of a commonweal. Warwick, my son, the comfort of my age, Thy deeds, thy plainness and thy housekeeping, Hath won the greatest favour of the commons, Excepting none but good Duke Humphrey: And, brother York, thy acts in Ireland, In bringing them to civil discipline, Thy late exploits done in the heart of France, When thou wert regent for our sovereign, Have made thee fear'd and honour'd of the people: Join we together, for the public good, In what we can, to bridge and suppress The pride of Suffolk and the cardinal, With Somerset's and Buckingham's ambition; And, as we may, cherish Duke Humphrey's deeds, While they do tend the profit of the land. War. So God help Warwick, as he loves the land; And common profit of his country! York. [Aside] And so says York, for he hath greatest cause.

Sal. Then let's make haste away, and look unto the main. War. Unto the main! O father, Maine is lost; That Maine which by main force Warwick did win, And would have kept so long as breath did last! Main chance, father, you meant; but I meant Maine, Which I will win from France, or else be slain. [Exit Warwick and Salisbury. York. Anjou and Maine are given to the French; Paris is lost; the state of Normandy Stands on a tickle point, now they are gone: Suffolk concluded on the articles, The peers agreed, and Henry was well pleased To change two dukedoms for a duke's fair daughter. I cannot blame them all: what is't to them? 220 'Tis they give away, and not their own. Pirates may make cheap pennyworths of their pillage And purchase friends and give to courtzans, Still revelling like lords till all be gone; While as the silly owner of the goods Weeps over them and wrings his hapless hand. And shakes his head and trembling stands all While all is shared and all is borne away, Ready to starve and dare not touch his own: So York must sit and fret and bite his tongue, While his own lands are bargain'd for and sold Methinks the realms of England, France Ireland Bear that proportion to my flesh and blood As did the fatal brand Althaea burn'd Unto the prince's heart of Calydon. Anjou and Maine both given unto the French Cold news for me, for I had hope of France, Even as I have of fertile England's soil. A day will come when York shall claim his And therefore I will take the Nevils' parts And make a show of love to proud Duke Humphrey, And, when I spy advantage, claim the crown For that's the golden mark I seek to hit: Nor shall proud Lancaster usurp my right, Nor hold the sceptre in his childish fist, Nor wear the diadem upon his head, Whose church-like humours fits not for a crown Then, York, be still awhile, till time do serve Watch thou and wake when others be asleep To pry into the secrets of the state; Till Henry, surfeiting in joys of love, With his new bride and England's dear-born And Humphrey with the peers be fall'n at just Then will I raise aloft the milk-white rose, With whose sweet smell the air shall be perfum'd And in my standard bear the arms of York, To grapple with the house of Lancaster; And, force perforce, I'll make him yield crown, Whose bookish rule hath pull'd fair England down!}

SCENE II. The Duke of Gloucester's bower.

[Enter Duke Humphrey and his wife Eliza.

Duck. Why droops my lord, like over-ripened corn, Hanging the head at Ceres' plenteous load? Why doth the great Duke Humphrey kneel bow'd, As frowning at the favours of the world? Why are thine eyes fix'd to the sullen earth, Gazing on that which seems to dim thy sight What seest thou there? King Henry's diadem Enchased with all the honours of the world? If so, gaze on, and grovel on thy face, Until thy head be circled with the same. Put forth thy hand, reach at the glorious globe, What, is't too short? troublesome dream this night doth make me sad.

Duch. What dream'd my lord? tell me, and I'll requite it.

th sweet rehearsal of my morning's dream.

du. Methought this staff, mine office-badge in court, as broke in twain; by whom I have forgot,

t, as I think, it was by the cardinal;

d on the pieces of the broken wand re placed the heads of Edmund Duke of Somerset.

d William de la Pole, first duke of Suffolk, 30 is was my dream; what it doth bode, God knows.

Duch. Yit, this was nothing but an argument at he that breaks a stick of Gloucester's grove ill lose his head for his presumption.

list to me, my Humphrey, my sweet duke:

thought I sat in seat of majesty

the cathedral church of Westminster, in that chair where kings and queens are crowned;

ere Henry and dame Margaret kneel'd to me on my head did set the diadem.

40

lou. Nay, Eleanor, then must I chide outsumptuous dame, ill-nurtured Eleanor, thou not second woman in the realm,

if the protector's wife, beloved of him?

t thou not worldly pleasure at command,

we the reach or compass of thy thought?

wilt thou still be hammering treachery,

'tumble down thy husband and thyself

at a top of honour to disgrace's feet?

by me, and let me hear no more!

duch. What, what, my lord! are you so cholerick?

Eleanor, for telling but her dream?

time I'll keep my dreams unto myself, not be check'd.

60

lou. Nay, be not angry; I am pleased again.

Enter Messenger.

res. My lord protector, 'tis his highness' pleasure do prepare to ride unto Saint Alban's, as the king and queen do mean to hawk.

lou. I go. Come, Neil, thou wilt ride with us?

ne. Yes, my good lord, I'll follow presently.

[Exeunt Gloucester and Messenger.

w I must; I cannot go before,

61

e Gloucester bears this base and humble

mind.

I, a man, a duke, and next of blood,

did remove these tedious stumbling-blocks smooth my way upon their headless necks;

being a woman, I will not be slack lay my part in Fortune's pageant.

are you there? Sir John! nay, fear not,

man,

are alone; here's none but thee and I.

Enter Hume.

one. Jesus preserve your royal majesty! 70

ch. What say'st thou? majesty! I am but grace.

one. But, by the grace of God, and Hume's advice,

grace's title shall be multiplied.

Duch. What say'st thou, man? hast thou as yet confer'd

With Margery Journald, the cunning witch,

With Roger Bolingbroke, the conjurer?

And will they undertake to do me good?

Hume. This they have promised, to show your highness

A spirit raised from depth of under-ground,

That shall make answer to such questions

As by your grace shall be propounded him.

Duch. It is enough; I'll think upon the questions.

When from Saint Alban's we do make return,

We'll see these things effect'd to the full.

Here, Hume, take this reward; make merry, man,

With thy confederates in this weighty cause.

[Exit.

Hume. Hume must make merry with the duchess' gold:

Marry, and shall. But, how now, Sir John Hume!

Seal up your lips, and give no words but mum:

The business asketh silent secrecy.

Dame Eleanor gives gold to bring the witch:

Gold cannot come amiss, were she a devil.

Yet have I gold flies from another coast;

I dare not say, from the rich cardinal

And from the great and new-made Duke of Suffolk,

Yet do I find it so; for, to be plain,

They, knowing Dame Eleanor's aspiring humour,

Have hired me to undermine the duchess

And buzz these conjurations in her brain.

They say 'A crafty knave does need no broker:'

Yet am I Suffolk and the cardinal's broker.

Hume, if you take not heed, you shall go near

To call them both a pair of crafty knaves.

Well, so it stands; and thus, I fear, at last

Hume's knavery will be the duchess' wreck,

And her attire will be Humphrey's fall:

Sort how it will, I shall have gold for all.

[Exit.

SCENE III. The palace.

Enter three or four Petitioners, Peter, the Armourer's man, being one.

First Petit. My masters, let's stand close:

my lord protector will come this way by and by,

and then we may deliver our supplications in the quill.

Sec. Petit. Marry, the Lord protect him, for he's a good man! Jesu bless him!

Enter Suffolk and Queen.

Peter. Here a' comes, methinks, and the queen with him. I'll be the first, sure.

Sec. Petit. Come back, fool; this is the Duke of Suffolk, and not my lord protector.

Suf. How now, fellow! wouldst any thing with me?

First Petit. I pray, my lord, pardon me; I took ye for my lord protector.

Queen. [Reading] 'To my Lord Protector!'

Are your supplications to his lordship? Let me see them: what is thine?

First Petit. Mine is, an't please your grace, against John Goodman, my lord cardinal's man, for keeping my house, and lands, and wife and all, from me.

Suf. Thy wife too! that's some wrong, indeed.

What's yours? What's here! [Reads] 'Against the Duke of Suffolk, for enclosing the commons of Melford.' How now, sir knave!

Sec. Petit. Alas, sir, I am but a poor petitioner of our whole township.

Peter. [Giving his petition] Against my master, Thomas Horner, for saying that the Duke of York was rightful heir to the crown.

Queen. What say'st thou? did the Duke of York say he was rightful heir to the crown?

Peter. That my master was; no, forsooth: my master said that he was, and that the king was an usurper.

Suf. Who is there? [Enter Servant.] Take this fellow in, and send for his master with a pursuivant present: we'll hear more of your matter before the king. [Exit Servant with Peter.] Queen. And as for you, that love to be protected Under the wings of our protector's grace,
Begin your suits anew, and sue to him.

Away, base cullions! Suffolk, let them go.

All. Come, let's be gone. [Exeunt.

Queen. My Lord of Suffolk, say, is this the guise,
Is this the fashion in the court of England?
Is this the government of Britain's isle,
And this the royalty of Albion's king?
What, shall King Henry be a pupil still Under the surly Gloucester's governance?

Am I a queen in title and in style,
And must be made a subject to a duke?
I tell thee, Pole, when in the city Tours
Thou ran'st a tilt in honour of my love
And stolest away the ladies' hearts of France,
I thought King Henry had resembled thee
In courage, courtship and proportion:
But all his mind is bent to holiness,
To number Ave-Maries on his beads;
His champions are the prophets and apostles,
His weapons holy saws of sacred writ,
His study is his tilt-yard, and his loves
Are brazen images of canonized saints.
I would the college of the cardinals
Would choose him pope and carry him to Rome,
And set the triple crown upon his head:
That were a state fit for his holiness.
Suf. Madam, be patient: as I was cause
Your highness came to England, so will I
In England work your grace's full content.

Queen. Beside the haughty protector, have we Beaufort
The imperious churchman, Somerset, Buckingham,
And grumbling York: and not the least of these
But can do more in England than the king.
Suf. And he of these that can do most of all
Cannot do more in England than the Nevils;
Salisbury and Warwick are no simple peers.

Queen. Not all these lords do vex me half so much
As that proud dame, the lord protector's wife.
She sweeps it through the court with troops of ladies,
More like an empress than Duke Humphrey's wife:
Strangers in court do take her for the queen;
She bears a duke's revenues on her back,
And in her heart she scorns our poverty:
Shall I not live to be avenged on her?
Contemptuous base-born callet as she is,
...e me my fan: what, minion! can ye not? 147

[She gives the Duchess a box on the ear. y you mercy, madam; was it you? whom? Was it! yea, it it was, proud French-woman: id I come near your beauty with my nails, set my ten commandments in your face.

Yes. Sweet aunt, be quiet; 'twas against her will.

hor. Against her will? good king, look to't in time;
I'll hamper thee, and dandle thee like a baby; unh in this place most master warno breeches, shall not strike Dame Eleanor unreveenged.

[Exit, ack. Lord cardinal, I will follow Eleanor,
I listen after Humphrey, how he proceeds;
's tickled now; her fume needs no spurs,
I'll alap far enough to her destruction. [Exit.

Re-enter Gloucester.

low. Now, lords, my choler being over-blown; waliking once about the quadrangle, me to talk of commonwealth affairs;
or your spiteful false objections,
'e them, and I lie open to the law:
God in mercy so deal with my soul,
in duty love my king and country! to the matter that we have in hand;
my sovereign, York is meetest man e your regent in the realm of France.

Before we make election, give me leave how some reason, of no little force,
York is most unmeet of any man.

I'll tell thee, Suffolk, why I am unmeet:
for I cannot flatter thee in pride;
if I be appointed for the place,
ord of Somerset will keep me here,
on discharge, money, or furniture,
'tance be won into the Dauphin's hands: time, I danced attendance on his will aris was besieged, famish'd, and lost.

That can I witness; and a fouler fact never traitor in the land commit.

Peace, headstrong Warwick!

Image of pride, why should I hold my peace?

[Enter Hornet, the Armourer, and his man Peter, guarded.

Because here is a man accused of treason:
God the Duke of York excuse himself! 185
Doth any one accuse York for a traitor?

What mean'st thou, Suffolk; tell me, what are these?

Please it your majesty, this is the man doth accuse his master of high treason: words were these: that Richard Duke of York, rightful heir unto the English crown that your majesty was an usurper.

Say, man, were these thy words?

An't shall please your majesty, I never nor thought any such matter: God is my
I am falsely accused by the villain.

By these ten bones, my lords, he did speak them to me in the garret one night, as we were scouring my Lord of York's armour.

York. Base dunghill villain and mechanical, I'll have thy head for this thy traitor's speech. I do beseech your royal majesty,
Let him have all the rigour of the law.

Hor. Alas, my lord, hang me, if ever I spoke the words. My accuser is my prentice; and when I did correct him for his fault the other day, he did vow upon his knees he would be even with me: I have good witness of this: therefore I beseech your majesty, do not cast away an honest man for a villain's accusation.

King. Uncle, what shall we say to this in law?

Glo. This doom, my lord, if I may judge:
Let Somerset be regent o'er the French,
Because in York this breeds suspicion:
And let these have a day appointed them For single combat in convenient place, For he hath witness of his servant's malice: This is the law, and this Duke Humphrey's doom:

Som. I humbly thank your royal majesty.

Hor. And I accept the combat willingly.

Pet. Alas, my lord, I cannot fight; for God's sake, pity my case. The spite of man prevaleth against me. O Lord, have mercy upon me! I shall never be able to fight a blow. O Lord, my heart!

Glo. Sirrah, or you must fight, or else be hang'd.

King. Away with them to prison; and the day of combat shall be the last of the next month. Come, Somerset, we'll see thee sent away.

[Flourish. Exeunt.

Scene IV. Gloucester's garden.

Enter Margery Jourdain, Hume, Southwell, and Bolingbroke.

Hume. Come, my masters; the duchess, I tell you, expects performance of your promises.

Boling. Master Hume, we are therefore provided: will her ladyship behold and hear our exorcisms?

Hume. Ay, what else? fear you not her courage.

Boling. I have heard her reported to be a woman of an invincible spirit: but it shall be convenient, Master Hume, that you be by her aloft, while we be busy below: and so, I pray you, go, in God's name, and leave us. [Exit Hume.] Mother Jourdain, be you prostrate and grovel on the earth; John Southwell, read you; and let us to our work.

Enter Duchess aloft, Hume following.

Duch. Well said, my masters; and welcome all. To this gear the sooner the better.

Boling. Patience, good lady; wizards know their times:
Deep night, dark night, the silent of the night,
The time of night when Troy was set on fire; 20 The time when screech-owls cry and ban-dogs howl
And spirits walk and ghosts break up their graves,
That time best fits the work we have in hand.
Madam, sit you and fear not: whom we raise,
We will make fast within a hallow’d verge.
[Here they do the ceremonies belonging, and make the circle; Bolingbroke or Southwell reads, Conjuro te, &c. It thunders and lightens terribly; then the Spirit riseth.

Spir. Adsum.
M. Jowrd. Asmath,
By the eternal God, whose name and power
Thou tremblest at, answer that I shall ask;
For, till thou speak, thou shalt not pass from
hence.

Spir. Ask what thou wilt. That I had said and done!
Boling. ‘First of the king: what shall of him become?’ [Reading out of a paper.
Spir. The duke yet lives that Henry shall depose;
But him oultrue, and die a violent death.
[As the Spirit speaks, Southwell writes the answer.
Boling. ‘What fates await the Duke of Suffolk?’
Spir. By water shall he die, and take his end.
Boling. ‘What shall befall the Duke of Somerset?’
Spir. Let him shun castles;
Safer shall he be upon the sandy plains
Than where castles mounted stand.
Have done, for more I hardly can endure.
Boling. Descend to darkness and the burning lake!
False fiend, avoid!
[Thunder and lightning. Exit Spirit.

Enter the DUKE OF YORK and the DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM with their Guard and break in.
York. Lay hands upon these traitors and their trash.
Beldam, I think we watch’d you at an inch.
What, madam, are you there? the king and commonweal
Are deeply indebted for this piece of pains:
My lord protector will, I doubt it not,
See ye return his gordon for these good deserts.
Duck. Not half so bad as thine to England’s
king,
Injured duke, that threatest where’s no cause.
Buck. True, madam, none at all: what call you this?
Away with them! let them be clapp’d up close,
And kept asunder. You, madam, shall with us.
Stafford, take her to thee.
[Exeunt above Duchess and Hume, guar ded.
We’ll see your trinkets here all forthcoming.
All, away!
[Exeunt guard with Jourdain, Southwell, &c.
York. Lord Buckingham, methinks, you watch’d her well:
A pretty plot, well chosen to build upon!
Now, pray, my lord, let’s see the devil’s writ.
What have we here? [Reads.
‘The duke yet lives, that Henry shall depose;
But him oultrue, and die a violent death.’
Why, this is just.
‘Aie te, Æacida, Romanos vincere posse.’
Well, to the rest:
‘Tell me what fate awaits the Duke of Suffolk?
By water shall he die, and take his end.
What shall betide the Duke of Somerset?
Let him shun castles;
Safer shall he be upon the sandy plains
Than where castles mounted stand.’
Come, come, my lords;
These oracles are hardly attain’d,
And hardly understood.
The king is now in progress towards So-Alban’s,
With him the husband of this lovely lady:
Thither go these news, as fast as horse carry them:
A sorry breakfast for my lord protector.
Buck. Your grace shall give me leave,
Lord of York,
To be the post, in hope of his reward.
York. At your pleasure, my good lord.
We
within there, ho!

Enter a Servingman.
Invite my Lords of Salisbury and Warwick
To sup with me to-morrow night. Away!

ACT II.

SCENE I. Saint Alban’s.
Enter the KING, QUEEN, GLOUCESTER, C
DINAL, and SUFFOLK, with Falconers laing.
Queen. Believe me, lords, for flying at brook,
I saw not better sport these seven years’ day
Yet, by your leave, the wind was very high;
And, ten to one, old Joan had not gone out.
King. But what a point, my lord, your fa-made,
And what a pitch she flew above the rest!
To see how God in all his creatures works!
Yea, man and birds are fain of climbing high.
Suf. ‘No marvel, an it like your majesty,
My lord protector’s hawks do tower so well;
They know their master loves to be aloft
And bears his thoughts above his falcon’s pit.
Glou. My lord, ’tis but a base ignoble nin
That mounts no higher than a bird can soar.
Car. I thought as much; he would be at the clouds.
Glou. Ay, my lord cardinal? how think you of that?
Were it not good your grace could fly to heav-
King. The treasury of everlasting joy.
Car. Thy heaven is on earth; thine eyes thoughts
Beat on a crown, the treasury of thy heart;
Pernicious protector, dangerous peer,
That smooth’st it so with king and commonwo Glou. What, cardinal, is your priestly grown peremptory?
Tantæ animis cæstibus iræ?
Churchmen so hot? good uncle, hide such lice;
With such holiness can you do it?
Suf. No malice, sir; no more than well comes
So good a quarrel and so bad a peer.
Glou. As who, my lord?
Suf. Why, as you, my lord?
An’t like your lordly lord-protecte-

Queen. And thy ambition, Gloucester.

King. I prithee, peace, good queen, I'd whet not on these furious peers; or blessed are the peacemakers on earth.

Car. Let me be blessed for the peace I make, against this proud protector, with my sword! [Aside to Gloucester.] Faith, holy uncle, would I were come to that! [Aside to Glo.] Marry, when thou dost.

Glo. [Aside to Car.] Make up no factious numbers for the matter, 40 thine own person answer thy abuse.

Car. [Aside to Glo.] Ay, where thou dostarest not peep: an if thou dostarest, is evening, on the east side of the grove.

King. How now, my lords!

Car. Believe me, cousin Gloucester, did not your man put up the fowl so suddenly, had had more sport. [Aside to Glo.] Come with thy two-hand sword.

Glo. True, uncle.

Car. [Aside to Glo.] Are ye advised? the east side of the grove?

Glo. [Aside to Car.] Cardinal, I am with you.

Car. Why, how now, uncle Gloucester! glo. Talking of hawking; nothing else, my lord. 50 [Aside to Car.] Now, by God's mother, priest, I'll shave your crown for this, all my fence shall fail.

Car. [Aside to Glo.] Medice, teipsum — elector, see to't well, protect yourself.

Glo. The winds grow high; so do your stomachs, lords.

Wife. Is this music to my heart! en such strings jar, what hope of harmony? my lords, let me compound this strife.

Grow. A miracle! A miracle!

Wife. Forsooth, a blind man at Saint Alban's shrine, him this half-hour, hath received his sight; an that ne'er saw in his life before.

Glo. Now, God be praised, that to believing souls light in darkness, comfort in despair!

The Mayor of Saint Alban's and his etheen, bearing Simpson, between two in chair, Simpson's Wife following.

Glo. Here comes the townsmen on proces- sion, present your highness with the man. Great is his comfort in this earthly vale, 70ough by his sight his sin be multiplied.

[Aside to Car.] Stand by, my masters: bring him near the king's ears; to Car. highness' pleasure is to talk with him.

King. Good fellow, tell us here the circumstance.

That we for thee may glorify the Lord.

What, hast thou been long blind and now restored?

Simp. Born blind, an't please your grace.

Wife. Ay, indeed, was he.

Suff. What woman is this?

Wife. His wife, an't like your worship. 80

Glo. Hadst thou been his mother, thou couldst have better told.

King. Where wert thou born?

Simp. At Berwick in the north, an't like your grace.

King. Poor soul, God's goodness hath been great to thee:

Let never day nor night unhallow'd pass,

Or but remember what the Lord hath done.

Queen. Tell me, good fellow, camest thou here by chance,

Wife. Most true, forsooth; and many time and oft.

Myself have heard a voice to call him so.

Car. What, art thou lame?

Simp. Ay, God Almighty help me!

Suff. How camest thou so?

Simp. A fall off of a tree.

Wife. A plum-tree, master.

Glo. How long hast thou been blind?

Simp. O, born so, master.

Glo. What, and wouldst climb a tree?

Simp. But that in all my life, when I was a youth.

Wife. Too true; and bought his climbing very dear.

Glo. Mass, thou lovest plums well that wouldst venture so.

Simp. Alas, good master, my wife desired some damsons,

And made me climb, with danger of my life.

Glo. A subtle knave! but yet it shall not serve.

Let me see thine eyes: wink now: now open them:

In my opinion yet thou see'st not well.

Simp. Yes, master, clear as day, I thank God and Saint Alban.

Glo. Say'st thou me so? What colour is this cloak of?

Simp. Red, master; red as blood.

Glo. Why, that's well said. What colour is my gown of?

Simp. Black, forsooth: coal-black as jet.

King. Why, then, thou know'st what colour jet is off?

Suff. And yet, I think, jet did he never see.

Glo. But cloaks and gowns, before this day, a many.

Wife. Never, before this day, in all his life.

Glo. Tell me, sirrah, what's my name?

Simp. Alas, master, I know not.

Glo. What's his name?
Simp. I know not.
Glon. Nor his?
Simp. No, indeed, master.
Glon. What's thine own name?
Simp. Saunder Simpcox, an if it please you, master.
Glon. Then, Saunder, sit there, the lyingest knave in Christendom. If thou hadst been born blind, thou might'st as well have known all our names as thus to name the several colours we do wear. Sight may distinguish of colours, but suddenly to nominate them all, it is impossible. My lords, Saint Alban here hath done a miracle; and would ye not think his cunning to be great, that could restore this cripple to his legs again?
Simp. O master, that you could!
Glon. My masters of Saint Alban's, have you not beadles in your town, and things called whips?
May. Yes, my lord, if it please your grace.
Glon. Then send for one presently.
May. Sirrah, go fetch the beadle hither straight.
[Exit an Attendance.]
Glon. Now fetch me a stool hither by and by. Now, sirrah, if you mean to save yourself from whipping, leap me over this stool and run away.
Simp. Alas, master, I am not able to stand alone:
You go about to torture me in vain.

Enter a Beadle with whips.
Glon. Well, sir, we must have you find your legs. Sirrah beadle, whip him till he leap over that same stool.
Bead. I will, my lord. Come on, sirrah; or with your doublet quickly.
Simp. Alas, master, what shall I do? I am not able to stand.
[After the Beadle hath hit him once, he leaps over the stool and runs away; and they follow and cry, 'A miracle!'
King. O God, seest Thou this, and bearest so long?
Queen. It made me laugh to see the villain run.
Glon. Follow the knave; and take this drab away.
Wife. Alas, sir, we did it for pure need.
Glon. Let them be whipped through every market-town, till they come to Berwick, from whence they came.
[Exeunt Wife, Beadle, Mayor, &c.
Car. Duke Humphrey has done a miracle to-day.
Suf. True; made the lame to leap and fly away.
Glon. But you have done more miracles than I; You made in a day, my lord, whole towns to fly.

Enter Buckingham.
King. What tidings with our cousin Buckingham?
Buck. Such as my heart doth tremble to unfold.
A sort of naughty persons, lewdly bent,
Under the countenance and confederacy
Of Lady Eleanor, the protector's wife,
The ringleader and head of all this rout,
second part of king henry vi.

and the black prince died before his father left behind him Richard, his only son, after Edward the third's death reign'd as king: 20

Henry Bolingbroke, Duke of Lancaster, eldest son and heir of John of Gaunt, and by the name of Henry the fourth, in the realm, deposed the rightful king, his poor queen to France, from whence she came, him to Pomfret; where, as all you know, less Richard was murder'd traitorously.

War. My heart assures me that the Earl of Warwick shall one day make the Duke of York a king.

York. And. Neil, this I do assure myself: Richard shall live to make the Earl of Warwick The greatest man in England but the king.

[Exeunt.

Scene III. A hall of justice.

Sound trumpets. Enter the king, the queen, Gloucester, York, Suffolk, and Salisbury; the duchess of Gloucester, Margery Jourdain, Southwell, Hume, and Bolingbroke, under guard.

King. Stand forth, Dame Eleanor Cobham, Gloucester's wife:

In sight of God and us, your guilt is great:
Receive the sentence of the law for sins
Such as by God's book are adjudged to death.

You four, from hence to prison back again;
From thence unto the place of execution:
The witch in Smithfield shall be burnt to ashes,
And you three shall be strangled on the gallows.

You, madam, for you are more nobly born,
Despoiled of your honour in your life,
Shall, after three days' open penance done,
Live in your country here in banishment,
With Sir John Stanley, in the Isle of Man.

Duch. Welcome is banishment; welcome were my death.

Glo. Eleanor, the law, thou see'st, hath judged thee:

I cannot justify whom the law condemns.

[Exeunt duchess and other prisoners, guarded.

Mine eyes are full of tears, my heart of grief.
Ah, Humphrey, this dishonour in thine age
Will bring thy head with sorrow to the ground!
I beseech your majesty, give me leave to go; 20
Sorrow would solace and mine age would ease.

King. Stay, Humphrey Duke of Gloucester: ere thou go,
Give up thy staff: Henry will to himself
Protector be; and God shall be my hope,
My stay, my guide and lantern to my feet:
And go in peace, Humphrey, no less beloved
Than when thou wert protector to thy king;
Queen. I see no reason why a king of years
Should be to be protected like a child.
God and King Henry govern England's realm. 30
Give up your staff, sir, and the king his realm.

Glo. My staff? here, noble Henry, is my staff:
As willingly do I the same resign
As e'er thy father Henry made it mine;
And even as willingly at thy feet I leave it
As others would ambitiously receive it.
Farewell, good king: when I am dead and gone,
May honourable peace attend thy throne! [Exeunt.

Queen. Why, now is Henry king, and Margaret queen;
And Humphrey Duke of Gloucester scourc himself,
That bears so shrewd a malice; two pulls at once;
His lady banish'd, and a limb lopp'd off.
This staff of honour raught, there let it stand
Where it best fits to be, in Henry's hand.

Suf. Thus droops this lofty pine and hangs his sprays;
Thus Eleanor's pride dies in her youngest days.
York. Lords, let him go. Please it your majesty,
This is the day appointed for the combat;
And ready are the appellant and defendant,
The armourer and his man, to enter the lists,
So please your highness to behold the fight.
Queen. Ay, good my lord; for purposely therefore
Left I the court, to see this quarrel tried.

King. O' God's name, see the lists and all things fit;
Here let them end it: and God defend the right!
York. I never saw a fellow worse bested,
Or more afraid to fight, than is the appellant,
The servant of this armourer, my lords.

Enter at one door, Horner, the Armourer, and his Neighbours, drinking to him so much that he is drunk: and he enters with a drum before him and his staff with a sand-bag fastened to it; and at the other door Peter, his man, with a drum and sand-bag, and 'Prentices drinking to him.

First Neigh. Here, neighbour Horner, I drink to you in a cup of sack: and fear not, neighbour, you shall do well enough.

Sec. Neigh. And here, neighbour, here's a cup of charneco.
Third Neigh. And here's a pot of good double beer, neighbour: drink, and fear not your man.
Hor. Let it come, I faith, and I'll pledge you all; and a fig for Peter!
First Pren. Here, Peter, I drink to thee:
and be not afraid.

See 'Pren. Be merry, Peter, and fear not thy master: fight for credit of the 'prentices.
Peter. I thank you all: drink, and pray for me, I pray you; for I think I have taken my last draught in this world. Here, Robin, an if I die, I give thee my apron: and, Will, thou shalt have my hammer: and here, Tom, take all the money that I have. O Lord bless me! I pray God! for I am never able to deal with my master, he hath learnt so much fence already.
Sal. Come, leave your drinking, and fall to blows. Sirrah, what's thy name?
Peter. Peter, Peter, forsooth.
Sal. Peter! what more?
Peter. Thump.
Sal. Thump! then see thou thump thy master well.
Hor. Masters, I am come hither, as it were, upon my man's instigation, to prove him a knave and myself an honest man: and touching the Duke of York, I will take my death, I never meant him any ill, nor the king, nor the queen:
and therefore, Peter, have at thee with a downright blow!
York. Dispatch: this knave's tongue begins to double.

Sound, trumpets, alarum to the combatants!

[Alarum. They fight, and Peter strikes him down.

Hor. Hold, Peter, hold! I confess, I confess treason. [Die.

York. Take away his weapon. Fellow, to God, and the good wine in thy master's way.
Peter. O God, have I overcome mine en-in this presence? O Peter, thou hast prev in right!

King. Go, take hence that traitor from sight;
For by his death we do perceive his guilt;
And God in justice hath reveal'd to us
The truth and innocence of this poor fellow,
Which he had thought to have murder'd w fully,
Come, fellow, follow us for thy reward.

[Sounds a flourish. Ex

SCENE IV. A street.

Enter Gloucester and his Servemen, mourning cloaks.

Glo. Thus sometimes hath the brightnes
a cloud;
And after summer evermore succeeds
Barren winter, with his wrathful nipping col
So cares and joys abound, as seasons fleet.
Sirs, what's o'clock?

Serv. Ten, my lord.

Glo. Ten is the hour that was appoint
To watch the coming of my punish'd duche
Unheat she may endure the flinty streets,
To tread them with her tender-feeling feet.
Sweet Nell, ill can thy noble mind abrook
The abject people gazing on thy face,
With envious looks, laughing at thy shame,
That erst did follow thy proud chariot-wheel
When thou didst ride in triumph throug streets.

But, soft! I think she comes; and I'll prep
My tear-stain'd eyes to see her miseries.

Enter the Duchess of Gloucester in a shee and a taper burning in her hand;

Sir John Stanley, the Sheriff, and Offi

Serv. So please your grace, we'll tak from the sheriff.

Glo. No, stir not, for your lives; k pass by.

Duch. Come you, my lord, to see my

Now thou dost penance too. Look how they See how the giddy multitude do point
And nod their heads, and throw their eyes o
Ah, Gloucester, hide thee from their hateful
And, in thy closet pent up, rue thy shame
And ban thine enemies, both mine and thine.

Glo. Be patient, gentle Nell; forget this Duch. Ah, Gloucester, teach me to myself!

For whilst I think I am thy married wife
And thou a prince, protector of this land,
Methinks I should not thus be led along
Maid'd up in shame, with papers on my back
And follow'd with a rabble that rejoice
To see my tears and hear my deep-fet groan.
The ruthless flint doth cut my tender feet,
And when I start, the envious people laugh
And bid me be advised how I tred.
Ah, Humphrey, can I bear this shameful y
'Twixt thou that e'er I'll look upon the w
Or count them happy that enjoy the summ dark shall be my light and night my day; 40
And shall I then be used reproachfully? 49
Stan. Like to a duchess, and Duke Humphrey's lady; 99

According to that state you shall be used. 99
Duch. Sheriff, farewell, and better than I fare; 87
Although thou hast been conduc't of my shame.

Sher. It is my office; and, madam, pardon me. 86
Duch. Ay, ay, farewell; thy office is discharged.

Come, Stanley, shall we go? 85
Stan. Madam, your pennance done, throw off this sheet,
And go we to attire you for our journey.

Duch. My shame will not be shifted with my sheet:
No, it will hang upon my richest robes
And show itself, attire me how I can.
Go, lead the way; I long to see my prison. 110

[Exeunt.]

ACT III.

SCENE I. The Abbey at Bury St Edmund's.

Sound a seamet. Enter the King, the Queen, 9
Cardinal Beaufort, Suffolk, York, Buckingham, Salisbury and Warwick to the Parliament.

King. I muse my Lord of Gloucester is not come:
"Tis not his wont to be the hindmost man,
What'er occasion keeps him from us now.
Queen. Can you not see? or will ye not observe
The crangeness of his alter'd countenance?
With what a majesty he bears himself;
How insolent of late he is become,
How proud, how peremptory, and unlike himself?

We know the time since he was mild and affable,
And if we did but glance a far-off look,
Immediately he was upon his knee,
That all the court admired him for submission:
But meet him now, and, be it in the morn,
When every one will give the time of day,
He knits his brow and shows an angry eye
And passeth by with stiff unbow'd knee,
Disdaining duty that to us belongs,
Small curs are not regarded when they grin;
But great men tremble when the lion roars;
And Humphrey is no little man in England.

First note that he is near you in descent,
And should you fall, he as the next will mount.
Me seemeth then it is no policy,
Respecting what a rancorous mind he bears
And his advantage following your decrease,
That he should come about your royal person
Or be admitted to your highness' council.
By flattery hath he won the commons' hearts,
And when he please to make commotion,
'Tis to be fear'd they all will follow him.

Now 'tis the spring, and weeds are shallow-rooted;
Suffer them now, and they'll o'ergrow the garden
And choke the herbs for want of husbandry.
The reverent care I bear unto my lord
Made me collect these dangers in the duke.
If it be fond, call it a woman's fear;
Which fear if better reasons can supplant,
I will subscribe and say I wrong’d the duke.
My Lord of Suffolk, Buckingham, and York,
Reprove my allegation, if you can; 40
Or else conclude my words effectual.

Suf. Well hath your highness seen into this duke;
And, had I first been put to speak my mind,
I think I should have told your grace’s tale.
The duchess by his subornation,
Upon my life, began her devilish practices:
Or, if he were not privy to those faults,
Yet, by repute of his high descent,
As next the king he was successive heir,
And such high vaunts of his nobility,
Did instigate the bedlam brain-sick duchess
By wicked means to frame our sovereign’s fall.
Smooth runs the water where the brook is deep;
And in his simple show he harbours treason.
The fox barks not when he would steal the lamb.
No, no, my sovereign; Gloucester is a man
Unsounded yet and full of deep deceit.

Car. Did he not, contrary to form of law,
Devises strange deaths for small offences done?
Yor. And did he not, in his protectorship, 60
Levy great sums of money through the realm
For soldiers’ pay in France, and never sent it?
By means whereof the towns each day revolted.

Buck. Tut, these are petty faults to faults unknown,
Which time will bring to light in smooth Duke of Humphrey.

King. My lords, at once: the care you have
of us,
To now drow thorns that would annoy our foot,
Is worthy praise: but, shall I speak my conscience,
Our kinsman Gloucester is as innocent
From meaning treason to our royal person 70
As is the sucking lamb or harmless dove:
The duke is virtuous, mild and too well given
To dream on evil or to work my downfall.

Queen. Ah, what’s more dangerous than this fond affiance?
Seems he a dove? his feathers are but borrow’d,
For he’s disposed as the hateful raven:
Is he a lamb? his skin is surely lent him,
For he’s inclined as is the ravenous wolf.
Who cannot steal a shape that means deceit?
Take heed, my lord; the welfare of us all
Hangs on the cutting short that fraudulent man.

Enter Somerset.

Som. All health unto my gracious sovereign!
King. Welcome, Lord Somerset. What news from France?

Som. That all your interest in those territories
Is utterly bereft you; all is lost.

King. Cold news, Lord Somerset: but God’s will be done!

Yor. [Aside] Cold news for me; for I had hope of France
As firmly as I hope for fertile England.
Thus are my blossoms blasted in the bud
And caterpillars eat my leaves away;
But I will remedy this gear ere long,
Or sell my title for a glorious grave.

Enter Gloucester.

Glu. All happiness unto my lord the king.
Pardon, my liege, that I have stay’d so long

Suf. Nay, Gloucester, know that thou come too soon,
Unless thou wert more loyal than thou art.
I do arrest thee of high treason here.

Glu. Well, Suffolk, thou shalt not see blush
Nor change my countenance for this arrest;
A heart unspotted is not easily daunted.
The purest spring is not so free from mud
As I am clear from treason to my sovereign.
Who can accuse me? wherein am I guilty?

Yor. ’Tis thought, my lord, that you brides of France,
And, being protector, stayed the soldiers’ proc
By means whereof his highness hath lost Fr.

Glu. Is it but thought so? what are that think it?
I never robb’d the soldiers of their pay,
Nor ever had one penny bribe from France.
So help me God, as I have watch’d the night
Ay, night by night, in studying good for land,
That doth that e’er I wrested from the king,
Or any great I hoarded to my use.
Be brought against me at my trial-day!
No: many a pound of mine own proper stor
Because I would not tax the needy common
Have I dispursed to the garrisons,
And never ask’d for restitution.

Car. It serves you well, my lord, to so much.
Glu. I say no more than truth, so he God!

Yor. In your protectorship you did dev
Strange tortures for offenders never heard of.
That England was defamed by tyranny.

Glu. Why, ’tis well known that, whilst protector,
Pity was all the fault that was in me:
For I should melt at an offender’s tears,
And lowly words were ransom for their fault.
Unless it were a bloody murderer,
Or foul felonious thief that fleeced poor pugers.
I never gave them condign punishment:
Murder indeed, that bloody sin, I tortured
Above the felon or what trespass else.

Suf. My lord, these faults are easy, qu answered:
But mightier crimes are laid unto your char
Whereof you cannot easily purge yourself.
I do arrest you in his highness’ name;
And here commit you to my lord cardinal
To keep, until your further time of trial.

King. My lord of Gloucester, ’tis my so hope
That you will clear yourself from all suspi
My conscience tells me you are innocent.

Glu. Ah, gracious lord, these days are gerous:
Virtue is choked with foul ambition
And charity chased hence by rancour’s hand.
Foul subornation is predominant.
And equity exiled your highness’ land.
I know their complot is to have my life,
SECOND PART OF KING HENRY VI.

if my death might make this island happy prove the period of their tyranny, uld expend it with all willingness:
mine is made the prologue to their play;
thousands more, that yet suspect no peril,
not conclude their plotted tragedy.
flor's red sparkling eyes blab his heart's counterfeit.
Suffolk's cloudy brow his stormy hate;
p Buckingham unburthens with his tongue envious load that lies upon his heart;
dogged York, that reaches at the moon,
so overweening arm I have pluck'd back,
also accuse doth level at my life:
you, my sovereign lady, with the rest,
cless have laid discrepancies on my head with your best endeavour have stir'd up jealous liege to be mine enemy:
all of you have laid your heads together—
if had notice of your conventicles—all to make away my guiltless life.
I'll not want false witness to condemn me,
store of treasons to augment my guilt;
ancient proverb will be well effected:
aff is quickly found to be a dog.'
My liege, his railing is intolerable:
so that care to keep your royal person traitor's rage we upbraided, chid and rated at,
he offender granted scope of speech,
make them cool in zeal unto your grace.
Hath he not twit our sovereign lady her amonigious words, though clerically cough'd, she had suborned some to swear allegations to o'erthrow his state?
But I can give the loser leave to chide.
Truer spake than meant: I lose, Indeed, even the winners, for they play'd me false!
will such losers may have leave to speak.
He'll wrest the sense and hold us here
all day:
cardinal, he is your prisoner.
Sirs, take away the duke, and guard him sure.
Ay! thus King Henry throws away his legs be firm to bear his body, shepherd beaten from thy side olives are garlanding who shall gnaw thee first.
at my fear were false! ah, that it were!
King Henry, thy decay I fear.
(Exit, guarded)
My lords, what to your wisdoms seem'd best, unto, as if ourself were here.
What, will your highness leave the ambition?
Ay, Margaret; my heart is drown'd with grief, flood begins to flow within mine eyes, ly round engirt with misery.
at's more miserable than discontent?
Humphrey! in thy face I see up of honour, truth and loyalty:
good Humphrey, is the hour to come proved thee false or fear'd thy faith.
sun star now envies thy estate,

That these great lords and Margaret our queen
Do seek subversion of thy harmless life?
Thou never didst them wrong nor no man wrong;
And as the butcher takes away the calf
And binds the wretch and beats it when it strays,
Bearing it to the bloody slaughter-house,
Even so remorseless have they borne him hence:
And as the dam runs lowering up and down,
Looking the way her harmless young one went,
And can do nought but wail her darling's loss,
Even so myself bewails good Gloucester's case
With sad unhelpful tears, and with dimm'd eyes
Look after him and cannot do him good,
So mightly are his vowed enemies.
His fortunes I will weep and twixt each groan
Say 'Who's a traitor? Gloucester he is none.'

[Exeunt all but Queen, Cardinal Beaufort, Suffolk, and York; Somerset remains apart.
Queen. Free lords, cold snow melts with the sun's hot beams.
Henry my lord is cold in great affairs,
Too full of foolish pity, and Gloucester's show
Beguiles him as the mournful crocodile
With sorrow snares relenting passengers,
Or as the snake roll'd in a flowering bank,
With shining checker'd slough, doth sting a child
That for the beauty thinks it excellent.
Believe me, lords, were none more wise than I—and yet herein I judge mine own wit good—
This Gloucester should be quickly rid the world,
To rid us from the fear we have of him.
Car. That he should die is worthy policy;
But yet we want a colour for his death:
'Tis meet he be condemn'd by course of law.
Suf. But, in my mind, that were no policy:
The king will labour still to save his life,
The commons haply rise, to save his life;
And yet we have but trivial argument,
More than mistrust, that shows him worthy death.
York. So that, by this, you would not have him die.
Suf. Ah, York, no man alive so fain as I!
York. 'Tis York that hath more reason for his death.
But, my lord cardinal, and you, my Lord of Suffolk,
Say as you think, and speak it from your souls,
Were not' all one, an empty eagle were set
To guard the chicken from a hungry kite,
As place Duke Humphrey for the king's protector?
Queen. So the poor chicken should be sure of death.
Suf. Madam, 'tis true; and were't not madness, then.
To make the fox surveyor of the fold?
Who being accused a crafty murderer,
His guilt should be but idly posted over,
Because his purpose is not executed.
No; let him die, in that he is a fox,
By nature proved an enemy to the flock,
Before his chaps be stain'd with crimson blood,
As Humphrey, proved by reasons, to my liege.
And do not stand on quillets how to slay him: 260
Be it by gins, by snares, by subtlety,
Sleeping or waking, 'tis no matter how,
So he be dead; for that is good deceit
Which mates him first that first intends deceit.
SECOND PART OF KING HENRY VI.

Queen. Thrice-noble Suffolk, 'tis resolutely spoke.
Suf. Not resolute, except so much were done;
For things are often spoken and seldom meant:
But that my heart accordeth with my tongue,
Seeing the deed is meritorious,
And to preserve my sovereign from his foe,
Say but the word, and I will be his priest.
Car. But I would have him dead, my Lord of Suffolk,
Ere you can take due orders for a priest:
Say you consent and censure well the deed,
And I'll provide his executioner,
I tender so the safety of my liege.
Suf. Here is my hand, the deed is worthy doing.
Queen. And so say I.
York. And I: and now we three have spoke it,
It skills not greatly who impugns our doom.

Enter a Post.

Post. Great lords, from Ireland am I come a-main,
To signify that rebels there are up
And put the Englishmen unto the sword:
Send succours, lords, and stop the rage betime,
Before the wound do grow uncurable:
For, being green, there is great hope of help.
Car. A breach that craves a quick expedient stop!
What counsel give you in this weighty cause?
York. That Somerset be sent as regent thither:
'Stis meet that lucky ruler be employ'd;
Witness the fortune he hath had in France.
Sotn. If York, with all his far-fet policy,
Had been the regent there instead of me,
He never would have stay'd in France so long.
York. No, not to lose it all, as thou hast done:
I rather would have lost my life betimes
Than bring a burthen of dishonour home
By staying there so long till all were lost.
Show me one scar character'd on thy skin:
Men's flesh preserved so whole do seldom win.
Queen. Nay, then, this spark will prove a raging fire,
If wind and fuel be brought to feed it with:
No more, good York; sweet Somerset, be still:
Thy fortune, York, hadst thou been regent there,
Might happily have proved far worse than his.
York. What, worse than nought? nay, then,
a shame take all!
Sotn. And, in the number, thee that wisest shame!
Car. My Lord of York, try what your fortune is.
The uncivil kerns of Ireland are in arms
And temper clay with blood of Englishmen:
To Ireland will you lead a band of men,
Collected choose, from each county some,
And try your hap against the Irishmen?
York. I will, my lord, so please his majesty.
Suf. Why, our authority is his consent,
And what we do establish he confirms:
The noble York, take thou this task in hand.
York. I am content: provide me soldiers, lords,
Whiles I take order for mine own affairs.

Suf. A charge, Lord York, that I will perform'd.
But now return we to the false Duke Humphry.
Car. No more of him; for I will deal with
That henceforth he shall trouble us no more.
And so break off; the day is almost spent:
Lord Suffolk, you and I must talk of that event.
York. My Lord of Suffolk, within four
At Bristol I expect my soldiers:
For there I'll ship them all for Ireland.
Suf. I'll see it truly done, my Lord of York.

[Exeunt all but York.

York. Now, York, or never, steel thy feudal thoughts,
And change misdoubt to resolution:
Be that thou hopest to be, or what thou art
Resign to death; it is not worth the enjoi
Let pale-faced fear keep with the mean-born
And find no harbour in a royal heart.
Faster than spring-time showers comes this
On thought,
And never a thought but thinks on dignity.
My brain more busy than the labouring spic
Weaves tedious snares to trap mine enemies
Well, nobles, well, 'tis politic done,
To send me packing with an host of men:
I fear me you but warm the starved snake,
Who, cherish'd in your breasts, will sting
'Twas men I lack'd and you will give them
I take it kindly; yet be well assured
You put sharp weapons in a madman's hand.
While I in Ireland nourish a mighty hand,
I will stir up in England some black storm
Shall blow ten thousand souls to heaven or hell,
And this fell tempest shall not cease to rage
Until the golden circuit on my head,
Like to the glorious sun's transparent beam
Do calm the fury of this mad-bred flax.
And, for a minister of my intent,
I have seduced a headstrong Kentishman,
John Cade of Ashford,
To make commotion, as full well he can,
Under the title of John Mortimer.
In Ireland have I seen this stubborn Cade,
Oppose himself against a troop of kerns,
And fought so long, till that his thighs with
Were almost like a sharp-quill'd porpentine
And, in the end being rescued, I have seen
His caper upright like a wilde Morisco,
Shaking the bloody darts as he his bells.
Full often, like a shag-hair'd crafty kern,
Hath he conversed with the enemy,
And undiscover'd come to me again
And given me notice of their villanies.
Will here shall be my substitute:
For that John Mortimer, which now is dead.
In face, in gait, in speech, he doth resemble
By this I shall perceive the commons' mind
How they affect the house and claim of York:
Say he be taken, rack'd and tortured,
I know no pain they can inflict upon him
Will make him say I moved him to those Say that he thrive, as 'tis great like he will Why, then from Ireland come I with my sons
And reap the harvest which that rascal sow.
For Humphrey being dead, as he shall be,
And Henry put apart, the next for me.
Come he right now to sing a raven's note,
Whose dismal tune bereft my vital powers;
And thinks he that the chirping of a wren,
By crying comfort from a hollow breast,
Can chase away the first-conceived sound?
Hide not thy poison with such sugar'd words;
Lay not thy hands on me; forbear, I say;
Their touch affrights me as a serpent's sting.
Thou baleful messenger, out of my sight!
Upon thy eye-balls murderous tyranny
Sits in grim majesty, to fright the world.

Look not upon me, for thine eyes are wounding:
Yet do not go away: come, basilisk,
And kill the innocent gazer with thy sight;
For in the shade of death I shall find joy:

In life but double death, now Gloucester's dead.

Queen. Why do you rate my Lord of Suffolk thus?

Although the duke was enemy to him,
Yet he most Christian-like laments his death:
And for myself, foe as he was to me,
Might liquid tears or heart-offending groans
Or blood-consuming sighs recall his life,
I would be blind with weeping, sick with groans,
Look pale as primrose with blood-drinking sighs,
And all to have the noble duke alive.

What know I how the world may deem of me?
For it is known we were but hollow friends:
It may be judged I made the duke away;
So shall my name with slander's tongue be wounded,
And princes' courts be fill'd with my reproach.

This get I by his death: ay me, unhappy!

To be a queen, and crown'd with infamy!

King. Ah, woe is me for Gloucester, wretched man!

Queen. Be woe for me, more wretched than he is.

What, dost thou turn away and hide thy face?
I am no loathsome leper; look on me.

What! art thou, like the adder, waxen deaf?
Be poisonous too and kill thy forlorn queen?
Is all thy comfort shut in Gloucester's tomb?

Why, then, dame Margaret was ne'er thy joy.

Erect his statua and worship it coldly.
And make my image but an alehouse sign.

Was I for this nigh wreck'd upon the sea
And twice by awkward wind from England's bank
Drove back again unto my native clime?

What boded this, but well forewarning wind
Did seem to say 'Seek not a scorpion's nest,
Nor set no footing on this unkind shore'?

What did I then, but cursed the gentle gusts
And he that loosed them forth their brazen caves:
And bid them blow towards England's blessed shore,

Or turn our stern upon a dreadful rock?
Yet Aegolus would not be a murderer,

But left that hateful office unto thee:

The pretty-vaulting sea refused to drown me,
Knowing that thou wouldst have me drown'd on shore,

With tears as salt as sea, through thy unkindness:

The splitting rocks cow'd in the sinning sands
And would not dash me with their ragged sides,
Because thy flinty heart, more hard than they.

Might in thy palace perish Margaret.

As far as I could ken thy chalky cliffs,

When from thy shore the tempest beat us back,
I stood upon the hatches in the storm,
And when the dusky sky began to rob
My earnest-gaping sight of thy land's view,
I took a costly jewel from my neck,
A heart it was, bound in with diamonds,
And threw it towards thy land: the sea received it,
And so I wish'd thy body might my heart;
And even with this I lost fair England's view
And bid mine eyes be packing with my heart
And call'd them blind and dusky spectacles,
For losing ken of Albion's wished coast.
How often have I tempted Suffolk's tongue,
The agent of thy foul inconstancy,
To sit and witch me, as Ascanius did
When he to madding Dido would unfold
His father's acts commenced in burning Troy!
Am I not witch'd like her? or thou not false like him?
Ay me, I can no more! die, Margaret! 120
For Henry weeps that thou dost live so long.

Noise within. Enter Warwick, Salisbury, and many Commons.

War. It is reported, mighty sovereign,
That good Duke Humphrey traitorously is murder'd
By Suffolk and the Cardinal Beaufort's means.
The commons, like an angry hive of bees
That want their leader, scatter up and down
And care not who they sting in his revenge.
Myself have calm'd their spleenful mutiny,
Until they hear the order of his death.
King. That he is dead, good Warwick, 'tis too true.
But how he died God knows, not Henry:
Enter his chamber, view his breathless corpse,
And comment then upon his sudden death.
War. That shall I do, my liege. Stay, Salisbury,
With the rude multitude till I return. 130 [Exit King.]
War. O Thou that judgest all things, stay my thoughts,
My thoughts, that labour to persuade my soul
Some violent hands were laid on Humphrey's life! If my suspect be false, forgive me, God,
For judgement only doth belong to thee.
Fain would I go to chafe his paly lips
With twenty thousand kisses and to drain
Upon his face an ocean of salt tears,
To tell my love unto his dumb deaf trunk
And with my fingers feel his hand unfeeling:
But all in vain are these mean obsequies;
And to survey his dead and earthly image,
What were it but to make my sorrow greater?

Re-enter Warwick and others, bearing Gloucester's body on a bed.

War. Come hither, gracious sovereign, view this body.
King. That is to see how deep my grave is made; 150
For with his soul fled all my worldly solace,
For seeing him I see my life in death.
War. As surely as my soul intends to live
With that dread King that took our state upon him
To free us from his father's wrathful curse,
I do believe that violent hands were laid
Upon the life of this thrice-famed duke.

Suf. A dreadful oath, sworn with a so

I should rob the deathshams of his fee,

Exeunt Suffolk and Warwick.

What stronger breastplate than a heart untainted!

and naked, though lock'd up in steel,

What noise is this?

Suffolk and Warwick, with their weapons drawn.

Why, how now, lords! your wrathful weapons drawn in our presence! dare you be so bold?
what tumultuous clamour have we here?
The traitor Warwick with the men of Bury Upon me, mighty sovereign.

[To the Commons, entering] Sirs, stand apart; the king shall know your mind.

Lord, the commons send you word by me,
Lord Suffolk straight be done to death,
ished fair England's territories, will by violence tear him from your palace with him to grievous lingering death.
say, by him the good Duke Humphrey lied;
say, in him they fear your highness' death;
say, in care of your most royal person,
your highness should intend to sleep large that no man should disturb your rest of your dislike or pain of death, withstanding such a strat'd edict,
here a serpent seen, with forked tongue,
ily glided towards your majesty.

being suffer'd in that harmful shimer,

 therefore do they cry, though you forbid.

But I will guard you, whether you will or no,

whose envenomed and fatal sting ving uncle, twenty times his worth, avy, is shamefully bereft of life.

[Exeunt.] An answer from the king,
my Lord of Salisbury!

'Tis like the commons, rude unpolish'd hinds,
Could send such message to their sovereign:
But you, my lord, were glad to be employ'd,
To show how quaint an orator you are:
But all the honour Salisbury hath won
Is, that he was the lord ambassador
Sent from a sort of tinkers to the king.

An answer from the king,
or we will all break in!

Go, Salisbury, and tell them all from me,
I thank them for their tender loving care;
And had I not been cited so by them,
Yet did I purpose as they do entreat:
For, sure, my thoughts do hourly prophesy
Mischance unto my state by Suffolk's means:
And therefore, by His majesty I swear,
Whose far unworthy deputy I am,
He shall not breathe the infection in this air
But three days longer, on the pain of death.

O Henry, let me plead for gentle Suffolk!

No more, I say: if thou dost plead for him,
Thou wilt but add increase unto my wrath.
Had I but said, I would have kept my word,
But when I swear, it is irrevocable.
If, after three days' space, thou here be'st found
On any ground that I am ruler of,
The world shall not be ransom for thy life.
Come, Warwick, come, good Warwick, go with me;
I have great matters to impart to thee.

Exeunt all but Queen and Suffolk.

Heart's discontent and sour affliction
Be playfellows to keep you company!
There's two of you: the devil make a third!
And threefold vengeance tend upon your steps!

Cease, gentle queen, these execrations
And let thy Suffolk take his heavy leave.

Pee, coward woman and soft-hearted wretch!
Hast thou not spirit to curse thine enemy?

A plague upon them! wherefore should
I curse them?

Would curses kill, as doth the mandrake's groan,
I would invent as bitter-searching terms,
As curt, as harsh and horrible to hear,
Delivered strongly through my fixed teeth,
With full as many signs of deadly hate,
As lean-faced Envy in her loathsome cave:
My tongue should stumble in mine earnest words;
Mine eyes should sparkle like the beaten flint;
Mine hair be fix'd on end, as one distract:
Ay, every joint should seem to curse and ban:
And even now my burren'd heart would break;
Should I not curse them. Poison be their drink!

Gall, worse than gall, the daintiest that they Taste is the sweetest shade a grove of cypress trees!
Theiir chiefest prospect murdering basilisks!
Their softest touch as smart as lizards' stings!
Their music frightful as the serpent's hiss,
And boding screech-owls make the concert full!
All the foul terrors in dark-seated hell—
---
Queen. Enough, sweet Suffolk; thou torment'st thyself;
---
And these dread curses, like the sun 'gainst glass,
Or like an overcharged gun, recoil,
---
And turn the force of them upon thyself.
---
Suf. You bade me ban, and will you bid me leave?
---
Now, by the ground that I banish'd from,
Well could I curse away a winter's night,
Though standing naked on a mountain top,
---
Where biting cold would never let grass grow,
---
And think it but a minute spent in sport.
---
Queen. O, let me entreat thee cease. Give me thy hand,
That I may dwell with my mournful tears;,
---
Nor let the rain of heaven wet this place,
---
To wash away my woful monuments.
O, could this kiss be printed in thy hand,
---
That thou mightst think upon these by the seal,
---
Through whom a thousand sighs are breathed for thee!
---
So, get thee gone, that I may know my grief;
---
'Tis but surmised whiles thou art standing by,
---
As one that surfeits thinking on a want.
---
I will repeal thee, or, be well assured,
Adventure to be banished myself:
---
And banished I am, if but from thee.
---
Go; speak not to me; even now be gone.
---
O, go not yet! Even thus two friends con-demn'd
---
Embrace and kiss and take ten thousand leaves,
Loather a hundred times to part than die.
---
Yet now farewell; and farewell life with thee!
---
Suf. Thus is poor Suffolk ten times banished;
---
Once by the king, and three times thrice by thee.
---
'Tis not the land I care for, wert thou thence;
---
A wilderness is populous enough,
---
So Suffolk had thy heavenly company:
---
For where thou art, there is the world itself,
---
With every pleasure in the world,
---
And yet, thou art not, desolation.
---
I can no more; live thou to joy thy life;
---
Myself no joy in nought but that thou livest.
---

Enter VAUX.
---
Queen. Whither goes VAUX so fast? what news, I prithee?
---
VAUX. To signify unto his majesty
---
That Cardinal Beaufort is at point of death;
---
For suddenly a grievous sickness took him,
---
That makes him gasp and stare and catch the air,
---
Blaspheming God and cursing men on earth.
---
Sometimes he talks as if Duke Humphrey's ghost
Were by his side; sometime he calls the king
---
And whispers to his pillow as to him
---
The secrets of his overcharged soul:
---
And I am sent to tell his majesty
---
That even now he cries aloud for him.
---
Queen. Go tell this heavy message to the king.

[Exit VAUX.
---
Ay me! what is this world! what news are these!
---
But wherefore grieve I at an hour's poor loss,
Omitting Suffolk's exile, my soul's treasure?
---
Why only, Suffolk, mourn I not for thee,
ACT IV.

SCENE I. The coast of Kent.
num. 1. Night at sea. Ordinance goes off. After a Captain, a Master, a Master's-Mate, Alter Whitmore, and others; with them Fulk, and others, prisoners.

1. The gaudy, blabbing and remorseful day ept into the bosom of the sea;
now loud-howling wolves arouse the jades drag the tragic melancholy night;
with their drowsy, slow and flagging wings, dead men's graves and from their misty jaws
the soul contagious darkness in the air;
before bring forth the soldiers of our prize;
whilst our pinnace anchors in the Downs, shall they make their ransom on the sand, to their blood stain this discolor'd shore.

at Gent. What is my ransom, master? let me know.
at. A thousand crowns, or else lay down your head.

A. And so much shall you give, or off goes yours.

What, think you much to pay two thousand crowns,
wear the name and port of gentlemen?

at the villains' throats; for die you shall;

of those which we have lost in fight 21
interposed with such a petty sum!

at Gent. I'll give it, sir; and therefore spare my life.

Gent. And so will I and write home for it straight.
if. I lost mine eye in laying the prize board, therefore to revenge it, shalt thou do;

[To Suff. should these, if I might have my will.
Be not so rash; take ransom, let him ve.

Look on my George; I am a gentleman;

at what thou wilt, thou shalt be paid.

And so am I; my name is Walter Whitmore.

ow! why start'st thou? what, doth death fright?

Thy name affrighted me, in whose sound doth whispering man did calculate my birth ld me that by water I should die;
not this make thee be bloody-minded;
me is Gaultier, being rightly sounded.

Whit. Gaultier or Walter, which it is, I care not:
Never yet did base dishonour blur our name,
But with our sword we wiped away the blot; 40
Therefore, when merchant-like I sell revenge,
Broke be my sword, my arms torn and defaced,
And I proclaim'd a coward through the world!

Suff. Stay, Whitmore; for thy prisoner is a prince.
The Duke of Suffolk, William de la Pole.
Whit. The Duke of Suffolk muffled up in rags!

Suff. Ay, but these rags are no part of the duke:

Jove sometime went disguised, and why not I?

Cap. But Jove was never slain, as thou shalt be.

Suff. Obscure and lowly swain, King Henry's blood,

50 The honourable blood of Lancaster,
Must not be shed by such a jaded groom.
Hast thou not kiss'd thy hand and held my stirrup?

Bare-headed plodded by my foot-cloth mule
And thought thee happy when I shook my head?
How often hast thou waited at my cup,
Fed from my trencher, kneel'd down at the board,
When I have feasted with Queen Margaret?
Remember it and let it make thee crest-fall'n,

Ay, and allay this thy abortive pride;

60 How in our voiding lobby hast thou stood
And duly waited for my coming forth?

This hand of mine hath writ in thy behalf
And therefore shall it charm thy riotous tongue.

Whit. Speak, captain, shall I stab the forlorn swain?

Cap. First let my words stab him, as he hath me.

Suff. Base slave, thy words are blunt and so art thou.

Cap. Convey him hence and on our long-boat's side
Strike off his head.

Suff. Thou darest not, for thy own.

Cap. Yes, Pole.

Suff. Pole!

Cap. Pool! Sir Pool! lord! 70

Ay, kennel, puddle, sink; whose filthy and dirt
Troubles the silver spring where England drinks.

Now will I dam up this thy yawning mouth
For swallowing the treasure of the realm:

Thy lips that kiss'd the queen shall sweep the ground:
And thou that smiledst at good Duke Humphrey's death
Against the senseless winds shalt grin in vain,
Who in contempt shall hiss at thee again:

And wedded be thou to the hags of hell,

For daring to affy a mighty lord.
Unto the daughter of a worthless king,
Having neither subject, wealth, nor diadem.

By devilish policy art thou grown great
And, like ambitious Sylla, overgorged
With gobbets of thy mother's bleeding heart.

By thee Anjou and Maine were sold to France,
The false revolting Normans through thee
Disdain to call us lord, and Picardy,

Hath slain their governors, surprised our forts
And sent the ragged soldiers wounded home.

The princely Warwick, and the Nevils all,
Whose dreadful swords were never drawn in vain,
As hating thee, are rising up in arms:
And now the house of York, thrust from the crown
By shameful murder of a guiltless king
And lofty proud encroaching tyranny,
BURNS with revenging fire; whose hopeful colours
Advance our half-faced sun, striving to shine,
Under which is writ 'Invitis nubibus.'
The commons here in Kent are up in arms: 100
And, to conclude, reproach and beggary
Is crept into the palace of our king,
And all by thee. Away! convey him hence.
Suf. O that I were a god, to shoot forth
Thunder.
Upon these paltry, servile, abject drudges!
Small things make base men proud: this villain
here,
Being captain of a pinnace, threatens more
Than Bargulus the strong Illyrian pirate.
Drones suck not eagles' blood but rob bee-hives:
It is impossible that I should die
By such a lowly vassal as thyself.
Thy words move rage and not remorse in me:
I go of message from the queen to France;
I charge thee waft me safely cross the Channel.
Cap. Walter, — Whit. Come, Suffolk, I must waft thee to thy
death.
Suf. Geldius timor occupat artus: it is thee
I fear.
Whit. Thou shalt have cause to fear before
I leave thee.
What, are ye daunted now? now will ye stoop?
First Gent. My gracious lord, entreat him, speak him fair.
Suf. Suffolk's imperial tongue is stern and rough,
Used to command, untaught to plead for favour.
Far be it we should honour such as these
With humble suit: no, rather let my head
Stoop to the block than these knees bow to any Save to the God of heaven and to my king;
And sooner dance upon a bloody pole
Than stand uncover'd to the vulgar groom.
True nobility is exempt from fear:
More can I bear than you dare execute.
Cap. Hale him away, and let him talk no more.
Suf. Come, soldiers, show what cruelty ye can,
That this my death may never be forgot!
Great men oft die by vile bezizons:
A Roman sworder and banditto slave
Murder'd sweet Tully; Brutus' bastard hand
Stabb'd Julius Caesar; savage islanders
Pompey the Great; and Suffolk dies by pirates.
[Exeunt Whitmore and others with Suffolk.
Cap. And as for these whose ransom we have set,
It is our pleasure one of them depart: 140
Therefore come you with us and let him go.
[Exeunt all but the First Gentleman.

Re-enter WHITMORE with SUFFOLK's body.

Whit. There let his head and lifeless body lie,
Until the queen his mistress bury it. [Exit,
First Gent. O barbarous and bloody spectacle!
His body will I bear unto the king;
If he revenge it, yet will his friends;
So will the queen, that living held him dear.
[Exit with the body.

He shall be encountered with a man as as himself: he is but a knight, is a?

Mich. No.

Cade. To equal him, I will make myself a knight presently. [Kneels] Rise up Sir John Mortimer. [Rises] Now have at him!

Enter Sir Humphrey Stafford and his Bro- ther, with drum and soldiers.

Staf. Rebellious hind, the fifth and scum of Kent,

Mark’d for the gallows, lay your weapons down; Home to your cottages, forsake this groom:

The king is merciful, if you revolt.

Bro. But angry, wrathful, and inclined to blood,

If you go forward; therefore yield, or die.

Cade. As for these silken-coated slaves, I pass not:

It is to you, good people, that I speak,

Over whom, in time to come, I hope to reign;

For I am rightful heir unto the crown.

Staf. Villain, thy father was a plasterer: 140

And thou myself a shearmen, art thou not?

Cade. And Adam was a gardener.

Bro. And what of that?

Cade. Marry, this: Edmund Mortimer, Earl of March,

Married the Duke of Clarence’ daughter, did he not?

Staf. Ay, sir.

Cade. By her he had two children at one birth.

Bro. That’s false.

Cade. Ay, there’s the question; but I say, ’tis true:

The elder of them, being put to nurse,

Was by a beggar-woman stolen away;

And, ignorant of his birth and parentage,

Became a bricklayer when he came to age:

His son am I; deny it, if you can.

Dick. Nay, ’tis too true; therefore he shall be king.

Smith. Sir, he made a chimney in my father’s house, and the bricks are alive at this day to testify it; therefore deny it not.

Staf. And will you credit this base drudge’s words,

That speaks he knows not what?

All. Ay, marry, will we; therefore get ye gone.

Bro. Jack Cade, the Duke of York hath taught you this.

Cade. [Aside] He lies, for I invented it my- self.

Go to, sirrah, tell the king from me, that, for his father’s sake, Henry the Fifth, in whose time boys went to span-counter for French crowns, I am content he shall reign; but I’ll be privy to him.

Dick. And furthermore, we’ll have the Lord Say’s head for selling the dukedom of Maine. 170

Cade. And good reason; for thereby is Eng- land maimed, and fain to go with a staff, but that my puissance holds it up. Fellow kings, I tell you that that Lord Say hath gelded the common- wealth, and made it an eunuch: and more than that, he can speak French; and therefore he is a traitor.

Staf. O gross and miserable ignorance!

Cade. Nay, answer, if you can: the French- men are our enemies; go to, then, I ask but this:
can he that speaks with the tongue of an enemy be a good counsellor, or no?
All. No, no; and therefore we'll have his head.
Bro. Well, seeing gentle words will not prevail,
Assail them with the army of the king.
Staff. Herald, away; and throughout every town
Proclaim them traitors that are up with Cade;
That those which fly before the battle ends
May, even in their wives' and children's sight,
Be hang'd up for example at their doors:
And you that be the king's friends, follow me.
[Exeunt the two Staffords, and soldiers.
Cade. And you that love the commons, follow me.
Now show yourselves men; 'tis for liberty.
We will not leave one lord, one gentleman:
Spare none but such as go in clouted shoon;
For they are thrifty honest men and such
As would, but that they dare not, take our parts.
Dick. They are all in order and march toward us.
Cade. But then are we in order when we are most out of order. Come, march forward.
[Exeunt.
SCENE III. Another part of Blackheath.
Alarums to the fight, whereon both the Staffords are slain. Enter Cade and the rest.
Cade. Where's Dick, the butcher of Ashford?
Dick. Here, sir.
Cade. They fell before thee like sheep and oxen, and thou behavest thyself as if thou hadst been in thine own slaughter-house: therefore thus will I reward thee, the Lent shall be as long again as it is; and thou shalt have a license to kill for a hundred lacking one.
Dick. I desire no more.
Cade. And, to speak truth, thou deservest no less. This monument of the victory will I bear [putting on Sir Humphrey's brigandine]; and the bodies shall be dragged at my horse heels till I do come to London, where we will have the mayor's sword borne before us.
Dick. If we mean to thrive and do good, break open the gaols and let out the prisoners.
Cade. Fear not that, I warrant thee. Come, let's march towards London.
[Exeunt.
SCENE IV. London. The palace.
Enter the King with a supplication, and the Queen with Suffolk's head, the Duke of Buckingham and the Lord Say.
Queen. Oft have I heard that grief softens the mind.
And makes it fearful and degenerate;
Think therefore on revenge and cease to weep.
But who can cease to weep and look on this?
Here may his head lie on my throbbing breast:
But where's the body that I should embrace?
Buck. What answer makes your grace to the rebels' supplication?
King. I'll send some holy bishop to entreat;
For God forbid so many simple souls should perish by the sword! And I myself,
Rather than bloody war shall cut them short,
Will parley with Jack Cade their general:
But stay, I'll read it over once again.
Queen. Ah, barbarous villains! hath this look face
Ruled, like a wandering planet, over me,
And could it not enforce them to relent,
That were unworthy to behold the same?
King. Lord Say, Jack Cade hath sworn have thy head.
Say. Ay, but I hope your highness shall his.
King. How now, madam!
Still lamenting and mourning for Suffolk's death,
I fear me, love, if that I had been dead,
Thou wouldest not have mourn'd so much for Queen. No, my love, I should not mourn, die for thee.
[Enter a Messenger.
King. How now! what news? why canst thou in such haste?
Mess. The rebels are in Southwark; fly, lord!
Jack Cade proclaims himself Lord Mortimer,
Descended from the Duke of Clarence' house;
And calls your grace usurper openly
And vows to crown himself in Westminster.
His army is a ragged multitude
Of hinds and peasants, rude and merciless:
Sir Humphrey Stafford and his brother's deat
Hath given them heart and courage to proceed,
All scholars, lawyers, courtiers, gentlemen,
They call false catalysts and intend their dese
King. O graceless men! they know not what they do.
Buck. My gracious lord, retire to Killworth,
Until a power be raised to put them down.
Queen. Ah, were the Duke of Suffolk alive,
These Kentish rebels would be soon appeased.
King. Lord Say, the traitors hate thee;
Therefore away with us to Killingworth.
Say. So might your grace's person be in danger.
The sight of me is odious in their eyes;
And therefore in this city will I stay
And live alone as secret as I may.
[Enter another Messenger.
Mess. Jack Cade hath gotten London brid
The citizens fly and forsake their houses:
The rascal people, thirsting after prey,
Join with the traitor, and they jointly swear
To spoil the city and your royal court.
Buck. Thenlinger not, my lord; away, to horse.
King. Come, Margaret; God, our hope, we succour us.
Queen. My hope is gone, now Suffolk is ceased.
King. Farewell, my lord: trust not to Kentish rebels.
Buck. Trust nobody, for fear you be betrayed.
Say. The trust I have is in mine innocence
And therefore am I bold and resolute.
[Exeunt.
SCENE V. London. The Tower.

or LORD SCALES upon the Tower, walking. Then enter two or three Citizens below.

[Aside] How now! is Jack Cade slain?

[Exeunt. No, my lord, nor likely to be slain; they have won the bridge, killing all those withstand them: the lord mayor craves aid. He will be hour from the Tower to defend the city from the rebels.

[Aside] Such aid as I can spare you shall command

[Enter a Soldier, running.] I am troubled here with them myself; rebels have assayed to win the Tower, set you to Smithfield and gather head, to thither I will send you Matthew Goffe: for your king, your country and your lives; so, farewell, for I must hence again.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VI. London. Cannon Street.

or JACK CADE and the rest, and strikes his staff on London-stone.

de. Now is Mortimer lord of this city. And sitting upon London-stone, I charge and command, that, of the city's cost, the pissing-at run nothing but claret wine this first of our reign. And now henceforward it be treason for any that calls me other than Mortimer.

[Enter a Soldier, running.] Jack Cade! Jack Cade!

d. Knock him down there. [They kill him.]

[Exit.]

[Aside] If this fellow be wise, he'll never call Cade more: I think he hath a very fair form.

d. My lord, there's an army gathered in Smithfield.

e. Come, then, let's go fight with them: set, go set London bridge on fire; and, I can, burn down the Tower too. Come away.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VII. London. Smithfield.

[Enter a Soldier, running.] Matthew Goffe is slain, and all rest. Then enter Jack Cade, with his party.

e. So, sirs: now go some and pull down away; others to the lans of court; down them all.

[Aside] I have a suit unto your lordship.

[Exeunt.]

[Aside] Be it a lordship, thou shalt have it for word.

[Exeunt.]

Only that the laws of England may out of your mouth.

[Aside] Mass, 'twill be sore law, then;赶 thrust in the mouth with a spear, and whole yet.

[Aside] Nay, John, it will be stinking for his breath stinks with eating toasted

[Aside] I have thought upon it, it shall be so. burn all the records of the realm: my shall be the parliament of England.

[Aside] Then we are like to have statutes, unless his teeth be pulled out.

Cade. And henceforward all things shall be in common.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My lord, a prize, a prize! here's the Lord Say, which sold the towns in France; he that made us pay one and twenty fiftens, and one shilling to the pound, the last subsidy.

Enter George Bevis, with the Lord Say.

Cade. Well, he shall be beheaded for it ten times. Ah, thou say, thou serge, nay, thou buckram lord! now art thou within point-blank of our jurisdiction regal. What causeth thou answer to my Majesty for giving up of Normandy unto Mounsiuer Bassemun, the dauphin of France? Be it known unto thee by these presence, even the presence of Lord Mortimer, that I am the besom that must sweep the court clean of such filth as thou art. Thou hast most traitorously corrupted the youth of the realm in erecting a grammar school; and whereas, before, our forefathers had no other books but the score and the tally, thou hast caused printing to be used, and, contrary to the king, his crown and dignity, thou hast built a paper-mill. It will be proved to thy face that thou hast men about thee that usually talk of a noun and a verb, and such abominable words as no Christian ear can endure to hear. Thou hast appointed justices of peace, to call poor men before them about matters they were not able to answer. Moreover, thou hast put them in prison; and because they could not read, thou hast hanged them; when, indeed, only for that cause they have been most worthy to live. Thou dost ride in a foot-cloth, dost thou not?

Say. What of that?

Cade. Marry, thou oughtest not to let thy horse wear a cloak, when honest men than thou go in their hose and doublets.

Dick. And work in their shirt too; as myself, for example, that am a butcher.

Say. You men of Kent—

Dick. What say you of Kent?

Say. Nothing but this; 'tis 'bona terra, mala gens.'

Cade. Away with him, away with him! he speaks Latin.

Say. Hear me but speak, and bear me where you will.

Kent, in the Commentaries Caesar writ, Is term'd the civil'st place of all this isle: Sweet is the country, because full of riches; The people liberal, valiant, active, wealthy; Which makes me hope you are not void of pity. I sold not Maine, I lost not Normandy, Yet, to recover them, would lose my life. Justice with favour have I always done; Prayers and tears have moved me, gifts could never. When have I aught exacted at your hands, But to maintain the king, the realm and you? Large gifts have I bestow'd on learned clerks, Because my book prefer'd me to the king, And seeing ignorance is the curse of God, Knowledge the wing wherewith we fly to heaven, Unless you be possessed with devillish spirits, You cannot but forbear to murder me:
This tongue hath parley'd unto foreign kings.
For your behoof,—
Cade. Tut, when struck'st thou one blow in the field?
Say. Great men have reaching hands: oft have I struck
Those that I never saw and struck them dead.
Geo. O monstrous coward! what, to come behind folks?
Say. These checks are pale for watching for your good.
Cade. Give him a box 0' the ear and that will make 'em red again.
Say. Long sitting to determine poor men's causes
Hath made me full of sickness and diseases.
Cade. Ye shall have a hempen caudle then and the help of hatchet.
Dick. Why dost thou quiver, man?
Say. The palsy, and not fear, provokes me.
Cade. Nay, he nods at us, as who should say,
I'll be even with you: I'll see if his head will stand steadier on a pole, or no. Take him away, and breathe his head.
Say. Tell me wherein have I offended most?
Have I affected wealth or honour? speak.
Are my cheeks fill'd up with extorted gold?
Is my apparel sumptuous to behold?
Whom have I injured, that ye seek my death?
These hands are free from guiltless blood-shedding.
This breast from harbouring foul deceitful thoughts.
O, let me live!
Cade. [Aside] I feel remorse in myself with his words; but I'll bridle it: he shall die, an it be but for pleading so well for his life. Away with him! he has a familiar under his tongue; he speaks not of God's name. Go, take him away, I say, and strike off his head, presently; and then break into his son-in-law's house, Sir James Cromer, and strike off his head, and bring them both upon two poles hither.
All. What shall I do done?
Say. Ah, countrymen! if you when make your prayers,
God should be so obdurate as yourselves,
How would it fare with your departed souls?
And therefore yet relent, and save my life.
Cade. Away with him! and do as I command ye.
[Execut some with Lord Say.]
The proudest peer in the realm shall not wear a head on his shoulders, unless he pay me tribute: there shall not a maid be married, but she shall pay to me her maidenhead ere they have it: men shall hold of me in capite; and we charge and command that their wives be as free as heart can wish or tongue can tell.
Dick. My lord, when shall we go to Cheapside and take up commodities upon our bills?
Cade. Marry, presently.
All. O, brave!
Re-enter one with the heads.
Cade. But is not this braver? Let them kiss one another, for they loved well when they were alive. Now part them again, lest they consult about the giving up of some more towns in France. Soldiers, defer the spoil of the city until night: for with these borne before un stead of maces, will we ride through the streets and at every corner have them kiss. Any

SCENE VIII. Southwark.
Alarm and retreat. Enter Cade and his rabblement.
Cade. Up Fish Street! down Saint Mary Corner! kill and knock down! throw them Thames! [Sound a parley.] What noise I hear? Dare any be so bold to sound re parley, when I command them kill?

Enter Buckingham and old Clifford, at the Buck. Ay, here they be that dare and disturb thee:
Know, Cade, we come ambassadors from king
Unto the commons whom thou hast misled;
And here pronounce free pardon to them all. That will forsake thee and go home in peace.
Cliff. What say ye, countrymen? will ye relent,
And yield to mercy whilst 'tis offered you;
Or let a rebel lead you to your deaths?
Who loves the king and will embrace his peace?
Fling up his cap, and say 'God save his jesty!' Who hateth him and honours not his father,
Henry the Fifth, that made all France to quake
Shake his weapon at us and pass by.
All. God save the king! God save the Cade.
What, Buckingham and Clifford say so brave? And you, base peasants, believe him? will you needs be hanged with pardons about your necks? Hath my son therefore broke through London gates, that should leave me at the White Hart in Southwark? I thought ye would never have given these arms till you had recovered your freedom; but you are all recreants and dare not and delight to live in slavery to the nobility.
them break your backs with burthens, take houses over your heads, ravish your wife daughters before your faces: for me, I will shift for one; and so, God's curse light upon all.
All. We'll follow Cade, we'll follow Cade.
Cliff. Is Cade the son of Henry the Fifth?
That thus you do acclaim you'll go with him
Will he conduct you through the heart of France?
And make the meanest of you earls and dukes?
Ahas, he hath no home, no place to fly to;
Nor knows he how to live but by the spoil,
Unless by robbing of your friends and us.
Were't not a shame, that whilst you live at
The fearful French, whom you late vanquished
Should make a start o'er seas and vanish?
Methinks already in this civil broil
I see them lording it in London streets,
Crying 'Villiago!' unto all they meet.
Better ten thousand base-born Cades miscarry
Than you should stoop unto a Frenchman's
To France, to France, and get what you have Spare England, for it is your native coast:
Henry hath money, you are strong and man
God on our side, doubt not of victory.
SECOND PART OF KING HENRY VI.

Scene IX. Kenilworth Castle.

Trumpets. Enter King, Queen, and Somerset, on the terrace.

G. Was ever king that joy'd an earthly throne,
And command no more content than I?
Nor was I crept out of my cradle
A king, at nine months old,
E'er subject long'd to be a king
Long and wish to be a subject.

Buckingham and Old Clifford.

Health and glad tidings to your majesty!

Why, Buckingham, is the traitor Cade Suprised?
But retired to make him strong?

Multitudes, with halter's about
Their necks.

He is fled, my lord, and all his powers yield;
By thus, with halter's on their necks,
Your highness' doom, of life or death.

Then, heaven, set ope thy everlasting tes,
Taint my vows of thanks and praise!
This day have you redeem'd your lives
And how well you love your prince and country.

Still in this so good a mind,
Nay, though he be unfortunate,
Yourself, will never be unkind:
With thanks and pardon to you all,
Miss you to your several countries.
God save the king! God save the king!

Enter a Messenger.

Please it your grace to be advertised
Of York is newly come from Ireland,
A puissant and a mighty power
Wielding stout and stern cors
Hitherward in proud array,
Proclaimeth, as he comes along,
Are only to remove from thee
Of Somerset, whom he terms a traitor.

King. Thus stands my state, 'twixt Cade and York distress'd;
Like to a ship that, having scapest a tempest,
Is straightway calm'd and boarded with a pirate:
But now is Cade driven before his men dispersed;
And now is York in arms to second him.
I pray thee, Buckingham, go and meet him,
And ask him what's the reason of these arms.
Tell him I'll send Duke Edmund to the Tower;
And, Somerset, we will commit thee hither,
Until his army be dismiss'd from him.

Som. My lord,
I'll yield myself to prison willingly,
Or unto death, to do my country good.

King. In any case, be not too rough in terms;
For he is fierce and cannotbrook hard language.

Buck. I, my lord; and doubt not so to deal
As all things shall redound unto your good.

King. Come, wife, let's in, and learn to govern better:
For yet may England curse my wretched reign.

[Flourish. Exeunt.

Scene X. Kent. Iden's garden.

Enter Cade.

Cade. Fie on ambition! fie on myself, that have a sword, and yet am ready to famish!
These five days have I hid me in these woods and durst not peep out, for all the country is laid for me; but now am I so hungry that if I might have a lease of my life for a thousand years I could stay no longer. Wherefore, on a brick wall have I climbed into this garden, to see if I can eat grass, or pick a sallet another while, which is not amiss to cool a man's stomach this hot weather. And I think this word 'sallet' was born to do me good: for many a time, but for a sallet, my brain-pan had been cleft with a brown bill: and many a time, when I have been dry and bravely marching, it hath served me instead of a quart pot to drink in; and now the word 'sallet' must serve me to feed on.

Enter Iden.

Iden. Lord, who would live turmoiled in the court,
And may enjoy such quiet walks as these?
This small inheritance my father left me
Contenteth me, and worth a monarchy.
I seek not to wax great by others' waning,
Or gather wealth, I care not, with what envy:
Sufficeth that I have maintains my state
And sends the poor well pleased from my gate.

Cade. Here's the lord of the soil come to seize me for a stray, for entering his fee-simple without leave. Ah, villain, thou wilt betray me,
And get a thousand crowns of the king by carrying my head to him: but I'll make thee eat iron like an ostrich, and swallow my sword like a great pin, ere thou and I part.

Iden. Why, rude companion, whatsoever thou be,
I know thee not: why, then, should I betray thee?
Is't not enough to break into my garden,
And, like a thief, to come to rob my grounds,
Climbing my walls in spite of me the owner,
But thou wilt brave me with these saucy terms?
Cade. Brave thee! ay, by the best blood that ever was broached, and beard thee too. Look on me well: I have eat no meat these five days; yet, come thou and thy five men, and if I do not leave you all as dead as a door-nail, I pray God I may never eat grass more.

Iden. Nay, it shall ne'er be said, while England stands,
That Alexander Iden, an esquire of Kent,
Took odds to combat a poor famish’d man.
Oppose thy steadfast-gazing eyes to mine,
See if thou canst outface me with thy looks;
Set limb to limb, and thou art far the lesser; 50
Thy hand is but a finger to my fist,
Thy leg a stick compared with this truncheon:
My foot shall stand with all the strength thou hast;
And if mine arm be heaved in the air,
Thy grave is digg’d already in the earth.
As for words, whose greatness answers words,
Let this my sword report what speech forbears.

Cade. By my valour, the most complete champion that ever I heard! Steel, if thou turn the edge, or cut not out the burly-boned clown in chines of beef ere thou sleep in thy sheath, I beseech God on my knees thou mayst be turned to hobnails. [Here they fight. Cade falls.

O, I am slain! famine and no other hath slain me: let ten thousand devils come against me, and give me but the ten meals I have lost, and I’d defy them all. Wither, garden; and be henceforth a burying-place to all that do dwell in this house, because the unconquered soul of Cade is fled.

Iden. Is’t Cade that I have slain, that monstrous traitor?
Sword, I will hallow thee for this thy deed,
And hang thee o’er my tomb when I am dead:
Ne’er shall this blood be wiped from thy point;
But thou shalt wear it as a herald’s coat,
To emblaze the honour that thy master got.

Cade. Iden, farewell, and be proud of thy victory. Tell Kent from me, she hath lost her best man, and exhort all the world to be cowards; for I, that never feared any, am vanquished by famine, not by valour. [Dies.]

Iden. How much thou wrong’st me, heaven be my judge,
Die, damned wretch, the curse of her that bare thee;
And if thou thrust thy body in with my sword,
So wish I, I might thrust thy soul to hell.
Hence will I drag thee headlong by the heels
Unto a dunghill which shall be thy grave,
And there cut off thy most ungracious head;
Which I will bear in triumph to the king,
Leaving thy trunk for crows to feed upon. [Exit.

ACT V.

SCENE I. Fields between Darford and Blackheath.

Enter York, and his army of Irish, with drum and colours.

York. From Ireland thus comes York to claim his right,
And pluck the crown from feeble Henry’s head:
Ring, bells, aloud; burn, bonfires, clear and bright,

To entertain great England’s lawful king.
Ah! sancta majestas, who would not buy dear?
Let them obey that know not how to rule;
This hand was made to handle nought but gold;
I cannot give due action to my words,
Keep a sword or sceptre balance it:
A sceptre shall it have, have I a soul,
On which I’ll toss the flower-de-luce of France.

Enter Buckingham.
Whom have we here? Buckingham, to dissemble?
The king hath sent him, sure: I must dissent.

Buck. York, if thou meanest well, I greet thee well.

York. Humphrey of Buckingham, I am thy greeting.
Art thou a messenger, or come of pleasure?

Buck. A messenger from Henry, our dear liege,
To know the reason of these arms in peace;
Or why thou, being a subject as I am,
Against thy oath and true allegiance sworn,
Should raise so great a power without his leave;
Or dare to bring thy force so near the court.

York. [Aside] Scarce can I speak, my mind is so great:
O, I could hew up rocks and fight with flint,
I am so angry at these abject terms;
And now, like Ajax Telenionus,
On sleep or oxen could I spend my fury.
I am far better born than is the king,
More like a king, more kingling in my thought;
But I must make fair weather yet a while,
Till Henry be more weak and I more strong.
Buckingham, I prithee, pardon me,
That I have given no answer all this while;
My mind was troubled with deep melancholy,
The cause why I have brought this army here:
Is to remove proud Somerset from the king,
Seditious to his grace and to the state.

Buck. That is too much presumption on your part,
But if thy arms be to no other end,
The king hath yielded unto thy demand:

The Duke of Somerset is in the Tower.

York. Upon thine honour, is he prisoner?
Buck. Upon mine honour, he is prisoner.

York. Then, Buckingham, I do dismiss my powers.

Soldiers, I thank you all; disperse yourselves,
Meet me to-morrow in Saint George’s field,
You shall have pay and every thing you will,
And let my sovereign, virtuous Henry,
Command my eldest son, nay, all my sons,
As pledges of my fealty and love;
I’ll send them all as willing as I live:
Lands, goods, horse, arms, any thing I have,
Is his to use, so Somerset may die.

Buck. York, I commend this kind submissiveness.
We twain will go into his highness’ tent.

Enter King and Attendants.

King. Buckingham, doth York intend nothing to us,
That thus he marcheth with thee arm in arm?
York. In all submission and humility
York doth present himself unto your highness.
Enter Iden, with Cade's head.

I. If one so rude and of so mean condition pass into the presence of a king, present your grace a traitor's head, head of Cade, whom I in combat slew.

The head of Cade! Great God, how just art Thou! me view his visage, being dead, living wrought me such exceeding trouble. me, my friend, art thou the man that slew him? I was, an't like your majesty.

How art thou call'd? and what is thy degree?

Alexander Iden, that's my name; esquire of Kent, that loves his king.

So please it you, my lord, 'twere not were created knight for his good service.

Iden, kneel down. [He kneels.] Rise up a knight.

I thee for reward a thousand marks, will that thou henceforth attend on us. 80

May Iden live to merit such a bounty, ever live but true unto his liege! [Rises.

Enter Queen and Somerset.

See, Buckingham, Somerset comes in the queen:

her hide him quickly from the duke.

For thousand Yorke he shall not hide idly stand and front him to his face.

How now! is Somerset at liberty?

fork, unloose thy long-imprison'd thoughts,

thy tongue be equal with thy heart.

endure the sight of Somerset?

ing! why hast thou broken faith with me,

how hardy can I brook abuse?

I call thee? no, thou art not king,

to govern and rule multitudes,

darest not, no, nor canst not rule a traitor.

and of thine doth not become a crown;

id is made to grasp a palmer's staff,

to grace an awful princely sceptre.

with the chance to kill and cure.

who heaven created for thy ruler.

monstrous traitor! I arrest thee, al treason 'gainst the king and crown:

udacious traitor; kneel for grace.

Wouldst have me kneel? first let me can brook I bow a knee to man.

all in my sons to be my bail:

[Exit Attendant.

They'll pawn their swords for my enfranchise-

Queen. Call hither Clifford; bid him come amain,

To say if that the bastard boys of York

Shall be the surety for their traitor father.

[Exit Buckingham.

York. O blood-besotted Neapolitan,

Outcast of Naples, England's bloody scourage! The sons of York, thy batters in their birth,

Shall be their father's bail; and bane to those 120

That for my surety will refuse the boys!

Enter Edward and Richard.

See where they come: I'll warrant they'll make it good.

Enter old Clifford and his Son.

Queen. And here comes Clifford to deny their bail.

Clif. Health and all happiness to my lord the king!

York. I thank thee, Clifford: say, what news with thee?

Nay, do not fright us with an angry look:

We are thy sovereign, Clifford, kneel again;

For thy mistaking so, we pardon thee.

Clif. This is my king, York, I do not mistake;

But thou mistakest me much to think I do: 130

To Bedlam with him! is the man grown mad?

King. Ay, Clifford; a bedlam and ambitious humour

Makes him oppose himself against his king.

Clif. He is a traitor: let him to the Tower,

And chop away that faiitious pate of his.

Queen. He is arrested, but will not obey;

His sons, he says, shall give their words for him.

York. Will you not, sons?

Edw. Ay, noble father, if our words will serve.

Rich. And if words will not, then our weapons shall.

Clif. Why, what a brood of traitors have we here!

York. Look in a glass, and call thy image so:

I am thy king, and thou a false-heart traitor.

Call hither to the stake my two brave bears,

That with the very shaking of their chains

They may astonish these fell-lurking curs:

Bid Salisbury and Warwick come to me.

Enter the Earls of Warwick and Salisbury.

Clif. Are these thy bears? we'll bait thy bears to death,

And manacle the bear-ward in their chains,

If thou darest bring them to the baiting place. 150

Rich. Oft have I seen a hot o'erweening cur

Run back and bite, because he was withheld;

Who, being suffer'd with the bear's fell paw,

Hath clapp'd his tail between his legs and cried:

And such a piece of service will you do,

If you oppose yourselves to match Lord Warwick.

Clif. Hence, heap of wrath, foul indigested hump,

As crooked in thy manners as thy shape!

York. Nay, we shall heat you thoroughly

anon.
Cliff. Take heed, lest by your heat you burn yourselves.

King. Why, Warwick, hath thy knee forgot to bow?

Old Salisbury, shame to thy silver hair, Thou mad misleader of thy brain-sick son! What, wilt thou on thy death-bed play the ruffian, And seek for sorrow with thy spectacles? O, where is faith? O, where is loyalty? If it be banish'd from the frosty head, Where shall it find a harbour in the earth? Wilt thou go dig a grave to find out war, And shame thine honourable age with blood? Why art thou old, and want'st experience? Or wherefore dost abuse it, if thou hast it? For shame! in duty bend thy knee to me That bows unto the grave with mickle age.

Sal. My lord, I have consider'd with myself The title of this most renowned duke; And in my conscience do repute his grace The rightful heir to England's royal seat.

King. Hast thou not sworn allegiance unto me?

Sal. I have.

King. Canst thou dispense with heaven for such an oath?

Sal. It is great sin to swear unto a sin, But greater sin to keep a sinful oath. Who can be bound by any solemn vow To do a murderous deed, to rob a man, To force a spotless virgin's chastity, To reave the orphan of his patrimony, To wring the widow from her custom'd right, And have no other reason for this wrong But that he was bound by a solemn oath? A subtle traitor needs no sophister.

King. Call Buckingham, and bid him arm himself.

York. Call Buckingham, and all the friends thou hast, I am resolved for death or dignity.

Cliff. The first I warrant thee, if dreams prove true.

War. You were best to go to bed and dream again, To keep thee from the tempest of the field.

Cliff. I am resolved to bear a greater storm Than any thou canst conjure up to-day; And that I'll write upon thy burgonet, Might I but know thee by thy household badge.

War. Now, by my father's badge, old Neville's crest, The rampant bear chain'd to the ragged staff, This day I'll wear aloft my burgonet, As on a mountain top the cedar shows That keeps his leaves in spite of any storm, Even to affright thee with the view thereof.

Cliff. And from thy burgonet I'll rend thy bear And tread it under foot with all contempt, Despite the bear-ward that protects the bear. To quell the rebels and their complices. Rich. Fie! charity, for shame! speak not in spite, For you shall sup with Jesu Christ to-night.

Y. Cliff. Foul stigmatic, that's more than thou canst tell.

Rich. If not in heaven, you'll surely s

Rich. And if thou dost not hide thee from the bear Now, when the angry trumpet sounds alarum And dead men's cries do fill the empty air, Clifford, I say, come forth and fight with me Proud northern lord, Clifford of Cumberland Warwick is hoarse with calling thee to arms.

Enter York.

How now, my noble lord! what, all afoot? York. The deadly-handed Clifford sle steed, But match to match I have encounter'd him And made a prey for carrion kites and crow Even of the bonny beast he loved so well.

Enter old Clifford.

War. Of one or both of us the time is near. For I myself must hunt this deer to death. War. Then, nobly, York; 'tis for a thou fright'st. As I intend, Clifford, to thrive to-day, It grieves my soul to leave thee unassail'd Cliff. What seest thou in me, York? wilt thou pause? York. SCENE III. Fields near St. Alban's.

Alarum. Retrat. Enter York, Richard,

Warwick, and Soldiers, with drum and colours.

York. Of Salisbury, who can report of him,

That winter lion, who in rage forgets

Aged contusions and all brush of time,

And, like a gallant in the brow of youth,

Repairs him with occasion? This happy day

Is not itself, nor have we won one foot,

If Salisbury be lost.

Rich. My noble father,

Three times to-day I help him to his horse,

Three times bestrid him; thrice I led him off,

Persuaded him from any further act:

But still, where danger was, still there I met him;

And like rich hangings in a homely house,

So was his will in his old feeble body.

But, noble as he is, look where he comes.

Enter Salisbury.

Sal. Now, by my sword, well hast thou fought
to-day;

By the mass, so did we all. I thank you, Richard:

God knows how long it is I have to live;

And it hath pleased him that three times to-day

You have defended me from imminent death.

Well, lords, we have not got that which we have:

'Tis not enough our foes are this time fled,

Being opposites of such repairing nature.

York. I know our safety is to follow them;

For, as I hear, the king is fled to London,

To call a present court of parliament.

Let us pursue him ere the wris go forth.

What says Lord Warwick? shall we after them?

War. After them! nay, before them, if we can.

Now, by my faith, lords, 'twas a glorious day:

Saint Alban's battle won by famous York

Shall be eternized in all age to come.

Sound drums and trumpets, and to London all;

And more such days as these to us befall!

[Exeunt.

ACT I.

Alarum. Enter the Duke of York, Edward,
Richard, Norfolk, Montague, Warwick, and Soldiers.

War. I wonder how the king escaped our hands.
York. While we pursued the horsemen of the north,
He slily stole away and left his men:
Whereat the great Lord of Northumberland,
Whose warlike ears could never brook retreat,
Cheer'd up the drooping army; and himself,
Lord Clifford and Lord Stafford, all abreast, Charged our main battle's front, and breaking in
Were by the swords of common soldiers slain.

Edw. Lord Stafford's father, Duke of Buckingham, is either slain or wounded dangerously;
I left his beaver with a downright blow:
That this is true, father, behold his blood.

Mont. And, brother, here's the Earl of Wilt-shire's blood,
Whom I encounter'd as the battles join'd.
Rich. Speak thou for me and tell them what
I did.
[Throwing down the Duke of Somerset's head.
York. Richard hath best deserved of all my sons.
But is your grace dead, my Lord of Somerset?

Norf. Such hope have all the line of John of Gaunt!

Rich. Thus do I hope to shake King Henry.

War. And so do I. Victorious Prince of
Before I see thee seated in that throne.
Which now the house of Lancaster usurps,
I vow, joy heaven these eyes shall never close.
This is the palace of the fearless king,
And this the regal seat: possess it, York:
For this is thine and not King Henry's heir.
York. Assist me, then, sweet Warwick:
I will:
For hither we have broken in by force.

Norf. We'll all assist you; he that flies

York. Thanks, gentle Norfolk: stay by my lords;
And, soldiers, stay and lodge by me this ni-

War. And when the king comes, offer no violence,
Unless he seek to thrust you out perforce.
York. The queen this day here holds parliament,
But little thinks we shall be of her council;
By words or blows here let us win our right.

Rich. Arm'd as we are, let's stay within our house.

War. The bloody parliament shall be call'd,
Unless Plantagenet, Duke of York, be king.
And bashful Henry deposed, whose cow-
Hath made us by-words to our enemies.
York. Then leave me not, my lord resolute;

an to take possession of my right.

ar. Neither the king, nor he that loves him best, proudest he that holds up Lancaster, is stir a wing, if Warwick shake his bells. Plantagenet, root him up who dares, give thee, Richard; claim the English crown.

rith. Enter King Henry, Clifford, Orthumberland, Westmoreland, Exe- v, and the rest.

Hen. My lords, look where the sturdy rebel sits, 59 in the chair of state: belike he means, 'd by the power of Warwick, that false peer, spire unto the crown and reign as king.

of Northumberland, he slew thy father, thine, Lord Clifford; and you both have you'd revenge im, his sons, his favourites and his friends.

rth. If I be not, heavens be revenged on me! 60 For the hope thereof makes Clifford mourn in steel.

ar. What, shall we suffer this? let's pluck char for anger burns; I cannot brook it. 60 Be patient, gentle Earl of Westmoreland.

f. Patience is for poltroons, such as he: 70 unst not sit there, had your father lived.

racious lord, here in the parliament of Exeter, frowns, words and threats are the war that Henry means to use.

of the family of York.

rth. Well hast thou spoken, cousin: be it so.

Hen. Ah, know you not the city favours them, they have troops of soldiers at their beck? 6 But when the duke is slain, 'they'll quickly fly.

Hen. Far be the thought of this from Henry's heart, like a shambles of the parliament-house! of Exeter, frowns, words and threats are the war that Henry means to use.

of Duke of York, descend my throne, need for grace and mercy at my feet; by sovereign.

k. I am thine.

f. For shame, come down: he made thee duke of York.

k. "Twas my inheritance, as the earldom was.

f. Thy father was a traitor to the crown.

exeter, thou art a traitor to the crown this usurping Henry.

Whom should he follow but his natural

i. True, Clifford; and that's Richard duke of York.

k. And shall I stand, and thou sit in my throne?

k. It must and shall be so: content thyself.

He is both king and Duke of Lancaster; at the Lord of Westmoreland shall main-

i. And Warwick shall disprove it. You forget 89 are those which chased you from the field

And slew your fathers, and with colours spread March'd through the city to the palace gates.

North. Yes, Warwick, I remember it to my grief;

And, by his soul, thou and thy house shall rue it. West. Plantagenet, of thee and these thy sons, Thy kinsmen and thy friends, I'll have more lives Than drops of blood were in my father's veins.

Clif. Urge it no more; lest that, instead of words, I send thee, Warwick, such a messenger As shall revenge his death before I stir. 100 War. Poor Clifford! how I scorn his worthless threats!

York. Will you show us our title to the crown?

If not, our swords shall plead it in the field.

K. Hen. What title hast thou, traitor, to the crown?

Thy father was, as thou art, Duke of York;

Thy grandfather, Roger Mortimer, Earl of March: I am the son of Henry the Fifth, Who made the Dauphin and the French to stoop And seized upon their towns and provinces.

War. Talk not of France, sith thou hast lost it all.

K. Hen. The lord protector lost it, and not I: When I was crown'd I was but nine months old.

Rich. You are old enough now, and yet, methinks, you lose. Father, tear the crown from the usurper's head. Edu. Sweet father, do so; set it on your head.

Mont. Good brother, as thou lovest and honourest arms,

Let's fight it out and not stand cavilling thus.

Rich. Sound drums and trumpets, and the king will fly.

York. Sons, peace!

K. Hen. Peace, thou! and give King Henry leave to speak.

War. Plantagenet shall speak first: hear him, lords;

And be you silent and attentive too,

For he that interrupts him shall not live.

K. Hen. Think'st thou that I will leave my kingly throne,

Wherein my grandsire and my father sat? No: first shall war unpeople this my realm; Ay, and their colours, often borne in France, And now in England to our heart's great sorrow, Shall be my winding-sheet. Why faint you, lords? My title's good, and better far than his. 120 War. Prove it, Henry, and thou shalt be king.

K. Hen. Henry the Fourth by conquest got the crown.

York. 'Twas by rebellion against his king.

K. Hen. [Aside] I know not what to say; my title's weak.

Tell me, may not a king adopt an heir?

York. What then?

K. Hen. An if he may, then am I lawful king; For Richard, in the view of many lords, Resign'd the crown to Henry the Fourth, Whose heir my father was, and I am his. 140 York. He rose against him, being his sovereign,

And made him to resign his crown perforce.

War. Suppose, my lords, he did it unconstraining,}
Think you 'twere prejudicial to his crown?

Exe. No. for he could not so resign his crown
But that the next heir should succeed and reign.

K. Hen. Art thou against us, Duke of Exeter?

Exe. His is the right, and therefore pardon me.

York. Why whisper you, my lords, and answer not?

Exe. My conscience tells me he is lawful king,

K. Hen. [Aside] All will revolt from me, and turn to him.

North. Plantagenet, for all the claim thou lay'st,
Think not that Henry shall be so deposed.

War. Deposed he shall be, in despite of all.

North. Thou art deceived: 'tis not thy southern power, Of Essex, Norfolk, Suffolk, nor of Kent,
Which makes thee thus presumptuous and proud,
Can set the duke up in despite of me.

Clif. King Henry, be thy title right or wrong,
Lord Clifford vows to fight in thy defence:

May that ground gape and swallow me alive,
Where I shall kneel to him that slew my father!

K. Hen. O Clifford, how thy words revive
my heart!

What matter you, or what conspire you, lords?

War. Do right unto this princely Duke of York,
Or I will fill the house with armed men,
And over the chair of state, where now he sits,
Write up his title with usurping blood.

[He stamps with his foot, and the Soldiers show themselves.]

K. Hen. My Lord of Warwick, hear me but one word:
Let me for this my life-time reign as king,
York. Confirm the crown to me and to mine heirs,

And thou shalt reign in quiet while thou livest.

King. I am content: Richard Plantagenet,
Enjoy the kingdom after my decease.

Clif. What wrong is this unto the prince your son!

War. What good is this to England and himsel!

West. Base, fearful and despairing Henry!

Clif. How hast thou injured both thyself and us?

West. I cannot stay to hear these articles.

North. Nor I.

Clif. Come, cousin, let us tell the queen these news.

West. Farewell, faint-hearted and degenerate
king,

In whose cold blood no spark of honour bides.

North. Be thou a prey unto the house of York,
And die in bands for this unnaturally deed!

Clif. In dreadful war mayst thou be overcome,
Or live in peace abandon'd and despised!

[Exeunt North, Clif., and West.]

War. Turn this way, Henry, and regard them not.

Exe. They seek revenge and therefore will not yield.

K. Hen. Ah, Exeter!

War. Why should you sigh, my lord?

K. Hen. Not for myself, Lord Warwick, but my son,
yet shalt thou be safe? such safety finds rembrancing lamb environed with wolves.

I was there, which am a sly woman, soldiers should have toss’d me on their pikes,

I would have granted to that act.

Hen. Stay, gentle Margaret, and hear me speak.

Mar. Thou hast spoke too much already:

get thee gone.

Hen. Gentle son Edward, thou wilt stay with me?

Mar. Ay, to be murder’d by his enemies.

ince. When I return with victory from the field

see your grace: till then I’ll follow her.

Mar. Come, son, away; we may not linger

thus.

[Exeunt Queen Margaret and the Prince.

Hen. Poor queen! how love to me and to her son made her break out into terms of rage!

or Richard, Edward, and Montague.

b. Brother, though I be youngest, give me leave.

w. No, I can better play the orator.

v. But I have reasons strong and forcible.

Enter the Duke of York.

w. Why, how now, sons and brother! at a strike!

is your quarrel? how began it first?

w. No quarrel, but a slight contention.

w. About what?

w. About that which concerns your grace and us;

town of England, father, which is yours. 9

x. Mine, boy? not till King Henry be dead.

y. Your right depends not on his life or death.

z. Now you are heir, therefore enjoy it now:

purchasing the house of Lancaster leave to breathe, or turn you, father, in the end.

k. I took an oath that he should quietly reign.

l. But for a kingdom any oath may be roken:

I would break a thousand oaths to reign one year.

Rich. No; God forbid your grace should be forsown.

York. I shall be, if I claim by open war.

Rich. I’ll prove the contrary, if you’ll hear me speak. 20

York. Thou canst not, son; it is impossible.

Rich. An oath is of no moment, being not took before a true and lawful magistrate,

That hath authority over him that swears:

Henry had none, but did usurp the place;

Then, seeing ‘twas he that made you to depose,

Your oath, my lord, is vain and frivolous.

Therefore, to arms! and, father, do but think

How sweet a thing it is to wear a crown;

Within whose circuit is Elysium

And all that poets feign of bliss and joy.

Why do we linger thus? I cannot rest

Until the white rose that I wear be dyed

Even in the lukewarm blood of Henry’s heart.

York. Richard, enough; I will be king, or die.

Brother, thou shalt to London presently,

And whet on Warwick to this enterprise.

Thou, Richard, shalt to the Duke of Norfolk,

And tell him privily of our intent.

You, Edward, shalt unto my Lord Cobham,

With whom the Kentishmen will willingly rise:

In them I trust; for they are soldiers,

Witty, courteous, liberal, full of spirit.

While you are thus employ’d, what resteth more,

But that I seek occasion how to rise,

And yet the king not privy to my drift,

Nor any of the house of Lancaster?

Enter a Messenger.

But, stay: what news? Why comest thou in such post?

Gabr. The queen with all the northern earls and lords

Intend here to besiege you in your castle:

She is hard by with twenty thousand men;

And therefore fortify your hold, my lord.

York. Ay, with my sword. What! think’st thou that we fear them?

Edward and Richard, you shall stay with me;

My brother Montague shall post to London:

Let noble Warwick, Cobham, and the rest,

Whom we have left protectors of the king,

With powerful policy strengthen themselves,

And trust not simple Henry nor his oaths.

Mont. Brother, I go; I’ll win them, fear it not:

And thus most humbly I do take my leave. [Exit.

Enter Sir John Mortimer and Sir Hugh Mortimer.

York. Sir John and Sir Hugh Mortimer, mine uncles,

You are come to Sandal in a happy hour;

The army of the queen mean to besiege us.

Sir John. She shall not need we’ll meet her in the field.

York. What, with five thousand men? Rich. Ay, with five hundred, father, for a need:

A woman’s general; what should we fear?

[March after off.

Edw. I hear their drums: let’s set our men in order,

And issue forth and bid them battle straight.
York. Five men to twenty! though the odds be great,
I doubt not, uncle, of our victory.
Many a battle have I won in France,
When as the enemy hath been ten to one:
Why should I not now have the like success?
[Alarum. Exeunt.]

SCENE III. Field of battle betwixt Sandal Castle and Wakefield.

Alarums. Enter Rutland and his Tutor.
Rut. Ah, whither shall I fly to 'scape their hands?
Ah, tutor, look where bloody Clifford comes!

Enter Clifford and Soldiers.
Clif. Chaplain, away! thy priesthood saves thy life,
As for the brat of this accursed duke,
Whose father slew my father, he shall die.
Tut. And I, my lord, will bear him company.
Clif. Soldiers, away with him!
Tut. Ah, Clifford, murder not this innocent child,
Lest thou be hated both of God and man!
[Exit, dragged off by Soldiers.
Clif. How now! is he dead already? or is it fear
That makes him close his eyes? 'I'll open them.'

Rut. So looks the pent-up lion o'er the wretch
That trembles under his devouring paws;
And so he walks, insulting o'er his prey,
And so he comes, to rend his limbs asunder.
Ah, gentle Clifford, kill me with thy sword,
And not with such a cruel threatening look.
Sweet Clifford, hear me speak before I die.
I am too mean a subject for thy wrath:
Be thou revenged on men, and let me live.

Clif. In vain thou speakest, poor boy; my father's blood
Hath stopp'd the passage where thy words should enter.

Rut. Then let my father's blood open it again:
He is a man, and, Clifford, cope with him.
Clif. Had I thy brethren here, their lives and thine
Were not revenge sufficient for me;
No, if I dagg'd up thy forefathers' graves
And hung their rotten coffins up in chains,
It could not slake mine ire, nor ease my heart.
The sight of any of the house of York
Is as a fury to torment my soul;
And till I root out their accursed line
And leave not one alive, I live in hell.
Therefore—[Lifting his hand.
Rut. O, let me pray before I take my death!
To thee I pray; sweet Clifford, pity me!
Clif. Such pity as my rapiers point affords.
Rut. I never did thee harm; why wilt thou slay me?
Clif. Thy father hath.

Rut. But 'twas ere I was born.
Thou hast one son; for his sake pity me,
Lost in revenge thereof, sith God is just,
He be as miserably slain as I.
Ah, let me live in prison all my days;
And when I give occasion of offence,
Then let me die, for now thou hast no cause.

Clif. No cause!
Thy father slew my father; therefore, die.

Rut. Di faciant laudis summa sit ista tua
Clif. Plantagenet! I come, Plantagenet! And this thy son's blood cleaving to my blade Shall rust upon my weapon, till thy blood
Congeal'd with this, do make me wipe off both

SCENE IV. Another part of the field.

York. The army of the queen hath got field:
My uncles both are slain in rescuing me;
And all my followers to the eager foe
Turn back and fly, like ships before the wind
Or lambs pursued by hunger-starved wolves.
My sons, God knows what, hath bechanc'd them;
But this I know, they have demean'd themselfes
Like men born to renown by life or death.
Three times did Richard make a lane to me,
And thrice cried ' Courage, father! fight it on
And full as oft came Edward to my side,
With purple falchion, painted to the hilt
In blood of those that had encounter'd him:
And when the hardest warriors did retire,
Richard cried 'Charge! and give no ground!' And cried 'A crown, or else a glorious tomb
A sceptre, or an earthly sepulchre!' With this, we charged again; but, out, alas! We bodged again; as I have seen a swan
With bootless labour swim against the tide
And spend her strength with over-matched waves.
[A short alarum within.

Ah, hark! the fatal followers do pursue;
And I am faint and cannot fly their fury;
And were I strong, I would not shun their fire.
The sands are number'd that make up my life Here must I stay, and here my life must end.

Enter Queen Margaret, Clifford, Noumberland, the young Prince, and Soldiers.

Come, bloody Clifford, rough Northumberlander I dare your quenchless fury to more rage;
I am your butt, and I abide your shot.
North. Yield to our mercy, proud Plantagenet.
Clif. Ay, to such mercy as his ruthless
With downright payment, show'd unto me.
Now Phaethon hath tumbled from his car,
And made an evening at the noontide pricks.
York. My ashes, as the phoenix, may forth
A bird that will revenge upon you all;
And in that hope I throw mine eyes to heaven
Scorning what'er you can afflikt me with.
Why come you not? what! multitudes, and Clif. So cowards fight when they can forth;
So doves do peck the falcon's piercing talon
So desperate thieves, all hopeless of their life
Breathe out invective against the officers.
York. O Clifford, but behild these once
And in the thought o'er-run my former time
And, if thou canst for blushing, view this fast
THIRD PART OF KING HENRY VI.

And will you pale your head in Henry's glory, And rob his temples of the diadem, Now in his life, against your holy oath? O, 'tis a fault too unpardonable! Off with the crown; and, with the crown, his head; And, whilst we breathe, take time to do him dead.

York. She-wolf of France, but worse than wolves of France, Whose tongue more poisons than the adder's tooth! How ill-beseeming is it in thy sex To triumph, like an Amazonian trull, Upon their woes whom fortune captivates! But that thy face is, visard-like, unchanging, Made impudent with use of evil deeds, I would assay, proud queen, to make thee blush. To tell thee whence thou cam'st, of whom derived, Were shame enough to shame thee, wert thou not shameless.

Thy father bears the type of King of Naples, Of both the Sicils and Jerusalem, Yet not so wealthy as an English yeoman. Hath that poor monarch taught thee to insult? It needs not, nor it boots thee; not, proud queen, Unless the adage must be verified, That beggars mounted run their horse to death. 'Tis beauty that doth oft make women proud; But, God he knows, thy share thereof is small: 'Tis virtue that doth make them most admired; The contrary doth make thee wonder'd at: 'Tis government that makes them seem divine; The want thereof makes thee abominable: Thou art as opposite to every good As the Antipodes are unto us, Or as the south to the septentriion. O tiger's heart wrapt in a woman's hide! How couldst thou drain the life-blood of the child, To bid the father wipe his eyes withal, And yet be seen to bear a woman's face?

Women are soft, mild, pitiful and flexible: Thou stern, obdurate, flinty, rough, remorseless. Bid'st thou me rage? why, now thou hast thy wish: WOULDST have me weep? why, now thou hast thy will: For raging wind blows up incessant showers, And when the rage allays, the rain begins. These tears are my sweet Rutland's obsequies: And every drop cries vengeance for his death, 'Gainst thee, fell Clifford, and thee, false Frenchwoman.

North. Bestrew me, but his passion moves me so That hardly can I check my eyes from tears.

York. That face of his the hungry cannibals Would not have touch'd, would not have stain'd with blood: But you are more inhuman, more inexorable, O, ten times more, than tigers of Hyrcania. See, ruthless queen, a hapless father's tears: This cloth thou dip'st in blood of my sweet boy, And I with tears do wash the blood away. Keep thou the napkin, and go boast of this: And if thou tell'at the heavy story right, Upon my soul, the hearers will shed tears:

34—2
Yea even my foes will shed fast-falling tears,
And say 'Alas, it was a piteous deed!'
There, take the crown, and, with the crown, my curse.
And in thy need such comfort come to thee
As now I reap at thy too cruel hand!
Hard-hearted Clifford, take me from the world:
My soul to heaven, my blood upon your heads!
North. Had he been slaughter-man to all my kin,
I should not for my life but weep with him.
To see how inly sorrow grieves his soul.
Q. Mar. What, weeping-ripe, my Lord Northumberland?
Think but upon the wrong he did us all,
And that will quickly dry thy melting tears.
Cliff. Here's for my oath, here's for my father's death. [Stabbing him.
Q. Mar. And here's to right our gentle-hearted king.
York. Open Thy gate of mercy, gracious God! My soul flies through these wounds to seek out Thee.
[Dies.
Q. Mar. Off with his head, and set it on York gates;
So York may overlook the town of York. [Flourish. Exeunt.

ACT II.

SCENE I. A plain near Mortimer's Cross in Hertfordshire.

A march. Enter Edward, Richard, and their power.

Edw. I wonder how our princely father's scaped,
Or whether he be 'scaped away or no
From Clifford's and Northumberland's pursuit:
Had he been ta'en, we should have heard the news;
Had he been slain, we should have heard the news;
Or had he 'scaped, methinks we should have heard
The happy tidings of his good escape.
How fares my brother? why is he so sad?
Rich. I cannot joy, until I be resolved
Where our right valiant father is become.
I saw him in the battle range about;
And watch'd him how he single d Clifford forth.
Methought he bore him in the thickest troop
As doth a lion in a herd of neat;
Or as a bear, encompass'd round with dogs,
Who having pinch'd a few and made them cry,
The rest stand all aloof, and bark at him.
So fared our father with his enemies;
So fled his enemies my warlike father:
Methinks, 'tis prize enough to be his son.
See how the morning opens her golden gates,
And takes her farewell of the glorious sun!
How well resembles it the prime of youth,
Trimm'd like a younger prancing to his love.
Edw. Dazzle mine eyes, or do I see three suns?
Rich. Three glorious suns, each one a perfect sun;
Not separated with the racking clouds,
But sever'd in a pale clear-shining sky.
See, see! they join, embrace, and seem to kiss;
As if they vow'd some league inviolable.
Now are they but one lamp, one light, one sun.
In this the heaven figures some event.

Edw. 'Tis wondrous strange, the like never heard of.
I think it cites us, brother, to the field,
That we, the sons of brave Plantagenet,
Each one already blazing by our meeds,
Should not understanding join our lights together
And over-shine the earth as this the world.
What'er it bodes, henceforward will I bear
Upon my target three fairest-shining suns.
Rich. Nay, bear three daughters: by yea
I leave you speak it,
You love the breeder better than the male.

Enter a Messenger.

But what art thou, whose heavy looks foretell
Some dreadful story hanging on thy tongue?
Mess. Ah, one that was a woful looker-on.
When as the noble Duke of York was slain,
Your princely father and my loving lord!
Edw. O, speak no more, for I have heard much.
Rich. Say how he died, for I will hear it a Mess. Environed he was with many foes.
And stood against them, as the hope of Troy
Against the Greeks that would have enter'd T
But Hercules himself must yield to odds;
And many strokes, though with a little axe,
Hew down and fell the hardest-tember'd oak.
By many hands your father was subdued;
But only 'spear'd by the ireful arm
Of unreleenting Clifford and the queen,
Who crown'd the gracious duke in high desp Laugh'd in his face; and when with grief he
The ruthless queen gave him to dry his cheek
A napkin steeped in the harmless blood
Of sweet young Rutland, by rough Clifford;
And after many scorns, many foul taunts,
They took his head, and on the gates of Yor
They set the same; and there it doth remain,
The saddest spectacle that e'er I view'd.
Edw. Sweet Duke of York, our prop to upon,
Now thou art gone, we have no staff, no sta
O Clifford, but a woful Clifford! thou hast sla
the power of Europe for his chivalry;
And treacherously hast thou vanquish'd him
For hand to hand he would have vanquish'd
Now my soul's palace is become a prison;
Ah, would she break from hence, that this my Might in the ground be close up in rest?
For never henceforth shall I joy again,
Never, O never, shall I feel more joy!
Rich. I cannot weep; for all my body's ture
Scarce serves to quench my furnace-burning
Nor can my tongue unload my heart's burthen;
For selfsame wind that I should speak with
Is kindling coals that fires all my breast,
And burns me up with flames that tears quench.
To weep is to make less the depth of grief;
Tears then for babes; blows and revenge for Richford, I bear thy name; I'll venge thy
Or shewn by attempting it.
Edw. His name that valiant duke had with thee;
HIS dukedom and his chair with me is left.
Rich. Nay, if thou be that princely eagle

March. Enter Warwick, Marquis of Montague, and their army.

Var. How now, fair lords! What fare? what news abroad?

Rich. Great Lord of Warwick, if we should recount
b baleful news, and at each word's deliverance
b poniards in our flesh till all were told,
c words would add more anguish than the wounds.

valiant word, the Duke of York is slain! 100

Edw. O Warwick, Warwick! that Plantagenet, ich held thee dearly as his soul's redemption,
by the stern Lord Clifford done to death.

Var. Ten days ago I drown'd these news in tears;
I now, to add more measure to your woes,
come to tell you things sith then befall'n.

er the bloody fray at Wakefield fought,
ere your brave father breathed his latest gasp,
bers, as swiftly as the posts could run,
re brought me of your loss and his depart.
110 hen in London, keeper of the king,
s'ed my soldiers, gather'd flocks of friends,
very well appointed, as I thought,
rch'd toward Saint Alban's to intercept the king, rking the king in my behalf along;
by my scouts I was advertised a she was coming with a full intent dash our late decree in parliament ching King Henry's oath and your succession.

tale to make, we at Saint Albans met, 120
b battles join'd, and both sides fiercely fought:
whether 'twas the coldness of the king,
look'd full gently on his warlike queen,
a rob'd my soldiers of their heated spleen;

more than common fear of Clifford's rigour, shuners to his captives blood and death,
not judge: but, to conclude with truth,
ir weapons like to lightning came and went;
soldiers, like the night-owl's lazy flight, 130
are a idle thrasher with a flail, gently down, as if they struck their friends.
cor'd them up with justice of our cause, promise of high pay and great rewards:
all in vain: they had no heart to fight,
in we in them no hope to win the day;
hat we fled; the king unto the queen;
I George your brother, Norfolk and myself,
ae, post-haste, are come to join with you;
in the marches here we heard you were, 140
ing another head to fight again.

Edw. Where is she the Duke of Norfolk, gentle Warwick?
ich came George from Burgundy to England?
ar. Some six miles off the duke is with the soldiers; for your brother, he was lately sent a your kind aunt, Duchess of Burgundy, end of soldiers to this needful war.
ich. *Twas odds, belike, when valiant Warwick fled:

War. Oft have I heard his praises in pursuit, ne'er till now his scandal of retire. 150

*War. Not now my scandal, Richard, dost thou hear:
For thou shalt know this strong right hand of mine
Can pluck the diadem from faint Henry's head,
And wring the awful sceptre from his fist,
Were he as famous and as bold in war
As he is famed for mildness, peace, and prayer.

Rich. I know it well, Lord Warwick; blame me not:
*Tis love I hear thy glories makes me speak.
But in this troublesome time what's to be done?
Shall we go throw away our coats of steel,
And wrap our bodies in black mourning gowns,
Numbering our Ave-Maries with our beads?
Or shall we on the helmets of our foes
Tell our devotion with revengeful arms?
If for the last, say ay, and to it, lords.

War. Why, therefore Warwick came to seek you out;
And therefore comes my brother Montague.
Attend me, lords. The proud insulting queen,
With Clifford and the haughty Northumberland,
And of their feather many me proud birds, 170
Have wrought the easy-melting king like wax.
He swore consent to your succession,
His oath enrolled in the parliament;
And now to London all the crew are gone,
To frustrate both his oath and what beside
May make against the house of Lancaster.
Their power, I think, is thirty thousand strong:
Now, if the help of Norfolk and myself,
With all the friends that thou, brave Earl of March,

Amongst the loving Welshmen canst procure, 180
Will but amount to five and twenty thousand,
Why, Via! to London will we march amain,
And once again bestride our foaming steeds,
And once again cry Charge upon our foes!
But never once again turn back and fly.

Rich. Ay, now methinks I hear great Warwick speak:
Ne'er may he live to see a sunshine day,
That cries Retire, if Warwick bid him stay.

Edw. Lord Warwick, on thy shoulder will I lean;
And when thou fail'st—as God forbid the hour—
Must Edward fall, which peril heaven forfend!

War. No longer Earl of March, but Duke of York:
The next degree is England's royal throne;
For King of England shalt thou be proclaim'd
In every borough as we pass along;
And be he that throws not up his cap for joy
Shall for the fault make forfeit of his head.
King Edward, valiant Richard, Montague,
Stay we no longer, dreaming of renown,
But sound the trumpets, and about our task.

Rich. Then, Clifford, were thy heart as hard as steel,
As thou hast shown it flinty by thy deeds,
I come to pierce it, or to give thee mine.

Edw. Then strike up drums: God and Saint George for us!

Enter a Messenger.

War. How now! what news?
Mess. The Duke of Norfolk sends you word
by me,
The queen is coming with a puissant host;
And craves your company for speedy counsel.
War. Why then it sorts, brave warriors, let's away. [Exeunt.

SCENE II. Before York.

Flourish. Enter King Henry, Queen MARGARET, the Prince of Wales, Clifford, and Northumberland, with drums and trumpets.

Q. Mar. Welcome, my lord, to this brave town of York.
Yonder's the head of that arch-enemy
That sought to be encompass'd with your crown:
Doth not the object cheer your heart, my lord?
K. Hen. Ay, as the rocks cheer them that fear their wreck:
To see this sight, it irks my very soul.
Withhold revenge, dear God! 'tis not my fault,
Nor willingly have I infringed my vow.
Clif. My gracious liege, this too much lenity
And harmful pity must be laid aside.
To whom do lions cast their gentle looks?
Not to the beast that would usurp their den.
Whose hand is that the forest bear doth lick?
Not his that spoils her young before her face.
Who 'scapes the lurking serpent's mortal sting?
Not he that sets his foot upon her back.
The smallest worm will turn being trodden on,
And does will peck in safeguard of their brood.
Ambitious York did level at thy crown,
Thou smiling while he knits his angry brows:
He, but a duke, would have his son a king,
And raise his issue, like a loving sire;
Thou, being a king, blest with a goodly son,
Didst yield consent to disinherit him,
Which argued thee a most unloving father.
Unreasonable creatures feed their young;
And though man's face be fearful to their eyes,
Yet, in protection of their tender ones,
Who hath not seen them, even with those wings
Which sometime they have used with fearful flight.
Make war with him that climb'd unto their nest,
Offering their own lives in their young's defence?
For shame, my liege, make them your precedent!
Were it not pity that this goodly boy
Should lose his birthright by his father's fault,
And long hereafter say unto his child,
'What my great-grandfather and grandsire got
My careless father fondly gave away?'
Ah, what a shame were this! Look on the boy;
And let his manly face, which promises
Successful fortune, steel thy melting heart
To hold thine own and leave thine own with him.
K. Hen. Full well hath Clifford play'd the orator,
Inferring arguments of mighty force.
But, Clifford, tell me, didst thou never hear
That things ill-got had ever bad success?
And happy always was it for that son
Whose father for his hoarding went to hell?
I'll leave my son my virtuous deeds behind;
And would my father had left me no more!
For all the rest is held at such a rate

As brings a thousand-fold more care to keep
Than in possession any jot of pleasure.
Ah, cousin York! would thy best friends be nigh?
How it doth grieve me that thy head is here!
Q. Mar. My lord, cheer up your spirits;
foes are nigh,
And this soft courage makes your followers fail.
You promised knighthood to our forward son:
Unsheathe your sword, and dub him presently.
Edward, kneel down.
K. Hen. Edward. Plantagenet, arise a knight
And learn this lesson, draw thy sword in right.
Prince. My gracious father, by your kind leave,
I'll draw it as apparent to the crown,
And in that quarrel use it to the death.
Clif. Why, that is spoken like a true prince.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Royal commanders, be in readiness
For with a band of thirty thousand men
Come I, the backing of the Duke of York;
And in the towns, as they do march along,
Proclaims him king, and many fly to him:
Darraign your battle, for they are at hand.
Clif. I would your highness would depart field:
The queen hath best success when you absent.
Q. Mar. Ay, good my lord, and leave us our fortune.
K. Hen. Why, that's my fortune too; the fore I'll stay.
North. Be it with resolution then to fight.
Prince. My royal father, cheer these no lords
And hearten those that fight in your defence:
Unsheathe your sword, good father; cry 'St.
George!'

March. Enter Edward, George, Richard,
Warwick, Norfolf, Montague, and Soldiers.

Edw. Now, perjured Henry! wilt thou ken for grace,
And set thy diadem upon my head;
Or bide the mortal fortune of the field?
Q. Mar. Go, rate thy minions, proud insuring boy!
Becomes it thee to be thus bold in terms
Before thy sovereign and thy lawful king?
Edw. I am his king, and he should bow knee;
I was adopted heir by his consent:
Since when, his oath is broke; for, as I hear,
You, that are king, though he do wear the crown,
Have caused him, by new act of parliament,
To blot out me, and put his own son in Clif. And reason too:
Who should succeed the father but the son?
Rich. Are you there, butcher? O, I can speak!
Clif. Ay, crook-back, here I stand to ans-
thee,
Or any he the proudest of thy sort.
Rich. 'Twas you that kill'd young Rutland was it not?
By that false woman, as this king by thee.
His father revel'd in the heart of France,
And tamed the king, and made the dauphin
stoop;
And had he match'd according to his state,
He might have kept that glory to this day;
But when he took a beggar to his bed,
And graced thy poor sire with his bridal-day,
Even then that sunshine brew'd a shower for him.
That wash'd his father's fortunes forth of France,
And heap'd sedition on his crown at home.
For what hath broach'd this tumult but thy pride?
Hadst thou been meek, our title still had slept;
And we, in pity of the gentle king,
Had slipp'd our claim until another age.
Geo. But when we saw our sunshine made thy spring,
And that thy summer bred us no increase,
We set the axe to thy usurping root;
And though the edge hath something hit ourselves,
Yet, know thou, since we have begun to strike,
We'll never leave till we have hewn thee down,
Or bathed thy growing with our heated bloods.
Edw. And, in this resolution, I defy thee;
Not willing any longer conference,
Since thou deniest the gentle king to speak.
Sound trumpets! let our bloody colours wave!
And either victory, or else a grave.
Edw. No, wrangling woman, we'll no longer stay:
These words will cost ten thousand lives this day.
[Exeunt.]

Scene III. A field of battle between Towton and Saxton, in Yorkshire.

Alarum. Excursions. Enter Warwick.
War. Forspent with toil, as runners with a race,
I lay me down a little while to breathe;
For strokes received, and many blows repaid,
Have robb'd my strong-knit sinews of their strength,
And spite of spite needs must I rest awhile.

Enter Edward, running.

Edw. Smile, gentle heaven! or strike, un-gentle death!
For this world frowns, and Edward's sun is clouded.
War. How now, my lord! what hap? what hope of good?

Enter George.
Geo. Our hap is loss, our hope but sad despair;
Our ranks are broke, and ruin follows us:
What counsel give you? whither shall we fly?
Edw. Bootless is flight, they follow us with wings;
And weak we are and cannot shun pursuit.

Enter Richard.

Rich. Ah, Warwick, why hast thou withdrawn thyself?
Thy brother's blood the thirsty earth hath drunk,
Broach'd with the steady point of Clifford's lance;
And in the very pangs of death he cried,
Like to a dismal clanger heard from far,
'Warwick, revenge! brother, revenge my death!' So, underneath the belly of their steeds, That stain'd their fetlocks in his smoking blood, The noble gentleman gave up the ghost.

War. Then let the earth be drunken with our blood:
I'll kill my horse, because I will not fly, Why stand we like soft-hearted women here, Wailing our losses, whiles the foe doth rage; And look upon, as if the tragedy Were play'd in jest by counterfeiting actors? Here on my knee I vow to God above,
I'll never pause again, never stand still, Till either death hath closed these eyes of mine Or fortune given me measure of revenge.

Edw. O Warwick, I do bend my knee with thee;
And in this vow do chain my soul to thine! And, ere my knee rise from the earth's cold face, I throw my hands, mine eyes, my heart to thee, Thou settist up and pluckst down of kings, Beseeching thee, if with thy will it stands That to my foes this body must be prey, Yet that thy brazen gates of heaven may ope, 30 And give sweet passage to my sinful soul! Now, lords, take leave until we meet again, Where'er it be, in heaven or in earth.

Rich. Brother, give me thy hand; and, gentle Warwick,
Let me embrace thee in my weary arms: I, that did never weep, now melt with woe That winter should cut off our spring-time so. War. Away, away! Once more, sweet lords, farewell.

Geo. Yet let us all together to our troops, And give them leave to fly that will not stay; 50 And call them pillars that will stand to us; And, if we thrive, promise them such rewards As victors wear at the Olympic games: This may plant courage in their quailing breasts; For yet is hope of life and victory. Forslow no longer, make we hence again. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV. Another part of the field.

Excursions. Enter Richard and Clifford.

Rich. Now, Clifford, I have singled thee alone: Suppose this arm is for the Duke of York, And this for Rutland; both bound to revenge, Wert thou environ'd with a brazen wall. Cliff. Now, Richard, I am with thee here alone: This is the hand that stabb'd thy father York; And this the hand that slay my brother Rutland; And here's the heart that triumphs in their death And cheers these hands that slew thy sire and brother To execute the like upon thyself; And so, have at thee!' 10 physic. Warwick comes; Clifford flies.

Rich. Nay, Warwick, single out some other chase; For I myself will hunt this wolf to death. [Exeunt.

SCENE V. Another part of the field.

Alarum. Enter King Henry alone.

King. This battle fares like to the morn war, When dying clouds contend with growing light; What time the shepherd, blowing of his nail Can neither call it perfect day nor night. Now sways it this way, like a mighty sea Forced by the tide to combat with the wind Now sways it that way, like the selfsame sea. Forced to retire by fury of the wind: Sometime the flood prevails, and then the w Now one the better, then another best; Both tugging to be victors, breast to breast, Yet neither conqueror nor conquer'd: So is the equal poise of this fell war. Here on this molehill will I sit me down. To whom God will, there be the victory! For Margaret my queen, and Clifford too, Have chid me from the battle; swearing bo They prosper best of all when I am thence. Would I were dead! if God's good will were For what is in this world but grief and woe O! God! methinks it were a happy life, To be no better than a homely swain; To sit upon a hill, as I do now, To carve out dials quaintly, point by point, Thereby to see the minutes how they run, How many make the hour full complete; How many hours bring about the day; How many days will finish up the year; How many years a mortal man may live. When this is known, then to divide the time So many hours must I tend my flock; So many hours must I take my rest; So many hours must I contemplate; So many hours must I sport myself; So many days my ewes have been with you So many weeks ere the poor fowls will ean; So many years ere I shall shear the fleece; So many, hours, days, months, and years Past to over the end they were created, Would bring white hairs unto a quiet grave Ah, what a life were this! how sweet! how holy! Gives not the hawthorn-bush a sweeter shade To shepherds looking on their silly sheep, Than doth a rich embroidered canopy To kings that fear their subjects' treachery O, yes, it doth; a thousand-fold it doth. And to conclude, the shepherd's homely cup His cold thin drink out of his leather bottle His wonted sleep under a fresh tree's shade All which secure and sweetly he enjoys, Is far beyond a prince's delicacies, His viands sparkling in a golden cup, His body couched in a curious bed, When care, mistrust, and treason waits on [Exeunt.

Alarum. Enter a Son that has killed his Father dragging in the dead body.

Son. Ill blows the wind that profits nobly. This man, whom hand to hand I slew in fight May be possessed with some store of crowns And I, that haply take them from him now May yet ere night yield both my life and A To some man else, as this dead man doth: Who's this? O! God! it is my father's face Whom in this conflict I unawares have kill'd.
av times, begetting such events!
A London by the king was I press'd forth;
father being the Earl of Warwick's man, e on the part of York, press'd by his nester; 70
I, who at his hands received my life,
e by my hands of life bereaved him.
on me, God, I knew not what I did!
pardon, father, for I knew not thee! For I shall wipe away these bloody marks:
no more words till they have flow'd their fill.
Hen. O piteous spectacle! O bloody times!
es lions and war for their dens, 90 harmless lambs abide their enmity.
2 , wretched man, I'll aid thee tear for tear;
let our hearts and eyes, like civil war,
and with tears, and break o'erscharged with grief.

3  A Father that has killed his son, bringing in the body.

th. Thou that so stoutly hast resisted me, me thy gold, if thou hast any gold; 80 have bought it with an hundred blows. et me see: is this our foeman's face?
no, no, no, it is mine only son!
oy, if any life be left in thee,
up thine eye! see, see what showers arise,
with the windy tempest of my heart, y wounds, that kill mine eye and heart! 90
y, God, this miserable age!
stragems, how fell, how butcherly,
eous, mutinous and unnatural, deadly quarrel daily doth beget!
thy father gave thee life too soon,
abref thee of thy life too late!
Hen. Woe above woe! grief more than common grief!
my death would stay these ruthless deeds! y, pity, gentle heaven, pity!
ed rose and the white are on his face,
ial colours of our striving houses:
ne his purple blood right well resembles;
ther his pale cheeks, methinks, presenteth:
one rose, and let the other flourish; 101 contend, a thousand lives must wither.
How will my mother for her father's death with me and ne'er be satisfied!
. How will my wife for slaughter of my on sens of tears and ne'er be satisfied! 111
Hen. How will the country for these woful hances nk the king and not be satisfied!
Was ever son so rued a father's death? 120
Was ever father so bemoan'd his son? Hen. Was ever king so grieved for sub-cts' woe?
is your sorrow; mine ten times so much.
I'll bear thee hence, where I may weep y fill. [Exit with the body.
. These arms of mine shall be thy winding-art, sweet boy, shall be thy sepulchre, on my heart thine image ne'er shall go; hing breast shall be thy funeral bell; obsequious will thy father be,
for the loss of thee, having no more,
was for all his valiant sons.

For I have murdered where I should not kill. [Exit with the body.

K. Hen. Sad-hearted men, much overcome with care,
Here sits a king more woful than you are.

Alarums: excursions. Enter Queen Margaret, the Prince, and Exeter.

Prince. Fly, father, fly! for all your friends are fled,
And Warwick rages like a chafed bull:
Away! for death doth hold us in pursuit.
Q. Mar. Mount you, my lord; towards Berwick post amain:
Edward and Richard, like a brace of greyhounds,
Having the fearful flying hare in sight.
With fiery eyes sparkling for very wrath,
And bloody steel grasp'd in their irrele hands,
Are at our backs; and therefore hence amain.

Exe. Away! for vengeance comes along with them:
Nay, stay not to expostulate, make speed; 140
Or else come after: I'll be away before.
K. Hen. Nay, take me with thee, good sweet Exeter:
Not that I fear to stay, but love to go Whither the queen intends. Forward! away! [Exit.

Scene VI. Another part of the field.
A loud alarum. Enter Clifford, wounded.
Cif. Here burns my candle out; ay, here it dies,
Which, whiles it lasted, gave King Henry light.
O Lancaster, I fear thy overthrow
More than my body's parting with my soul!
My love and fear glued many friends to thee;
And, now I fall, thy fortune to compare.
Impairing Henry, strengthening misprised York,
The common people swarm like summer flies;
And whither fly the gnats but to the sun? 150
And who shines now but Henry's enemies?
O Phoebus, hadst thou never given consent
That Phaethon should check thy father's steeds,
Thy burning car never had scorched the earth!
And, Henry, hadst thou way'd as kings should do,
Or as thy father and his father did,
Giving no ground unto the house of York,
They never then had sprung like summer flies;
I and ten thousand in this luckless realm
Had left no mourning widows for our death;
And thou this day hadst kept thy chair in peace.
For what doth cherish weeds but gentle air?
And what makes robbers bold but too much lenity?

Bootless are plaints, and carelese are my wounds;
No way to fly, nor strength to hold out flight:
The foe is merciless, and will not pity:
For at their hands I have deserved no pity.
The air hath got into my deadly wounds,
And much effuse of blood doth make me faint.
Come, York and Richard, Warwick and the rest;
I stabb'd your fathers' bosoms, split my breast.
[He faints.

Edw. Now breathe we, lords; good fortune bids us pause,
And smooth the frowns of war with peaceful looks.
Some troops pursue the bloody-minded queen,
That led calm Henry, though he were a king,
As doth a sail, fil'd with a fretting gust,
Command an argosy to stem the waves.
But think you, lords, that Clifford fled with them?
War. No, 'tis impossible he should escape;
For, though before his face I speak the words,
Your brother Richard mark'd him for the grave:
And wheresoe'er he is, he's surely dead. [Close groans, and dies.

Edu. Whose soul is that which takes her heavy leave?
Edu. See who it is: and, now the battle's ended,
If friend or foe, let him be gently used.
Rich. Revoke that doom of mercy, for 'tis Clifford:
Who not contented that he lopp'd the branch
In hewing Rutland when his leaves put forth,
But set his murdering knife unto the root
From whence that tenderspray did sweetly spring,
I mean our princely father, Duke of York. [Close.
War. From off the gates of York fetch down the head,
Your father's head, which Clifford placed there;
Instead whereof let this supply the room:
Measure for measure must be answered.
Edu. Bring forth that fatal screech-owl to our house,
That nothing sung but death to us and ours:
Now death shall stop his dismal threatening sound,
And his ill-boding tongue no more shall speak.
War. I think his understanding is bereft. Go
Speak, Clifford, dost thou know who speaks to thee?
Dark cloudy death o'ershades his beams of life,
And he nor sees nor hears us what we say.
Rich. O, would he did! and so perhaps he doth:
'Tis but his policy to counterfeit,
Because he would avoid such bitter tunes
Which in the time of death he gave our father.
Geo. If so thou think'st, vex him with eager words.
Rich. Clifford, ask mercy and obtain no grace,
Edu. Clifford, repent in bootless penitence.
War. Clifford, devise excuses for thy faults.
Geo. While we devise fell tortures for thy faults.
Rich. Thou didst love York, and I am son to York.
Edu. Thou pitied'st Rutland; I will pity thee.
Geo. Where's Captain Margaret, to fence you now?
War. They mock thee, Clifford: swear as thou wast wont.
Rich. What, not an oath? nay, then the world goes hard
When Clifford cannot spare his friends an oath.
I know by that he's dead; and, by my soul,
If this right hand would buy two hours' life, So
That I in all despite might rail at him.
This hand should chop it off, and with the issuing blood
Stifle the villain whose unstanch'd thirst
York and young Rutland could not satisfy.
War. Ay, but he's dead: off with the traitor's head,
And rear it in the place your father's stands.
And now to London with triumphal march,
The place he crown'd England's royal king:
From whence shall Warwick cut the sea to Fr?
And ask the Lady Bona for thy queen:
So shalt thou sinew both these lands together
And, having France thy friend, thou shall dread
The scatter'd foe that hopes to rise again;
For though they cannot greatly sting to hurt
Yet look to have them buzz to offend thine ears:
First will I see the coronation;
And then to Brittany I'll cross the sea,
To effect this marriage, so it please my lord
Edu. Even as thou wilt, sweet Warwick it be;
For in thy shoulder do I build my seat,
And never will I undertake the thing
Wherein thy counsel and consent is wanting.
Richard, I will create thee Duke of Gloucester
And George, of Clarence: Warwick, as our Shall do and undo as him pleaseth best.
Rich. Let me be Duke of Clarence, G
of Gloucester;
For Gloucester's dukedom is too ominous.
War. Tut, that's a foolish observation:
Richard, be Duke of Gloucester. Now to Lose
To see these honours in possession. [Ex

ACT III.

SCENE I. A forest in the north of Engi

Enter two Keepers, with cross-bows in hands.

First Keep. Under this thick-grown we'll shroud ourselves;
For through this laund anon the deer will
And in this covert will we make our stand,
Culling the principal of all the deer.

Sec. Keep. I'll stay above the hill, so may shoot.

First Keep. That cannot be; the noise cross-bow
Will scare the herd, and so my shoot is lost.
Here stand we both, and aim we at the best.
And, for the time shall not seem tedious,
I'll tell thee what befel me on a day
In this self-place where now we mean to stay.

Sec. Keep. Here comes a man; let's stohe he be past.

Enter King Henry, disguised, with a book.

K. Hen. From Scotland am I stol'n, e pure love,
To greet mine own land with my wishful s
No, Harry, Harry, 'tis no land of thine; Thy place is fil'd, thy sceptre wrung from Thy balm wash'd off wherewith thou wa ointed:
No bending knee will call thee Caesar now
No humble suitors press to speak for right,
No, not a man comes for redress of thee;
Third Part of King Henry VI.

Sec. Keep. Here in this country, where we now remain.

K. Hen. I was anointed king at nine months old;
My father and my grandfather were kings,
And you were sworn true subjects unto me:
And tell me, then, have you not broke your oaths?

First Keep. No;
For we were subjects but while you were king.

K. Hen. Why, am I dead? do I not breathe a man?

Ah, simple men, you know not what you swear!
Look, as I blow this feather from my face,
And as the air blows it to me again,
Obeying with my wind when I do blow,
And yielding to another when it blows,
Commanded always by the greater gust;
Such is the lightness of you common men.

But do not break your oaths; for of that sin My mild entreaty shall not make you guilty.
Go where you will, the king shall be commanded:
And be you kings, command, and I'll obey.

First Keep. We are true subjects to the king,
King Edward.

K. Hen. So would you be again to Henry,
If he were seated as King Edward is.

First Keep. We charge you, in God's name, and the king's,
To go with us unto the officers.

K. Hen. In God's name, lead; your king's name be obey'd;
And what God will, that let your king perform:
And what he will, I humbly yield unto.

[Exeunt.]

Scene II. London. The palace.

Enter King Edward, Gloucester, Clarence, and Lady Grey.

K. Edw. Brother of Gloucester, at Saint Alban's field
This lady's husband, Sir Richard Grey, was slain,
His lands then seized on by the conqueror:
Her suit is now to repose those lands;
Which we in justice cannot well deny,
Because in quarrel of the house of York
The worthy gentleman did lose his life.

Glou. Your highness shall do well to grant her suit;
It were dishonour to deny it her.

K. Edw. It were no less; but yet I'll make a pause.

Glou. [Aside to Clar.] Yea, is it so?
I see the lady hath a thing to grant,
Before the king will grant her humble suit.

Clar. [Aside to Glou.] He knows the game:
how true he keeps the wind!

Glou. [Aside to Clar.] Silence!

K. Edw. Widow, we will consider of your suit;
And some other time to know our mind.

L. Grey. Right gracious lord, I cannot brook delay:
May it please your highness to resolve me now;
And what your pleasure is, shall satisfy me.

Glou. [Aside to Clar.] Ay, widow? then I'll warrant you all your lands,
An if what pleases him shall pleasure you.
Fight closer, or, good faith, you'll catch a blow.
L. Grey. Three, my most gracious lord.

Glo. [Aside to Clar.] Ay, good leave have you; for you will have leave, Till youth take leave and leave you to the crutch. [Glo. and Clar. retire.]

K. Edu. Now tell me, madam, do you love your children?

L. Grey. Ay, full as dearly as I love myself, K. Edu. And would you not do much to do them good?

L. Grey. To do them good, I would sustain some harm.

K. Edu. Then get your husband's lands, to do them good.

L. Grey. Therefore I came unto your majesty. K. Edu. I'll tell you how these lands are to be got.

L. Grey. So shall you bind me to your highness' service.

K. Edu. What service wilt thou do me, if I give them?

L. Grey. What you command, that rests in me to do.

K. Edu. But you will take exceptions to my boon.

L. Grey. No, gracious lord, except I cannot do it.

K. Edu. Ay, but thou canst do what I mean to ask.

L. Grey. Why, then I will do what your grace commands.

Glo. [Aside to Clar.] He plies her hard; and much rain wears the marble.

Clar. [Aside to Glo.] As red as fire! nay, then her wax must melt.

L. Grey. Why stops my lord? shall I not hear my task?

K. Edu. An easy task; 'tis but to love a king.

L. Grey. That's soon perform'd, because I am a subject. K. Edu. Why, then, thy husband's lands I freely give thee.

L. Grey. I take my leave with many thousand thanks.

Glo. [Aside to Clar.] The match is made; she seals it with a curtsy.

K. Edu. But stay thee, 'tis the fruits of love I mean.

L. Grey. The fruits of love I mean, my loving liege.
THIRD PART OF KING HENRY VI.

r no more, for thou shalt be my queen.

ow hath done his shift.

Edw. Brothers, you muse what chat we wo have had.
. The widow likes it not, for she looks ey sad.
Edw. You'ld think it strange if I should arry her.
. To whom, my lord?
Edw. Why, Clarence, to myself.
. That would be ten days' wonder at the st.
. That's a day longer than a wonder
ks.
. By so much is the wonder in extremes.
Edw. Well, jest on, brothers: I can tell ou both it is granted for her husband's lands.

Enter a Nobleman.

My gracious lord, Henry your foe is

Edw. See that he be convey'd unto the Scene III. France. The King's palace.

Flourish. Enter Lewis the French King, his sister Bona, his Admiral, called Bourbon; Prince Edward, Queen Margaret, and the Earl of Oxford. Lewis sits, and riseth up again.

K. Lew. Fair Queen of England, worthy Mar garet,
Sit down with us: it ill befits thy state
And birth, that thou shouldst stand while Lewis doth sit.
Q. Mar. No, mighty King of France: now
Margaret
Must strike her sail and learn awhile to serve
Where kings command. I was, I must confess,
Great Albion's queen in former golden days:
But now mischance hath trod my title down,
And with dishonour laid me on the ground;
Where I must take like seat unto my fortune,
To my humble seat conform myself.
K. Lew. Why, say, fair queen, whence springs this deep despair?
Q. Mar. From such a cause as fills mine eyes with tears
And stops my tongue, while heart is drown'd in cares.
K. Lew. What'er it be, be thou still like thyself, And sit thee by our side: [Seats her by him] yield not thy cheek To fortune's yoke, but let thy dauntless mind Still ride in triumph over all mischance. Be plain, Queen Margaret, and tell thy grief; It shall be eased, if France can yield relief.

Q. Mar. Those gracious words revive my drooping thoughts And give my tongue-tied sorrows leave to speak. Now, therefore, be it known to noble Lewis, That Henry, sole possessor of my love, Is of a king become a banish'd man, And forced to live in Scotland a forlorn; While proud ambitious Edward Duke of York Usurps the regal title and the seat Of England's true-annointed lawful king. This is the cause that I, poor Margaret, With this my son, Prince Edward, Henry's heir, Am come to crave thy just and lawful aid; And if thou fail us, all our hope is done: Scotland hath will to help, but cannot help; Our people and our peers are both misled, Our treasure seized, our soldiers put to flight, And, as thou seest, ourselves in heavy plight.

K. Lew. Renowned queen, with patience calm the storm, While we bethink a means to break it off. Q. Mar. The more we stay, the stronger grows our foe.

K. Lew. The more I stay, the more I'll succour thee. Q. Mar. O, but impatience waiteth on true sorrow. And see where comes the breeder of my sorrow!

Enter Warwick.

Q. Mar. Ay, now begins a second storm to rise; For this is he that moves both wind and tide.

War. From worthy Edward, King of Albion, My lord and sovereign, and thy vowed friend, 50 I come, in kindness and unfeigned love, First, to do greetings to thy royal person; And then to crave a league of amity; And lastly, to confirm that amity With nuptial knot, if thou vouchsafe to grant That virtuous Lady Bona, thy fair sister, To England's king in lawful marriage.

Q. Mar. [Aside] If that go forward, Henry's hope is done.

War. [To Bona] And, gracious madam, in our king's behalf, I am commanded, with your leave and favour, 60 Humbly to kiss your hand and with my tongue To tell the passion of my sovereign's heart; Where fame, late entering at his heedful ears, Hath placed thy beauty's image and thy virtue. Q. Mar. King Lewis and Lady Bona, hear me speak, Before you answer Warwick. His demand Springs not from Edward's well-meant love, But from deceit bred by necessity; For how can tyrants safely govern home, Unless abroad they purchase great alliance To prove him tyrant this reason may suffice That Henry liveth still; but were he dead, Yet here Prince Edward stands, King H.

Look, therefore, Lewis, that by this league marriage Thou draw not on thy danger and dishonour. For though usurpers sway the rule awhile, Yet heavens are just, and time supposes wrongs.

War. Injurious Margaret! Prince. And why not? War. Because thy father Henry did us such a service, And thou no more art prince than she is.

Oxf. Then Warwick disannuls great J. Gaunt. Which did subdue the greatest part of Spain, And, after John of Gaunt, Henry the Four Whose wisdom was a mirror to the wisest; And, after that wise prince, Henry the Fifth Who by his prowess conquered all France. From these our Henry lineally descends.

War. Oxford, how hap's it, in this discourse, You told not how Henry the Sixth hath lost All that which Henry the Fifth had gotten Methinks these peers of France should see that, But for the rest, you tell a pedigree Of three score and two years; a silly time To make prescription for a kingdom's worth. Oxf. Why, Warwick, canst thou speak so thy liege, Whom thou obeyed'st thirty and six years, And not bewray thy treason with a blush?

War. Can Oxford, that did ever fame right, Now buckler falsehood with a pedigree? For shame! leave Henry, and call Edward. Oxf. Call him my king by whose in doom My elder brother, the Lord Aubrey Vere, Was done to death; and more than so, My even in the downfall of his mellow'd years When nature brought him to the door of death. No, Warwick, no; while life upholds this This arm upholds the house of Lancaster.

War. And I the house of York.

K. Lew. Queen Margaret, Prince Edward and Oxford, Vouchsafe, at our request, to stand aside, While I use further conference with Warwick. [They stand.]

Q. Mar. Heavens grant that Warwick's benvith him not! K. Lew. Now, Warwick, tell me, even thy conscience, Is Edward your true king? for I was loath To link with him that were not lawful chose. War. Thereon I pawn my credit an honour.

K. Lew. But is he gracious in the present?

War. The more that Henry was unfor...
THIRD PART OF KING HENRY VI.

Lew. Then further, all dissembling set aside, ne for truth the measure of his love our sister Bona.

Lew. Such it seems I shall be a monarch like myself. If I have often heard him say and swear this his love was an eternal plant, of the root was fix'd in virtuous ground, leaves and fruit maintain'd with beauty's sun, spurned by envy, but not from disdain, is the Lady Bona quit his pain. Lew. Now, sister, let us hear your firm resolve. tu. Your grant, or your denial, shall be mine. [Vex] Yet I confess that often ere this day, I have heard your king's desert recounted, ear hath tempted judgment to desire. Lew. Then, Warwick, thus: our sister shall be Edward's; now forthwith shall articles be drawn joining the jointure that your king must make, with her dowry shall be counterpoised near, Queen Margaret, and be a witness Bona shall be wife to the English king. nce. To Edward, but not to the English king. War. Deceitful Warwick! it was thy devise. is an alliance to make void my suit; thy coming Lewis was Henry's friend. Lew. And still is friend to him and Margaret: your title to the crown be weak, y appear by Edward's good success, is but reason that I be released giving aid which late I promised, all you have all kindness at my hand your estate requires and mine can yield. Henry now lives in Scotland at his ase, having nothing, nothing can he lose. for you yourself, our quondam queen, be a father able to maintain you;etter 'twere you troubled him than France. Fare, Peace, impudent and shameless War- ick, peace, setter up and puller down of kings! Hence, till, with my talk and tears, all of truth, I make King Lewis behold conveyance and thy lord's false love; of the you are birds of selfsame feather. [Post blows a horn within. Lew. Warwick, this is some post to us or we. Enter a Post. [To War.] My lord ambassador, these letters are for you, on your brother, Marquess Montague: These from our king unto your majesty: argarst] And, madam, these for you; on whom I know not. They all read their letters. I like it well that our fair queen and stress

Smiles at her news, while Warwick frowns at his. Prince. Nay, mark how Lewis stamps, as he were nettled: I hope all's for the best. K. Lew. Warwick, what are thy news? and yours, fair queen? Q. Mar. Mine, such as fill my heart with unhopeed joys. War. Mine, full of sorrow and heart's discontent. K. Lew. What! has your king married the Lady Grey? And now, to soothe your forgery and his, Sends me a paper to persuade me patience? Is this the alliance that he seeks with France? Dare he presume to scorn us in this manner? Q. Mar. I told your majesty as much before: This proveth Edward's love and Warwick's honesty. War. King Lewis, I here protest, in sight of heaven, And by the hope I have of heavenly bliss, That I am clear from this misdeed of Edward's, No more my king, for he dishonours me, But most himself, if he could see his shame. Did I forget that by the house of York My father came untimely to his death? Did I let pass the abuse done to my niece? Did I impale him with the regal crown? Did I put Henry from his native right? And am I guerdon'd at the last with shame? Shame on himself! for my desert is honour: And to repair my honour lost for him, I here renounce him and return to Henry. My noble queen, let former grudges pass, And henceforth I am thy true servitor: I will revenge his wrong to Lady Bona And replant Henry in his former state. Q. Mar. Warwick, these words have turn'd my hate to love; And I forgive and quite forget old faults, And joy that thou becomest King Henry's friend. War. So much his friend, ay, his unfeigned friend, That, if King Lewis vouchsafe to furnish us With some few bands of chosen soldiers, I'll undertake to land them on our coast And force the tyrant from his seat by war. 'Tis not his new-made bride shall succour him: And as for Clarence, as my letters tell me, He's very likely now to fall from him, For matching more for wanton lust than honour, Or than for strength and safety of our country. Bona. Dear brother, how shall Bona be revenged But by thy help to this distressed queen? Q. Mar. Renowned prince, how shall poor Henry live? Unless thou rescue him from foul despair? Bona. My quarrel and this English queen's are one. War. And mine, fair lady Bona, joins with yours. K. Lew. And mine with hers, and thine, and Margaret's. Therefore at last I firmly am resolved You shall have aid. Q. Mar. Let me give humble thanks for all at once.
K. Lew. Then, England's messenger, return in post, And tell false Edward, thy supposed king, That Lewis of France is sending over masquers To revel it with him and his new bride: Thou seest what's past, go fear thy king within. Bon. I'll tell him, in hope he'll prove a widower shortly, I'll wear the willow garland for his sake. Q. Mar. Tell him, my mourning weeds are laid aside, And I am ready to put armour on. War. Tell him from me that he hath done me wrong, And therefore I'll uncrown him ere he be long. There's thy reward: be gone. [Exit Post. K. Lew. But, Warwick, Thou and Oxford, with five thousand men, Shall cross the seas, and bid false Edward battle; And, as occasion serves, this noble queen And prince shall follow with a fresh supply. Yet, ere thou go, but answer me one doubt, What pledge have we of thy firm loyalty? War. This shall assure my constant loyalty, That if our queen and this young prince agree, I'll join mine eldest daughter and my joy To him forthwith in holy wedlock bands. Q. Mar. Yes, I agree, and thank you for your motion. Son Edward, she is fair and virtuous, Therefore delay not, give thy hand to Warwick; And, with thy hand, thy faith irrevocable, That only Warwick's daughter shall be thine. Prince. Yes, I accept her, for she well deserves it; And here, to pledge my vow, I give my hand. [He gives his hand to Warwick. K. Lew. Why stay we now? These soldiers shall be levied, And thou, Lord Bourbon, our high admiral, Shalt waft them over with our royal fleet. I long till Edward fall by war's mischance, For mocking marriage with a dame of France. [Exeunt all but Warwick. War. I came from Edward as ambassador, But I return his sworn and mortal foe: Matter of marriage was the charge he gave me, But dreadful war shall answer his demand. Had he none else to make a stale but me? Then none but I shall turn his jest to sorrow. I was the chief that raised him to the crown, And I'll be chief to bring him down again: Not that I pity Henry's misery, But seek revenge on Edward's mockery. [Exit.
THIRD PART OF KING HENRY VI.

Post. 'Tell him,' quoth she, 'my mourning weeds are done,
And I am ready to put armour on.'

K. Edw. Belike she minds to play the Amazon.
But what said Warwick to these injuries?

Post. He, more incensed against your majesty
Than all the rest, discharged me with these words:
'Tell him from me that he hath done me wrong,
And therefore I'll uncrown him ere't be long.'

K. Edw. Ha! durst the traitor breathe out so proud words?
Well, I will arm me, being thus forewarn'd:
They shall have wars and pay for their presumption.
But say, is Warwick friends with Margaret?

Post. Ay, gracious sovereign; they are so link'd in friendship,
That young Prince Edward marries Warwick's daughter.

Clar. Belike the elder; Clarence will have the younger.

Now, brother king, farewell, and sit you fast, 119
For I will hence to Warwick's other daughter;
That, though I want a kingdom, yet in marriage
I may not prove inferior to yourself.
You that love me and Warwick, follow me.

[Exit Clarence, and Somerset follows.]

Glow. [Aside] Not I:
My thoughts aim at a further matter: I
Stay not for the love of Edward, but the crown,
And in allegiance to myself.

K. Edw. Clarence and Somerset both gone to Warwick!
Yet am I arm'd against the worst can happen;
And haste is needful in this desperate case.
Pembroke and Stafford, you in our behalf
Go levy men, and make prepare for war:
They are already, or quickly will be landed:
Myself in person will straight follow you.

[Exeunt Pembroke and Stafford.]

But, ere I go, Hastings and Montague,
Resolve my doubt. You twain, of all the rest,
Are near to Warwick by blood and by alliance:
Tell me if you love Warwick more than me?
If it be so, then both depart to him:
I rather wish you foes than hollow friends:
But if you mind to hold your true obedience, 130
Give me assurance with some friendly vow,
That I may never have you in suspect.

Mont. So, God help Montague as he proves true!

Hast. And Hastings as he favours Edward's cause!

K. Edw. Now, brother Richard, will you stand by us?

Glow. Ay, in despite of all that shall withstand
you.

K. Edw. Why, so! then am I sure of victory.
Now therefore let us hence; and lose no hour,
Till we meet Warwick with his foreign power.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. A plain in Warwickshire.

Enter Warwick and Oxford, with French soldiers.

War. Trust me, my lord, all hitherto goes well;
The common people by numbers swarm to us.
Enter Clarence and Somerset.

But see where Somerset and Clarence comes!
Speak suddenly, my lords, are we all friends?
Clare.  Fear not that, my lord.
War.  Then, gentle Clarence, welcome unto Warwick.
And welcome, Somerset: I hold it cowardice
To rest mistrustful where a noble heart
Hath pawn’d an open hand in sign of love;
Else might I think that Clarence, Edward’s brother,
Were but a feigned friend to our proceedings;
But welcome, sweet Clarence; my daughter shall be thine.
And now what rests but, in night’s coverture,
Thy brother being carelessly encamp’d,
His soldiers lurking in the towns about,
And but attended by a single guard,
We may surprise and take him at our pleasure?
Our scouts have found the adventure very easy:
That as Ulysses and stout Diomede
With sleight and manhood stole to Rhesus’ tents,
And brought from thence the Thracian fatal steeds,
So we, well cover’d with the night’s black mantle,
At unawares may beat down Edward’s guard
And seize himself; I say not, slaughter him,
For I intend but only to surprise him.
You that will follow me to this attempt,
Applaud the name of Henry with your leader.
(They all cry, “Henry!”)
Why, then, let’s on our way in silent sort:
For Warwick and his friends, God and Saint George!
[Exeunt.

Scene III. Edward’s camp, near Warwick.

Enter three Watchmen, to guard the King’s tent.

First Watch.  Come on, my masters, each man take his stand:
The king by this is set him down to sleep.
Second Watch.  What, will he not to bed?
First Watch.  Why, no; for he hath made a solemn vow
Never to rise and take his natural rest
Till Warwick or himself be quite suppress’d.
Second Watch.  To-morrow then belike shall be the day,
If Warwick be so near as men report.
Third Watch.  But say, I pray, what nobleman is that
That with the king here resteth in his tent?
First Watch.  ‘Tis the Lord Hastings, the king’s chiefest friend.
Third Watch.  O, is it so?  But why commands the king
That his chief followers lodge in towns about him,
While he himself keeps in the cold field?
Second Watch.  ‘Tis the more honour, because more dangerous.
Third Watch.  Ay, but give me worship and quietness;
I like it better than a dangerous honour.
If Warwick knew in what estate he stands,
’Tis to be doubted he would waken him.
First Watch.  Unless our halberds did shut up his passage.

Second Watch.  Ay, wherefore else guard his royal tent,
But to defend his person from night-foes?
Enter Warwick, Clarence, Oxford, Somerset, and French soldiers, silent all.
War.  This is his tent; and see where his guard.
Courage, my masters! honour now or never.
But follow me, and Edward shall be ours.
First Watch.  Who goes there?
Second Watch.  Stay, or thou diest!
[Warwick and the rest cry all, ’Warwick! Warwick!’ and set upon Guard, who fly, crying, ‘Arm!’
Warwick and the rest following:
The drum playing and trumpet sound in, enter Warwick, Somerset, and the bringing the King out in his gown, sit on a chair.
Richard and Hastings fly over stage.
Som.  What are they that fly there?
War.  Richard and Hastings: let them here be the duke.
K. Edw.  The duke!  Why, Warwick, we parted,
Thou call’dst me king.
War.  Ay, but the case is alter’d.
When you disgraced me in my embassade,
Then I degraded you from being king,
And come now to create you Duke of York.
Alas! how should you govern any kingdom
That know not how to use ambassadors,
Nor how to be contented with one wife,
Nor how to use your brothers brotherly,
Nor how to study for the people’s welfare,
Nor how to shroud yourself from enemies?
K. Edw.  Yea, brother of Clarence, art here too?
Nay, then I see that Edward needs must die.
Yet, Warwick, in despite of all mischance,
Of thee thysel!f and all thy complices,
I will always bear himself as king:
Though fortune’s malice overthrow my state,
My mind exceeds the compass of her wheel.
War.  Then, for his mind, be Edward England’s king.
But Henry now shall wear the English crown.
And be true king indeed, thou but the shadow
My Lord of Somerset, at my request,
See that forthwith Duke Edward he convene Unto my brother, Archbishop of York.
When I have fought with Pembroke and his fellows,
I’ll follow you, and tell what answer
Lewis and the Lady Bona send to him.
Now, for a while farewell, good Duke of York.
[They lead him out for death.
K. Edw.  What fates impose, that men needs abide;
It boots not to resist both wind and tide.
Oxf.  What now remains, my lords, to do
But march to London with our soldiers?
War.  Ay, that’s the first thing that we to do;
THIRD PART OF KING HENRY VI.

That if about this hour he make this way
Under the colour of his usual game,
He shall here find his friends with horse and men
To set him free from his captivity.

Enter King Edward and a Huntsman with him.

Hunt. This way, my lord; for this way lies the game.
K. Edw. Nay, this way, man: see where the huntsmen stand.

Now, brother of Gloucester, Lord Hastings, and the rest,
Stand you thus close, to steal the bishop's deer.
Glou. Brother, the time and case requireth haste:
Your horse stands ready at the park-corner.
K. Edw. But whither shall we then?

Hast. To Lynn, my lord, 20
And ship from thence to Flanders.

Glou. Well guess'd, believe me; for that was my meaning.
K. Edw. Stanley, I will requite thy forwardness.
Glou. But wherefore stay we? 'tis no time to talk.

K. Edw. Huntsman, what say'st thou? wilt thou go along?

Hunt. Better do so than tarry and be hang'd.

Glou. Come then, away: let's ha' no more ado.

K. Edw. Bishop, farewell: shield thee from Warwick's frown;
And pray that I may repossess the crown.

[Exeunt.

SCENE VI. London. The Tower.

Flourish. Enter King Henry, Clarence, Warwick, Somerset, young Richmond, Oxford, Montague, and Lieutenant of the Tower.

K. Hen. Master lieutenant, now that God and friends
Have shaken Edward from the regal seat,
And turn'd my captive state to liberty,
My fear to hope, my sorrows unto joys,
At our enlargement what are thy due fees?

Lieu. Subjects may challenge nothing of their sovereigns;
But if an humble prayer may prevail,
I then crave pardon of your majesty.

K. Hen. For what, lieutenant? for well using me?

Nay, be thou sure I'll well requite thy kindness,
For that it made my imprisonment a pleasure;
Ay, such a pleasure as incaged birds
Conceive when after many moody thoughts
At last by notes of household harmony
They quite forget their loss of liberty.

But, Warwick, after God, thou set'st me free,
And chiefl y therefore I thank God and thee;
He was the author, thou the instrument.
Therefore, that I may conquer fortune's spite
By living low, where fortune cannot hurt me,
And that the people of this blessed land
May not be punish'd with my thwarting stars,
Warwick, although my head still wear the crown,
I here resign my government to thee,
For thou art fortunate in all thy deeds.
War. Your grace hath still been famed for virtuous;
And now may seem as wise as virtuous,
By spying and avoiding fortune's malice,
For few men rightly temper with the stars:
Yet in this one thing let me blame your grace, 30
For choosing me when Clarence is in place.
Clar. No, Warwick, thou art worthy of this sway,
To whom the heavens in thy nativity
Adjudged an olive branch and laurel crown,
As likely to be blest in peace and war;
And therefore I yield thee my free consent.
War. And I choose Clarence only for protector.
K. Hen. Warwick and Clarence, give me both your hands:
Now join your hands, and with your hands your hearts,
That no dissension hinder government: 40
I make you both protectors of this land,
While I myself will lead a private life
And in devotion spend my latter days,
To sin's rebuke and my Creator's praise.
War. What answers Clarence to his sovereign's will?
Clar. That he consents, if Warwick yield consent:
For on thy fortune I repose myself.
War. Why, then, though loath, yet must I be content:
We'll yoke together, like a double shadow
To Henry's body, and supply his place; 50
I mean, in bearing weight of government,
While he enjoys the honour and his ease.
And, Clarence, now it then is more than needful
Forthwith that Edward be pronounced a traitor,
And all his lands and goods be confiscate.
Clar. What else? and that succession be determined.
War. Ay, therein shall Clarence not want his part.
K. Hen. But, with the first of all your chief affairs,
Let me entreat, for I command no more, 59
That Margaret your queen and my son Edward
Be sent for, to return from France with speed;
For, till I see them here, by doubtful fear
My joy of liberty is half eclipsed.
Clar. It shall be done, my sovereign, with all speed.
K. Hen. My Lord of Somerset, what youth is that?
Som. My liege, it is young Henry, earl of Richmond.
K. Hen. Come hither, England's hope. [Lays his hand on his head] If secret powers Suggest but truth to my divining thoughts,
This pretty lad will prove our country's bliss. 70
His looks are full of peaceful majesty,
His head by nature framed to wear a crown,
His hand to wield a sceptre, and himself Likely in time to bless a regal throne.
Make much of him, my lords, for this is he Must help you more than you are hurt by me.

Enter a Post.
War. What news, my friend?
THIRD PART OF KING HENRY VI.

Edw. Why, and I challenge nothing but my dukedom, sing well content with that alone.

[Aside] But when the fox hath once got in his nose, I soon find means to make the body follow.

Ay. Why, master mayor, why stand you in a doubt? The gates; we are King Henry's friends.

Ay. Ay, say you so? the gates shall then be open'd. [They descend.

1st. A wise stout captain, and soon persuaded.

2nd. The good old man would fain that all were well, were not 'long of him; but being enter'd, but rot, I, but we shall soon persuade him and all his brothers unto reason.

Enter the Mayor and two Aldermen, below.

Edw. So, master mayor; these gates must not be shut the night or in the time of war.

fear not, man, but yield me up the keys; [Takes his keys. dward will defend the town and thee, if those friends that deign to follow me.

Enter Montgomery, with drum and soldiers.

Brother, this is Sir John Montgomery, my trusty friend, unless I be deceived.

Edw. Welcome, Sir John! But why come ou in arms?

To help King Edward in his time of storm, my loyal subject ought to do.

Thanks, good Montgomery; but we will forget le to the crown and only claim sedition till God please to send the rest.

Then fare you well, for I will hence gain to serve a king and not a duke.

Nay, stay, Sir John, awhile, and I'Il debate it safe means the crown may be recover'd.

What talk you of debating? in few words, if not here proclaim yourself our king, re you to your fortune and be gone p them back that come to succour you: all we fight, if you pretend no title?

Why, brother, wherefore stand you on ace points?

When we grow stronger, then we'll take our claim, 'tis wisdom to conceal our meaning. Away with scrupulous wit! now arms first rule.

And fearless minds climb soonest unto owns, we will proclaim you out of hand; it thereof will bring you many friends.

Come, fellow-soldier, make thou proclamation. 79

Sold. Edward the Fourth, by the grace of God, king of England and France, and lord of Ireland, &c. 80

Mont. And whose'er gainsays King Edward's right, by this I challenge him to single fight.

[Enter Duke of York.

K. Edw. Then be it as you will; for 'tis my right,

And Henry but usurps the diadem.

Mont. Ay, now my sovereign speaketh like himself;

And now will I be Edward's champion.

Hast. Sound trumpet; Edward shall be here proclaim'd:

Come, fellow-soldier, make thou proclamation.

[Flourish.

Seld. Edward the Fourth, by the grace of God, king of England and France, and lord of Ireland, &c.

Mont. And whose'er gainsays King Edward's right, by this I challenge him to single fight.

[Enter Duke of York.

K. Edw. Thanks, brave Montgomery; and thanks unto you all:

If fortune serve me, I'll requite this kindness.

Now, for this night, let's harbour here in York;

And when the morning sun shall raise his car Above the border of this horizon,

We'll forward towards Warwick and his mates;

For well I wot that Henry is no soldier.

Ah, froward Clarence! how evil it besemeth thee,

To flatter Henry and forsake thy brother!

Yet, as we may, we'll meet both thee and Warwick.

Come on, brave soldiers: doubt not of the day,

And, that once gotten, doubt not of large pay.

Exeunt.

SCENE VIII. London. The palace.

War. What counsel, lords? Edward from Belgium, With hasty Germans and blunt Hollanders, Hath pass'd in safety through the narrow seas,

And with his troops doth march amain to London;

And many giddy people flock to him.

K. Hen. Let's levy men, and beat him back again.

Clar. A little fire is quickly trodden out;

Which, being suffer'd, rivers cannot quench.

War. In Warwickshire I have true-hearted friends,

Not mutinous in peace, yet bold in war:

Those will I must up: and thou, son Clarence,

Shalt stir up in Suffolk, Norfolk and in Kent,

The knights and gentlemen to come with thee:

Thou, brother Montague, in Buckingham,

Northampton and in Leicestershire, shalt find

Men well inclined to hear what thou command'st:

And thou, brave Oxford, wondrous well beloved,

In Oxfordshire shalt muster up thy friends.

My sovereign, with the loving citizens,

Like to his island girt in with the ocean,

Or modest Dian circled with her nymphs,

Shall rest in London till time come to him.

Fair lords, take leave and stand not to reply.

Farewell, my sovereign.

K. Hen. Farewell, my Hector, and my Troy's true hope.

Clar. In sign of truth, I kiss your highness' hand.
K. Hen. Well-minded Clarence, be thou fortunate!
Mont. Comfort, my lord; and so I take my leave.
Oxf. And thus I seal my truth, and bid adieu.
K. Hen. Sweet Oxford, and my loving Montague,
And all at once, once more a happy farewell.
War. Farewell, sweet lords; let’s meet at Coventry.
[Exeunt all but King Henry and Exeter.
K. Hen. Here at the palace will I rest awhile.
Cousin of Exeter, what thinks your lordship?
Methinks the power that Edward hath in field
Should not be able to encounter mine.
Exe. The doubt is that he will seduce the rest.
K. Hen. That’s not my fear; my meed got me fame;
I have not stopp’d mine ears to their demands,
Nor posted off their suits with slow delays; 40
My pity hath been balm to heal their wounds,
My mildness hath allay’d their swelling griefs,
My mercy dried their water-flowing tears;
I have not been desirous of their wealth.
Nor much oppress’d them with great subsidies,
Nor forward of revenge, though they much err’d:
Then why should they love Edward more than me?
No, Exeter, these graces challenge grace;
And when the lion fawns upon the lamb,
The lamb will never cease to follow him. 50
[Shout within, 'A Lancaster! A Lancaster!'
Exe. Hark, hark, my lord! what shouts are these?

Enter King Edward, Gloucester, and soldiers.
K. Edw. Seize on the shame-faced Henry,
Bear him hence; and once again proclaim us king of England.
You are the fount that makes small brooks to flow;
Now stops thy spring; my sea shall suck them dry,
And swell so much the higher by their ebb.
Hence with him to the Tower; let him not speak.
[Exeunt some with King Henry.
And, lords, towards Coventry bend we our course,
Where peremptory Warwick now remains:
The sun shines hot; and, if we use delay,
Cold biting winter mars our hoped-for hay.
Glow. Away betimes, before his forces join,
And take the great-grown traitor unawares;
Brave warriors, march amain towards Coventry.
[Exeunt.

ACT V.

Scene I. Coventry.
Enter Warwick, the Mayor of Coventry, two Messengers, and others upon the walls.
War. Where is the post that came from valiant Oxford?
How far hence is thy lord, mine honest fellow?
First Mess. By this at Dunsmore, marching to Litherward.
War. Where is the post that came from Montague?
Second Mess. By this at Daintry, with a puissant troop.

Enter Sir John Somerville.
War. Say, Somerville, what says my lord son?
And, by thy guess, how nigh is Clarence now?
Som. At Southam I did leave him with forces,
And do expect him here some two hours hence. 5[Drum hurly burly.]
War. Then Clarence is at hand; I hear the drum.
Som. It is not his, my lord; here Southam lies: The drum your honour hears marcheth to Warwick.
War. Who should that be? belike, unto friends.
Som. They are at hand, and you quickly know.
March: flourish. Enter King Edward, Gloucester, and soldiers.
K. Edw. Go, trumpet, to the walls, sound a parley.
Glow. See how the surly Warwick man wall!
War. O unbid spite! is sportful Edward come?
Where slept our scouts, or how are seduced,
That we could hear no news of his repair?
K. Edw. Now, Warwick, wilt thou open city gates,
Speak gentle words and humbly bend thy knee
Call Edward king and at his hands beg me
And he shall pardon thee these outrageous
War. Nay, rather, wilt thou draw thy sword hence, Confess who set thee up and plac’d thee there Call Warwick patron and be penitent?
And thou shalt still remain the Duke of York
Glow. I thought, at least, he would have the king; Or did he make the jest against his will?
War. Is not a dukedom, sir, a goodly grace?
Glow. Ay, by my faith, for a poor earl to I’ll do thee service for so good a gift
War. 'Twas I that gave the kingdom to his brother.
K. Edw. Why then 'tis mine, if by Warwick’s gift.
War. Thou art no Atlas for so great weight:
And, weakling, Warwick takes his gift again
And Henry is my king, Warwick his subject.
K. Edw. But Warwick’s king is Edw. prisoner:
And, gallant Warwick, do but answer this: What is the body when the head is off?
Glow. Alas, that Warwick had no more cast,
But, whilsts he thought to steal the single trophy, The king was silly finger’d from the deck.
You know, my lord, Henry at the Bishop’s palace
And, ten to one, you’ll meet him in the Tower.
K. Edw. 'Tis even so; yet are we still.
Glow. Come, Warwick, take the time down, kneel down:
THIRD PART OF KING HENRY VI.

| Scene I. | A field of battle near Barnet. | Scene II. | Alarm and excursions. Enter King Edward, bringing forth Warwick wounded. |

War. Ah, who is nigh? come to me, friend or foe, And tell me who is victor, York or Warwick? Why ask I that? my mangled body shows, My blood, my want of strength, my sick heart shows, That I must yield my body to the earth And, by my fall, the conquest to my foe. Thus yields the cedar to the axe's edge, Whose arms gave shelter to the princely eagle, Under whose shade the ramping lion slept, Whose top-branch overpeer'd Jove's spreading tree And kept low shrubs from winter's powerful wind. These eyes, that now are dimm'd with death's black veil, Have been as piercing as the mid-day sun, To search the secret treasuries of the world: The wrinkles in my brows, now fill'd with blood, Were liken'd oft to kingly sepulchres; For who lived king, but I did dig his grave? And who durst smile when Warwick bent his brow? Lo, now my glory smear'd in dust and blood! My parks, my walks, my mansions that I had, Even now forsake me, and of all my lands Is nothing left me but my body's length. Why, what is pomp, rule, reign, but earth and dust? And, live we how we can, yet die we must.

That, to deserve well at my brother's hands, I here proclaim myself thy mortal foe, With resolution, wheresoe'er I meet thee— As I will meet thee, if thou stir abroad— To plague thee for thy foul misleading me. And so, proud-hearted Warwick, I defy thee, And to my brother turn my blushing cheeks. Pardon me, Edward, I will make amends: 100 And, Richard, do not frown upon my faults, For I will henceforth be no more unconstant.

K. Edw. Now welcome more, and ten times more beloved, Than if thou never hadst deserved our hate.

Glo. Welcome, good Clarence; this is brother-like.

War. O passing traitor, perjured and unjust!

K. Edw. What, Warwick, wilt thou leave the town and fight? Or shall we beat the stones about thine ears?

War. Alas, I am not cooped here for defence.

I will away towards Barnet presently, And bid thee battle, Edward, if thou darest.

K. Edw. Yes, Warwick, Edward dares, and leads the way, Lords, to the field; Saint George and victory! [Exeunt King Edward and his company. April. Warwick and his company follow.

Scene II. A field of battle near Barnet. Alarm and excursions. Enter King Edward, bringing forth Warwick wounded. K. Edw. So, lie thou there; die thou, and die our fear; For Warwick was a bug that fear'd us all.

Now, Montague, sit fast: I seek for thee, That Warwick's bones may keep thine company. [Exeunt.

War. And, live we how we can, yet die we must.
Enter Oxford and Somerset.

Som. Ah, Warwick, Warwick! wert thou as we are,
We might recover all our loss again:
The queen from France hath brought a puissant power:
Even now we heard the news: ah, couldst thou fly!

War. Why, then I would not fly. Ah, Montague,
If thou be there, sweet brother, take my hand,
And with thy lips keep in my soul awhile!
Thou lovest me not; for, brother, if thou didst,
Thy tears would wash this cold congealed blood
That glues my lips and will not let me speak.
Come quickly, Montague, or I am dead.

Som. Ah, Warwick! Montague hath breathed his last;
And to the latest gasp cried out for Warwick
And said ‘Commend me to my valiant brother,’
And more he would have said, and more he spoke,
Which sounded like a clamour in a vault,
That nought be distinguished; but at last
I well might hear, deliver’d with a groan,
‘O, farewell, Warwick!’

War. Sweet rest his soul! Fly, lords, and save yourselves;
For Warwick bids you all farewell, to meet in heaven.

Oxf. Away, away, to meet the queen’s great power!

[Exeunt.]

SCENE III. Another part of the field.

Flourish. Enter King Edward in triumph; with Gloucester, Clarence, and the rest.

K. Edw. Thus far our fortune keeps an upward course,
And we are graced with wreaths of victory.
But, in the midst of this bright-shining day,
I spy a black, suspicious, threatening cloud,
That will encounter with our glorious sun,
Ere he attain his easy and western bed:
I mean, my lords, those powers that the queen
Hath raised in Gallia have arrived our coast
And, as we hear, march on to fight with us.

Clar. A little gale will soon disperse that cloud
And blow it to the source from whence it came:
The very beams will dry those vapours up,
For every cloud engenders not a storm.

Glo. The queen is valued thirty thousand strong,
And Somerset, with Oxford, fled to her:
If she have time to breathe, be well assured
Her faction will be full as strong as ours.

K. Edw. We are advertised by our loving friends
That they do hold their course toward Tewksbury:
We, having now the best at Barnet field,
Will thither straight, for willingness rides way;
And, as we march, our strength will be augmented
In every county as we go along.

Strike up the drum; cry ‘ Courage!’ and away.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. Plains near Tewksbury.

March. Enter Queen Margaret, Page, Edward, Somerset, Oxford, and soldiers.

Q. Mar. Great lords, wise men ne’er sit wail their loss,
But cheerly seek how to redress their harms.
What though the mast be now blown overboard
The cable broke, the holding-anchor lost?
And half our sailors swallowed’d in the flood?
Yet lives our pilot still. Is’t meet that he Should leave the helm and like a fearful lad
With tearful eyes add water to the sea
And give more strength to that which hath much
Whiles, in his moan, the ship splits on the rocks?
Which industry and courage might have saved
Ah, what a shame! ah, what a fault were thei
Say Warwick was our anchor; what of that?
And Montague our topmast; what of him?
Our slaughter’d friends the tackles; what of these?

What if not Oxford here another anchor?
And Somerset another goodey mast?
The friends of France our shrouts and lings?

And, though unskillful, why not Ned and I
For once allow’d the skillful pilot’s charge?
We will not from the helm to sit and weep,
But keep our course, though the rough wind
From shelves and rocks that threaten us a wreck.

As good to chide the waves as speak them fair
And what is Edward but a ruthless sea?
What Clarence but a quicksand of deceit?
And Richard but a ragged fatal rock?

All these the enemies to our poor bark,
Say you can swim; alas, ‘tis but a while!
Tread on the sand; why, there you quickly
Bestride the rock; the tide will wash you over,
Or else you vanish; that’s a threefold death.
This speak I, lords, to let you understand,
If case some one of you would fly from us,
That there’s no hoped-for mercy with the bro
More than with ruthless waves, with sands and rocks.

Why, courage then! what cannot be avoided
’Twere childish weakness to lament or fear.

Prince. Methinks a woman of this valour
Should, if a coward heard her speak these words
Infuse his breast with magnanimity
And make him, naked, foil a man at arms.
I speak not this as doubting any here;
For did I but suspect a fearful man,
He should have leave to go away betimes,
Lest in our need he might infect another
And make him of like spirit to himself.
If any such be here—as God forbid!—
Let him depart before we need his help.

Oxf. Women and children of so high a rage
And warriors faint! why, ’twere perpetual shame
O brave young prince! thy famous grandfath
Doth live again in thee; long mayst thou live
To bear his image and renew his glories!

Som. And he that will not fight for some hope,
Enter a Messenger.

E. iv.] THIRD PART OF KING HENRY VI. 553

Enter soldiers, with PRINCE EDWARD.

K. Edw. Bring forth the gallant, let us hear him speak.

What I can so young a thorn begin to prick?
Edward, what satisfaction canst thou make
For bearing arms, for stirring up my subjects,
And all the trouble thou hast turn'd me to?
Prince. Speak like a subject, proud ambitious York!

Suppose that I am now my father's mouth;
Resign thy chair, and where I stand kneel thou,
Whilst I propose the selfsame words to thee.
Which, traitor, thou wouldst have me answer to.
Q. Mar. Ah, that thy father had been so resolved!

Glon. That you might still have worn the petticoat,
And ne'er have stoll'n the breech from Lancaster.

Prince. Let Aesop fable in a winter's night;
His currish riddles sort not with this place.
Glon. For God's sake, take away this captive scold.

Prince. Nay, take away this scolding crook-back rather.
K. Edw. Peace, wilful boy, or I will charm your tongue,

Clair. Untutor'd lad, thou art too malapert.

Prince. I know my duty; you are all un-dutiful:

Lascivious Edward, and thou perjured George,
And thou mis-shapen Dick, I tell ye all
I am your better, traitors as ye are:
And thou usurp'st my father's right and mine.
K. Edw. Take that, thou likeness of this railer here.

[Stabs him.

Glon. Sprawl'st thou? take that, to end thy agony.

[Stabs him.

Clair. And there's for twitting me with perjury.

[Stabs him.

Q. Mar. O, kill me too!

Glon. Marry, and shall. [Offers to kill her.
K. Edw. Hold, Richard, hold; for we have done too much.

Glon. Why should she live, to fill the world with words?
K. Edw. What, doth she swoon? use means for her recovery.

Glon. Clarence, excuse me to the king my brother;
I'll hence to London on a serious matter:
ERE ye come there, be sure to hear some news.

Clair. What? what?
Glon. The Tower, the Tower.

Q. Mar. O Ned, sweet Ned! speak to thy mother, boy!

Canst thou not speak? O traitors! murderers!
They that stab'd Caesar shed no blood at all,
Did not offend, nor were not worthy blame,
If this foul deed were by to equal it:
He was a man; this, in respect, a child:
And men ne'er spend their fury on a child.
What's worse than murderer, that I may name it?
No, no, my heart will burst, an if I speak:
And I will speak, that so my heart may burst.
Butchers and villains! bloody cannibals!
How sweet a plant have you untimely cropp'd!
You have no children, butchers! if you had,
The thought of them would have stirr'd up remorse;
But if you ever chance to have a child,
Look in his youth to have him so cut off
As, deathsmen, you have rid this sweet young prince!
K. Edw. Away with her; go, bear her hence perforce.
Q. Mar. Nay, never bear me hence, dispatch me here;
Here sheathe thy sword, I'll pardon thee my death:
What, wilt thou not? then, Clarence, do it thou.
Clar. By heaven, I will not do thee so much ease.
Q. Mar. Good Clarence, do; sweet Clarence, do thou do it.
Clar. Didst thou not hear me swear I would not do it?
Q. Mar. Ay, but thou usest to forswear thyself:
'Twas sin before, but now 'tis charity.
What, wilt thou not? Where is that devil's butcher,
Hard-favour'd Richard? Richard, where ar'thou?
Thou art not here: murder is thy alms-deed;
Petitioners for blood thou ne'er put'st back.
K. Edw. Away, I say; I charge ye, bear her hence.
Q. Mar. So come to you and yours, as to this prince!
[Exit, led out forcibly.
K. Edw. Where's Richard gone?
Clar. To London, all in post; and, as I guess,
To make a bloody supper in the Tower.
K. Edw. He's sudden, if a thing comes in his head.
Now march we hence: discharge the common sort
With pay and thanks, and let's away to London
And see our gentle queen how well she fares:
By this, I hope, she hath a son for me.
[Exeunt.

Scene VI. London. The Tower.

Enter King Henry and Gloucester, with the Lieutenant, on the walls.

Glou. Good day, my lord. What, at your book so hard?
K. Hen. Ay, my good lord:—my lord, I should say rather;
'Tis sin to flatter; 'good' was little better;
'Good Gloucester' and 'good devil' were alike,
And both preposterous; therefore, not 'good lord.'
Glou. Sirrah, leave us to ourselves: we must confer.
[Exit Lieutenant.
K. Hen. So flies the reckless shepherd from the wolf;
So first the harmless sheep doth yield his fleece
And next his throat unto the butcher's knife.
What scene of death hath Roscius now to act?
To Glou. Suspicion always haunts the guilty mind;
The thief doth fear each bush an officer.
K. Hen. The bird that hath been limed in a bush,
With trembling wings misdoubteth every bush;
And I, the hapless male to one sweet bird,
Have now the fatal object in my eye
Where as my poor young was limed, was caught, and kill'd.

Glou. Why, what a peevish fool was that Crete,
That taught his son the office of a foul!
And yet, for all his wings, the foul was drew.
K. Hen. I, Daudalus: my poor boy, Ican
Thy father, Minos, that denied our course;
The sun that serv'd the wings of my sweet b
Thy brother Edward, and thyself the sea
Whose envious gulf did swallow up his life,
Ah, kill me with thy weapon, not with word.
My breast can better brook thy dagger's point
Than can my ears that tragic history.
But wherefore dost thou come? is't for my l
Glou. Think'st thou I am an executioner?
K. Hen. A persecutor, I am sure, thou
If murdering innocents be executing,
Why, then thou art an executioner.
Glou. Thy son I kill'd for his presumption
K. Hen. Hadst thou been kill'd when thou didst presume,
Thou hadst not lived to kill a son of mine.
And thus I prophesy, that many a thousand
Which now mistrust no parcel of my will,
And many an old man's sigh and many a wit
And many an orphan's water-standing eye—
Men for their sons, wives for their husbands
And orphans for their parents' timeless death
Shall rue the hour that ever thou wast born.
The owl shriek'd at thy birth,—an evil sign:
The night-crow cried, aboding luckless time.
Dogs howl'd, and hideous tempest shook
The raven rook'd her on the chimney's top,
And chattering pies in dismal discords sung
Thy mother felt more than a mother's pain,
And yet brought forth less than a mother's
To wit, an indigested and deformed lump,
Not like the fruit of such a goodly tree.
Teeth hadst thou in thy head when thou born,
To signify thou camest to bite the world:
And, if the rest be true which I have heard,
Thou camest
Glou. I'll hear no more: die, prophet, in speech:
[Stabs
For this, amongst the rest, was I ordain'd.
K. Hen. Ay, and for much more stabb'd after this,
O, God forgive my sins, and pardon thee!
Glou. What, will the aspiring blood of Sink in the ground? I thought it would mounted.
See how my sword weeps for the poor death
O, may such purple tears be alway shed
From those that wish the downfall of our ho
For any spark of life be yet remaining,
Down, down to hell; and say I sent thee th
[Stabs him
I, that have neither pity, love, nor fear.
Indeed, 'tis true that Henry told me of;
For I have often heard my mother say
I came into the world with my legs forward
Hast I not reason, think ye, to make haste,
THIRD PART OF KING HENRY VI.

Thus have we swept suspicion from our seat
And made our footstool of security.
Come hither, Bess, and let me kiss my boy.
Young Ned, for thee, thine uncles and myself
Have in our armours watched'd the winter's night,
Went all afoot in summer's scalding heat,
That thou mightst reposest the crown in peace:
And of our labours thou shalt reap the gain.

Glou. [Aside] I'll blast his harvest, if your head were laid;
For yet I am not look'd on in the world.
This shoulder was ordain'd so thick to heave;
And heave it shall some weight, or break my back:
Work thou the way,—and thou shalt execute.

K. Edw. Clarence and Gloucester, love my lovely queen;
And kiss your princely nephew, brothers both.

Clar. The duty that I owe unto your majesty
I seal upon the lips of this sweet babe.

Q. Eliz. Thanks, noble Clarence; worthy brother, thanks.

Glou. And, that I love the tree from whence thou sprang'st,
Witness the loving kiss I give the fruit.

[Aside] To say the truth, so Judas kiss'd his master,
And cried 'all hail!' when as he meant all harm.

K. Edw. Now am I seated as my soul delights,
Having my country's peace and brothers' loves.

Clar. What will your grace have done with Margaret?
Reignier, her father, to the king of France
Hath pawn'd the Sicils and Jerusalem,
And hither have they sent it for her ransom.

K. Edw. Away with her, and waft her hence to France.
And now what rests but that we spend the time
With stately triumphs, mirthful comic shows,
Such as befits the pleasure of the court?
Sound drums and trumpets I farewell sour annoy!
For here, I hope, begins our lasting joy.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE: England.

ACT I.

SCENE I. London. A street.

Enter Richard, Duke of Gloucester, solus.

Glot. Now is the winter of our discontent
Made glorious summer by this sun of York:
And all the clouds that lour'd upon our house
In the deep bosom of the ocean buried.
Now are our brows bound with victorious wreaths;
Our bruised arms hung up for monuments;
Our stern alarums changed to merry meetings,
Our dreadful marches to delightful measures.
Grim-visaged war hath smooth'd his wrinkled front;
And now, instead of mounting barbed steeds
To fright the souls of fearful adversaries,
He capers nimbly in a lady's chamber
To the lascivious pleasing of a lute.
But I, that am not shaped for sportive tricks,
Nor made to court an amorous looking-glass;
I, that am rudest stamp'd, and want love's majesty
To strut before a wanton ambling nymph;
I, that am curtail'd of this fair proportion,
Cheated of feature by dissembling nature,
Deform'd, unfinish'd, sent before my time
Into this breathing world, scarce half made up,
And that so lamely and unashionable

That dogs bark at me as I halt by them;
Why, I, in this weak piping time of peace,
Have no delight to pass away the time,
Unless to spy my shadow in the sun
And descant on mine own deformity:
And therefore, since I cannot prove a lover,
To entertain these fair well-spoken days,
I am determined to prove a villain
And hate the idle pleasures of these days.
Plots have I laid, inductions dangerous,
By drunken prophecies, libels and dreams,
To set my brother Clarence and the king
In deadly hate the one against the other:
And if King Edward be as true and just
As I am subtle, false and treacherous,
This day should Clarence closely be mew'd up
About a prophecy, which says that G
Of Edward's heirs the murderer shall be.
Dive, thoughts, down to my soul: here Clarence comes.

Enter Clarence, guarded, and Brackenbury.

Brother, good day: what means this armed guard?
That waits upon your grace?

Clar. His majesty,
Tenfending my person's safety, hath appointed
This conduct to convey me to the Tower.
KING RICHARD III.

Upon what cause?

Because my name is George.

I, and I

Begging grace to pardon me, and withal.

Forbear your conference with the noble duke.

We know thy charge, Brakenbury, and will obey.

We are the queen's abjures, and must obey.

Brother, farewell: I will unto the king:

And whatsoever you will employ me in,

Meantime, this deep disgrace in brotherhood

Touche me deeper than you can imagine.

I know it pleaseth neither of us well.

Well, your imprisonment shall not be long:

I will deliver you, or else lie for you:

Meantime, have patience.

I must perforce. Farewell.

Enter Lord Hastings.

Good time of day unto my gracious lord!

As much unto my good lord chamberlain!

Well are you welcome to the open air.

How hath your lordship brook'd imprisonment?

With patience, noble lord, as prisoners must.

But I shall live, my lord, to give them thanks

That were the cause of my imprisonment.

No doubt, no doubt; and so shall Clarence too;

For they that were your enemies are his,

And have prevail'd as much on him as you.

More pity that the eagle should be mew'd,

While kites and buzzards prey at liberty.

What news abroad?

No news so bad abroad as this at home;

The king is sickly, weak and melancholy,

And his physicians fear him mightily.

Now, by Saint Paul, this news is bad indeed.

O, he hath kept an evil di't long,

And overmuch consumed his royal person:

'Tis very grievous to: be thought upon.

What, is he in his bed?

He is.

Go you before, and I will follow you.

Exit Hastings.

He cannot live, I hope; and must not die

Till George be pack'd with post-horse up to heaven.

I'll in, to urge his hatred more to Clarence,

With lies well steel'd with weighty arguments;

And, if I fail not in my deep intent,

Clarence hath not another day to live:

Which done, God take King Edward to his mercy,

And leave the world for me to bustle in!

For then I'll marry Warwick's youngest daughter.

What though I kill'd her husband and her father?

The readiest way to make the wench amends

Is to become her husband and her father:
The which will I; not all so much for love
As for another secret close intent,
By marrying her which I must reach unto.
But yet I run before my horse to market: 160
Clarence still breathes; Edward still lives and reigns:
When they are gone, then must I count my gains. [Exit.

SCENE II. The same. Another street.

Enter the corpse of King Henry the Sixth,
Gentlemen with halberds to guard it; LADY ANNE being the mourner.

Anne. Set down, set down your honourable load,
If honour may be shrouded in a hearse,
Whilst I awhile obsequiously lament
The untimely fall of virtuous Lancaster.
Poor key-cold figure of a holy king!
Pale ashes of the house of Lancaster!
Thou bloodless remnant of that royal blood!
Be it lawful that I invocate thy ghost,
To hear the lamentations of poor Anne,
Wife to thy Edward, to thy slaughter'd son. 10
Stabb'd by the selfsame hand that made these wounds!
Lo, in these windows that let forth thy life,
I pour the helpless balm of my poor eyes.
Cursed be the hand that made these fatal holes!
Cursed be the heart that had the heart to do it!
Cursed the blood that let this blood from hence!
More direful hap betide that hated wretch,
That makes us wretched by the death of thee,
Than I can wish to adders, spiders, toads,
Or any creeping venom'd thing that lives! 20
If ever he have child, abortive be it,
Prodigious, and untimely brought to light,
Whose ugly and unnatural aspect
May fright the hopeful mother at the view;
And that be heir to his unhappiness!
If ever he have wife, let her be made
As miserable by the death of him
As I am made by my poor lord and thee!
Come, now towards Chertsey with your holy load,
Taken from Paul's to be interred there; 30
And still, as you are weary of the weight,
Rest you, whiles I lament King Henry's corse.

Enter Gloucester.

Glou. Stay, you that bear the corse, and set it down.
Anne. What black magician conjures up this fiend,
To stop devoted charitable deeds?
Glou. Villains, set down the corse; or, by Saint Paul,
I'll make a corse of him that disobeys.
Gen. My lord, stand back, and let the coffin pass.
Glou. Unmanner'd dog! stand thou, when I command.
Advance thy halberd higher than my breast, 40
Or, by Saint Paul, I'll strike thee to my foot,
And spurn upon thee, beggar, for thy boldness.
Anne. What, do you tremble? are you all afraid?
Alas, I blame you not; for you are mortal,
And mortal eyes cannot endure the devil.

Avant, thou dreadful minister of hell!
Thou hast but power over his mortal body,
His soul thou canst not have: therefore, be Glou. Sweet saint, for charity, be not so Anne. Foul devil, for God's sake, hence trouble us not;
For thou hast made the happy earth thy hell
Fill'd it with cursing cries and deep exclaim
If thou delight to view thy heinous deeds,
Behold this pattern of thy butcheries.
O, gentlemen, see, see! dead Henry's wound
Open their congeald mouths and bleed afire
Blush, blush, thou lump of foul deformity;
For 'tis thy presence that exhales this blood
From cold and empty veins, where no dwells:
Thy deed, inhuman and unnatural,
Provokes this deluge most unnatural.
O God, which this blood madest, reveng death!
O earth, which this blood drink'st, reveng death!
Either heaven with lightning strike the mur dead,
Or earth, gape open wide and eat him quick
As thou dost swallow up this good king's blood.
Which his hell-govern'd arm hath butchered,
Which renders good for bad, blessings for curse.
Anne. Villain, thou know'st no law of nor man:
No beast so fierce but knows some touch of

Out of my sight! thou dost infect my eyes.
Glou. Thine eyes, sweet lady, have infected mine.

Anne. Would they were basilisks, to strike thee dead!
Glou. I would they were, that I might die at once.
For now they kill me with a living death.
Those eyes of thine from mine have drawn salt tears,
Shamed their aspect with store of childish drops:
These eyes, which never shed remorseful tear,
No, when my father York and Edward wept,
To hear the piteous moan that Rutland made.
When black-faced Clifford shook his sword at him;
Nor when thy warlike father, like a child, 160
Told the sad story of my father's death,
And twenty times made pause to sob and weep,
That all the standers-by had wet their cheeks,
Like trees bedash'd with rain; in that sad time
My manly eyes did scorn an humble tear;
And what these sorrows could not thence exhale,
Thy beauty hath, and made them blind with weeping.
I never sued to friend nor enemy;
My tongue could never learn sweet smoothing words;
But, now thy beauty is proposed my fee, 170
My proud heart sue and prompts my tongue to speak. [She looks scornfully at him.
Teach not thy lips such scorn, for they were made For kissing, lady, not for such contempt.
If thy revengeful heart cannot forgive,
Lo, here I lend thee this sharp-pointed sword:
Which if thou please to hide in this true bosom,
And let the soul forth that adores thee,
I lay it naked to the deadly stroke,
And humbly beg the death upon my knee.
[He lays his breast open; she offers at it with his sword.
Nay, do not pause; for I did kill King Henry,
But 'twas thy beauty that provoked me. 181
Nay, now dispatch; 'twas I that stab'd young Edward,
But 'twas thy heavenly face that set me on.
[Here she lets fall the sword.
Take up the sword again, or take up me.
Anne. Arise, dissembler: though I wish thy death,
I will not be the executioner.
Glou. Then bid me kill myself, and I will do it.
Anne. I have already.
Glou. Tush, that was in thy rage:
Speak it again, and, even with the word,
That hand, which, for thy love, did kill thy love,
Shall, for thy love, kill a far truer love; 192
To both their deaths thou shalt be necessary.
Anne. I would I knew thy heart.
Glou. 'Tis figured in my tongue.
Anne. I fear me both are false.
Glou. Then never man was true.
Anne. Well, well, put up your sword.
Glou. Say, then, my peace is made.
Anne. That shall you know hereafter.
Glou. But shall I live in hope? 200
Anne. All men, I hope, live so.
Glou. Vouchsafe to wear this ring.
Anne. To take is not to give.
Glov. Look, how this ring encompasseth thy finger,
Even so thy breast encloseth my poor heart;
Wear both of them, for both of them are thine.
And if thy poor devoted suppliant may
But beg one favour at thy gracious hand,
That dost confirm his happiness for ever.
Anne. What is it?
Glov. That it would please thee leave these sad designs
To him that hath more cause to be a mourner,
And presently repair to Crosby Place;
Where, after I have solemnly inter'd
At Chertsey monastery this noble king,
And wet his grave with my repentant tears,
I will with all expedient duty see you;
For divers unknown reasons, I beseech you,
Grant me this boon.
Anne. With all my heart; and much it joys me too,
To see you are become so penitent.
Tressel and Berkeley, go along with me.
Glov. Bid me farewell.
Anne. "Tis more than you deserve;
But since you teach me how to flatter you,
Imagine I have said farewell already.
[Exeunt Lady Anne, Tressel, and Berkeley.
Glov. Sirs, take up the corse.

Glov. No, to White-Friars; there attend my coming.
[Exeunt all but Gloucester.
Was ever woman in this humour wo'd?
Was ever woman in this humour won?
I'll have her; but I will not keep her long.

Having God, her conscience, and these bars

And nothing to my back my suit at all,
But the plain devil and dissembling looks,
And yet to win her, all the world to nothing!
Ha!
Hath she forgot already that brave prince,
Edward, her lord, whom I, some three months since,
Stabb'd in my angry mood at Tewksbury?
A sweeter and a lovelier gentleman,
Framed in the prodigality of nature,
Young, valiant, wise, and, no doubt, right royal,
The spacious world cannot again afford
And will she yet delase her eyes on me,
That cropp'd the golden prime of this sweet prince,
And made her widow to a woful bed?
On me, whose all not equals Edward's moiety?
On me, that halt and am unshapen thus?
My dukedom to a beggarly denier,
I do mistake my person all this while:
Upon my life, she finds, although I cannot,
Myself to be a marvellous proper man.
I'll be at charges for a looking-glass,
And entertain some score or two of tailors,
To study fashions to adorn my body:
Since I am crept in favour with myself,
I will maintain it with some little cost.
But canst thou, till I turn my fellow in his grave;
And then return lamenting to my love.
Shine out, fair sun, till I have bought a glass,
That I may see my shadow as I pass.
[Exit.

To take her in her heart's extremest hate,
With curses in her mouth, tears in her eyes,
The bleeding witness of her hatred by;
Having God, her conscience, and these bars
against me,
And nothing to my back my suit at all,
But the plain devil and dissembling looks,
And yet to win her, all the world to nothing!
Ha!
Hath she forgot already that brave prince,
Edward, her lord, whom I, some three months since,
Stabb'd in my angry mood at Tewksbury?
A sweeter and a lovelier gentleman,
Framed in the prodigality of nature,
Young, valiant, wise, and, no doubt, right royal,
The spacious world cannot again afford
And will she yet delase her eyes on me,
That cropp'd the golden prime of this sweet prince,
And made her widow to a woful bed?
On me, whose all not equals Edward's moiety?
On me, that halt and am unshapen thus?
My dukedom to a beggarly denier,
I do mistake my person all this while:
Upon my life, she finds, although I cannot,
Myself to be a marvellous proper man.
I'll be at charges for a looking-glass,
And entertain some score or two of tailors,
To study fashions to adorn my body:
Since I am crept in favour with myself,
I will maintain it with some little cost.
But canst thou, till I turn my fellow in his grave;
And then return lamenting to my love.
Shine out, fair sun, till I have bought a glass,
That I may see my shadow as I pass.

Scene III. The palace.

Enter Queen Elizabeth, Lord Rivers,
Lord Grey.

Riv. Have patience, madam: there's doubt his majesty
Will soon recover his accustomed health.

Grey. In that you brook it ill, it makes worse:
Therefore, for God's sake, entertain good com
And cheer his grace with quick and merry w.
Q. Eliz. If he were dead, what would be
Riv. No other harm but loss of such a lo
Q. Eliz. The loss of such a lord include

Grey. The heavens have bless'd you with
A goodly son,
To be your comforter when he is gone.
Q. Eliz. Oh, he is young, and his minor
Is put unto the trust of Richard Gloucester,
A man that loves not me, nor none of you.
Riv. Is it concluded he shall be protec
Q. Eliz. It is determined, not concluded
But so it must be, if the king miscarry.

Enter Buckingham and Derby.

Grey. Here come the lords of Bucking
And Derby.

Buck. Good time of day unto your royal g
Der. God make your majesty joyful
That good prayers will scarcely say ame
Yet, Derby, notwithstanding she's your wit
And loves not me, be you, good lord, assure
I hate not you for your proud arrogance.
Der. I do beseech you, either not believe
The envious slanders of her false accusers;
Or, if she be accused in true report,
Bear with her weakness, which, I think, pro
From wayward sickness, and no groundned m
Riv. Saw you the king to-day, my Lord
Der. But now the Duke of Buckingham
Are come from visiting his majesty.
Q. Eliz. What likelihood of his amend

Buck. Madam, good hope; his grace is Buck. Madam, we did: he desires to Betwixt the Duke of Gloucester and your bro

And betwixt them and my lord chamberlai
And sent to warn them to his royal presc
Q. Eliz. Would all were well! but this neve
I fear our happiness is at the highest.

Enter Gloucester, Hastings, and Dol.

Glov. They do me wrong, and I will n de
Who are they that complain unto the king,
That I, forsooth, am stern and love them n
By holy Paul, they love his grace but light
A bachelor, a handsome stripling too:
I wis your grandam had a worser match.

Q. Eliz. My Lord of Gloucester, I have too long borne
Your blunt upbraidings and your bitter scoffs:
By heaven, I will acquaint his majesty
With those gross taunts I often have endured.
I had rather be a country servant-maid
Than a great queen, with this condition,
To be thus taunted, scorn'd, and baited at:

Enter Queen Margaret, behind.

Small joy have I in being England's queen. 110
Q. Mar. And lessen'd be that small, God, I beseech thee!

Thy honour, state and seat is due to me.

Glou. What! threat ye me with telling of the king?
Tell him, and spare not: look, what I have said
I will avouch in presence of the king:
I dare adventure to be sent to the Tower.
'Tis time to speak; my pains are quite forgot.
Q. Mar. Out, devil! I remember them too well:
Thou slewest my husband Henry in the Tower,
And Edward, my poor son, at Tewksbury. 120
Glou. Ere you were queen, yea, or your husband king,
I was a pack-horse in his great affairs;
A weeder-out of his proud adversaries,
A liberal rewarder of his friends:
To royalise his blood I spilt mine own.
Q. Mar. Yea, and much better blood than his or thine.

Glou. In all which time you and your husband Grey
Were factious for the house of Lancaster:
And, Rivers, so were you. Was not your husband
In Margaret's battle at Saint Alban's slain? 130
Let me put in your minds, if you forget,
What you have been ere now, and what you are;
W ithal, what I have been, and what I am.
Q. Mar. A murderous villain, and so still thou art.

Glou. Poor Clarence did forsake his father,
Warwick;
Yea, and foreswore himself,—which Jesu pardon!

Q. Mar. Which God revenge!
Glou. To fight on Edward's party for the crown;
And for his need, poor lord, he is mew'd up.
I would to God my heart were flint, like Edward's; 140
Or Edward's soft and pitiful, like mine:
I am too childish-foolish for this world.
Q. Mar. Hie thee to hell for shame, and leave the world,
Thou cacodemon! there thy kingdom is.

Riv. My Lord of Gloucester, in those busy days
Which here you urge to prove us enemies,
We follow'd then our lord, our lawful king:
So should we you, if you should be our king.
Glou. If I should be! I had rather be a pedlar: Far be it from my heart, the thought of it! 150
Q. Eliz. As little joy, my lord, as you suppose
You should enjoy, were you this country's king,
As little joy may you suppose in me,
That I enjoy, being the queen thereof.

Q. Mar. A little joy enjoys the queen thereof;
For I am she, and altogether joyless.
I can no longer hold me patient. [Advancing.
Hear me, you wrangling pirates, that fall out
In sharing that which you have pill'd from me!
Which of you trembles not that looks on me? 160
If not, that, I being queen, you bow like subjects,
Yet that, by you deposed, you quake like rebels?
O gentle villain, do not turn away!

Glo. Foul wrinkled witch, what makes thou in my sight?

Q. Mar. But repetition of what thou hast marr'd;
That will I make before I let thee go.

Glo. Wert thou net banished on pain of death?

Q. Mar. I was; but I do find more pain in banishment
Than death can yield me here by my abode.
A husband and a son thou owest to me; 170
And thou a kingdom; all of you allegiance:
The sorrow that I have, by right is yours,
And all the pleasures you usurp are mine.

Glo. The curse my noble father laid on these,
When thou didst crown his warlike brows with paper
And with thy scorns drew'st rivers from his eyes,
And then, to dry them, gavest the duke a clout Steep'd in the faultless blood of pretty Rutland,—

His curses, then from bitterness of soul
Denounced against thee, are all fall'n upon thee:
And God, not we, hath plaguy thy bloody deed.

Q. Eliz. So just is God, to right the innocent.

Hast. O, 'twas the foulest deed to slay that babe,

And the most merciless that e'er was heard of!

Riv. Tyrants themselves wept when it was reported.

Dor. No man but prophesied revenge for it.

Buck. Northumberland, then present, wept to see it.

Q. Mar. What were you snarling all before I came,
Ready to catch each other by the throat,
And turn you all your hatred now on me? 190
Did York's dread curse prevail so much with heaven
That Henry's death, my lovely Edward's death,
Their kingdom's loss, my woful banishment,
Could all but answer for that peevish brat?
Can curses pierce the clouds and enter heaven?
Why, then, give way, dull clouds, to my quick curses?
If not by war, by surfeit die your king,
As ours by murder, to make him a king!
Edward thy son, which now is Prince of Wales,
For Edward my son, which was Prince of Wales,
Die in his youth by like untimely violence! 201
Thyself a queen, for me that was a queen,
Outlive thy glory, like my wretched self!
Long mayst thou live to wail thy children's loss;
And see another, as I see thee now,
Deck'd in thy rights, as thou art stail'd in mine!
Long die thy happy days before thy death;
And, after many lengthen'd hours of grief,

Die neither mother, wife, nor England's que-
Rivers and Dorset, you were standers by,
And so wast thou, Lord Hastings, when my Was stabb'd with bloody daggers: God, I
him,
That none of you may live your natural age,
But by some unlook'd accident cut off!

Glo. Have done thy charm, thou hawith'er'd hag!

Q. Mar. And leave out thee? stay, dog, thou shalt hear me.

If heaven have any grievous plague in store
Exceeding those that I can wish upon thee,
O, let them keep it till thy sins be ripe,
And then hurl down their indignation
On thee, the trouble of the poor world's pect
The worm of conscience still begins thy so
Thy friends suspect for traitors while thou li
And take deep traitors for thy dearest friend
No sleep close up that deadly-eye of thine,
Unless it be whilst some tormenting dream
Affrights thee with a hell of ugly devils!
Thou elvish-mark'd, abortive, pestilential hag!
Thou wast seal'd in thy nativity
The slave of nature and the son of hell!
Thou slander of thy mother's heavy womb!
Thou loathed issue of thy father's loins!
Thou rag of honour! thou detested—

Glo. Margaret.

Q. Mar. Richard!

Glo. Ha!

Q. Mar. I call thee

Glo. I cry thee mercy then, for I thought
That thou hadst call'd me all these bitter ma

Q. Mar. Why, so I did; but look'd for reply.

O, let me make the period to my curse!

Glo. "Tis done by me, and ends in

Q. Eliz. Thus have you breathed your against yourself.

Q. Mar. Poor painted queen, vain flour my fortune!

Why strew'st thou sugar on that bottled spio
Whose deadly web enshambles thee about?
Fool, fool! thou whet'st a knife to kill thyse curse,

Lest to thy harm thou move our patience.

Q. Mar. Foul shame upon you! you all moved mine.

Riv. Were you well served, you woul

Q. Mar. To serve me well, you all shou

O, serve me well, and teach yourselves duty!

Q. Mar. Peace, master marquess, you

O, that your young nobility could judge

What 'twere to lose it, and be miserable!
I was too hot to do somebody good,
That is too cold in thinking of it now.
Marry, as for Clarence he said;
He is frank'd up to fath'ng for his pains:
God pardon them that are the cause of it!
Riv. A virtuous and a Christian-like conclusion,
To pray for them that have done scathe to us.
For had I cursed now, I had cursed myself.

Enter Catesby.

Catesby. Madam, his majesty doth call for you;
And for your grace; and you, my noble lords. 324
Q. Eliz. Catesby, we come. Lords, will you go with us?
Riv. Madam, we will attend your grace.
[Exeunt all but Gloucester.
Glos. I do the wrong, and first begin to brawl.
The secret mischiefs that I set abroad
I lay unto the grievous charge of others.
Clarence, whom I, indeed, have laid in darkness,
I do beweep to many simple gulls;
Namely, to Hastings, Derby, Buckingham;
And say it is the queen; and her villain
That stir the king against the duke my brother.
Now, they believe it; and withal whet me
To be revenged on Rivers, Vaughan, Grey:
But then I sigh; and, with a piece of scripture,
Tell them that God bids us do good for evil:
And thus I clothe my naked villany
With old odd ends stolen out of holy writ;
And seem a saint, when most I play the devil.

Enter two Murderers.

But, soft! here come my executioners.
How now, my hardy, stout resolved mates! 340
Are you now going to dispatch this deed?
First Murd. We are, my lord; and come to have the warrant.
That we may be admitted where he is.

Glos. Well thought upon: I have it here about me.
[Give the warrant.

When you have done, repair to Crosby Place.
But, sirs, be sudden in the execution,
Withal obdurate, do not hear him plead;
For Clarence is well-spoken, and perhaps
May move your hearts to pity, if you mark him.
First Murd. Tush! 350
Fear not, my lord, we will not stand to prate;
Talkers are no good doers: be assured
We come to use our hands and not our tongues.
Glos. Your eyes drop millstones, when fools'
eyes drop tears:
I like you, lads; about your business straight;
Go, go, dispatch.

First Murd. We will, my noble lord. [Exeunt.

Scene IV. London. The Tower.

Enter Clarence and Brakenbury.

Brak. Why looks your grace so heavily to-day?
Clar. O, I have pass'd a miserable night,
So full of ugly sights, of ghastly dreams,
That, as I am a Christian faithful man,
I would not spend another such a night,
Though 'twere to buy a world of happy days,
So full of dismal terror was the time!
Brak. What was your dream? I long to hear you tell it.

Clar. Methoughts that I had broken from the Tower,
And was embark'd to cross to Burgundy; 20
And, in my company, my brother Gloucester;
Who from my cabin tempted me to walk
Upon the hatches; thence we look'd toward England,
And cited up a thousand fearful times,
During the wars of York and Lancaster
That had befall'n us. As we paced along
Upon the giddy footing of the hatches,
Methought that Gloucester stumbled; and, in falling,
Struck me, that thought to stay him, overboard,
Into the tumbling billows of the main. 30

Lord, Lord! methought, what pain it was to drown!
What dreadful noise of waters in mine ears!
What ugly sights of death within mine eyes!
Methought I saw a thousand fearful wrecks;
Ten thousand men that fishes gnaw'd upon;
Wedges of gold, great anchors, heaps of pearl,
Immoveable stones, unvalued jewels,
All scatter'd in the bottom of the sea:
Some lay in dead men's skulls; and, in those holes
Where eyes did once inhabit, there were crept, 40
As 'twere in scorn of eyes, reflecting gems,
Which wou'd the slimy bottom of the deep,
And mock'd the dead bones that lay scatter'd by.

Brak. Had you such leisure in the time of death
To gaze upon the secrets of the deep?

Clar. Methought I had; and often did I strive
To yield the ghost: but still the envious flood
Kept in my soul, and would not let it forth;
To seek the empty, vast and wandering air;
But smoother'd it within my panting bulk, 50
Which almost burst to belch it in the sea.

Brak. Awaked you not with this sore agony?

Clar. O, no, my dream was lengthen'd after life;
O, then began the tempest to my soul,
Who pass'd, methought, the melancholy flood,
With that grim ferryman which poets write of,
Unto the kingdom of perpetual night.
The first that there did greet my stranger soul,
Was my great father-in-law, renowned Warwick;
Who cried aloud, 'What scourge for perjury 60
Can this dark monarchy afford false Clarence?'
And so he vanish'd: then came wandering by
A shadow like an angel, with bright hair
Dabbled in blood; and he squeak'd out aloud,
'Clarence is come; false, fleeting, perjur'd Clarence.'

That stabb'd me in the field by Tewksbury;
Seize on him, Furies, take him to your tomorrors!'
With that, methoughts, a legion of foul fiends
Environ'd me about, and howled in mine ears
Such hideous cries, that with the very noise 66
I trembling waked, and for a season after
Could not believe but that I was in hell,
Such terrible impression made the dream.

Brak. No marvel, my lord, though it affrighted you;
I promise you, I am afraid to hear you tell it.

Clar. O Brakenbury, I have done those things,
Which now bear evidence against my soul,
For Edward's sake; and see how he requites
O God! if my deep prayers cannot appease
The hollow will be avenged on my misdeeds,
Yet execute thy wrath in me alone.
O, spare my guiltless wife and my poor child
I pray thee, gentle keeper, stay by me;
My soul is heavy, and I fain would sleep.

Brak. I will, my lord: God give your good rest. 70

[Enter the two Murderers.

First Murd. Ho! who's here?

Brak. In God's name what are you, and came you hither?

First Murd. I would speak with Clar and I came hither on my legs.

Brak. Yea, are you so brief?

Sec. Murd. O sir, it is better to be brief tedious. Shew him our commission; tall more.

[Brakenbury reads.

Brak. I am, in this, commanded to deliver the noble Duke of Clarence to your hands:
I will not reason what is meant hereby,
Because I will be guiltless of the meaning.
Here are the keys, there sits the duke asleep:
I'll to the king: and signify to him
That thus I have resign'd my charge to you.

First Murd. Do so, it is a point of wise fare you well. 81

[Exit Brakenbury.

Sec. Murd. What, shall we stab him a sleep?

First Murd. No; then he will say 'twas coerced, when he wakes.

Sec. Murd. When he wakes! why, foo shall never wake till the judgement-day.

First Murd. Why, then he will say stabbed him sleeping.

Sec. Murd. The urging of that word 'ju ment' hath bred a kind of remorse in me.

First Murd. What, art thou afraid?

Sec. Murd. Not to kill him, having a r rant for it; but to be damned for killing from which no warrant can defend us.

First Murd. I thought thou hadst been soleute.

Sec. Murd. So I am, to let him live.

First Murd. Back to the Duke of Glouce tell him so.

Sec. Murd. I pray thee, stay a while: I my holy humour will change; 'twas wont to me but while one would tell twenty.

First Murd. How dost thou feel thyself
Sec. Murd. 'Faith, some certain dregs of science are yet within me.

First Murd. Remember our reward, the deed is done.

Sec. Murd. Zounds, he dies: I had forgot reward.

First Murd. Where is thy conscience n
In the Duke of Gloucester’s purse.

KING RICHARD III.

So when he opens his purse, give us our reward, thy conscience flies out.

KING. Let it go; there’s few or none entertain it.

KING. How if it come to thee again?

KING. I’ll not meddle with it; it is a good thing: it makes a man a coward: a man cannot steal, but it accuseth him; he cannot lie, but it checks him; he cannot lie with his wife’s brother, but it detects him: ’tis a blushing-shamefast spirit that mutinies in a man’s soul; it fills one full of obstacles. It that I found; it gars any man that keeps it: it is turned out all towns and cities for a dangerous thing; every man that means to live well ends to trust to himself and to live without it.

KING. Zounds! it is even now at my arm, persuading me not to kill the duke.

KING. Take the devil in thy mind, and eke him not: he would insinuate with thee to make thee sigh.

KING. Tut, I am strong-framed, he not prevail with me, I warrant thee.

KING. Spoke like a tall fellow that seeks his reputation. Come, shall we to this?

KING. Take him over the costard with hits of thy sword, and then we will chop in the malmsey-butt in the next room.

KING. O excellent device! make a sop of him.

KING. Hark! he stirs! shall I strike?

KING. No, first let’s reason with him.

LAR. Where art thou, keeper? give me a cup of wine.

KING. You shall have wine enough, my lord, anon.

KING. In God’s name, what art thou?

KING. A man, as you are.

LAR. But not, as I am, royal.

KING. Nor you, as we are, loyal.

LAR. Thy voice is thunder, but thy looks are humble.

KING. My voice is now the king’s, my looks mine own.

LAR. How darkly and how deadly dost thou speak!

KING. Eyes do menace me: why look you pale? o sent you hither? Wherefore do you come?

LAR. To, to, to—

KING. To murder me?

LAR. Ay, ay.

KING. You scarcely have the hearts to tell me so.

LAR. I therefore cannot have the hearts to do it. erein, my friends, have I offended you?

KING. Offended us you have not, but the king.

KING. I shall be reconciled to him again.

KING. Never, my lord; therefore prepare to die.

LAR. Are you call’d forth from out a world of day the innocent? What is my offence? ere are the evidence that do accuse me? is lawful quest have given their verdict up o the frowning judge? or who pronounced

The bitter sentence of poor Clarence’ death? Before I be convict by course of law, To threaten me with death is most unlawful. I charge you, as you hope to have redemption By Christ’s dear blood shed for our grievous sins, That you depart and lay no hands on me: The deed you undertake is damnable.

KING. What we will do, we do upon command.

SEC. And he that hath commanded is the king.

CLAR. Erroineous vassal! the great King of kings

Hath in the tables of his law commanded That thou shalt do no murder: and wilt thou, then, Spurn at his edict and fulfil a man’s? Take heed; for he holds vengeance in his hands, To hurl upon their heads that break his law.

SEC. And that same vengeance doth he hurl on thee,

For false forswearing and for murder too: Thou didst receive the holy sacrament,

To fight in quarrel of the house of Lancaster.

KING. And, like a traitor to the name of God,

Didst break that vow; and with thy treacherous blade

Unrip’dst the bowels of thy sovereign’s son.

Whom thouwert sworn to cherish and defend.

KING. How canst thou urge God’s dreadful law to us,

When thou hast broke it in so dear degree?

CLAR. Alas! for whose sake did I that ill deed? For Edward, for my brother, for his sake: Why, sirs, He sends ye not to murder me for this;

For in this sin he is as deep as I.

If God will be revenged for this deed,

O, know you yet, he doth it publicly:

Take not the quarrel from his powerful arm;

He needs no indirect nor lawless course

To cut off those that have offended him.

KING. Who made thee, then, a bloody minister,

When gallant-springing brave Plantagenet,

That princely novice, was struck dead by thee?

CLAR. My brother’s love, the devil, and my rage.

KING. Thy brother’s love, our duty, and thy fault,

Provoke us hither now to slaughter thee.

CLAR. Oh, if you love my brother, hate not me; I am his brother, and I love him well.

If you be hired for need, go back again,

And I will send you to my brother Gloucester,

Who shall reward you better for my life

Than Edward will for tidings of my death.

SEC. You are deceived, your brother Gloucester hates you.

CLAR. O, no, he loves me, and he holds me dear:

Go you to him from me.

BOTH. Ay, so we will.

CLAR. Tell him, when that our princely father

Bless’d his three sons with his victorious arm,

And charged us from his soul to love each other,

He little thought of this divided friendship;

Bid Gloucester think of this, and he will weep.
First Murd. Ay, millstones; as he lesson'd us to weep.

Clar. O, do not slander him, for he is kind.

First Murd. Right.

As snow in harvest. Thou deceivest thyself: Tis he that sent us hither now to slaughter thee.

Clar. It cannot be; for when I parted with him, He hugg'd me in his arms, and swore, with sob's, That he would labour my delivery.

Sec. Murd. Why, so he doth, now he deliver's thee

From this world's thraldom to the joys of heaven.

First Murd. Make peace with God, for you must die, my lord.

Clar. Hast thou that holy feeling in thy soul, To counsel me to make my peace with God, And art thou yet to thy own soul so blind, That thou wilt war with God by murdering me? Ah, sirs, consider, he that set you on To do this deed will hate you for the deed.

Sec. Murd. What shall we do?

Clar. Relent, and save your souls.

First Murd. Relent! 'tis cowardly and womanish.

Clar. Not to relent is beastly, savage, devilish.

Which of you, if you were a prince's son, Being pent from liberty, as I am now, If two such murderers as yourselves came to you, Would not entreat for life? My friend, I spy some pity in thy looks; 270 O, if thine eye be not a flatterer, Come thou on my side, and entreat for me, As you would beg, were you in my distress: A begging prince what beggar pities not?

Sec. Murd. Look behind you, my lord.

First Murd. Take that, and that: if all this will not do, I'll drown you in the malmsey-butt within.

[Exit, with the body.]

Sec. Murd. A bloody deed, and desperately dispatch'd! How faint, like Pilate, would I wash my hands Of this most grievous guilty murder done! 280

Re-enter First Murderer.

First Murd. How now! what mean'st thou, that thou help'st me not? By heavens, the duke shall know how slack thou art!

Sec. Murd. I would he knew that I had saved his brother!

Take thou the fee, and tell him what I say; For I repent me that the duke is slain. [Exit. First Murd.] So do not I: go, coward as thou art.

Now must I hide his body in some hole, Until the duke take order for his burial: And when I have my meed, I must away; For this will out, and here I must not stay.

ACT II.

SCENE I. London. The palace.

Flourish. Enter King Edward sick, Queen Elizabeth, Dorset, Rivers, Hastings, Buckingham, Grey, and others.

K. Edw. Why, so: now have I done a good day's work:

You peers, continue this united league: I every day expect an embassage From my Redeemer to redeem me hence; And now in peace my soul shall part to heaven Since I have set my friends at peace on earth, Rivers and Hastings, take each other's hand, Dissemble not your hatred, swear your love.

Riv. By heaven, my heart is purged grudging hate:

And with my hand I seal my true heart's love.

Hast. So thrive I, as I truly swear the like.

K. Edw. Take heed you daily not be your king;

Lest he that is the supreme King of kings Confound your hidden falsehood, and award Either of you to be the other's end.

Hast. So prosper I, as I swear perfect love.

Riv. And I, as I love Hastings with my heart.

K. Edw. Madam, yourself are not exempt this,

Nor your son Dorset, Buckingham, nor you Have been factious one against the other, Wife, love Lord Hastings, let him kiss your hand. And what you do, do it unfeignedly.

Q. Eliz. Here, Hastings; I will never forget this.

Our former hatred, so thrive I end mine! K. Edw. Dorset, embrace him; Hast love lord marquess.

Dor. This interchange of love, I here profess, Upon my part shall be unviolable.

Hast. And so swear I, my lord. 270 [They emb.]

K. Edw. Now, princely Buckingham, thou this league With thy embracements to my wife's allies, And make me happy in thy unity. Buck. Whenever Buckingham doth turn hate On you or yours [to the Queen], but with due lute love.

Doth cherish you and yours, God punish me! With hate in those where I expect most love When I have most need to employ a friend, And most assured that he is a friend, Deep, hollow, treacherous, and full of guile, Be he unto me! this do I beg of God, When I am cold in zeal to you or yours.

[They emb.]

K. Edw. A pleasing cordial, princely Buckingham, Is this thy vow unto my sickly king? There wanteth now our brother Gloucester To make the perfect period of this peace. Buck. And, in good time, here cometh noble duke.

Enter Gloucester.

Glow. Good morrow to my sovereign king and queen: And, princely peers, a happy time of day! K. Edw. Happy, indeed, as we have the day.

Brother, we have done deeds of charity; Made peace of enmity, fair peace of hate. Between these swelling wrong-incensed peers.

Glow. A blessed labour, my most sov’reign liege: Amongst this princely heap, if any here, false intelligence, or wrong surmise,
did a foe;
unwittingly, or in my rage,
Aught committed that is hardly borne in this presence, I desire reconcile me to his friendly peace:
death to me to be at enmity;
seal, and desire all good men’s love.
Madam, I entreat true peace of you,
ich I will purchase with my duterous service;
you, my noble cousin Buckingham,
ver any grudge were lodged between us;
you, Lord Rivers, and, Lord Grey, of you;
not know that Englishman alive whom my soul is any jot at odds with the infant that is born to-night:
asks my God for my humiliation.
A. All a holy day shall this be kept hereafter:
ould to God all strifes were well compounded.
sovereign liege, I do beseech your majesty take our brother Clarence to your grace.
Whom, madam, have I offer’d love for be so flouted in this royal presence?
knows not that the noble duke is dead?
[They all start.]
do him injury to scar his corse.
Who knows not he is dead? who knows
he is?
A. All-seeing heaven, what a world is this!
luck. Look I so pale, Lord Dorset, as the rest?
A. Ay, my good lord; and no one in this presence
his red colour hath forsook his cheeks.
A. Is Clarence dead? the order was reversed.
ou. But he, poor soul, by your first order did a winged Mercury did bear;
early cripple bore the countermand, came too lag to see him buried.
grant that some, less noble and less loyal,
arer in bloody thoughts, but not in blood, serve not worse than wretched Clarence did,
yet so current from suspicion!

Enter Derby.

A. A boon, my sovereign, for my service done!
A. I pray thee, peace: my soul is full of sorrow.
A. I will not rise, unless your highness grant.
A. Then speak at once what is thou thou hast’st said it.
A. The forfeit, sovereign, of my servant’s life;
slew to-day a riotous gentleman
ely attendant on the Duke of Norfolk.
A. Have I a tongue to doom my brother’s death?
shall the same give pardon to a slave?
brother slew no man: his fault was thought,
yet his punishment was cruel death.
sued to me for him? who, in my rage,

Kneel’d at my feet, and bade me be advised?
Who spake of brotherhood? who spake of love?
Who told me how the poor soul did forsake
The mighty Warwick, and did fight for me?
Who told me, in the field by Tewksbury,
When Oxford had me sworn, he rescued me,
And said, ’Dear brother, live, and be a king’?
Who told me, when we both lay in the field
Frozen almost to death, how he did lap me
Even in his own garments, and gave himself,
All thin and naked, to the numb cold night?
All this from my remembrance brutish wrath
Sinfullly pluck’d, and not a man of you
Had so much grace to put it in my mind.
But when your carters or your waiting-vassals
Have done a drunken slaughter, and defaced
The precious image of our dear Redeemer,
You straight are on your knees for pardon, pardon;
And I, unjustly too, must grant it you:
But for my brother not a man would speak,
Nor I, ungracious, speak unto myself
For him, poor soul. The proudest of you all
Have been beholding to him in his life:
Yet none of you would once plead for his life.
O God, I fear thy justice will take hold
On me, and you, and mine, and yours for this!
Come, Hastings, help me to my closet. Oh, poor Clarence!

[Exeunt some with King and Queen.

Glou. This is the fruit of rashness! Mark’d you not
How that the guilty kindred of the queen
Look’d pale when they did hear of Clarence’ death?
O, they did urge it still unto the king!
God will revenge it. But come, let us in,
To comfort Edward with our company.

Buck. We wait upon your grace.

[Exeunt.

Scene II. The palace.

Enter the Duchess of York, with the two children of Clarence.

Boy. Tell me, good grandam, is our father dead?
Duch. No, boy.

Boy. Why do you wring your hands, and beat your breast,
And cry ’O Clarence, my unhappy son!’

Girl. Why do you look on us, and shake your head,
And call us wretches, orphans, castaways,
If that our noble father be alive?

Duch. My pretty cousins, you mistake me
much;
I do lament the sickness of the king,
As loath to lose him, not your father’s death;
It were lost sorrow to wail one that’s lost.

Boy. Then, grandam, you conclude that he is dead.
The king my uncle is to blame for this:
God will revenge it; whom I will importune
With daily prayers all to that effect.

Girl. And so will I, my lad.

Duch. Peace, children, peace! the king doth love you well:
Incapable and shallow innocents,
You cannot guess who caused your father’s death.
Boy. Grandam, we can; for my good uncle Gloucester
Told me, the king, provoked by the queen,
Devised impiements to imprison him:
And when my uncle told me so, he wept,
And hugg'd me in his arm, and kindly kiss'd my cheek:
Rade me rely on him as on my father,
And he would love me dearly as his child.
Duch. Oh, that deceit should steal such gentle shapes,
And with a virtuous wizard hide foul guile!
He is my son; yea, and therein my shame;
Yet from my dugs he drew not this deceit.
Son. Think you my uncle did dissemble, grandam?
Duch. Ay, boy.
Son. I cannot think it. Hark! what noise is this?
Enter Queen Elizabeth, with her hair about her ears; RIVERS and DORSET after her.
Q. Eliz. Oh, who shall hinder me to wail and weep,
To chide my fortune, and torment myself?
I'll join with black despair against my soul,
And to myself become an enemy.
Duch. What means this scene of rude impatience?
Q. Eliz. To make an act of tragic violence:
Edward, my lord, your son, our king, is dead.
Why grow the branches now the root is wither'd?
Why wither not the leaves the sap being gone?
If you will live, lament; if die, be brief,
That our swift-winged souls may catch the king's;
Or, like obedient subjects, follow him
To his new kingdom of perpetual rest.
Duch. Ah, so much interest have I in thy sorrow
As I had title in thy noble husband!
I have bewept a worthy husband's death,
And lived by looking on his images:
But now two mirrors of his princely semblance
Are crack'd in pieces by malignant death,
And I for comfort have but one false glass,
Which grieves me when I see my shame in him.
Thou art a widow; yet thou art a mother,
And hast the comfort of thy children left thee;
But death hath snatch'd my husband from mine arms,
And pluck'd two crusts from my feeble limbs.
Edward and Clarence. O, what cause have I,
Thine being but a moiety of my grief,
To overgo thy plaints and drown thy cries!
Boy. Good aunt, you wept not for our father's death;
How can we aid you with our kindred tears?
Girl. Our fatherless distress was left unmoan'd;
Your widow-dourour likewise be unwep't
Q. Eliz. Give me no help in lamentation;
I am not barrer to bring forth complaints:
All springs reduce their currents to mine eyes,
That I, being govern'd by the watery moon,
May send forth plenteous tears to drown the world!
Oh for my husband, for my dear lord Edward!
Chil. Oh for our father, for our dear lord Clarence!
Duch. Alas for both, both mine, Edward and Clarence!
Q. Eliz. What stay had I but Edward? he's gone.
Chil. What stay had we but Clarence? he's gone.
Duch. What stays had I but they? and are gone.
Q. Eliz. Was never widow had so dear a Chil. Were never orphans had so dear a Duch. Was never mother had so dear a
Alas, I am the mother of these moans!
Their woes are parcell'd, mine are general.
She for an Edward weeps, and so do I;
I for a Clarence weep, so doth not she:
These babes for Clarence weep, and so do I;
I for an Edward weep, so do not they:
Alas, you three, on me, threefold distress'd,
Pour all your tears! I am your sorrow's nurs
And I will pamper it with lamentations.
Dor. Comfort, dear mother: God is in displeased
That you take with unthankfulness his doing.
In common worldly things, 'tis call'd ungrate.
With dull unwillingness to repay a debt
Which with a bounteous hand was kindly lent.
Much planting to be thus opposite with heaves,
For it requires the royal debt it lent you.
Riv. Madam, bethink you, like a can
Of the young prince your son: send stra for him;
Let him be crown'd; in him your comfort liv
Drown desperate sorrow in dead Edward's gr
And plant your joys in living Edward's throne.
Enter Gloucester, Buckingham, Deri
Hastings, and Ratcliff.
Glou. Madam, have comfort: all of us cause
To wail the dimming of our shining star;
But none can cure their harms by wailing the Madam, my mother, I do cry you mercy;
I did not see your grace: humbly on my knee
I crave your blessing.
Duch. God bless thee; and put meekne
Love, charity, obedience, and true duty!
Glou. [Aside] Amen; and make me a good old man!
That is the but-end of a mother's blessing:
I marvel why her grace did leave it out.
Buck. You cloudy princes and heart-sor peers,
That bear this mutual heavy load of moan,
Now cheer each other in each other's love;
Though we have spent our harvest of this kin
We are to reap the harvest of his son.
The broken rancour of your high-sown heart
But lately splinter'd, knit, and join'd togethe
Must gently be preserved, cherish'd, and kej
Me seemeth good, that, with some little trai
Forthwith from Ludlow the young prince catch'd
Hither to London, to be crown'd our king.
Riv. Why with some little train, my Lord
Buckingham?
Buck. Marry, my lord, lest, by a multi
The new-heal'd wound of malice should b out;
No doubt, shall then and till then govern well.
First Cit. So stood the state when Henry the Sixth
Was crown'd in Paris but at nine months old.
Third Cit. Stood the state so? No, no, good friends, God wot;
For then this land was famously enrich'd
With politic grave counsel; then the king
Had virtuous uncles to protect his grace.
First Cit. Why, so hath this, both by the father and mother.
Third Cit. Better it were they all came by the father,
Or by the father there were none at all;
For emulation now, who shall be nearest,
Will touch us all too near, if God prevent not.
O, full of danger is the Duke of Gloucester!
And the queen's sons and brothers haunted and proud:
And were they to be ruled, and not to rule,
This sickly land might solace as before.
First Cit. Come, come, we fear the worst; all shall be well.
Third Cit. When clouds appear, wise men put on their cloaks;
When great leaves fall, the winter is at hand;
When the sun sets, who doth not look for night?
Untimely storms make men expect a dearth.
All may be well; but, if God sort it so,
'Tis more than we deserve, or I expect.
Sec. Cit. Truly, the souls of men are full of dread:
Yet cannot reason almost with a man
That looks not heavily and full of fear.
Third Cit. Before the times of change, still is it so;
By a divine instinct men's minds mistrust
Ensuing dangers: as, by proof, we see
The waters swell before a boisterous storm.
But leave it all to God, Whither away?
Sec. Cit. Marry, we were sent for to the justices.
Third Cit. And so was I: I'll bear you company.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE III. London. A street.

Enter two Citizens, meeting.
Cit. Neighbour, well met: whither away so fast?
Cit. I promise you, I scarcely know myself:
you the news abroad?
Cit. Ay, that the king is dead.
Cit. Bad news, 'by'r lady; seldom comes ye better;
I fear 'twill prove a troubled world.
Enter another Citizen.
Cit. Neighbours, God speed!
Cit. Give you good morrow, sir.
Cit. Both this news hold of good King Edward's death?
Cit. Ay, sir, it is too true: God help us while!
Cit. Then, masters, look to see an obsolescent world.
Cit. No, no; by God's good grace his shall reign.
Cit. Woe to that land that's govern'd by a child!
Cit. In him there is a hope of government, his nonage council under him,
his full and ripen'd years himself,
'Small herbs have grace, great weeds do grow apace:'
And since, methinks, I would not grow so fast, Because sweet flowers are slow and weeds make haste.
Duch. Good faith, good faith, the saying did not hold.
In him that did object the same to thee:
He was the wretchedst thing when he was young,
So long a-growing and so leisurely,
That, if this rule were true, he should be gracious.
Arch. Why, madam, so, no doubt, he is. 21
Duch. I hope he is; but yet let mothers doubt.
York. Now, by my troth, if I had been re-member'd,
I could have given my uncle's grace a flout,
To touch his growth nearer than he touch'd mine.
Duch. How, my pretty York? I pray thee, let me hear it.
York. Marry, they say my uncle grew so fast
That he could gnaw a crust at two hours old:
'Twas full two years ere I could get a tooth.
Grandam, this would have been a biting jest. 30 Duch. I pray thee, pretty York, who told thee this?
York. Grandam, his nurse.
Duch. His nurse! why, she was dead ere thou wast born.
York. If 'twere not she, I cannot tell who told me.
Q. Eliz. A parlous boy: go, to you are too shrewd.
Arch. Good madam, be not angry with the child.
Q. Eliz. Pitchers have ears.

Enter a Messenger.

Arch. Here comes a messenger. What news?
Mess. Such news, my lord, as grieves me to unfold.
Q. Eliz. How fares the prince?
Mess. Well, madam, and in health. 40
Duch. What is thy news then?
Mess. Lord Rivers and Lord Grey are sent to Pomfret,
With them Sir Thomas Vaughan, prisoners.
Duch. Who hath committed them?
Mess. The mighty dukes
Gloucester and Buckingham.
Q. Eliz. For what offence?
Mess. The sum of all I can, I have disclosed;
Why or for what these nobles were committed
Is all unknown to me, my gracious lady.
Q. Eliz. Ay me, I see the downfall of our house!
The tiger now hath seized the gentle hind; 50
Insulting tyranny begins to jet
Upon the innocent and aweless throne:
Welcome, destruction, death, and massacre!
I see, as in a map, the end of all.
Duch. Accursed and unquiet wrangling days,
How many of you have mine eyes beheld!
My husband lost his life to get the crown:
And often up and down my sons were toss'd,
For me to joy and weep their gain and loss:
And being seated, and domestic broils
Clean over-blown, themselves, the conquerors,
Make war upon themselves; blood against blood,
Self against self: O, preposterous

And frantic outrage, end thy damned spleen
Or let me die, to look on death no more!
Q. Eliz. Come, come, my boy; we wi sanctuary,
Madam, farewell.
Duch. I'll go along with you.
Q. Eliz. You have no cause.
Arch. My gracious lady
And thither bear your treasure and your go
For my part, I'll resign unto your grace
The seal I keep: and so betide to me
As well I tender you and all of yours!
Come, I'll conduct you to the sanctuary.

ACT III.

Scene I. London. A street.
The trumpets sound. Enter the young Pr
the Dukes of Gloucester and BUCKING
CARDINAL BOURCHIER, CATESBY, and o
Buck. Welcome, sweet prince, to Lond your chamber.
Glou. Welcome, dear cousin, my tho sovereign:
The weary way hath made you melancholy
Prince. No, uncle; but our crosses on the
Have made it tedious, wearisome, and hea
I want more uncles here to welcome me.
Glou. Sweet prince, the untainted vir your years
Hath not yet dived into the world's deceit
Nor more can you distinguish of a man
Than of his outward show; which, God he Seldom or never jumpheth with the heart.
Those uncles which you want were danger
Your grace attended to their sugar'd word
But look'd not on the poison of their heart.
God keep you from them, and from suc
friends!
Prince. God keep me from false friend
they were none.
Glou. My lord, the mayor of London to greet you.

Enter the Lord Mayor, and his tru
May. God bless your grace with hea happy days!
Prince. I thank you, good my lord; an you all.
I thought my mother, and my brother Yo
Would long ere this have met us on the w
Fie, what a slug is Hastings, that he com to tell us whether they will come or no friends!

Enter LORd HASTINGS.
Buck. And, in good time, here con swearing lord.
Prince. Welcome, my lord: what, my mother come?
Hast. On what occasion, God he not I,
The queen your mother, and your broth
Have taken sanctuary: the tender prince
Would fain have come with me to meet you,
But by his mother was perfec withheld.
Buck. Fie, what an indirect and pee Is this of hers! Lord cardinal, will your his princely brother presently.

Lord Hastings, go with him,
rom her jealous arms pluck him perforce.

My Lord of Buckingham, if my weak

Enter young York, Hastings, and the Buck. Now, in good time, here comes the Prince. Richard of York! how fares our loving

York. Well, my dread lord; so must I call

Prince. Ay, brother, to our grief, as it is yours.

Too late he died that might have kept that title,
Which by his death hath lost much majesty. 100

Glou. How fares our cousin, noble Lord of York?

York. I thank you, gentle uncle. O, my lord,

You said that idle weeds are fast in growth:

The prince my brother hath outgrown me far.

Glou. He hath, my lord.

And therefore is he idle?

Glou. O, my fair cousin, I must not say so.

York. Then is he more beholdng to you

Glou. He may command me as my sovereign;

But you have power in me as in a kinsman.

York. I pray you, uncle, give me this dagger.

Glou. My dagger, little cousin! with all my heart.

Prince. A beggar, brother?

York. Of my kind uncle, that I know will give;

And being but a toy, which is no grief to give.

Glou. A greater gift than that I'll give my cousin.

Glou. A greater gift! O, that's the sword to it.

Glou. Ay, gentle cousin, were it light enough.

York. O, then, I see, you will part but with light gifts;

In weightier things you'll say a beggar nay.

Glou. It is too heavy for your grace to wear.

York. I weigh it lightly, were it heavier. 121

Glou. What, would you have my weapon, little lord?

York. I would, that I might thank you as you call me.

Glou. How?

York. Little.

Prince. My Lord of York will still be cross in talk:

Uncle, your grace knows how to bear with him.

York. You mean, to bear me, not to bear

with me?

Uncle, my brother mocks both you and me;

Because that I am little, like an ape, 130

He thinks that you should bear me on your shoulders.

Buck. With what a sharp-provided wit he reasons!

To mitigate the scorn he gives his uncle,
He prettily and aptly taunts himself:

So cunning and so young is wonderful.

Glou. My lord, will't please you pass along?

Myself and my good cousin Buckingham
Will to your mother, to entreat of her

To meet you at the Tower and welcome you.
York. What, will you go unto the Tower, my lord?
Prince. My lord protector needs will have it so.
York. I shall not sleep in quiet at the Tower.
Glou. Why, what should you fear?
York. Marry, my uncle Clarence angry ghost:
My grandam told me he was murder'd there.
Prince. I fear no uncles dead.
Glou. Nor none that live, I hope.
Prince. As if they live, I hope I need not fear.
But come, my lord; and with a heavy heart,
Thinking on them, go I unto the Tower.
[Enter Buckingham and Catesby.
Buck. Think you, my lord, this little prating York
Was not incensed by his subtle mother
To taunt and scorn you thus oppressibly?
Glou. No doubt, no doubt: O, 'tis a parlous boy;
Bold, quick, ingenions, forward, capable:
He is all the mother's, from the top to toe.
Buck. Well, let them rest. Come hither,
Catesby, Thou art sworn as deeply to effect what we intend
As closely to conceal what we impart;
Thou know'st our reasons urged upon the way;
What think'st thou? is it not an easy matter To make William Lord Hastings of our mind,
For the instalment of this noble duke
In the seat royal of this famous isle?
Cate. He for his father's sake so loves the prince,
That he will not be won to aught against him.
Buck. What think'st thou, then, of Stanley?
what will he?
Cate. He will do all in all as Hastings doth.
Buck. Well, then, no more but this: go, gentle Catesby,
And, as it were far off, sound thou Lord Hastings,
How he doth stand affected to our purpose; 171
And summon him to-morrow to the Tower,
To sit about the coronation.
If thou dost find him tractable to us,
Encourage him, and show him all our reasons:
If he be leaden, icy-cold, unwilling,
Be thou so too; and so break off your talk,
And give us notice of his inclination:
For we to-morrow hold divided councils,
Wherein thyself shall highly be employ'd. 180
Glou. Commend me to Lord William: tell him, Catesby,
His ancient knot of dangerous adversaries
To-morrow are let blood at Pomfret-castle;
And bid my friend, for joy of this good news,
Give Mistress Shore one gentle kiss the more.
Buck. Good Catesby, go, effect this business soundly.
Cate. My good lords both, with all the heed 1 may.
Glou. Shall we hear from you, Catesby, ere we sleep?
Cate. You shall, my lord.
Glou. At Crosby Place, there shall you find us both.
[Exit Catesby.
Buck. Now, my lord, what shall we do, if we perceive
Lord Hastings will not yield to our complots?

Glou. Chop off his head, man; somehow will do;
And, look, when I am king, claim thou of me
The earldom of Hereford, and the moveable Whereof the king my brother stood possess'd.
Buck. I'll claim that promise at your good graces.
Glou. And look to have it yielded with willingness.
Come, let us sup betimes, that afterwards
We may digest our complots in some form.

SCENE II. Before Lord Hastings' house.
Enter a Messenger.
Mess. What, ho! my lord!
Hast. [Within] Who knocks at the door?
Mess. A messenger from the Lord Stanil
Enter Lord Hastings.
Hast. What is't o'clock?
Mess. Upon the stroke of four.
Hast. Cannot thy master sleep these tedious nights?
Mess. So it should seem by that I have to say.
First, he commends him to your noble lord
Hast. And then?
Mess. And then he sends you word
He dreamt to-night the boar had razed his Besides, he says there are two councils held;
And that may be determined at the one
Which it may make you and him to rue at the other:
Therefore he sends to know your lord's pleasure,
If presently you will take horse with him,
And with all speed with him to wear north,
To shun the danger that his soul divines.
Hast. Go, fellow, go, return unto thy lord
Bid him not fear the separated councils:
His honour and myself are at the one,
And at the other is my servant Catesby; Whereof nothing can proceed that toucheth
Whereof I shall not have intelligence.
Tell him his fears are shallow, wanting his
And for his dreams, I wonder he is so fond To trust the mockery of unquiet slumbers;
To fly the boar before the boar pursues,
Were to incense the boar to follow us,
And make pursuit where he did mean no; Go, bid thy master rise and come to me;
And we will both together to the Tower,
Where he shall see, the boar will use us kind.
Mess. My gracious lord, I'll tell him you say.

Enter Catesby.
Cate. Many good morrowes to my noble Hast. Good morrow, Catesby; you are stirring:
What news, what news, in this our tottering
Cate. It is a reeling world, indeed, my lord,
And I believe 'twill never stand upright.
Till Richard wear the garland of the true Hast. How I wear the garland! dost thou the crown?
Cate. Ay, my good lord.
KING RICHARD III.

573

Enter Lord Stanley.

Enter Buckingham.

Enter Sir Richard Ratcliff, with halberds, carrying Rivers, Grey, and Vaughan to death.

Enter Sir Richard Ratcliff, let me tell thee this:

To-day shalt thou behold a subject die

For truth, for duty, and for loyalty.

Grey. God keep the prince from all the pack of you!

A knot you are of damned blood-suckers.

Vaugh. You live that shall cry woe for this hereafter.

Rat. Dispatch: the limit of your lives is out.

Riv. O Pomfret, Pomfret! O thou bloody prison,

Fatal and ominous to noble peers!

Within the guilty closure of thy walls

Richard the second here was hack'd to death;

Than some that have accused them wear their hats.

But come, my lord, let us away.

Enter a Pursuivant.

Hast. Go on before; I'll talk with this good fellow.

[Exeunt Stanley and Catesby.

How now, sirrah! how goes the world with thee?

Purs. The better that your lordship please to ask.

Hast. I tell thee, man, 'tis better with me now Than when I met thee last where now we meet:
Then was I going prisoner to the Tower,
By the suggestion of the queen's allies:
But now, I tell thee—keep it to thyself—
This day those enemies are put to death,
And I in better state than e'er I was.

Purs. God hold it, to your honour's good content!

Hast. Gramercy, fellow: there, drink that for me.

[Throws him his purse.

Purs. God save your lordship! [Exit.

Enter a Priest.

Priest. Well met, my lord; I am glad to see your honour.

Hast. I thank thee, good Sir John, with all my heart.

I am in your debt for your last exercise;

Come the next Sabbath, and I will content you.

[He whispers in his ear.

Enter Buckingham.

Buck. What, talking with a priest, lord chamberlain?

Your friends at Pomfret, they do need the priest;

Your honour hath no shriving work in hand.

Hast. Good faith, and when I met this holy man,

Those men you talk of came into my mind:

What, go you toward the Tower?

Buck. I do, my lord; but long shall I not stay:

I shall return before your lordship thence.

Hast. 'Tis like enough, for I stay dinner there.

Buck. [Aside] And supper too, although thou know'st it not.

Come, will you go?

Hast. I'll wait upon your lordship. [Exeunt.

SCENE III. Pomfret Castle.

Enter Sir Richard Ratcliff, with halberds, carrying Rivers, Grey, and Vaughan to death.

Rat. Come, bring forth the prisoners.

Riv. Sir Richard Ratcliff, let me tell thee this:

To-day shalt thou behold a subject die

For truth, for duty, and for loyalty.

Grey. God keep the prince from all the pack of you!

A knot you are of damned blood-suckers.

Vaugh. You live that shall cry woe for this hereafter.

Rat. Dispatch: the limit of your lives is out.

Riv. O Pomfret, Pomfret! O thou bloody prison,

Fatal and ominous to noble peers!

Within the guilty closure of thy walls

Richard the second here was hack'd to death;
And, for more slander to thy dismal seat,
We give thee up our guiltless blood to drink.

Grey. Now Margaret's curse is fall'n upon our heads,
For standing by when Richard stabb'd her son.

Ric. Then cursed she Hastings, then cursed she Buckingham,
Then cursed she Richard. O, remember, God,
To hear her prayers for them, as now for us!
And for my sister and her princely sons,

Be satisfied, dear God, with our true blood,
Which, as thou know'st, unjustly must be spilt.

Rat. Make haste; the hour of death is expiate.

Ric. Come, Grey, come, Vaughan, let us all embrace:
And take our leave, until we meet in heaven.

[Exeunt.]

Scene IV. The Tower of London.

Enter Buckingham, Derby, Hastings, the Bishop of Ely, Ratcliff, Lovel, with others, and take their seats at a table.

Hast. My lords, at once: the cause why we are met
Is, to determine of the coronation.
In God's name, speak: when is the royal day?
Buck. Are all things fitting for that royal time?
Der. It is, and wants but nomination.

Ely. To-morrow, then, I judge a happy day.
Buck. Who knows the lord protector's mind herein?

Ratcliff. Which is most inward with the royal duke?

Ely. Your grace, we think, should soonest
Know his mind.
Buck. Who, I, my lord! we know each other's faces,
But for our hearts, he knows no more of mine,
Than I of yours;
Nor I no more of his, than you of mine.

Lord Hastings, you and he are near in love.
Hast. I thank his grace, I know he loves me well;
But, for his purpose in the coronation,
I have not sounded him, nor he deliver'd
His gracious pleasure any way therein:
But you, my noble lords, may name the time;
And in the duke's behalf I'll give my voice,
Which, I presume, he'll take in gentle part.

Enter Gloucester.

Ely. Now in good time, here comes the duke himself.

Glou. My noble lords and cousins all, good morrow.
I have been long a sleeper; but, I hope,
My absence doth neglect no great designs,
Which by my presence might have been concluded.

Buck. Had not you come upon your cue, my lord,
William Lord Hastings had pronouned your part,—
I mean, your voice,—for crowning of the king.

Glou. Than my Lord Hastings no man might be bolder;
His lordship knows me well, and loves me well.
Hast. I thank your grace.

Glou. My lord of Ely! My lord?
The history of all her secret thoughts:
So smooth he daub'd his vice with show of virtue,
That, his apparent open guilt omitted,
Mean, his conversation with Shore's wife,
He lived from all attainer of suspect.

Buck. Well, well, he was the covert'st shelter'd traitor
That ever lived.

Would you imagine, or almost believe,
Were't not that, by great preservation,
We live to tell you, the subtle traitor
This day had plotted, in the council-house
To murder me and my good Lord of Gloucester?

May. What, had he so?

Glou. What, think you we are Turks or infidels?
Or that we would, against the form of law,
Proceed thus rashly to the villain's death,
But that the extreme peril of the case,
The peace of England and our persons' safety,
Enforced us to this execution?

May. Now, fair bethall you! he deserved his death;
And you my good lords, both have well proceeded,
To warn false traitors from the like attempts.
I never look'd for better at his hands.

After he once fell in with Mistress Shore.

Glou. Yet had not we determined he should die,
Until your lordship came to see his death:
Which now the loving haste of these our friends,
Somewhat against our meaning, have prevented:
Because, my lord, we would have had you heard
The traitor speak, and timorously confess
The manner and the purpose of his treason;
That you might well have signified the same
Unto the citizens, who haply may Misconstrue us in him and wail his death.

May. But, my good lord, your grace's word shall serve,
As well as I had seen and heard him speak:
And doubt you not, right noble princes both,
But I'll acquaint our duteous citizens
With all your just proceedings in this cause.

Glou. And to that end we wish'd your lordship's here,
To avoid the carping censures of the world.

Buck. But since you come too late of our intents,
Yet witness what you hear we did intend:
And so, my good lord mayor, we bid farewell.

[Exit Mayor.

Glou. Go, after, after, cousin Buckingham.
The mayor towards Guildhall hies him in all post:
There, at your meet'st advantage of the time,
Infer the bastardy of Edward's children:
Tell them how Edward put to death a citizen,
Only for saying he would make his son
Heir to the crown; meaning indeed his house,
Which, by the sign thereof, was termed so.
Moreover, urge his hateful luxury,
And bestial appetite in change of lust;
Which stretched to their servants, daughters, wives,
Even where his lustful eye or savage heart,
Without control, listed to make his prey.

Nay, for a need, thus far come near my person:
Tell them, when that my mother went with child
Of that unsatiat Edward, noble York
My princely father then had wars in France;
And, by just computation of the time,
Found that the issue was not his begot;
Which well appeared in his lineaments,
Being nothing like the noble duke my father:
But touch this sparingly, as 'twere far off:
Because you know, my lord, my mother lives.

Buck. Fear not, my lord, I'll play the orator
As if the golden fee for which I plead
Were for myself: and so, my lord, adieu.

Glou. If you thrive well, bring them to Bay-nard's Castle;

Where you shall find me well accompanied
With reverend fathers and well-disposed bishops.

Buck. I go; and towards three or four o'clock
Look for the news that the Guildhall affords.

Glou. Go, Lovel, with all speed to Doctor
Shaw;
[To Cate.] Go thou to Friar Penker; bid them both Meet me within this hour at Baynard's Castle.

[Exeunt all but Gloucester.

Now will I in, to take some privy order,
To draw the brats of Clarence out of sight;
And to give notice, that no manner of person
At any time have recourse unto the princes. [Exeit.

Scene VI. The same. A street.
Enter a Scrivener, with a paper in his hand.

Scriv. This is the indictment of the good Lord Hastings;
Which set hand fairly is engross'd,
That it may be this day read over in Paul's.
And mark how well the sequel hangs together:
Eleven hours I spent to write it over,
For yesternight by Catesby was it brought me;
The precedent was full as long a-doing;
And yet within these five hours lived Lord
Hastings,
Untainted, unexamined, free, at liberty.
Here's a good world the while! Why who's so gross,
That seeth not this palpable device?
Yet who's so blind, but says he sees it not?
Bad is the world; and all will come to nought,
When such bad dealing must be seen in thought.

[Exeit.

Scene VII. Baynard's Castle.
Enter Gloucester and Buckingham, at several doors.

Glou. How now, my lord, what say the citizens?

Buck. Now, by the holy mother of our Lord,
The citizens are mum and speak not a word.

Glou. Touch'd you the bastardy of Edward's children?

Buck. I did; with his contract with Lady Lucy,
And his contract by deputy in France;
The insatiate greediness of his desires,
And his enforcement of the city wives;
His tyranny for trilles; his own bastardy,
As being got, your father then in France,
And his resemblance, being not like the duke:
Withal I did infer your lineaments,
Being the right idea of your father;
Both in your form and nobleness of mind;
Laid open all your victories in Scotland,
Your discipline in war, wisdom in peace,
Your bounty, virtue, fair humility;
Indeed, left nothing fitting for the purpose
Untouch'd, or slightly handled, in discourse
And when mine oratory grew to an end,
I bid them that did love their country's goods
Cry 'God save Richard, England's royal king.'

Glou. Ah! and did they so?

Buck. No, so God help me, they spake
word;
But, like dumb statues or breathing stones,
Gazed each on other, and look'd pale and blank;
Which when I saw, I reprehended them;
And ask'd the mayor what meant this silence:

His answer was, the people were not wont
To be spoke to but by the recorder.
Then he was urged to tell my tale again,
'Thus said the duke, thus hath the duke info
But nothing spake in warrant from himself.
When he had done, some followers of mine
At the lower end of the hall, hur'd it up
And some ten voices cried 'God save Richard!
And thus I took the vantage of those few,
'Thanks, gentle citizens and friends,' quoth
'This general applause and loving shout
Argues your wisdoms and your love to Rich

Glou. What tongueless blocks were would they not speak?

Buck. No, by my troth, my lord.

Glou. Will not the mayor then and brethren come?

Buck. The mayor is here at hand;
some fear;

Be not you spoke with, but by mighty suit
And look you get a prayer-book in your hand
And stand betwixt two churchmen, good my
For on that ground I'll build a holy descen
And be not easily won to our request;

Play the maid's part, still answer nay, and Glou. I go; and if you plead as well for

As I can say nay to thee for myself,

No doubt we'll bring it to a happy issue.

Buck. Go, go up to the leads; the lord knocks.

[Exeit Gloucester.

Enter the Mayor and Citizens.

Welcome, my lord; I dance attendance he
I think the duke will not be spoke withal.

Enter Catesby.

Here comes his servant: how now, Cates
What says he?

Cate. My lord, he doth entreat your grace
To visit him to-morrow or next day:
He is within, with two right reverend fathers;
Divinely bent to meditation;

And in no worldly suit would he be moved
To draw him from his holy exercise.

Buck. Return, good Catesby, to thy lord
Tell him, myself, the mayor and citizens,
In deep designs and matters of great moment;
No less importing than our general good,
Are come to have some conference with him

Cate. I'll tell him what you say, my lord.

Buck. Ah, ha, my lord, this prince is Edward!

He is not illing on a lewd day-bed,
But on his knees at meditation;
KING RICHARD III.

577 dallying with a brace of courtierans, meditating with two deep divines;

sleeping, to engross his idle body,
prolonging, to engross his watchful soul:
ye were England, would this gracious prince on himself the sovereignty thereof:
sure, I fear, we shall ne'er win him to it. So ay. Marry, God forbid his grace should say us nay!

ck. I fear he will.

Re-enter Catesby.

now, Catesby, what says your lord?

ck. My lord,

wonders to what end you have assembled troup of citizens to speak with him, grace not being warn’d thereof before:

or, he fears you mean no good to him.

ck. Sorry I am my noble cousin should act me, that I mean no good to him:

caven, I come in perfect love to him;
so to have more return and tell his grace.

E.xit Catesby.

y. holy and devout religious men at their beads, 'tis hard to draw them thence, next is zealous contemplation.

GLOUCESTER aloft, between two Bishops.

CATESBY returns.

y. See, where he stands between two clergymen!

ck. Two props of virtue for a Christian prince, from him the fall of vanity:

see, a book of prayer in his hand,
ornaments to know a holy man.

us Plantagenet, most gracious prince, 100 favourable ears to our request;

ardon us the interruption

my devotion and right Christian zeal.

u. My lord, there needs no such apology:
er do beseech you pardon me,
earnest in the service of my God, ct the visitation of my friends.

eaving this, what is your grace's pleasure?
u. Even that, I hope, which pleaseth God above, ll good men of this ungovern'd isle.

110

c. I do suspect I have done some offence seems disgracious in the city's eyes, hat you come to reprehend my ignorance.

u. You have, my lord; would it might please your grace,

entreaties, to amend that fault!

Else wherefore breathe I in a Christian land?

ck. Then know, it is your fault that you treme seat, the throne majestical, capt'sd of your ancestors,

tate of fortune and your due of birth, 120

glory of your royal house,

ruption of a blemish'd stock:

in the midst of your sleepy thoughts,
where we waken to our country's good,
oble isle doth want her proper limbs;

c defaced with scars of infancy,

Her royal stock grafted with ignoble plants,
And almost shoulder'd in the swallowng gulf
Of blind forgetfulness and dark oblivion.

Which to secure, we heartily solicit

Your gracious self to take on you the charge

And kingly government of this your land,

Not as protector, steward, substitute,

Or lowly factor for another's gain;

But as successively from blood to blood,

Your right of birth, your empery, your own.

For this, consorted with the citizens,

Your very worshipful and loving friends,

And by their vehement instigation,

In this just suit come I to move your grace.

Glou. I know not whether to depart in silence,

Or bitterly to speak in your reproof;

Best fitteth my degree or your condition:

If not to answer, you might haply think

Tongue-tied ambition, not replying, yielded

To bear the golden yoke of sovereignty,

Which fondly you would here impose on me;

If to reprove you for this suit of yours,

So season'd with your faithful love to me,

Then, on the other side, choose your friends.

Therefore, to speak, and to avoid the first,

And then, in speaking, not to incur the last,

Definitively thus I answer you.

Your love deserves my thanks; but my desert

Unmeritable shuns your high request.

First, if all obstructions were cut away,

And that my path were even to the crown,

As my ripe revenue and due by birth;

Yet so much is my poverty of spirit,

So mighty and so many my defects,

As I had rather hide me from my greatness,

Being a bark to brook no mighty sea,

Than in my greatness cover to be hid,

And in the vapour of my glory smother'd.

But, God be thanked, there's no need of me,

And much I need to help you, if need were;

The royal tree hath left us royal fruit,

Which, mellow'd by the stealing hours of time,

Will well become the seat of majesty,

And make, no doubt, as happy by his reign.

On him I lay what you would lay on me,

The right and fortune of his happy stars;

Which God defend that I should wring from him!

Buck. My lord, this argues conscience in your grace;

But the respects thereof are nice and trivial,

All circumstances well considered.

You say that Edward is your brother's son:

So say we too, but not by Edward's wife:

For first he was contract to Lady Lucy—

Your mother lives a witness to that vow—

And afterward by substitute betroth'd to Bona, sister to the King of France.

These both put by, a poor petitioner,

A care-crazed mother of a many children,

A beauty-waning and distressed widow,

Even in the afternoon of her best days,

Made prize and purchase of his lustful eye,

Seduced the pitch and height of all his thoughts to base declension and loathed his name:

By her, in her unlawful bed, he got

This Edward, whom our manners term the prince.

More bitterly could I expostulate,

Save that, for reverence to some alive,

I give a sparing limit to my tongue.
Then, good my lord, take to your royal self
This proffer'd benefit of dignity;
If not to bless us and the land withal,
Yet to draw forth your noble ancestry
From the corruption of abusing times,
Unto a lineal true-derived course.

May. Do, good my lord, your citizens entreat
you.
Buck. Refuse not, mighty lord, this proffer'd love.
Cat. O, make them joyful, grant their lawful suit!
Glou. Alas, why would you heap these cares on me?
I am unfit for state and majesty:
I do beseech you, take it not amiss;
I cannot nor I will not yield to you.
Buck. If you refuse it,—as, in love and zeal,
Loath to depose the child, your brother's son;
As well we know your tenderness of heart
And gentle, kind, effeminate remorse,
Which we have noted in you to your kin,
And evenly indeed to all estates,
Yet whether you accept our suit or no,
Your brother's son shall never reign our king;
But we will plant some other in the throne,
To the disgrace and downfall of your house:
And in this resolution here we leave you.

Come, citizens: 'tounds! I'll entreat no more.
Glou. O, do not swear, my lord of Buckingham.
(Beexit Buckingham with the Citizens.
Cat. Call them again, my lord, and accept their suit.

Another. Do, good my lord, lest all the land do rue it.
Glou. Would you enforce me to a world of care again?
Well, call them again. I am not made of stone,
But penetrable to your kind entreats,
Albeit against my conscience and my soul.

Re-enter BUCKINGHAM and the rest.
Cousin of Buckingham, and you sage, grave men,
Since you will buckle fortune on my back,
To bear your burthen, whether I will or no,
I must have patience to endure the load;
But if black scandal or foul-faced reproach
Attend the sequel of your imposition,
Your mere enforcement shall acquittance me
From all the impure blot's and stains thereof;
For God he knows, and you may partly see,
How far I am from the desire thereof.

May. God bless your grace! we see it, and will say it.
Glou. In saying so, you shall but say the truth.
Buck. Then I salute you with this kingly title:
Long live Richard, England's royal king! 240
May. and Cit. Amen.
Buck. To-morrow will it please you to be crown'd?
Glou. Even when you please, since you will have it so.
Buck. To-morrow, then, we will attend your grace:
And so most joyfully we take our leave.
Glou. Come, let us to our holy task again.
Farewell, good cousin; farewell, gentle friends.

[Exeunt.]
KING RICHARD III.

Scene I. London. The palace.

Scene. Enter Richard, in pomp, crowned; Buckingham, Catesby, a Page, and others.

K. Rich. Stand all apart. Cousin of Buckingham!

Buck. My gracious sovereign?

K. Rich. Give me thy hand. [Here he ascendeth his throne.] Thus high, by thy advice And thy assistance, is King Richard seated: But shall we wear these honours for a day? Or shall they last, and we rejoice in them? Buck. Still live they and for ever may they last!

K. Rich. O Buckingham, now do I play the touch, To try if thou be current gold indeed: Young Edward lives; think now what I would say.

Buck. Say on, my loving lord.

Buck. Why, so you are, my thrice renowned hege.

Buck. True, noble prince.

K. Rich. O bitter consequence, That Edward still should live! 'True, noble prince!' Courage, thouwert not wont to be so dull: Shall I be plain? I wish the bastards dead; And I would have it suddenly perform'd. What sayest thou? speak suddenly; be brief. 20 Buck. Your grace may do your pleasure.

K. Rich. Tut, tut, thou art all ice, thy kindness freezeth: Say, have I thy consent that they shall die?

Buck. Give me some breath, some little pause, my lord, Before I positively speak herein: I will resolve your grace immediately. [Exit.

Cate. [Aside to a standby] The king is angry: see, he bites the lip.

K. Rich. I will converse with iron-witted fools And unrespective boys: none are for me That look into me with considerate eyes: 30 High-reaching Buckingham grows circumspect. Boy!

Page. My lord?

K. Rich. Know'st thou not any whom corrupting gold Would tempt unto a close exploit of death?

Page. My lord, I know a discontented gentleman, Whose humble means match not his haughty mind:

Gold were as good as twenty orators,
KING RICHARD III.

And will, no doubt, tempt him to any thing.

K. Rich. What is his name?

Page. His name, my lord, is Tyrrel.

K. Rich. I partly know the man: go, call him hither. [Exit Page.]

The deep-revolving witty Buckingham
No more shall be the neighbour to my counsel:
Hath he so long held out with me untired,
And stops he now for breath?

Enter STANLEY.

How now! what news with you?

Stan. My lord, I hear the Marquis Dorset's fled
To Richmond, in those parts beyond the sea
Where he abides.

K. Rich. Catesby! [Stands apart.]

Cates. My lord?

K. Rich. Rumour it abroad
That Anne, my wife, is sick and like to die:
I will take order for her keeping close.
Inquire me out some mean-born gentleman,
Whom I will marry strange to Clarence' daughter:
The boy is foolish, and I fear not him.
Look, how thou dream'st! I say again, give out
That Anne my wife is sick and like to die:
About it; for it stands me much upon,
To stop all hopes whose growth may damage me.

[Exit Catesby.

I must be married to my brother's daughter,
Or else my kingdom stands on brittle glass.
Murder her brothers, and then marry her!
Uncertain way of gain! But I am
So far in blood that sin will pluck on sin:
Tear-falling pity dwells not in this eye.

Re-enter Page, with TYRREL.

Is thy name Tyrrel?

Tyr. James Tyrrel, and your most obedient subject.

K. Rich. Art thou, indeed?

Tyr. Prove me, my gracious sovereign.

K. Rich. Darest thou resolve to kill a friend of mine?

Tyr. Ay, my lord;
But I had rather kill two enemies.

K. Rich. Why, there thou hast it: two deep enemies,
Foes to my rest and my sweet sleep's disturbers
Are they that I would have thee deal upon:
Tyrrel, I mean those bastards in the Tower.

Tyr. Let me have open means to come to them,
And soon I'll rid you from the fear of them.

K. Rich. Thou sing'st sweet music. Hark, come hither, Tyrrel:
Go, by this token: rise, and lend thine ear: [Whispers.

There is no more but so: say it is done,
And I will love thee, and prefer thee too.

Tyr. 'Tis done, my gracious lord.

K. Rich. Shall we hear from thee, Tyrrel, ere we sleep?

Tyr. Ye shall, my lord. [Exit.

Re-enter BUCKINGHAM.

Buck. My lord, I have consider'd in my mind

The late demand that you did sound me in,

K. Rich. Well, let that pass. Dorset is fl
To Richmond.

Buck. I hear that news, my lord.

K. Rich. Stanley, he is your wife's son: we look to it.

Buck. My lord, I claim your gift, my due promise
For which your honour and your faith is pawn
The cardom of Hereford and the moveables
The which you promised I should possess.

K. Rich. Stanley, look to your wife: if convey
Letters to Richmond, you shall answer it.

Buck. What says your highness to my j demand?

K. Rich. As I remember, Henry the Sixth
Did prophesy that Richmond should be king,
When Richmond was a little peevish boy.
A king, perhaps, perhaps,—

Buck. My lord!

K. Rich. How chance the prophet could at that time
Have told me, I being by, that I should kill ha

Buck. My lord, your promise for the e

K. Rich. Richmond! When last I was Exeter,
The mayor in courtesy show'd me the castle,
And call'd it Rougemont: at which nam started,
Because a bard of Ireland told me once,
I should not live long after I saw Richmond.

Buck. My lord!

K. Rich. Ay, what's o'clock?

Buck. I am thus bold to put your grace in n
Of what you promised me.

K. Rich. Well, but what's o'clock?

Buck. Upon the stroke of ten.

K. Rich. Well, let it strike

Buck. Why let it strike?

K. Rich. Because that, like a Jack, I keep'st the stroke
Betwixt thy begging and my meditation.
I am not in the giving vein to-day.

Buck. Why, then resolve me whether will or no.

K. Rich. Tut, tut,
Thou troubllest me: I am not in the vein.

[Exeunt all but Buckingham.

Buck. Is it even so? rewards he my true se With such deep contempt? made I him kind this?
O, let me think on Hastings, and be gone To Brecknock, while my fearful head is ou

SCENE III. The same.

Enter TYRREL.

Tyr. The tyrannous and bloody deed is o The most arch act of piteous massacre That ever yet this land was guilty of. Dighton and Forrest, whom I did suborn To do this ruthless piece of butchery, Although they were flesh'd villains, bloody with melting with tenderness and kind compassion Wept like two children in their deaths' sad st
KING RICHARD III.

Scene IV. Before the palace.

Enter Queen Margaret.

Q. Mar. So, now prosperity begins to wane And drop into the rotten mouth of death. Here in these confines slyly have I lurk’d, To watch the waning of mine adversaries. A dire induction am I witness to, And will to France, hoping the consequence Will prove as bitter, black, and tragical. Withdraw thee, wretched Margaret: who comes here?

Enter Queen Elizabeth and the Duchess of York.

Q. Eliz. Ah, my young princes! ah, my tender babes! My unblown flowers, new-appearing sweets! 10 If yet your gentle souls fly in the air And be not tied in doom perpetual, Hover about me with your airy wings And hear your mother’s lamentation! Q. Mar. Hover about her; say, that right for right Hath dimm’d your infant morn to aged night. Dutch. So many miseries have crazed my voice, That my wee-weared tongue is mute and dumb, Edward Plantagenet, why art thou dead? Q. Mar. Plantagenet doth quit Plantagenet. Edward for Edward pays a dying debt. 21 Q. Eliz. Wilt thou, O God, fly from such gentle lambs, And throw them in the entrails of the wolf? When didst thou sleep when such a deed was done? Q. Mar. When holy Harry died, and my sweet son. Dutch. Blind sight, dead life, poor mortal living ghost, Woe’s scene, world’s shame, grave’s due by life usurp’d, Brief abstract and record of tedious days, Rest thy unrest on England’s lawful earth, [Sitting down. Unlawfully made drunk with innocents’ blood! 30 Q. Eliz. O, that thou shouldst as well afford a grave As thou canst yield a melancholy seat! Then would I hide my bones, not rest them here. O, who hath any cause to mourn but I? [Sitting down by her. Q. Mar. If ancient sorrow be most reverend, Give mine the benefit of seniory, And let my woes frown on the upper hand. If sorrow can admit society, [Sitting down with them. Tell o’er your woes again by viewing mine: I had an Edward, till a Richard kill’d him; 40 I had a Harry, till a Richard kill’d him; Thou hadst an Edward, till a Richard kill’d him; Thou hadst a Richard, till a Richard kill’d him, Dutch. I had a Richard too, and thou didst kill him. I had a Rutland too, thou holp’st to kill him. Q. Mar. Thou hadst a Clarence too, and Richard kill’d him. From forth the kennel of thy womb hath crept A hell-hound that doth hunt us all to death:
That dog, that had his teeth before his eyes,
To worry lambs and lap their gentle blood; 50
That foul defacer of God's handiwork,
That excellent grand tyrant of the earth,
That reigns in gilded eyes of weeping souls,
Thy womb let loose, to chase us to our graves.
O upright, just, and true-disposing God,
How do I thank thee, that this carnal cur
Preys on the issue of his mother's body,
And makes her pew-fellow with others' moan!

Duch. O Harry's wife, triumph not in my woes;
God wills it with me, I have wept for thine. 60
Q. Mar. Bear with me; I am hungry for revenge,
And now I cloy me with beholding it.
Thy Edward he is dead, that stabb'd my Edward;
Thy other Edward dead, to quit my Edward;
Young York he is but boot, because both they Match not the high perfection of my loss:
Thy Clarence he is dead that kill'd my Edward;
And the beholders of this tragic play,
The adulterate Hastings, Rivers, Vaughan, Grey,
Untimely smother'd in their dusky graves. 70
Richard yet lives, hell's black intelligence,
Only reserved their factor, to buy souls
And send them thither: but at hand, at hand,
Ensues his piteous and unpity'd end:
Earth gapes, hell burns, fiends roar, saints pray,
To have him suddenly convey'd away.
Cancel his bond of life, dear God, I pray,
That I may live to say, The dog is dead!
Q. Eliz. O, thou didst prophesy the time would come
That I should wish for thee to help me curse
That bottled spider, that foul bunch-back'd toad!

Q. Mar. I call'd thee then vain flourish of my fortune;
I call'd thee then poor shadow, painted queen;
The presentation of but what I was;
The flattering index of a direful pageant;
One heaved a-high, to be hurl'd down below;
A mother only mock'd with two sweet babes;
A dream of what thou wert, a breath, a bubble,
A sign of dignity, a garish flag;
To be the aim of every dangerous shot;
A queen in jest, only to fill the scene.
Where is thy husband now? where be thy brothers?
Where are thy children? wherein dost thou joy?
Who sues to thee and cries 'God save the queen?'
Where be the boding peers that flatter'd thee?
Decline all this, and see what now thou art:
For happy wife, a most distress'd widow;
For joyful mother, one that wails the name;
For queen, a very caitiff crown'd with care; 100
For one being sued to, one that humbly sues;
For one that scorn'd at me, now scorn'd of me;
For one being fear'd of all, now feared one;
For one commanding all, obey'd of none.
Thus hath the course of justice wheel'd about,
And left thee but a very prey to time;
Having no more but thought of what thou wert,
To torture thee the more, being what thou art.
Thou didst usurp my place, who dost thou not
Usurp the just proportion of my sorrow? 110
Now that proud neck bears half my burren'd yoke:
From which even here I slip my weary neck,
And leave the burthen of it all on thee.
Farewell, York's wife, and queen of sad mis
These English woes will make me smile.
Q. Eliz. O thou well skill'd in curses, 120
And teach me how to curse mine enemies!
Q. Mar. Forbear to sleep the nights, and the days;
Compare dead happiness with living woe;
Think that thy babes were fatter than they were;
And he that slew them fouler than he is:
Bettering thy loss makes the bad cause worse.
Revolving this will teach thee how to curse.
Q. Eliz. My words are dull; O, quicken them with thine!
Q. Mar. Thy woes will make them sharp,
I pierce like mine.
Duch. Why should calamity be full of woe?
Q. Eliz. Windy attorneys to their client we,
Airy succeeders of intestine joys,
Pore breathing orators of miseries!
Let them have scope: though what they do part
Help not at all, yet do they ease the heart.
Duch. If so, then be not tongue-tied: go with me,
And in the breath of bitter words let's smother
My damned son, which thy two sweet and mother'd.
I hear his drun: be copious in exclains.

Enter King Richard, marching, with drums and trumpets.
K. Rich. Who intercepts my expedition?
Duch. O, she that might have intercept eath, 140
By strangling thee in her accursed womb,
From all the slaughters, wretch, that thou hast done!
Q. Eliz. Hidest thou that forehead wild,
That golden crown,
Where should be graven, if that right were right,
The slaughter of the prince that owed that crown
And the dire death of my two sons and broth
Tell me, thou villain slave, where are my chil
Duch. Thou toad, thou toad, where is your brother Clarence?
And little Ned Plantagenet, his son?
Q. Eliz. Where is kind Hastings, River, Vaughan, Grey?
K. Rich. A flourish, trumpets! strike aller drums!
Let not the heavens hear these tell-tale wome
Rall on the Lord's anointed: strike, I say!

Flourish. Alarm.

Either be patient, and entreat me fair,
Or with the clamorous report of war
Thus will I drown your exclamations.
Duch. Art thou my son?
K. Rich. Ay, I thank God, my father, you
self.
Duch. Then patiently hear my impatience
K. Rich. Madam, I have a touch of my condition,
Which cannot brook the accent of reproof.

[Act III]
Q. Eliz. Though far more cause, yet much less spirit to curse es in me; I say amen to all.
K. Rich. Stay, dam'd; I must speak a word with you.
Eliz. I have no more sons of the royal blood hee to murder: for my daughters, Richard,
she shall be praying nuns, not weeping queens;
therefore level not to hit their lives.
K. Rich. You have a daughter call'd Elizabeth, and fair, royal and gracious.
Eliz. And must she die for this? O, let her live,
I'll corrupt her manners, stain her beauty;
her self as false to Edward's bed;
now her the veil of infamy:
you live unscarr'd of bleeding slaughter,
confess she was not Edward's daughter.

K. Rich. Wrong not her birth, she is of royal blood.
Q. Eliz. To save her life, I'll say she is not so.
K. Rich. Her life is only safest in her birth.
Q. Eliz. And only in that haste died her brothers.
K. Rich. Lo, at their births good stars were opposite.
Q. Eliz. No, to their lives bad friends were contrary.
K. Rich. All unavoidable is the doom of destiny.
Q. Eliz. True, when avoided grace makes destiny:
My babes were destined to a fairer death,
If grace had bless'd thee with a fairer life.
K. Rich. You speak as if that I had slain my cousins.
Q. Eliz. Cousins, indeed; and by their uncle cozend'
Of comfort, kingdom, kindred, freedom, life.
Whose hand soever lanced their tender hearts,
Thy head, all indirectly, gave direction.
No doubt the murderous knife was dull and blunt
Till it was whetted on thy stone-hard heart,
To revel in the entrails of my lambs.
But that still use of grief makes wild grief tame,
My tongue should to thy ears not name my boys
Till that my nails were anchor'd in thine eyes;
And I, in such a desperate bay of death,
Like a poor bark, of sails and tackling reft,
Rush all to pieces on thy rocky bosom.
K. Rich. Madam, so thrive I in my enterprise
And dangerous success of bloody wars,
As I intend more good to you and yours
Than ever you or yours were by me wrong'd!
Q. Eliz. What good is cover'd with the face of heaven,
To be discover'd; that can do me good?
K. Rich. The advancement of your children, gentle lady.
Q. Eliz. Up to some scaffold, there to lose their heads?
K. Rich. No, to the dignity and height of honour,
The high imperial type of this earth's glory.
Q. Eliz. Flatter my sorrows with report of it;
Tell me what state, what dignity, what honour,
Canst thou demise to any child of mine?
K. Rich. Even all I have; yea, and myself and all,
Will I withal endow a child of thine;
So in the Lethe of thy angry soul
Thou drown the sad remembrance of those wrongs
Which thou supposest I have done to thee.
Q. Eliz. Be brief, lest that the process of thy kindness
Last longer telling than thy kindness' date.
K. Rich. Then know, that from my soul I love thy daughter.
Q. Eliz. My daughter's mother thinks it with her soul.
K. Rich. What do you think?
Q. Eliz. That thou dost love my daughter from thy soul:
So from thy soul's love didst thou love her brothers;
And from my heart's love I do thank thee for it.
K. Rich. Be not so hasty to confound my meaning:
I mean, that with my soul I love thy daughter, And mean to make her queen of England.

Q. Eliz. Say then, who dost thou mean shall be her king?
K. Rich. Even he that makes her queen: who should be else?
Q. Eliz. What, thou?
K. Rich. I, even I: what think you of it, madam?
Q. Eliz. How canst thou woo her?
K. Rich. That would I learn of you, As one that are best acquainted with her humour.
Q. Eliz. And wilt thou learn of me?
K. Rich. Madam, with all my heart. 270
Q. Eliz. Send to her, by the man that slew her brothers,
A pair of bleeding hearts; thereon engrave Edward and York; then haply she will weep:
Therefore present to her,—as sometime Margaret Did to thy father, steep'd in Rutland's blood,—
A handkerchief; which, say to her, did drain The purple sap from her sweet brother's body.
And bid her dry her weeping eyes therewith. If this inducement force her not to love,
Send her a story of thy noble acts:
Tell her thou madest away her uncle Clarence,
Her uncle Rivers; yea, and, for her sake,
Maidest quick conveyance with her good aunt Anne.
K. Rich. Come, come, you mock me; this is not the way
To win your daughter.
Q. Eliz. There is no other way;
Unless thou couldst put on some other shape, And not be Richard that hath done all this.
K. Rich. Say that I did all this for love of her.
Q. Eliz. Nay, then indeed she cannot choose but hate thee,
Having bought love with such a bloody spoil. 290
K. Rich. Look, what is done cannot be now amended:
Men shall deal unadvisedly sometimes,
Which after hours give leisure to repent.
If I did take the kingdom from your sons,
To make my beds, I'll give it to your daughter.
If I have kill'd the issue of your womb,
To quicken your increase, I will beget
Mine issue of your blood upon your daughter:
A grandam's name is little less in love
Than is the doting title of a mother; 300
They are as children but one step below,
Even of your mettle, of your very blood;
Of all one pain, save for a night of groans
Endured of her, for whom you bid like sorrow.
Your children were vexation to your youth,
But mine shall be a comfort to your age.
The loss you have is but a son being king,
And by that loss your daughter is made queen.
I cannot make you what amends I would,
Therefore accept such kindness as I can.
Dorset your son, that with a fearful soul
Leads discontented steps in foreign soil,
This fair alliance quickly shall call home
To high promotions and great dignity:
The king, that calls thy beauteous daughter wife,
Familiarily shall call thy Dorset brother;
Again shall you be mother to a king,
And all the ruins of distressful times
Repair'd with double riches of content.

What! we have many goodly days to see:
The liquid drops of tears that you have shed Shall come again, transform'd to orient pearl, Advancing their loan with interest.
Of ten times double gain of happiness.
Go, then, my mother, to thy daughter go;
Make bold her rashful years with your experience
Prepare her ears to hear a wooer's tale;
Put in her tender heart the aspiring flame Of golden sovereignty; acquaint the princess With the sweet silent hours of marriage joys;
And when this arm of mine hath chastised
The petty rebel, dull-brain'd Buckingham,
Bound with triumphant garlands will I come
And lead thy daughter to a conqueror's bed;
To whom I will retain my conquest won,
And she shall be sole victress, Caesar's Caesar.
Q. Eliz. What were I best to say? her faithbrother
Would be her lord? or shall I say, her uncle? Or, he that slew her brothers and her uncles? Under what title shall I woo for thee,
That God, the law, my honour and her love,
Can be so pleasing to her tender years?
Q. Eliz. Which she shall purchase with lasting war.
K. Rich. Say that the king, which may command, entreats.
Q. Eliz. That at her hands which the king forbids.
K. Rich. Say, she shall be a high and mighty queen,
Q. Eliz. To wait the title, as her mother dier,
K. Rich. Say, I will love her everlastings.
Q. Eliz. But how long shall that title e' last?
Q. Eliz. But how long fairly shall her swift life last?
K. Rich. So long as heaven and man lengthens it.
Q. Eliz. So long as hell and Richard likes a sovereignty.
K. Rich. Say, I, her sovereign, am her subject love.
Q. Eliz. But she, your subject, loathes a sovereignty.
K. Rich. Be eloquent in my behalf to her.
Q. Eliz. An honest tale speeds best but plainly told.
K. Rich. Then in plain terms tell her loving tale.
Q. Eliz. Plain and not honest is too hard style.
K. Rich. Your reasons are too shallow and quick.
Q. Eliz. O no, my reasons are too deep dead;
Too deep and dead, poor infants, in their grave
K. Rich. Harp not on that string, mind changing their loan was past.
Q. Eliz. Harp on it still shall I till he strings break.
K. Rich. Now, by my George, my garter, my crown,—
Q. Eliz. Profaned, dishonour'd, and the usurp'd.

And you shall understand from me her mind.

K. Rich. Bear her my true love’s kiss; and so, farewell. [Exit Queen Elizabeth. 430

Relenting fool, and shallow, changing woman!

Enter RATCLIFF; CATESBY following.

How now! what news?

Rat. My gracious sovereign, on the western coast

Rideth a puissant navy: to the shore

Throng many doubtful hollow-hearted friends,

Unarm’d, and unresolved to beat them back:

’Tis thought that Richmond is their admiral;

And there they hull, expecting but the aid

Of Buckingham to welcome them ashore:

K. Rich. Some light-foot friend post to the Duke of Norfolk:

Ratcliff, thyself, or Catesby; where is he?

Cate. Here, my lord.

K. Rich. Fly to the duke: [To Ratcliff] Post

thou to Salisbury:

When thou comest thither,—[To Catesby] Dull,

 unmindful villain,

Why standst thou still, and go’st not to the duke?

Cate. First, mighty sovereign, let me know your mind,

What from your grace I shall deliver to him.

K. Rich. O, true, good Catesby: bid him levy straight

The greatest strength and power he can make,

And meet me presently at Salisbury.

Cate. I go.

Rat. What is’t your highness’ pleasure I shall do

At Salisbury?

K. Rich. Why, what wouldst thou do there before I go?

Rat. Your highness told me I should post

before.

K. Rich. My mind is changed, sir, my mind is changed.

Enter Lord STANLEY.

How now, what news with you?

Stan. None good, my lord, to please you with the hearing;

Nor none so bad, but it may well be told.

K. Rich. Hriday, a riddle I neither good nor bad!

Why dost thou run so many mile about,

When thou mayst tell thy tale a nearer way?

Once more, what news?

Stan. Richmond is on the seas.

K. Rich. There let him sink, and be the seas on him!

White-liver’d runagate, what doth he there?

Stan. I know not, mighty sovereign, but by guess.

K. Rich. Well, sir, as you guess, as you guess?

Stan. Stirr’d up by Dorset, Buckingham, and

Ely,

He makes for England, there to claim the crown.

K. Rich. Is the chair empty? is the sword unsway’d?

Is the king dead? the empire unpossess’d?

What heir of York is there alive but we?
And who is England's king but great York's heir?
Then, tell me, what doth he upon the sea?
Stan. Unless for that, my liege, I cannot guess.
K. Rich. Unless for that he comes to be your liege,
You cannot guess wherefore the Welshman comes.
Thou wilt revolt, and fly to him, I fear.
Stan. No, mighty liege; therefore mistrust me not.
K. Rich. Where is thy power, then, to bent him back?
Where are thy tenants and thy followers?
Are they not now upon the western shore,
Safe-conduing the rebels from their ships?
Stan. No, my good lord, my friends are in the north.
K. Rich. Cold friends to Richard: what do they in the north,
When they should serve their sovereign in the west?
Stan. They have not been commanded, mighty sovereign:
Please it your majesty to give me leave,
I'll muster up my friends, and meet your grace
Where and what time your majesty shall please.
K. Rich. Ay, ay, thou wouldst be gone to join with Richmond:
I will not trust you, sir.
Stan. Most mighty sovereign,
You have no cause to hold my friendship doubtful:
I never was nor never will be false.
K. Rich. Well,
Go muster men; but, hear you, leave behind
Your son, George Stanley: look your faith be firm,
Or else his head's assurance is but frail.
Stan. So deal with him as I prove true to you.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. My gracious sovereign, now in Devonshire,
As I by friends am well advertised,
Sir Edward Courtayne, and the haughty prelate
Bishop of Exeter, his brother there,
With many me confederates, are in arms;

Enter another Messenger.

Sec. Mess. My liege, in Kent the Guildfords are in arms;
And every hour more competitors
Flock to their aid, and still their power increaseth.

Enter another Messenger.

Third Mess. My lord, the army of the Duke of Buckingham—
K. Rich. Out on you, owls! nothing but songs of death?
[He striketh him.
Take that, until thou bring me better news.

Third Mess. The news I have to tell your majesty
Is, that by sudden floods and fall of waters,
Buckingham's army is dispersed and scatter'd;
And he himself wander'd away alone,
No man knows whither.
K. Rich. I cry thee mercy;
There is my purse to cure that blow of thine.
Hath any well-advised friend proclaim'd
Reward to him that brings the traitor in?

Third Mess. Such proclamation hath made, my liege.

Enter another Messenger.

Fourth Mess. Sir Thomas Lovel and Marquis Dorset,
'Tis said, my liege, in Yorkshire are in arms.
Yet this good comfort bring I to your grace:
The Breton navy is dispersed by tempest:
Richmond, in Dorsetshire, sent out a boat
Unto the shore, to ask those on the banks
If they were his assistants, yea or no;
Who answer'd him, they came from Buckinham
Upon his party: he, mistrusting them,
Housed sail and made away for Brittany.
K. Rich. March on, march on, since up in arms;
If not to fight with foreign enemies,
Yet to beat down these rebels here at home.

Re-enter Catesby.

Cate. My liege, the Duke of Bucking taken:
That is the best news: that the Earl of Ric
Is with a mighty power landed at Milford,
Is colder tidings, yet they must be told.
K. Rich. Away towards Salisbury! with reason here,
A royal battle might be won and lost:
Some one take order Buckingham be brou
To Salisbury; the rest march on with me.

Flourish. Exit.

Scene V. Lord Derby's house.

Enter Derby and Sir Christopher Up

If I revolt, off goes young George's head
The fear of that withstands my present aid

Sir Gilbert Talbot, Sir William Stanley;
Oxford, redoubled Pembroke, Sir James
And Rice ap Thomas, with a valiant crew
And many me of noble name and worth:
And towards London they do bend their c
If by the way they be not fought withal.
Der. Return unto thy lord; commend him t

He shall espouse Elizabeth her daughter.
These letters will resolve him of my mind.

Act V.

Scene I. Salisbury. An open place.

Enter the Sheriff, and BUCKINGHAM, w
bers, led to execution.

Buck. Will not King Richard let me w with him?
Sher. No, my good lord; therefore he

[Exeunt.

Scene III. Bosworth Field.

Enter King Richard in arms, with Norfolk, the Earl of Surrey, and others.

K. Rich. Here pitch our tents, even here in Bosworth field. My Lord of Surrey, why look you so sad? Swr. My heart is ten times lighter than my looks.

K. Rich. My Lord of Norfolk,- Nor. Here, most gracious liege.

K. Rich. Norfolk, we must have knocks; ha! must we not?

Nor. We must both give and take, my gracious lord.

K. Rich. Up with my tent there! here will I lie to-night;

But where to-morrow? Well, all's one for that. Who hath described the number of the foe?

K. Rich. Why, our battalion trobles that account:

Besides, the king's name is a tower of strength, Which they upon the adverse party want.

Up with your tent there! Valiant gentlemen, Let us survey the vantage of the field; Call for some men of sound direction:

Let's want no discipline, make no delay;

For, lords, to-morrow is a busy day. [Exeunt.

Enter, on the other side of the field, Richmond, Sir William Brandon, Oxford, and others. Some of the Soldiers pitch Richmond's tent.

Richm. The weary sun hath made a golden set, And, by the bright track of his fiery car, Gives signal of a goodly day to-morrow. Sir William Brandon, you shall bear my standard. Give me some ink and paper in my tent: I'll draw the form and model of our battle, Limit each leader to his several charge, And part in just proportion our small strength. My Lord of Oxford, you, Sir William Brandon, And you, Sir Walter Herbert, stay with me. The Earl of Pembroke keeps his regiment:

Good Captain Blunt, bear my good-night to him, And by the second hour in the morning

Desire the earl to see me in my tent:

Yet one thing more, good Blunt, before you go'st. Where is Lord Stanley quarter'd, dost thou know? Blunt. Unless I have mista'en his colours much,

Which well I am assured I have not done, His regiment lies half a mile at least

South from the mighty power of the king.

Richm. If without peril it be possible, Good captain Blunt, bear my good-night to him, And give him from me this most needful scroll.

Blunt. Upon my life, my lord, I'll undertake it;

And so, God give you quiet rest to-night!

Richm. Good night, good Captain Blunt. Come, gentlemen, Let us consult upon to-morrow's business: In to our tent; the air is raw and cold.

[They withdraw into the tent.

And another thing must be attended.

Richm. What is it, my lord? Blunt. The reason is, after a great battle, the credit of the victors is augmented by the number of the dead. The Earl of Pembroke, who is a very valiant and brave man, would give his name to forty of our slain. I must deliver him this. [Exeunt.]
Enter, to his tent, King Richard, Norfolk, Ratcliff, Catesby, and others.

K. Rich. What is 't o'clock?
Cate. It's supper-time, my lord;
It's nine o'clock.
K. Rich. I will not sup to-night.
Give me some ink and paper.
What, is my beaver easier than it was?
And all my armour laid into my tent?
Cate. It is, my liege; and all things are in readiness.
K. Rich. Good Norfolk, hie thee to thy charge:
Use careful watch, choose trusty sentinels.
Nor. I go, my lord.
K. Rich. Stir with the lark to-morrow, gentle Norfolk.
Nor. I warrant you, my lord. [Exit.
K. Rich. Catesby!
Cate. My lord?
K. Rich. Send out a pursuivant at arms
To Stanley's regiment; bid him bring his power
Before sunrising, lest his son George fall
Into the blind cave of eternal night.
[Exit Catesby.

F'ill me a bowl of wine. Give me a watch.
Saddle white Surrey for the field to-morrow.
Look that my staves be sound, and not too heavy.
Ratcliff!

Rat. My lord?
K. Rich. Saw'st thou the melancholy Lord Northumberland?
Rat. Thomas the Earl of Surrey, and himself,
Much about cock-shut-time, from troop to troop 70
Went through the army, cheering up the soldiers.
K. Rich. So, I am satisfied. Give me a bowl of wine:
I have not that alacrity of spirit,
Nor cheer of mind, that I was wont to have.
Set it down. Is ink and paper ready?
Rat. It is, my lord.
K. Rich. Bid my guard watch; leave me.
Ratcliff, about the mid of night come to my tent
And help to arm me. Leave me, I say.
[Exeunt Ratcliff and the Other Attendants.

Enter Derby to Richmond in his tent, Lords and others attending.

Der. Fortune and victory sit on thy helm!
Richm. All comfort that the dark night can afford
Be to thy person, noble father-in-law!
Tell me, how fares our loving mother?
Der. I, by attorney, bless thee from thy mother,
Who prays continually for Richmond's good:
So much for that. The silent hours steal on,
And flaky darkness breaks within the east.
In brief,—for so the season bids us be,— Prepare thy battle early in the morning,
And put thy fortune to the arbitrement
Of bloody strokes and mortal-staring war.
I, as I may—that which I would not cannot,—
With best advantage will deceive the time,
And all thee in this doubtful shock of arms:
But on thy side I may not be too forward,
Lest, being seen, thy brother, tender George,
Be executed in his father's sight.

Farewell: the leisure and the fearful time
Cuts off the ceremonious vows of love
And ample interchange of sweet discourse.
Who long sunder'd friends should dwae
God give us leisure for these rites of love!
Once more, adieu: be valiant, and speed Richm. Good lords, conduct him to ment;
I'll strive, with troubled thoughts, to take

Ghost of V. [To Richard] This Vaughan, and, with guilty fear,
I am a villain: yet I lie, I am not. Fool, of thyself speak well: fool, do not flatter. My conscience hath a thousand several tongues, And every tongue brings in a several tale, And every tale condemns me for a villain. Perjury, perjury, in the high'st degree; Murder, stern murder, in the direst degree; All several sins, all used in each degree, Throng to the bar, crying all, Guilty! guilty! I shall despair. There is no creature loves me; And if I die, no soul shall pity me: Nay, wherefore should they, since that I myself Find in myself no pity to myself? Methought the souls of all that I had murder'd Came to my tent; and every one did threat To-morrow's vengeance on the head of Richard.

Enter Ratcliff.

Rat. My lord! K. Rich. 'Zounds! who is there? Rat. Ratcliff, my lord; 'tis I. The early village-cock Hath twice done solutution to the morn; Your friends are up, and buckle on their armour. K. Rich. O Ratcliff, I have dream'd a fearful dream! What think'st thou, will our friends prove all true? Rat. No doubt, my lord. K. Rich. O Ratcliff, I fear, I fear,— Rat. Nay, good my lord, be not afraid of shadows. K. Rich. By the apostle Paul, shadows to-night Have struck more terror to the soul of Richard Than can the substance of ten thousand soldiers Armed in proof, and led by shallow Richmond. It is not yet near day. Come, go with me; Under our tents I'll play the caves-dropper, To see if any mean to shrink from me. [Exeunt.

Enter the Lords to Richmond, sitting in his tent.

Lords. Good morrow, Richmond! Richm. Cry mercy, lords and watchful gentle- men, That you have ta'en a tardy sguard here. Lords. How have you slept, my lord? Richm. The sweetest sleep, and fairest-boding dreams That ever enter'd in a drowsy head, Have since your departure had, my lords. Methought their souls, whose bodies Richard murder'd, Came to my tent, and cried on victory: I promise you, my soul is very jocund In the remembrance of so fair a dream. How far into the morning is it, lords? Lords. Upon the stroke of four. Richm. Why, then 'tis time to arm and give direction.

His oration to his soldiers.

More than I have said, loving countrymen, The leisure and enforcement of the time Forbids to dwell upon: yet remember this, God and our good cause fight upon our side: The prayers of holy saints and wronged souls, Like high-rear'd bulwarks, stand before our faces:
Richard except, those whom we fight against
Had rather have us win than they him follow:
For what is he they follow? truly, gentlemen,
A bloody tyrant and a homicide;
Our raised in blood, and one in blood establish'd;
One that made means to come by what he hath,
And slaughter'd those that were the means to help him;
A base foul stone, made precious by the foil
Of England's chair, where he is falsely set;
One that hath ever been God's enemy:
Then, if you fight against God's enemy,
God will in justice ward you as his soldiers;
If you do sweat to put a tyrant down,
You sleep in peace, the tyrant being slain;
If you do fight against your country's foes,
your country's fat shall pay your pains the hire;
If you do fight in safeguard of your wives,
your wives shall welcome home the conquerors;
If you do free your children from the sword, your children's children quit it in your age.
Then, in the name of God and all these rights,
Advance your standards, draw your willing swords.
For me, the ransom of my bold attempt
Shall be this cold corpse on the earth's cold face;
But if I thrive, the gain of my attempt
The least of you shall share his part thereof.
Sound drums and trumpets boldly and cheerfully:
God and Saint George! Richmond and victory! [Exeunt. 270]

Re-enter King Richard, Ratcliff, Attendants and Forces.

K. Rich. What said Northumberland as touching Richard?
Rat. That he was never trained up in arms.
K. Rich. He said the truth: and what said Surrey then?
Rat. He smiled and said 'The better for our purpose.'
K. Rich. He was in the right; and so indeed it is. [Clock strikes.]
Tell the clock there. Give me a calendar.
Who saw the sun to-day?
Rat. Not I, my lord.
K. Rich. Then he disdains to shine; for by the book
He should have braved the east an hour ago:
A black day will it be to somebody. 280
Ratcliff!

Rat. My lord?
K. Rich. The sun will not be seen to-day;
The sky doth frown and lour upon our army.
I would these dewy tears were from the ground.
Not shine to-day! Why, what is that to me
More than to Richard? for the selfsame heaven
That frowns on me looks sadly upon him.

Enter Norfolk.

Nor. Arm, arm, my lord; the foe vaunts in the field.
K. Rich. Come, bustle, bustle; caparison my horse.
Call up Lord Stanley, bid him bring his power:
I will lead forth my soldiers to the plain,
And thus my battle shall be ordered:

My foreward shall be drawn out all in length,
Consisting equally of horse and foot;
Our archers shall be placed in the midst:
John Duke of Norfolk, Thomas Earl of St.
Shall have the leading of this foot and horse
They thus directed, we will follow
In the main battle, whose puissiance on

Shall be well winged with our chiefest honor,
This, and Saint George to boot! What thinkst thou, Norfolk?

Nor. A good direction, warlike sovereign.

What shall I say more than I have invent

A sum of Bretons, and base lackey peasa
Whom their o'er-cloved country vomits woe

They would restrain the one, distain the other
And who doth lead them but a paltry fellow
Long kept in Bretagne at our mother's coasts
A milk-sop, one that never in his life
Felt so much cold as over shoes in snow?
Let's whip these stragglers o'er the seas;
Lash hence these overweening rags of men,
These famish'd beggars, weary of their food
Who, but for dreaming on this fond exp dislike
For want of means, poor rats, had hang'd

Richm. Great God of heaven, say Amen to all!
But, tell me, is young George Stanley living?
Der. He is, my lord, and safe in Leicester town:
Whither, if it please you, we may now withdraw us.

Richm. What men of name are slain on either side?

Der. John Duke of Norfolk, Walter Lord
Ferrers,
Sir Robert Brakenbury, and Sir William Brandon.
Richm. Inter their bodies as becomes their births:
Proclaim a pardon to the soldiers fled
That in submission will return to us:
And then, as we have ta'en the sacrament,
We will unite the white rose and the red:
Smile heaven upon this fair conjunction,
That long have frown'd upon their enmity!
What traitor hears me, and says not amen?
England hath long been mad, and scar'd herself;
The brother blindly shed the brother's blood,
The father rashly slaughter'd his own son,
The son, compell'd, been butcher to the sire:
All this divided York and Lancaster,
Divided in their dire division.
O, now, let Richmond and Elizabeth,
The true succeeders of each royal house,
By God's fair ordinance conjoin together!
And let their heirs, God, if thy will be so,
Enrich the time to come with smooth-faced
peace,
With smiling plenty and fair prosperous days!
Abate the edge of traitors, gracious Lord,
That would reduce these bloody days again,
And make poor England weep in streams of blood!

Let them not live to taste this land's increase
That would with treason wound this fair land's
peace!

Now civil wounds are stopp'd, peace lives again:
That she may long live here, God say amen!

[Exeunt.

THE PROLOGUE.

I come no more to make you laugh: things now,
That bear a weighty and a serious brow,
Sad, high, and working, full of state and woe,
Such noble scenes as draw the eye to flow,
We now present. Those that can pity, here
May, if they think it well, let fall a tear;
The subject will deserve it. Such as give Their money out of hope they may believe,
May here find truth too. Those that come to see
Only a show of two, and so agree
The play may pass, if they be still and willing,
I'll undertake may see away their shilling Richly in two short hours. Only they
That come to hear a merry bawdy play,
A noise of targets, or to see a fellow
In a long motley coat guarded with yellow,
Will be deceived; for, gentle hearers, know,
To rank our chosen truth with such a show
As fool and fight is, beside forfeiting
Our own brains, and the opinion that we bring,
To make that only true we now intend,
Will leave us never an understanding friend.
Therefore, for goodness sake, and as you are known
The first and happiest hearers of the town,
Be sad, as we would make ye: think ye see
The very persons of our noble story
As they were living; think you see them great,
And follow'd with the general throng and sweat
Of thousand friends; then in a moment, see
How soon this mightiness meets misery
And, if you can be merry then, I'll say
A man may weep upon his wedding-day.

...Wol. The Duke of Buckingham's surveyor, ha? 136...Where's his examination? 137...
...First Secr. Here, so please you. 138...
...Wol. Is he in person ready? 139...
...First Secr. Ay, please your grace. 140...
...Wol. Well, we shall then know more; and Buckingham Shall lessen this big look. 141...

...Buck. This butcher's cur is venom-mouth'd, 143...and I 144...
...Have not the power to muzzle him; therefore best 145...Not wake him in his slumber. A beggar's book
Outworths a noble's blood.
Nor. What, are you chafed?
Ask God for temperance; that's the appliance only
Which your disease requires.
Buck. I read in's looks
Matter against me; and his eye reviled
Me, as his object: at this instant
He bores me with some trick: he's gone to the king;
I'll follow and outstare him.
Nor. Stay, my lord,
And let your reason with your choleric question
What 'tis you go about: to climb steep hills
Requires slow pace at first: anger is like
A full-hot horse, who being allow'd his way,
Self-mettle tires him. Not a man in England
Can advise me like you: be to yourself
As you would to your friend.
Buck. I'll to the king:
And from a mouth of honour quite cry down
This Ipswich fellow's insolence; or proclaim
There's difference in no persons.
Nor. Be advised;
Heat not a furnace for your foe so hot: That it do singe yourself: we may outrun,
By violent swiftness, that which we run at,
And lose by over-running. Know you not,
The fire that mounts the liquor till 'twixt run o'er,
In seeming to augment it wastes it? Be advised:
I say again, there is no English soul
More stronger to direct you than yourself,
If with the sap of reason you would quench,
Or but allay, the fire of passion.
Sir, I am thankful to you; and I'll go along
By your prescription: but this top-proud fellow, Whom from the flow of gall I name not but
From sincere motions, by intelligence,
And proofs as clear as points in July when
We see each grain of gravel, I do know
To be corrupt and treasonous.
Nor. Say not 'treasonous.'
Buck. To the king I'll say't; and make my vouch as strong
As shore of rock. Attend. This holy fox,
Or wolf, or both,—for he is equal ravenous
As he is subtle, and as prone to mischief
As able to perform't; his mind and place
Infesting one another, yea, reciprocally—
Only to show his pomp as well in France
As here at home, suggests the king our master
To this last costly treaty, the interview,
That swollen'd so much treasure, and like a glass
Did break i' the rinsing.
Nor. Pray, give me favour, sir. This cunning cardinal
The articles o' the combination drew
As himself pleased: and they were ratified
As he cried 'Thus let be': to as much end
As give a crutch to the dead: but our count-cardinal
Has done this, and 'tis well; for worthy Wolsey,
Who cannot err, he did it. Now this follows,—
Which, as I take it, is a kind of puppy
To the old dam, treason,—Charles the emperor,
Under pretence to see the queen his aunt,—
For 'twas indeed his colour, but he came
To whisper Wolsey,—here makes visitation
His fears were, that the intent betwixt
England and France might, through their own
Breed him some prejudice; for from this line
Peep'd harms that menaced him: he privately
Deals with our cardinal; and, as I trow,—
Which I do well; for I am sure the emperor
Paid ere he promised; whereby his suit was great.
Ere it was ask'd; but when the way was made
And paved with gold, the emperor thus des'd
That he would please to alter the king's coo,
And break the foresaid peace. Let the king
As soon he shall by me, that thus the cardin
Does buy and sell his honour as he pleases,
And for his own advantage.
Nor. I am sorry,
To hear of this him; and could wish he we Something mistaken in't.
Buck. No, not a syllable
I do pronounce him in that very shape
He shall appear in proof.
Enter BRANDON, a Sergeant-at-arms before and two or three of the Guard.
Bran. Your office, sergeant; execute it
Serg. My lord the Duke of Buckingham, and E.
Of Hereford, Stafford, and Northampton,
 Arrest thee of high treason, in the name
Of our most sovereign king.
Buck. Lo, you, my lord,
The net has fall'n upon me! I shall perish
Under device and practice.

Bran. To see you ta'en from liberty, to look on
The business present: 'tis his highness' pl
You shall to the Tower.
Buck. It will help me not To plead mine innocence; for that dye is
Which makes my whitest part black.

Buck. Be done in this and all things! I obey,
O my Lord Abergavenny, fare you well!
Bran. Nay, he must bear you company,

Buck. Is pleased you shall to the Tower, till you

Buck. As the duke

The king to attach Lord Montacute; bodies

KING HENRY VIII.

KING.

Kath. Nay, we must longer kneel: I am a suitor.

Kath. I am solicited, not by a few, but by the contrary true condition, that your subjects' great grievance: there have been commissions lawn among 'em, which hath flaw'd the cart their royalities: wherein, although ed lord cardinal, they vent reproaches on the king our master—honour heaven shield from soil!—even he nge unmannerly, yea, such which breaks les of loyalty, and almost appears rebellion.

Not almost appears, appear; for, upon these taxation, others all, not able to maintain any to them longing, have put off nisters, carders, fullers, weavers, who, in other life, compelled by hunger of other means, in desperate manner

the event to the teeth, are all in uproar,

Taxation!

and what taxation? My lord cardinal, we are blamed for it alike with us.

of this taxation?

Please you, sir, but of a single part, in aught

the state; and front but in that file others tell steps with me.

No, my lord,

You know no more than others; but you frame

Things that are known alike; which are not

To those which would not know them, and yet

Whereof my sovereign would have noted; they are most pestilent to the hearing; and, to bear 'em,

the back is sacrifice to the load. They say

They are devised by you; or else you suffer

Too hard an exclamation.

Kath. Still exaction!

Kath. The nature of it? in what kind, let's know,

Is this exaction?

Q. Kath. I am much too venturous in tempting of your patience; but am bolden'd under your promised pardon. The subjects' grief

Comes through commissions, which compel from each

The sixth part of his substance, to be levied

Without delay; and the pretence for this mouths:

Allegiance in them; their curses now

Live where their prayers did: and it's come to pass,

This tractable obedience is a slave

To each incensed will. I would your highness

Would give it quick consideration, for

There is no primer business.

King. By my life,

This is against our pleasure.

Wol. And for me,

I have no further gone in this than by

A single voice; and that not pass'd me but

By learned approbation of the judges. If I am

Traded by ignorant tongues, which neither

know

My faculties nor person, yet will be

The chronicles of my doing, let me say

'Tis but the fate of place, and the rough brake

That virtue must go through. We must not stint

Our necessary actions, in the fear

To cope malicious censurers; which ever,

As ravenous fishes, do a vessel follow

That is new-trimm'd, but benefit no further

Than vainly longing. What we oft do best,

By sick interpreters, once weak ones, is

Not ours, or not allow'd; what worst, as oft,

Hitting a grosser quality, is cried up

For our best act. If we shall stand still,

In fear our motion will be mock'd or carp'd at,

We should take root here where we sit, or sit

State-statues only.

King. Things done well,

And with a care, exempt themselves from fear;

Things done without example, in their issue

Are to be fear'd. Have you a precedent

Of this commission? I believe, not any,

We must not rend our subjects from our laws,

And stick them in our will. Sixth part of each? A trembling contribution! Why, we take

From every tree lop, bark, and part o' the timber:

And, though we leave it with a root, thus hack'd,

The air will drink the sap. To every county
Where this is question’d send our letters, with Free pardon to each man that has denied
The force of this commission: pray, look to’t;
I put it to your care.

Wol. A word with you. [To the Secretary.

Let there be letters writ to every shire,
Of the king’s grace and pardon. The grieved commons
Hardly conceive of me; let it be noised
That through our intercession this revokement
And pardon comes: I shall anon advise you
Further in the proceeding. [Exit Secretary.

Enter Surveyor.

Q. Kath. I am sorry that the Duke of Buckingham
Is run in your displeasure.

King. It grieves many: The gentleman is learn’d, and a most rare speaker;
To nature none more bound; his training such,
That he may furnish and instruct great teachers,
And never seek for aid out of himself. Yet see,
When these so noble benefits shall prove
Not well disposed, the mind growing once corrupt,
They turn to vicious forms, ten times more ugly
Than ever they were fair. This man so complete,
Who was enroll’d ’mongst wonders, and when we,
Almost with ravish’d listening, could not find 120
His hour of speech a minute; he, my lady,
Hath into monstrous habits put the graces
That once were his, and is become as black
As if besmeard in hell. Sit by us; you shall hear—
This was his gentleman in trust—of him
Things to strike honour sad. Bid him recount
The fore-recited practices; whereby
We cannot feel too little, hear too much.

Wol. Stand forth, and with bold spirit relate what you,
Most like a careful subject, have collected
Out of the Duke of Buckingham.

King. Speak freely.
Surv. First, it was usual with him, every day
It would infect his speech, that if the king
Should without issue die, he’ll carry it so
To make the sceptre his: these very words
I’ve heard him utter to his son-in-law,
Lord Abergavenny; to whom by oath he menaced
Revenge upon the cardinal.

Wol. Please your highness, note
This dangerous conception in this point.
Not befriended by his wish, to your high person
His will is most malignant; and it stretches
Beyond you, to your friends.

Q. Kath. My learn’d lord cardinal,
Deliver all with charity.

King. Speak on:
How ground’d he his title to the crown,
Upon our fall? to this point hast thou heard him
At any time speak aught?

Surv. He was brought to this
By a vain prophecy of Nicholas Hopkins.

King. What was that Hopkins?
Surv. Sir, a Chartreux friar,
His confessor; who fed him every minute
With words of sovereignty.

King. How know’st thou this?
Surv. Not long before your highness is
The duke being at the Rose, within the park
Saint Lawrence Poultney, did of me declare
What was the speech among the Londoners
Concerning the French journey: I replied,
Men fear’d the French would prove pernicious
To the king’s danger. Presently the duke
Said, ’twas the fear, indeed; and that he do
I’would prove the verity of certain words Spoke by a holy monk; ’that oft,’ says he,
’Hath sent to me, wishing me to permit
John de la Car, my chaplain, a choice hour
To hear from him a matter of some moment
Whom after under the confession’s seal
He solemnly had sworn, that what he spoke
My chaplain to no creature living, but
To me, should utter, with demure considerance
This pauseingly ensued: Neither the king himself,
Tell you the duke, shall prosper: bid him
To gain the love o’ the commonality: the duke
Will swear in England.

Q. Kath. If I know you well,
You were the duke’s surveyor, and lost
office
On the complaint o’ the tenants: take good
You charge not in your spleen a noble man
And spoil your nobler soul: I say, take he Yes, heartily beseech you.

King. Let him on.

Go forward.
Surv. On my soul, I’ll speak but truth.
I told my lord the duke, by the devil’s ill
The monck might be deceiv’d; and that
To ruminate on this so far, until
It forged him some design, which, being be
It was much like to do: he answer’d, ’Tis granted,
It can do me no damage;’ adding further,
That, had the king in his last sickness fail
The cardinal’s and Sir Thomas Lovell’s his Should have gone off.

King. Ha! what, so rank?
Surv. There’s mischief in this man: canst thou further?
Surv. I can, my liege.

King. Proceed.
Surv. Being at Grey
After your highness had reproved the duke
About Sir William Blomer,—

King. I remember
Of such a time: being my sworn servant,
The duke retain’d him. But on
hence?
Surv. ’If,’ quoth he, ’I for this he committed,
As, to the Tower, I thought, I would have
The part my father meant to act upon.
The usurper Richard; who, being at Saltly Made suit to come in ‘s presence; we
As he made semblance of his duty, would Have put his knife into him.’

King. A giant traitor?
Wol. Now, madam, may hishighness freedom,
And this man out of prison?
God mend all!

There's something more would out of thee; what say'st thou?

After 'the duke his father,' with 'the knife,' rech'd him, and, with one hand on his lager,

spread on 's breast, mounting his eyes,

l'd discharge a horrible oath; whose tenour

—were he evil used, he would outgo ther by as much as a performance in irresolute purpose.

There's his period,

athe his knife in us. He is attach'd; to present trial: if he may mercy in the law, 'tis his; if none, not seek 't of us: by day and night,

aitor

lercy

[Exeunt.

III. An antechamber in the palace.

r the Lord Chamberlain and Lord Sands.

Ah, is't possible the spells of France could juggle

to such strange mysteries?

New customs,

they be never so ridiculous,

'tem be unmanly, yet are follow'd.

As far as I see, all the good our english

by the late voyage is but merely

r two o' the face; but they are shrewd es.

Then they hold 'em, you would swear

fely

very noses had been consoulers or Clotharius, they keep state so. to

a. They have all new legs, and lame es: one would take it,

ver saw 'em pace before, the spavin halt reg'd among 'em.

Death! my lord,

othes are after such a pagan cut too,

ire, they've worn out Christendon.

Enter Sir Thomas Lovell.

How now!

was, Sir Thomas Lovell?

Faith, my lord,

none, but the new proclamation

app'd upon the court-gate.

What is't for?

The reformation of our travell'd gallants,

the court with quarrels, talk, and ors.

I'm glad 'tis there: now I would y our monsieurs

an English courtier may be wise, er see the Louvre.

They must either,

in the conditions, leave those remnants

nd feather that they got in France, their honourable points of ignorance

thereunto, as fights and fireworks, better men than they can be,

foreign wisdom, renouncing clean

they have in tennis, and tall stockings,

Short blister'd breeches, and those types of travel,

And understand again like honest men;

Or pack to their old playfellows: there, I take it,

They may, 'cum privilegio,' wear away

The lag end of their lewdness and be laugh'd at.

Sands. 'Tis time to give 'em physic, their diseases

Are grown so catching.

Cham.

What a loss our ladies

Will have of these trim vanities!

Lov.

Ay, marry,

There will be woe indeed, lords: the sly shore-

sons

Have got a speeding trick to lay down ladies;

A French song and a fiddle has no fellow.

Sands. The devil fiddle 'em! I am glad they are going.

For, sure, there's no converting of 'em: now

An honest country lord, as I am, beaten

A long time out of play, may bring his plain-song

And have an hour of hearing; and, by'r lady,

Held current music too.

Cham. Well said, Lord Sands;

Your colt's tooth is not cast yet.

Sands. No, my lord;

Nor shall not, while I have a stump.

Cham. Sir Thomas,

Whither were you a-going?

Lov. To the cardinal's:

Your lordship is a guest too.

Cham. O, 'tis true:

This night he makes a supper, and a great one,

To many lords and ladies; there will be

The beauty of this kingdom, I'll assure you.

Lov. That churchman bears a bounteous mind

indeed,

A hand as fruitful as the land that feeds us;

His dews fall everywhere.

Cham. No doubt he's noble;

He had a black mouth that said other of him.

Sands. He may, my lord; has wherewithal:

in him

Sparing would show a worse sin than ill doctrine:

Men of his way should be most liberal;

They are set here for examples.

Cham. True, they are so:

But few now give so great ones. My barge stays;

Your lordship shall along. Come, good Sir

Thomas,

We shall be late else; which I would not be,

For I was spoke to, with Sir Henry Guildford

This night to be comptrollers.

Sands. I am your lordship's. [Exeunt.

Scene IV. A Hall in York Place.

Hautboys. A small table under a state for the Cardinal, a longer table for the guests.

Then enter Anne Bullen and divers other

Ladies and Gentlemen as guests, at one door; at another door, enter Sir Henry Guildford.

Guild. Ladies, a general welcome from his grace

Salutes ye all; this night he dedicates

To fair content and you: none here, he hopes,
In all this noble bevy, has brought with her One care abroad; he would have all as merry As, first, good company, good wine, good welcome, Can make good people. O, my lord, you're tardy:

Enter Lord Chamberlain, Lord Sands, and Sir Thomas Lovell.

The very thought of this fair company Clapp'd wings to me. Chamberlain. You are young, Sir Harry Guildford. Sands. Sir Thomas Lovell, had the cardinal 10 But half my lay thoughts in him, some of these Should find a running banquet ere they rested, I think would better please 'em: by my life, They are a sweet society of fair ones.

Lov. O, that your lordship were but now con-fessor To one or two of these! I would I were;

They should find easy penance.

Lov. Faith, how easy? Sands. As easy as a down-bed would afford it. Chamberlain. Sweet ladies, will it please you sit? Sir Harry, 19 Place you that side; I'll take the charge of this: His grace is entering. Nay, you must not freeze; Two women placed together makes cold weather: My Lord Sands, you are one will keep 'em waking; Pray, sit between these ladies.

Sands. By my faith, And thank your lordship. By your leave, sweet ladies: If I chance to talk a little wild, forgive me; I had it from my father. Anne. Was he mad, sir? Sands. O, very mad, exceeding mad, in love too: But he would bite none; just as I do now, He would kiss you twenty with a breath. [Kisses her.

Chamberlain. Well said, my lord. 39 So, now you're fairly seated. Gentlemen, The penance lies on you, if these fair ladies Pass away frowning. Sands. For my little cure, Let me alone.

Hautboys. Enter Cardinal Wolsey, and takes his state.

Wol. You're welcome, my fair guests: that noble lady, Or gentleman, that is not freely merry, Is not my friend: this, to confirm my welcome; And to you all, good health. [Drinks.

Sands. Your grace is noble: Let me have such a bowl may hold my thanks, And save me so much talking.

Wol. My Lord Sands, 40 I am beholding to you: cheer your neighbours. Ladies, you are not merry: gentlemen, Whose fault is this?

Sands. The red wine first must rise In their fair cheeks, my lord; then we shall have 'em Talk us to silence.

Anne. You are a merry gamester,

Sands. Yes, if I make my play. Here's to your ladyship: and pledge it, man. For 'tis to such a thing,— Anne. You cannot show us Sands. I told your grace they would talk a [Drum and trumpet, chamberlins discon. Wol. What's Chamberlain. Look out there, some of ye. [Exit Ser. Wol. What warfare will come To what end, is this? Nay, ladies, fear By all the laws of war you're privileged.

Re-enter Ser- vant.

Chamberlain. How now! what is't? Ser- vant. A noble troop of strangers For so they seem: they've left their barges landed; And hither make, as great ambassadors From foreign princes.

Wol. Good lord chamberlain Go, give 'em welcome; you can speak the French tongue; And, pray, receive 'em nobly, and conduct 'em Into our presence, where this heaven of his Shall shine at full upon them. Some attendant [Exit Chamberlain, attended. Alot and tables round You have now a broken banquet; but mend it. A good digestion to you all: and once more I shower a welcome on ye; welcome all.

Hautboys. Enter the King and other masquers, habitted like shepherds, under the Lord Chamberlain. They pass in before the Cardinal, and gracefully him.

A noble company! what are their pleasures Chamberlain. Because they speak no English they pray'd To show their grace, that, having heard by Of this so noble and so fair assembly This night to meet here, they could do no Out of the great respect they bear to beauty But leave their flocks; and, under your father, Crave leave to view these ladies and entertain An hour of revels with 'em.

Wol. Say, lord chamberlain They have done my poor house grace; for I pay 'em A thousand thanks, and pray 'em take pleasures. [They choose Ladies for the dance King chooses Anne. [Music.

Wol. My lord! King. The fairest hand I ever touch’d beauty, Till now I never knew thee! [Music. Wol. My lord! Chamberlain. Your grace? Wol. Pray, tell 'em thus much: There should be one amongst 'em, by his More worthy this place than myself; to whom If I but knew him, with my love and duty I would surrender it. Chamberlain. I will, my lord. [Whispers the Musician. Wol. What say they?
ACT II.

Enter two Gentlemen, meeting.

Gent. Whither away so fast?

Gent. The hall, to hear what shall become great Duke of Buckingham.

Gent. I'll save you both, sir. All's now done, but the ceremony going back the prisoner.

Gent. Were you there?

Gent. Yes; indeed, was I.

Gent. Pray, speak what has happen'd.

Gent. You may guess quickly what.

Gent. Is he found guilty?

Gent. Yes, truly is he; and condemn'd on't.

Gent. I am sorry for't.

Gent. So are a number more.

Gent. But, pray, how pass'd it?

Gent. I'll tell you in a little. The great He pleaded still not guilty and alleged Many sharp reasons to defeat the law. The king's attorney on the contrary Urged on the examinations, proofs, confessions Of divers witnesses; which the duke desired To have brought vivâ voce to his face: At which appear'd against him his surveyor; Sir Gilbert Peck his chancellor; and John Car, Confessor to him; with that devil-mock, 21 Hopkins, that made this mischief.

Sec. Gent. That was he That fed him with his prophecies?

First Gent. The same.

All these accused him strongly; which he fain Would have flung from him, but, indeed, he could not: And so his peers, upon this evidence, Have found him guilty of high treason. Much He spoke, and learnedly, for life; but all Was either pitied in him or forgotten.

Sec. Gent. After all this, how did he bear himself? 30

First Gent. When he was brought again to the bar, to hear His knell rung out, his judgement, he was stirr'd With such an agony, he sweat extremely, And something spoke in choler, ill, and hasty: But he fell to himself again, and sweetly In all the rest show'd a most noble patience.

Sec. Gent. I do not think he fears death.

First Gent. Sure, he does not:

He never was so womanish; the cause He may a little grieve at.

Sec. Gent. Certainly

The cardinal is the end of this.

First Gent. 'Tis likely, 40

By all conjectures: first, Kildare's attainer, Then deputy of Ireland; who removed, Earl Surrey was sent thither, and in haste too, Last he should help his father.

Sec. Gent. That trick of state Was a deep envious one.

First Gent. At his return No doubt he will require it. This is noted, And generally, whoever the king favours, The cardinal instantly will find employment, And far enough from court too.

Sec. Gent. All the commons Hate him perniciously, and, of my conscience, 50 Wish him ten fathom deep: this duke as much They love and dote on; call him bounteous Buckingham.

The mirror of all courtesy:

First Gent. Stay there, sir, And see the noble ruin'd man you speak of.

Enter Buckingham from his arraignment; tip-slashes before him; the axe with the edge towards him; halberds on each side: accompanied with Sir Thomas Lovell, Sir Nicholas Vaux, Sir William Sands, and common people.

Sec. Gent. Let's stand close, and behold him.

Buck. All good people, You that thus far have come to pity me, Hear what I say, and then go home and lose me. I have this day received a traitor's judgement, And by that name must die: yet, heaven bear witness,
And if I have a conscience, let it sink me,
Even as the axe falls, if I be not faithful!
The law I bear no malice for my death;
'T has done, upon the premises, but justice:
But those that sought it I could wish more Christians;
Be what they will, I heartily forgive 'em:
Yet let 'em look they glory not in mischief,
Nor build their evils on the graves of great men;
For then my guiltless blood must cry against 'em.
For further life in this world I ne'er hope,
Nor will I sue, although the king have mercies 70
More than I dare make faults. You few that loved me,
And dare be bold to weep for Buckingham,
His noble friends and fellows, whom to leave
Is only bitter to him, only dying,
Go with me, like good angels, to my end;
And, as the long divorce of steel falls on me,
Make of your prayers one sweet sacrifice,
And lift my soul to heaven. Lead on, of God's name.
Loo. I do beseech your grace, for charity,
If ever any malice in your heart 80
Were hid against me, now to forgive me frankly.
Buck. Sir Thomas Lovell, I as free forgive
you,
As I would be forgiven: I forgive all;
There cannot be those numberless offences
'Gainst me, that I cannot take peace with: no black envy Shall mark my grave. Commend me to his grace;
And, if he speak of Buckingham, pray, tell him
You met him half in heaven: my vows and prayers
Yet are the king's; and, till my soul forsake,
Shall cry for blessings on him: may he live 90
Longer than I have time to tell his years!
Ever beloved and loving may his rule be!
And when old time shall lead him to his end,
Goodness and he fill up one monument!
Loo. To the water side I must conduct your
grace;
Then give my charge up to Sir Nicholas Vaux,
Who undertakes you to your end.
Vaux. Prepare there,
The duke is coming: see the barge be ready;
And fit it with such furniture as suits
The greatness of his person.
Buck. Nay, Sir Nicholas, 100
Let it alone; my state now will but mock me.
When I came hither, I was lord high constable
And Duke of Buckingham; now, poor Edward Bohun:
Yet I am richer than my base accusers,
That never knew what truth meant: I now seal it;
And with that blood will make 'em one day groan
for't.
My noble father, Henry of Buckingham,
Who first raised head against usurping Richard,
Flying for succour to his servant Banister,
Being distress'd, was by that wretch betray'd, 110
And without trial fell; God's peace be with him!
Henry the Seventh succeeding, truly pitying
My father's loss, like a most royal prince,
Restored me to my honours, and, out of ruins,
Made my name once more noble. Now his son,
Henry the Eighth, life, honour, name and all
That made me happy at one stroke has taken
For ever from the world. I had my trial,
And, must needs say, a noble one; which me
A little happier than my wretched father:
Yet thus far we are one in fortunes: both
Fell by our servants, by those men we loved;
A most unnatural and faithless service!
Heaven has an end in all: yet, you that hear
This from a dying man receive as certain;
Where you are liberal of your loves and can Be sure you be not loose; for those you
friends
And give your hearts to, when they once ceive
The least rub in your fortunes, fall away
Like water from ye, never found again
But where they mean to sink ye. All good Pray for me! I must now forsake ye: the hour
Of my long weary life is come upon me.
Farewell:
And when you would say something that is Speak how I fell. I have done; and God give me!
[Exeunt Duke and I
First Gent. O, this is full of pity! Sir, it
I fear, too many curses on their heads
That were the authors.
Sec. Gent. If the duke be guile
'Tis full of woe: yet I can give you inklng
Of an ensuing evil, if it fall,
Greater than this.
First Gent. Good angels keep it from What may it be? You do not doubt my sir?
Sec. Gent. This secret is so weighty, require
A strong faith to conceal it.
First Gent. Let me have it;
I do not talk much.
Sec. Gent. I am confident;
You shall, sir: did you not of late days hear
A buzzing of a separation
Between the king and Katharine?
First Gent. Yes, but it held
For when the king once heard it, out of anger
He sent command to the lord mayor straight
To stop the rumour, and allay those tongues
That durst disperse it.
Sec. Gent. But that slander, sir,
Is found a truth now: for it grows again
Fresher than e'er it was; and held for certain
The king will venture at it. Either the empress
Or some about him near, have, out of malice
To the good queen, possess'd him with a
That will undo her: to confirm this too,
Cardinal Campeius is arrived, and lately;
As all think, for this business.
First Gent.
Tis the cardinal!
And merely to revenge him on the emperor
For not bestowing on him, at his asking,
The archbishopric of Toledo, this is purpose.
Sec. Gent. I think you have hit the mark it's not cruel
That she should feel the smart of this cardinal
With her own will, and she must fall.
First Gent.
Tis woe
We are too open here to argue this;
Let's think in private more.
[Ex]
From princes into pages; all men's honours
Lie like one lump before him, to be fashion'd
Into what pitch he please.

Suf. For me, my lords, 50
I love him not, nor fear him; there's my creed:
As I am made without him, so I'll stand,
If the king please; his curses and his blessings Touch me alike, they're breath I do not believe in.
I knew him, and I know him; so I leave him
To him that made him proud, the pope.

Nor. Let's in;
And with some other business put the king
From these sad thoughts, that work too much Upon him:
My lord, you'll bear us company?

Cham. Excuse me;
The king has sent me otherwhere: besides, 60
You'll find a most unfit time to disturb him:
Health to your lordships.

Nor. Thanks, my good lord chamberlain.
[Exit Lord Chamberlain; and the King draws the curtain, and sits reading pensively.

Suf. How sad he looks! sure, he is much afflicted.

King. Who's there, ha?

Nor. Pray God he be not angry.

King. Who's there, I say? How dare you thrust yourselves
Into my private meditations?
Who am I? ha?

Nor. A gracious king that pardons all offences
Malice ne'er meant: our breach of duty this way
Is business of estate; in which we come 70
To know your royal pleasure.

King. Ye are too bold:
Go to; I'll make ye know your times of business:
Is this an hour for temporal affairs, ha?

Enter Wolsey and Campion, with a commission.

Who's there? my good lord cardinal? O my Wolsey,
The quiet of my wounded conscience;
Thou art a cure fit for a king. [To Camp.]
You're welcome,
Most learned reverend sir, into our kingdom:
Use us and it. [To Wol.] My good lord, have great care
I be not found a talker.

Wol. Sir, you cannot.
I would your grace would give us but an hour 80
Of private conference.

King. [To Nor. and Suf.] We are busy; go.

Nor. [Aside to Suf.] This priest has no pride
in him?

Suf. [Aside to Nor.] Not to speak of:
I would not be so sick though for his place:
But this cannot continue.

Nor. [Aside to Suf.] If it do,
I'll venture one have-at-him.

Suf. [Aside to Nor.] I another.

[Exeunt Nor. and Suf.]

Wol. Your grace has given a precedent of wisdom
Above all princes, in committing freely
Your scruple to the voice of Christendom:
Who can be angry now? what can envy reach you?
The Spaniard, tied by blood and favour to her,
Must now confess, if they have any goodness,
The trial just and noble. All the clerks,
I mean the learned ones, in Christian kingdoms Have their free voices: Rome, the nurse of judgement,
Invited by your noble self, hath sent
One general tongue unto us, this good man,
This just and learned priest, Cardinal Campeius;
Whom once more I present unto your highness.
King. And once more in mine arms I bid him
welcome,
And thank the holy confadle for their loves: too
They have sent me such a man I would have wish'd for.
Cam. Your grace must needs deserve all strangers' loves,
You are so noble. To your highness' hand
I tender my commission: by whose virtue,
The court of Rome commanding, you, my lord
Cardinal of York, are join'd with me their servant
In the unpartial judging of this business.
King. Two equal men. The queen shall be acquainted
Forthwith for what you come. Where's Gardiner?
Wol. I know your majesty has always loved her
So dear in heart, not to deny her that
A woman of less place might ask by law:
Scholars allow'd freely to argue for her.
King. Ay, and the best she shall have; and my favour
To him that does best: God forbid else. Cardinal, Prithée, call Gardiner to me, my new secretary.
I find him a fit fellow.
[Exit Wolsey.]
Re-enter Wolsey, with Gardiner.
Wol. [Aside to Gard.] Give me your hand:
much joy and favour to you;
You are the king's now.
Gard. [Aside to Wol.] But to be commanded
For ever by your grace, whose hand has raised me.
King. Come hither, Gardiner. [Walks and shuffles.]
Cam. My Lord of York, was not one Doctor
Pace
In this man's place before him?
Wol. Yes, he was.
Cam. Was he not held a learned man?
Wol. Yes, surely.
Cam. Believe me, there's an ill opinion spread then.
Even of yourself, lord cardinal.
Wol. How! of me?
Cam. They will not stick to say you envied
him,
And fearing he would rise, he was so virtuous,
Kept him a foreign man still; which so grieved
him,
That he ran mad and died.
Wol. Heaven's peace be with him!
That's Christian care enough: for living mur-murers
There's places of rebuke. He was a fool;
For he would needs be virtuous: that good fellow,
If I command him, follows my appointment;
I will have none so near else. Learn this, brother,
We live not to be grip'd by meaner persons.
King. Deliver this with modesty to the queen.
[Exit Gardiner.]

For such receipt of learning is Black-Friars;
There ye shall meet about this weighty busi-

Would it not grieve an able man to leave
So sweet a bedfellow? But, conscience, science!
O, 'tis a tender place; and I must leave her apartments.

Enter Anne BULLEN and an Old Lady Anne. Not for that neither: here's the that pinches:
His highness having lived so long with her,
She so good a lady that no tongue could ever Pronounce dishonour of her: by my life, she
She never knew harm-doing: O, now, after
So many courses of the sun enthroned,
Still growing in a majesty and pomp, the wi
To leave a thousand-fold more bitter than
'Tis sweet at first to acquire,—after this pro
To give her the avault! it is a pity
Would move a monster.
Old L. Hearts of most hard
Melt and lament for her.
Anne. O, God's will! much
Yet, if that quarrel, fortune, do divorce
It from the bearer, 'tis a suffrence panging
As soul and body's severing.
Old L. Alas, poor lady
She's a stranger now again.
Anne. So much the mo
Must pity drop upon her. Verily,
I swear, 'tis better to be lowly born,
And range with humble livers in content,
Than to be perk'd up in a glistering grief,
And wear a golden sorrow.
Old L. Our content-
Is our best having.
Anne. By my troth and maiden
Old L. Beshrue me, I wou
And venture maidenhead for't; and so would
For all this spice of your hypocrisy:
You, that have so fair parts of woman on yo
Have too a woman's heart; which ever yet
Affected eminence, wealth, sovereignty:
Which, to say sooth, are blessings; and Gifts,
Saving your mincing, the capacity
Of your soft cheveril conscience would rece
If you might please to stretch it.
Anne. Old L. Yes, troth, and troth; you wou Old L. 'Tis strange: a three-pence would hire me,
Old as I am, to queen it: but, I pray you,
What think you of a duchess? have you lin
To bear that load of title?
Anne. No, in truth.
"Enter the Lord Chamberlain."

Good morrow, ladies. What were'think to know of your conference? My good lord, on your demand; it values not your asking: mistress' sorrows we were pitying. It was a gentle business, and becoming an action of good women: there is hope ill will be well.

Now, I pray God, amen!

You bear a gentle mind, and heavenly blessings with such creatures. That you may, fair lady, live I speak sincerely, and high note's of your many virtues, the king's majesty need his good opinion of you, and purpose honour to you no less flowing Marchioness of Pembroke; to which title us and pound a year, annual support, of his grace he adds.

I do not know kind of my obedience I should tender; than my all is nothing: nor my prayers or words duly hallow'd, nor my wishes worth than empty vanities; yet prayers and wishes I can return. Beseech your lordship, safe to speak my thanks and my obedience, a blushing handmaid, to his highness; health and royalty I pray for.

Lady, I fail not to approve the fair conceit of the me. [Aside] I have perused her well; and honour in her are so mingled they have caught the king: and who knows yet on this lady may proceed a gem, then all this is? I'll to the king, I spoke with you.

My honour'd lord. 80

Why, this it is; see, see! I've been begging sixteen years in court, at a courtier beggary, nor could pat betwixt too early and too late. Do brave!—have your mouth fill'd up. You open it.

This is strange to me.

Old L. How tastes it? is it bitter? forty pence, no.

There was a lady once, 'tis an old story, That would not be a queen, that would she not, For all the mud in Egypt: have you heard it?

Anne. Come, you are pleasant.

With your theme, I could O'ermount the lark. The Marchioness of Pembroke!

A thousand pounds a year for pure respect! No other obligation! By my life, That promises me thousands: honour's train Is longer than his foreskirt. By this time I know your back will bear a duchess: say, Are you not stronger than you were?

Anne. Good lady, to Make your- self mirth with your particular fancy, And leave me out on't. Would I had no being, If this salute my blood a jot: it faints me, To think what follows. The queen is comfortless, and we forgetful In our long absence: pray, do not deliver What here you've heard to her.

What do you think me?

[Exeunt.

Scene IV. A hall in Black-Friars.

Trumpets, sennet, and cornets. Enter two Vergers, with short silver wands; next them, two Scribes, in the habit of doctors; after them, the Archbishop of Canterbury alone; after him, the Bishops of Lincoln, Ely, Rochester, and Saint Asaph; next them, with some small distance, follows Gentleman bearing the purse, with the great seal, and a cardinal's hat; then two Priests, bearing each a silver cross; then a Gentleman-usher bare-headed, accompanied with a Sergeant-at-arms bearing a silver mace; then two Gentlemen bearing two great silver pillars; after them, side by side, the two Cardinals; two Noblemen with the sword and mace. The King takes place under the cloth of state; the two Cardinals sit under him as judges. The Queen takes place some distance from the King. The Bishops place themselves on each side the court, in manner of a consistory; below them, the Scribes. The Lords sit next the Bishops. The rest of the Attendants stand in convenient order about the stage.

Wol. Whilst our commision from Rome is read, let silence be commanded.

King. What's the need?

It hath already publicly been read, and on all sides the authority allow'd; you may, then, spare that time.

Wol. Be't so. Proceed.

Scribe. Say, Henry King of England, come into the court.

King. Here.

[The Queen makes no answer, rises out of her chair, goes about the court, comes to the King, and kneels at his feet; then speaks.

Q. Kath. Sir, I desire you to do me right and justice:
And to bestow your pity on me: for
I am a most poor woman, and a stranger,
Born out of your dominions; having here
No judge indifferent, nor no more assurance
Of equal friendship and proceeding. Alas, sir,
In what have I offended you? what cause
Hath my behaviour given to your displeasure, 20
That thus you should proceed to put me off,
And take your good grace from me? Heaven witness,
I have been to you a true and humble wife,
At all times to your will conformable;
Ever in fear to kindle your dislike,
Yea, subject to your countenance, glad or sorry
As I saw it inclined: when was the hour
I ever contradicted your desire,
Or made it not mine too? Or which of your friends
Have I not strove to love, although I knew
He were mine enemy? what friend of mine
That had to him derived your anger, did I Continue in my liking? nay, gave notice
He was from thence discharged? Sir, call to mind
That I have been your wife, in this obedience,
Upward of twenty years, and have been blest
With many children by you: if, in the course
And process of this time, you can report,
And prove it too, against mine honour aught,
My bond to wedlock, or my love and duty,
Against your sacred person, in God's name,
Turn me away; and let the foul'st contempt
Shut door upon me, and so give me up
To the sharpest kind of justice. Please you, sir,
The king, your father, was reputed for
A prince most prudent, of an excellent
And unmatch'd wit and judgement: Ferdinand,
My father, king of Spain, was reckoned one
The weakest prince that there had reign'd by many
A year before: it is not to be question'd
That they had gather'd a wise council to them
Of every realm, that did debate this business,
Who deem'd our marriage lawful: wherefore I humbly
Beseech you, sir, to spare me, till I may
Be by my friends in Spain advised; whose counsel
I will implore: if not, 'tis the name of God,
Your pleasure be fulfill'd!

Wol. You have here, lady,
And of your choice, these reverend fathers; men
Of singular integrity and learning,
Yea, the elect of the land, who are assembled
60 To play your cause: it shall be therefore bootless
That longer you desire the court; as well
For your own quiet, as to rectify
What is unsettled in the king.

Cam. His grace
Hath spoken well and justly: therefore, madam,
It's fit this royal session do proceed;
And that, without delay, their arguments
Be now produced and heard.

Q. Kath. Lord cardinal,
To you I speak.

Wol. Your pleasure, madam?

Q. Kath. Sir, I am about to weep; but, thinking that We are a queen, or long have dream'd so, or
The daughter of a king, my drops of tears
I'll turn to sparks of fire.

Wol. Be patient yet.

Q. Kath. I will, when you are humble;
Or God will punish me. I do believe,
Induced by potent circumstances, that
You are mine enemy, and make my ch.leng
You shall not be my judge: for it is you
Have blown this coal betwixt my lord and me
Which God's dew quench! Therefore I say as I utterly abhor, yea, from my soul
Refuse you for my judge; whom, yet once
I hold my most malicious foe, and think not
At all a friend to truth.

Wol. I do profess
You speak not like yourself; who ever yet
Have exerted to charity, and display'd the ethics
Of disposition gentle, and of wisdom Overtopping woman's power. Madam, do you wrong:
I have no spleen against you; nor injustice
For you or any: how far I have proceeded,
Or how far further shall, is warranted
By a commission from the consistory.
Yea, the whole consistory of Rome. You ch.
me
That I have blown this coal: I do deny it:
The king is present: if it be known to him
That I gainsay my deed, how may he wound
And worthily, my falsehood! yea, as much
As you have done my truth. If he know
That I am free of your report, he knows
I am not of your wrong. Therefore in him
It lies to cure me: and the cure is, to Remove these thoughts from you: the which fore
His highness shall speak in, I do beseech
You, gracious madam, to unthink your speech;
And to say so no more.

Q. Kath. My lord, my lord,
I am a simple woman, much too weak
To oppose your cunning. You're meek humble-mouth'd;
You sign your place and calling, in full seem.
Winning ness and humility: but your heart
Is cram'd with arrogance, spleen, and pride.
You have, by fortune and his highness' favour Gone slightly o'er low steps and now are most
Where powers are your retainers, and your w
Domestics to you, serve your will as 'tis pleased;
Yourself pronounce their office. I must tell
You tendeer more your person's honour than
Your high profession spiritual: that again
I do refuse you for my judge; and here
Before you all, appeal unto the pope,
To bring my whole cause 'fore his holiness,
And to be judged by him.

(She curtsies to the King, and offers to de
Cam. The queen is obst
Stubborn to justice, apt to accuse it, and Disdainful to be tried by 'tis not well.
She's going away.

King. Call her again.

KING HENRY VIII.

if. Madam, you are call’d back.
Kath. What need you note it? pray you, keep your way: if you are call’d, return. Now, the Lord help, vex me past my patience! Pray you, pass on: 130 not tarry; no, nor ever more this business my appearance make y your courts.

[Exeunt Queen, and her Attendants.

Go thy ways, Kate: man? the world who shall report he has ter wife, let him in not be trusted, peaking false in that: thou art, alone,
    rare qualities, sweet gentleness,
neckless saint-like, like-government,
    ing in commanding, and thy parts

159 eign and pious else, could speak thee out, queen of earthly queens: she’s noble born;
like her true nobility, she has ed herself towards me.

Most gracious sir,
    number I require your highness, shall please you to declare, in hearing these ears,—for where I am robb’d and bound,
    must I be unloosed, although not there in and fully satisfied,—whether ever I reach this business to your highness; or any scruple in your way, which might you to the question on’t or ever you, but with thanks to God for such al lady, spake one the least word that the prejudice of her present state, of her good person?

g. My lord cardinal,
    cuse you: yea, upon mine honour, from’t. You are not to be taught you have many enemies, that know not they are so, but, like to village-curs, when their fellows do: by some of these 160 queen is put in anger. You’re excused:
ill you be more justified? you ever wish’d the sleeping of this business; never desired

stirr’d; but oft have hinder’d, oft, essages made toward it: on my honour, my good lord cardinal to this point, this far clear him. Now, what moved me b’t be bold with time and your attention: mark the inducement. Thus it came: give heed to’t:

    science first received a tenderness, 170
    , and prick, on certain speeches utter’d

. Bishop of Bayonne, then French amsador;

    ad been hither sent on the debating gage ‘twixt the Duke of Orleans and genther Mary: if the progress of this busi-

, determine resolution, he,
    the bishop, did require a respite;
    he might the king his lord advertise

this our marriage with the dowager mes our brother’s wife. This respite shook

The bosom of my conscience, enter’d me,
    Yea, with a splitting power, and made to tremble
The region of my breast; which forced such

That many mazed considerations did throng
And press’d in with this caution. First, methought
I stood not in the smile of heaven; who had Cmdmanded nature, that my lady’s womb,
If it conceived a male child by me, should Do no more offices of life to’t than

The grave does to the dead; for her male issue
Or died where they were made, or shortly after

This world had air’d them: hence I took a thought,
This was a judgement on me: that my kingdom,
    Well worthy the best heir o’ the world, should not Be gladded in’t by me: then follows, that I weigh’d the danger which my realms stood in
By this my issue’s fail; and that gave to me
Many a groaning three. Thus hulling in

The wild sea of my conscience, I did steer

Toward this remedy, whereupon we are Now present here together; that is to say,
I meant to rectify my conscience,—which
I then did feel full sick, and yet not well,—

By all the reverence fathers of the land
And doctors learn’d: first I began in private
With you, my Lord of Lincoln; you remember
How under my oppression I did reek,
When I first moved you.

Lin. Very well, my liege.
    I have spoke long: be pleased yourself
to say

How far you satisfied me.

Lin. So please your highness,
    The question did at first so stagger me,
Bearing a state of mighty moment in’t
And consequence of dread, that I committed
The daring’s counsel which I had to doubt;
And did entreat your highness to this course
Which you are running here.

King. I then moved you,
My Lord of Canterbury; and got your leave
To make this present summons: unsolicited
I left no reverend person in this court;

220
But by particular consent proceeded
Under your hands and seals: therefore, go on;
For no dislike i’ the world against the person
Of the good queen, but the sharp thorny points
Of my alleged reasons, drive this forward:
Prove but our marriage lawful, by my life
And kingly dignity, we are contented
To wear our mortal state to come with her,
Katharine our queen, before the primest creature
That’s paragon o’ the world.

Cam. So please your highness,

230
The queen being absent, ’tis a needful fitness
That we adjourn this court till further day:
Meanwhile must be an earnest motion
Made to the queen, to call back her appeal
She intends unto his holiness.

King. [Aside] I may perceive

These cardinals trifle with me: I abhor
This dilatory sloth and tricks of Rome.
My learn’d and well-beloved servant, Cranmer, return, with thy approach, I know,
My comfort comes along. Break up the court:
I say, set on.

[Exeunt in manner as they entered.]
ACT III.

SCENE I. London. The QUEEN'S apartments.

Enter the QUEEN and her Women, as at work.

Q. Kath. Take thy lute, wench: my soul grows sad with troubles; Sing, and disperse 'em, if thou canst: leave working.

Song.
Orpheus with his lute made trees,
And the mountain tops that freeze,
Bow themselves when he did sing:
To his music plants and flowers
Ever sprung; as sun and showers
There had made a lasting spring.

Every thing that heard him play,
Even the billows of the sea,
Hung their heads, and then lay by.
In sweet music is such art,
Killing care and grief of heart
Fall asleep, or hearing, die.

Enter a Gentleman.

Q. Kath. How now!
Gent. An't please your grace, the two great cardinals

Wait in the presence.

Q. Kath. Would they speak with me?
Gent. They will'd me say so, madam.
Q. Kath. Pray their graces
To come near.  [Exit Gent.] What can be their business

With me, a poor weak woman, fall'n from favour?

I do not like their coming. Now I think on't,
They should be good men; their affairs as right-

But all hoods make not monks.

Enter the two Cardinals, WOLSEY and CAMPBELL.

Wol. Peace to your highness!
Q. Kath. Your graces find me here part of a housewife,
I would be all, against the worst may happen.

What are your pleasures with me, reverend lords?

Wol. May it please you, noble madam, to withdraw

Into your private chamber, we shall give you

The full cause of our coming.

Q. Kath. Speak it here;

There's nothing I have done yet, o' my conscience,

Deserves a corner: would all other women

Could speak this with as free a soul as I do!
My lords, I care not, so much I am happy

Above a number, if my actions

Were tried by every tongue, every eye saw 'em,
Envy and base opinion set against 'em,
I know my life so even. If your business

Seek me out, and that way I am wife in,
Out with it boldly: truth loves open dealing.
Wol. Tanta est erga te mentis integritas, regina serenissima,—

Q. Kath. O, good my lord, no Latin;
I am not such a truant since my coming,

As not to know the language I have lived in.
A strange tongue makes my cause more strange.

Pray speak in English: here are some

thank you,

If you speak truth, for their poor mistress's sake,

Believe me, she has had much wrong:

Cardinal,

The willing'st sin I ever yet committed

May be absolved in English.

Wol. Noble lady,
I am sorry my integrity should breed,
And service to his majesty and you,

So deep suspicion, where all faith was mean.

We come not by the way of accusation,

To taunt that honour every good tongue blest.

Nor to betray you any way to sorrow,

You have too much, good lady; but to know

How you stand minded in the weighty

ference

Between the king and you; and to deliver,

Like free and honest men, our just opinions

And comforts to your cause.

Cam. Most honour'd ma'am,

My Lord of York, out of his noble nature,

Zeal and obedience he still bore your grace,

Forgetting, like a good man, your late censor.

Both of his truth and him, which was too far,

Offers, as I do, in a sign of peace,

His service and his counsel.

Q. Kath.  [Aside] To betray me.—

My lords, I thank you both for your goodwill;
Ye speak like honest men; pray God, prove so!

But how to make ye suddenly an answer,

In such a point of weight, so near mine honor?

More near my life, I fear,—with my weak

And to such men of gravity and learning,

In truth, I know not. I was set at work

Among my maids; full little, God knows, lo

Either for such men or such business.

For her sake that I have been,—for I feel

The fit of my greatness,—good your grace;

Let me have time and counsel for my cause:

Alas, I am a woman, friendless, hopeless!

Wol. Madam, you wrong the king's love

these fears:

Your hopes and friends are infinite.

Q. Kath. In English,

But little for my profit: can you think, lord

That any Englishman dare give me counsel

Or be a known friend, 'gainst his high pleasure,

Though he be grown so desperate to be honest,

And live a subject? Nay, forsooth, my friend;

They that must weigh out my afflictions,

They that my trust must grow to, live not;

They are, as all my other comforts, far from

In mine own country, lords.

Cam. I would your grace

Would leave your griefs, and take my counsel.

Q. Kath. Cam. Put your main cause into the protection;

He's loving and most gracious: 'twill be

Both for your honour better and your cause.

For if the trial of the law o'ertake ye,

You'll part away disgraced.

Wol. He tells you rig
Kath. Ye tell me what ye wish for both,—my ruin:
is your Christian counsel? out upon ye!—
I love all yet; there sits a judge no king can corrupt.

Your rage mistakes us.

Kath. The more shame for ye: holy men
I thought ye,
my soul, two reverend cardinal virtues;
cardinal sins and hollow hearts I fear ye:
I 'em, for shame, my lords. Is this your comfort?

ordial that ye bring a wretched lady,
am lost among ye, laugh'd at, scorn'd?
not wish ye half my miseries;
more charity: but say, I warn'd ye;
heed, for heaven's sake, take heed, lest at once orrhent of my sorrows fall upon ye.

Madam, this is a mere distraction;
urn the good we offer into envy,

Kath. Ye turn me into nothing: woe upon all such false professors! would you have—
I have any justice, any pity;
any thing but churchmen's habits—
y sick cause into his hands that hates me?
has banish'd me his bed already?
ve, too long age! I am old, my lords,
'll the fellowship I hold now with him
y my obedience. What can happen above this wretchedness? all your studies me a curse like this.

Your fears are worse.

Kath. Have I lived thus long—let me peak myself,
virtue finds no friends—a wife, a true one?
ian, I dare say without vain-glory, yet branded with suspicion?
with all my full affections et the king? loved him next heaven?
hey'd him?

out of fondness, superstitious to him?
forget my prayers to content him?
I thus rewarded? 'tis not well, lords.
me a constant woman to her husband,
at no dream'd a joy beyond his pleasure;
that woman, when she has done most,
I add an honour, a great patience.

Madam, you wander from the good we
at.

ath. My lord, I dare not make myself so ily,
up willingly that noble title aster wed me to; nothing but death er divorce my dignities.

Pray, hear me.

ath. Would I had never trod this English
th,
'the flatteries that grow upon it!
'd angels' faces, but heaven knows your arts.
ill become of me now, wretched lady!
ed unhappiest woman living.
'wenches, where are now your fortunes!
s'd a kingdom, upon which no pity,
s, no hope; no kindred weep for me;
ave allow'd me: like the lily, 157

That once was mistress of the field and flourish'd,
'll hang my head and perish.

Wol. If your grace
Could but be brought to know our ends are honest,
You'd feel more comfort: why should we, good lady,
Upon what cause, wrong you? alas, our places,
The way of our profession is against it:
We are to cure such sorrows, not to sow 'em.

For goodness' sake, consider what you do;
How you may hurt yourself, ay, utterly
Grow from the king's acquaintance, by this carri

The hearts of princes kiss obedience,
So much they love it: but to stubborn spirits
They swell, and grow as terrible as storms.
I know you have a gentle, noble temper,
A soul as even as a calm: pray, think us
Those we profess, peace-makers, friends,

Cam. Madam, you'll find it so. You wrong your virtues
With these weak women's fears: a noble spirit,
As yours was put into you, ever casts
Such doubts, as false coin, from it. The king loves you;

Beware you lose it not; for us, if you please
To trust us in your business, we are ready
To use our utmost studies in your service.

K. Kath. Do what ye will, my lords: and,
pray, forgive me,
If I have used myself unmanfully;
You know I am a woman, lacking wit
To make a seemly answer to such persons.
Pray, do my service to his majesty:
He has my heart yet; and shall have my prayers While I shall have my life. Come, reverend fathers,

Bestow your counsels on me: she now begs,
That little thought, when she set footing here,
She should have bought her dignities so dear.

[Exeunt.]

Scene II. Ante-chamber to the King's apartment.

Enter the Duke of Norfolk, the Duke of Suffolk, the Earl of Surrey, and the Lord Chamberlain.

Nor. If you will now unite in your complaints,
And force them with a constancy, the cardinal
Cannot stand under them: if you omit
The offer of this time, I cannot promise
But that you shall sustain more new disgraces,
With these you bear already.

Sur. I am joyful
To meet the least occasion that may give me
Remembrance of my father-in-law, the duke,
To be revenged on him.

Suf. Which of the peers
Have uncontented gone by him, or at least
Strangely neglected? when did he regard
The stamp of nobleness in any person
Out of himself?

Cham. My lords, you speak your pleasures:
What he deserves of you and me I know;
What we can do to him, though now the time Gives way to us, I much fear. If you cannot Bar his access to the king, never attempt
Together with all famous colleges
Almost in Christendom: shortly, I believe,
His second marriage shall be publish'd, and
Her coronation. Katharine no more
Shall be call'd queen, but princess dowager
And widow to Prince Arthur.

Nor. This same Cranm. A worthy fellow, and hath ta'en much pain
In the king's business.

Sur. He has; and we shall see
For it an archbishop.

Nor. For I hear.

Suf. 'Tis so.

The cardinal!

Enter Wolsey and Cromwell.

Nor. Observe, observe, he's moody
Wol. The packet, Cromwell, Gave't you the king?

Crom. To his own hand, in 's bedcham.
Wol. Look'd he o' the inside of the page
Crom. Pres.

He did unsel them; and the first he view'd
He did it with a serious mind; a heed
Was in his countenance. You he bade Attend him here this morning.

Wol. Is he ready
To come abroad?

Crom. I think, by this he is.
Wol. Leave me awhile. [Exit Crom

[Aside] It shall be to the Duchess of Alenc. The French king's sister: he shall marry her Anne Bullen! No; I'll no Anne Bullens for There's more in't than fair visage. Bullen No, we'll no Bullens. Speedily I wish To hear from Rome. The Marchioness of broke!

Nor. He's discontented.

Suf. May be, he hears the Does whet his anger to him.

Suf. Sharp enough,

Lord, for thy justice!

Wol. [Aside] The late queen's gentlewomen
a knight's daughter,
To be her mistress' mistress! the queen's quiet
This candle burns not clear: 'tis I must sue
Then out it goes. What though I know virtual
And well deserving? yet I know her for A spleeny Lutheran; and not wholesome to Our cause, that she should lie t' bosom o' Our hard-ruled king. Again, there is spru An heretic, an arch one, Cranmer; one Hath craw'd into the favour of the king, And is his oracle.

Nor. He is vex'd at something.

Suf. I would 'twere something that fret the string,
The master-cord on 's heart!

Enter the King, reading a schedule, 1

Lovell.

Suf. The king, the k
King. What piles of wealth hath he accum ated
To his own portion! and what expense by this Seems to flow from him! How, 'tis the un thrift,
Does he take this together! Now, my lords ou the cardinal?

My lord, we have here observing him: some strange common
is brain: he bites his lip, and starts;
a sudden, looks upon the ground,
ays his finger on his temple: straight out into fast gait; then stops again,
's breast hard, and anon he casts re against the moon: in most strange posures
ve seen him set himself.

It may well be;
is a mutiny in's mind. This morning state of state he sent me to peruse, quired: and wot you what I found —on my conscience, put unwittingly?
th, an inventory, thus importing:
val parcels of his plate, his treasure, tts, and ornaments of household; which at such proud rate, that it out-speaks ion of a subject.

It's heaven's will:
spirit put this paper in the packet,
as your eye withal.

If we did think temptation were above the earth, c'd on spiritual object, he should still his musings: but I am afraid nings are below the moon, not worth s considering.
ng takes his seat; whispers Lovell, who goes to the Cardinal.

Heaven forgive me!

do bless your highness!

Good my lord,
all of heavenly stuff, and bear the in-tory
* best graces in your mind; the which re now running o'er: you have scarce time from spiritual leisure a brief span earthly sure, in that an ill husband, and am glad you therein my companion.

Sir, y offices I have a time; a time k upon the part of business which 't state; and nature does require es of preservation, which perforce all, amongst my brethren mortal, ve my tendence to.

You have said well.
And ever may your highness yoke to-er, I lend you cause, my doing well y well saying!
"Tis well said again;
a kind of good deed to say well:
words are no deeds. My father loved he did; and with his deed did crown d upon you. Since I had my office, ept you next my heart; have not alone
d you, where high profits might come home, d my present havings, to bestow
eties upon you.

[Aside] What should this mean? 160
[Aside] The Lord increase this busi-

King.

Have I not made you
The prime man of the state? I pray you, tell me,
If what I now pronounce you have found true:
And, if you may confess it, say withal,
If you are bound to us or no. What say you?

Wol. My sovereign, I confess your royal gaces,
Shower'd on me daily, have been more than could
My studied purposes requite; which went Beyond all man's endeavours: my endeavours
Have ever come too short of my desires,
Yet fled with my abilities: mine own ends
Have been mine so that evenmore they pointed To the good of your most sacred person and
The profit of the state. For your great graces Heap'd upon me, poor undeserver, I
Can nothing render but allegiant thanks,
My prayers to heaven for you, my loyalty,
Which ever has and ever shall be growing,
Till death, that winter, kill it.

King. Fairly answer'd;
A loyal and obedient subject is
Therein illustrated: the honour of it
Does pay the act of it; as, 'tis the contrary,
The foulness is the punishment. I presume
That, as my hand has open'd bounty to you,
My heart dropp'd love, my power rain'd honour,
more
On you than any: so your hand and heart,
Your brain, and every function of your power,
Should, notwithstanding that your bond of duty,
As 'twere in love's particular, be more
To me, your friend, than any.

Wol. I do profess
That for your highness' good I ever labour'd
More than mine own; 'tis that, am, have, and will be—
Though all the world should crack their duty to you,
And throw it from their soul; though perils did Abound, as thick as thought could make 'em, and Appear in forms more horrid,—yet my duty,
As doth a rock against the chiding flood,
Should the approach of this wild river break,
And stand unshaken yours.

King. 'Tis nobly spoken:
Take notice, lords, he has a loyal breast,
For you have seen him open't. Read o'er this:
{Giving him papers.
And after this: and then to breakfast with What appetite you have.

[Exit King, frowning upon Cardinal
Wolsey; the Nobles throng after him, smiling and whispering.

Wol. What should this mean?
What sudden anger this? how have I reaped it?
He parted frowning from me, as if ruin
Leap'd from his eyes: so looks the chafed lion
Upon the daring huntsman that has gall'd him:
Then makes him nothing. I must read this paper; I fear, the story of his anger. 'Tis so;
This paper has undone me; 'tis the count
Of all that world of wealth I have drawn together:
For mine own ends; indeed, to gain the popedom,
And fee my friends in Rome. O negligence!
Fit for a fool to fall by: what cross devil
Made me put this main secret in the packet
I sent the king? Is there no way to cure this?
No new device to beat this from his brains?
I know 'twill stir him strongly; yet I know
A way, if it take right, in spite of fortune
Will bring me off again. What's this? To the Pope?

The letter, as I live, with all the business
I writ to 's holiness. Nay then, farewell!
I have touch'd the highest point of all my greatness;
And, from that full meridian of my glory,
I haste now to my setting: I shall fall
Like a bright exhalation in the evening,
And no man see me more.

Re-enter to Wolsey, the Dukes of Norfolk and Suffolk, the Earl of Surrey, and the Lord Chamberlain.

Nor. Hear the king's pleasure, cardinal: who commands you
To render up the great seal presently
Into our hands; and to confine yourself 230
To Asher House, my Lord of Winchester's,
Till you hear further from his highness.

Wol. Stay:
Where's your commission, lords? words cannot carry Authority so weighty.

Sur. Who dare cross 'em,
Bearing the king's will from his mouth expressly?
Wol. Till I find more than will or words to do it,
I mean your malice, know, officious lords,
I dare and must deny it. Now I feel
Of what coarse metal ye are moulded, envy:
How eagerly ye follow my disgraces,
As if it fed ye! and how sleek and wanton
Ye appear in every thing may bring my ruin!
Follow your envious courses, men of malice;
You have Christian warrant for 'em, and, no doubt,
In time will find their fit rewards. That seal,
You ask with such a violence, the king,
Mine your master, with his own hand gave me;
Bade me enjoy it, with the place and honours,
During my life; and, to confirm his goodness,
Tied it by letters-patents: now, who'll take it?

Sur. The king, that gave it.
Wol. It must be himself, then. 251

Sur. Thou art a proud traitor, priest.
Wol. Proud lord, thou liest:
Within these forty hours Surrey durst better
Have burnt that tongue than said so.

Sur. Thy ambition,
Thou scarlet sin, robb'd this bewailing land
Of noble Buckingham, my father-in-law:
The heads of all thy brother cardinals,
With thee and all thy best parts bound together,
Weigh'd not a hair of his. Plague of your policy!
You sent me deputy for Ireland;
Far from his succour, from the king, from all
That might have mercy on the fault thou gavest him;
Whilst your great goodness, out of holy pity,
Absolved him with an axe.

Wol. This, and all else
This talking lord can lay upon my credit,
I answer is most false. The duke by law Found his deserts: how innocent I was
From any private malice in his end,
His noble jury and foul cause can witness.
If I loved many words, lord, I should tell
You have as little honesty as honour,
That in the way of loyalty and truth
Toward the king, my ever royal master,
Dare mate a sounder man than Surrey can,
And all that love his follies.

Sur. By my soul,
Your long coat, priest, protects you; thou art
My sword i' the life-blood of thee else,
lords,
Can ye endure to hear this arrogance?
And from this fellow? If we live thus tam
To be thus jaded by a piece of scarlet,
Farewell nobility; let his grace go forward
And dare us with his cap like larks.

Wol. All go
Is poison to thy stomach.

Sur. Yes, that goodness
Of gleaning all the land's wealth into one,
Into your hands, cardinal, by extortion
The goodness of your intercepted packets
You writ to the pope against the king's goodness,
Since you provoke me, shall be most notable
My Lord of Norfolk, as you are truly noble
As you respect the common good, the state
Of our despised nobility, our issues,
Who, if he live, will scarce be gentlemen,
Produce the grand sum of his sins, the arts
Collected from his life. I'll sterve you
Worse than the saeking bell, when the wench

Lay kissing in your arms, lord cardinal.

Wol. How much, methinks, I could this man,
But that I am bound in charity against it:

Nor. Those articles, my lord, are in the hand;
But, thus much, they are foul ones.

Wol. So much fait
And spotless shall mine innocence arise,
When the king knows my truth.

Sur. This cannot save
I thank my memory, I yet remember
Some of these articles; and out they shall
Now, if you can blush and cry 'guilty,' e
You'll show a little honesty.

Wol. Speak on, sir;
I dare your worst objections: if I blush,
It is to see a nobleman want manners.

Sur. I had rather want those than many more
Have at you!

First, that, without the king's assent or ledge,
You wrought to be alegate; by which power
You maint'd the jurisdiction of all bishops
Nor. Then, that in all you write to Rome
To all the private princes, 'Ego et Rex meus'
Was still inscribed; in which you brought king
To be your servant.

Sur. Then that, without the knowledge
Of either king or council, when you went
KING HENRY VIII.

At my misfortunes? can thy spirit wonder
A great man should decline? Nay, an you weep,
I am fall'n indeed.

Crom. How does your grace?

Wol. Why, well;
In ever so truly happy, my good Cromwell.

I know myself now; and I feel within me
A peace above all earthly dignities.
A still and quiet conscience. The king has cured me.
I humbly thank his grace; and from these shoulders,
These ruin'd pillars, out of pity, taken
A load would sink a navy, too much honour:
O, 'tis a burthen, Cromwell, 'tis a burthen
Too heavy for a man that hopes for heaven!

Crom. I am glad your grace has made that right use of it.

Wol. I hope I have: I am able now, methinks,
Out of a fortitude of soul I feel,
To endure more miseries and greater far
Than my weak-hearted enemies dare offer.

What news abroad?

Crom. The heaviest and the worst
Is your displeasure with the king.

Wol. That's somewhat sudden:
But he's a learned man. May he continue
Long in his highness' favour, and do justice
For truth's sake and his conscience; that his bones,
When he has run his course and sleeps in blessings,
May have a tomb of orphans' tears wept on 'em?
What more?

Crom. That Cranmer is return'd with welcome,
Install'd lord archbishop of Canterbury.

Wol. That's news indeed.

Crom. Last, that the Lady Anne,
Whom the king hath in secrecy long married,
This day was view'd in open as his queen,
Going to chapel; and the voice is now
Only about her coronation.

Wol. There was the weight that pull'd me down.

Cromwell.

The king has gone beyond me: all my glories
In that one woman I have lost for ever.

No sun shall ever usher forth mine honours,
Or gild again the noble troops that waited
Upon my smiles. Go, get thee from me, Cromwell;

I am a poor fall'n man, unworthy now
To be thy lord and master: seek the king;
That sun, I pray, may never set! I have told him
What and how true thou art: he will advance thee;
Some little memory of me will stir him—
I know his noble nature—not to let
Thy hopeful service perish too: good Cromwell, Neglect him not; make use now, and provide
For thine own future safety.

Crom. O my lord,
Must I, then, leave you? must I needs forgo
So good, so noble and so true a master?
Bear witness, all that have not hearts of iron,
With what a sorrow Cromwell leaves his lord.
The king shall have my service; but my prayers
For ever and for ever shall be yours.
Wol. Cromwell, I did not think to shed a tear
In all my miseries; but thou hast forced me, 430
Out of thy honest truth, to play the woman.
Let's dry our eyes: and thus far hear me, Cromwell: And, when I am forgotten, as I shall be,
And sleep in dull cold marble, where no mention
Of me more must be heard of, say, I taught thee,
Say, Wolsey, that once trod the ways of glory,
And sounded all the depths and shoals of honour,
Found thee a way, out of his wreck, to rise in;
A sure and safe one, though thy master miss'd it.
Mark but my fall, and that that ruin'd me. 440
Cromwell, I charge thee, flyng away ambition:
By that sin fell the angels; how can man, then,
The image of his Maker, hope to win by it?
Love thyself last: cherish those hearts that hate
Thee;
Corruption wins not more than honesty.
Still in thy right hand carry gentle peace,
To silence envious tongues. Be just, and fear not:
Let all the ends thou aim'st at be thy country's,
Thy God's, and truth's; then if thou fall'st, O
Cromwell,
Thou fall'st a blessed martyr! Serve the king;
And,—prithee, lead me in:
There take an inventory of all I have,
To the last penny; 'tis the king's: my robe,
And my integrity to heaven, is all
I dare now call mine own. O Cromwell, Cromwell! Had I but served my God with half the zeal
I served my king, he would not in mine age
Have left me naked to mine enemies.
Crom. Good sir, have patience.
Wol. So I have. Farewell.
The hopes of court! my hopes in heaven do dwell. [Exeunt. 450]

ACT IV.

SCENE I. A street in Westminster.
Enter two Gentlemen, meeting one another.
First Gent. You're well met once again.
Sec. Gent. So are you.
First Gent. You come to take your stand here, and behold
The Lady Anne pass from her coronation?
Sec. Gent. 'Tis all my business. At our last encounter,
The Duke of Buckingham came from his trial.
First Gent. 'Tis very true: but that time offer'd sorrow;
This, general joy.
Sec. Gent. 'Tis well: the citizens,
I am sure, have shown at full their royal minds— As, let 'em have their rights, they are ever forward—
In celebration of this day with shows,
Pageants and sights of honour.
First Gent. Never greater,
Nor, I'll assure you, better taken, sir.
Sec. Gent. May I be bold to ask what that contains, That paper in your hand?
First Gent. Yes; 'tis the list
Of those that claim their offices this day
By custom of the coronation.
The Duke of Suffolk is the first, and claims
To be high-steward; next, the Duke of No

I have a soul, she is an angel; ing has all the Indies in his arms, lore and richer, when he strains that lady: or blame his conscience.

They that bear oth of honour over her, are four barons Cinque-ports.

Gent. Those men are happy; and so are ll near her. 50 it, she that carries up the train old noble lady, Duchess of Norfolk.

Gent. It is; and all the rest are cresses.

Gent. Their coronets say so. These are ars indeed;

sometimes falling ones.

Gent. No more of that.

Six procession, and then a great flourish of trumpets.

Enter a third Gentleman.

Gent. God save you, sir! where have you been bowling?

Gent. Among the crowd I the Abbey; here a finger not be wedged in more: I am stifled e more rankness of their joy.

Gent. You saw emony?

Gent. That I did. How was it?

Gent. Well worth the seeing.

Gent. Good sir, speak it to us.

Gent. As well as I am able. The rich and ladies, having brought the queen spared place in the choir, fell off ice from her; while her grace sat down awhile, some half an hour or so, a chair of state, opposing freely uty of her person to the people. me, sir, she is the goodliest woman or day by man: which when the people 70 full view of, such a noise arose hounds make at sea in a stiff tempest, and to as many tunes: hats, cloaks,— s, I think,—flew up; and had their faces ace, this day they had been lost. Such joy saw before. Great-bellied women, I not half a week to go, like rams time of war, would shake the press, ce ‘em reel before ‘em. No man living y ’This is my wife there; all were woken gely in one piece. But, what follow’d? 8r ent.

Gent. At length her grace rose, and modest paces, the altar; where she kneel’d, and saint- fair eyes to heaven and pray’d devoutly. e again and bow’d her to the people; the Archbishop of Canterbury all the royal makings of a queen; ill, Edward Confessor’s crown, and bird of peace, and all such emblems ly on her: which perform’d, the choir, 90 the choicest music of the kingdom,

Together sung ‘Te Deum.’ So she parted, And with the same full state paced back again To York-place, where the feast is held.

First Gent. Sir, You must no more call it York-place, that’s past; For, since the cardinal fell, that title’s lost: ’Tis now the king’s, and call’d Whitehall.

Third Gent. I know it; But tis so lately alter’d, that the old name Is fresh about me.

Sec. Gent. What two reverend bishops Were those that went on each side of the queen?

Third Gent. Stokely and Gardiner; the one of Winchester, Newly prefer’d from the king’s secretary, The other, London.

Sec. Gent. He of Winchester Is held no great good lover of the archbishop’s, The virtuous Cranmer.

Third Gent. All the land knows that:

However, yet there is no great breach; when it comes, Cranmer will find a friend will not shrink from him.

Sec. Gent. Who may that be, I pray you?

Third Gent. Thomas Cromwell: A man in much esteem with the king, and truly A worthy friend. The king has made him master O’ the jewel house, And one, already, of the privy council.

Sec. Gent. He will deserve more.

Third Gent. Yes, without all doubt. Come, gentlemen, ye shall go my way, which Is to the court, and there ye shall be my guests: Something I can command. As I walk thither, I’ll tell ye more.

Both. You may command us, sir. [Exeunt.

SCENE II. Kimbolton.

Enter Katharine, Dowager, sick; led between Griffith, her gentleman usher, and Patience, her woman.

Grif. How does your grace?

Kath. O Griffith, sick to death! My legs, like loaden branches, bow to the earth, Willing to leave their burthen. Reach a chair; So; now, methinks, I feel a little ease. Didst thou not tell me, Griffith, as thou le’dst me, That the great child of honour, Cardinal Wolsey, Was dead?

Grif. Yes, madam: but I think your grace, Out of the pain you suffer’d, gave no ear to’t. Kath. Prithee, good Griffith, tell me how he died:

If well, he stepp’d before me, happily 10 For my example.

Grif. Well, the voice goes, madam: For after the stout Earl Northumberland Arrested him at York, and brought him forward, As a man sorely taintéd, to his answer, He fell sick suddenly, and grew so ill He could not sit his mule.

Kath. Alas, poor man!

Grif. At last, with easy roads, he came to Leicester, Lodged in the abbey; where the reverend abbot, With all his covent, honourably received him; 19 To whom he gave these words, ‘O, father abbot,
An old man, broken with the storms of state,
Is come to lay his weary bones among ye;
Give him a little earth for charity!

So went to bed; where eagerly his sickness
Pursued him still: and, three nights after this,
About the hour of eight, which he himself
Forsook should be his last, full of repentance,
Continual meditations, tears, and sorrows,
He gave his honours to the world again,
His blessed part to heaven, and slept in peace.

Kath. So may he rest; his faults lie gently

on him!

Yet thus far, Griffith, give me leave to speak him,
And yet with charity. He was a man
Of an unbounded stomach, ever ranking
Himself with princes; one that, by suggestion,
Tied all the kingdom: simony was fair-play;
His own opinion was his law; I the presence
He would say untruths; and be ever double
Both in his words and meaning: he was never,
But where he meant to ruin, pitiful:
His promises were, as he then was, mighty;
But his performance, as he is now, nothing:
Of his own body he was ill, and gave
The clergy ill example.

Griff. Noble madam,
Men's evil manners live in brass; their virtues
We write in water. May it please your highness
To hear me speak his good now?

Kath. Yes, good Griffith;
I were malignant else.

Griff. This cardinal,
Though from an humble stock, undoubtedly
Was fashion'd to much honour from his cradle.
He was a scholar, and a ripe and good one;
Exceeding wise, fair-spoken, and persuasional:
Lofty and sour to them that loved him not;
But to those men that sought him sweet as summer.

And though he were unsatisfied in getting,
Which was a sin, yet in bestowing, madam,
He was most princely: ever witness for him
Those twins of learning that he raised in you,
Ipswich and Oxford! one of which fell with him,
Unwilling to outlive the good that did it;
The other, though unfinished, yet so famous,
So excellent in art, and still so rising,
That Christendom shall ever speak his virtue.
His overthrow heap'd happiness upon him;
For then, and not till then, he felt himself,
And found the blessedness of being little:
And, to add greater honours to his age,
Than man could give him, he died fearing God.

Kath. After my death I wish no other herald,
No other speaker of my living actions,
To keep mine honour from corruption,
But such an honest chronicler as Griffith.
Whom I most hated living, thou hast made me,
With thy religious truth and modesty,
Now in his ashes honour: peace be with him!
Patience, be near me still; and set me lower:
I have not long to trouble thee. Good Griffith,
Cause the musicians play me that sad note
I named my knell, whilst I sit meditating
On that celestial harmony I go to.

[Sad and solemn music.

Griff. She is asleep: good wench, let's sit down quiet,

For fear we wake her: softly, gentle Patience.

The vision. Enter, solemnly tripping one another, six personages, clad in white wearing on their heads garlands of bay golden viiars on their faces; braze bays or palm in their hands. Thus see unto her, then dance; and, at each changes, the first two hold a spear gold over her head; at which the other four reverent curtseys; then the two that hairland deliver the same to the other two, who observe the same order in changes, and holding the garland on head; which done, they deliver the same to the last two, who likewise in the same order; at which, as it were spiration, she makes in her sleep an rejoicing, and holdeth up her hands to and so in their dancing vanish, carry

Kath. Spirits of peace, where are ye?
All gone,
And leave me here in wretchedness behind

Griff. Madam, we are here.

Kath. It is not you I c

Saw ye none enter since I slept?

Griff.

Kath. No? Saw you not, even now, a

They promised me eternal happiness;

I am not worthy yet to wear: I shall, ass

ACT V.

SCENE I. London. A gallery in the palace.

Enter Gardiner, Bishop of Winchester, a Page with a torch before him, met by Sir Thomas Lovell.

Gar. It's one o'clock, boy, is't not?
Boy. It hath struck.

Gar. These should be hours for necessities,
Not for delights; times to repair our nature
With comforting repose, and not for us
To waste these times. Good hour of night, Sir
Thomas!

Whither so late?

Lov. Came you from the king, my lord?
Gar. I did, Sir Thomas; and left him at primero
With the Duke of Suffolk.

Lov. I must to him too,
Before he go to bed. I'll take my leave.
Gar. Not yet, Sir Thomas Lovell. What's
the matter?

It seems you are in haste: an if there be
No great offence belongs to't, give your friend
Some touch of your late business: affairs, that walk,
As they say spirits do, at midnight, have
In them a wilder nature than the business
That seeks dispatch by day,

Lov. My lord, I love you;
And durst commend a secret to your ear Much weightier than this work. The queen's in labour,
They say, in great extremity; and fear'd
She'll with the labour end.

Gar. The fruit she goes with
I pray for heartily, that it may find
Good time, and live: but for the stock, Sir
Thomas,
I wish it grubb'd up now.

Lov. Methinks I could
Cry the amen; and yet my conscience says
She's a good creature, and, sweet lady, does Deserve our better wishes.

Gar. But, sir, sir,

Hear me, Sir Thomas: you're a gentleman
Of mine own way: I know you wise, religious;
And, let me tell you, it will ne'er be well,
'Twill not, Sir Thomas Lovell, take 't of me,
Till Cranmer, Cromwell, her two hands, and she,
Sleep in their graves.

Lov. Now, sir, you speak of two speak

One syllable against him?

King. Yes, yes, Sir Thomas, There is that dare; and I myself have ventured To speak my mind of him: and indeed this say.

Sir, I may tell it you, I think I have Incensed the lords o' the council, that he is, For so I know he is, they know he is, A most arch heretic, a pestilence That does infect the land: with which they moved Tomorrow morning to the council-board He be convened. He's a rank weed, Sir Thomas, And we must root him out. From your affairs I hinder you too long: good night, Sir Thomas.

Lov. Many good nights, my lord: I rest your servant. [Exeunt Gardiner and Page.

Enter the King and Suffolck.

King. Charles, I will play no more to-night; My mind's not on't; you are too hard for me.

Suf. Sir, I did never win you of me before.

King. But little, Charles; Nor shall not, when my fancy's on my play. Go Now, Lovell, from the queen what is the news?

Lov. I could not personally deliver to her What you commanded me, but by her woman I sent my message; who return'd her thanks In the great'st humbleness, and desired your highness Most heartily to pray for her.

King. What say'st thou, ha?

To pray for her? what, is she crying out?

Lov. So said her woman; and that her suff erance made

Almost each pang a death.

King. Alas, good lady!

Suf. God safely quit her of her burthen, and With gentle travail, to the gladding of Your highness with an heir!

King. 'Tis midnight, Charles; Prithie, to bed; and in thy prayers remember
The estate of my poor queen. Leave me alone; For I must think of that which company Would not be friendly to.

Suf. I wish your highness

A quiet night; and my good mistress will Remember in my prayers.

King. Charles, good night. [Exit Suffolck.

Enter Sir Anthony Denny.

Well, sir, what follows?

Den. Sir, I have brought my lord the archbishop, as you commanded me.

King. Ha! Canterbury?

Den. Ay, my good lord.

King. 'Tis true: where is he, Denny?
Scene II. Before the council-chamber.

Pursuivants, Pages, &c. attending.

Cran. I hope I am not too late; and yet the gentleman,
That was sent to me from the council, pray’d me
To make great haste. All fast? what means this? Ho!
Who waits there? Sure, you know me?

Enter Keeper.

Keep. Yes, my lord;
But yet I cannot help you.
Cran. Why?

Enter Doctor Butts.

Keep. Your grace must wait till you be call’d for.
Cran. So. Butts. [Aside] This is a piece of malice. I am glad
I came this way so happily; the king
Shall understand it presently. [Exit Cran.]

Cran. [Aside] ’Tis Butts, 10
The king’s physician: as he pass’d along,
How earnestly he cast his eyes upon me!
Pray heaven, he sound not my disgrace! For certain,
This is of purpose laid by some that hate me—
God turn their hearts! I never sought, their malice—
To quench mine honour: they would shame to make me
Wait else at door, a fellow-counsellor,
Mong boys, grooms, and lackeys. But their pleasures
Must be fulfill’d, and I attend with patience.

Enter the King and Butts at a window above.

Butts. I’ll show your grace the strangest sight—

King. What’s that, Butts? 20
Butts. I think your highness saw this many a day.

King. Body o’ me, where is it?

Butts. There, my lord:
The high promotion of his grace of Canter bury:
Who holds his state at door, ‘mongst pursui
vants,
Pages, and footboys.

King. Ha! ’tis he, indeed:
Is this the honour they do one another?
’Tis well there’s one above ’em yet. I had thought
They had parted so much honesty among ’em,
At least, good manners, as not thus to suffer
A man of his place, and so near our favour, 30
To dance attendance on their lordships’ plea sures,
And at the door too, like a post with packets.
By holy Mary, Butts, there’s knavery:
Let ’em alone, and draw the curtain close:
We shall hear more anon. [Exit.]

Enter Old Lady, Lovell. Following.

[Later. Come back: what mean thou?
I’ll not come back; the tidings that bring my boldness manners. Now, good relax, thy royal head, and shade thy person in the pleasant wings!

Now, by thy looks
by message. Is the queen deliver’d?
and of a boy.

Ay, ay, my liege;
lovely boy: the God of heaven and ever bless her! ’tis a girl, boys hereafter. Sir, your queen her visitation, and to be ed with this stranger: ’tis as like you is to cherry.

Lovell!
Sir?
Give her an hundred marks. I’ll to

[Exit.]

An hundred marks! By this light, your groom is for such payment.

this, the girl was like to him?
more, or else unsay’t: and now,
hot, I’ll put it to the issue.

Scene III. The Council-Chamber.

Enter Lord Chancellor; places himself at the upper end of the table on the left hand; a seat being left void above him, as for Canterbury’s seat. Duke of Suffolk, Duke of Norfolk, Surrey, Lord Chamberlain, Gardiner, seat themselves in order on each side. Cromwell at lower end, as secretary. Keeper at the door.

Cham. Speak to the business, master secretary:
Why are we met in council?
Cham. Please your honours, the chief cause concerns his grace of Canterbury.

Gar. Has he had knowledge of it?
Crom. Yes.
Nor. Who waits there?

Gar. Without, my noble lords?
Crom. Yes.
Gar. My lord archbishop; and he has done half an hour, to know your pleasures.

Cham. Let him come in.

Gar. Your grace may enter now. [Cranmer enters and approaches the council-table.

Cham. My good lord archbishop, I’m very sorry
To sit here at this present, and behold
That chair stand empty; but we all are men,
In our own natures frail, and capable
Of our flesh; few are angels: out of which frailty
And want of wisdom, you, that best should teach us,
Have misdemeanor’d yourself, and not a little,
Toward the king first, then his laws, in filling
The whole realm, by your teaching and your Chaplains,
For so we are inform’d, with new opinions,
Divers and dangerous; which are heresies,
And, not reform’d, may prove pernicious.

Gar. Which reformation must be sudden too,
My noble lords: for those that tame wild horses
Pace ‘em not in their hands to make ‘em gentle,
But stop their mouths with stubborn bits, and spur ‘em,
Till they obey the manage. If we suffer,
Out of our easiness and childish pity
To one man’s honour, this contagious sickness,
Farewell all physic: and what follows then?
Commotions, uproars, with a general taint
Of the whole state: as, of late days, our neighbours,
The upper Germany, can dearly witness,
Yet freshly pitted in our memories.

Cran. My good lords, hitherto, in all the progress
Both of my life and office, I have labour’d,
And with no little study, that my teaching
And the strong course of my authority
Might go one way, and safely; and the end
Was ever, to do well: nor is there living,
I speak it with a single heart, my lords,
A man that more detests, more stirs against,
Both in his private conscience and his place,
Defacers of a public peace, than I do.

Pray heaven, the king may never find a he
With less allegiance in it! Men that make Envy and crooked malice nourishment
Dare bite the best. I do beseech your lord
That, in this case of justice, my accusers,
Be what they will, may stand forth face to
And freely urge against me.

Suf. Nay, my lord,
That cannot be: you are a counsellor,
And, by that virtue, no man dare accuse y

You shall know many dear, as you bold.

Cran. Is there no other way of
KING HENRY VIII.

I must needs to the Tower, my lords? Why, what a shame was this! Did my commission Bid ye so far forget yourselves? I gave ye Power as he was a counsellor to try him, Not as a groom; there's some of ye, I see, More out of malice than integrity, Would try him to the utmost, had ye mean; Which ye shall never have while I live.

Cran. Thus far, My most dread sovereign, may it like your grace To let my tongue excuse all. What was purposed Concerning his imprisonment, was rather, If there be faith in men, meant for his trial, And fair purgation to the world, than malice, I'm sure, in me.

King. Well, well, my lords, respect him: Take him, and use him well, he's worthy of it. I will say thus much for him, if a prince May be beholding to a subject, I Am, for his love and service, so to him. Make me no more ado, but all embrace him: Be friends, for shame, my lords! My Lord of Canterbury, I have a suit which you must not deny me; That is, a fair young maid that yet wants baptism. You must be godfather, and answer for her. Cran. The greatest monarch now alive may glory In such an honor: how may I deserve it, That am a poor and humble subject to you? King. Come, come, my lord, you'd spare your spoons; you shall have two noble partners with you; the old Duchess of Norfolk, and Lady Marquess Dorset: will these please you? Once more, my Lord of Winchester, I charge you, Embrace and love this man.

Gar. With a true heart And brother-love I do it.

Cran. And let heaven Witness, how dear I hold this confirmation.

King. Good man, those joyful tears show thy true heart: The common voice, I see, is verified Of thee, which says thus, 'Do my Lord of Canterbury A shrewd turn, and he is your friend for ever.' Come, lords, we trifle time away; I long To have this young one made a Christian. As I have made ye one, lords, one remain; So I grow stronger, you more honour gain.

[Exeunt.

SCENE IV. The palace yard.

Noise and tumult within. Enter Porter and his Man.

Port. Belong to the gallows, and be hanged, ye rogue! is this a place to roar in? Fetch me a dozen crab-tree staves, and strong ones: these are but switches to 'em. I'll scratch your heads.

Enter Guard. For me? a I go like a traitor traitor? a Receive him, see him safe i' the Tower. Stay, good my lords, I'm a little yet to say. Look there, my lords; virtue of that ring, I take my cause of the grips of cruel men, and give it to most noble judge, the king my master. This is the king's ring. 'Tis no counterfeit. 'Tis the right ring, by heaven: I told ye all, we first put this dangerous stone a-rolling,uld fall upon ourselves. Do you think, my lords, king will suffer but the little finger his man to be vex'd? 'Tis now too certain: much more is his life in value with him? I'd be fairly out on't! My mind gave me, eek ing tales and informations not this man, whose honesty the devil his disciples only envy at, few the fire that burns ye: now have at ye! r King, frowning on them; takes his seat. r. Dread sovereign, how much are we bound to heaven silly thanks, that gave us such a prince; only good and wise, but most religious: that, in all obedience, makes the church chief aim of his honour; and, to strengthen holy duty, out of dear respect, yea self in judgement comes to hear cause betwixt her and this great offender. You were ever good at sudden com mendations, p of Winchester. But know, I come not ar such flattery now, and in my presence; are too thin and bare to hide offences. you cannot reach, you play the spaniel, blink with wagging of your tongue to win me; whatso'er thou takest me for, I'm sure hast a cruel nature and a bloody. ranner] Good man, sit down. Now let me see the proudest bat dares most, but wag his finger at thee: that's holy, he had better starve but once think this place becomes thee not: May it please your grace,— g. No, sir, it does not please me. I thought I had had men of some under standing wisdom of my council; but I find none. discretion, lords, to let this man, ood man,—few of you deserve that title,—onest man, wait like a lousy footboy 139 mber-door? and one as great as you are?
you must be seeing christenings? do you look for ale and cakes here, you rude rascals?

Man. Pray, sir, be patient: 'tis as much impossible—

Unless we sweep 'em from the door with cannons—

To scatter 'em, as 'tis to make 'em sleep
On May-day morning; which will never be:

We may as well push against Powle's, as stir 'em.

Port. How got they in, and be hang'd?

Man. Alas, I know not; how gets the tide in?

As much as one sound cudgel of four-foot—

You see the poor remainder—could distribute, so

I made no spare, sir.

Port. You did nothing, sir.

Man. I am not Samson, nor Sir Guy, nor Colbrand,

To mow 'em down before me: but if I spared any

That had a head to hit, either young or old,

He or she, cuckold or cuckold-maker,

Let me ne'er hope to see a chine again;

And that I would not for a cow, God save her!

With that. Do you hear, master porter?

Port. I shall be with you presently, good master puppy. Keep the door close, sirrah.

Man. What would you have me do?

Port. What should you do, but knock 'em down by the dozens? Is this Moorfields to muster in? or have we some strange Indian with the great tool come to court, the women so besiege us? Bless me, what a fray of fornication is at door! On my Christian conscience, this one christening will beget a thousand; here will be father, godfather, and all together.

Man. The spoons will be the bigger, sir.

There is a fellow somewhat near the door, he should be a braizer by his face, for, o' my conscience, twenty of the dog-days now reign in

's nose; all that stand about him are under the line, they need no other pennace: that fire-drake did hit three times on the head, and three times was his nose discharged against me; he stands

there, like a peck-piece, to blow us. There was a handkercher's wife of small wit near him, that railed upon me till her pink'd porringer fell off her head, for kindling such a combustion in the state. I missed the meteor once, and hit that woman; who cried out 'Clubs!' when I might see from far some forty trucheners draw to her sucour, which were the hope o' the Strand, where she was quartered. They fell on; I made good my place: at length they came to the broom-staff to me; I defied 'em still: when suddenly a file of boys behind 'em, loose shot, delivered such a shower of pebbles, that I was fain to draw mine honour in, and let 'em win the work: the devil was amongst 'em, I think, surely.

Port. These are the youths that thunder at a playhouse, and fight for bitten apples; that no audience, but the tribulation of Tower-hill, or the limbs of Limehouse, their dear brothers, are able to endure. I have some of 'em in Limbo Patrum, and they are like to dance these three days:

besides the running banquet of two beaudles that is to come.

Enter LORD CHAMBERLAIN.

Cham. Mercy o' me, what a multitude are here!

They grow still too: from all parts they are coming,

As if we kept a fair here! Where are the porters,

These lazy knives? Ye have made a fine ha-fellows:

There is some rabble let in: are all these

Your faithful friends o' the suburbs? We s have

Great store of room, no doubt, left for the

When they pass back from the christening.

Port. An't please your honours,

We are but men; and what so many may do,

Not being torn a-pieces, we have done:

An army cannot rule 'em.

Cham. As I live,

If the king blame me for't, I'll lay ye all

By the heels, and suddenly; and on your head

Chap round fines for neglect: ye are lazy kna

And here ye lie baiting of bombardes, when

Ye should do service. Hark! the trump sound;

They're come already from the christening:

Go, break among the press, and find a way

To let the troop pass fairly; or I'll find

A Marshalsea shall hold ye play these months.

Port. Make way there for the princess.

Man. You great fe

My noble partners, and myself, thus pray:

All comfort, joy, in this most gracious lady

Heaven ever laid up to make parents happy;

May hourly fall upon ye!

King. Thank you, good lord archb

What is her name?

Cran. Elizabeth.

King. Amen.

Stand up, lord

[The King kisses her.

With this kiss take my blessing; God protect

Into whose hand I give thy life.

Cran. Amen.

King. My noble gossips, ye have be prodigal:

To all the plains about him: our children’s children
Shall see this, and bless heaven.

King. Thou speakest wonders.

Cres. She shall be, to the happiness of England,
An aged princess; many days shall see her,
And yet no day without a deed to crown it.
Would I had known no more! but she must die,
She must, the saints must have her; yet a virgin,
A most unspotted lily shall she pass
To the ground, and all the world shall mourn her.

King. O lord archbishop,
Thou hast made me now a man! never, before
This happy child, did I get any thing:
This oracle of comfort has so pleased me,
That when I am in heaven I shall desire
To see what this child does, and praise my Maker.

I thank ye all. To you, my good lord mayor, 70
And your good brethren, I am much beholding;
I have received much honour by your presence,
And ye shall find me thankful. Lead the way,
Lords:
Ye must all see the queen, and she must thank ye,
She will be sick else. This day, no man think
Has business at his house; for all shall stay:
This little one shall make it holiday. [Exeunt.

EPILOGUE.

'Tis ten to one this play can never please
All that are here: some come to take their ease,
And sleep an act or two; but those, we fear,
We have frightened with our trumpets; so, 'tis clear,
They’ll say 'tis naught: others, to hear the city
Abused extremely, and to cry 'That's witty!'
Which we have not done neither; that, I fear,
All the expected good we're like to hear
For this play at this time, is only in
The merciful construction of good women;
For such a one we should 'em: if they smile,
And say 'twill do, I know, within a while
All the best men are ours: for 'tis ill hap,
If they hold when their ladies bid 'em clap.

PROLOGUE.

In Troy, there lies the scene. From isles of Greece
The princes orgulous, their high blood chafed,
Have to the port of Athens sent their ships,
Fraught with the ministers and instruments Of cruel war: sixty and nine, that wore
Their crowns regal, from the Athenian bay
Put forth toward Phrygia; and their vow is made
To ransack Troy, within whose strong immures
The ravish'd Helen, Menelaus' queen,
With wanton Paris sleeps; and that's the quarrel.
To Tenedos they come;
And the deep-drawing barks do there disgorge
Their warlike frugage: now on Dardan plains
The fresh and yet unbruised Greeks do pitch
Their brave pavilions: Priam's six-gated city,
DARDAN, and Tymbria, Helias, Chetas, Troien,
And Antenorides, with massy staples
And corresponsive and fulfilling bolts,
Sperr up the sons of Troy.
Now expectation, tickling skittish spirits,
On one and other side, Trojan and Greek,
Sets all on hazard: and hither am I come
A prologue arm'd, but not in confidence
Of author's pen or actor's voice, but suited
In like conditions as our argument,
To tell you, fair beholders, that our play
Leaps o'er the vaunt and firstlings of those broils,
Beginning in the middle, starting thence away
To what may be digested in a play.
Like or find fault; do as your pleasures are:
Now good or bad, 'tis but the chance of war.

ACT I.

SCENE I. Troy. Before Priam's palace.

Enter Troylus armed, and Pandar

Troy. Call here my valet; I'll unarm myself.
Why should I war without the walls of Troy?
That find such cruel battle here within?
Each Trojan that is master of his heart,
Let him to field; Troylus, alas! hath none.
Pan. Will this gear ne'er be mended?
Troy. The Greeks are strong and skilful in their strength, Fierce to their skill and to their fierceness vast
But I am weaker than a woman's tear,
Tamer than sleep, fonder than ignorance,
Less vaillant than the virgin in the night
And skillless as unpractised infancy.
Pan. Well, I have told you enough for my part, I'll not meddle nor make no fi
He that will have a cake out of the whea

Troy. Have I not tarried?
Pan. Ay, the grinding; but you must not the bolting.
Troy. Have I not tarried?
Pan. Ay, the bolting, but you must take the leavening.
Troy. Still have I tarried.
Pan. Ay, to the leavening; but here's the word 'hereafter' the kneading, the mall the cake, the heating of the oven and the bake in the oven, you must stay the cooling too, or yo chance to burn your lips.
Troy. Patience herself, what goddess e'er
Doth lesser bane at sufferance than I do
When with your blood you daily paint her thus. I cannot fight upon this argument; it is too starved a subject for my sword. But Pandarus,—O gods, how do you plague me! I cannot come to Cressid but by Pandar; and he's as tetchy to be woo'd to woo, as she is stubborn-chaste against all suit. Tell me, Apollo, for thy Daphne's love, what Cressid is, what Pandar, and what we? Her bed is India; there she lies, a pearl: Between our Ilium and where she resides, Let it be call'd the wild and wandering flood, Ourself the merchant, and this sailing Pandar. Our doubtful hope, our convoy and our bark.

Alarum. Enter _Æneas._

_Æne._ How now, Prince Troilus! wherefore not afield? _Tro._ Because not there: this woman's answer sorts,
For womanish it is to be from thence. _Æne._ What news, _Æneas, from the field to-day? _ Tro._ By whom, _Æneas?_ _Æne._ Troilus, by Menelaus. _Tro._ Let Paris bleed: 'tis but a scar to scorn; Paris is gored with Menelaus' horn. [Alarum. _Æne._ Hark, what good sport is out of town to-day! _Tro._ Better at home, if 'would I might' were 'may.' But to the sport abroad: are you bound thither? _Æne._ In all swift haste. [Execut.

Scene II. The same. A street.

_Enter CRESSIDA and ALEXANDER._

_Cres._ Who were those went by? _Alex._ Queen Hecuba and Helen. _Cres._ And whither go they? _Alex._ Up to the eastern tower, whose height commands as subject all the vale, To see the battle. Hector, whose patience Is, as a virtue, fix'd, to-day was moved: He chid Andromache and struck his armorer, And, like as there were husbandry in war, Before the sun rose he was harness'd light, And to the field goes he; where every flower Did, as a prophet, weep what it foresaw In Hector's wrath.

_Cres._ What was his cause of anger? _Alex._ The noise goes, this: there is among the Greeks A lord of Trojan blood, nephew to Hector; They call him Ajax.

_Cres._ Good; and what of him? _Alex._ They say he is a very man per se, And stands alone. _Cres._ So do all men, unless they are drunk, sick, or have no legs. _Alex._ This man, lady, hath robbed many beasts of their particular additions; he is as valiant as the lion, churlish, as the bear, slow as the elephant: a man into whom nature hath so crowded humours that his valour is crushed into folly, his folly sauc'd with discretion: there is no man hath a virtue that he hath not a glimpse of,
nor any man an attain there he carries some staine of it: he is melancholy without cause, and merry against the hair: he hath the joints of every thing, but every thing so out of joint that he is a gouty Briareus, many hands and no use, or purblind Argus, all eyes and no sight.

Cres. But how should this man, that makes me smile, make Hector angry?

Alex. They say he yesterday coped Hector in the battle and struck him down, the disdain and shame whereof hath ever since kept Hector fasting and waking.

Cres. Who comes here?

Alex. Madam, your uncle Pandarus.

Enter Pandarus.

Cres. Hector's a gallant man.

Alex. As may be in the world, lady.

Pan. What's that? what's that?

Cres. Good morrow, uncle Pandarus.

Pan. Good morrow, cousin Cressid: what do you talk of? Good morrow, Alexander. How do you, cousin? When were you at Ilium?

Cres. This morning, uncle.

Pan. What were you talking of when I came? Was Hector armed and gone ere ye came to Ilium? Helen was not up, was she?

Cres. Hector was gone, but Helen was not up.

Pan. Even so: Hector was stirring early.

Cres. That were we talking of, and of his anger.

Pan. Was he angry?

Cres. So he says here.

Pan. True, he was so: I know the cause too: he'll lay about him to-day, I can tell them that: and there's Troilus will not come far behind him; let them take heed of Troilus, I can tell them that too.

Cres. What, is he angry too?

Pan. Who, Troilus? Troilus is the better man of the two.

Cres. O Jupiter! there's no comparison.

Pan. What, not between Troilus and Hector?

Do you know a man if you see him?

Cres. Ay, if I ever saw him before and knew him.

Pan. Well, I say Troilus is Troilus.

Cres. Then you say as I say; for, I am sure, he is not Hector.

Pan. No, nor Hector is not Troilus in some degrees.

Cres. Tis just to each of them; he is himself.

Pan. Himself! Alas, poor Troilus! I would he were.

Cres. So he is.

Pan. Condition, I had gone barefoot to India.

Cres. He is not Hector.

Pan. Himself! no, he's not himself: would a' were himself! Well, the gods are above: time must friend or end: well, Troilus, well: I would my heart were in her body. No, Hector is not a better man than Troilus.

Cres. Excuse me.

Pan. He is elder.

Cres. Pardon me, pardon me.

Pan. Th' other's not come to't: you shall tell me another tale, when th' other's come to't. Hector shall not have his wit this year.
TROILUS AND CRESSIDA.

CRES. Be those with swords?

PAN. Swords! any thing, he cares not; an the devil come to him, it's all one; by God's lid, it does one's heart good. Yonder comes Paris, yonder comes Paris.

PARIS passes.

CRES. Who's that?

PAN. That's Helenus. I marvel where Troilus is. That's Helenus. I think he went not forth to-day. That's Helenus.

CRES. Can Helenus fight, uncle?

PAN. Helenus? no. He'll fight indifferent well. I marvel where Troilus is. Hark! do you not hear the people cry 'Troilus'? Helenus is a priest.

CRES. What sneaking fellow comes yonder?

TROILUS passes.

PAN. Where? yonder? that's Deiphobus. 'Tis Troilus! there's a man, niece! Hem! Brave Troilus! the prince of chivalry! CRES. Peace, for shame, peace! Paris. Mark him; note him. O brave Troilus! Look well upon him, niece: look you how his sword is bloodied, and his helm more hacked than Hector's, and how he looks, and how he goes! O admirable youth! he ne'er saw three and twenty. Go thy way, Troilus, go thy way! Had I a sister were a grace, or a daughter a goddess, he should take his choice. O admirable man! Paris? Paris is dirt to him; and, I warrant, Helen, to change, would give an eye to boot.

CRES. Here come more.

Forces pass.

PAN. Asses, fools, dolts! chaff and bran, chaff and bran! porridge after meat! I could live and die t' the eyes of Troilus. Ne'er look, ne'er look: the eagles are gone: crows and daws, crows and daws! I had rather be such a man as Troilus than Agamemnon and all Greece.

CRES. There is among the Greeks Achilles, a better man than Troilus.

PAN. Achilles! a drayman, a porter, a very camel.

CRES. Well, well.

PAN. 'Well, well!' Why, have you any discretion? have you any eyes? do you know what a man is? Is not birth, beauty, good shape, discourse, manhood, learning, gentleness, virtue, youth, liberality, and such like, the spice and salt that season a man?

CRES. Ay, a minced man: and then to be baked with no date in the pie, for then the man's date's out.

PAN. You are such a woman! one knows not at what ward you lie.

CRES. Upon my back, to defend my belly;
upon my wit, to defend my wiles; upon my secrecy, to defend mine honesty; my mask, to defend my beauty; and you, to defend all these: and at all these wards I lie, at a thousand watches.

Pan. Say one of your watches. 299

Cres. Nay, I'll watch you for that; and that's one of the chiefest of them too: if I cannot ward what I would not have hit, I can watch you for telling how I took the blow; unless it swell past hiding, and then it's past watching.

Pan. You are such another!

Enter Troilus's Boy.

Boy. Sir, my lord would instantly speak with you.

Pan. Where?

Boy. At your own house; there he unarms him.

Pan. Good boy, tell him I come. [Exit Boy.

I doubt he be hurt. Fare ye well, good niece.

Cres. Adieu, uncle.

Pan. I'll be with you, niece, by and by.

Cres. To bring, uncle?

Pan. Ay, a token from Troilus.

Cres. By the same token, you are a bawd.

[Exit Pandarus.

Words, vows, gifts, tears, and love's full sacrifice,
He offers in another's enterprise:
But more in Troilus thousand fold I see
Than in the glass of Pandar's praise may be;
Yet hold I off. Women are angels, wooing;
Things won are done; joy's soul lies in the doing.
That she beloved knows nought that knows not this:
Men prize the thing ungain'd more than it is:
That she was never yet that ever knew
Love got so sweet as when desire did sue.
Therefore this maxim out of love I teach:
Achievement is command; ungain'd, beseech:
Then though my heart's content firm love doth bear,
Nothing of that shall from mine eyes appear.

[Exeunt.

SCENE III. The Grecian camp. Before Agamemnon's tent.

Sennet. Enter Agamemnon, Nestor, Ulysses, Menelaus, and others.

Agam. Princes, What grief hath set the jaundice on your cheeks? The ample proposition that hope makes In all designs begun on earth below Fails in the promised largeness: checks and disasters Grow in the veins of actions highest rear'd, As knots, by the conflux of meeting sap, Infect the sound pine and divert his grain Tortive and errant from his course of growth. Nor, princes, is it matter new to us That we come short of our suppose so far That after seven years' siege yet Troy walls stand; Sith every action that hath gone before, Whereof we have record, trial did draw Bias and thwart, not answering the aim, And that unbodied figure of the thought That gave't surmis'd shape. Why then, you princes, Do you with cheeks abash'd behold our works, And call them shames? which are indeed none Else But the protractive trials of great Jove To find persistency in man: The fineness of which metal is not found In fortune's love; for then the bold and coward The wise and fool, the artist and unread, The hard and soft, seem all affined and kind But, in the wind and tempest of her frown, Distinction, with a broad and powerful fan, Puffing at all, winnows the light away, And what hath mass or matter, by itself Lies rich in virtue and unmingled.

Nest. With due observance of thy godlike Great Agamemnon, Nestor shall apply Thy latest words. In the reproof of chanc Lies the true proof of men: the sea being arness How many shallow bauble boats dare sail Upon her patient breast, making their way With those of nobler bulk! But let the ruffian Boreas once enrage The general Thetis, and anon behold The strong-ribb'd bark through liquid mood cut Bounding between the two moist elements Like Perseus' horse: where's then the saucy Whose weak untember'd sides but even no Co-rival'ld greatness? Either to harbour Or made a toast for Neptune. Even so Doth valour's show and valour's worth divide In storms of fortune; for in her ray and The herd hath more annoyance by the bro Than by the tiger; but when the splitting Makes flexible the knees of knotted oaks, And flies fled under shade, why, then the of courage As roused with rage with rage doth symph And with an accent tuned in selfsame key Retorts to chiding fortune.

Ulyss. Agamemnon, Thou great commander, nerve and bone of Heart of our numbers, soul and only spirit In whom the temps and the minds of all Should be shut up, hear what Ulysses spe Besides the applause and approbation The which, [To Agamemnon] most mig thy place and sway, [To Nestor] And thou most reverend a stretch'd-out life I give to both your speeches, which were As Agamemnon and the hand of Greece Should hold up high in brass, and such an As venerable Nestor, hatch'd in silver, Should with a bond of air, strong as the On which heaven rides, knit all the Greek To his experienced tongue, yet let it plea Thou great, and wise, to hear Ulysses spe Agam. Speak, Prince of Ithaca; and less expect That matter needless, of importless burde Divide thy lips, than we are confident, When rank Thersites opens his mastiw We shall hear music, wit and oracle In Ulyss. Troy, yet upon his basis, had been And the great Hector's word had lack'd a But for these instances. The specialty of rule hath been neglected And, look, how many Grecian tents do st
What is the remedy?

Ulysses. The great Achilles, whom opinion crowns
The sinew and the forefront of our host,
Having his ear full of his airy fame,
Grows dainty of his worth and in his tent
Lies mocking our designs: with him Patroclus
Upon a lazy bed the livelong day
Breaks scurril jests,
And with ridiculous and awkward action,
Which, slanderer, he imitation calls,
He pageants us. Sometime, great Agamemnon,
Thy toppless deputation he puts on,
And, like a strutting player, whose conceit
Lies in his hamstring, and doth think it rich
To hear the wooden dialogue and sound
'Twixt his stretch'd footing and the scaffoldage,—
Such to-be-pitted and o'er-wrested seeming
He acts thy greatness in: and when he speaks,
'Tis like a chime a-mending; with terms un-squared,
Which, from the tongue of roaring Typhon
dropp'd,
Would seem hyperboles. At this lusty stuff
The large Achilles, on his press'd bed lolliing,
From his deep chest laughs out a loud applause;
Cries 'Excellent!' 'tis Agamemnon just.
Now play me Nestor; hem, and stroke thy beard,
As he being drest to some oration,'
That's done, as near as the extremest ends
Of parallels, as like as Vulcan and his wife:
Yet god Achilles still cries 'Excellent!
'Tis Nestor right. Now play him me, Patroclus, Arming to answer in a night alarm.'
And then, forsooth, the faint defects of age
Must be the scene of mirth; to cough and spit,
And, with a palsy-fumbling on his goiter,
Shake in and out the rivet: and at this sport
Sir Valour dies; cries 'O, enough, Patroclus;
Or give me ribs of steel! I shall split all
In pleasure of my spleen.' And in this fashion,
All our abilities, gifts, natures, shapes,
Severals and generals of grace exact,
Achievements, plots, orders, preventions,
Excitements to the field, or speech for truce,
Success or loss, what is or is not, serves
As stuff for these two to make paradoxes.

Nest. And in the imitation of these twain—
Who, as Ulysses says, opinion crowns
With an imperial voice—many are infect
Ajax is grown self-will'd, and bears his head
In such a rein, in full as proud a place
As broad Achilles; keeps his tent like him:
Makes factious feasts; rails on our state of war,
Bold as an oracle, and sets Thersites,
A slave whose gale coins slanders like a mint,
To match us in comparisons with dirt,
To weaken and discredit our exposure,
How rank soever rounded in with danger.

Ulysses. They tax our policy, and call it cowardice,
Count wisdom as no member of the war,
Forestall prescience and esteem no act
But that of hand: the still and mental parts,
That do contrive how many hands shall strike,
When fitness calls them on, and know by measure
Of their observant toil the enemies' weight,—
Why, this hath not a finger's dignity:—
They call this bed-work, mappery, closet-war;
Enter Aeneas.

Agam. What would you 'fore our tent?

Aene. Is this great Agamemnon's tent, I pray you?

Agam. Even this.

Aene. May one, that is a herald and a prince, Do a fair message to his kingly ears?

Agam. With surety stronger than Achilles' arm

'Twixt all the Greekish heads, which with one voice Call Agamemnon head and general.

Aene. If I were to those most imperial looks Know them from eyes of other mortals?

Agam. How! Aeneas; My ask, I tell thee, Thine truth shall know, Trojan, he is, Aeneas.

Agam. Sir, you of Troy, call you yourself Aeneas?

Aene. Ay, Greek, that is my name.

Agam. What's your affair, I pray you?

Aene. Sir, pardon; 'tis for Agamemnon's ears.

Agam. He hears nought privately that comes from Troy.

Aene. Nor I from Troy come not to whisper him:

I bring a trumpet to awake his ear, To set his sense on the attentive bent, And then to speak:

Agam. Speak frankly as the wind; It is not Agamemnon's sleeping hour: Or thou shalt know, Trojan, he is awake, He tells thee so himself.

Aene. Trumpet, blow loud, Send thy brass voice through all these lazy tents; And every Greek of mettle, let him know, What Troy means fairly shall be spoke aloud.

We have, great Agamemnon, here in Troy A prince call'd Hector,—Pram is his father, Who in this dull and long-continued truce Is vastly grown: he bade me take a trumpet, And to this purpose speak. Kings, princes, lords, If there be one, among the fair'st of Greece That holds his honour higher than his case, That seeks his praise more than he fear peril, That knows his honour, and knows not his fate That loves his mistress more than in confess With truant vows to her own lips he loves, And dare avow her beauty and her worth In other arms than hers,—to him this chaste Hector, in view of Trojans and of Greeks, Shall make it good, or do his best to do it, He hath a lady, wiser, fairer, truer, Than ever Greek did compass in his arms, And will to-morrow with his trumpet call Midway between your tents and walls of Troy To rouse a Greek that is true in love: If any come, Hector shall honour him; If none, he'll say in Troy when he retires, The Grecian dames are sunburnt and not w The splinter of a lance. Even so much.

Agam. This shall be told our lovers, Aeneas;

If none of them have soul in such a kind, We left them all at home: but we are sold; And may that soldier a mere recreant prove That means not, hath not, or is not in love If then one, or hath, or means to be, That one meets Hector; if none else, I am Nest. Tell him of Nestor, one that was When Hector's grandsire suck'd: he is old But if there be not in our Grecian host One noble man that hath one spark of fire, To answer for his love, tell him from me I'll hide my silver beard in a gold beaver And in my vantage put this w'der'd brat And meeting him will tell him that my lad Was fairer than his grandam and as chaste As may be in the world: his youth in flood I'll prove this truth with my three drops of Aeneas. Now heavens forbid such scorn youth!

Ulyss. Amen.

Agam. Fair Lord Aeneas, let me touch hand;

To our pavilion shall I lead you, sir. Achilles shall have word of this intent; So shall each lord of Greece, from tent to tent You shall feast with us before you go And find the welcome of a noble foe.

[Exeunt all but Ulysses and Nestor.]

Ulyss. What says Ulysses?

Ulyss. I have a young conception in my heart, Boy; let me bring it to some shape.

Nest. What is't?

Ulyss. This 'tis: Blunt wedges rive hard knots: the seed To this maturity blown up In rank Achilles must or now be crop'd, Or, shedding, breed a nursery of like evil To overbulk us all.

Nest. Well, and how?

Ulyss. This challenge that the gallant sends,
I. TROILUS AND CRESSIDA.

SCENE I. A part of the Grecian camp

Enter Ajax and Thersites.

Ajax. Thou bitch-wolf's son, canst thou not hear? (Beating him) Feel, then.

Thersites. Thou art proclaimed a fool, I think.

Ajax. Do not, porpentine, do not: my fingers itch.

Ajax. Thou wouldst itch from head to foot and I had the scratching of thee; I would make thee the loathsomest scab in Greece. When thou art forth in the incursions, thou striketh as slow as another.

Ajax. I say, the proclamation!

Thers. Thou grumblest and railest every hour on Achilles, and thou art as full of envy at his greatness as Cerberus is at Proserpina's beauty, ay, that thou barkest at him.

Ajax. Mistress Thersites!

Thers. Thou shouldst strike him.

Ajax. Coblafo!

Thers. He would pun thee into shivers with his fist, as a sailor breaks a biscuit.

Ajax. (Beating him) You whoreson cur!

Thers. Do, do.

Ajax. Thou stool for a witch!

Thers. Ay, do, do; thou sodden-witted lord! thou hast no more brain than I have in mine elbows; an ass inquiry may tutor thee; thou scurvy, valiant ass! thou art here but to thrash Trojans; and thou art bought and sold among those of any wit, like a barbarian slave. If thou use to beat

Vet go we under our opinion still
That we have better men. But, hit or miss,
Our project's life this shape of sense assumes:
Ajax employ'd plucks down Achilles' plumes.

Nest. Ulysses,

Now I begin to relish thy advice
And I will give a taste of it forthwith.
To Agamemnon: go we to him straight.

Two curs shall tame each other: pride alone
Must tarre the mastiffs on, as 'twere their bone. [Exeunt.]
me, I will begin at thy heel, and tell what thou art by inches, thou thing of no bowels, thou!
Achil. You dog!
Ther. You scurvy lord!
Ajax. [Beating him] You cur!
Ther. Mars his idiot! do, rudeness; do, camel; do, do.

Enter Achilles and Patroclus.
Achil. Why, how now, Ajax! wherefore do you thus? How now, Thersites! what’s the matter, man?
Ther. You see him there, do you?
Achil. Ay; what’s the matter?
Ther. Nay, look upon him.
Achil. So I do: what’s the matter?
Ther. Nay, but regard him well.
Achil. ‘Well!’ why, I do so.
Ther. But yet you look not well upon him; for, whosoever you take him to be, he is Ajax.
Achil. I know that, fool.
Ther. Ay, but that fool knows not himself.
Ajax. Therefore I beat thee.
Ther. Lo, lo, lo, lo, what modicum of wit he utters! his evasions have ears thus long. I have bobbed his brain more than he has beat my bones: I will buy nine sparrows for a penny, and his pia mater is not worth the ninth part of a sparrows.
This lord, Achilles, Ajax, who wears his wit in his belly and his guts in his head, I’ll tell you what I say of him.

Achil. What?
Ther. I say this, Ajax—[Ajax offers to beat him.
Achil. Nay, good Ajax.
Ther. Has not so much wit—
Achil. Nay, I must hold you.
Ther. As will stop the eye of Helen’s needle, for whom he comes to fight.
Achil. Peace, fool!
Ther. I would have peace and quietness, but the fool will not: he there: that he; look you there.
Ajax. O thou damned cur! I shall—
Achil. Will you set your wit to a fool’s?
Ther. No, I warrant you; for a fool’s will shame it.
Patr. Good words, Thersites.
Achil. What’s the quarrel?
Ajax. I bade the vile owl go learn me the tenour of the proclamation, and he rails upon me.
Ther. I serve thee not.
Ajax. Well, go to, go to.
Ther. I serve here voluntary.
Achil. Your last service was sufferance, ’twas not voluntary: no man is beaten voluntary; Ajax was here the voluntary, and you as under an impress.
Ther. E’en so; a great deal of your wit, too, lies in your sinews, or else there be liars. Hector shall have a great catch, if he knock out either of your brains: a’ were as good crack a nasty nut with no kernel.
Achil. What, with me too, Thersites?
Ther. There’s Ulysses and old Nestor, whose wit was mouldy ere your grandsires had nails on their toes, yoke you like draught-oxen and make you plough up the wars.
Achil. What, what?

Ther. Yes, good sooth: to, Achilles!
Ajax! to!
Ajax. I shall cut out your tongue.
Ther. ‘Tis no matter; I shall speak as thou artward.
Patr. No more words, Thersites; peace!
Ther. I will hold my peace when Ajax brach bids me, shall I?
Achil. There’s for you, Patroclus.
Ther. I will see you hanged, like clot here I come any more to your tents: I will where there is wit stirring and leave the f. of fools.
Patr. A good riddance.
Achil. Marry, this, sir, is proclaim’d th all our host:
That Hector, by the fifth hour of the sun,
Will with a trumpet twixt our tents and Th;
To-morrow morning call some knight to an
That hath a stomach; and such a one that Maintain—I know not what: ’tis trash. Far Ajax. Farewell. Who shall answer this?
Achil. I know not: ’tis put to lottery;
He knew his man.
Ajax. O, meaning you. I will go learn of it.

[Exeunt.

Scene II. Troy. A room in Priam’s house.
Enter Priam, Hector, Troilus, Paris, Helenus.
Pri. After so many hours, lives, speeches
Thus once again says Nestor from the Greek ‘Deliver Helen, and all damage else—
As honour, loss of time, travail, expense,
Wounds, friends, and what else dear that we
In hot digestion of this cormorant war—
Shall be struck off.” Hector, what say you?
Helen. Though no man lesser fears the
As far as toucheth my particular,
Nestor, dread Priam,
There is no lady of more softer bowels,
More spongy to succ in the sense of fear,
More ready to cry out ‘Who knows what fol
Than Hector is: the wound of peace is sun
Surety secure; but modest doubt is call’d
The beacon of the wise, the tent that search
The bottom of the worst. Let Helen go
Since the firstword was drawn about this qu
Every tithe soul, ‘mongst many thousand
Hath been as dear as Helen; I mean, of ou
If we have lost so many tenths of ours,
To guard a thing not ours nor worth to us,
Had it our name, the value of one ten,
What merit’s in that reason which denies
The yielding of her up?
Helen. Fie, fie, my brother!
Weigh you the worth and honour of a kin
So great as our dear father in a scale
Of common ounces? will you with counter
What proportion of his infinite?
And buckle in a waist most fathomless
With spans and inches so diminutive
As fears and reasons? fie, for godly shame.
That in their country did them that disgrace,
We fear to warrant in our native place!
Cas. [Within] Cry, Trojans, cry!
Pri. What noise? what shriek is this?
Tro. 'Tis our mad sister, I do know her voice.
Cas. [Within] Cry, Trojans!
Her. It is Cassandra.

Enter Cassandra, raving.
Cas. Cry, Trojans, cry! I lend me ten thousand eyes,
And I will fill them with prophetic tears.
Her. Peace, sister, peace!
Cas. Virgins and boys, mid-age and wrinkled eld,
Soft infancy, that nothing canst but cry,
Add to my clamours! let us pay betimes
A moleity of that mass of noom to come.
Cry, Trojans, cry! practise your eyes with tears!
Troy must not be, nor goody Ilion stand;
Our firebrand brother, Paris, burns us all.
Cry, Trojans, cry! a Helen and a woe:
Cry, cry! Troy burns, or else let Helen go.
[Exit.]
Her. Now, youthful Troilus, do not these high strains
Of divination in our sister work
Some touches of remorse? or is your blood
So madly hot that no discourse of reason
Nor fear of bad success in a bad cause,
Can qualify the same?
Tro. Why, brother Hector,
We may not think the justness of each act
Such and no other than event doth form it,
Nor once deject the courage of our minds.
Because Cassandra's mad: her brain-sick raptures
Cannot distaste the goodness of a quarrel
Which hath our several honours all engaged
To make it gracious. For my private part,
I am no more touch'd than all Priam's sons:
And Jove forbid there should be done amongst us
Such things as might offend the weakest spleen
To fight for and maintain!
Par. Else might the world convince of levity
As well my undertakings as your counsels:
But I attest the gods, your full consent
Cave wings to my propension and cut off
All fears attending on so dire a project.
For what, alas, can these my single arms?
What propugnation is in one man's valour,
To stand the push and emnity of those
This quarrel would excite? Yet, I protest,
Were I alone to pass the difficulties
And had as ample power as I have will,
Paris should never retrace what he hath done,
Nor faint in the pursuit.
Par. Paris, you speak
Like one besotted on your sweet delights:
You have the honey still, but these the gall;
So to be valiant is no praise at all.
Par. Sir, I propose not merely to myself
The pleasures such a beauty brings with it;
But I would have the soil of her fair rape
Wiped off, in honour keeping her.
What treason were it to the ransack'd queen,
Disgrace to your great worths and shame to me,
Now to deliver her possession up?
On terms of base compulsion? Can it be
That so degenerate a strain as this Should once set footing in your generous bosoms?
There's not the meanest spirit on our party
Without a heart to dare or sword to draw
When Helen is defended, nor none so noble
Whose life were ill bestow'd or death unfamed
Where Helen is the subject; then, I say, 160
Well may we fight for her whom, we know well,
The world's large spaces cannot parallel.

Hec. Paris and Troilus, you have both said
well,
And on the cause and question now in hand
Have glowed, but superciliously: not much
Unlike young men, whom Aristotle thought
Unfit to hear moral philosophy:
The reasons you allege do more conduce
To the hot passion of distemper'd blood
Than to make up a free determination 170
'Twixt right and wrong, for pleasure and revenge.
I have ears more deaf than adders to the voice
Of any true decision. Nature craves
All dues be render'd to their owners: now,
What nearer debt in all humanity
Than wife is to the husband? If this law
Of nature be corrupted through affection,
And that great minds, of partial indulgence
To their benumbed wills, resist the same,
There is a law in each well-order'd nation
To curb those raging appetites that are Most disobedient and refractory.
If Helen then be wife to Sparta's king,
As it is known she is, these moral laws
Of nature and of nations speak aloud
To have her back return'd: thus to persist
In doing wrong exterminates not wrong,
But makes it much more heavy. Hector's opinion
Is this in view of truth; yet neither less, My spritely brethren, I propend to you 190
In resolution to keep Helen still,
For 'tis a cause that hath no mean dependance
Upon our joint and several dignities.

Troc. Why, there you touch'd the life of our design:
Were it not glory that we more affected
Than the performance of our heaving spleens,
I would not wish a drop of Trojan blood
Spent more in her defence. But, worthy Hector,
She is a theme of honour and renown,
A spur to valiant and magnanimous deeds, 200
Whose present courage may beat down our foes,
And fame in time to come canonize us;
For, I presume, brave Hector would not lose
So rich advantage of a promised glory
As smiles upon the forehead of this action
For the wide world's revenue.

Hec. I am yours,
You valiant offspring of great Priamus.
I have a roving challenge sent amongst
The dull and factious nobles of the Greeks
Will strike amazement to their drowsy spirits: 210
I was advertised their great general slept,
Whilst emulation in the army crept:
This, I presume, will wake him. [Exeunt.]

Scene III. The Grecian camp, Before
Achilles' tent.

Enter Thersites, solus.

Ther. How now, Thersites! what, lost in the labyrinth of thy fury! Shall the elephant Ajax carry it thus? he beats me, and I rail at him:
O, worthy satisfaction! would it were other that I could beat him, whilst he railed at
'Sfoot, I'll learn to conjure and raise devils
I'll see some issue of my spiteful execrations.
Then there's Achilles, a rare engine! If be not taken till these two undermine it, we shall stand till they fall of themselves.
Now great thunder-darter of Olympus, that thou art Jove, the king of gods, Mercury, lose all the serpentine craft of caudices; if ye take not that little little less little wit from them that they have! which armed ignorance itself knows is so abjectly scarce, it will not in circuit pavement deliver from a spider, without drawing their massy and cutting the web. After this, the venge on the whole camp! or rather, the bone for that, methinks, is the curse depending those war for a placquet. I have sais prayers and devil Envoy say Amen. What my Lord Achilles!

Enter Patroclus.

Patr. Who's there? Thersites! Good sites, come in and rail.

Patr. Thou mayst tell that knowest.

Achil. O, tell, tell.

Ther. I'll decline the whole question.

He is so plaguy proud that the death-tokens of it Cry 'N' No recovery.'

Agam. Let Ajax go to him.

Dear lord, go you and bring him in his tent:
'Tis said he holds you well, and will be led 190
At your request a little from himself.

Ulyss. O Agamemnon, let it not be so!
We'll consecrate the steps that Ajax makes
When they go from Achilles: shall the proud
lord
That bastes his arrogance with his own seam
And never suffers matter of the world
Enter his thoughts, save such as do revolve.
And ruminate himself, shall he be worship'd
Of that we hold an idol more than he?
No, this thrice worthy and right valiant lord 200
Must not so stale his palm, nobly acquired;
Nor, by my will, assimulate his merit,
As amply titled as Achilles is,
By going to Achilles:
That were to enlard his fat already pride
And add more coals to Cancer when he burns
With entertaining great Hyperion.
This lord go to him! Jupiter forbid,
And say in thunder ' Achilles go to him.'

Nest. [Aside to Dio.] O, this is well; he rubs the vein of him.

Dio. [Aside to Nest.] And how his silence
Drinks up this applause!

Ajax. If I go to him, with my armed fist
I'll push him o'er the face,

Agam. O, no, you shall not go.

Ajax. An a' be proud with me, I'll pheeze his pride:
Let me go to him.

Ulyss. Not for the worth that hangs upon our quarrel.

Ajax. A paltry, insolent fellow!

Nest. How he describes himself!

Ajax. Can he not be sociable?

Ulyss. The raven chides blackness.

Ajax. I'll let his humours blood.

Agam. He will be the physician that should be the patient.

Ajax. An all men were o' my mind,—

Ulyss. Wit would be out of fashion.

Ajax. A' should not bear it so, a' should eat swords first; shall pride carry it?

Nest. An 'twould, you'd carry half.

Ulyss. A' would have ten shares.

Ajax. I will knead him; I'll make him supple.

Nest. He's not yet through warm: force him with praises: pour in, pour in; his ambition is dry.

Ulyss. [To Agam.] My lord, you feed too much on this dislike.

Nest. Our noble general, do not do so.

Dio. You must prepare to fight without Achilles.

Ulyss. Why, 'tis this naming of him does him harm.

Here is a man—but 'tis before his face; 240

I will be silent.

Nest. Wherefore should you so?
He is not emulous, as Achilles is Ulyss. Know the whole world, he is as valiant.

Ajax. A whoreson dog, that shall palter thus with us!
Would he wear a Trojan!

Nest. What a vice were it in Ajax now,—

Ulyss. If he were proud,—

Dio. Or covetous of praise,—

Ulyss. Ay, or surly borne,—

Dio. Or strange, or self-affected!

Ulyss. Thank the heavens, lord, thou sweet composure;
Praise him that got thee, she that gave suck:
Famed be thy tutor, and thy parts of nature
Thrice famed, beyond all erudition:
But he that disciplined thy arms to fight,
Let Mars divide eternity in twain,
And give him half: and, for thy vigour,
Bull-bearing Milo his addition yield
To sinewy Ajax. I will not praise thy wish
Which, like a bourn, a pale, a shore, confirm Thy spacious and dilated parts: here's No
Instructed by the antiquary times,
He must, he is, he cannot but be wise:
But pardon, father Nestor, were your days
As green as Ajax' and your brain so tempest
You should not have the eminence of him,
But be as Ajax.

Ajax. Shall I call you father?

Nest. Ay, my good son.

Dio. Be ruled by him, Lord

Ulyss. There is no tallying here; the Achilles
Keeps thickets. Please it our great general
To call together all his state of war;
Fresh kings are come to Troy: to-morrow
We must with all our main of power stand
And here's a lord,—come knights from west,
And call their flower, Ajax shall cope the Agam. Go we to council. Let Achilles Light boats sail swift, though greater hulls deep.

ACT III.

SCENE I. Troy. Priam's palace.

Enter a Servant and Pandarus.

Pan. Friend, you! pray you, a wot you not follow the young Lord Paris?

Serv. Ay, sir, when he goes before m

Pan. You depend upon him, I mean!

Serv. Sir, I do depend upon the lord.

Pan. You depend upon a noble gentle must needs praise him.

Serv. The lord be praised!

Pan. You know me, do you not?

Serv. Faith, sir, superficially,

Pan. Friend, know me better; I am t

Pandarus.

Serv. I hope I shall know your honour
Pan. I do desire it.

Serv. You are in the state of grace.

Pan. Grace! not so, friend: honour o ship are my titles. [Music within.] Wha is this?

Serv. I do but partly know, sir; it is p parts.

Pan. Know you the musicians?

Serv. Wholly, sir,

Pan. Who play they to?

Serv. To the hearers, sir.

Pan. At whose pleasure, friend?
TROILUS AND CRESSIDA.

7. At mine, sir, and theirs that love music.
Command, I mean, friend.

9. Who shall I command, sir?
Friend, we understand not one another;
To courtly and thou art too cunning.
request do these men play?

10. That's to indeed, sir: marry, sir, at quest of Paris my lord, who's there in per-with him, the mortal Venus, the heart-blood iy, love's invisible soul—
Who, my cousin Cressida?
No, sir, Helen: could you not find out her attributes?

15. It should seem, fellow, that thou hast in the Lady Cressida. I come to speak and I from the Prince Troilus: I will make limental assault upon him, for my business

20. Sudden business! there's a stewed
indeed!

Enter PARIS and HELEN, attended.
Fair be to you, my lord, and to all this apathy! fair desires, in all fair measure, ude them! especially to you, fair queen!
ights be your fair pillow!

25. Dear lord, you are full of fair words.
You speak your fair pleasure, sweet
Fair prince, here is good broken music.
You have broke it, cousin: and, by my shall make it whole again; you shall out with a piece of your performance.

30. is full of harmony.
Truly, lady, no.

31. O, sir,—
Rude, in sooth; in good sooth, very

33. Well said, my lord! well, you say so I have business to my lord, dear queen.
will you vouchsafe me a word?

36. Nay, this shall not hedge us out: we'll sing, certainly.

37. Well, sweet queen, you are pleasant
But, marry, thus, my lord: my de-most esteemed friend, your brother

40. My Lord Pandarus; honey-sweet
Go to, sweet queen, go to:—commands most affectionately to you,—

45. You shall not bob us out of our me-you do, our melancholy upon your head!
Sweet queen, sweet queen! that's a
I, faith.

50. And to make a sweet lady sad is a Nay, that shall not serve your turn:
ll it not, in truth, la. Nay, I care not words; no, no. And, my lord, he de-
, that if the king call for him at supper, make his excuse.

55. My Lord Pandarus,— What says my sweet queen, my very et queen?
What exploit's in hand? where sups he

60. Nay, but, my lord,—
What says my sweet queen? My cou-in will fall out with you. You must not know where he sups.

Par. I'll lay my life, with my disposer Cressida.

Pan. No, no, no such matter; you are wide:
come, your disposer is sick.

Par. Well, I'll make excuse.
Pan. Ay, good my lord; Why should you say Cressida? no, your poor disposer's sick.
Par. I spy.
Pan. You spy! what do you spy? Come, give me an instrument. Now, sweet queen.
Heleu. Why, this is kindly done.
Pan. My niece is horribly in love with a thing you have, sweet queen.
Helen. She shall have it, my lord, if it be not my lord Paris.
Pan. He! no, she'll none of him; they two twin.

70. Helen. Falling in, after falling out, may make them three.

Pan. Come, come, I'll hear no more of this;
I'll sing you a song now.

Helen. Ay, ay, pri thee now. By my troth, sweet lord, thou hast a fine forehead.
Pan. Ay, you may, you may.
Helen. Let thy song be love: this love will undo us all. O Cupid, Cupid, Cupid!

Pan. Love! ay, that it shall, I faith.
Par. Ay, good now, love, love, nothing but
love.

80. Pan. In good troth, it begins so. [Sings.
Love, love, nothing but love, still more!
For, O, love's bow
Shoots buck and doe:
The shaft confounds,
Not that it wounds,
But tickles still the sore.

These lovers cry Oh! oh! they die!
Yet that which seems the wound to kill,
Doth turn oh! oh! to ha! ha! he!
So dying love lives still:
Oh! oh! a while, but ha! ha! ha!
Oh! oh! groans out for ha! ha! ha! ha!

Heigh-ho!
Helen. In love, I faith, to the very tip of the 90. nose.

Pan. He eats nothing but doves, love, and that breeds hot blood, and hot blood begets hot thoughts, and hot thoughts beget hot deeds, and hot deeds is love.

Pan. Is this the generation of love? hot blood, hot thoughts, and hot deeds? Why, they are vipers: is love a generation of vipers? Sweet lord, who's a-field to day?

Par. Hecétor, Deiphobus, Helenus, Antenor, and all the gallantry of Troy: I would fain have ammed to-day, but my Nell would not have it so.
How chance my brother Troilus went not?
Helen. He hangs the lip at something: you know all, Lord Pandarus.

Pan. Not I, honey-sweet queen. I long to hear how they sped to-day. You'll remember your brother's excuse?

Par. To a hair.
Pan. Farewell, sweet queen.
Helen. Command me to your niece.

Pan. I will, sweet queen. [Exit.

[A retreat sounded.]
Troilus. They're come from field: let us to Prism's hall,
To greet the warriors. Sweet Helen, I must
To help unarm our Hector: his stubborn buckles,
With these your white enchanting fingers touch'd;
Shall more obey than to the edge of steel
Or force of Greekish sinews; you shall do more Than all the island kings,—disarm great Hector.
Helen. 'Twill make us proud to be his servant,
Paris:
Yea, what he shall receive of us in duty
Gives us more palm in beauty than we have, 170
Yea, overshines ourself.
Par. Sweet, above thought I love thee.

Scene II. The same. Pandarus' orchard.
Enter Pandarus and Troilus' Boy, meeting.
Pan. How now! where's thy master? at my cousin Cressida's?
Boy. No, sir; he stays for you to conduct him thither.
Pan. O, here he comes.

Enter Troilus.
How now, how now!
Tro. Sirrah, walk off. [Exit Boy.
Pan. Have you seen my cousin?
Tro. No, Pandarus: I stalk about her door,
Like a strange soul upon the Stygian banks 10
Staying for waftage. O, be thou my Charon,
And give me swift transportance to those fields
Where I may wallow in the Stygian beds
Proposed for the deserrver! O gentle Pandarus,
From Cupid's shoulder pluck his painted wings,
And fly with me to Cressid! 20
Pan. Walk here i' the orchard, I'll bring her straight.
Tro. I am giddy; expectation whirls me round.
The imaginary relish is so sweet
That it enchants my sense; what will it be,
When that the watery palate tastes indeed
Love's thrice repired nectar? death, I fear me,
Swooning destruction, or some joy too fine,
Too subtle-potent, tuned too sharp in sweetness,
For the capacity of my ruder powers:
I fear it much; and I do fear besides,
That I shall lose distinction in my joys;
As doth a battle, when they charge on heaps
The enemy flying.

Re-enter Pandarus.
Pan. She's making her ready, she'll come straight:
you must be witty now. She does so blush, and fetches her wind so short, as if she were frayed with a sprite: I'll fetch her. It is the prettiest villain; she fetches her breath as short as a new-ta'en sparrow. [Exit.
Tro. Even such a passion doth embrace my bosom:
My heart beats thicker than a feverous pulse;
And all my powers do their bestowing lose,
Like vassallage at unawares encountering.
The eye of majesty.

Re-enter Pandarus with Cressida.
Pan. Come, come, what need you blush?
shame's a baby. Here she is now: sweet oaths now to her that you have sworn to.
What, are you gone again? you must be ware you be made tame, must you? Come ways, come your ways; an you draw back we'll put you i' the fills. Why do you not to her? Come, draw your curtain, and let your picture. Alas the day, how loath ye to offend daylight! an 'twere dark, you'd sooner. So; rub on, and kiss the mis
How now! a kiss in fever-time! build there penter; the air is sweet. Nay, you shall your hearts out ere I part you. The falcon tercel, for all the ducks i' the river: go to:
Tro. You have bereft me of all words.
Pan. Words pay no debts, give her but she'll bereave you o' the deeds too, call your activity in question. What, again? Here's 'In witness whereof the interchangeably'—Come in, come in: I'll

Cres. Will you walk in, my lord?
Tro. O Cressida, how often have I me thus!
Cres. Wished, my lord! The gods grant,
O my lord.
Tro. What should they grant? what this pretty abruption? What too curious espies my sweet lady in the fountain of our Cres. More dregs than water, if my eyes.
Tro. Fears make devils of cherubins;
never see truly.
Cres. Blind fear, that seeing reason finds safer footing than blind reason stays without fear: to fear the worst oft cuts worse.
Tro. O, let my lady apprehend no fear,
Cupid's pageant there is presented no more.
Cres. Nor nothing monstrous neither;
our undertakings we vow to weep seas, live in fire, est rock tigers; thinking it harder for our mistress vise imposition enough than for us to any difficulty imposed. This is the morn in love, lady, that the will is infinite; execution confined, that the desire is but;
and not the act a slave to limit.
Cres. They say all lovers swear more pence than they are able and yet reserve a that they never perform, vowing more i perfection of ten and discharging less t thenth part of one. They that have the lions and the act of hares, are they not m Tro. Are there such? such are not we us as we are tasted, allow us as we pro head shall go bare till merit crown it: no motion in reversion shall have a praise in i we will not name desert before his birth being born, his addition shall be humble words to fair faith: Troilus shall be such sid as what envy can say worst shall be for his truth, and what truth can speak tr
true than Troilus.
Cres. Will you walk in, my lord?

Re-enter Pandarus.
Pan. What, blushing still! have you no talking yet?
TROILUS AND CRESSIDA.

Well, uncle, what folly I commit, I de-
to you.
I thank you for that: if my lord get a you, you'll give him me. Be true to my the finch, chide me for it.
You know now your hostages; your word and my firm faith.
Nay, I'll give my word for her too: our l, though they be long ere they are wooded, e constant being won: they are burs, I can
; they'll stick where they are thrown.
Boldness comes to me now, and brings e heart.
Troilus, I have loved you night and day
my weary months.
Why was my Cressid then so hard to win?
Hard to seem won: but I was won, my first glance that ever—pardon me—less much, you will play the tyrant.

ou now: but not, till now, so much ight master it: in faith, I lie;
ights were like unbridled children, grown dstrong for their mother. See, we fools!
ve I blabb'd? who shall be true to us,
re so unscout to ourselves?
ugh I loved you well, I woor'd you not;
 good faith, I wish'd myself a man,
we women had men's privilege king first. Sweet, bid me hold my tongue, his rapture I shall surely speak as I shall repent. See, see, your silence, in dumbness, from my weakness draws soul of counsel! stop my mouth.

And shall, albeit sweet music issues nce.
Pretty, i' faith.
My lord, I do beseech you, pardon me;
my purpose, thus to beg a kiss:
amed. O heavens! what have I done?
time will I take my leave, my lord.
Your leave, sweet Cressid!
Leave! an you take leave till-to-morrow

Pray you, content you.
What offends you, lady?
Sir, mine own company.
You cannot shun
Let me go and try:
kind of self resides with you;
kind self, that itself will leave, other's fool. I would be gone:
my wit? I know not what I speak.
Well know they what they speak that so wisely.
Perchance, my lord, I show more craft
love;
so roundly to a large confession,
for your thoughts: but you are wise,
on love not, for to be wise and love man's might; that dwells with gods ve.
that I thought it could be in a woman—
an, I will presume in you—ye her lamp and flames of love;
ver constancy in plight and youth,
beauty's outward, with a mind
new swifter than blood decays!

Or that persuasion could but thus convince me,
That my integrity and truth to you
Might be afflicted with the match and weight
Of such a winnow'd purity in love:
How were I then uplifted! but, alas!
I am as true as truth's simplicity
And simpler than the infancy of truth.
Cres. In that I'll war with you.
Tro. O virtuous fight.
When right with right wars who shall be most right!
True swains in love shall in the world to come Approve their truths by Troilus: when their rhymes,
Full of protest, of oath and big compare,
Want similes, truth tired with iteration,
As true as steel, as plantage to the moon,
As sun to day, as turtle to her mate,
As iron to adamant, as earth to the centre,
Yet, after all comparisons of truth,
As truth's authentic author to be cited,
'As true as Troilus!' shall crown up the verse,
And sanctify the numbers.

Cres. Prophet may you be! I know
If I be false, or swerve a hair from truth,
When time is old and hath forgot itself,
When waterdrops have worn the stones of Troy,
And blind oblivion swallow'd cities up,
And mighty states characterless are grated
To dusty nothing, yet let memory,
From false to false, among false maidens in love, Upbraid my falsehood! when they've said 'as false
As air, as water, wind, or sandy earth,
As fox to lamb, as wolf to heifer's calf,
Pard to the hind, or stepdame to her son,'
'Yea,' let them say, to stick the heart of falsehood,
'As false as Cressid.'

Pan. Go to, a bargain made: seal it, seal it;
I'll be the witness. Here I hold your hand, here my cousin's. If ever you prove false one to another, since I have taken such pains to bring you together, let all pitiful goers-betwixt be called to the world's end after my name; call them all Pandars; let all constant men be Troiluses, all false women Cressids, and all brokers-between Pandars! say, amen.

Tro. Amen.
Cres. Amen.

Pan. Amen. Whereupon I will show you a chamber with a bed; which bed, because it shall not speak of your pretty encounters, press it to death; away!
And Cupid grant all tongue-tied maidens here
Bed, chamber, Pandar to provide this gear!
[Exeunt.

Enter Agamemnon, Ulysses, Diomedes, Nestor, Ajax, Menelaus, and Calchas.

Cal. Now, princes, for the service I have done
you,
The advantage of the time prompts me aloud
To call for recompense. Appear it to your mind
That, through the sight I bear in things to love,
I have abandon'd Troy, left my possession,
Incur'd a traitor's name; exposed myself,
From certain and possess'd conveniences,
To doubtful fortunes; sequestering from me all
That time, a acquaintance, custom and condition
Made tame and most familiar to my nature,
And here, to do you service, am become
As new into the world, strange, unacquainted:
I do beseech you, as in way of taste,
To give me now a little benefit,
Out of those many register'd in promise,
Which, you say, live to come in my behalf.

Agam. What wouldst thou of us, Trojan?

Cal. You have a Trojan prisoner, call'd Antenor,
Yesterday took: Troy holds him very dear.
Oft have you—often have you thanks therefore—
Desired my Cressid in right great exchange,
Whom Troy hath still denied: but this Antenor,
I know, is such a wrest in their affairs
That their negotiations all must slack,
Wanting his manage; and they will almost
Give in the prince of blood, a son of Priam,
In change of him: let him be sent, great princes,
And he shall buy my daughter; and her presence
Shall quite strike off all service I have done,
In most accepted pain.

Agam. Let Diomedes bear him, 30
And bring us Cressid hither: Calchas shall have What he requests of us. Good Diomed,
Furnish you fairly for this interchange:
Withal bring word if Hector will to-morrow
Be answer'd in his challenge: Ajax is ready.

Dis. This shall I undertake; and 'tis a burden
Which I am proud to bear.

[Exeunt Diomedes and Calchas.

Enter ACHILLES and PATROCLUS, before their tent.

Achil. Achilles stands i'the entrance of his tent:
Please it our general to pass strangely by him,
As if he were forgot; and, princes all,
Leave negligent and loose regard upon him:
I will come last. 'Tis like he'll question me
Why such unpleasing eyes are bent on him:
If so, I have derision medicable,
To use between your strangeness and his pride,
Which his own will shall have desire to drink:
It may do good: pride hath no other glass
To show itself but pride, for supple knees
Feed arrogance and are the proud man's fees.

Agam. We'll execute your purpose, and put on
A form of strangeness as we pass along: 55
So do each lord, and either greet him not,
or else disdainfully, which shall shake him more Than if not look'd on. I will lead the way.

Achil. What, comes the general to speak with me?
You know my mind, I'll fight no more 'gainst Troy.

Agam. What says Achilles? would he aught
with us?

Nest. Would you, my lord, aught with the general?

Achil. No.

Nest. Nothing, my lord.

Agam. The better.

[Exeunt Agamemnon and Nestor.

Achil. Good day, good day.

Men. How do you? how do you?

Achil. What, does the euckold scorn me?

Ajax. How now, Patroclus! Good morrow, Ajax.

Ajax. Ay, and good next day too.

Achil. What mean these fellows? Know not Achilles?

Patr. They pass by strangely: they used to bend,
To send their smiles before them to Achilles
To come as humbly as they used to creep
To holy altars.

Achil. What, am I poor of late?

Tis certain, greatness, once fall'n out with tune,
Must fall out with men too: what do the deeds
He shall as soon read in the eyes of others
As feel in his own fall; for men, like butte
Show not their mealy wings but to the sun
And not a man, for being simply man,
Hath any honour, but honour for those he

At ample point all that I did possess.

As they have often given. Here is Ulyss
I'll interrupt his reading.

How now, Ulysses!

Ulyss. Now, great Thetis's son Achil.

Achil. What are you reading?

Ulyss. A strange fell
Writers me: 'That man, how dearly ever
How much in having, or without or in,
Cannot make boast to have that he
Nor feels not what he owes, but by relief;
As when his virtues shining upon others
Heat them and they retort that heat again,
To the first giver.'

Achil. This is not strange, Ulyss:
The beauty that is borne here in the face
The bearer knows not, but commends
To others' eyes; nor doth the eye itself,
That most pure spirit of sense, behold in
Not going from itself; but eye to eye op
Salutes each other with each other's for
For speculation turns not to itself,
Till it hath travell'd and is mirrord there
Where it may see itself. This is not so all.

Ulyss. I do not strain at the position
It is familiar,—but at the author's drift;
Who, in his circumstance, expressly pro

And case thy reputation in thy tent;
Whose glorious missions, but in these fields of late,
Made emulous deeds 'mongst the gods them-

And drave great Mars to faction.

Achil. Of this my privacy

I have strong reasons.

Uliss. But 'gainst your privacy

The reasons are more potent and heroic:

'Tis known, Achilles, that you are in love

With one of Priam's daughters.

Achil. Ha! known!

Uliss. Is that a wonder?

The providence that's in a watchful state

Knows almost every grain of Platus' gold,

Finds bottom in the uncomprehending deeps,

Keeps place with thought and almost, like the gods,

Does thoughts unveil in their dumb cradles.

There is a mystery—with whom relation

Durst never meddle—in the soul of state;

Which hath an operation more divine

Than breath or pen can give expressiture to:

All the commerce that you have had with Troy

As perfectly is ours as yours, my lord;

And better would it fit Achilles much

To throw down Hector than Poluxena:

But it must grieve you Pyrhus now at home,

When fame shall in our islands sound her trumpet,

And all the Grecish girls shall tripping sing:

'Great Hector's sister did Achilles win,

But our great Ajax bravely beat down him.'

Farewell, my lord: I as your lover speak:

The fool slides o'er the ice that you should break.

[Exeunt.

Patr. To this effect, Achilles, have I moved you:

A woman impudent and mannish grown
Is not more loathed than an effeminate man
In time of action. I stand condemn'd for this;

They think my little stomach to the war;

And your great love to me restrains you thus:

Sweet, rouse yourself; and the weak wanton

Cupid

Shall from your neck unloose his amorous fold,

And, like a dew-drop from the lion's mane,

Be shook to air.

Achil. Shall Ajax fight with Heōt?

Patr. Ay, and perhaps receive much honour

by him.

Achil. I see my reputation is at stake;

My fame is shrewdly gored.

Patr. O, then, beware

Those wounds heal ill that men do give them-

Omission to do what is necessary

Seals a commission to a blank of danger;

And danger, like an aque, subtly taints

Even then when we sit idly in the sun.

Achil. Go call Thersites hither, sweet Patro-clus;

I'll send the fool to Ajax and desire him

To invite the Trojan lords after the combat
To see us here unarm'd: I have a woman's longing, an appetite that I am sick withal. To see great Hector in his deeds of peace, to talk with him and to behold his visage, even to my full view.

Enter THERESITES. A labour saved!

Ther. A wonder!

Achil. What?

Ther. Ajax goes up and down the field, asking for himself. Achil. How so?

Ther. He must fight singly to-morrow with Hector, and is so prophetically proud of an herculean cudgelling that he raves in saying nothing. Achil. How can that be? Ther. Why, he stalks up and down like a peacock,—a stride and a stand: ruminates like an host that hath no arithmetic but her brain to set down her reckoning: bites his lip with a politic regard, as who should say 'There were wit in this head, an 'twould out;' and so there is, but it lies as coldly in him as fire in a flint, which will not show without knocking. The man's undone for ever; for if Hector break not his neck? the combat, he'll break 't himself in vain-glory. He knows not me: I said 'Good morrow, Ajax;' and he replies 'Thanks, Agamemnon.' What think you of this man that takes me for the general? He's grown a very land-fish, languageless, a monster. A plague of opinion! a man may wear it on both sides, like a leather jerkin. Achil. Thou must be my ambassador to him, Thersites.

Ther. Who, I? why, he'll answer nobody; he professes not answering: speaking is for beggars; he wears his tongue in his arms. I will put on his presence: let Patroclus make demands to me, you shall see the pageant of Ajax. Achil. To him, Patroclus: tell him I humbly desire the valiant Ajax to invite the most valorous Hector to come unarmed to my tent, and to procure safe-conduct for his person of the magnanimous and most illustrious six-or-seven-times-honoured captain-general of the Grecian army. Agamemnon, etcetera. Do this.

Patr. Love bless great Ajax!

Ther. Hum!

Patr. I come from the worthy Achilnes,—

Ther. Ha!

Patr. Who most humbly desires you to invite Hector to his tent,—

Ther. Hum!

Patr. And to procure safe-conduct from Agamemnon.

Ther. Agamemnon!

Patr. Ay, my lord.

Ther. Ha!

Patr. What say you to 't?

Ther. God b'w' you, with all my heart.

Patr. Your answer, sir.

Ther. If to-morrow be a fair day, by eleven o'clock it will go one way or other: howsoever, he shall pay for me ere he has me.

Patr. Your answer, sir.

Ther. Are you well, with all my heart. Achil. Why, but he is not in this tune, is he?

Ther. No, but he's out o' tune thus. What music will be in him when Hector has known his brains, I know not; but, I am sure, unless the fiddler Apollo get his sinews to catlings on.

Achil. Come, thou shalt bear a letter there.

Ther. Let me bear another to his horns that's the more capable creature. Achil. My mind is troubled, like a foal stirr'd; and I myself see not the bottom of it. [Exeunt Achilnes and Patroclus.

Ther. Would the fountain of your mind clear again, that I might water an ass at had rather be a tick in a sheep than such an ignorance.

ACT IV.

SCENE I. Troy. A street.

Enter, from one side, Aeneas, and Servant a torch; from the other, Paris, Diomed, Antenor, Diomedes, and others, torches.

Par. See, ho! who is that there? Dio. It is the Lord Aeneas.

Par. A valiant Greek, Aeneas,—tal hand,— Witness the process of your speech, where You told me Diomed, a whole week by day Did haunt you in the field.

Aene. Health to you, valiant During all question of the gentle truce; But when I meet you arm'd, as black defeat As heart can think or courage execute. Dio. The one and other Diomed embrac'd Our bloods now in calm; and, so long, But our contention and occasion meet, By Jove, I'll play the hunter for thy life With all my force, pursuit and policy. Aene. And thou shalt hunt a lion, that With his face backward. In humane gen Welcome to Troy! now, by Anchises' life Welcome, indeed! By Venus' hand I sw no man alive can love in such a sort The thing he means to kill more excellent. Dio. We sympathise: Jove, let Aeneas If to my sword his fate be not the glory, A thousand complete courses of the sun! But, in mine emulous honour, let him die. With every joint a wound, and that to-morrow Aeneas. We know each other well. Dio. Wedo; and long to know each other. Par. This is the most despiteful gend From the noblest hateful love, that e'er I heard! What business, lord, so early? Aene. I was sent for to the king; but know not. Par. His purpose meets you: 'twas this Greek
TROILUS AND CRESSIDA.

I. TROILUS's house, and there to render him, so enreef Antenor, the fair Cressida: as丘 company, or, if you please, there before us: I constantly do think—her, call my thought a certain knowledge—other Troilus lodges there to-night:

him and give him note of our approach, the whole quality wherefore: I fear all must be much unwelcome.

That I assure you: had rather Troy were borne to Greece Cressida borne from Troy.

There is no help; riter disposition of the time aw it so. On, lord; we'll follow you.

good morrow, all. [Exit with Servant.

And tell me, noble Diomed, faith, tell me true, the soul of sound good-fellowship, in your thoughts, merits fair Helen best, for Menelaus?

Both alike: rits well to have her, that doth seek her, asking any scruple of her solirch, a hell of pain and world of charge, as well to keep her, that defend her, lating the taste of her dishonour, such a costly loss of wealth and friends: 60 a pulling coxcomb, would drink up as and dregs of a flat tamed piece; be a lecher, out of whorish used to breed out your inheritors: erts poised, each weighs nor less nor more; as he, the heavier for a whore. You are too bitter to your countrywoman. She’s bitter to her country: hear me, aris;

ry false drop in her bawdy veins isn’t life hath sunk; for every scruple 70 contaminated carrion weight, in hath been slain: since she could speak, h not given so many good words breath fer Greeks and Trojans suffer’d death.

Diomed, you are chapmen do, as a thing that you desire to buy: in silence hold this virtue well, ut commend what we intend to sell. 80 is our way. [Exeunt.

II. TROILUS and CRESSIDA.

Enter TROILUS and CRESSIDA.

Dear, trouble not yourself: the morn is d.

Then, sweet my lord, I’ll call mine down; unbolt the gates.

Trouble him not; to bed: sleep kill those pretty eyes, as soft attachment to thy senses ts’ empty of all thought!

Good morrow, then. I prithee now, to bed.

Are you a-weary of me? O Cressida! but that the busy day, y the lark, hath roused the ribald crows, uning night will hide our joys no longer, not from thee.

CRES. Night hath been too brief.

TRO. Beshrew the witch! with venomous wights she stays

As teediously as hell, but flies the grasps of love With wings more momentary-slight than thought. You will catch cold, and curse me.

CRES. Prithee, tarry:

You men will never tarry, O foolish Cressid! I might have still held off, And then you would have tarried. Hark! there’s one up.

Pan. [Within] What’s, ’s all the doors open here?

TRO. It is your uncle.

CRES. A pestilence on him! now will he be mocking: I shall have such a life!

Enter PANDARUS.

PAN. How now, how now! how go maidenheads? Here, you maid! where’s my cousin Cressid?

CRES. Go hang yourself, you naughty mocking uncle!

You bring me to do, and then you flout me too.

PAN. To do what? to do what? let her say what: what have I brought you to do?

CRES. Come, come, beslire your heart! you’ll ne’er be good, Nor suffer others.

PAN. Ha, ha! Alas, poor wretch! ah, poor capocchia! hast not slept to-night? would he not, a naughty man, let it sleep? a bugbear take him!

CRES. Did not I tell you? Would he were knock’d! the head! [Knocking within.

Who’s that at door? good uncle, go and see. My lord, come you again into my chamber; You smile and mock me, as if I meant naughtily.

TRO. Ha, ha!

CRES. Come, you are deceived, I think of no such thing, [Knocking within.

How earnestly they knock! Pray you, come in: I would not for half Troy you have seen here.

[Exeunt TROILUS and CRESSIDA.

PAN. Who’s there? what’s the matter? will you beat down the door? How now! what’s the matter?

Enter Æneas.

ÆNE. Good morrow, lord, good morrow.

PAN. Who’s there? my Lord Æneas! By my troth, I knew you not: what news with you so early?

ÆNE. Is not Prince Troilus here?

PAN. Here! what should he do here?

ÆNE. Come, he is here, my lord; do not deny him: It doth import him much to speak with me.

PAN. Is he here, say you? ’tis more than I know, I’ll be sworn: for my own part, I came in late. What should he do here?

ÆNE. Who—nay, then: come, come, you’ll do him wrong are you’re ware: you’ll be so true to him, to be false to him: do not you know of him, but yet go fetch him hither; go.

Re-enter TROILUS.

TRO. How now! what’s the matter?
Aene. My lord, I scarce have leisure to salute you,
My matter is so rash: there is at hand
Paris your brother, and Deiphobus,
The Grecian Diomed, and our Antenor
Deliver'd to us; and for him forthwith,
Ere the first sacrifice, within this hour,
We must give up to Diomedes' hand
The Lady Cressida.
Tro. Is it so concluded?
Aene. By Priam and the general state of Tro: They are at hand and ready to effect it.
Tro. How my achievements mock me!
I will go meet them; and, my Lord Aeneas,
We met by chance; you did not find me here.
Aene. Good, good, my lord; the secrets of nature
Have not more gift in taciturnity.
[Exeunt Troilus and Aeneas.
Pan. Is't possible? no sooner got but lost?
The devil take Antenor! the young prince will go mad: a plague upon Antenor! I would they had broke 's neck!

Re-enter CRESSIDA.

Cres. How now! what's the matter? who was here?
Pan. Ah, ah!
Cres. Why sigh you so profoundly? where's my lord? gone! Tell me, sweet uncle, what's the matter?
Pan. Would I were as deep under the earth
as I am above!
Cres. O the gods! what's the matter?
Pan. Prithhee, get thee in; would thou hadst ne'er been born! I knew thou wouldst be his death. O, poor gentleman! A plague upon Antenor!
Cres. Good uncle, I beseech you, on my knees I beseech you, what's the matter?
Pan. Thou must be gone, wench, thou must gone; thou art changed for Antenor: thou must to thy father, and be gone from Troilus:
'twill be his death; 'twill be his bane; he cannot bear it.
Cres. O you immortal gods! I will not go.
Pan. Thou must.
Cres. I will not, uncle: I have forgot my father;
I know no touch of consanguinity;
No kin, no love, no blood, no soul so near me
As the sweet Troilus. O you gods divine!
Make Cressid's name the very crown of falsehood, If ever she leave Troilus! Time, force, and
death,
Do to this body what extremes you can;
But the strong base and building of my love
Is as the very centre of the earth,
Drawing all things to it. I'll go in and weep.—
Pan. Do, do.
Cres. Tear my bright hair and scratch my Delightful cheeks,
Crack my clear voice with sobs and break my heart
With sounding Troilus. I will not go from Troy.
[Exeunt.
There lurks a still and dumb-discoursive devil
That tempts most cunningly: but be not tempted.
Cres. Do you think I will?
Tro. No.
But something may be done that we will not: And sometimes we are devils to ourselves, When we will tempt the frailty of our powers, Presuming on their changeful potency.
Æne. [Within] Nay, good my lord,—
Tro. Come, kiss; and let us part. 100
Par. [Within] Brother Troilus!
Tro. Good brother, come you hither; And bring Æneas and the Grecian with you.
Cres. My lord, will you be true?
Tro. Who, if alas, it is my vice, my fault: Whiles others fish with craft for great opinion, I with great truth catch mere simplicity; Whilst some with cunning gild their copper crowns, With truth and plainness I do wear mine bare. Fear not my truth: the moral of my wit Is 'plain and true;' 'tis all the reach of it. 110

Enter Æneas, Paris, Antenor, Deiphobus, and Diomedes.

Welcome, Sir Diomed! here is the lady Which for Antenor we deliver you: At the port, lord, I'll give her to thy hand; And by the way possess thee what she is. Entreat her fair; and, by my soul, fair Greek, If e'er thou stand at mercy of my sword, Name Cressid, and thy life shall be as safe As Priam is in Ilion.

Dio. Fair Lady Cressid, So please you, save the thanks this prince expects: The lustre in your eye, heaven in your cheek, Pleads your fair usage; and to Diomed You shall be mistress, and command him wholly.

Tro. Grecian, thou dost not use me courteously,
To shame the zeal of my petition to thee In praising her: I tell thee, lord of Greece, She is as far high-soaring o'er thy praises As thou unworthy to be call'd her servant. I charge thee use her well, even for my charge; For, by the dreadful Pluto, if thou dost not, Though the great buck Achilles be thy guard, I'll cut thy throat.

Dio. O, be not moved, Prince Troilus: Let me be privileged by my place and message, To be a speaker free; when I am hence, I'll answer to my lust: and know you, lord, I'll nothing do on charge: to her own worth She shall be prized; but that you say 'be't so,' I'll speak it in my spirit and honour, 'no.'

Tro. Come, to the port. I'll tell thee, Diomed, This brave shall oft make thee to hide thy head. Lady, give me your hand, and, as we walk, To our own selves bend me our needful talk.

[Exeunt Troilus, Cressida, and Diomedes.]

[Trumpet within.]

Par. Hark! Hector's trumpet.

Æne. How have we spent this morning! The prince must think me tardy and remiss, That swore to ride before him to the field.

Par. 'Tis Troilus' fault: come, come, to field with him.
Dei. Let us make ready straight.

Aene. Yea, with a bridgroom's fresh slacrity.

Let us address to tend on Hector's heels:

The glory of our Troy doth this day lie

On his fair worth and single chivalry. [Exeunt.]

SCENE V. The Grecian camp. Lists set out.

Enter Ajax, armed; Agamemnon, Achilles, Patroclus, Menelaus, Ulysses, Nestor, and others.

Agam. Here art thou in appointment fair

And hastAnticipating time with starting courage.

Give with thy trumpet a loud note to Troy,

Thou dreadful Ajax; that the appalled air

May pierce the head of the great combatant

And make him bitter.

Ajax. Thou, trumpet, there's my purse.

Now crack thy lungs, and split thy brazen pipe:

Blow, villain, till thy spherical bias check

Outswell the colic of puff'd Aquilon.

Come, stretch thy chest, and let thy eyes outblow

Thou blow'st for Hector. [Trumpet sounds.

Ulyss. No trumpet answers.

Achil. 'Tis but early days.

Agam. Is not yond Diomed, with Calchas' daughter?

Ulyss. 'Tis he, I ken the manner of his gait;

He rises on the toe; that spirit of his

In aspiration lifts him from the earth.

Enter Diomedes, with Cressida.

Agam. Is this the Lady Cressid?

Dio. Even she.

Agam. Most dearly welcome to the Greeks, sweet lady.

Nest. Our general doth salute you with a kiss.

Ulyss. Yet is the kindness but particular; so

'Twere better she were kisses'd in general.

Nest. And very courteously counsel: I'll begin.

So much for Nestor.

Achil. I'll take that winter from your lips, fair lady:

Achilles bids you welcome.

Men. I had good argument for kissing once.

Patr. But that's no argument for kissing now;

For this popp'd Paris in his hardiment,

And parted thus you and your argument.

Ulyss. O deadly gall, and theme of all our sconrs!

For which we lose our heads to gild his horns.

Patr. The first was Menelaus' kiss; this, mine:

Patroclus kisses you.

Men. O, this is trim!

Patr. Paris and I kiss evermore for him.

Men. I'll have my kiss, sir. Lady, by your leave.

Cres. In kissing, do you render or receive?

Patr. Both take and give.

Cres. I'll make my match to live,

The kiss you take is better than you give;

Therefore no kiss.

Men. I'll give you boot, I'll give you three for one.

Cres. You're an odd man; give even, none.

Men. An odd man, lady! every man is true,

That you are odd, and he is even with you.

Men. You fillip me o' the head.

Cres. No, I'll be

Ulyss. It were no match, your nails his horns.

May I, sweet lady, beg a kiss of you?

Cres. You may.

Ulyss. I do desire it.

Cres. Why, be

Ulyss. Why then for Venus' sake, get a kiss,

When Helen is a maid again, and his.

Cres. I am your debtor, claim it when Ulyss. Never's my day, and then a kiss

 Dio. Lady, a word; I'll bring you

father.

[Exit with C.

Nest. A woman of quick sense.

Ulyss. Fie, fie upon you.

There's language in her eye, her cheek,

Nay, her foot speaks; her wanton spirits,

At every joint and motive of her body.

O, these encounterers, so glib of tongue,

That give accosting welcome ere it come,

And take unclasp the tables of their thou

To every ticklish reader! set them down

For sluggish spoils of opportunity

And daughters of the game. [Trumpet

All. The Trojans' trumpet.

Agam. Yonder comes the

Enter Hector, armed; Æneas, Troilus other Trojans, with Attendants.

Æne. Hail, all you state of Greece shall be done

To him that victory commands? or do I

A victor shall be known? will you the king

Shall to the edge of all extremity

Pursue each other, or shall be divided

By any voice or order of the field?

Hector bade ask.

Agam. Which way would Hector

Æne. He cares not; he'll obey command.

Achil. 'Tis done like Hector; but done,

A little proudly, and great deal mispriz'd

The knight opposed.

If not Achilles, sir,

What is your name?

Achil. If not Achilles, not.

Æne. Therefore Achilles: but, what's this:

In the extremity of great and little,

Valour and pride excel themselves in him.

The one almost as infinite as all,

The other blank as nothing. Weigh him

And that which looks like pride is court,

This Ajax is half made of Hector's blood;

In love whereof, half Hector stays his

Half heart, half hand, half Hector cometh.

The all-encompassed knight, half Trojan and half

Achil. A maiden battle, then? O, I

you.
Re-enter Diomedes.

n. Here is Sir Diomed. Go, gentle night, by our Ajax: as you and Lord Æneas
t upon the order of their fight,
: either to the utmost,
a breath: the combatants being kin ts their strife before their strokes begin.

[Ajax and Hector enter the lists.

They are opposed already.

What Trojan is that same that looks

The youngest son of Priam, a true light, mature, yet matchless, firm of word,
g in deeds and deedless in his tongue;
provoked nor being provoked soon land'd;
and hand both open and both free; roo
at he has he gives, what thinks he shows;
he not till judgement guide his bounty,
ishes an impure thought with breath;
Hector, but more dangerous;
for in his blaze of wrath subscribes or objects, but he in heat of action vindicative than jealous love:
ll him Troilus, and on him erect
I hope, as fairly built as Hector.
ys Æneas; one that knows the youth 110 his inches, and with private soul rt Ilion thus translate him to me.
[Alarum. Hector and Ajax fight.

They are in action.

Now, Ajax, hold thine own!
Hector, thou sleep'st;
hee!

His blows are well disposed: there,

You must no more. [Trumpets cease.
Princes, enough, as please you.
I am not warm yet; let us fight again.
As Hector pleases.

Why, then will I no more:
great lord, my father's sister's son, 120
german to great Priam's seed;
gation of our blood forbids motion 'twixt us twain:
commixture Greek and Trojan so ould say 'This hand is Grecian all, is Trojan; the sinews of this leg
, and this all Troy; my mother's blood the dexter cheek, and this sinister my father's;' by Jove multipotent, ldst not bear from me a Greekish my sword had not impressure made ked: but the just gods gainsay drop thou borrow'dst from thy mother, d aunt, should by my mortal sword

Let me embrace thee, Ajax:
at thunders, thou hast lusty arms;
could have them fall upon him thus:
ll honour to thee!

I thank thee, Hector:
too gentle and too free a man:
kill thee, cousin, and bear hence dition earned in thy death.
Not Neoptolemus so mirable,

On whose bright crest Fame with her loud'st
Oyes
Cries 'This is he,' could promise to himself
A thought of added honour torn from Hector.
Æne. There is expectation here from both the sides,
What further you will do.
Hec. We'll answer it;
The issue is embracement: Ajax, farewell.
Ajax. If I might in entreaties find success—
As seld I have the chance—I would desire 150
My famous cousin to our Grecian tents.
Dio. 'Tis Agamemnon's wish, and great
Achilles

Doth long to see unarmed the valiant Hector.
Hec. Æneas, call my brother Troilus to me,
And signify this loving interview
To the expecters of our Trojan part;
Desire them home. Give me thy hand, my cousin;
I will go eat with thee and see your knights.

Ajax. Great Agamemnon comes to meet us here.
Hec. The worthiest of them tell me name by name;
But for Achilles, mine own searching eyes
Shall find him by his large and portly size.
Agam. Worthy of arms! as welcome as to one
That would be rid of such an enemy;
But that's no welcome: understand more clear,
What's past and what's to come is stove'd with husks
And formless ruin of oblivion;
And in this extant moment, faith and truth,
Strain'd purely from all hollow bias-drawing;
Bids thee, with most divine integrity,
From heart of very heart, great Hector, welcome.
Hec?. I thank thee, most imperious Aga-memon.

Agam. [To Troilus] My well-famed lord of Troy, no less to you.
Men. Let me confirm my princely brother's greeting:
You brace of warlike brothers, welcome hither.
Hec?. Who must we answer?
Æne. The noble Menelaus.
Hec?. O, you, my lord! by Mars his gauntlet, thanks!

Mock not, that I affect the untraded oath:
Your quondam wife swears still by Venus' glove:
She's well, but bade me not commend her to you.
Men. Name her not now, sir; she's a deadly theme.

Hec?. O, pardon; I offend.

Next. I have, thou gallant Trojan, seen thee oft Labouring for destiny make cruel way Through ranks of Grecish youth, and I have seen thee,
As hot as Perseus, spur thy Phrygian steed,
Despising many forfeits and subduements,
When thou hast hung thy advanced sword i' the air,
Not letting it decline on the declined,
That I have said to some my standers by 190
'Lo, Jupiter is yonder, dealing life!'
And I have seen thee pause and take thy breath,
When that a ring of Greeks have hemm'd thee in,
Like an Olympian wrestling: this have I seen;
But this thy countenance, still lock'd in steel,
I never saw till now. I knew thy grandsire,
And once fought with him: he was a soldier good;
But, by great Mars, the captain of us all,
Never like thee. Let an old man embrace thee;
And, worthy warrior, welcome to our tents. 200
Aene. 'Tis the old Nestor.
Hec. Let me embrace thee, good old chronicle,
That hast so long walk'd hand in hand with time:
Most reverend Nestor, I am glad to clasp thee.
Nest. I would my arms could match thee in contention,
As they contend with thee in courtesy.
Hec. I would they could.
Nest. Ha!
By this white beard, I'd fight with thee tomorrow.
Well, welcome, welcome!—I have seen the time.
Ulyss. I wonder now how yonder city stands
When we have here her base and pillar by us.
Hec. I know your favour, Lord Ulysses, well.
Ah, sir, there's many a Greek and Trojan dead,
Since first I saw yourself and Diomed
In Ilion, on your Greekish embassy.
Ulyss. Sir, I foretold you then what would ensue:
My prophecy is but half his journey yet;
For yonder walls, that perily front your town,
Yon tall towers, whose wanton tops do buss the clouds,
Must kiss their own feet.
Hec. I must not believe you:
There they stand yet, and modestly I think,
The fall of every Phrygian stone will cost
A drop of Grecian blood: the end crowns all,
And that old common arbitrator, Time,
Will one day end it.
Ulyss. So to him we leave it.
Most gentle and most valiant Hector, welcome:
After the general, I beseech you next
To feast with me and see me at my tent.
Achill. I shall forestall thee, Lord Ulysses,
I thou! 230
Now, Hector, I have fed mine eyes on thee;
I have with exact view perused thee, Hector,
And quoted joint by joint.
Hec. Is this Achilles?
Achill. I am Achilles.
Hec. Stand fair, I pray thee: let me look on
thee.
Achill. Behold thy fill.
Hec. Nay, I have done already.
Achill. Thou art too brief: I will the second time,
As I would buy thee, view thee limb by limb.
Hec. O, like a book of sport thou'lt read me o'er; 239
But there's more in me than thou understand'st.
Why dost thou so oppress me with thine eye?
Achill. Tell me, you heavens, in which part of thy body
Shall I destroy him? whether there, or there, or there?
That I may give the local wound a name
And make distinct the very breach whereout
Hector's great spirit flew: answer me, heavens!
Hec. It would discredit the blest gods, pride man,
To answer such a question: stand again:
Think'st thou to catch my life so pleasantly
As to prenominate in nice conjecture
Where thou wilt hit me dead? 240
Achill. If I tell thee, y

TROILUS AND CRESSIDA. 647

tr. Here comes Thersites.

Enter Thersites.

hil. From whence, fragment? er. Why, thou full dish of fool, from Troy. tr. Who keeps the tent now? the. The surgeon's box, or the patient's desk.
tr. Well said, adversity! and what need tricks? er. Prithée, be silent, boy; I profit not by thee; thou art thought to be Achilles' male.
tr. Male varlet, you rogue! what's that? er. Why, his masculine whore. Now, the diseases of the south, the guts-gripping, the castrates, loads 'o' gravel, i' the back, gies, cold palpies, raw eyes, dirt-rotten wheezing lungs, bladders full of imposthumes, little waters, lice in 't he palm, incurable ache, and the rivelled fee-simple of the soul, take and take again such preposterous verses?
tr. Why, thou damnable box of envy, thou meanest thou to curse thus: Do I curse thee? er. Why, no, thou ruinous butt, you whore-distinguishable cur. No. No! why art thou then exasperate, idle immaterial skein of slave-silk, thou sarcastic flap for a sore eye, thou tassel of digal's purse, thou? Ah, how the poor is pestered with such waterflies, diminu-what's nature! tr. Out, gall! r. Finch-egg!
ii. My sweet Patroclus, I am thwarted quite my great purpose in to-morrow's battle, a letter from Queen Hecuba, from her daughter, my fair love, axing me and gaging me to keep that I have sworn. I will not break it: reeks; fail fame; honour or go or stay; sior vow lies here, this I'll obey. come, Thersites, help to trim my tent: 50 light in banqueting must all be spent. Patroclus!

[Exeunt Achilles and Patroclus.

r. With too much blood and too little heart these two may run mad; but, if with too much and too little blood they do, I'll be a curer. Here's Agamemnon, an honest man, and one that loves quails; but he's so much brain as ear-wax: and the transformation of Jupiter there, his brose bull,—the primitive statute, and oblique pair of cucokolds; a thrifty shoeing-horn in hanging at his brother's leg,—to what at that he is, should wit larded with malice ignore with wit turn him to? To an ear nothing; he is both ass and ox: to an ear nothing; he is both ox and ass. To be a rascal, a cat, a fitchew, a toad, a lizard, an owl, a puttock, or a herring without a roe, I would not care; but to be Menelaus! I would conspire against destiny. Ask me not what I would be, if I were not Thersites; for I care not to be the louse of a lizar, so I were not Menelaus. Hoy-day! spirits and fires! Enter Hector, Troilus, Ajax, Agamemnon, Ulysses, Nestor, Menelaus, and Diomedes, with lights.

Agam. We go wrong, we go wrong.

Ajax. No, yonder 'tis.

Hec. There, where we see the lights.

Ajax. No, not a whit.

Ulyss. Here comes himself to guide you.

Re-enter Achilles.

Achil. Welcome, brave Hector; welcome, princes all.

Agam. So now, fair Prince of Troy, I bid good night.

Ajax commands the guard to tend on you.

Hec. Thanks and good night to the Greeks' general.

Men. Good night, my lord.

Hec. Good night, sweet Lord Menelaus. Ther. Sweet draught: 'sweet' quoth 'a! sweet sink, sweet sewer.

Achil. Good night and welcome, both at once, to those that go or tarry.

Agam. Good night.

[Exeunt Agamemnon and Menelaus.

Achil. Old Nestor tarries; and you too, Diomed, Keep Hector company an hour or two.

Dio. I cannot, lord; I have important business.

The tide whereof is now. Good night, great Hector.

Hec. Give me your hand.

Ulyss. [Aside to Troilus] Follow his torch; he goes to Calchas' tent: I'll keep you company.

Tro. Sweet sir, you honour me.

Hec. And so, good night.

[Exeunt Diomedes; Ulysses and Troilus following.

Achil. Come, come, enter my tent.

[Exeunt Achilles, Hector, Ajax, and Nestor. Ther. That same Diomed's a false-hearted rogue, a most unjust knave: I will no more trust him when he leers than I will a serpent when he hisses: he will spend his mouth, and promise, like Brabbler the hound; but when he performs, astronomers foretell it; it is prodigious, there will come some change: the sun beares of the moon, when Diomed keeps his word. I will rather leave to see Hector, than not to dog him: they say he keeps a Trojan drab, and uses the traitor Calchas' tent: I'll after. Nothing but lechery! all incontinent varlets! [Exit.

Scene II. The same. Before Calchas' tent.

Enter Diomedes.

Dio. What, are you up here, he? speak.

Cal. [Within] Who calls?
Enter TROILUS and ULYSSES, at a distance; after them, THERSITES.

Ulyss. Stand where the torch may not discover us.

Enter CRESSIDA.

Tro. Cressid comes forth to him.

Tro. Yea, so familiar! Ulyss. She will sing any man at first sight. Ther. And any man may sing her, if he can take her cliff; she's noted. Dio. Will you remember? Cres. Remember, yes. Dio. Nay, but do, then; And let your mind be coupled with your words.

Tro. What should she remember?

Ulyss. List.

Cres. Sweet honey Greek, tempt me no more to folly.

Ther. Roguery!

Dio. Nay, then,— Cres. I'll tell you what,— Dio. Foh, foh! come, tell a pin: you are sworn.

Cres. In faith, I cannot: what would you have me do? Ther. A juggling trick,—to be secretly open.

Dio. What did you swear you would bestow on me?

Cres. I prithee, do not hold me to mine oath; Bid me do any thing but that, sweet Greek.

Dio. Good night.

Tro. Hold, patience!

Ulyss. How now, Trojan!

Cres. Diomed,— Dio. No, no, good night; I'll be your fool no more.

Tro. Thy better must.

Cres. Hawk, one word in your ear. Tro. O plague and madness! Ulyss. You are moved, prince; let us depart, I pray you, Lest your displeasure should enlarge itself To wrathful terms: this place is dangerous; The time right deadly; I beseech you, go.

Tro. Behold, I pray you!

Ulyss. Nay, good my lord, go off: You flow to great distraction; come, my lord...

Tro. I pray thee, stay.

Ulyss. You have not patience; come.

Tro. I pray you, stay; by hell and all hell's torments, I will not speak a word!

Dio. And so, good night.

Cres. Nay, but you part in anger.

Cres. Guardian!—why, Greek!

Dio. Foh, foh! adieu; you palter.

Cres. In faith, I do not: come hither again.

Ulyss. You shake, my lord, at something will you go?

You will break out?

Tro. She strokes his cheek!

Ulyss. Come, come.

Tro. Nay, stay; by Jove, I will not speak:

There is between my will and all offences A guard of patience: stay a little while. Ther. How the devil Luxury, with his rump and potato-finger, tickles these togas?

Fry, lechery, fry!

Dio. But will you, then?

Cres. In faith, I will, la; never trust me Dio. Give me some token for the surety of Cres. I'll fetch you one. Ulyss. You have sworn patience.

Tro. Fear me not, sweet I will not be myself, nor have cognition Of what I feel: I am all patience.

Re-enter CRESSIDA.

Ther. Now the pledge; now, now, now Cres. Here, Diomed, keep this sleeve, Tro. O beauty! where is thy faith?

Ulyss. My lord, I will be patient; outwardly I will. Cres. You look upon that sleeve; behold He loved me—O false wench!—Give me a Dio. Whose wasn't?

Cres. It is no matter, now I have't again I will not meet with you to-morrow night: I prithee, Diomed, visit me no more.

Ther. Now she sharpens; well said, stone!

Dio. I shall have it.

Cres. What, this?

Dio. Ay, that Cres. O, all you gods! O pretty, I pledge Thy master now lies thinking in his bed Of thee and me, and sighs, and takes my gait And gives memorial dainty kisses to it, As I kiss thee. Nay, do not snatch it from He that takes that doth take my heart with Dio. I had your heart before, this follow Tro. I did swear patience.

Cres. You shall not have it, Diomed; you shall not; I'll give you something else.

Dio. I will have this: whose was it?

Cres. It is not.

Dio. Come, tell me whose it was.

Cres. 'Twas one's that loved me better you will.

But, now you have it, take it.

Dio. Cres. By all Diana's waiting-women yea, And by herself, I will not tell you whose, Dio. To-morrow will I wear it on my h Air and grieve his spirit that dares not chafe Tro. Wert thou the devil, and worst thy horn, It should be challenged.

Cres. Well, well, 'tis done, 'tis past: a it is not;
not keep my word.

Why, then, farewell;
never shalt mock Diomed again.

You shall not go: one cannot speak a
word, straight starts you.

I do not like this fooling.

Nor I, by Pluto: but that that likes

What shall, I come? the hour?

Ay, come,—O Jove!—do come:—I shall be plagued.

Farewell till then.

Good night: I prithee, come.

[Exit Diomedes.

She was not, sure.

Most sure she was.

Why, my negation hath no taste of

Let it not be believed for womanhood! we had mothers; do not give advantage

What hath she done, prince, that can

Nothing at all, unless that this were she.

This she? no, this is Diomed's Cressida:

Instance, O instance! strong as heaven itself;
The bonds of heaven are slipp'd, dissolved, and loosed;

And with another knot, five-finger-tied,
The fractions of her faith, ovs of her love,
The fragments, scraps, the bits and greedy relics
Of her o'er-eaten faith, are bound to Diomed. 160

Ulyss. May worthy Troilus be half attach'd

With that which here his passion doth express?

Tro. Ay, Greek; and that shall be divulged

well

In characters as red as Mars his heart

Inflamed with Venus: never did you man fancy

With so eternal and so fix'd a soul.

Hark, Greek: as much as I do Cressid love,

So much by weight hate I her Diomed:

That sleeve is mine that he'll bear on his helm:

Were it a casque composed by Vulcan's skill, 170

My sword should bite it: not the dreadful spout

Which shipmen do the hurricane call,

Constrined in mass by the almighty sun,

Shall dizzy with more glamour Neptune's ear

In his descent than shall my promised sword

Falling on Diomed.

Ther. He'll tickle it for his concupiscency.

Tro. O Cressid! O false Cressid! false, false,
false!

Let all untruths stand by thy stained name,

And they'll seem glorious.

Ulyss. O, contain yourself; 180

Your passion draws ears hither.

Enter AEneas.

Æne. I have been seeking you this hour, my

lord:

Hector, by this, is arming him in Troy;

Ajax, your guard, stays to conduct you home.

Tro. Have with you, prince. My courteous lord, adieu.

Farewell, revoluted fair! and, Diomed,

Stand fast, and wear a castle on thy head!

Ulyss. I'll bring you to the gates.

Tro. Accept distracted thanks. [Exit Troilus, AEneas, and Ulysses.

Ther. Would I could meet that rogue Diomed!

I would crook like a raven; I would bode, I would bode. Patroclus will give me any thing for the intelligence of this where: the parrot will not do more for an almand than he for a commendous drab. Lechery, lechery; still, wars and lechery; nothing else holds fashion: a burning devil take them! [Exit.]

SCENE III. Troy. Before Priam's palace.

Enter Hector and ANDROMACHE.

And. When was my lord so much ungently temper'd,

To stop his ears against admonishment?

Unarm, unarm, and do not fight to-day.

Hec. You train me to offend you; get you in:

By all the everlastings gods, I'll go!

And. My dreams will, sure, prove ominous to the day.

Hec. No more, I say.
Enter Cassandra.

Cas. Where is my brother Hector?
And. Here, sister; arm'd, and bloody in intent.
Consort with me in loud and dear petition,
Pursue we him on knees: for I have dream'd to
Of bloody turbulence, and this whole night
Hath nothing been but shapes and forms of slaughter.
Cas. O, 'tis true.
Heçt. Ho! I bid my trumpet sound!
Cas. No notes of sally, for the heavens, sweet brother.
Heçt. Be gone, I say: the gods have heard me swear.
Cas. The gods are deaf to hot and peevish vows;
They are polluted offerings, more abhor'd
Than spotted livers in the sacrifice.
And. O, be persuaded! I do not count it holy
To hurt by being just: it is as lawful, for
We would give much, to use violent thefts,
And rob in the behalf of charity.
Cas. It is the purpose that makes strong the vow;
But vows to every purpose must not hold:
Unarm, sweet Hector.
Heçt. Hold you still, I say;
Mine honour keeps the weather of my fate;
Life every man holds dear: but the brave man
Holds honour far more precious-dear than life.

Enter Troilus.

How now, young man! mean'st thou to fight to-day?
And. Cassandra, call my father to persuade. [Exit Cassandra.

Heçt. No, faith, young Troilus; doff thy harness, youth;
I am to-day 'the vein of chivalry:
Let grow thy sinews till their knots be strong,
And tempt not yet the brushes of the war.
Unarm thee, go, and doubt thou not, brave boy,
I'll stand to-day for thee and me and Troy.
Tro. Brother, you have a vice of mercy in you,
Which better fits a lion than a man.
Heçt. What vice is that, good Troilus? chide me for it.
Tro. When many times the captive Grecian falls,
Even in the fan and wind of your fair sword,
You bid them rise, and live.
Heçt. O, 'tis fair play.
Tro. Fool's play, by heaven, Hector.
Heçt. How now! how now! Tro. For the love of all the gods,
Let's leave the hermit pity with our mothers,
And when we have our armours buckled on,
The venom'd vengeance ride upon our swords,
Spur them to ruthless work, rein them from rush.
Heçt. Fie, savage, fie!
Tro. Hector, then 'tis wars.
Heçt. Troilus, I would not have you fight to-day.
Tro. Who should withhold me?
Not fate, obedience, nor the hand of Mars
Beckoning with fiery truncheon my retire;
Not Priamus and Hecuba on knees,
Their eyes o'ergalled with recourse of tears,
Nor you, my brother, with your true sword
Opposed to him under me, should stop my way.
But by my run.

Re-enter Cassandra, with Priam.

Cas. Lay hold upon him, Priam, hold him
He is thy crutch; now if thou lose thy stay,
Thou on him leaning, and all Troy on thee,
Fall all together.
Pri. Come, Hector, come, go b Thy wife hath dream'd; thy mother hath visions;
Cassandra doth foresee; and I myself
Am like a prophet suddenly enrap
To tell thee that this day is ominous:
Therefore, come back.
Heçt. Aeneas is a field;
And I do stand engaged to many Greeks,
Even in the faith of valour, to appear
This morning to them.
Pri. Ay, but thou shalt not Heçt. I must not break my faith.
You know me dutiful; therefore, dear sir,
Let me not shame respect; but give me lea
To take that course by your consent and w
Which you do here forbid me, royal Priam.
Cas. O Priam, yield not to him!
And. Do not, dear Hector. Andromache, I am offended with Upon the love you bear me, get you in.

[Exit Andromache.

Tro. This foolish, dreaming, superstitious
Makes all these bodements.
Cas. O, farewell, dear H Look, how thou diest! look, how thy eye pale!
Look, how thy wounds do bleed at many W Hark, how Troy roars! how Hecuba cries
How poor Andromache shrills her doleurs
Behold, distraction, frenzy and amazement
Like, withless antic, one another meet,
And all cry, Hector! Hector's dead! O H Tro. Away! away! Cas. Farewell: yet, soft! Hector, I ta leave;
Thou dost thyself and all the Troy deceive.
Heçt. You are amazed, my liege, at h claim.
Go in and cheer the town: we'll forth and Do deeds worth praise and tell them at Pri. Farewell: the gods with safety about thee!
[Exeunt severally Priam and Hector. Alc. Tro. They are at it, hark! Proud D believe,
I come to lose my arm, or win my sleeve.

Enter Pandarus.

Pan. Do you hear, my lord? do you hear
Tro. What now?
Pan. Here's a letter come from yond po
Tro. Let me read.
Pan. A whoreson tisick, a whoreson r tisick so troubles me, and the foolish for this girl: and what one thing, what another I shall leave you one o these days: and I rheum in mine eyes too, and such an ach [Exeunt the latter.

and, to wind, there turn and change together.

He with words and errors still she feeds;

she another with her deeds.

[Exeunt severally.

Enter Agamemnon.

Agam. Renew, renew! The fierce Polydamas

Hath beat down Menon: bastard Margarelon

Hath Doreus prisoner,

And stands colossus-wise, waving his beam,

Upon the pasado corses of the kings

Epistrophus and Cedius: Polyxenes is slain,

Amphimachus and Thos deadly hurt,

Patroclus take'n or slain, and Palamedes

Appals our numbers: haste we, Diomed,

To reinforcement, or we perish all.

Enter Nestor.

Nest. Go, bear Patroclus' body to Achilles;

And bid the snall-paced Ajax arm for shame.

There is a thousand Hectors in the field:

Now here he fights on Galate's horse,

And there lacks work; anon he's there afoot,

And there they fly or die, like scaled sculls

Before the belching whale; then is he yonder,

And there the strawy Greeks, ripe for his edge,

Fall down before him, like the mower's swath:

Here, there, and everywhere, he leaves and takes,

Dexterity so obeying appetite

That what he will he does, and does so much

That proof is call'd impossibility.

Enter Ulysses.

Ulyss. O, courage, courage, princes! great

Achilles

Is arming, weeping, cursing, vowing vengeance:

Patroclus' wounds have roused his drowsy blood,

Together with his mangled Myrmidons,

That noseless, handleless, hack'd and chipp'd, come

to him,

Crying on Hector. Ajax hath lost a friend

And foams at mouth, and he is arm'd and at it,

Roaring for Troilus, who hath done to-day

Mad and fantastic execution.

Engaging and redeeming of himself

With such a careless force and forceless care

As if that luck, in very spite of cunning,

Bade him win all.

Enter Ajax.

Dio. Ay, there, there.

Nest. So, so, we draw together.

Enter Achilles.

Achil. Where is this Hector?

Come, come, thou boy-queller, show thy face;

Know what it is to meet Achilles angry:

Hector! where's Hector? I will none but Hector.

[Exeunt.

SCENE VI. Another part of the plains.

Enter Ajax.

Ajax. Troilus, thou coward Troilus, show thy

Enter Diomedes.

Dio. Troilus, I say! where's Troilus?

Ajax. What wouldst thou?

Ajax. I'll fight with him alone: stand, Diomed.

Dio. He is my prize; I will not look upon. 10

Tro. Come, both you coggings Greeks; have at you both! [Exeunt, fighting.

Enter Hector.

Hec. Yea, Troilus? O, well fought, my youngest brother!

Enter Achilles.

Achil. Now do I see thee, ha! have at thee, Hector!

Hec. Pause, if thou wilt.

Achil. I do disdain thy courtesy, proud Trojan: Be happy that my arms are out of use; My rest and negligence befriended thee now, But thou anon shalt hear of me again; Till when, go seek thy fortune. [Exit.

Fare thee well: I would have been much more a fresher man, so Had I expected thee. How now, my brother!

Re-enter Troilus.

Tro. Ajax hath ta'en Æneas: shall it be? No, by the flame of yonder glorious heaven, He shall not carry him: I'll be ta'en too, Or bring him off; fate, hear me what I say! I reck not though I end my life to-day. [Exit.

Enter in sumptuous armour.

Hec. Stand, stand, thou Greek; thou art a Godly mark: No, wilt thou not? I like thy armour well; I'll flush it and unlock the rivets all, But I'll be master of it: wilt thou not, beast, abide? Why, then fly on, I'll hunt thee for thy hide. 32

Enter Achilles, with Myrmidons.

Achil. Come here about me, you my Myrmidons; Mark what I say. Follow me, sirs, and my proceedings eye: It is decreed Hector the great must die. [Exeunt.

Enter Menelaus and Paris, fighting: then Theristes.

Mar. Turn, slave, and fight.

ACT I.

SCENE I. Rome. A street.

Enter a company of mutinous Citizens, with staves, clubs, and other weapons.

First Cit. Before we proceed any further, hear me speak.

All. Speak, speak.

First Cit. You are all resolved rather to die than to famish?

All. Resolved, resolved.

First Cit. First, you know Caius Marcius is chief enemy to the people.

All. We know it, we know’t.

First Cit. Let us kill him, and we’ll have corn at our own price. Is’t a verdict? I

All. No more talking on’t; let it be done.

Away, away!

Sec. Cit. One word, good citizens.

First Cit. We are accounted poor citizens, the patricians good. What authority surfeits on would relieve us: if they would yield us but the superfluity, while it were wholesome, we might guess they relieved us humanely; but they think we are too dear: the leanness that afflicts us, the object of our misery, is as an inventory to particularize their abundance; our sufferance is a gain to them. Let us revenge this with our pikes, ere we become rakes: for the gods know I speak this in hunger for bread, not in thirst for revenge.

Sec. Cit. Would you proceed especially against Caius Marcius?

All. Against him first: he’s a very dog to the commonalty.

Sec. Cit. Consider you what services he has done for his country?

First Cit. Very well; and could be content to give him good report for’t, but that he pays himself with being proud.

Sec. Cit. Nay, but speak not maliciously.

First Cit. I say unto you, what he hath done famously, he did it to that end: though soft-conscienc’d men can be content to say it was for his country, he did it to please his mother, and to be partly proud; which he is, even to the altitude of his virtue.

Sec. Cit. What he cannot help in his life, you account a vice in him. You must in no wise say he is covetous.

First Cit. If I must not, I need not be less subject to accusations; he hath faults, with surfeit in repetition. [Shouts within.] What are these? The other side of the city is raving. Who stay we prating here? to the Capitol! Come, come.

First Cit. Soft! who comes here?

Enter Menenius Agrippa.

Sec. Cit. Worthy Menenius Agrippa; or hath always loved the people.

First Cit. He’s one honest enough: we the rest were so!

Men. What work’s, my countrymen, in where go you

With bats and clubs? The matter? speak, you.

First Cit. Our business is not unknown to the senate; they have had inking this fortnight to do, which now we shall show them. They say poor suitors have strong brass; they shall know we have strong arms too.

Men. Why, masters, my good friends—honest neighbours,

Will you undo yourselves?

First Cit. We cannot, sir, we are already.

Men. I tell you, friends, most charitable people,

Have the patricians of you. For your war;

Your suffering in this dearth, you may as well

Strike at the heaven with your staves as if you

Against the Roman state, whose course we

The way it takes, cracking ten thousand staves

Of more strong link asunder than can ever

Appear in your impediment. For the debt;

The gods, not the patricians, make it, and

Your knees to them, not arms, must help.

You are transported by calamity,

Thither where more attends you, and you hems o' the state, who care for you like fathers, you curse them as enemies, 80

6. Cit. The former agents, if they did imply, would the belly answer? I will tell you: 140

7. Cit. Ye're long about it. Note me this, good friend; est grave belly was deliberate, hke his accusers, and thus answer'd: 150

8. 'True is it, my incorporate friends,' quoth he, 'That I receive the general food at first, Which you do live upon; and fit it is, Because I am the store-house and the shop Of the whole body: but, if you do remember, I send it through the rivers of your blood, Even to the court, the heart, to the seat o' the brain; And, through the cranks and offices of man, The strongest nerves and small inferior veins From me receive that natural competency Whereby they live; and though that all at once, You, my good friends,—this says the belly, mark me,—

First Cit. Ay, sir; well, well. 170

9. Men. 'Though all at once cannot see what I do deliver out to each, Yet I can make my audit up, that all From me do back receive the flour of all, And leave me but the bran.' What say you to't? 180

First Cit. It was an answer; how apply you this? 190

10. Men. The senators of Rome are this good belly, And you the mutinous members; for examine Their counsels and their cares, digest things rightly Touching the weal o' the common, you shall find No public benefit which you receive But it proceeds or comes from them to you And no way from yourselves. What do you think, You, the great toe of this assembly? 196

First Cit. I the great toe! why the great toe? Men. For that, being one o' the lowest, basest, poorest, 201

Of this most wise rebellion, thou go' st foremost: Thou rascal, that art worst in blood to run, Lead'st first to win some vantage. But make you ready your stiff bats and clubs: Rome and her rats are at the point of battle; The one side must have bale.

Enter CAIUS MARCIUS.

11. Mar. Thanks. What's the matter, you dis- sentious rogues, That, rubbing the poor itch of your opinion, Make yourselves scabs?

First Cit. We have ever your good word. 170

Mar. He that will give good words to thee will flatter Beneath abhorring. What would you have, you curs, That like nor peace nor war? the one affrights you, The other makes you proud. He that trusts to you, Where he should find you lions, finds you hares; Where foxes, geese: you are no surer, no, Than is the coal of fire upon the ice, Or hailstone in the sun. Your virtue is To make him worthy whose offence subdues him And curse that justice did it. Who deserves greatness Deserves your hate; and your affections are A sick man's appetite, who desires most that Which would increase his evil. He that depends Upon your favours swims with fins of lead.
And hews down oaks with rushes. Hang ye!
Trust ye?
With every minute you do change a mind,
And call him noble that was now your hate,
Him vile that was your garland. What's the matter,
That in these several places of the city
You cry against the noble senate, who,
Under the gods, keep you in awe, which else
Would feed on one another? What's their seeking?

Men. For corn at their own rates; whereof, they say,
The city is well stored.

Mar. Hang 'em! They say!
They'll sit by the fire, and presume to know
What's done in the Capitol; who's like to rise,
Who thrives and who declines; side factions and give out
Conjectural marriages; making parties strong
And feeleing such as stand not in their liking
Below their cobbled shoes. They say there's grain enough!
Would the nobility lay aside their ruth,
And let me use my sword, I'd make a quarry
With thousands of these quarter'd slaves, as high
As I could pick my lance.

Men. Nay, these are almost thoroughly persauded:
For though abundantly they lack discretion,
Yet are they passing cowardly. But, I beseech you,
What says the other troop?

Mar. They are dissolved; hang 'em!
They said they were an-hungry; sigh'd forth proverbs,
That hunger broke stone walls, that dogs must eat,
That meat was made for mouths, that the gods sent not
Corn for the rich men only: with these shreds
They vented their complainings; which being answ'r'd,
And a petition granted them, a strange one—
To break the heart of generosity,
And make bold power look pale—they throw
As they would hang them on the horns o' the moon,
Shouting their emulation.

Men. What is granted them?

Mar. Five tribunes to defend their vulgar

The rabble should have first unroof'd the city,

Men. This is strange.

Mar. Go, get you home, you fragments!

Enter a Messenger, hastily.

Mess. Where's Caius Marcius?

Mar. Here: what's the matter?

Mess. The news is, sir, the Volscy's in arms.

Mar. I am glad on 't: then we shall ha'

Enter Cominius, Titus Lartius, and Senators; Junius Brutus and Sicinius Lutus.

First Sen. Marcius, 'tis true that you lately told us;
The Volscy's in arms.

Mar. Nay, they have a lead.
Tullus Aufidius, that will put you to 't.
I sin in envyng his nobility,
And were I any thing but what I am,
I would wish me only he.

Com. You have fought too
Mar. Were half to half the world by land and sea.
Upon my party, I'll revol, to make
Only my wars with him: he is a lion
That I am proud to hunt.

First Sen. Then, worthy Marcius
Attend upon Cominius to these wars.

Com. It is your former promise.

Mar. Sir, it is.
And I am constant. Titus Lartius, thou
Shalt see me once more strike at Tullus' side.
What, art thou still? stand'st out?

Tit. No, Caius Marcius.
I'll lean upon one crutch and fight with't.
Exeunt Cominius and others.

First Sen. Your company to the city, where, I know,
Our greatest friends attend us.

[To Mar.] Follow Cominius; we must you:

Scene III. Rome. A room in Marcius' house.

Enter Volumnia and Virgilia: they set them down on two low stools, and sew.

Vol. I pray you, daughter, sing; or express yourself in a more comfortable sort: if my son were my husband, I should freelier rejoice in that absence wherein he won honour than in the embraces of his bed where he would show most love. When yet he was but tender-bodied and the only son of my womb, when youth with comeliness plucked all gaze his way, when for a day of kings' entreaties a mother should not sell him an hour from her beholding, I, considering how honour would become such a person, that it was no better than picture-like to hang by the wall, if renown made it not stir, was pleased to let him seek danger where he was like to find fame. To a cruel war I sent him; from whence he returned, his brows bare of oak. I tell thee, daughter, I sprang not more in joy at first hearing he was a man-child than now in first seeing he had proved himself a man.

Vir. But had he died in the business, madam; how then?

Vol. Then his good report should have been my son; I therein would have found issue. Hear me profess sincerely: had I a dozen sons, each in my love alike and none less dear than thine and my good Marcius, I had rather had eleven die nobly for their country than one voluptuously surfeit out of action.

Enter a Gentlewoman.

Gent. Madam, the Lady Valeria is come to visit you.

Vir. Beseech you, give me leave to retire myself.

Vol. Indeed, you shall not. Methinks I hear hither your husband's drum, See him pluck Ausidius down by the hair, As children from a bear, the Volscus shaming him: Methinks I see him stamp thus, and call thus: 'Come on, you coward! you were got in fear, Though you were born in Rome.' his bloody brow With his mail'd hand then wiping, forth he goes, Like to a harvest-man that's task'd to mow Or all or lose his hire.

Vir. His bloody brow! O Jupiter, no blood!

Vol. Away, you fool! it more becomes a man Than gild his trophy the breasts of Hecuba, When she did suckle Hector, look'd not lovelier Than Hector's forehead when it spit forth blood At Grecian sword, contemplating. Tell Valeria, We are fit to bid her welcome. [Exit Gent.

Vir. Heavens bless my lord from fell Ausidius! Vol. He'll beat Ausidius' head below his knee And tread upon his neck.

Enter Valeria, with an Usher and Gentlewoman.

Val. My ladies both, good day to you.

Vol. Sweet madam.

Vir. I am glad to see your ladyship.

Val. How do you both? you are manifest house-keepers. What are you sewing here? A fine spot, in good faith. How does your little son?

Vir. I thank your ladyship; well, good madam.

Vol. He had rather see the swords, and hear a drum, than look upon his schoolmaster. 61

Val. O' my word, the father's son: I'll swear, 'tis a very pretty boy. O' my troth, I looked upon him o' Wednesday half an hour together: has such a confirmed countenance. I saw him run after a gilded butterfly; and when he caught it, he let it go again; and after it again; and over and over he comes, and up again: caught it again; or whether his fall enraged him, or how 'twas, he did so set his teeth and tear it; O, I warrant, how he mummocked it!

Vol. One on 's father's moods.

Val. Indeed, la, 'tis a noble child.

Vir. A crack, madam.

Val. Come, lay aside your stitchery; I must have you play the idle huswife with me this afternoon.

Vir. No, good madam; I will not out of doors.

Val. Not out of doors!

Vir. She shall, she shall.

Val. Indeed, no, by your patience; I'll not over the threshold till my lord return from the wars.

Val. Fie, you confine yourself most unreasonably; come, you must go visit the good lady that lies in.

Vir. I will wish her speedy strength, and visit her with my prayers; but I cannot go thither.

Val. Why, I pray you?

Vir. 'Tis not to save labour, nor that I want love.

Val. You would be another Penelope: yet, they say, all the yarn she spun in Ulysses' absence did but fill Ithaca full of moths. Come; I would your cambric were sensible as your finger, that you might leave pricking it for pity. Come, you shall go with us.

Vir. No, good madam, pardon me; indeed, I will not forth.

Val. In truth, la, go with me; and I'll tell you excellent news of your husband. 101

Vir. O, good madam, there can be none yet.

Val. Verily, I do not jest with you; there came news from him last night.

Vir. Indeed, madam?

Val. In earnest, it's true; I heard a senator speak it. Thus it is: the Volscis have an army forth; against whom Cominius the general is gone, with one part of our Roman power: your lord and Titus Lartius are set down before their city Corioli; they nothing doubt prevailing and to make it brief wars. This is true, on mine honour; and so, I pray, go with us.

Vir. Give me excuse, good madam; I will obey you in every thing hereafter.

Val. Let her alone, lady: as she is now, she will but disease our better mirth.

Val. In troth, I think she would. Fare you well, then. Come, good sweet lady. Prithie, Virgilia, turn thy solemnness out of door, and go along with us. 121

Vir. No, at a word, madam; indeed, I must not. I wish you much mirth.

Val. Well, then, farewell. [Exit.] art behind; backs red, and faces pale flight and agued fear! Mend and charge home, y the fires of heaven, I'll leave the foe make my wars on you: look to't: come on;
I'll stand fast, we'll beat them to their wives,

[Exit Coriolanus.]

[Enter Alarum. The Volscs fly, and Marcius follows them to the gates.

1. What is become of Marcius? Slain, sir, doubtless.
2. Following the fliers at the very heels, he he enters; who, upon the sudden, to their gates: he is himself alone, over all the city.

1. O noble fellow! insensibly outdares his senseless sword, when it bows, stands up. Thou art left, lartius: uncle entire, as big as thou art, as so rich a jewel. Thou wast a soldier Cato's wish, not fierce and terrible strokes; but, with thy grim looks and under-like percussion of thy sounds, art least thine enemies shake, as if the world were over and did tremble.

2. Marcius, bleeding, assaulted by the enemy.

There is the man of my soul's hate, Aufidius, Piercing our Romans: then, valiant Titus, take Convenient numbers to make good the city: Whilst I, with those that have the spirit, will haste To help Cominius.

Lart. Worthy sir, thou bleed'st; Thy exercise hath been too violent for A second course of fight.

Mar. Sir, praise me not; My work hath yet not warm'd me: fare you well: The blood I drop is rather physical Than dangerous to me: to Aufidius thus I will appear, and fight.

Lart. Now the fair goddess, Fortune, Fall deep in love with thee; and her great charms Misguide thy oppressors' swords! Bold gentleman, Prosperity be thy page!

Mar. Thy friend no less Than those she placeth highest! So, farewell. Lart. Thou worthiest Marcius!

[Exit Marcius.

Go, sound thy trumpet in the market-place; Call thither all the officers o' the town, Where they shall know our mind: away!

[Exeunt.

SCENE VI. Near the camp of Cominius.

Enter Cominius, as it were in retire, with soldiers.

Com. Breathe you, my friends: well fought: we are come off Like Romans, neither foolish in our stands, Nor cowardly in retire: believe me, sirs, We shall be charged again. While we have struck, By interims and conveying gusts we have heard The charges of our friends. Ye Roman gods! Lead their successes as we wish our own, That both our powers, with smiling fronts encumbering, May give you thankful sacrifice.

[Enter a Messenger.

Thy news?

Mess. The citizens of Corioli have issued, And given to Lartius and to Marcus battle: I saw our party to their trenches driven, And then I came away.

Com. Though thou speakest truth, Methinks thou speak'st not well. How long is't since?

Mess. Above an hour, my lord.

Com. 'Tis not a mile; briefly we heard their drums: How couldst thou in a mile confound an hour, And bring thy news so late?

Mess. Spies of the Volscs Held me in chase, that I was forced to wheel Three or four miles about, else had I, sir, Half an hour since brought my report.

Com. Who's yonder, That does appear as he were flay'd? O gods! He has the stamp of Marcus; and I have Before-time seen him thus.

Mar. [Within] Come I too late?

Com. The shepherd knows not thunder from a tabor
More than I know the sound of Marcius' tongue
From every manner man.

Enter Marcius.

Mar. Come I too late?
Com. Ay, if you come not in the blood of others,
But mantled in your own.

Mar. O, let me clip ye
In arms as sound as when I woo'd, in heart
As merry as when our nuptial day was done,
And tapers burn'd to bedward!

Com. Flower of warriors,
How is't with Titus Lartius?

Mar. As with a man busied about decrees;
Condemning some to death, and some to exile;
Ransoming him, or pitying, threatening the other;
Holding Coriolanus in the name of Rome,
Even like a fawning greyhound in the leash,
To let him slip at will.

Com. Where is that slave
Which told me they had beat you to your trenches?

Where is he? call him hither.

Mar. Let him alone;
He did inform the truth: but for our gentlemen,
The common file—a plague! tribunes for them—
The mouse ne'er shunn'd the cat as they did budge
From rascals worse than they.

But how prevail'd you?

Mar. Will the time serve to tell? I do not think.
Where is the enemy? are you lords o' the field?
If not, why cease you till you are so?

Com. Marcus, we have at disadvantage fought and did Retire to win our purpose.

Mar. How lies their battle? know you on which side
They have placed their men of trust?

As I guess, Marcius,
Their bands i' the vaward are the Antiates,
Of their best trust; o'er them Aufidius,
Their very heart of hope.

Mar. I do beseech you,
By all the battles wherein we have fought,
By the blood we have shed together, by the vows
We have made to endure friends, that you directly
Set me against Aufidius and his Antiates;
And that you not delay the present, but,
Filling the air with swords advanced and darts,
We prove this very hour.

Com. Though I could wish
You were conducted to a gentle bath
And balms applied to you, yet dare I never Deny your asking: take your choice of those
That best can aid your action.

Those are they
That most are willing. If any such be here—
As it were sin to doubt—that love this painting
Wherein you see me smear'd; if any fear
Lesser his person than an ill report;
If any think brave death outweighs bad life
And that his country's dearer than himself;
Let him alone, or so many so minded,
Wave thus, to express his disposition,
And follow Marcius.

[They all shout and wave their swords, take him up in their arms, and cast up caps.

O, me alone! make you a sword of me?

As to us, to all the world, that Caius Marcius 59
Wears this war's garland: in token of the which,
My noble steed, known to the camp, I give him,
With all his trim belonging; and from this time,
For what he did before Coriolanus, call him,
With all the applause and clamation of the host,
CAIUS MARCIUS CORIOLANUS! Bear
The addition nobly ever!

All. Caius Marcus Coriolius!
Cor. I will go wash:
And when my face is fair, you shall perceive
Whether I blush or no: howbeit, I thank you. 70
I mean to strike your steed, and at all times
To undercress your good addition
To the fairness of my power.

Com. So, to our tent:
Where, ere we do repose us, we will write
To Rome of our success. You, Titus Lartius, Must to Corioli back: send us to Rome
The best, with whom we may articulate,
For their own good and ours.

Lart. I shall, my lord.
Cor. The gods begin to mock me. I, that now Refused most princely gifts, am bound to beg 80
Of my lord general.

Com. Take't; 'tis yours. What is't?
Cor. I sometime lay here in Corioli
At a poor man's house; he used me kindly:
He cried to me; I saw him prisoner;
But then Auvian was within my view,
And wrath o'erwhelm'd my pity: I request you
To give my poor host freedom.

Com. O, well begg'd! 90
Were he the butcher of my son, he should Be free as is the wind. Deliver him, Titus.
Lart. Marcus, his name?
Cor.

By Jupiter! forgot. 99
I am weary; yes, my memory is tired.
Have we no wine here?

Com. Go we to our tent:
The blood upon your visage dries; 'tis time
It should be look'd to: come. [Exeunt.

SCENE X. The camp of the Volsces.

A flourish. Cornets. Enter Tullus Aufidius, bloody, with two or three Soldiers.

Auf. The town is ta'en!
First Sol. 'Twill be deliver'd back on good condition.

Auf. Condition!
I would I were a Roman; for I cannot,
Being a Volsce, be that I am. Condition!

As often as we eat. By the elements, 10
If e'er again I meet him beard to beard,
He's mine, or I am his: mine emulation
Hath not that honour in't it had: for where
I thought to crush him in an equal force,
True sword to sword, I'll potch at him some way
Or wrath or craft may get him.

First Sol. He's the devil.

AUF. Bolder, though not so subtle. My va-lour's poison'd
With only suffering stain by him; for him
Shall fly out of itself: nor sleep nor sanctuary,
Being naked, sick, nor fane nor Capitol, 20
The prayers of priests nor times of sacrifice,
Embarquements all of fury, shall lift up
Their rotten privilege and custom 'gainst
My hate to Marcius: where I find him, were it
At home, upon my brother's guard, even there,
Against the hospitable canon, would I Wash my fierce hand in's heart. Go you to the city;
Learn how 'tis held; and what they are that must Be hostages for Rome.

First Sol. Will not you go?

AUF. I am attended at the cypress grove: I pray you—
'Tis south the city mills—bring me word thither
How the world goes, that to the pace of it
I may spur on my journey.

First Sol. I shall, sir. [Exeunt.

ACT II.

SCENE I. Rome. A public place.

Enter Menenius with the two Tribunes of the people, Sicinius and Brutus.

Men. The augurer tells me we shall have news to-night.

Bru. Good or bad?

Men. Not according to the prayer of the people, for they love not Marcius.

Sic. Nature teaches beasts to know their friends.

Men. Pray you, who does the wolf love?

Sic. The lamb.

Men. Ay, to devour him; as the hungry plebeians would the noble Marcius. 11

Bru. He's a lamb indeed, that baes like a bear.

Men. He's a bear indeed, that lives like a lamb. You two are old men: tell me one thing that I shall ask you.

Both. Well, sir.

Men. In what enormity is Marcius poor in, that you two have not in abundance?

Bru. He's poor in no one fault, but stored with all. 21

Sic. Especially in pride.

Bru. And topping all others in boasting.

Men. This emulation is strange now: do you two know how you are censured here in the city, I mean of us o' the right-hand file? do you? 1

Both. Why, how are we censured?

Men. Because you talk of pride now, you not be angry?

Both. Well, well, sir, well.

Men. What 'tis no great matter; for a little thief of occasion will rob you of a great patience: give your dispositions the reins, a put it as a pleasure to you in being so. You man, and one that loves a cup of hot win not a drop of allaying Tiber in't; said

Look, here's a letter from him: the state

one at home for you. 120

I will make my very house reel to

Yes, certain, there's a letter for you; I

O, he is wounded; I thank the gods for't.

So do I too, if it be not too much:

time home with the oaken garland.

Has he disciplined Aufidius soundly?

Titus Lartius writes, they fought toge-

And twice time for him too, I'll warrant

Good ladies, let's go. Yes, yes, yes; ates has letters from the general, wherein is my son the whole name of the war: he this action outdone his former deeds

In troth, there's wondrous things spoke

Wondrous! ay, I warrant you, and not his true purchasing.

The gods grant them true!

True! pow, pow.

True! I'll be sworn they are true, is he wounded? [To the Tribunes] God our good worship! Marcius is coming he has more cause to be proud. Where ounded? 154

Vol. I the shoulder and i the left arm: there will be large cicatrizes to show the people, when he shall stand for his place. He received in the repulse of Tarquin seven hurts i the body.

Men. One i the neck, and two i the thigh,
—there's nine that I know.

Vol. He had, before this last expedition, twenty-five wounds upon him. 170

Men. Now it's twenty-seven; every gash was an enemy's grave. [A shout and flourish.]
Hark! the trumpets.

Vol. These are the ushers of Marcius: before him he carries noise, and behind him he leaves
tears:

Death, that dark spirit, in's nervous arm doth lie;

Which, being advanced, declines, and then men die.

A senet. Trumpets sound. Enter Cominius the general, and Titus Lartius; between them, Coriolanus, crowned with an oaken garland; with Captains and Soldiers, and a Herald.

Her. Know, Rome, that all alone Marcius fight
Within Corioli gates: where he hath won,

With fame, a name to Caius Marcius; these
In honour follows Coriolanus.

Welcome to Rome, renowned Coriolanus!

[Flourish.

All. Welcome to Rome, renowned Coriolanus!
Cor. No more of this; it does offend my heart:
Pray now, no more.

Com. Look, sir, your mother!
Cor. O, You have, I know, petition'd all the gods
For my prosperity! [Kneels.

Cor. My gentle Marcius, worthy Caius, and
By deed-achieving honour newly named,—

What is it—Coriolanus must I call thee?—

But, O, thy wife! My gracious silence, hail!

Wouldst thou have laugh'd had I come coffin'd home,

That weep'st to see me triumph? Ah, my dear,
Such eyes the widows in Corioli wear,

And mothers that lack sons.

Men. Now, the gods crown thee!
Cor. And live you yet! [To Valeria] O my sweet lady, pardon.

Vol. I know not where to turn: O, welcome
home:

And welcome, general: and ye're welcome all.

Men. A hundred thousand welcomes. I could weep

And I could laugh, I am light and heavy, Welcome.
A curse begin at very root on's heart,
That is not glad to see thee! You are three That Rome should dote on; yet, by the faith of men,

We have some old crab-trees here at home that will not

Be grafted to your relish. Yet welcome, warriors:
We call a nettle but a nettle and

The faults of fools but folly.

Cor. Ever right.
Her. Menenius ever, ever.
Herald. Give way there, and go on!
Cor. [To Volumnia and Virgilia] Your hand, and yours: Ere in our own house I do make your head, The good patricians must be visited; From whom I have received not only greetings, But with them change of honours. Vol. I have lived To see inherited my very wishes And the buildings of my fancy: only There's one thing wanting, which I doubt not but Our Rome will cast upon thee. Cor. Know, good mother, I had rather be their servant in my way, Than sway with them in theirs. Com. On, to the Capitol! 229 [Flourish. Cornets. Exeunt in state, as before. Brutus and Sicinius come forward.

Bru. All tongues speak of him, and the blearèd sights Are spectacled to see him: your prattling nurse Into a rapture lets her baby cry While she chats him: the kitchen milk'd pins Her richest lockout 'bout her reechy neck, Clambering the walls to eye him: stalls, bulks, windows, Are smother'd up, leads fill'd, and ridges hormed With variable complexions, all agreeing In earnestness to see him: self-shown flamens Do press among the popular throngs and puff 230 To win a vulgar station: our veil'd dames Commit the war of white and damask in Their nicely-gawded cheeks to the wanton spoil Of Phoebus' burning kisses: such a pother As if that whatsoever god who leads him Were sily crept into his human powers And gave him graceful posture.

On the sudden, I warrant him consil.

Bru. Then our office may, During his power, go sleep. Sic. He cannot temperately transport his honours 240 From where he should begin and end, but will Lose those he hath won.

Bru. In that there's comfort.

Sic. Doubt not The commoners, for whom we stand, but they Upon their ancient malice will forget With the least cause these his new honours, which That he will give them make I as little question As he is proud to do't.

Bru. I heard him swear, Were he to stand for consul, never would he Appear 't the market-place nor on him put The napless vesture of humility; 259 Nor, showing, as the manner is, his wounds To the people, beg their stinking breaths.

Sic. 'Tis right.

Bru. It was his word: O, he would miss it rather Than carry it but by the suit of the gentry to him And the desire of the nobles.

Sic. I wish no better Than have him hold that purpose and to put it In execution.

Bru. 'Tis most like he will.

Sic. It shall be to him then as our good wills, A sure destruction.

Bru. So it must fall out To him or our authorities. For an end, We must suggest the people in what hatred He still hath held them; that to's power Have made them mules, silenced their ple and Disproportioned their freedoms, holding them In human action and capacity, Of no more soul nor fitness for the world Than camels in the war, who have their pro Only for bearing burdens, and sore blows For sinking under them.

Sic. This, as you say, suggests At some time when his soaring insolence Shall touch the people—which time shall not: If he be put upon't; and that's as easy As to set dogs on sheep—will be his fate To kindle their dry stubble; and their blaze Shall darken him for ever.

Enter a Messenger.

Bru. What's the matte Mess. You are sent for to the Capitol, thought That Marcus shall be consil: I have seen the dumb men throng to see him The blind to hear him speak: matrons and Ladies and maids their scarfs and handkercke Upon him as he pass'd: the nobles bended, As to Jove's statue, and the commons made A shower and thunder with their caps and sh I never saw the like.

Bru. Let's to the Capitol: And carry with us ears and eyes for the tim But hearts for the event.

Sic. Have with you.  [Ex.

Scene II. The Capitol.

Enter two Officers, to lay cushions. First Off. Come, come, they are almost How many stand for consulships? Sec. Off. Three, they say: but 'tis thou every one Coriolanus will carry it. First Off. That's a brave fellow; but vengeance proud, and loves not the com people.

Sec. Off. Faith, there have been many men that have flatt'rd the people, who loved them; and there be many that they loved, they know not wherefore: so that, if love they know not why, they hate up better a ground; therefore, for Coriolanus to care whether they love or hate him much the true knowledge he has in their dispos out of his noble carelessness lets them see't. First Off. If he did not care whether his love or no, he waved indifferently doing them neither good nor harm; but he their hate with greater devotion than the render it him; and leaves nothing undone may fully discover him their opposite. No seem to affect the malice and displeasure people is as bad as that which he dislik flatter them for their love.
When blows have made me stay, I fled from words.
You soothed not, therefore hurt not: but your people,
I love them as they weigh.
Men. He's right noble:
Let him be call'd for.
First Sen. Call Coriolanus.
Off. He doth appear.

Re-enter Coriolanus.

Men. The senate, Coriolanus, are well pleased
To make thee consul.
Cor. I do owe them still
My life and services.

Men. It then remains
That you do speak to the people.
Cor. I do beseech you,
Let me o'erleap that custom, for I cannot
Put on the gown, stand naked and entreat them,
For my wounds' sake, to give their suffrage:
please you
That I may pass this doing.

Sir, the people
Must have their voices; neither will they hate
One jot of ceremony.

Men. Put them not to't:
Pray you, go fit you to the custom and Take to you, as your predecessors have,
Your honour with your form.

Cor. It is a part
That I shall blush in acting, and might well
Be taken from the people.

Bru. Mark you that?

Cor. To brag unto them, thus I did, and thus;
Show them the unaching scars which I should hide.
As if I had received them for the hire
Of their breath only!

Men. Do not stand upon't.
We recommend to you, tribunes of the people,
Our purpose to them: and to our noble consul
Wish we all joy and honour.

Senators. To Coriolanus come all joy and honour! [Flourish of cornets. Exeunt all but Sicinius and Brutus.

Bru. You see how he intends to use the people.
Sic. May they perceive 's intents? He will require them,

As if he did condemn what he requested
Should be in them to give.

Bru. Come, we'll inform them
Of our proceedings here: on the market-place,
I know, they do attend us. [Exeunt.

Scene III. The same. The Forum.

Enter seven or eight Citizens.

First Cit. Once, if he do require our voices, we ought not to deny him.

Sec. Cit. We may, sir, if we will.

Third Cit. We have power in ourselves to do it, but it is a power that we have no power to do;
for if he show us his wounds and tell us his deeds, we are to put our tongues into those wounds and speak for them; so, if he tell us his noble deeds, we must also tell him our noble acceptance of them. Ingratitude is monstrous, and for the multitude to be ingrateful, were to make a monster of the multitude; of the which we being members, should bring ourselves to be monstrous members.

First Cit. And to make us no better thought of, a little help will serve; for once we stood up about the corn, he himself stuck not to call many-headed multitude.

Third Cit. We have been called so of not that our heads are some brown, some some ashburn, some bald, but that our wits diversely coloured: and truly I think if wits were to issue out of one skull, they were east, west, north, south, and their consent direct way should be at once to all the compass.

Sec. Cit. Think you so? Which way judge my wit would fly?

Third Cit. Nay, your wit will not out as another man's will; 'tis strongly up in a block-head, but if it were at 'twould, sure, southward.

Sec. Cit. Why that way?

Third Cit. To lose itself in a fog, being three parts melted away with rotten the fourth would return for conscience help to get thee a wife.

Sec. Cit. You are never without your may, you may.

Third Cit. Are you all resolved to give voices? But that's no matter, the great carries it. I say, if he would incline to ple, there was never a worthier man.

Enter Coriolanus in a gown of hum with Menenius.

Here he comes, and in the gown of mark his behaviour. We are not to stay gether, but to come by him where he by ones, by twos, and by threes. He's to his requests by particulars; wherein even of us has a single honour; in giving his voices with our own tongues: they follow me, and I'll direct you how you
by him.

All. Content, content. [Exeunt Cit.
Men. O sir, you are not right: have you known
The worthiest men have done 't?

Cor. What must
I pray, sir,—Plague upon it! I cannot
My tongue to such a pace:—Look, wounds!
I got them in my country's service, when
Some certain of your brethren roar'd and
From the noise of our own drums,

Men. O me, the
You must not speak of that: you must

To think upon you.

Cor. Think upon me! hang
I would they would forget me, like the
Which our divines lose by 'em.

Men. I'll leave you: pray you, speak to
I pray you,

In wholesome manner.

Cor. Bid them wash the
And keep their teeth clean. [Re-enter the Citizens. ] So, here comes a [Re-enter a third Citizen.]
You know the cause, sir, of my standing Third Cit. We do, sir; tell us who brought you to't.

Cor. Mine own desert.
CORIOLANUS.

1. Cit. Your own desert!
2. Cor. Ay, but not mine own desire.

3d Cit. How not your own desire?

4. No, sir, 'twas never my desire yet to make the poor with begging.

5. Cit. You must think, if we give you hding, we hope to gain by you.

6. Well then, I pray, your price o' the ship?

7. It. The price is to ask it kindly.

8. Kindly! Sir, I pray, let me ha': I have to show you, which shall be yours in a. Your good voice, sir; what say you?

9. Cit. You shall ha' it, worthy sir.

10. A match, sir. There 's in all two worthy beggar. I have your alms; adieu.

11. Cit. But this is something odd.

12. Cit. An 'twere to give again,—but 'tis utter.

[Exeunt the three Citizens. 90

Re-enter two other Citizens.

13. Pray you now, if it may stand with the of your voices that I may be consul, I have the customary gown.

14. rth Cit. You have deserved nobly of your, and you have not deserved nobly.

15. Your enigma?

16. 4th Cit. You have been a scourge to her es, you have been a rod to her friends; you not indeed loved the common people.

17. You should account me the more virg that I have not been common in my love, sir, flatter my sworn brother, the people, a dearer estimation of them; 'tis a condi they account gentle: and since the wish of their choice is rather to have my hat my heart, I will practise the insinuating be off to them most counterfeitedly; that I will counterfeit the bewitchment of some r man and give it bountiful to the des Therefore, beseech you, I may be consul.

18. We hope to find you our friend; therefore give you our voices heartily.

19. rth Cit. You have received many wounds ur country.

20. I will not seal your knowledge with th them. I will make much of your voices, trouble you no further.

21. Cit. The gods give you joy, sir, heartily!

[Exeunt.

Most sweet voices!

22. it is to die, better to starve, to have the rape which first which we do deserve.

23. this woolish toge should I stand here, of Hob and Dick, that do appear, needless vouches? Custom calls me to't; custom wills, in all things should we do', last on antique time would lie unswept, untimely error be too highly height to d'eer-peer. Rather than fool it so, high office and the honour go, that would do thus. I am half through; e part suffer'd, the other will I do. 131

Re-enter three Citizens more.

24. one foe voices.

25. voices: for your voices I have fought; d for your voices; for your voices bear

Of wounds two dozen odd; battles thrice six I have seen and heard of; for your voices have Done many things, some less, some more: your voices:

Indeed, I would be consul.

26. Sixth Cit. He has done nobly, and cannot go without any honest man's voice.

27. Seventh Cit. Therefore let him be consul: the gods give him joy, and make him good friend to the people!

Cor. Worthy voices!

Re-enter Menenius, with Brutus and Sicinius.

28. Men. You have stood your limitation; and the tribunes

Endue you with the people's voice: remains That, in the official marks invested, you Anon do meet the senate.

Cor. Is this done?

29. Sic. The custom of request you have discharged:

30. The people do admit you, and are summon'd To meet anon, upon your approbation.

Cor. Where? at the senate-house?

31. Sic. There, Coriolanus.

32. Cor. May I change these garments?

33. Sic. You may, sir.

34. Cor. That I'll straight do; and, knowing myself again, Repair to the senate-house.

35. Men. I'll keep you company. Will you along?

36. Bru. We stay here for the people.

37. Sic. Fare you well.

[Exeunt Coriolanus and Menenius. He has it now, and by his looks methinks 'Tis warm at 's heart.

38. Bru. With a proud heart he wore his humble weeds.

Will you dismiss the people?

Re-enter Citizens.

39. Sic. How now, my masters! have you chose this man?

40. First Cit. He has our voices, sir.

41. Bru. We pray the gods he may deserve your loves.

42. Sec. Cit. Amen, sir: to my poor unworthy notice,

43. He mock'd us when he begg'd our voices.

44. Third Cit. Certainly he flouted us downright.

45. First Cit. No, 'tis his kind of speech; he did not mock us.

46. Sec. Cit. Not one amongst us, save yourself, but says He used us scornfully: he should have show'd us His marks of merit, wounds received for his country.

47. Sic. Why, so he did, I am sure.

49. Third Cit. He said he had wounds, which he could show in private.

And with his hat, thus wav'ing it in scorn, 'I would be consul,' says he: 'aged custom, But by your voices, will not so permit me; Your voices therefore.' When we granted that,
Here was 'I thank you for your voices: thank you:
Your most sweet voices: now you have left your voices,
I have no further with you.' Was not this
With mockery?
Sic. Why either were you ignorant to see't,
Or, seeing it, of such childish friendliness
To yield your voices?
Bru. Could you not have told him
As you were lesson'd, when he had no power,
But was a petty servant to the state,
He was your enemy, ever spake against
Your liberties and the charters that you bear
I' the body of the weal; and now, arriving
A place of potency and sway o' the state,
If he should still malignantly remain
Fast foe to the plebeii, your voices might Be curses to yourselves? You should have said
That as his worthy deeds did claim no less Than what he stood for, so his gracious nature
Would think upon you for your voices and Translate his malice towards you into love,
Standing your friendly lord.
Sic. Thus have said,
As you were fore-advised, had touch'd his spirit
And tried his inclination; from him pluck'd Either his gracious promise, which you might,
As cause had call'd you up, have held him to;
Or else it would have gai'd his surly nature,
Which easily endures not article
Tying him to aught: so putting him to rage,
You should have ta'en the advantage of his choler
And pass'd him unelect.
Bru. Did you perceive
He did solicit you in free contempt
When he did need your loves, and do you think
That his contempt shall not be bruising to you,
When he hath power to crush? Why, had your bodies
No heart among you? or had tongues to cry
Against the rectorship of judgement?
Sic. Have you
Now denied the asker? and now again
Of him that did not ask, but mock, bestow
Your sued-for tongues?
Third Cit. He's not confirm'd; we may deny him yet.
Sec. Cit. And will deny him:
I'll have five hundred voices of that sound.
First Cit. I twice five hundred and their friends to piece 'em.
Bru. Get you hence instantly, and tell those friends,
They have chose a consul that will from them take
Their liberties; make them of no more voice
Than dogs that are as often beat for barking
As therefore kept to do so.
Sic. Let them assemble,
And on a safer judgement all revoke
Your ignorant election; enforce his pride,
And his old hate unto you; besides, forget not
With what contempt he wore the humble weed,
How in his suit he scorn'd you; but your loves,
Thinking upon his services, took from you
The apprehension of his present portance,
Which most gibingly, ungravely, he did fashion
After the inveterate hate he bears you.
Bru. Lay
A fault on us, your tribunes: that we labour
No impediment between, but that you must Cast your election on him.
Sic. Say, you chose him
More after our commandment than as guid
By your own true affections, and that minds,
Pre-occupied with what you rather must do
Than what you should, made you again
To voice him consul: lay the fault on us.
Bru. Ay, spare us not. Say we read le
you,
How youngly he began to serve his country
How long continued, and what stock be spirited
The noble house o' the Marcians, from w came
That Ancus Marcius, Numa's daughter's son
Who, after great Hostilius, here was king;
Of the same house Publius and Quintus we
That our best water brought by conduits his Ancii, nobly named so,
Twice being [by the people chosen] censor,
Was his great ancestor.
Sic. One thus descend
That hath beside well in his person wroughe
To be set high in place, we did commend
To your remembrances: but you have four Scaling his present bearing with his past,
That he's your fixed enemy, and revoke
Your sudden approbation.
Bru. Say, you ne'er had do
Harp on that still—but by our putting on:
And presently, when you have drawn number,
Repair to the Capitol.
All. We will so: almost a
Repent in their election. [Exeunt Cit.
Bru. Let them go on;
This mutiny were better put in hazard,
Than stay, past doubt, for greater:
If, as his nature is, he fall in rage
With their refusal, both observe and answer
The vantage of his anger.
Sic. To the Capitol, we
We will be there before the stream o' the plebeii;
And this shall seem, as partly 'tis, their own
Which we have goaded onward. [E.]

ACT III.

SCENE I. Rome. A street.

Cornets. Enter Coriolanus, Menenius, the Gentry, Cominius, Titus Lartius, other Senators.

Cor. Tullus Aufidius then had made his head?
Lart. He had, my lord; and that is which caused
Our swifter composition.

Cor. So then the Volscs stand but first,
Ready, when time shall prompt them, to road
Upon's again.

Com. They are worn, lord consul, we shall hardly in our ages see banners wave again.

Saw you Aufidius?

On safe-guard he came to me; and cursed the Volscs, for they had so vilely ed the town: he is retired to Antium.

Spoke he of me?

He did, my lord,

How? what?

How often had he met you, sword to sword:
of all things upon the earth he hated person most, that he would pawn his fortunes less restitution, so he might
'd your vanquisher.

At Antium lives he?

At Antium.

I wish I had a cause to seek him there, pose his hatred fully. Welcome home.

Enter SICINUS and BRUTUS.
d, these are the tribunes of the people,
argue o' the common mouth: I do despise them;
they do prank them in authority,
all noble sufferance.

Pass no further.

Ha! what is that?

It will be dangerous to go on: no further.

What makes this change?

The matter?

Hath he not pass'd the noble and the common?

Cominius, no.

Have I had children's voices?

Tribunes, give way; he shall to the market-place.

The people are incensed against him.

Stop, will fall in broil.

Are these your herd?

These have voices, that can yield them new raight disclaim their tongues? What are our offices?
ing their mouths, why rule you not their seth?
you not set them on?

Be calm, be calm.

It is a purposeful thing, and grows by plot,
the will of the nobility:
t, and live with such as cannot rule er will be ruled.

Call it not a plot:
ple cry you mock'd them, and of late,
was given them gratis, you repined; I'd the suppliants for the people, call'd em leasers, flatterers, foes to nobleness.

Why, this was known before.

Not to them all.

Have you inform'd them silence?

How! I inform them!

You are like to do such business.

Not unlike,

ly, to better yours.

Why then should I be consul? By yond uds,

Let me deserve so ill as you, and make me
Your fellow tribune.

You show too much of that
For which the people stir: if you will pass
To where you are bound, you must inquire your way,
Which you are out of, with a gentler spirit,
Or never be so noble as a consul,
Nor yoke with him for tribune.

Let's be calm.

The people are abused; set on. This pattering
Becomes not Rome, nor has Coriolanus
Deserved this so dishonour'd rub, laid falsely 60
I' the plain way of his merit.

Tell me of corn!

This was my speech, and I will speak't again—

Not now, not now.

No in this heat, sir, now.

Now, as I live, I will. My nobler friends,
I crave their pardons:
For the mutable, rank-scented many, let them
Regard me as I do not flatten, and Therein behold themselves: I say again,
In soothing them, we nourish 'gainst our senate
The cockpit of rebellion, insolence, sedition, 70
Which we ourselves have plough'd for, sow'd, and scatter'd,
By mingling them with us, the honour'd number,
Who lack not virtue, no, nor power, but that
Which they have given to beggars.

Well, no more.

No more words, we beseech you.

How! no more!

As for my country I have shed my blood,
Not fearing outward force, so shall my lungs
Coins words till their decay against those menials,
Which we disdain should utter us, yet sought
The very way to catch them.

You speak o' the people, 80
As if you were a god to punish, not
A man of their infirmity.

Twere well
We let the people know't.

What, what? his choler!

Choler!

Were I as patient as the midnight sleep,
By Jove, 'twould be my mind!

It is a mind
That shall remain a poison where it is,
Not poison any further.

Shall remain!

Hear you this Triton of the minnows? mark you
His absolute 'shall'?

'Twas from the canon.

'Shall'! 90

O good but most unwise patricians! why,
You grave but reckless senators, have you thus Given Hydra here to choose an officer,
That with his peremptory 'shall,' being but
The horn and noise o' the monster's, wants not spirit
To say he'll turn your current in a ditch,
And make your channel his? If he have power,
Then vail your ignorance; if none, awake
Your dangerous lenity. If you are learn'd,
Be not as common fools; if you are not,

Let them have cushions by you. You are plebeians,
If they be senators: and they are no less,
When, both your voices blended, the great'st taste
Most palates theirs. They choose their magistrate,
And such a one as he, who puts his 'shall,'
His popular 'shall,' against a graver bench
Than ever frown'd in Greece. By Jove himself!
It makes the consuls base: and my soul aches
To know, when two authorities are up,
Neither supreme, how soon confusion
May enter 'twixt the gap of both and take
The one by the other.
Com.
Well, on to the market-place.
Cor. Whoever gave that counsel, to give forth
The corn o' the storehouse gratis, as 'twas used Sometime in Greece.
Men.
Well, well, no more of that.
Cor. Though there the people had more absolute power,
I say, they nourish'd disobedience, fed
The ruin of the state.
Bru.
Why, shall the people give
One that speaks thus their void
Cor.
I'll give my reasons,
More worthier than their voices. They know the corn
Was not our recompense, resting well assured
That ne'er did service for't: being press'd to the war,
Even when the navel of the state was touch'd,
They would not thread the gates. This kind of service
Did not deserve corn gratis. Being i' the war,
Their mutinies and revolts, wherein they show'd
Most valour, spoke not for them: the accusation
Which they have often made against the senate,
All cause unbore, could never be the motive
Of our so frank donation. Well, what then?
130
How shall this bisson multitude digest
The senate's courtesy? Let deeds express
What's like to be their words: 'We did request it;
We are the greater poll, and in true fear
They gave us our demands.' Thus we clear
The nature of our seats and make the rabble
Call our cares fears; which will in time
Break ope the locks o' the senate and bring in
The crows to peck the eagles.
Men.
Come, enough.
Bru.
Enough, with over-measure,
Cor.
No, take more:
What may be sworn by, both divine and human,
Seal what I end withal! This double worship, Where one part does disdain with cause, the other
Insult without all reason, where gentry, title,
wisdom,
Cannot conclude but by the yea and no
Of general ignorance,—it must omit
Real necessities, and give way the while
To unstable slightness: purpose so barr'd, it follows,
Nothing is done to purpose. Therefore, beseech
you,
You that will be less fearful than discreet,
That love the fundamental part of state
More than you doubt the change on't, that prefer
A noble life before a long, and wish
To jump a body with a dangerous physic
That's sure of death without it, at once pluck
The multitudinous tongue; let them not lick
The sweet which is their poison: your dishon
Manges true judgement and bereaves the st
Of that integrity which should become't,
Not having the power to do the good it won
For the ill which doth control't.
Bru.
Has said enough.
Sic. Has spoken like a traitor, and shall an
As traitors do.
Cor. Thou wretch, despite o'erwhelm the What should the people do with these bal-bunes?
On whom depending, their obedience fails
To the greater bench: in a rebellion,
When what's not meet, but what must be, was
Then were they chosen: in a better hour,
Let what is meet be said it must be meet,
And throw their power i' the dust.
Bru. Manifest treason!
Sic.
This a consul! no
Bru. The ædiles, ho!
Enter an Edile.
Let him be appreh
Sic. Go, call the people: [Exit Edile whose name myself]
Attach thee as a traitor innovator,
A foe to the public weal: obey, I charge the
And follow to thine answer.
Cor.
Hence, old goat
Senators, &c. We'll surety him.
Com.
Aged sir, hand
Cor. Hence, rotten thing! or I shall thy bones
Out of thy garments.
Sic.
Help, ye citizens!
Enter a rabble of Citizens [Plebeians], with Ædiles.
Men. On both sides more respect.
Sic. Here's he that would take from yo your power.
Bru. Seize him, ædiles!
Citizens. Down with him! down with hi
Senators, &c. Weapons, weapons, wear
[They all shout about Coriolanus,
'Tribunes!' 'Patricians!' 'Citizens!' '
ho!'
'Sicinius!' 'Brutus!' 'Coriolanus!' 'Citiz
'Peace, peace, peace!' 'Stay, hold, peace!
Men. What is about to be? I am a breath;
Confusion's near; I cannot speak. You, tr
To the people! Coriolanus, patience!
Speak, good Sicinius.
Sic.
Hear me, people: peace
Citizens. Let's hear our tribune: p
Speak, speak, speak.
Sic. You are at point to lose your libert
Marcius would have all from you; Marcius
Whom late you have named for consul.
Fie, fie
This is the way to kindle, not to quench.
First Sen. To unbuild the city and to flat.
Sic. What is the city but the people?
Citizens.
The people are the city.
But now 'tis odds beyond arithmetic;
And manhood is call'd foolery, when it stands
Against a falling fabric. Will you hence,
Before the tag return? whose rage doth rend
Like interrupted waters and o'erbear
What they are used to bend.

\textit{Men.}\n
I'll try whether my old wit be in request
With those that have but little: this must be patch'd
With cloth of any colour.

\textit{Com.} Nay, come away.

\textit{Exeunt Coriolanus, Cominius, and others.}

\textit{A Patrician.}\n
This man has marr'd his fortune.

\textit{Men.} His nature is too noble for the world:
He would not flatter Neptune for his trident, Or Jove for's power to thunder. His heart's his mouth:
What his breast forges, that his tongue must vent;
And, being angry, does forget that ever
He heard the name of death. \textit{[A noise within. Here's goodly work!]}\n \textit{Sec. Pat.} I would they were a-bed!

\textit{Men.} I would they were in Tiber! What the vengeance!
Could he not speak 'em fair?

\textit{Re-enter Brutus and Sicinius, with the rabble.}\n
\textit{Sic.} Where is this viper
That would depopulate the city and
Be every man himself?

\textit{Men.} You worthy tribunes,— \textit{Sic.} He shall be thrown down the Tarpeian rock

With rigorous hands: he hath resisted law,
And therefore law shall scorn him further trial
Than the severity of the public power
Which he so sets at nought.

\textit{First Cit.} He shall well know 270
The noble tribunes are the people's mouths,
And we their hands.

\textit{Citizens.} He shall, sure on't.

\textit{Men.} Do not cry havoc, where you should but hunt
With modest warrant.

\textit{Sic.} Sir, how comes 't that you
Have help to make this rescue?

\textit{Men.} As I do know the consul's worthiness,
So can I name his faults, —

\textit{Sic.} Consul! what consul?

\textit{Men.} The consul Coriolanus.

\textit{Bru.} He consul! 280

\textit{Citizens.} No, no, no, no, no.

\textit{Men.} If, by the tribunes' leave, and yours,
good people,
I may be heard, I would crave a word or two;
The which shall turn you to no further harm
Than so much loss of time.

\textit{Sic.} Speak briefly then:
For we are peremptory to dispatch
This viperous traitor; to eject him hence
Were but one danger, and to keep him here
Our certain death: therefore it is decreed
He dies to-night.

\textit{Men.} Now the good gods forbid 290
That our renowned Rome, whose gratitude
Towards her deserved children is enroll'd.
In Jove's own book, like an unnatural dam
Should now eat up her own!

_Sic._ He's a disease that must be cut away.

_Men._ O, he's a limb that has but a disease;
Mortal, to cut it off; to cure it, easy.
What has he done to Rome that's worthy death?
Killing our enemies, the blood he hath lost—
Which, I dare vouch, is more than that he hath,
By many an ounce—he dropp'd it for his country;
And what is left, to lose it by his country,
Were to us all, that do't and suffer it,
A brand to the end o' the world.

_Sic._

_Bru._ Merely awry: when he did love his country,
It honour'd him.

_Men._ The service of the foot
Being once gangreened, is not then respected
For what before it was.

_Bru._ We'll hear no more.
Pursue him to his house, and pluck him thence;
Lest his infection, being of catching nature, 310
Spread further.

_Men._ One word more, one word.
This tiger-footed rage, when it shall find
The harm of uncann'd swiftness, will too late
Tie leaden pounds to his heels. Proceed by process;
Lest parties, as he is beloved, break out,
And sack great Rome with Romans.

_Bru._ If it were so,—

_Sic._ What do ye talk?
Have we not had a taste of his obedience?

_Men._ Consider this: he has been bred i' the wars
Since he could draw a sword, and is ill school'd
In bolded language; meal and bran together
He throws without distinction. Give me leave,
I'll go to him, and undertake to bring him
Where he shall answer, by a lawful form,
In peace, to his utmost peril.

_First Sen._ Noble tribunes,
It is the humane way: the other course
Will prove too bloody, and the end of it
Unknown to the beginning.

_Sic._ Noble Menenius, be you then as the people's officer,
Masters, lay down your weapons.

_Bru._ Go not home.

_Sic._ Meet on the market-place. We'll attend you there:
Where, if you bring not Marcus, we'll proceed
In our first way.

_Men._ I'll bring him to you.

[To the Senators] Let me desire your company:
he must come,
Or what is worst will follow.

_First Sen._ Pray you, let's to him. [Exit.

SCENE II. A room in Coriolanus's house.

_Enter Coriolanus with Patricians._

_Cor._ Let them pull all about mine ears, present me
Death on the wheel or at wild horses' heels,
Or pile ten hills on the Tarpeian rock,
That the precipitation might down stretch
Below the beam of sight, yet will I still Be thus to them.

_A Patrician._ You do the nobler.

_Cor._ I muse my mother
Does not approve me further, who was wo
To call them woollen vassals, things create
To buy and sell with groats, to show bare
In congregations, to yawn, be still and won
When one but of my ordinance stood up
To speak of peace or war.

_Enter Volumnia._

_I talk of you._

Why did you wish me milder? I would have me
False to my nature? Rather say I play
The man I am.

_Vol._ O, sir, sir, sir,
I would have had you put your power well
Before you had worn it out.

_Cor._ Let go.

_Vol._ You might have been enough th
you are,
With striving less to be so: lesser had been
The thwartings of your dispositions, if You had not show'd them how ye were dis er they lack'd power to cross you.

_Cor._ Let them

_Enter Menenius and Senators._

_Men._ Come, come, you have been too something too rough;
You must return and mend it.

_There's no rest._

Unless, by not so doing, our good city
Cleave in the midst, and perish.

_Vol._ Pray, be count
I have a heart as little apt as yours,
But yet a brain that leads my use of anger
To better vantage.

_Men._ Well said, noble woman,
Before he should stoop to the herd, b
The violent fit o' the time craves it as phys
For the whole state, I would put mine arm
Which I can scarcely bear.

_Cor._ What must I do

_Men._ Return to the tribunes.

_Cor._ Well, what then? what

_Men._ Repent what you have spoke.

_Cor._ For them! I cannot do it to the Must I then do't to them?

_Vol._ You are too abs
Though therein you can never be too noble
But when extremities speak. I have you say, Honour and policy, like unsav'rd friends, I the war do grow together: grant that I shall tell me,
In peace what each of them by the other lo
That they combine not there.

_Cor._ Tush, tush!

_Men._ A good de

_Vol._ If it be honour in your wars to see
The same you are not, which, for your best
You adopt your policy, how is it less or wo
That it shall hold companionship in peace
With honour, as in war, since that to both
And throw't against the wind. To the market-place!
You have put me now to such a part which never
I shall discharge to the life.

Cont. Come, come, we'll prompt you.
Vol. I prithee now, sweet son, as thou hast said
My praises made thee first a soldier, so,
To have my praise for this, perform a part
Thou hast not done before.

Cor. Well, I must do't:
Away, my disposition, and possess me

Some harlot's spirit! my throat of war be turn'd,
Which quired with my drum, into a pipe
Small as an eunuch, or the virgin voice
That babies lulls asleep! the smiles of knaves
Tent in my cheeks, and schoolboys' tears take up
The glasses of my sight! a beggar's tongue
Make motion through my lips, and my arm'd knees,
Who bow'd but in my stirrup, bend like his
That hath received an alms! I will not do't,
Lest I surcease to honour mine own truth.
And by my body's action teach my mind
A most inherent baseness.

Vol. At thy choice, then;
To beg of thee, it is my more dishonour
Than thou of them. Come all to ruin; let Thy mother rather feel thy pride than fear
Thy dangerous stoutness, for I mock at death
With as big heart as thou. Do as thou list.
Thy valianliness was mine, thou suck'dst it from me,
But owe thy pride thyself.

Cor. Pray, be content: 130
Mother, I am going to the market-place;
Chide me no more. I'll mountebank their loves, Cog their hearts from them, and come home beloved.
Of all the trades in Rome. Look, I am going:
Commend me to my wife. I'll return consul;
Or never trust to what my tongue can do
I the way of flattery further.

Vol. Do your will. [Exit.

Cont. Away! the tribunes do attend you:

Thyself. To answer mildly: for they are prepared
With accusations, as I hear, more strong 140
Than are upon you yet.

Cor. The word is 'mildly.' Pray you, let us go:

Let them accuse me by invention, I
Will answer in mine honour.

Men. Ay, but mildly.

Cor. Well, mildly be it then. Mildly!

[Exeunt.

SCENE III. The same. The Forum.

Enter SCINIUS and BRUTUS.

Bru. In this point charge him home, that he affects
Tyrannical power: if he evade us there,
Enforce him with his envy to the people,
And that the spoil got on the Antiates
Was ne'er distributed.

Enter an Edile.

What, will he come?
Enter Coriolanus, Menenius, and Cominius, with Senators and Patricians.

Men. Calmly, I do beseech you.
Cor. Ay, as an ostler, that for the poorest piece
Will bear the knife by the volume. The honour'd gods
Keep Rome in safety, and the chairs of justice
Supplied with worthy men! plant love among's! Throng our large temples with the shows of peace,
And not our streets with war!—
First Sen. Amen, amen.
Men. A noble wish.
Re-enter Ædile, with Citizens.
Æd. Draw near, ye people.
Æd. List to your tribunes. Audience! peace, I say!
Cor. First, hear me speak.
Both Tri. Well, say. Peace, ho! let the present?
Cor. Shall I be charged no further than this present?
Sic. Must all determine here?
Sic. I do demand, If you submit you to the people's voices, Allow their officers and are content To suffer lawful censure for such faults As shall be proved upon you?
Cor. I am content.
Men. Lo, citizens, he says he is content! The warlike service he has done, consider; think Upon the wounds his body bears, which show
Like graves i' the holy churchyard.
Cor. Scrats to move laughter out. Men. Consider further That when he speaks not like a citizen, You find him like a soldier: do not take His rougher accents for malicious sounds, But, as I say, such as become a soldier, Rather than envy you.
Com. Well, well, no more.
Cor. What is the matter That being pass'd for consul with full voice, I am so dishonour'd that the very hour You take it off again?
Sic. Answer to us.
Cor. Say, then: 'tis true, I ought so.
Sic. We charge you, that you have consent to take From Rome all season'd office and to wind Yourself into a power tyrannical; For which you are a traitor to the people, Cor. How! traitor!
Men. Nay, temperately; your project, Cor. The fires! the lowest hell-fold'd people! Call me their traitor! Thou injurious tribune Within thine eyes sat twenty thousand dead In thy hands clutch'd as many millions, in Thy lying tongue both numbers, I would say 'Thou liest' unto thee with a voice as free As I do pray the gods. Sic. Mark you this, people. Citizens. To the rock, to the rock with Sic.

We need not put new matter to his charge: What you have seen him do and heard him say, Beating your officers, cursing yourselves, Opposing laws with strokes and here defining Those whose great power must try him: this, So criminal and in such capital kind, Deserves the extremest death.
Bru. But since he Served well for Rome,—
Cor. What do you prate of and to his matter?
Cor. You? Men. Is this the promise that you made mother? Com. Know, I pray you,— Cor. I'll know no father.
Let them pronounce the steep Tarpeian die, Vagabond exile, flaying, pent to linger But with a grain a day, I would not buy Their mercy at the price of one fair word; Nor check my courage for what they can To have't with saying 'Good morrow.'
Sic. For that he
As much as in him lies, from time to time Envied against the people, seeking means To pluck away their power, as now at last Given hostile strokes, and that not in the presence Of dreaded justice, but on the ministers That do distribute it; in the name of the people And in the power of the tribunes, we, Even from this instant, banish him our city In peril of precipitation From off the rock Tarpeian never more.
To enter our Rome gates: i' the people's He's coming.

How accompanied?
With old Menenius, and those senators That always favour'd him.
Have you a catalogue Of all the voices that we have procured Set down by the poll?
I have; 'tis ready. I have.
Assemble presently the people hither; And when they hear me say 'tis shall be so I the right and strength of the commons, be it either
For death, for fine, or banishment, then let them,
If I say fine, cry 'Fine;' if death, cry 'Death.' Insisting on the old prerogative And power 'tis the truth of the cause.
I shall inform them.
And when such time they have begun to cry,
Let them not cease, but with a din confused
Enforce the present execution
Of what we chance to sentence.
Very well.
Make them be strong and ready for this hint,
When we shall hap to give't them.
Go about it. [Exit Ædile.]
Put him to choler straight: he hath been used
Ever to conquer, and to have his worth
Of contradiction: being once chafed, he cannot Be reind again to temperance; then he speaks
What's in his heart; and that is there which looks
With us to break his neck.
Well, here he comes.
Enter Coriolanus, Menenius, and Cominius, with Senators and Patricians.

Men. Calmly, I do beseech you.
Cor. Ay, as an ostler, that for the poorest piece
Will bear the knife by the volume. The honour'd gods
Keep Rome in safety, and the chairs of justice
Supplied with worthy men! plant love among's! Throng our large temples with the shows of peace,
And not our streets with war!—
First Sen. Amen, amen.
Men. A noble wish.
Re-enter Ædile, with Citizens.
Æd. Draw near, ye people.
Æd. List to your tribunes. Audience! peace, I say!
Cor. First, hear me speak.
Both Tri. Well, say. Peace, ho! let the present?
Cor. Shall I be charged no further than this present?
Sic. Must all determine here?
Sic. I do demand, If you submit you to the people's voices, Allow their officers and are content To suffer lawful censure for such faults As shall be proved upon you?
Cor. I am content.
Men. Lo, citizens, he says he is content! The warlike service he has done, consider; think Upon the wounds his body bears, which show
Like graves i' the holy churchyard.
When most struck home, being gentle wounded, craves
A noble cunning: you were used to load me
With precepts that would make invincible
The heart that conn'd thee.

Vir. O heavens! O heavens!

Cor. Nay, I prithee, woman,—

Vol. Now the red pestilence strike all trades
In Rome, And occupations perish!

Cor. What, what, what!
I shall be loved when I am lack'd. Nay, mother,
Resume that spirit, when you were wont to say,
If you had been the wife of Hercules,
Six of his labours you'd have done, and saved
Your husband so much sweat. Cominius, 19
Drop not; adieu. Farewell, my wife, my mother:
I'll do well yet. Thou old and true Menenius,
Thy tears are saltier than a younger man's,
And venomous to thine eyes. My sometime general,
I have seen thee stern, and thou hast oft beheld
Heart-hardening spectacles; tell these sad women
'Tis fond to wall inevitable strokes,
As 'tis to laugh at 'em. My mother, you not well
My hazards still have been your solace: and Believe 't not lightly—though I go alone,
Like to a lonely dragon, that his fen Makes fear'd and talk'd of more than seen—your son
Will or exceed the common or be caught
With cautelous baits and practice.

Vol. My first son,

But whether wilt thou go? Take good Cominius
With thee awhile; determine on some course,
More than a wild exposure to each chance
That starts the way before thee.

Cor. O the gods!

Com. I'll follow thee a month, devise with thee
Where thou shalt rest, that thou mayst hear of us
And of us thee: so if the time thrust forth
A cause for thy repeal, we shall not send O'er the vast world to seek a single man,
And lose advantage, which doth ever cool
I the absence of the needer.

Cor. Fare ye well:

Thou hast years upon thee; and thou art too full
Of the wars' surfeits, to go rove with one
That's yet unbruised: bring me but out at gate.
Come, my sweet wife, my dearest mother, and
My friends of noble touch, when I am forth,
Bid me farewell, and smile. I pray you, come. 50
While I remain above the ground, you shall Hear from me still, and never of me aught
But what is like me formerly.

Men. That's worthily
As any ear can hear. Come, let's not weep.
If I could shake off but one seven years
From these old arms and legs, by the good gods,
I'd with thee every foot.

Cor. Give me thy hand:

Come.  [Exeunt.

ACT IV.

SCENE I. Rome. Before a gate of the city.

Coriolanus, Volumnia, Virgilia, Menenius, Cominius, with the young Nobility of Rome.

Cor. Come, leave your tears: a brief farewell:
the beast
many heads butts me away. Nay, mother,
Is your ancient courage? you were used extremity was the trier of spirits;
common chances common men could bear;
then the sea was calm all boats alike mastery in floating; fortune's blows,
The nobility are vex'd, whom we see have sixed
In his behalf.

Bru. Now we have shown our power,
Let us seem humbler after it is done
Than when it was a-doing.

Sic. Why? Bid them home;
Say their great enemy is gone, and they Stand in their ancient strength.

Bru. Dismiss them home. [Exit Aëdile.

Here comes his mother.

Sic. Let's not meet her.

Bru. They say she's mad.

Bru. They have ta'en note of us: keep on your way.

Enter Volumnia, Virgilia, and Menenius.

Vol. O, ye're well met: the hoarded plague of the gods
Requite your love!

Men. Peace, peace; be not so loud.

Vol. If that I could for weeping, you should hear,—
Nay, and you shall hear some. [To Brutus]
Will you be gone?

Vir. [To Sicinius] You shall stay too; I would I had the power
To say so to my husband.

Sic. Are you mankind?

Vol. Ay, fool; is that a shame? Note but this fool.

Was not a man my father? Hadst thou foxship
To banish him that struck more blows for Rome
Than thou hast spoken words?

Sic. O blessed heavens!

Vol. More noble blows than ever thou wise words;
And for Rome's good. I'll tell thee what;
yet go:
Nay, but thou shalt stay too: I would my son
Were in Arabia, and thy tribe before him,
His good sword in his hand.

Sic. What then?

Vir. What then!

He'd make an end of thy posterity.

Vol. Bastards and all.

Good man, the wounds that he does bear for Rome!

Men. Come, come, peace.

Sic. I would he had continued to his country
As he began, and not unkind himself.

The noble knot he made.

Bru. I would he had.

Vol. 'I would he had!' 'Twas you incensed
the rabble:

Cats, that can judge as fitly of his worth
As I can of those mysteries which heaven
Will not have earth to know.

Bru. Pray, let us go.

Vol. Now, pray, sir, get you gone:
You have done a brave deed. Ere you go, hear this:—

As far as doth the Capitol exceed
The meanest house in Rome, so far my son—
This lady's husband here, this, do you see—
Whom you have banish'd, does exceed you all.

Bru. Well, well, we'll leave you.

Sic. Why stay we to be bated
With one that wants her wits?

Vol. Take my prayers with [Exeunt Trib.]

Enter a Citizen.

Save you, sir.

And you.

Direct me, if it be your will,
great Aufidius lies: is he in Antium?
He is, and feasts the nobles of the state house this night.

Which is his house, beseech you? 10

This, here before you.

Thank you, sir: farewell.

[Exit Citizen.

Id, thy slippery turns! Friends now fast turn, double bosoms seem to wear one heart,
house, whose bed, whose meal, and exercise, ill together, who twin, as 'twere, in love arable,
shall within this hour,
assension of a doit, break out erest enmity: so, fallest foés, passions and whose plots have broke their deep e the one the other, by some chance, 20 trick not worth an egg, shall grow dear and join their issues. So with me:
place hate I, and my love's upon my town. I'll enter: if he slay me, s fair justice: if he give me way,
his country service.

[Exit.

V. The same. A hall in Aufidius's house.

music within. Enter a Servingman.

Serv. Wine, wine, wine! What service
I think our fellows are asleep.

[Exit.

Enter a second Servingman.

Serv. Where's Cotsus? my master calls Cotsus!

[Exit.

Enter Coriolanus.

A goodly house: the feast smells well;
not like a guest.

Re-enter the first Servingman.

First Serv. What would you have, friend?
whence are you? Here's no place for you: pray, go to the door.

Cor. I have deserved no better entertainment,
In being Coriolanus.

Re-enter second Servingman.

Sec. Serv. Whence are you, sir? Has the porter his eyes in his head, that he gives entrance to such companions? Pray, get you out.

Cor. Away!

Sec. Serv. Away! get you away.

Cor. Now thou'rt troublesome.

Sec. Serv. Are you so brave? I'll have you talked with anon.

Enter a third Servingman. The first meets him.

Third Serv. What fellow's this?

First Serv. A strange one as ever I looked on: I cannot get him out o' the house: prithee, call my master to him.

[Retires.

Third Serv. What have you to do here, fellow? Pray you, avoid the house.

Cor. Let me but stand; I will not hurt your hearth.

Third Serv. What are you?

Cor. A gentleman.

Third Serv. A marvellous poor one.

Cor. True, so I am.

Third Serv. Pray you, poor gentleman, take some other station: here's no place for you:
pray you, avoid: come.

Cor. Follow your function, go, and batten on cold bits.

[Pushes him away.

Third Serv. What, you will not? Prithee, tell my master what a strange guest he has here.

Sec. Serv. And I shall.

[Exit.

Third Serv. Where dwellest thou?

Cor. Under the canopy.

Third Serv. Under the canopy!

Cor. Ay.

Third Serv. Where's that?

Cor. 'tis the city of kites and crows.

Third Serv. 'tis the city of kites and crows!

What an ass is it! Then thou dwellest with daws too?

Cor. No, I serve not thy master.

Third Serv. How, sir! do you meddle with my master?

Cor. Ay: 'tis an honest service than to meddle with thy mistress.

Thou protest, and protest; serve with thy trencher,
hence!

[Beats him away. Exit third Servingman.

Enter Aufidius with the second Servingman.

Auf. Where is this fellow?

Sec. Serv. Here, sir: I'd have beaten him like a dog, but for disturbing the lords within.

[Retires.

Auf. Whence comest thou? what wouldst the, thy name?

Why speak'st not? speak, man: what's thy name?

Cor. If, Tullus,

[Unmuffling. Not yet thou knowest me, and, seeing me, not dost not

Think me for the man I am, necessity
Commands me name myself.

Cor. A name unmusical to the Volscians' ears, And harsh in sound to thine.

AUF. What is thy name?

Cor. Say, what's thy name? Thou hast a grim appearance, and thy face Bears a command in 't; though thy tackle's torn, Thou show'st a noble vessel: what's thy name?

Cor. Prepare thy brow to frown: know'st thou me yet?

AUF. I know thee not: thy name? 76

Cor. My name is Caius Marcius, who hath done To thee particularly and to all the Volscers Great hurt and mischief; thereto witness may My surname, Coriolanus: the painful service, The extreme dangers and the drops of blood Shed for my thankless country are requited But with that surname; a good memory, And witness of the malice and displeasure Which thou shouldst bear me: only that name remains;

The cruelty and envy of the people, 80 Permitted by our dastard nobles, who Have all forsook me, hath devoured the rest; And suffer'd me by the voice of slaves to be Whoo'd out of Rome. Now this extremity Hath brought me to thy hearth; not out of hope— Mistake me not—to save my life, for if I had fear'd death, of all the men i' the world I would have 'voided thee, but in mere spite, To be full quit of those my banishers,

Stand I before thee. Then if thou hast 90 A heart of wreak in thee, that will revenge Thine own particular wrongs and stop those maims Of shame seen through thy country, speed thee straight, And make my misery serve thy turn: so use it That my revengeful services may prove As benefits to thee, for I will fight Against my cancer'd country with the spleen Of all the under fiends. But if so be Thou darest not this and that to prove more fortunes Thou'rt tired, then, in a word, I also am 100 Longer to live most weary, and present My throat to thee and to thy ancient malice; Which not to cut would show thee but a fool, Since I have ever follow'd thee with hate, Drawn tuns of blood out of thy country's breast, And cannot live but to thy shame, unless It be to do thee service.

AUF. O Marcius, Marcius!

Each word thou hast spoke hath weeded from my heart

A root of ancient envy. If Jupiter Should from yond cloud speak divine things, 110 And say 'Tis true,' I'd not believe them more Than thee, all noble Marcius. Let me twine Mine arms about that body, where against My grained ash an hundred times hath broke, And scar'd the moon with splinters: here I clip The anvil of my sword, and do contest As holyly and nobly with thy love As ever in ambitious strength I did Contend against thy valour. Know thou first, I loved the maid I married; wherefore man Sigh'd truly ash and hundred times hath broke breath; but that I see thee here, Thou noble thing! more dances my rapt heart Than when I first my wedded mistress saw Bestride my threshold. Why, thou Mars! thee,

We have a power on foot; and I had purpose Once more to hew thy target from thine brow, Or lose mine arm for't: thou hast beat me o'

Twelve several times, and I have nightly sin Dreamt of encounters 'twixt thyself and me; We have been down together in my sleep, Unbuckling helms, fisting each other's throat And waked half dead with nothing. Wilt thou,

Marcius,

Had we no quarrel else to Rome, but that Thou art thence banish'd, we would muster From twelve to seventy, and pouring war Into the bowls of ungrateful Rome, Like a bold flood o'er-bear. O, come, go in And take our friendly senators by the hands
Who now are here, taking their leaves of me, Who am prepared against your territories, Though not for Rome itself.

Cor. Thou bless me, if thou hast 130 The heading of thine own revenges, take The one half of my commission; and set do As best thou art experienced, since thou know Thy country's strength and weakness,— own ways; Whether to knock against the gates of Rome Or rudely visit them in parts remote, To fright them, ere destroy. But come in: Let me commend thee first to those that shall Say yea to thy desires. A thousand welcome! And more a friend than e'er an enemy; Yet, Marcius, that was much. Your hand welcome!

[Exeunt Coriolanus and Aufidius. Two Servingmen come for

First Serv. Here's a strange alteration

Sec. Serv. By my hand, I had thou have stricken him with a cudgel; and y' mind gave me his clothes made a false rep him.

First Serv. What an arm he has! he came about with his finger and his thumb, would set up a top.

Sec. Serv. Nay, I knew by his face that was something in him: he had, sir, a kind of a methought,—I cannot tell how to term it.

First Serv. He had so; looking as if would I were hanged, but I thought them more in him than I could think.

Sec. Serv. So did I, I'll be sworn: he the rarest man i' the world.

First Serv. I think he is; but a greater than he you wott.

Sec. Serv. Who, my master?

First Serv. Nay, it's no matter for this.

Sec. Serv. Worth six on him.

First Serv. Nay, not so neither: but him to be the greater soldier.

Sec. Serv. Faith, look you, one even how to say that: for the defence of a town general's excellent.

First Serv. Ay, and for an assault too.

Re-enter third Servingman.

Third Serv. O slaves, I can tell you news, you rascals!
CORIOLANUS.

 Scene VI. Rome. A public place.

 Enter Sicius and Brutus.

 Sic. We hear not of him, neither need we fear him:
 His remedies are tame: the present peace
 And quietness of the people, which before
 Were in wild hurry. Here do we make his friends Blush that the world goes well, who rather had,
 Though they themselves did suffer by't, behold
 Dissentious numbers pestering streets than see
 Our tradesmen singing in their shops and going
 About their functions friendly.

 Brus. We stood to't in good time. [Enter Memenius.] Is this Memenius?

 Sic. 'Tis he, 'tis he: O, he is grown most kind
 Of late.

 Both Tri. Hail, sir!

 Men. Hail to you both!

 Sic. Your Coriolanus
 Is not much miss'd, but with his friends:
 The commonwealth doth stand, and so would do,
 Were he more angry at it.

 Men. All's well; and might have been much better, if He could have temporized.

 Sic. Where is he, hear you?

 Men. Nay, I hear nothing: his mother and His wife
 Hear nothing from him.

 Enter three or four Citizens.

 Citizens. The gods preserve you both!

 Sic. God-den, our neighbours. 20
 Brus. God-den to you all, god-den to you all.

 First Cit. Ourselves, our wives, and children,
 On our knees,
 Are bound to pray for you both.

 Sic. Live, and thrive!
 Brus. Farewell, kind neighbours: we wish'd
 Coriolanus
 Had loved you as we did. Citizens.
 Now the gods keep you!

 Both Tri. Farewell, farewell.

 [Exeunt Citizens.

 Sic. This is a happier and more comely time
 Than when these fellows ran about the streets,
 Crying confusion.

 Brus. Caius Marcius was
 A worthy officer i' th wars; but insolent,
 30 O'ercome with pride, ambitious past all thinking,
 Self-loving,—

 Sic. And affecting one sole throne,
 Without assistance.

 Men. I think not so.

 Sic. We should by this, to all our lamentation,
 If he had gone forth consul, found it so.

 Brus. The gods have well prevented it, and
 Rome
 Sits safe and still without him.

 Enter an Edile.

 Ed. Worthy tribunes,
 There is a slave, whom we have put in prison,
 Reports, the Volscs with two several powers
 Are enter'd in the Roman territories,
 And with the deepest malice of the war
 Destroy what lies before 'em.

 Men. 'Tis Aufidius,
Who, hearing of our Marcious' banishment,
Thrusts forth his horns again into the world:
Which were inshell'd when Marcious stood for
Rome,
And durst not once peep out.

---

Sic. Come, what talk you Of Marcious?

Bru. Go see this rumourer whipp'd. It cannot be
The Volscs dare break with us.

Men. Cannot be!

We have record that very well it can,
And three examples of the like have been Within my age. But reason with the fellow,
Before you punish him, where he heard this,
Lest you shall chance to whip your information
And beat the messenger who bids beware
Of what is to be dreaded.

---

Sic. I know this cannot be.

Bru. Not possible.

---

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. The nobles in great earnestness are going
All to the senate-house: some news is come
That turns their countenances.

---

Sic. 'Tis this slave:— 59

Go whip him 'fore the people's eyes:—his raising
Nothing but his report.

Mess. Yes, worthy sir,
The slave's report is seconded; and more,
More fearful, is deliver'd.

---

Sic. What more fearful?

Mess. It is spoke freely out of many mouths—
How probable I do not know—that Marcious,
Join'd with Aufidius, leads a power 'gainst Rome,
And vows revenge as spacious as between
The young'st and oldest thing.

---

Sic. This is most likely!

Bru. Raised only, that the weaker sort may

---

Good Marcious home again.

Sic. This is unlikely:
He and Aufidius can no more atone
Than violentest contrariety.

---

Enter a second Messenger.

Sec. Mess. You are sent for to the senate:
A fearful army, led by Caius Marcious
Associated with Aufidius, rages
Upon our territories; and have already O'erborne their way, consumed with fire, and took What lay before them.

---

Enter Cominius.

Com. O, you have made good work!

---

Men. What news! what news? 50

Com. You have help to ravish your own daugh ters and
To melt the city leads upon your pates,
To see your wives dishonour'd to your noses,—

Men. What's the news? what's the news?

Com. Your temples burned in their cement, and
Your franchises, wherein you stood, confined
Into an auger's bore.

Men. Pray now, your news?

---

You have made fair work, I fear me.—Pray,

---

If Marcious should be join'd with Volscians,—

Com. If

He is their god: he leads them like a thing
Made by some other deity than nature,
That shapes man better: and they follow him
Against us brats, with no less confidence
Than boys pursuing summer butterflies,
Or butchers killing flies.

Men. You have made good war!

You and your Horror-men; you that stood so Upon the voice of occupation and
The breath of garlic-eaters!

Com. He will shake

Your Rome about your ears.

Men. As Hercules

Did shake down mellow fruit. You have a fair work!

---

Bru. But is this true, sir?

---

Com. Ay; and you'll look

Before you find it other. All the regions
Do smilingly revolt; and who resist
Are mock'd for valiant ignorance,
And perish constant fools. Who is't can but

Men. Your enemies and his find something in him.

---

Men. We are all undone, unless
The noble man have mercy.

---

Com. Who shall ask it?
The tribunes cannot do for shame; the plebeians
Deserve such pity of him as the wolf
Does of the sheepards: for his best friends, if Should say 'Be good to Rome,' they charged even

Men. As those should do that had deserved his hand.
And therein show'd like enemies,

---

Men. 'Tis true:
If he were putting to my house the brand
That should consume it, I have not the face
To say 'Beseech you, cease.' You have a fair hands,
You and your crafts! you have crafted fair!

---

Com. You have bro' ken

A trembling upon Rome, such as was never
So incapable of help.

---

Both Tri. Say not we brought it.

Men. How! Was it we? we loved him;

---

And cowardly nobles, gave way unto your club,
Who did hoot him out o' the city.

---

Com. But I fear

They'll roar him in again. Tulluss Aufidius
The second name of men, obey's his points
As if he were his officer: desperation
Is all the policy, strength and defence,
That Rome can make against them.

---

Enter a troop of Citizens.

Men. Here come the club

And is Aufidius with him? You are they
That made the air unworthy, when you
Your stinking greasey caps in hooting at Coriolanus' exile. Now he's coming;
And not a hair upon a soldier's head

Men. What's the news? what's the news?

Com. Your temples burned in their cement, and
Your franchises, wherein you stood, confined
Into an auger's bore.

Men. Pray now, your news?

---

If he could burn us all into one coal, have deserved it.

In time of war, we hear fearful news.

Cor. Faith, we hear fearful news.

Act IV. Sc. 1. For mine own part, I said, banish him, I said, 'twas pity. 140

Cominius. And so did I.

Cor. And so did I; and, to say the truth, we did very many of us: that we did, we did the best; and though we willingly continued to his banishment, yet it was against our will.

Men. Ye're goodly things, ye voices!

Cor. You have made work, you and your cry! Shall's to the Capitol?

[Exeunt Cominius and Menenius.

Go, masters, get you home; be not disnayed.

Cor. It is a side that would be glad to have run which they so seem to fear. Go home, now without fear.

Cor. The gods be good to us! Come, let's home.

I said we were i'th' Capitol when we banished him.

Men. So did we all. But, come, let's home.

[Exeunt Citizens.

Nor I.

Men. Let's to the Capitol. Would half my wealth buy this for a lie?

Men. Pray, let us go.

[Exeunt.

ACT V.

ACT V.

Scene I. Rome. A public place.

Enter Menenius, Cominius, Sicinius, Brutus, and others.

Men. No, I'll not go: you hear what he hath

said

Which was sometime his general; who loved him

In a most dear particular. He call'd me father:

But what o' that? Go, you that banish'd him;

For I dare so far free him:made him fear'd,

So hated, and so banish'd: thence, To chuse in the utterance. So our virtues

Lie in the interpretation of the time:

And power, unto itself most commendable,

Hath not a tomb so evident as a chair

To oxtol what it hath done.

One fire drives out one fire; one nail, one nail;

Rights by rights falter, strengths by strengths do fail.

Come, let's away. When, Caius, Rome is thine,

Thou art poor'st of all; then shortly art thou mine.

[Exeunt.

Liev. Sir, I beseech you, think you he'll carry

Rome?

Aufidius. All places yield to him ere he sits down;

And the nobility of Rome are his:

The senators and patricians love him too:

The tribunes are no soldiers; and their people

Will be as rash in the repeal, as hasty

To expel him thence. I think he'll be to Rome

As is the osprey to the fish, which takes it

By sovereignty of nature. First he was

A noble servant to them; but he could not

Carry his honours even: whether 'twas pride,

Which out of daily fortune ever taints

The happy man: whether defect of judgement,

To fail in the disposing of those chances

Which he was lord of; or whether nature,

Not to be other than one thing, not moving

From the casque to the cushion, but commanding

peace

Even with the same austerity and garb

As he controll'd the war; but one of these—

As he hath spices of them all, not all,

For I dare so far free him:made him fear'd,

So hated, and so banish'd: thence, To chuse in the utterance. So our virtues

Lie in the interpretation of the time:

And power, unto itself most commendable,

Hath not a tomb so evident as a chair

To oxtol what it hath done.

One fire drives out one fire; one nail, one nail;

Rights by rights falter, strengths by strengths do

fail.

Come, let's away. When, Caius, Rome is thine,

Thou art poor'st of all; then shortly art thou mine.

Coriolanus. Virgilius, sir, I never knew my general cares not for you. I say, go; lest I let forth your half-pint od; back,—that’s the utmost of your conduct. Nay, but, fellow, fellow,— Enter Coriolanus and Aufidius.

What’s the matter? Now, you companion, I'll say an errand to you: you shall know now that I am in earnest; you shall perceive that a Jack guardant officer me from my son Coriolanus: guess, what my entertainment with him, if thou art not I the state of hanging, or of some more long in spectacrualtor, and cruell ring: behold now presently, and swoon thy’s to come upon thee. [To Cor.] The gods sit in hourly synod about thy par- prosperity, and love thee no worse than father Menenius does! O my son, my old art preparing fire for us; look thee, water to quench it. I was hardly moved to thee; but being assured none but move thyself, I have been blown out of gates with sighs; and conjure thee to Rome, and thy pettitionary countrymen. Old gods assuage thy wrath, and turn the fit upon this varlet here,—this, who, like hath denied my access to thee. Away! How! How away! Wife, mother, child, I know not. My airs wanted to others: though I owe not so to thee, my remission lies on thy note how much. Therefore, be gone. And against your suits are stronger than those against my force. Yet, for I loved thee, is along; I writ it for thy sake.

[Give a letter. I have sent it. Another word, Menenius, I hear thee speak. This man, Aufidius, beloved in Rome: yet thou behold’st! You keep a constant temper.

[Exit Coriolanus and Aufidius. Sen. Now, sir, is your name Menenius? Sen. 'Tis a spell, you see, of much you know the way home again. Sen. Do you hear how we are shent for your greatness back? Sen. What cause, do you think, I have? I neither care for the world nor your for such things as you, I can scarce die by him self fear it not from another: general do his worst. For you, be that long; and your misery increase with it. I say to you, as I was said to, Away!

Sec. Sen. The worthy fellow is our general: he’s the rock, the oak not to be wind-shaken.

[Exeunt.]

Scene III. The tent of Coriolanus.

Enter Coriolanus, Aufidius, and others.

Cor. We will before the walls of Rome to-morrow.

Set down our host. My partner in this action, You must report to the Volscian lords, how plainly I have borne this business.

Auf. Only their ends You have respected; stopp’d your ears against the general suit of Rome; never admitted a private whisper, no, not with such friends. That thought them sure of you.

Cor. This last old man, Whom with a crack’d heart I have sent to Rome, Loved me above the measure of a father; Nay, godded me, indeed. Their latest refuge Was to send him; for whose old love I have, Though I should sourly to him, once more offered The first conditions, which they did refuse. And cannot now accept; to grace him only That thought he could do more, a very little I have yielded to: fresh embassies and suits, Nor from the state nor private friends, hereafter Will I lend ear to. Ha! what shout is this?

[Shout within. Shall I be tempted to infringe my vow? In the same time 'tis made? I will not.

Enter, in mourning habits, Virginia, Volscian, leading young Marcus, Valeria, and Attendants.

My wife comes foremost; then the honour’d mould Wherein this trunk was framed, and in her hand The grandchild to her blood. But, out, affection! All bond and privilege of nature, break! Let it be virtuous to be obstinate. What is that curt’sy worth? or those doves’ eyes Which can make gods forsworn? I melt, and am not Of stronger earth than others. My mother bows; As if Olympus to a molehill should be In supplication nod: and my young boy Hath an aspect of intercession, which Great nature cries ‘Deny not.’ Let the Volscian Plough Rome, and harrow Italy: I’ll never Be such a gosling to obey instinct, but stand, As if a man were author of himself. And knew no other kin.

Vir. My lord and husband! Cor. These eyes are not the same I wore in Rome.

Vir. The sorrow that delivers us thus changed Makes you think so.

Cor. Like a dull actor now, I have forgot my part, and I am out, Even to a full disgrace. Best of my flesh, Forgive my tyranny; but do not say For that ‘Forgive our Romans.’ O, a kiss Long as my exile, sweet as my revenge! Now, by the jealous queen of heaven, that kiss I carried from thee, dear; and my true lip Hath virgin'd it e'er since. You gods! I prate,
And the most noble mother of the world
Leave unsalted: sink, my knee, i' the earth; 50

[Cor. kneels.

Of thy deep duty more impression show
Than that of common sons.
Vol. O, stand up blest!
Whilst, with no softer cushion than the flint,
I kneel before thee; and improperly Show duty, as mistaken all this while
Between the child and parent.  [Cor. kneels.

What is this?
Your knees to me? to your corrected son?
Then let the pebbles on the hungry beach
Fillip the stars; then let the mutinous winds
Strike the proud cedars 'gainst the fiery sun; 60
Murdering impossibility, to make
What cannot be, slight work.
Vol. Thou art my warrior;
I holp to frame thee. Do you know this lady?
Cor. The noble sister of Publicola,
The moon of Rome, chaste as the icle
That's curdled by the frost from purest snow
And flags on Dion's temple: dear Valeria! 70
Vol. This is a poor epitome of yours,
Which by the interpretation of full time
May show like all yourself.
Cor. The god of soldiers, 70
With the consent of supreme Jove, inform Thy thoughts with nobleness; that thou mayst Prove
To shame unvulnerable, and stick i' the wars
Like a great sea-mark, standing every flaw,
And saving those that eye thee! 80
Vol. Your knee, sirrah.
Cor. That's my brave boy!
Vol. Even he, your wife, this lady, and myself,
Are suitors to you.
Cor. I beseech you, peace;
Or, if you'd ask, remember this before:
The thing I have forsworn to grant may never 80
Be held by you denied. Do not bid me
Dismiss my soldiers, or capitulate
Again with Rome's mechanics: tell me not Wherein I seem unnatural: desire not
To allay my rages and revenges with Your colder reasons.
Vol. O, no more, no more! 90
You have said you will not grant us any thing;
For we have nothing else to ask, but that
Which you deny already: yet we will ask;
That, if you fail in our request, the blame 99
May hang upon your harshness: therefore hear us.
Cor. Aufidius, and you Volscus, mark; for we'll

We have led since thy exile. Think with thyself

Nay, behold 's: y, that cannot tell what he would have, sels and holds up hands for fellowship, upon our petition with more strength you hast to deny. IV. Rome. A public place.

Enter Menenius and Sicinius. See you yond coign o' the Capitol, yond me? Why, what of that? If it be possible for you to displace it little finger, there is some hope the Rome, especially his mother, may prevail with him. But I say there is no hope in't: our throats are sentenced and stay upon execution.

Sic. Is't possible that so short a time can alter the condition of a man?

Men. There is difference between a grub and a butterfly; yet your butterfly was a grub. This Marcus is grown from man to dragon: he has things; he's more than a creeping thing.

Sic. He loved his mother dearly.

Men. So did he me: and he no more remem bers his mother now than an eight-year-old horse. The tartness of his face sour rough grapes: when he walks, he moves like an engine, and the ground shrinks before his treading: he is able to pierce a corset with his eye; talks like a knell, and his hum is a battery. He sits in his state, as a thing made for Alexander. What he bids be done is finished with his bidding. He wants nothing of a god but eternity and a heaven to throne in.

Sic. Yes, mercy, if you report him truly.

Men. I paint him in the character. Mark what mercy his mother shall bring from him; there is no more mercy in him than there is milk in a male tiger; that shall our poor city find: and all this is long of you.

Sic. The gods be good unto us!

Men. No, in such a case the gods will not be good unto us. When we banished him, we respected not them; and, he returning to break our necks, they respect not us.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Sir, if you'd save your life, fly to your house:
The plebeians have got your fellow-tribune And hale him up and down, all swearing, if The Roman ladies bring not comfort home, They'll give him death by inches.

Enter a second Messenger.

Sic. What's the news?

Sec. Mess. Good news, good news; the ladies have prevail'd,
The Volscians are dislodged, and Marcus gone:
A merrier day did never yet greet Rome,
No, not the expulsion of the Tarquins.

Sic. Friend, Art thou certain this is true? is it most certain?

Sec. Mess. As certain as I know the sun is fire: Where have you lurk'd, that you make doubt of it?

Ne'er through an arch so hurried the blown tide, As the recomforted through the gates, Why, hark you! [Trumpets; hautboys; drums boat; all together.

The trumpets, sackbutts, psalteries and fifes, Tabors and cymbals and the shouting Romans, Make the sun dance. Hark you!

[An shout within.

Men. This is good news: I will go meet the ladies. This Volumnia Is worth of consuls, senators, patricians, A city full; of tribunes, such as you, A sea and land full. You have pray'd well to-day: This morning for ten thousand of your throats 59 I'd not have given a denier. Hark, how they joy! [Music still, with shouts.
CORIOLANUS.

Sic. First, the gods bless you for your tidings; next, Accept my thankfulness.
Sec. Mess. Sir, we have all Great cause to give great thanks.
Sic. They are near the city? Sec. Mess. Almost at point to enter. Sic. We will meet them, And help the joy. [Exeunt.

SCENE V. The same. A street near the gate.
Enter two Senators with Volumnia, Virgilia, Valeria, &c. passing over the stage, followed by Patricians, and others.
First Sen. Behold our patroness, the life of Rome! Call all your tribes together, praise the gods, And make triumphant fires; strew flowers before them:
Unshout the noise that banish'd Marcus, Repeal him with the welcome of his mother; Cry 'Welcome, ladies, welcome! 'All. Welcome, ladies, Welcome! [A flourish with drums and trumpets. Exeunt.

SCENE VI. Antium. A public place.
Enter Tullus Aufidius, with Attendants.
Aur. Go tell the lords o' the city I am here: Deliver them this paper: having read it, Bid them repair to the market-place; where I, Even in theirs and in the commons' ears, Will vouch the truth of it. Him I accuse The city ports by this hath enter'd and Intends to appear before the people, hoping To purge himself with words: dispatch. [Exeunt Attendants.

Enter three or four Conspirators of Aufidius' faction.
Most welcome! First Con. How is it with our general? Aur. Even so 10 As with a man by his own alms empnois'd, And with his charity slain. Sec. Con. Most noble sir, If you do hold the same intent wherein You wish'd us partes, we'll deliver you Of your great danger.
Aur. Sir, I cannot tell: We must proceed as we do find the people. Third Con. The people will remain uncertain whilst 'Twixt you there's difference; but the fall of either Makes the survivor heir of all.
Aur. I know it; And my pretext to strike at him admits A good construction. I raised him, and I pown'd Mine honour for his truth: who being so heighten'd, He water'd his new plants with dews of flattery, Seducing so my friends; and, to this end, He bow'd his nature, never known before But to be rough, unswayable and free.
Third Con. Sir, his stoutness When he did stand for consul, which he lost By lack of stooping. — Aur. That I would have spoke of:

Being banish'd for't, he came unto my heart Presented to my knife his throat: I took it Made him joint-servant with me; gave him In all his own desires; nay, let him choose Out of my files, his projects to accomplish, My best and freshest men; served his design In mine own person; holp to ream the fam Which he did end all his; and took some To do myself this wrong: till, at the last, I seem'd his follower, not partner, and He wag'd me with his countenance, as if I had been mercenary.
First Con. So he did, my lord: The army marvell'd at it, and, in the last, When he had carried Rome and that we lost For no less spoil than glory,—
Aur. There was it For which my sieve shall be stretch'd up At a few drops of women's rheum, which As cheap as lies, he sold the blood and lab Of our great action: therefore shall he die And I'll renew me in his fall. But, baw: [Drums and trumpets sound, with shouts of the First Con. Your native town you enter a post, And had no welcomes home; but he return Splitting the air with noise.
Sec. Con. And patient for Whose children he hath slain, their base With giving him glory.
Third Con. Therefore, at your wish Ere he express himself, or move the people With what he would say, let him feel you Which we will second. When he lies also After your way his tale pronounced shall His reasons with his body. —
Aur. Say no more: Here come the lords.
Enter the Lords of the city.
All the Lords. You are most welcome Aur. I have not des But, worthy lords, have you with heed ps What I have written to you? Lords. We have. First Lord. And grieve to What faults he made before the last, I this Might have found easy fines: but there to Where he was to begin and give away The benefit of our levies, answering us With our own charge, making a treaty with There was a yielding,—this admits no ex Aur. He approaches: you shall hear — Enter Coriolanus, marching with draw colours; Commons being with his home.
Cor. Hail, lords! I am return'd your's! No more infected with my country's love Than when I parted hence, but still subserv Under your great command. You are to That prosperously I have attempted and With bloody passage led your wars even The gates of Rome. Our spoils we have home Do more than counterfeit a full third part The charges of the action. We have made With no less honour to the Antitates shame to the Romans: and we here deliver, rid by the consuls and patricians, her with the seal of the senate, what ye compounded on.

Read it not, noble lords;
ill the traitor, in the high'st degree th abused your powers.

Traitor! how now?

: Ay, traitor, Marcus!

: Ay, Marcus, Caius Marcus: dost thou hast been with that robbery, thy stol'n name

ACT I.

SCENE I. Rome. Before the Capitol.

The Tomb of the Andronici appearing; the Tribunes and Senators aloft. Enter, below, from one side, SATURNINUS and his Followers; and, from the other side, BASSIANUS and his Followers; with drum and colours.

Sat. Noble patricians, patrons of my right, Defend the justice of my cause with arms, And, countrymen, my loving followers, Plead my successive title with your swords; I am his first-born son, that was the last That wore the imperial diadem of Rome; Then let my father’s honours live in me, Nor wrong mine age with this indignity. Bas. Romans, friends, followers, favourers of my right, If ever Bassianus, Caesar’s son, Were gracious in the eyes of royal Rome, Keep then this passage to the Capitol And suffer not dishonour to approach The imperial seat, to virtue consecrate, To justice, continence and nobility; But let desert in pure election shine, And, Romans, fight for freedom in your choice.

Enter MARCUS ANDRONICUS, aloft, with the crown.

Marc. Princes, that strive by factions and by friends Ambitiously for rule and empery, Know that the people of Rome, for whom we stand A special party, have, by common voice, In election for the Roman empery, Chosen Andronicus, surnamed Æmilius, For many good and great deserts to Rome: A nobler man, a braver warrior, Lives not this day within the city walls; He by the senate is accited home

From weary wars against the barbarous Goths That, with his sons, a terror to our foes, Hath yoked a nation strong, train’d up in Ten years are spent since first he undertook This cause of Rome and chastised with an Our enemies’ pride: five times he hath rebelled against Rome, bearing his valiant son To the Capitol; And now at last, laden with honour’s spoil, Returns the good Andronicus to Rome, Renowned Titus, flourishing in arms, Let us entreat, by honour of his name, Whom worthyly you would have now succour And in the Capitol and senate’s right, Whom you pretend to honour and adore, That you withdraw you and abate your suit, Dismiss your followers and, as suitors show Plead your deserts in peace and humble grace.

Sat. How fair the tribune speaks to our thoughts!

Bas. Marcus Andronicus, so I do affirm In thy uprightness and integrity, And so I love and honour thee and thine, Thy noble brother Titus and his sons, And her to whom my thoughts are humble, Gracious Lavinia, Rome’s rich ornament, That I will here dismiss my loving friends And to my fortunes and the people’s favor Commit my cause in balance to be weighed: [Exit the Followers of Bas.

Sat. Friends, that have been thus far for my right, I thank you all and here dismiss you all, And to the love and favour of my country Commit myself, my person and the cause. [Exit the Followers of Sat. Rome, be as just and gracious unto me As I am confident and kind to thee. Open the gates, and let me in.

Bas. Tribunes, and me, a poor competitor [Flourish. Saturninus and Bassianus up into the Capitol.
Enter a Captain.

Romans, make way: the good Andronicus, in virtue, Rome's best champion, slain in the battles that he fights, honour and with fortune is return'd; where he circumscribed with his sword, brought to yoke, the enemies of Rome.

The bearers set down the coffin, and run speak.

Hail, Rome, victorious in thy mourning weeds! the bark, that hath discharged her fraught, with precious lading to the bay whence at first she weigh'd her anchorage, Andronicus, bound with laurel boughs, salute his country with his tears, of true joy for his return to Rome, great defender of this Capitol, gracious to the rites that we intend! of five and twenty valiant sons, the number that King Priam had, the poor remains, alive and dead! that survive let Rome reward with love; that I bring unto their latest home, surial amongst their ancestors: both have given me leave to sheathe my sword, unkind and careless of thine own, offer'st thou thy sons, unburied yet, on the dreadful shore of Styx! way to lay them by their brethren.

[The tomb is opened.]

greet in silence, as the dead are wont, 90 sep in peace, slain in your country's wars! receptacle of my joys, cell of virtue and nobility, many sons of mine hast thou in store, how wilt never render to me more! Give us the proudest prisoner of the others, may he budge his limbs, and on a pile fratum sacrifice his flesh, this earthy prison of their bones; the shadows be not unappeased, disturb'd with prodigies on earth.

I give him you, the noblest that survives, last son of this distressed queen.

Stay, Roman brethren! Gracious conqueror, Titus, rue the tears I shed, er's tears in passion for her son: by sons were ever dear to thee, my son to be as dear to me! not that we are brought to Rome, thy triumphs and return, to thee and to thy Roman yoke, my sons be slaughter'd in the streets, should doings in their country's cause? fight for king and commonweal

Were piety in thine, it is in these, Andronicus, stain not thy tomb with blood: Wilt thou draw near the nature of the gods? Draw near them then in being merciful; Sweet mercy is nobility's true badge: Thrice noble Titus, spare my first-born son. 120 Tit. Patient yourself, madam, and pardon me. These are their brethren, whom you Gaths be held Alive and dead, and for their brethren slain Religiously they ask a sacrifice:
To this your son is mark'd, and die he must, To appease their groaning shadows that are gone. Luc. Away with him! and make a fire straight; And with our swords, upon a pile of wood, Let's hear his limbs till they be clean consumed.

[Exeunt Lucius, Quintus, Martius, and Andronicus, with Alarbus.]

Tam. O cruel, irreligious piety! 130

Alarbus goes to rest; and we survive.
To tremble under Titus' threatening looks, Then, madam, stand resolved, but hope withal The self-same gods that arm'd the Queen of Troy With opportunity of sharp revenge Upon the Thracian tyrant in his tent: May favour Tamora, the Queen of Gaths— When Gaths were Gaths and Tamora was queen— To quit the bloody wrongs upon her foes. 143

Re-enter Lucius, Quintus, Martius, and Andronicus, with their swords bloody.

Luc. See, lord and father, how we have perform'd.
Our Roman rites: Alarbus' limbs are lopp'd, And entrails feed the sacrificing fire, Whose smoke, like incense, doth perfume the sky. Remaineth nought, but to inter our brethren, And with loud' larums welcome them to Rome.

Tit. Let it be so; and let Andronicus Make this his latest farewell to their souls.

[Trumpets sounded, and the coffin laid in the tomb.]

In peace and honour rest you here, my sons; Rome's readiest champions, repose you here in rest, Secure from worldly chances and mishaps! Here lurks no treason, here no envy swells, Here go no damned grudges; here are no storms, No noise, but silence and eternal sleep:

In peace and honour rest you here, my sons!

Enter Lavinia.

Lavinia. In peace and honour live Lord Titus long:
My noble lord and father, live in fame! I.o. at this tomb my tributary tears I render, for my brother's obsequies; And at thy feet I kneel, with tears of joy, Shed on the earth, for thy return to Rome: O, bless me here with thy victorious hand, Whose fortunes Rome's best citizens applaud! Tit. Kind Rome, that hast thus lovingly reserved The cordial of mine age to glad my heart! Lavinia, live; outlive thy father's days, And fame's eternal date, for virtue's praise!
Enter below, Marcus Andronicus and Tribunes; re-enter Saturninus and Bassianus, attended.

Marc. Long live Lord Titus, my beloved brother,
Gracious triumpher in the eyes of Rome! 170

Tit. Thanks, gentle tribune, noble brother to Marcus.

Marc. And welcome, nephews, from successful wars,
You that survive, and you that sleep in fame!
Fair lords, your fortunes are alike in all,
That in your country’s service drew your swords:
But safer triumph is this funeral pomp,
That hath aspired to Solon’s happiness
And triumphs over chance in honour’s bed.
Titus Andronicus, the people of Rome,
Whose friend in justice thou hast ever been,
Send thee by me, their tribune and their trust,
This pillage of white and spotless hue;
And name thee in election for the empire,
With these our late-deceased emperor’s sons:
Be candidatus then, and put it on,
And help to set a head on headless Rome.

Tit. A better head her glorious body fits
Than his that shakes for age and feebleness:
What should I don this robe, and trouble you?
Be chosen with proclamations to-day,
To-morrow yield up rule, resign my life,
And set abroad new business for you all?
Rome, I have been thy soldier forty years,
And led my country’s strength successfully,
And buried one and twenty valiant sons,
Knighted in field, slain manfully in arms,
In right and service of their noble country:
Give me a staff of honour for mine age,
But not a sceptre to control the world:
Upright he held it, lords, that held it last. 200

Marc. Titus, thou shalt obtain and ask the empery.

Sat. Proud and ambitious tribune, canst thou tell?

Tit. Patience, Prince Saturninus.

Sat. Romans, do me right:

Patricians, draw your swords, and sheathe them not Till Saturninus be Rome’s emperor.
Andronicus, would thou were ship’d to hell,
Rather than rob me of the people’s hearts!
Luc. Proud Saturnine, interrupter of the good
That noble-minded Titus means to thee!

Tit. Content thee, prince; I will restore to thee
210
The people’s hearts, and wean them from themselves.

Bas. Andronicus, I do not flatter thee,
But honour thee, and will do till I die:
My faction if thou strengthenest with thy friends,
I will most thankful be; and thanks to men
Of noble minds is honourable meed.

Tit. People of Rome, and people’s tribunes here,
I ask your voices and your suffrages:
Will you bestow them friendly on Andronicus?

Tri. To gratify the good Andronicus, 220
And gratulate his safe return to Rome,
The people will accept whom he admits.

Tit. Tribunes, I thank you: and this I make,
That you create your emperor’s eldest son,
Lord Saturnine; whose virtuous will, I hope,
Reflect on Rome as Titan’s rays on earth,
And even justice in this commonweal;
Then, if you will elect by my advice,
Crown him, and say ‘Long live our emperor.

Marc. With voices and applause of every Patrician and plebeian, we create Lord Saturninus Rome’s great emperor,
And say ‘Long live our Emperor Saturnine!’

Sat. Titus Andronicus, for thy favours
To us in our election this day,
I give thee thanks in part of thy deserts,
And will with deeds requite thy gentleness.
And, for an onset, Titus, to advance
Thy name and honourable family,
Lavinia will I make my empress,
Rome’s royal mistress, mistress of my heart:
And in the sacred Pantheon her espouse:
Tell me, Andronicus, doth this motion thee?

Tit. It doth, my worthy lord; and I match.
I hold me highly honour’d of thy grace:
And here in sight of Rome to Saturnine,
King and commander of our commonweal,
The wide world’s emperor, do I consecrate
My sword, my chariot and my prisoners:
Prepares well worthy Rome’s imperial lord.
Receive them then, the tribute that I owe,
Mine honour’s ensigns humbled at thy feet.

Sat. Thanks, noble Titus, father of my match.
I am as free as thee of and thy gifts
Rome shall record, and when I do forget
The least of these unspeakable deserts,
Romans, forget your fealty to me.

Tit. [To Tamora] Now, madam, an prisoner to an emperor;
To him that, for your honour and your state
Will use you nobly and your followers.
Sat. A goodly lady, trust me: of the heart.
Tit. That I would choose, were I to choose and Clear up, fair queen, that cloudy countenance
Though chance of war hath wrought this cloud of cheer,
Thou comest not to be made a scorn in Rome,
Princely shall be thy usage every way.
Rest on my word, and let not discontent
Daunt all your hopes: madam, he comfort
Can make you greater than the Queen of Lavinia,
You are not displeased with this.

Lav. Not, I, my lord; sith true nobility
Warrants these words in princely courtesy.
Sat. Thanks, sweet Lavinia. Rome us go:
Ransomless here we set our prisoners free
Proclaim our honours, lords, with trump drum.

[Flourish. Saturninus courts Titus in dum].

Bas. Lord Titus, by your leave, this is mine. [Seizing Lav.

Tit. How, sir! are you in earnest the lord?
Bas. Ay, noble Titus; and resolved w
To do myself this reason and this right.
TITUS ANDRONICUS.

TAM. And here, in sight of heaven, to Rome I swear, If Saturnine advance the Queen of Goths, she will a handmaid be to his desires. A loving nurse, a mother to his youth.

SAT. Ascend, fair queen, Pantheon. Lords, accompany your noble emperor and his lovely bride, Sent by the heavens for Prince Saturnine, whose wisdom hath her fortune conquered: There shall we consummate our spousal rites.

[Exeunt all but Titus.]

TIT. I am not bid to wait upon this bride. Titus, when wert thou to walk alone, Dishonour'd thus, and challenged of wrongs? Re-enter MARCUS, LUCIUS, QUINTUS, and MARTIUS.

MARC. O Titus, see, O, see what thou hast done! In a bad quarrel slain a virtuous son.

TIT. No, foolish tribune, no; no son of mine, Nor thou, nor these, confederates in the deed That hath dishonour'd all our family: Unworthy brother, and unworthy sons!

LUC. But let us give him burial, as becomes; Give Mutilus burial with our brethren.

TIT. Traitors, away! he rests not in this tomb: This monument five hundred years hath stood, Which I have sumptuously re-edified: Here none but soldiers and Rome's servants Repose in fame; none basely slain in brawls: Bury him where you can; he comes not here. MARC. My lord, this is impiety in you: My nephew Mutilus' deeds do plead for him; He must be buried with his brethren.

QUIN. And shall, or him we will accompany.

TIT. And shall! what villain was it spake that word?

QUIN. He that would vouch it in any place but here.

TIT. What, would you bury him in my despite?

MARC. No, noble Titus, but entreat of thee To pardon Mutilus and to bury him.

TIT. Marcus, even thou hast struck upon my crest, And, with these boys, mine honour thou hast wounded: My foes I do repute you every one: So, trouble me no more, but get you gone.

MARC. He is not with himself; let us withdraw.

QUIN. Not I, till Mutilus' bones be buried.

MARC. Brother, for in that name doth nature plead,—

QUIN. Father, and in that name doth nature speak,—

TIT. Speak thou no more, if all the rest will speak. MARC. Renowned Titus, more than half my soul,—

LUC. Dear father, soul and substance of us all,—

MARC. Suffer thy brother Marcus to inter His noble nephew here in virtue's nest,

44—2
That died in honour and Lavinia's cause.

Thou art a Roman; be not barbarous:
The Greeks upon advice did bury Ajax
That slew himself; and wise Laertes' son
Did graciously plead for his funerals:
Let not young Mutius, then, that was thy joy,
Be barm'd his entrance here.

TIT. Rise, Marcus, rise.

The dismalst day is this that e'er I saw,
To be dishonour'd by my sons in Rome!
Well, bury him, and bury me the next.

[Mutius is put into the tomb.

Luc. There lie thy bones, sweet Mutius, with thy friends,
Till we with trophies do adorn thy tomb.

ALL. [Kneeling] No man shed tears for noble Mutius;
He lives in fame that died in virtue's cause.

Marc. My lord, to step out of these dreary dumps,
How comes it that the subtle Queen of Goths
Is a sudden thus advanced in Rome?

TIT. I know not, Marcus; but I know it is:
Whether by device or no, the heavens can tell:
Is she not then beholding to the man
That brought her for this high good turn so far?
Yes, and will nobly him remunerate.

Flourish. Re-enter, from one side, SATURNINUS attended, TAMORA, DEMETRIUS, CHIRON, and AARON; from the other, BASSIANUS, LAVINIA, and others.

SAT. So, Bassianus, you play'd your prize:
God give you joy, sir, of your gallant bride! 430
Bas. And you of yours, my lord! I say no more,
Nor wish no less; and so, I take my leave.

SAT. Traitor, if Rome have law or we have power,
Thou and thy faction shall repent this rape.

Bas. Rape, call you it, my lord, to seize my own,
My truth-betrothed love and now my wife?
But the laws of Rome determine all;
Meanwhile I am possess'd of that is mine.

SAT. 'Tis good, sir: you are very short with us;
But, if we live, we'll be as sharp with you. 440
Bas. My lord, what I have done, as best I may,
Answer I must and shall do with my life.
Only thus much I give your grace to know:
By all the duties that I owe to Rome,
This noble gentleman, Lord Titus here,
Is in opinion and in honour wrong'd;
That in the rescue of Lavinia
With his own hand did slay his youngest son,
In zeal to you and highly moved to wrath
To be control'd in that he frankly gave:
Receive him then, to favour, Saturnine,
That hath express'd himself in all his deeds
A father and a friend to thee and Rome.

TIT. Prince Bassianus, leave to plead my deeds:
'Tis thou and those that have dishonour'd me,
Rome and the righteous heavens be my judge,
How I have loved and honour'd Saturnine!

TAM. My worthy lord, if ever Tamora
Were gracious in those princely eyes of thine,
Then hear me speak indifferently for all;
And at my suit, sweet, pardon what is past.

SAT. What, madam! be dishonour'd openly,
And basely put it up without revenge?

Tam. Not so, my lord; the gods of Rome forbade
I should be author to dishonour you!
But on mine honour dare I undertake
For good Lord Titus' innocence in all;
Wherefore fury not dissembled speaks his griefs
Then, at my suit, look graciously on him;
Lost not so noble a friend on vain suppose,
Nor with sour looks affliet his gentle heart.
[Aside to SAT.] My lord, be ruled by me, be at last;

Dissemble all your griefs and discontent:
You are but newly planted in your throne;
Lest, then, the people, and patricians too,
Upon a just survey, take Titus' part,
And so supplant you for ingratitude,
Which Rome reputes to be a heinous sin,
Yield at entreaties; and then let me alone:
I'll find a day to massacre them all
And raze their faction and their family,
The cruel father and his traitorous sons,
To whom I sued for my dear son's life,
And make them know what 'tis to let a que

ACT II.

SCENE I. Rome. Before the palace.

Enter Aaron.

Aar. Now climest 'Tamora' Olympus' top, out of fortune's shot, and sits aloft,
are of thunder's crack or lightning flash;
ancest above pale envy's threatening reach.
when the golden sun salutes the morn, hauling with the ocean his beams,
ops the zodiac in his glistening coach, overlooks the highest-peeking hills;
Lavinia:
her wit doth earthly honour wait,
whoof stumps and trembles at her frown,
Aaron, arm thy heart, and fit thy thoughts,
mount aloft with thy imperial mistress, mount her pitch, whom thou in triumph long prisoner held, fetter'd in amorous chains more faster bound to Aaron's charming eyes the Prometheus tied to Caucasus.

with slavish weeds and servile thoughts:
be bright, and shine in pearl and gold,
suit upon this new-made empress.

Aar, said I to wanton with this queen,
this goddess, this Semiramis, this nymph,
Aar, that will charm Rome's Saturnine, sag his shipwreck and his commonwells.

What storm is this?

Inter Demetrius and Chiron, praying.

Chiron. Chiron, thy years want wit, thy wit wants edge, manners, to intrude where I am graced;
may, for aught thou know'st, affected be.

Demetrius, thou dost over-ween in all;
so in this, to bear me down with braves.

The difference of a year or two me less gracious or thee more fortunate:
as able and as fit as thou and to deserve my mistress' grace;
that my sword upon thee shall approve,
my passions for Lavinia's love.

[Aside] Clubs! Clubs! these lovers will not keep the peace.

Why, boy, although our mother, unadvised,
you a dancing-rapier by your side,
so desperate grown, to threaten your friends?

Though their lath glued within your sheath 41
you know better how to handle it.

Meanwhile, sir, with the little skill I have,
will shalt thou perceive how much I dare.

Aar. Ay, boy, grow ye so brave? [They draw.

[Coming forward] Why, how now, lords!
the emperor's palace dare you draw,

maintain such a quarrel openly?

Why, I wot the ground of all this grudge:
Id not for a million of gold.

It were known to them it most concerns;
our noble mother for much more dishonour'd in the court of Rome.

Thus, put up.

Not I, till I have sheathed pier in his bosom and withdrew these reproachful speeches down his throat
I hath breathed in my dishonour here.

For that I am prepared and full resolved.

Foul-spoken coward, that thunder'st with thy tongue,
And with thy weapon nothing darest perform!

Aar. Away, I say!
Now, by the gods that warlike Goths adore,
This petty brabble will undo us all.

Why, lords, and think you not how dangerous
It is to jet upon a prince's right?
What, is Lavinia then become so loose,
Or Bassianus so degenerate,
That for her love such quarrels may be broach'd
Without controlment, justice, or revenge?

Young lords, beware! an she the empress know
This discord's ground, the music would not please.

Chi. I care not, I, knew she and all the world:
I love Lavinia more than all the world.

Dem. Youngling, learn thou to make some meaner choice:
Lavinia is thine elder brother's hope.

Aar. Why, are ye mad? or know ye not, in How furious and impatient they be,

And cannot brook competitors in love?
I tell you, lords, you do but plot your deaths
By this device.

Chi. Aar, a thousand deaths
Would I propose to achieve her whom I love. 30

Aar. To achieve her! how?

Dem. Why makest thou it so strange?
She is a woman, therefore may be wod';
She is a woman, therefore may be won;
She is Lavinia, therefore must be loved.
What, man! more water gildeth by the mill
Than wots the miller of; and easy it is
Of a cut loaf to steal a shive, we know:
Though Bassianus be the emperor's brother,
Better than he have worn Vulcan's badge.

Aar. [Aside] Ay, and as good as Saturninus may.

Dem. Then why should he despair that knows to court it
With words, fair looks and liberality?
What, hast not thou full often struck a doe,
And borne her cleanly by the keeper's nose?

Aar. Why, then, it seems, some certain snatch or so
Would serve your turns.

Chi. Ay, so the turn were served.

Dem. Aar, thou hast hit it.

Aar. Would you had hit it too!

Then should not we be tired with this ado.

Why, hark ye, hark ye! and are you such fools
To square for this? would it offend you, then, 100
That both should speed?

Chi. Faith, not me.

Dem. Nor me, so I were one.

Aar. For shame, be friends, and join for that you jar;
'Tis policy and stratagem must do
That you affect; and so must you resolve,
That what you cannot as you would achieve,
You must perforce accomplish as you may.

Take this of me; Lucrece was not more chaste
Than this Lavinia, Bassianus' love.

A speedier course than lingering languishment
Must we pursue, and I have found the path.
My lords, a solemn hunting is in hand;
There will the lovely Roman ladies troop:
The forest walks are wide and spacious;
Scenic directions, etc., follow:

Scene III. A lonely part of the forest.

Enter Aaron, with a bag of gold.

Aar. He that had wit would think that I null.
To bury so much gold under a tree,
And never after to inherit it.
Let him that thinks of me so abjectly
Know that this gold must coin a stratagem,
Which, cunningly effected, will begat
A very excellent piece of villany:
And so repose, sweet gold, for their unrest think you have a goodly gift in horning; be doubted that your Moor and you

7s. Sought forth to try experiments;
7s. Shield your husband from his hounds to-day!
8s. They should take him for a stag.

9s. Believe me, queen, your swarthy Cimmerian
9s. Make your honour of his body's hue, ted, detested, and abominable.
9s. Are you sequester'd from all your train,
9s. Mourned from your snow-white gobble steed,
9s. Wander'd hither to an obscure plot,
9s. Unmannered but with a barbarous Moor,
9s. Desire had not conducted you?
9s. And, being intercepted in your sport, 80
9s. Reason that my noble lord be rated
9s. I pray you, let us hence,
9s. Let her joy her raven-colour'd love;
9s. Valley fits the purpose passing well.

10s. The king my brother shall have note of this.

10s. Ay, for these slips have made him noted long:
10s. King, to be so mightily abused!

10s. Why have I patience to end all this?

Enter Demetrius and Chiron.

m. How now, dear sovereign, and our gracious mother!

9s. Have I not reason, think you, to look pale?
9s. Two have'ticed me hither to this place:
9s. Two have detested vale, you see it is;
9s. Rees, though summer, yet forlorn and lean,
9s. One with moss and baleful mistletoe;
9s. Never shines the sun; here nothing breeds,
9s. The nightly owl or fatal raven:
when they show'd me this abhorred pit,
told me, here, at dead time of the night,
and in the thousand hissing snakes, 100
and thousand swelling toads, as many urchins, and make such fearful and confused cries by mortal body hearing it and straight fall mad, or else die suddenly.
101. One had they told this hellish tale,
101. When they told they would bind me here be the body of a dismal yew, 101. Save me to this miserable death:
when they call'd me foul adulteress, ous Goth, and all the bitterest terms
when ear did hear to such effect:
bad you not by wondrous fortune come,

This vengeance on me had they executed.
Revenge it, as you love your mother's life,
be ye not henceforth call'd my children.

Dem. This is a witness that I am thy son.

[Stabs Bassianus.

Ch. And this for me, struck home to show my strength. [Also stabs Bassianus, who dies.

Lav. Ay, come, Semiramis, nay, barbarous Tamora,
For no name fits thy nature but thy own!

Tam. Give me thy poniard; you shall know,
my boys,
Your mother's hand shall right your mother's wrong.

Dem. Stay, madam; here is more belongs to her;
First thrash the corn, then after burn the straw:
This minion stood upon her chastity,
Upon her nuptial vow, her loyalty,
And with that painted hope braves your mightiness;
And shall she carry this unto her grave?

Ch. An if she do, I would I were an eunuch.

Drag hence her husband to some secret hole,
And make his dead trunk pillow to our lust. 120

Tam. But when ye have the honey ye desire,
Let not this wasp outlive, us both to sting.

Ch. I warrant you, madam, we will make that sure.

Come, mistress, now perforce we will enjoy
That nice-preserved honesty of yours.

Lav. O Tamora! thou bear'st a woman's face,—

Tam. I will not hear her speak; away with her!

Lav. Sweet lords, entreat her hear me but a word.

Dem. Listen, fair madam: let it be your glory
To see her tears: but be your heart to them 140

As unrelenting flint to drops of rain.

Lav. When did the tiger's young ones teach the dam?
O, do not learn her wrath; she taught it thee;
The milk thou suck'dst from her did turn to marble;
Even at thy teat thou hast'd thy tyranny.
Yet every mother breeds not sons alike:

[To Chiron] Do thou entreat her show a woman's pity.

Chi. What, wouldst thou have me prove myself a bastard?

Lav. 'Tis true; the raven doth not hatch a lark:
Yet have I heard,—O, could I find it now!—

The lion moved with pity did endure
To have his princely paws pared all away:
Some say that ravens foster forlorn children,
The whilst their own birds famish in their nests:
O, be to me, though thy hard heart say no,
Nothing so kind, but something pitiful!

Tam. I know not what it means; away with her!

Lav. O, let me teach thee! for my father's sake,
That gave thee life, when well he might have slain thee,
Be not obdurate, open thy deaf ears.

Tam. Hadst thou in person ne'er offended me,
Even for his sake am I pitiless.
Remember, boys, I pour’d forth tears in vain,
To save your brother from the sacrifice;
But fierce Andronicus would not relent:
They bear me away with her, and use her as you will,
The worse to her, the better loved of me.

Lav. O Tamora, be call’d a gentle queen,
And with thine own hands kill me in this place!
For ’tis not life that I have begg’d so long; 170
Poor I was slain when Bassianus died.

Tam. What begg’dst thou, then? fond woman, let me go.

Lav. ’Tis present death I beg; and one thing
That womanhood denies my tongue to tell:
O, keep me from their worse than killing lust,
And tumble me into some loathsome pit,
Where never man’s eye may behold my body:
Do this, and be a charitable murderer.

Tam. So should I rob my sweet sons of their fee:
No, let them satisfy their lust on thee.

Dem. Away! for thou hast stay’d us here too long.

Lav. No grace? no womanhood? Ah, beastly creature!
The blot and enemy to our general name!
Confusion fall—

Chi. Nay, then I’ll stop your mouth. Bring thou her husband:
This is the hole where Aaron bid us hide him.

[Demetrius throws the body of Bassianus into the pit; then exeunt Demetrius and Chi-ron, dragging off Lavinia.

Tam. Farewell, my sons: see that you make her sure.
Ne’er let my heart know merry cheer indeed,
Till all the Andronic be made away.
Now will I hence to seek my lovely Moor,
And let my spleenful sons this trull defoul.

[Exit.

Re-enter AARON, with QUINNTUS and MARTIUS.

Aar. Come on, my lords, the better foot before:
Straight will I bring you to the loathsomest pit
Where I espied the panther fast asleep.

Quin. My sight is very dull, whate’er it bodes.

Mart. And mine, I promise you; were’t not for shame,
We’ll could I leave our sport to sleep awhile.

[Quin. falls into the pit.

Quin. What, art thou fall’n? What subtle hole is this,
Whose mouth is cover’d with rude-growing briers,
Upon whose leaves are drops of new-shed blood
As fresh as morning dew distill’d on flowers?
A very fatal place it seems to me.
Speak, brother, hast thou hurt thee with the fall?

Mart. O brother, with the dismall’est object hurt
That ever eye with sight made heart lament!

Aar. [Aside] Now will I fetch the king to find them here,
That he thereby may give a likely guess
How these were they that made away his brother.

[Exit.

Mart. Why dost not comfort me, and help me out
From this unhallowed and blood-stained hole?

Quin. I am surprised with an uncouth feel,
A chilling sweat o’er-runs my trembling join,
My heart suspends more than mine eye can

Mart. To prove thou hast a true-dy
heart,
Aaron and thou look down into this den,
And see a fearful sight of blood and death.

Quin. Aaron is gone; and my compass
Will not permit mine eyes once to behold
The thing whereat it trembles by surmise; O, tell me how it is; for ne’er till now
Was I a child to fear I know not what.

Mart. Lord Bassianus lies embrewed he
All on a heap, like to a slaughter’d lamb,
In this detested, dark, blood-drinking pit.

Quin. If it be dark, how dost thou know’t Mart. Upon his bloody finger he doth w inne
A precious ring, that lightens all the hole,
Which, like a taper in some monument,
Doth shine upon the dead man’s earthy chee
And shows the ragged entrails of the pit:
So pale did shine the moon on Pyramus
When he by night lay bathed in maiden blo
O brother, help me with thy fainting hand—
If fear hath made thee faint, as me it hath—
Out of this fell devouring receptacle,
As hateful as Cocy tus’ misty mouth.

Quin. Reach me thy hand, that I may thee out;
Or, wanting strength to do thee so much go
I may be pluck’d into the swallowing womb
Of this deep pit, poor Bassianus’ grave.
I have no strength to pluck thee to the brink Mart. Nor I no strength to climb without help.

Quin. Thy hand once more; I will not
again,
Till thou art here aloft, or I below:
Thou canst not come to me: I come to thee

Enter Saturninus with AARON.

Sat. Along with me: I’ll see what hole is
And what he is that now is leap’d into it.
Say, who art thou that lately didst descend
Into this gaping hollow of the earth?

Mart. The unhappy son of old Andronic
Brought hither in a most unlucky hour,
To find thy brother Bassianus dead.

Sat. My brother dead! I know thou but jest;
He and his lady both are at the lodge
Upon the north side of this pleasant chase;
’Tis not an hour since I left him there.

Mart. We know not where you left him alive;
But, out, alas! here have we found him dea

Re-enter TAMORA, with ATTENDANTS; TRI-ANDRONICUS, and LUCIUS.

Tam. Where is my lord the king?

Sat. Here, Tamora, though grieved with ing grief.

Tam. Where is thy brother Bassianus?

Sat. Now to the bottom dost thou search wound:
Poor Bassianus here lies murdered.

Tam. Then all too late I bring this fatal v
Enter Marcus.

Mar. Who is this? my niece, that flies away so fast! 17
Cousin, a word; where is your husband?
If I do dream, would all my wealth would wake me!
If I do wake, some planet strike me down,
That I may slumber in eternal sleep.
Speak, gentle niece, what stern ungentle hands
Have lopp’d and hew’d and made thy body bare
Of her two branches, those sweet ornaments, Whose circling shadows kings have sought to sleep in,
And might not gain so great a happiness
As have thy love? Why dost not speak to me?
Alas, a crimson river of warm blood,
Like to a bubbling fountain stir’d with wind,
Doth rise and fall between thy rosed lips,
Coming and going with thy honey breath.
But, sure, some Tereus hath deflower’d thee,
And, lest thou shouldst detect him, cut thy tongue.
Ah, now thou turn’t away thy face for shame!
And, notwithstanding all this loss of blood,
As from a conduit with three issuing spouts,
Yet do thy cheeks look red as Titus’ face
Blushing to be encounter’d with a cloud.
Shall I speak for thee? shall I say ’tis so?
O, that I knew thy heart; and knew the beast,
That I might rail at him, to ease my mind!
Sorrow concealed, like an oven stopp’d,
Doth burn the heart to cinders where it is.
Fair Philomela, she but lost her tongue,
And in a tedious sampler sew’d her mind:
But, lovely niece, that mean is cut from thee;
A crafiter Tereus, cousin, hast thou met,
And he hath cut those pretty fingers off,
That could have better sew’d than Philomel.
O, had the monster seen those lily hands
Tremble, like aspen-leaves, upon a lute,
And make the silken strings delight to kiss them,
He would not then have touch’d them for his life!
Or, had he heard the heavenly harmony
Which that sweet tongue hath made,
He would have dropp’d his knife, and fell asleep
As Cerserus at the Thracian poet’s feet.
51
Come, let us go, and make thy father blind;
For such a sight will blind a father’s eye:
One hour’s storm will drown the fragrant meads;
What will whole months of tears thy father’s eyes?
Do not draw back, for we will mourn with thee:
O, could our mourning ease thy misery!

ACT III.

Scene I. Rome. A street.

Enter Judges, Senators and Tribunes, with Martius and Quintus, bound, passing on to the place of execution; Titus going before, pleading.

Tit. Hear me, grave fathers! noble tribunes, stay!
For pity of mine age, whose youth was spent
In dangerous wars, whilst you securely slept:
For all my blood in Rome’s great quarrel shed;
For all the frosty nights that I have watch’d;
And for these bitter tears, which now you see
Filling the aged wrinkles in my cheeks;
Be pitiful to my condemned sons,
Whose souls are not corrupted as ’tis thought.
For two and twenty sons I never wept,
Because they died in honour’s lofty bed.

[Enter Lucius, with his sword drawn.

O reverend tribunes! O gentle, aged men!

Unbind my sons, reverse the doom of death;
And let me say, that never wept before,
My tears are now prevailing orators.

Luc. O noble father, you lament in vain:
The tribunes hear you not; no man is by;
And you recount your sorrows to a stone.

Tit. Ah, Lucius, for thy brothers let me plead.
Grave tribunes, once more I entreat of you,—

Luc. My gracious lord, no tribune hears you speak.

Tit. Why, ’tis no matter, man: if they did hear,
They would not mark me, or if they did mark,
They would not pity me, yet plead I must;
And bootless unto them. . . .

Therefore I tell my sorrows to the stones;
Who, though they cannot answer my distress,
Yet in some sort they are better than the tribunes,
For that they will not intercept my tale:
When I do weep, they humbly at my feet
Receive my tears and seem to weep with me;
And, were they but attired in grave weeds,
Rome could afford no tribune like to these.
A stone is soft as wax,—tribunes more hard than stones;
A stone is silent, and offends not,
And tribunes with their tongues doom men to death.

[Takes his sword.]

Luc. To rescue my two brothers from their death:
For which attempt the judges have pronounced
My everlasting doom of banishment.

Tit. O happy man! they have befriended thee.
Why, foolish Lucius, dost thou not perceive
That Rome is but a wilderness of tigers?
Tigers must prey, and Rome affords no prey
But me and mine: how happy art thou, then,
From these devourers to be banished!
But who comes with our brother Marcus here?

Enter Marcus and Lavinia.

Marc. Titus, prepare thy aged eyes to weep;

Or, if not so, thy noble heart to break:
I bring consuming sorrow to thine age.

Tit. Will it consume me? let me see it.

Marc. This was thy daughter.

Tit. Why, Marcus, so

Luc. Ay me, this object kills me!

Tit. Faint-hearted boy, arise, and look her.

Speak, Lavinia, what accursed hand
Hath made thee handless in thy father’s sight.
What foul hath added water to the sea,
Or brought a faggot to bright-burning Tro?
My grief was at the height before thou camest.
And now, like Nius, it dislaimeth bounds.
Give me a sword, I’ll chop off my hands.

And they have fought for Rome, and all is

And they have nursed this woze, in feeding
In bootless prayer have they been held up;
And they have served me to effectless use:
Now all the service I require of them.
Is that the one will help to cut the other?
’Tis well, Lavinia, that thou hast no hand.
For hands, to do Rome service, are but va.

Luc. Speak, gentle sister, who hath n thee?

Marc. O, that delightful engine of her heart
That blabb’d them with such pleasing elo.
Is torn from forth that pretty hollow can.
Where, like a sweet melodious bird, it sung
Sweet varied notes, enchanting every ear.

Luc. O, say thou for, who hath d deed?

Marc. O, thus I found her, straying

Seeking to hide herself, as doth the deer
That hath received some unrecuring wou.

Tit. It was my deer; and he that wou
Hath hurt me more than had he kill’d me
For now I stand as one upon a rock
Environ’d with a wilderness of sea,
Who marks the waxing tide grow wave by Expecting ever when some envious surge
Shall breach his brinish bowels swallow him.

This way to death my wretched sons are Here stands my other son, a banish’d mar.
And here my brother, weeping at my wo.
But that which gives my soul the greatest
Is dear Lavinia, dearer than my soul.
Had I but seen thy picture in this plight.
I had but seen my hand to me:
That which shall I now behold thy lively body so?

Thou hast no hands, to wipe away thy te.
Nor tongue, to tell me who hath murmur.
Thy husband he is dead; and for his love
Thy brothers are condemn’d, and dead.

Look, Marcus! ah, son, Lavinia, look on
When I did name her brothers, then free
Stood on her cheeks, as doth the honey.
Upon a gather’d lily almost wither’d.

Marc. Perchance she weeps because kill’d her husband;
Perchance because she knows them no.

Tit. If they did kill thy husband, joyful

Because the law hath ta’en revenge on th.
No, no, they would not do so foul a deed.
Witness the sorrow that their two sister make.
Gentle Lavinia, let me kiss thy lips:
Or make some sign how I may do thee e
TITUS ANDRONICUS.

Enter Aaron.

Titus Andronicus, my lord the emperor see this word,—that, if thou love thy sons, cut,Lucius, or thyself, old Titus, one of you, chop off your hand, d it to the king : he for the same thee hither both thy sons alive; shall be the ransom for their fault. O gracious emperor! O gentle Aaron! raven sing so like a lark,
av. sweet tidings of the sun's uprise; my heart, I'll send the emperor 160:

Then, wilt thou help to chop it off? Stay, father! for that noble hand of thine, have thrown down so many enemies, be sent: my hand will serve the turn: but can better spare my blood than you; before mine shall save my brothers' lives. Which of your hands hath not defended me, I'd aloft the bloody battle-axe, destruction on the enemy's castle? ofboth but are of high desert: hath been but idle; let it serve m your two nephews from their death; I kept it to a worthy end. Nay, come, agree whose hand shall go off, they die before their pardon come. My hand shall go.

By heaven, it shall not go! Sirs, strive no more: such wither'd herbs here for plucking up, and therefore mine.

Luc. Sweet father, if I shall be thought thy son, 180
Let me redeem my brothers both from death. Marc. And, for our father's sake and mother's care, Now let me show a brother's love to thee. Tit. Agree between you; I will spare my hand. Luc. Then I'll go fetch an axe. Marc. But I will use the axe. [Exeunt Lucius and Marcus. Tit. Come hither, Aaron; I'll deceive them both:
Lend me thy hand, and I will give thee mine. Aar. [Aside] If that be call'd deceit, I will be honest, And never, whilst I live, deceive men so;
But I'll deceive you in another sort, And that you'll say, ere half an hour pass. [Cuts off Titus's hand.

Re-enter Lucius and Marcus.

Tit. Now stay your strife: what shall be is dispatch'd.
Good Aaron, give his majesty my hand:
Tell him it was a hand that warded him From thousand dangers; bid him bury it; More hath it merited; that let it have. As for my sons, say I account of them As jewels purchased at an easy price. And yet dear too, because I bought mine own. Aar. I go, Andronicus: and for thy hand Look by and by to have thy sons with thee. [Aside] Their heads, I mean. O, how this villany Doth fat me with the very thoughts of it! Let fools do good, and fair men call for grace, Aaron will have his soul black like his face. [Exit. Tit. O, here I lift this one hand up to heaven, And bow this feeble ruin to the earth: If any power pities wretched tears, To that I call! [To Lav.] What, wilt thou kneel with me? 210
Do, then, dear heart; for heaven shall hear our prayers; Or with our sighs we'll breathe the welkin dim, And stain the sun with fog, as sometime clouds When they do hug him in their melting bosoms. Marc. O brother, speak with possibilities, And do not break into these deep extremes. Tit. Is not my sorrow deep, having no bottom? Then be my passions bottomless with them. Marc. But yet let reason govern thy lament. Tit. If there were reason for these miseries, Then into limits could I bind my woes: 221 When heaven doth weep, doth not the earth o'erflow? If the winds rage, doth not the sea wax mad, Threatening the welkin with his big-swoln face? And wilt thou have a reason for this coil? I am the sea; hark, how her sighs do blow! She is the weeping welkin, I the earth; Then must my sea be moved with her sighs; Then must my earth with her continual tears Become a deluge, overflow'd and drown'd; 230 For why my bowels cannot hide her woes, But like a drunkard must I vomit them. Then give me leave, for losers will have leave To ease their stomachs with their bitter tongues.
Enter a Messenger, with two heads and a hand.

Mess. Worthy Andronicus, ill art thou repaid For that good hand thou sent'st to the emperor: Here are the heads of thy two noble sons; And here's thy hand, in scorn to thee sent back; Thy griefs their sports, thy resolution mock'd; That woe is me to think upon thy woes. More than remembrance of my father's death. [Exit.

Marc. Now let hee Aetna cool in Sicily, And be my heart an ever-burning hell! These miseries are more than may be borne. To weep with them that weep doth ease some deal; But sorrow flouted at is double death. Luc. Ah, that this sight should make so deep a wound, And yet detested life not shrink thereat! That ever death should let life bear his name, 249 Where life hath no more interest but to breathe! [Lavinia kisses Titus. Marc. Alas, poor heart, that kiss is comfortless As frozen water to a starved snake.

Titi. When will this fearful slumber have an end?

Marc. Now, farewell, flattery: die, Andronicus; Thou dost not slumber; see, thy two sons' heads, Thy warlike hand, thy mangled daughter here; Thy other banish'd son, with this dear sight Struck pale and bloodless; and thy brother, I, Even like a stony image, cold and numb. Ah, now no more will I control thy griefs: 260 Rend off thy silver hair, thy other hand Gnawing with thy teeth; and be this dismal sight The closing up of our most wretched eyes: Now is a time to storm; why art thou still?

Titi. Ha, ha, ha!

Marc. Why dost thou laugh? It fits not with this hour.

Titi. Why, I have not another tear to shed: Besides, this sorrow is an enemy, And would usurp upon my watry eyes, And make them blind with tributary tears: 270 Then which way shall I find Revenge's cave? For these two heads do seem to speak to me, And threat me I shall never come to bliss Till all these mischiefs be return'd again Even in their throats that have committed them. Come, let me see what task I have to do. You heavy people, circle me about, That I may turn me to each one of you, And swear unto my soul to right your wrongs. The vow is made. Come, brother, take a head; And in this hand the other will I bear. Lavinia, thou shalt be employ'd; these arms! Bear thou my hand, sweet wrench, between thy teeth.

As for thee, boy, go get thee from my sight: Thou art an exile, and thou must not stay: Hie to the Goths, and raise an army there: And, if you love me, as I think you do, Let's kiss and part, for we have much to do. [Exit Titus, Marcus, and Lavinia.

Luc. Farewell, Andronicus, my noble father, The wofull'st man that ever lived in Rome: 290

Enter Titus, Marcus, Lavinia, and Lucius, a Boy.

Tit. So, so; now sit: and look you eat. Than will preserve just so much strength As will revenge these bitter woes of ours. Marcus, unkiss that sorrow-wrathen kin. Thy niece and I, poor creatures, want on And cannot passionate our tenfold griefs. With folded arms. This poor right hand Is left to tyrannize upon my breast; Who, when my heart, all mad with misery, Beats in this hollow prison of my flesh, Then thus I thump it down. [To Lavinia.] Thou map of woe, that dost with tears To lay Such violent hands upon her tender life. Tit. Last now! has sorrow made thee already?

Why, Marcus, no man should be mad by What violent hands she can lay on her lid. Ah, wherefore dost thou urge the name of love To bid Æneas tell the tale twice o'er, How Troy was burnt and he made misery, O, handle not the theme, to talk of hand. Lest we remember still that we have no Fie, fie, how franticly I square my talk, As if we should forget we had no hands, If Marcus did not name the word of hand. Come, let's fall to; and, gentle girl, eat. Here is no drink! Hark, Marcus, what I can interpret all her martyr'd signs? She says she drinks no other drink but to Brew'd with her sorrow, mesh'd u cheeks:

Speechless complainer, I will learn thy theme. In thy dumb action will I be as perfect As begging hermits in their holy prayers. Thou that not sigh, nor hold thy sigh heaven, Nor wink, nor nod, nor kneel, nor make But I of these will wrest an alphabet. And by still practice learn to know thy
TITUS ANDRONICUS.

ACT IV.

HER I. Rome. Titus's garden.

Marc. What means my niece Lavinia by these signs?

Tit. Fear her not, Lucius: somewhat doth she mean:

See, Lucius, see how much she makes of thee: so

Somewhither would she have thee go with her.

Ah, boy, Cornelia never with more care

Read to her sons than she hath read to thee

Sweet poetry and Tully’s Orator.

Marc. Canst thou not guess wherefore she plies thee thus?

Young Luc. My lord, I know not, I, nor can I guess,

Unless some fit or frenzy do possess her:

For I have heard my grandsire say full oft,

Extremity of griefs would make men mad;

And I have read that Hecuba of Troy

Ran mad for sorrow: that made me to fear;

Although, my lord, I know my noble aunt

Loves me as dear as e’er my mother did,

And would not, but in fury, fright my youth:

Which made me down to throw my books,

and fly,—

Causeless, perhaps. But pardon me, sweet aunt:

And, madam, if my uncle Marcus go,

I will most willingly attend your ladyship.

Marc. Lucius, I will.

[Lavinia turns over with her stamps the books which Lucius has let fall.

Tit. How now, Lavinia! Marcus, what means this?

Some book there is that she desires to see.

Which is it, girl, of these? Open them, boy.

But thou art deeper read, and better skill’d;

Come, and take choice of all my library,

And so beguile thy sorrow, till the heavens

Reveal the damnd contriver of this deed.

Why lifts she up her arms in sequence thus?

Marc. I think she means that there was more than one

Confedperate in the fact: ay, more there was;

Or else to heaven she heaves them for revenge. 40

Tit. Lucius, what book is that she tosseth so?

Young Luc. Grandsire, ’tis Ovid’s Metamorphoses;

My mother gave it me.

Marc. For love of her that’s gone,

Perhaps she call’d it from among the rest.

Tit. Soft! see how busily she turns the leaves! 50

[Helping her.

What would she find? Lavinia, shall I read?

This is the tragic tale of Philemon,

And treats of Tereus’ treason and his rape;

And rape, I fear, was root of thine annoy.

Marc. See, brother, see; note how she quotes the leaves.

Tit. Lavinia, vert thou thus surprised, sweet girl,

Ravish’d and wrong’d, as Philomela was,

Forced in the ruthless, vast, and gloomy woods?

See, see!

Ay, such a place there is, where we did hunt—

O, had we never, never hunted there!—

Pattern’d by that the poet here describes,

By nature made for murders and for rapes.

Marc. O, why should nature build so foul a den,

Unless the gods delight in tragedies?

Tit. Give signs, sweet girl, for here are none

but friends,
What Roman lord it was durst do the deed:
Or slunk not Saturnine, as Tarquin erst,
That left the camp to sin in Lucrece' bed?
Marc. Sit down, sweet niece: brother, sit down by me.

Apollo, Pallas, Jove, or Mercury,
Inspire me, that I may this treason find!
My lord, look here: look here, Lavinia:
This sandy plot is plain; guide, if thou canst,
This after me, when I have writ my name
Without the help of any hand at all.

[He writes his name with his staff, and guides it with feet and mouth.

Cursed be that heart that forced us to this shift!
Write thou, good niece; and here display, at last,
What God will have discover'd for revenge:
Heaven guide thy pen to print thy sorrows plain,
That we may know the traitors and the truth!

[She takes the staff in her mouth, and guides it with her stumps, and writes.

Tit. O, do ye read, my lord, what she hath writ?

'Stuprum. Chiron. Demetrius.'

Marc. What, what! the lustful sons of Tamora
Performers of this heinous, bloody deed?

Tit. Magni Dominator poll.

Tam lentus audis sclera? tam lentus vides?

Marc. O, calm thee, gentle lord; although I know
There is enough written upon this earth
To stir a mutiny in the mildest thoughts
And arm the minds of infants to exclaim.
My lord, kneel down with me; Lavinia, kneel:
And kneel, sweet boy, the Roman Hector's hope;
And swear with me, as, with the woful fere
And father of that chaste dishonour'd dame,
Lord Junius Brutus swear for Lucrece' rape,
That we will prosecute by good advice
Mortal revenge upon these traitorous Goths,
And see their blood, or die with this reproach.

Tit. 'Tis sure enough, an you knew how.
But if you hunt these bear-welshens, then beware:
The dam will wake; and, if she wind you once,
She's with the lion deepely still in league,
And lulls him whilst she playeth on her back,
And when she sleeps will she do what she list. too
You are a young huntsman, Marcus; let it alone;
And, come, I will go get a leaf of brass,
And with a gad of steel will write these words,
And lay it by: the angry northern wind
Will blow these sands, like Sibyl's leaves, abroad,
And where's your lesson, then? Boy, what say you?

Young Luc. I say, my lord, that if I were a man,
Their mother's bed-chamber should not be safe
For these bad bondmen to the yoke of Rome.
Marc. Ay, that's my boy! thy father hath full oft
For his ungrateful country done the like.
Young Luc. And, uncle, so will I, an if I live.

Tit. Come, go with me into mine armoury;
Lucius, I'll fit thee; and withal, my boy,
Shalt carry me from the empress' sons
Presents that I intend to send them both:
Come, come; thou'lt do thy message, wilt thou not?

Young Luc. Ay, with my dagger in their bosoms, grandsire.

Tit. No, boy, not so; I'll teach thee another course.

Lavinia, come. Marcus, look to my hous
Lucius and I'll go brave it at the court:
Ay, marry, will we, sir; and we'll be wail.

[Exit Titus, Lavinia, and Young Luc.
Marc. O heavens, can you hear a got groan,
And not relent, or not compassion him?
Marcus, attend him in his ecstacy,
That hath more scars of sorrow in his head
Than foemen's marks upon his batter'd sh
But yet so just that he will not revenge.
Revenge, ye heavens, for old Andronicus!

Enter, from one side, Aaron, Demetrius
Chiron: from the other side, young Luc,
And an Attendant, with a bundle of us
And verses writ upon them.

Chi. Demetrius, here's the son of Luc
He hath some message to deliver us.

Aar. Ay, some mad message from his grandfather.
Young Luc. My lords, with all the hum
I greet your honours from Andronicus.

[Aside] And pray the Roman gods confer both!

Dem. Gramercy, lovely Lucius: what news?

Young Luc. [Aside] That you are b

Dem. What's here? A scroll; and round about?

Let's see:

Chi. O, 'tis a verse in Horace; I know
I read it in the grammar long ago.

Aar. Ay, just; a verse in Horace; rig

But were our witty empress well afoot,
She would applaud Andronicus' conceit:
But let her rest in her unrest awhile.

And now, young lords, was't not a happy
Led us to Rome, strangers, and more than Captives, to be advanced to this height?
It did me good, before the palace gate
To brave the tribune in his brother's heart,

Dem. But me more good, to see so gra

TITUS ANDRONICUS.

Now, by the burning tapers of the sky,
That shine so brightly when this boy was got,
He dies upon my scimitar's sharp point
That touches this my first-born son and heir!
I tell you, younglings, not Enceladus,
With all his threatening band of Typhon's brood,
Nor great Alcides, nor the god of war,
Shall seize this prey out of his father's hands.
What, what, ye sanguine, shallow-hearted boys!
Ye white-limed walls! ye aethouse painted signs!
Coal-black is better than another hue,
In that it scorns to bear another hue;
For all the water in the ocean
Can never turn the swan's black legs to white,
Although she lave them hourly in the flood.
Tell the empress from me, I am of age
To keep mine own, excuse it how she can.
Dem. Wilt thou betray thy noble mistress thus?
Aar. My mistress is my mistress; this myself,
The vigour and the picture of my youth:
This before all the world do I prefer;
This maugre all the world will I keep safe,
Or some of you shall smoke for it in Rome.
Dem. By this our mother is for ever shamed.
Cht. Rome will despoil her for this foul escape.
Nur. The emperor, in his rage, will doom her death.
Cht. I blush to think upon this ignomy.
Aar. Why, there's the privilege your beauty bears:
Fie, treacherous hue, that will betray with blushing
The close enacts and counsels of the heart!
Here's a young lad made of another leer:
Look, how the black slave smiles upon the father,
As who should say 'Old lad, I am thine own.'
He is your brother, lords, sensibly fed
Of that self-blood that first gave life to you,
And from that womb where you imprison'd were
He is enfranchised and come to light:
Nay, he is your brother by the surer side,
Although my seal be stamped in his face.
Nur. Aaron, what shall I say unto the empress?
Dem. Advise thee, Aaron, what is to be done,
And we will all subscribe to thy advice;
Save thou the child, so we may all be safe.
Aar. Then sit we down, and let us all consult.
My son and I will have the wind of you:
Keep there: now talk at pleasure of your safety.

[They sit.]

Dem. How many women saw this child of his?
Aar. Why, so, brave lords! when we join in league,
I am a lamb: but if you brave the Moor,
The chafed boar, the mountain lionsess,
The ocean swells not as so Aaron storms.
But say, again, how many saw the child?
Nur. Cornelia the midwife and myself;
And no one else but the deliver'd empress.
Aar. The empress, the midwife, and yourself:
Two may keep counsel when the third's away:
Go to the empress, tell her this I said.

[He kills the nurse.

Weke, weke! so cries a pig prepared to the spit.
Dem. What mean'st thou, Aaron? wherefore didst thou this?
Aar. O Lord, sir, 'tis a deed of policy:
Shall she live to betray this guilt of ours,
A long-tongued babbling gossip? no, lords, no:
And now be it known to you my full intent.

[Trumpets sound within.

[Aside] Pray to the devils; the gods have given us over.

[Aside] Pray the devils; the gods have given us over.

(Takes the Child from the Nurse, and draws.

Terrible villains! will you kill the child?
Not far, one Muli lives, my countryman;
His wife but yesternight was brought to bed;
His child is like to her, fair as you are:
Go pack with him, and give the mother gold,
And tell them both the circumstance of all;
And how by this their child shall be advanced,
And be received for the emperor's heir,
And substituted in the place of mine,
To calm this tempest whirling in the court;
And let the emperor dandle him for his own.
Hark ye, lords; ye see I have given her physic,
[Pointing to the nurse.]

And you must needs bestow her funeral;
The fields are near, and you are gallant rooms:
This done, see that you take no longer days,
But send the midwife presently to me.
The midwife and the nurse well made away,
Then let the ladies tattle what they please.

Chas. Aaron, I see thou wilt not trust the air
With secrets.

Dem. For this care of Tamora,
Herself and hers are highly bound to thee.
[Exeunt Dem. and Ch. bearing off the Nurse's body.]

Aar. Now to the Goths, as swift as swallow flies;
There to dispose this treasure in mine arms,
And secretly to gain the emperor's friends.
Come on, you thick-lipp'd slave, I'll bear you hence;
For it is you that puts us to our shifts:
I'll make you feed on berries and on roots,
And feed on curds and whey, and suck the goat,
And cabin in a cave, and bring you up
To be a warrior, and command a camp.
[Exit.

Scene III. The same. A public place.

Enter Titus, bearing arrows with letters at the ends of them; with him, Marcus, young Lucius, Publius, Sempronius, Caio, and other Gentlemen, with bows.

Tit. Come, Marcus; come, kinsmen; this is the way.
Sir boy, now let me see your archery:
Look ye draw home enough, and 'tis there straight.
Terras Astrae relicuit:
Be you remember'd, Marcus, she's gone, she's fled.
Sirs, take you to your tools. You, cousins, shall Go sound the ocean, and cast your nets;
Happily you may catch her in the sea;
Yet there's as little justice as at land:
No; Publius and Sempronius, you must do it; to
'Tis you must dig with mattock and with spade,
And pierce the inmost centre of the earth:
Then, when you come to Pluto's region,
I pray you, deliver him this petition;
Tell him, it is for justice and for aid,
And that it comes from old Andronicus,
Shaken with sorrows in ungrateful Rome.
Ah, Rome! Well, well; I made thee miserable
What time I threw the people's suffrages
On him that thus doth tyrannize o'er me.
Go, get you gone; and pray be careful all,
And leave you not a man-of-war unsearch'd:
This wicked emperor may have shipp'd her hence;
And, kinsmen, then we may go pipe for justice.
Marc. O Publius, is not this a heavy case,
To see thy noble uncle thus distract?

Pub. Therefore, my lord, it highly uncerns
By day and night to attend him carefully,
And feed his honour kindly as we may,
Till time beget some careful remedy.

Marc. Kinsmen, his sorrows are past re-
Join with the Goths; and with revengeful
Take wreak on Rome for this ingratitude,
And vengeance on the traitor Saturnine.

Tit. Publius, how now! how now, my lord;
What, have you met with her?

Pub. No, my good lord; but Pluto sent word,
If you will have Revenge from hell, you shall Marry, for Justice, she is so employ'd,
He thinks, with Jove in heaven, or some-
else,
So that perforce you must needs stay a time

Tit. He doth me wrong to feed me with I'll dive into the burning lake below,
And pull her out of Acheron by the heels.
Marcus, we are but shrubs, no cedar we,
No big-boned men framed of the Cyclops;
Come, to this gear. You are a good a Marcus;
[He gives them the arrow;

'Ad Jovem,' that's for you; here, 'Ad nem.'

'Ad Martem,' that's for myself:

Here, boy, to Pallas: here, to Mercury:
To Saturn, Caius, not to Saturnine:
You were as good to shoot against the wind.
To it, boy! Marcus, loose when I bid.
Of my word, I have written to effect;
There's not a god left unsolicited.

Marc. Kinsmen, shoot all your shafts in the court;
We will exalt the emperor in his pride.

Tit. Now, masters, draw. [They shoot;
well said, Lucius!
Good boy, in Virgo's lap; give it Pallas.
Marc. My lord, I aim a mile beyond the
Your letter is with Jupiter by this.

Tit. Ha, ha!
Publius, Publius, what hast thou done?
See, see, thou hast shot off one of Taurus'

Publius shot,

Tit. Why, there it goes: God give him ship joy!

Enter a Clown, with a basket, and two in it.

News, news from heaven! Marcus, the come.

Sirs, what tidings? have you any letter
I have justice? what says Jupiter? 79
O, the glibber-maker! he says that he taken them down again, for the man must e hanged till the next week.
But what says Jupiter, I ask thee? 85
Alas, sir, I know not Jupiter; I never with him in all my life.
Why, villain, art not thou the carrier?
Ay, of my pigeons, sir; nothing else.
Why, didst thou not come from heaven?
From heaven! alas, sir, I never came:
God forbid I should be so bold to press in my young days. Why, I am going my pigeons to the tribunal pleas, to take up tier of brawl between my uncle and one of imperial's men.
Why, sir, that is as fit as can be to for your oration; and let him deliver the s to the emperor from you.
Tell me, can you deliver an oration to emperor with a grace?
Nay, truly, sir, I could never say grace
my life.
SIRRah, come hither: make no more ado, ive your pigeons to the emperor:
thon shalt have justice at his hands.
hold; meanwhile here's money for thy charges: me pen and ink. Sirrah, can you with a deliver a supplication?
Ay, sir.
Then here is a supplication for you.
hen you come to him, at the first approach ust kneel, then kiss his foot, then deliver pigeons, and then look for your reward.
at hand, sir; see you it bravely.
I warrant you, sir, let me alone.
SIRRah, hast thou a knife? come, let me
it.
Marcus, fold it in the oration nest made it like an humble supplicant.
hen thou hast given it the emperor,
at my door, and tell me what he says.
God be with you, sir; I will.
Come, Marcus, let us go. Publius, fol-me. [Exeunt.
SATURNINE, TAMORA, DEMETRIUS, EMILIA, LUCIUS, and others; SATURNINE throwing out his hands Titus shot.
Why, lords, what wrongs are these? was or scene
or in Rome thus overborne, confronted thus; and, for the extent justice, used in such contempt?
is, you know, as know the mighty gods, or these disturbers of our peace people's ears, there ought hath pass'd, with law, against the wilful sons Andronicus. And what an if rows have so overwhelm'd his wits, to be thus afflicted in his wits, 99 his frenzy, and his bitterness fate to heaven for his redress;
's to Jove, and this to Mercur: 105
Apollo: this to the god of war;
crolls to fly about the streets of Rome!
What's this but libelling against the senate,
And blazoning our injustice everywhere?
A goodly humour, is it not, my lords? 113
As who would say, in Rome no justice were.
But if I live, his feigned ecstasies
Shall be no shelter to these outright
But he and his shall know that justice lives
In Saturninus' health, whom, if she sleep,
He'll so awake as she in fury shall
Cut off the proud'st conspirators to lives.
Tam. My gracious lord, my lovely Saturnine,
Lord of my life, commander of my thoughts,
Calm thee, and bear the faults of Titus' age,
The effects of sorrow for his valiant sons,
Whose loss hath pierced him deep and scar'd his
heart;
And rather comfort his distressed plight
Than prosecute the meanest or the best For these contempt. [Aside] Why, thus it shall become
High-witted Tamora to gloze with all:
But, Titus, I have touch'd thee to the quick,
Thy life-blood out; if Aaron now be wise,
Then is all safe, the anchor's in the port.
[Enter Clown.
How now, good fellow! wouldst thou speak
with us?
Cla. Yea, forsooth, an your mistership be emperial.
Tam. Empress I am, but yonder sits the emperor.
Cla. 'Tis he. God and Saint Stephen give you good den: I have brought you a letter and a couple of pigeons here.
[Saturninus reads the letter.
Sat. Go, take him away, and hang him presently.
Cla. How much money must I have?
Tam. Come, sirrah, you must be hanged.
Cla. Hanged! by' r lad, then I have brought up a neck to a fair end. [Exit, guarded.
Sat. Despairful and intolerable wrongs! Shall
I endure this monstrous villany?
I know from whence this same device proceeds:
May this be borne?—as if his traitorous sons,
That died by law for murder of our brother,
Have by my means been butcher'd wrongfully!
Go, drag the villain hither by the hair; 119
Nor age nor honour shall shape privilege:
For this proud mock I'll be thy slaughter-man;
Sly frantic wretch, that holp'st to make me great,
In hope thyself should govern Rome and me. 125
[Enter Emilius.
What news with thee, Emilius? 130
Emil. Arm, arm, my lord,—Rome never had more cause.
The Goths have gather'd head; and with a power
Of high-resolved men, bent to the spoil,
They hither march amain, under conduct
Of Lucius, son to old Andronicus;
Who threats, in course of this revenge, to do
As much as ever Coriolanus did.
Sat. Is warlike Lucius general of the Goths?
These tidings nip me, and I hang the head
As flowers with frost or grass beat down with storms;
Ay, now begin our sorrows to approach:
\textbf{TITUS ANDRONICUS.} [Act II, Scene 1. Plain near Rome.]

Enter Lucius with an army of Goths, with drum and colours.

Luc. Approved warriors, and my faithful friends, I have received letters from great Rome, which signify what hate they bear their emperor And how desirous of our sight they are. Therefore, great lords, be, as your titles witness, Imperious and impatient of your wrongs, And wherein Rome hath done you any scath, Let him make treble satisfaction.

First Goth. Brave slip, sprung from the great Andronicus, Whose name was once our terror, now our comfort; Whose high exploits and honourable deeds Ingratate Rome requires with foul contempt, Be bold in us; we'll follow where thou leadst Like stinging bees in hottest summer's day Led by their master to the flowered fields, And be avenged on cursed Tamora.

\textit{All the Goths.} And as he saith, so say I with him.

Luc. I humbly thank him, and I thank all.

But who comes here, led by a lusty Goth?

Sec. Goth. Renowned Lucius, from our stray'd To gaze upon a ruinous monastery; And, as I earnestly did fix mine eye Upon the wasted building, suddenly I heard a child cry underneath a wall. I made unto the noise; when soon I heard The crying babe control'd with this discourse 'Peace, tawny slave, half me and half thy d The dog that guards thee is but thy mother's look, Villain, thou mightst have been an emperor But where the bull and cow are both milk-w They never do beget a coal-black calf. Peace, villain, peace!'—even thus he rate bate,—' For I must bear thee to a trusty Goth; Who, when he know'st thou art the emperor Will hold thee dearly for thy mother's sake. With this, my weapon drawn, I rush'd upon Surprised him suddenly, and brought him to Use as you think needful of the man.

Luc. O worthy Goth, this is the infant devil That robb'd Andronicus of his good hand; This is the pearl that pleased your empress And here's the base fruit of his burning lust Say, wall-eyed slave, whither wouldst thou go? This growing image of thy fiend-like face, Why dost not speak? what, deaf? not a word, soldier! hang him on this tree, And by his side his fruit of bastardy.

Aar. Touch not the boy; he is of blood.

Luc. Too like the sire for ever being gone First hang the child, that he may see it spr. A sight to vex the father's soul withal. Get me a ladder.

[A ladder brought, which Aaron made to:

Aar. Lucius, save the child, And bear it from me to the empress. If thou do this, I'll show thee wondrous things; That highly may advantage thee to hear: If thou wilt not, befall what may befal, I'll speak no more but 'Vengeance rot you Luc. Say on: an if it please me which speakest, Thy child shall live, and I will see it nourish Aar. An if it please thee! why, assure \textit{Twill vex thy soul to hear what I shall speak: For I must talk of murders, rapes and mass Acts of black night, abominable deeds, Complots of mischief, treason, villanies Ruthful to hear, yet piteously perform'd: And this shall all be buried by my death, s thou swear to me my child shall live,

Tell on thy mind; I say thy child shall begin.

Who should I swear by? thou believest
no god:
granted, how canst thou believe an oath?
What if I do not? as, indeed, I do not;
or I know thou art religious as a thing within thee called conscience, many popish tricks and ceremonies,
I have seen thee careful to observe,
I urge thy oath: for that I know of holds his bauble for a god sees the oath which by that god he swears, I'll urge him: therefore thou shalt vow same god, what god soe'er it be,
how adorest and hast in reverence,
my boy, to nourish and bring him up;
I will discover nought to thee.
Even by my god I swear to thee I will.
First know thou, I begot him on the press.
O most insatiate and luxurious woman!
Tut, Lucius, this was but a deed of sanctity,
which thou shalt hear of me anon.
her two sons that murder'd Bassianus;
but thy sister's tongue and ravish'd her at her hands and trimm'd her as thou wast.
O detestable villain! call'st thou that suing?
Why, she was wash'd and cut and mmd, and 'twas sort for them that had the doing of it.
O barbarous, beastly villains, like thy-
selves,
Indeed, I was their tutor to instruct them:
ding spirit had they from their mother,
a card as ever won the set;
100 body mind, I think, they learn'd of me,
a dog as ever fought at head.
my deeds be witness of my worth,
thy brethren to that guileful hole

the letter that thy father found the gold within the letter mention'd, rate with the queen and her two sons:
it not done, that thou hast cause to rue,
I had no stroke of mischief in it;
the charter for thy father's hand,
en I had it, drew myself apart broke my heart with extreme laughter:
he through the crevice of a wall pr his hand, he had his two sons' heads;
his tears, and laugh'd so heartily,
in mine eyes were rainy like to his:
A I told the empress of this sport,
and almost at my pleasing tale,
your tidings gave me twenty kisses.

What, canst thou say all this, and er blush?
Ay, like a black dog, as the saying is.
Art thou not sorry for these heinous

Ay, that I had not done a thousand

TITUS ANDRONICUS.

Even now I curse the day—and yet, I think,
Few come within the compass of my curse—
Wherein I did not some notorious ill,
As kill a man, or else devise his death,
Ravish a maid, or plot the way to do it,
Accuse some innocent and forswear myself,
130
Set deadly enmity between two friends,
Make poor men's cattle break their necks;
Set fire on barns and hay-stacks in the night,
And bid the owners quench them with their tears.
Oft have I digg'd up dead men from their graves,
And set them upright at their dear friends' doors,
Even when their sorrows almost were forgot;
And on their skins, as on the bark of trees,
Have with my knife carved in Roman letters,
'Let not your sorrow die, though I am dead.'
Tut, I have done a thousand dreadful things
As willingly as one would kill a fly,
And nothing grieves me heartily indeed
But that I cannot do ten thousand more.
Luc. Bring down the devil; for he must not die
So sweet a death as hanging presently.
Aay. If there be devils, would I were a devil,
To live and burn in everlasting fire,
So I might have your company in hell,
But to torment you with my bitter tongue!
Luc. Sirs, stop his mouth, and let him speak no more.

Enter a Goth.

Third Goth. My lord, there is a messenger from Rome
Desires to be admitted to your presence.
Luc. Let him come near.

Enter Émiliius.

Welcome, Émiliius: what's the news from Rome?
Émil. Lord Lucius, and you princes of the Goths,
The Roman emperor greets you all by me;
And, for he understands you are in arms,
He craves a parley at your father's house,
Willing you to disarm your hostages,
And they shall be immediately deliver'd.
First Goth. What says our general?
Luc. Émiliius, let the emperor give his pledges
Unto my father and my uncle Marcus,
And we will come. March away. [Exeunt.

Enter Tamora, Demetrius, and Chiron, disguised.

Tam. Thus, in this strange and sad habiliment,
I will encounter with Andronicus,
And say I am Revenge, sent from below
To join with him and right his heinous wrongs.
Knock at his study, where, they say, he keeps,
To ruminate strange plots of dire revenge;
Tell him Revenge is come to join with him,
And work confusion on his enemies.

[They knock.

Enter Titus, above.

Tit. Who doth molest my contemplation?
Is it your trick to make me ope the door,
That so my sad decrees may fly away,
And all my study be to no effect?
You are deceived: for what I mean to do
See here in bloody lines I have set down;
And what is written shall be executed.

Tam. Titus, I am come to talk with thee.
Tit. No, not a word; how can I grace my talks,
Wanting a hand to give it action?
Thou hast the odds of me; therefore no more.

Tam. If thou didst know me, thou wouldest talk with me,

Tit. I am not mad: I know thee well enough:
Witness this wretched stump, witness these crim-
on lines:
Witness these trenches made by grief and care;
Witness the tiring day and heavy night;
Witness all sorrow, that I know thee well.
For our proud empress, mighty Tamora:
Is not thy coming for my other hand?

Tam. Know, thou sad man, I am not Tamora;
She is thy enemy, and I thy friend:
I am Revenge; sent from the infernal kingdom,
To ease the gnawing vulture of thy mind,
By working wreakful vengeance on thy foes.
Come down, and welcome me to this world's light;
Confer with me of murder and of death:
There's not a hollow cave or lurking-place,
No vast obscurity or misty vale,
Where bloody murder or detested rape
Can couch for fear, but I will find them out;
And in their ears tell them my dreadful name,
Revenge, which makes the soul offender quake.

Tit. Art thou Revenge? and art thou sent to me,
To be a torment to mine enemies?

Tam. I am; therefore come down, and welcome me.

Tit. Do me some service, ere I come to thee.
Lo, by thy side where Rape and Murder stands;
Now give some suance that thou art Revenge,
Stab them, or tear them on thy chariot-wheels;
And then I'll come and be thy waggoner,
And whirl along with thee about the globe.
Provide thee two proper palfreys, black as jet,
To kale thy vengeful waggon swift away,
And find out murderers in their guilty caves:
And when thy car is laden with their heads,
I will dismount, and by the waggon-wheel
Trot, like a servile footman, all day long,
Even from Hyperion's rising in the east
Until his very downfall in the sea:
And day by day I'll do this heavy task,
So thou destroy Rape and Murder there.

Tam. These are my ministers, and come with me.

Tit. Are these thy ministers? what are they call'd?

Tam. Rape and Murder; therefore called so,
Cause they take vengeance of such kind of men.

Tit. Good Lord, now like the empress' sons they are!
And you, the empress! but we worldly men
Have miserable, mad, mistaking eyes.
O sweet Revenge, now do I come to thee:
And, if one arm's embracement will content thee,
I will embrace thee in it by and by. [Exit above.

Tam. This closing with him fits his lunacy:
Whate'er I forge to feed his brain-sick fits,
Do you uphold and maintain in your speeches,
For now he firmly takes me for Revenge;
And, being credulous in this mad thought,
I'll make him send for Lucius his son;
And, whilst I at a banquet hold him sure,
I'll find some cunning practice out of hand
To scatter and disperse the giddy Goths,
Or, at the least, make them his enemies.
See, here he comes, and I must ply my the Enter Titus below.

Tit. Long have I been forlorn, and thee:
Welcome, dread Fury, to my woful house:
Rapine and Murder, you are welcome too.
How like the empress and her sons you are!
Well are you fitted, had you but a Moor;
Could not all hell afford you such a devil?
For well I wot the empress never wags
But in her company there is a Moor;
And, would you represent our queen aright
It were convenient you had such a devil:
But welcome, as you are. What shall we

And I am sent to be revenged on him.

And I will be revenged on them all.

Tit. Look round about the wicked str
Rome;
And when thou find'st a man that's like the Good Murder, stab him: he's a murderer.
Go thou with him: and when it is thy hap
To find another that is like to thee,
Good Rapine, stab him: he's a ravisher.
Go thou with them: and in the emperor's
There is a queen, attended by a Moor;
Well mayst thou know her by thy own

For up and down she doth resemble thee,
I pray thee, do on them some violent deal.
They have been violent to me and mine.

Tam. Well hast thou lesson'd us; th
we do.
But would it please thee, good Andronicus?
To send for Lucius, thy thrice-valiant son
Who leads towards Rome a band of warlike
And bid him come and banquet at thy feast
When he is here, even at thy solemn feast
I will bring in the empress and her sons,
The emperor himself and all thy foes;
And at thy mercy shall they stoop and kne
And on them shalt thou ease thy angry heart.
What says Andronicus to this device?

Tit. Marcus, my brother! 'tis sad Tit

Enter Marcus.

Go, gentle Marcus, to thy nephew Lucius
Thou shalt inquire him out among the Goths,
Bid him repair to me, and bring with him
Some of the chiefest princes of the Goths Bid him encamp his soldiers where they are,
Tell him the emperor and the empress too
Feast at my house, and he shall feast with
This do thou for my love; and so let him,
As he regards his aged father's life.

Marc. This will I do, and soon return
Titus Andronicus

What would you say, if I should let you speak?
Villains, for shame you could not beg for grace.
Hark, wretches! how I mean to murder you.
This one hand yet is left to cut your throats.
Whilst that Lavinia 'tween her stumps doth hold
The basin that receives your guilty blood.
You know your mother means to feast with me,
And calls herself Revenge, and thinks me mad:
Hark, villains! I will grind your bones to dust
And with your blood and if I'll make a paste,
And of the paste a coffin I will rear
And make two pasties of your shamefull heads,
And bid that snrumpet, your unhallow'd dam,
Like to the earth swallow her own increase.
This is the feast that I have bid her to, And this the banquet she shall surfeit on:
For worse than Philomel you used my daughter,
And worse than Progne I will be revenged;
And now prepare your throats. Lavinia, come, [He cuts their throats.]
Receive the blood: and when that they are dead,
Let me go grind their bones to powder small.
And with this hateful liquor temper it; And in that paste let their vile heads be baked.
Come, come, be every one officious.
To make this banquet; which I wish may prove
More stern and bloody than the Centaurs' feast.
So, now bring them in, for I'll play the cook,
And see them ready 'gainst their mother comes. [Exeunt, bearing the dead bodies.

Scene III. Court of Titus's house. A banquet set out.

Enter Lucius, Marcus, and Goths, with Aaron prisoner.

Luc. Uncle Marcus, Marcus, and Goths, with Aaron prisoner.

That I repair to Rome, I am content.

First Goth. And ours with thine, befall what fortune will.

Luc. Good uncle, take you in this barbarous Moor,
This ravenous tiger, this accursed devil;
Let him receive no sustenance, fetter him,
Till he be brought unto the empress' face,
For testimony of her foul proceedings:
And see the ambush of our friends be strong;
I fear the emperor means no good to us.

Aar. Some devil whisper curses in mine ear,
And prompt me, that my tongue may utter forth
The venomous malice of my swelling heart!

Luc. Away, inhuman dog! unhallow'd slave!
Sirs, help our uncle to convey him in.

[Exeunt Goths, with Aaron. Flourish within.
The trumpets show the emperor is at hand.

Enter Saturninus and Tamora, with Emilius, Tribunes, Senators, and others.

Sat. What, hath the firmament more suns than one?

Luc. What boots it thee to call thyself a sun?

Marc. Rome's emperor, and nephew, break the parole;

These quarrels must be quietly debated.

The feast is ready, which the careful Titus
Hath ordain'd to an honourable meal.

For peace, for love, for league, and good to Rome:
Enter Titus dressed like a Cook, Lavinia veiled, young Lucius, and others. Titus places the dishes on the table.

Tit. Welcome, my gracious lord; welcome, dread queen.

Welcome, ye warlike Gods; welcome, Lucius; And welcome, all: although the cheer be poor, 'Twill fill your stomachs; please you eat of it. 29

Sat. Why art thou thus attired, Andronicus? Tit. Because I would be sure to have all well, To entertain your highness and your empress. Tam. We are beholding to you, good Andronicus. Tit. An if your highness knew my heart, you were.

My lord the emperor, resolve me this:

Was it well done of rash Virginus
To slay his daughter with his own right hand, Because she was enforced, stain'd, and deflower'd?

Sat. It was, Andronicus. Tit. Your reason, mighty lord? 40

Sat. Because the girl should not survive her shame, And by her presence still renew his sorrows.

Tit. A reason mighty, strong, and effectual; A pattern, precedent, and lively warrant, For me, most wretched, to perform the like. Die, die, Lavinia, and thy shame with thee; [Kills Lavinia. And, with thy shame, thy father's sorrow die!

Sat. What hast thou done, unnatural and unkind?

Tit. Kill'd her, for whom my tears have made me blind.

I am as woful as Virginus was, And have a thousand times more cause than he To do this outrage: and it now is done. Sat. What, was she ravish'd? tell who did the deed.

Tit. 'Twill please you eat? will 't please your highness feed?

Tam. Why hast thou slain thine only daughter thus?

Tit. Not I; 'twas Chiron and Demetrius:

They ravish'd her, and cut away her tongue: And they, 'twas they, that did her all this wrong.

Sat. Go fetch them hither to us presently. Tit. Why, there they are both, baked in that pie;

Whereof their mother daintly hath fed, Eating the flesh that she herself hath bred. 'Tis true, 'tis true; witness my knife's sharp point. [Kills Tamora. [Kills Titus. Luc. Can the son's eye behold his father bleed?

There's need for meed, death for a deadly deed! [Kills Saturninus. A great tumult. Lucius, Marcus, and others go up into the balcony. Marc. You sad-faced men, people and sons of Rome,

By uproar sever'd, like a flight of fowl Scatter'd by winds and high tempestuous gusts, O, let me teach you how to knit again This scatter'd corn into one mutual sheaf, These broken limbs again into one body; Lest Rome herself be base unto herself, And save whom mighty kingdoms courser to Like a forlorn and desperate castaway, Do shameful execution on herself, But if my frosty signs and shaps of age, Grace witnesses of true experience, Cannot induce you to attend my words, [To Lucina] Speak, Rome's dear friend, as our ancestor, When with his solemn tongue he did discourse To love-sick Dido's sad attending ear

The story of that baleful burning night When subtle Greeks surprised King Priam's

Tell us what Sinon hath bewitch'd our ears, Or who hath brought the fatal engine in That gives our Troy, our Rome, the civil war My heart is not compact of fight nor steel; Nor can I utter all our bitter grief,

But floods of tears will drown my oratory, And break my utterance, even in the time When it should move you to attend my most Lending your kind commiseration.

Here is a captain, let him tell the tale:

Your hearts will throb and weep to hear him. Luc. Then, noble auditory, be it known That cursed Chiron and Demetrius Were they that murdered our emperor's brood And they it were that ravished our sister: For their fell faults our brothers were bequeathed Our father's tears despedied, and basely coz'd Of that true hand that fought Rome's quarrel And sent her enemies unto the grave.

Lastly, myself unkindly banished The gates shut on me, and turn'd me weeping To beg relief among Rome's enemies; Who drown'd their enmity in my true tears And oped their arms to embrace me as a friend I am the turned forth, be it known to you That have preserved her welfare in my bosom And from her bosom took the enemy's point Sheathing the steel in my adventurous body And so you know I am no vacanter, I: My scars can witness, dumb although they That my report is just and full of truth.

But, soft! methinks I do digress too much, Citing my worthless praise: O, pardon me For when no friends are by, men praise the child. Marc. Now is my turn to speak. Behold [Pointing to the Child in the arms] Of this was Tamora delivered; The issue of an irreligious Moor, Chief architect and plotter of these woes: The villain is alive in Titus' house.

And as he is, to witness this is true. Now judge what cause had Titus to revenge These wrongs, unspeakable, past patience, Or more than any living man could bear. Now you have heard the truth, what say you, Romans? Have we not done aught amiss,—show us when And, from the place where you behold us, The poor remainder of Andronic There will, hand in hand, all headlong cast us do on the ragged stones beat forth our brains, make a mutual closure of our house.
c. Romans, speak: and if you say we shall, and in hand, Lucius and I will fall.

Lucius, our Romans, Thanks, Come this matter time Rome's obsequious true aloof in tears and asleep, Go, Came, hale emperor our people, Marcus, ragged hand, sum mutual duties voice nature hither, in infinite, small:

AEm. You said Andronicus, have done with woes: Give sentence on this execrable wretch, That hath been breeder of these dire events. Luc. Set him breast-deep in earth, and famish him:

There let him stand, and rave, and cry for food:
If any one relieves or pities him, For the offence he dies. This is our doom:
Some stay to see him fasten'd in the earth.

Aar. O, why should wrath be mute, and fury dumb?
I am no baby, I, that with base prayers I should repent the evils I have done:
Ten thousand worse than ever yet I did
Would I perform, if I might have my will:
If one good deed in all my life I did, I do repent it from my very soul.

Luc. Some loving friends convey the emperor hence,
And give him burial in his father's grave:
My father and Lavinia shall forthwith Be closed in our household's monument.
As for that heinous tiger, Tamora,
No funeral rite, nor man in mourning weeds,
No mournful bell shall ring her burial;
But throw her forth to beasts and birds of prey:
Her life was beast-like, and devoid of pity;
And, being so, shall have like want of pity. See justice done on Aaron, that damn'd Moor, By whom our heavy haps had their beginning:
Then, afterwards, to order well the state.

Friends should associate friends in grief and woe:
Bid him farewell; commit him to the grave; Do him that kindness, and take leave of him.
Young Luc. O grandsire, grandsire! even with all my heart
Would I were dead, so you did live again!
O Lord, I cannot speak to him for weeping;
My tears will choke me, if I ope my mouth.

Re-enter Attendants with Aaron.
PROLOGUE.

Two households, both alike in dignity,
In fair Verona, where we lay our scene,
From ancient grudge break to new mutiny,
Where civil blood makes civil hands unclean.
From forth the fatal loins of these two foes
A pair of star-cross'd lovers take their life;
Whose misadventured piteous overthrows
Do with their death bury their parents' strife.
The fearful passage of their death-mark'd love,
And the continuance of their parents' rage,
To Which, but their children's end, nought could remove,
Is now the two hours' traffic of our stage;
The which if you with patient ears attend,
What here shall miss, our toil shall strive to mend.

ACT I.

SCENE I. Verona. A public place.

Enter Sampson and Gregory, of the house of Capulet, armed with swords and bucklers.

Sam. Gregory, o' my word, we'll not carry coals.

Gre. No, for then we should be colliers.

Sam. I mean, an we be in choler, we'll draw.

Gre. Ay, while you live, draw your neck out o' the collar.

Sam. I strike quickly, being moved.

Gre. But thou art not quickly moved to strike.

Sam. A dog of that house of Montague moves me.

Gre. To move is to stir; and to be valiant is to stand: therefore, if thou art moved, thou runnst away.

Sam. A dog of that house shall move me to stand: I will take the wall of any man or maid of Montague's.

SCENE: Verona: Mantua.

Gre. That shows thee a weak slave; for weakest goes to the wall.
Sam. True; and therefore women, being weaker vessels, are ever thrust to the wall: before I will push Montague's men from the wall and thrust his maids to the wall.

Gre. The quarrel is between our master and their men.
Sam. 'Tis all one, I will show my tyrant; when I have fought with thee, I will be cruel with the maids, and cut off their heads.

Gre. The heads of the maids?

Sam. Ay, the heads of the maids, or maidenheads; take it in what sense thou wilt.

Gre. They must take it in sense that fee.

Sam. Me they shall feel while I am to stand: and 'tis known I am a pretty flesh.

Gre. 'Tis well thou art not fish; if thou hast been poor John, Draw thy tool, it comes two of the house of the Montagues.

Sam. My naked weapon is out; quarrel will back thee.

Gre. How! turn thy back and run?

Sam. Fear me not.

Gre. No, marry; I fear thee!

Sam. Let us take the law of our side them begin.

Gre. I will frown as I pass by, and let take it as they list.

Sam. Nay, as they dare. I will bite thy thumb at them; which is a disgrace to the they bear it.

Enter ABRAHAM and BALTHASAR.

Abr. Do you bite your thumb at us, sir?

Sam. I do bite my thumb, sir.

Abr. Do you bite your thumb at us, sir?

Sam. [Aside to Gre.] Is the law of our if I say ay?
No.  No, sir, I do not bite my thumb at you,
I bite my thumb, sir.
Do you quarrel, sir?  No, sir.
If you do, sir, I am for you: I serve as aman as you.
No better.
Well, sir.
Say 'better:' here comes one of my knights.
Yes, better, sir.
You lie.
Draw, if you be men. Gregory, rest your swashing blow. [They fight. 70

Enter Benvelio.
Part, fools! your swords; you know not what you do.
[Beats down their swords.

Enter Tybalt.
What, art thou drawn among these careless hinds?
see, Benvelio, look upon thy death.
I do but keep the peace: put up thy
word,
and let it part these men with me.
What, drawn, and talk of peace! I the word,
ate hell, all Montagues, and thee:
thee, coward! [They fight.
several of both houses, who join the ay; then enter Citizens, with clubs.
[Cit. Clubs, bills, and partisans! strike!
gag them down!
with the Capulets! down with the Mongues!
Capulet in his gown, and Lady Capulet.
What noise is this? Give me my long rod, ho!
Cap. A crutch, a crutch! why call you y a sword?
My sword, I say! Old Montague is
me,
shines his blade in spite of me.
Montague and Lady Montague.
Thou villain Capulet,—Hold me not,
me go.
Thou shalt not stir a foot to seek

Enter Prince, with Attendants.
Rebellious subjects, enemies to peace,
rs of this neighbour-stained steel,— ey not hear? What, ho! you men, you
at,
ch the fire of your pernicious rage ripe fountains issuing from your veins,
, of torture, from those bloody hands your misremder'd weapons to the ground, at the sentence of your moved prince.
ill brawls, bred of an airy word,
, Capulet, and Montague,
price distur'd the quiet of our streets,
And made Verona's ancient citizens
Cast by their grave beasening ornaments, 100
To wield old partisans, in hands as old,
Canker'd with peace, to part your canker'd hate:
If ever you disturb our streets again,
Your lives shall pay the forfeit of the peace.
For this time, all the rest depart away:
You, Capulet, shall go along with me:
And, Montague, come you this afternoon,
To know our further pleasure in this case,
To old Free-town, our common judgement-place.
Once more, on pain of death, all men depart. 110
[Exeunt all but Montague, Lady Montague, and Benvelio.

Mon. Who set this ancient quarrel new abroach?
Speak, nephew, were you by when it began?
Ben. Here were the servants of your adversary,
And yours, close fighting ere I did approach:
I drew to part them: in the instant came
The fiery Tybalt, with his sword prepared,
Which, as he breathed defiance to my ears,
He swung about his head and cut the winds,
Who nothing hurt withal but his head was scor'd! 119
While we were interchangeing thrusts and blows,
Came more and more and fought on part and part,
Till the prince came, who parted either part.
La. Mon. O, where is Romeo? saw you him
to-day?
Right glad I am he was not at this fray.
Ben. Madam, an hour before the worshipp'd sun
Peered forth the golden window of the east,
A troubled mind drive me to walk abroad;
Where, underneath the grove of sycamore
That westward rooteth from the city's side,
So early walking did I see your son:
Towards him I made, but he was ware of me
And stole into the covert of the wood:
I, measuring his affections by my own,
That most are busied when they're most alone,
Pursued my humour not pursuing his,
And gladly shamed I gladly fled from me.
Mon. Many a morning hath he there been seen,
With tears augmenting the fresh morning's dew,
Adding to clouds more clouds with his deep sighs;
But all so soon as the all-cheering sun
Should in the furthest east begin to draw
The shady curtains from Aurora's bed,
Away from light steals home my heavy son,
And private in his chamber pens himself,
Shuts up his windows, locks fair daylight out
And makes himself an artificial night:
Black and portentous must this humour prove,
Unless good counsel may the cause remove.
Ben. My noble uncle, do you know the cause?
Mon. I neither know it nor can learn of him.
Ben. Have you importuned him by any means?
Mon. Both by myself and many other friends:
But he, his own affections' counsellor,
Is to himself—I will not say how true—
But to himself so secret and so close,
So far from sounding and discovery,
As is the bad bit with an envious worm,
Ere he can spread his sweet leaves to the air,
Or dedicate his beauty to the sun.
Could we but learn from whence his sorrows grew,
We would as willingly give cure as know.
Enter Romeo.

Ben. See, where he comes: so please you, step aside;
I'll know his grievance, or be much denied.
Mon. I would thou wert so happy by thy stay,
To hear true shift. Come, madam, let's away.
[Exeunt Montague and Lady.

Ben. Good morrow, cousin.

Rom. Is the day so young?

Ben. But new struck nine.

Rom. Ay me! sad hours seem long.
Was that my father that went hence so fast?
Ben. It was. What sadness lengthens Romeo's hours?

Rom. Not having that, which, having, makes them short.

Ben. In love?

Rom. Out—

Ben. Of love?

Rom. Out of her favour, where I am in love.
Ben. Alas, that love, so gentle in his view,
Should be so tyrannous and rough in proof!

Rom. Alas, that love, whose view is muffled still,
Should, without eyes, see pathways to his will!
Where shall we dine? O me! What fray was here?
Yet tell me not, for I have heard it all.

Here's much to do with hate, but more with love.
Why, then, O brawling love! O loving hate!
O any thing, of nothing first create!
O heavy lightness! serious vanity!
Mis-shapen chaos of well-seeming forms!
Feather of lead, bright smoke, cold fire, sick health!

Still-waking sleep, that is not what it is!
This love feel I, that feel no love in this.
Dost thou not laugh?

Ben. No, coz, I rather weep.

Rom. Good heart, at what?

Ben. At thy good heart's oppression.

Griefs of mine own lie heavy in my breast,
Which thou wilt propagate, to have it prest
With more of thine: this love that thou hast shown
Doth add more grief to too much of mine own.

Love is a smoke raised with the fume of sighs;
Being purged, a fire sparkling in lovers' eyes;
Being vex'd, a sea nourish'd with lovers' tears:
What is it else? a madness most discreet,
A choking gall and a preserving sweet.

Farewell, my coz.

Ben. Soft! I will go along;
An if you leave me so, you do me wrong.

Rom. Tut, I have lost myself; I am not here;
This is not Romeo, he's some other where.

Ben. Tell me in sadness, who is that you love.

Rom. What, shall I groan and tell thee?

Ben. Groan! why, no;
But sadly tell me who.

Rom. Bid a sick man in sadness make his will:
Ah, word ill urged to one that is so ill!
In sadness, cousin, I do love a woman.

Ben. I aim'd so near, when I supposed you loved.

Rom. A right good mark-man! And she's fair I love.

Ben. A right fair mark, fair coz, is some
Rom. Well, in that hit you miss: she'll hit
With Cupid's arrow: she hath Dian's wit;
And, in strong proof of chastity well arm'd,
From love's weak childish bow she lives unmark'd.
She will not stay the siege of loving terms,
Nor bide the encounter of assailing eyes,
Nor ope her lap to saint-seducing gold:
O, she is rich in beauty, only poor,
That when she dies with beauty dies her st.

Ben. Then she hath sworn that she will live chaste?

Rom. She hath, and in that sparing huge waste,
For beauty starred with her severity.

Cuts beauty off from all posterity.
She is too fair, too wise, wisely too fair,
To merit bliss by making me despair:
She hath forsworn to love, and in that vow
Do I live dead that live to tell it now.

Ben. Be ruled by me, forget to think of

Rom. O, teach me how I should for

To call hers exquisite, in question more;
These happy masks that kiss fair ladies' br

The precious treasure of his eyesight lost:
Show me a mistress that is passing fair,
What doth her beauty serve, but as a note

Ben. I'll pay that doctrine, or else die.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II. A street.

Enter Capulet, Paris, and Servant.

Cap. But Montague is bound as well as I
In penalty alike; and 'tis not hard, I think
For men so old as we to keep the peace.

Par. Of honourable reckoning are you
And pity 'tis you lived at odds so long.
But now, my lord, what say you to my suit?

Is the hopeful lady of my earth:
But woo her, gentle Paris, get her heart,
My will to her consent is but a part;

But in that crystal scales let there be weigh'd

Your lady's love against some other maid

That I will show you shining at this feast,

And she shall scant show well that now shows best.

Rom. I'll go along, no such sight to be shown,

But to rejoice in splendid of mine own.

Exeunt.

Scene III. A room in Capulet's house.

Enter Lady Capulet and Nurse.

La. Cap. Nurse, where's my daughter? call her forth to me.

Nurse. Now, by my maidenhead, at twelve year old,

I bade her come. What, lamb! what, lady-bird!

God forbid! Where's this girl? What, Juliet!

Enter Juliet.

Jul. How now! who calls?

Nurse. Your mother.

Jul. Madam, I am here.

What is your will?

La. Cap. This is the matter:—Nurse, give leave awhile,

We must talk in secret,—nurse, come back again;

I have remember'd me, thou's hear our counsel.

Thou know'st my daughter's of a pretty age.

Nurse. Faith, I can tell her age unto an hour.

La. Cap. She's not fourteen.

Nurse. I'll lay fourteen of my teeth,—

And yet, to my teen be it spoken, I have but four,—

She is not fourteen. How long is it now

To Lammas-tide?

La. Cap. A fortnight and odd days.

Nurse. Even or odd, of all days in the year,

Come Lammas-eye at night shall she be fourteen.

Susan and she—God rest all Christian souls!—

Were of an age: well, Susan is with God;

She was too good for me: but, as I said,

On Lammas-eye at night shall she be fourteen;

That shall she, marry: I remember it well.

'Tis since the earthquake now eleven years;

And she was wean'd,—I never shall forget it,—

Of all the days of the year, upon that day:

For I had then laid wormwood to my dog,

Sitting in the sun under the dove-house wall;

My lord and you were then at Mantua:—
Nay, I do bear a brain:—but, as I said,
When it did taste the wormwood on the nipple 30
Of my dug and felt it bitter, pretty fool,
To see it tetchy and fall out with the dug!
'Shake quoth the dove-house: 'twas no need, I row
To bid me trudge:
And since that time it is eleven years;
For then she could stand alone; nay, by the rood,
She could have run and waddled all about;
For even the day before, she broke her brow:
And then my husband—God be with his soul! A
Was a merry man—took up the child: 40
'Yea,' quoth he, 'dost thou fall upon thy face?
Thou wilt fall backward when thou hast more wit;
Wilt thou not, Jule?' and, by my holidame,
The pretty wretch left crying and said 'Ay.'
To see, now, how a jest shall come about!
I warrant, an I should live a thousand years,
I never should forget it: 'Wilt thou not, Jule?' quoth he:
And, pretty fool, it stinted and said 'Ay.'
La. Cap. Enough of this; I pray thee, hold thy peace.
Nurse. Yes, madam: yet I cannot choose but laugh,
To think it should leave crying and say 'Ay.'
And yet, I warrant, it had upon its brow
A bump as big as a young cockerel's stone;
A parlous knock; and it cried bitterly:
'Yea,' quoth my husband, 'fall'st upon thy face?
Thou wilt fall backward when thou comest to age;
Wilt thou not, Jule?'; it stinted and said 'Ay.'
Jule. And stint thou too, I pray thee, nurse, say I.
Nurse. Peace, I have done. God mark thee to his grace!
Thou wast the prettiest babe that e'er I nursed:
An I might live to see thee married once, 61
I have my wish.
La. Cap. Marry, that 'merry' is the very theme
I came to talk of. Tell me, daughter Juliet,
How stands your disposition to be married?
Jul. It is an honour that I dream not of.
Nurse. An honour! were not I thine only nurse,
I would say thou hadst suck'd wisdom from thy teat.
La. Cap. Well, think of marriage now; younger than you,
Here in Verona, ladies of esteem,
Are made already mothers: by my count,
I was your mother much upon these years
That you are now a maid. Thus then in brief:
The valiant Paris seeks you for his love.
Nurse. A man, young lady! lady, such a man
As all the world—why, he's a man of wax.
La. Cap. Verona's summer hath not such a flower.
Nurse. Nay, he's a flower; in faith, a very flower.
La. Cap. What say you? can you love the gentleman?
This night you shall behold him at our feast; 80
Read o'er the volume of young Paris' face
And find delight writ there with beauty's pen;
Examine every married lineament
And see how one another lends content,
And what obscured in this fair volume lies
Found written in the margin of his eyes.
This precious book of love, this unbound love
To beautify him, only lacks a cover:
The fish lives in the sea, and 'tis much pride
For fair without the faim within to hide:
That book in many eyes doth share the gl
That in gold clasps locks in the golden story
So shall you share all that he doth possess,
By having him, making yourself no less.
Nurse. No less! nay, bigger; women by men.
La. Cap. Speak briefly, can you like of
love?
Jul. I'll look to like, if looking liking
But no more deep will I endart mine eye
Than your consent gives strength to make me.

Enter a Servant.
Serv. Madam, the guests are come, served up, you called, my young lady asks the nurse cursed in the pantry, and every thing extremity. I must hence to wait; I beseech you follow straight.
La. Cap. We follow thee. [Exit Serv. Juliet, the county stays.
Nurse. Go, girl, seek happy nights to days.

Scene IV. A street.

Enter Romeo, Mercutio, Benvolio, with six Maskers, Torch-bearers, and others.
Rom. What, shall this speech be spoke! excuse?
Or shall we on without apology?
Ben. The date is out of such prolixity.
We'll have no Cupid hoodwink'd with a sea
Bearing a Tartar's painted bow of lath,
Scaring the ladies like a crow-keeper;
Nor no without-book prologue, faintly spoke
After the prompter, for our entrance:
But let them measure us by what they will;
We'll measure them a measure, and be more
Romeo. Give me a torch: I am not for ambling:
Being but heavy, I will bear the light.
Mer. Nay, gentle Romeo, we must have dance.
Rom. Not I, believe me: you have do
With nimble soles: I have a soul of lead
So stakes me to the ground I cannot move.
Mer. You are a lover; borrow Cupid's
And soor with them above a common bond.
Rom. I am too sore enpierced with his To soar with his light feathers, and so bound
I cannot bound a pitch above dull woe:
Under love's heavy burden do I sink.
Mer. And, to sink in it, should you love;
Too great oppression for a tender thing.
Rom. Is love a tender thing? it is too Too rude, too boisterous, and it pricks like
Mer. If love be rough with you, be rough love;
Prick love for prickung, and you beat love
Give me a case to put my visage in:
A visor for a visor! what care I kurious eye doth quote deformities?
are the beetle brows shall blight for me.

Come, knock and enter; and no sooner in,
very man betake him to his legs.

A torch for me: let wantons light of heart
the senseless rushes with their heels, an proverb'd with a grand platitude; a candle-holder, and look on.

game was ne'er so fair, and I am done.

Tut, dun's the mouse, the constable's own word:
art dun, we'll draw thee from the mire is si-reverence love, wherein thou stick'st the ears.

Come, we burn daylight, ho!

Nay, that's not so.

I mean, sir, in delay
aste our lights in vain, like lamps by day.
our good meaning, for our judgement sits ines in that ere once in our five wits.

If we mean well in going to this mask;
is no wit to go.

Why, may one ask?

I dream'd a dream to-night.

And so did I.

Well, what was yours?

That dreamers often lie.

In bed asleep, while they do dream
ings true.

O, then, I see Queen Mab hath been with you.

the fairies' midwife, and she comes no bigger than an agate-stone fore-finger of an alderman, with a team of little atoms art men's noses as they lie asleep;
agon-spokes made of long spinners' legs,
wer of the wings of grasshoppers,
aces of the smallest spider's web,
llars of the moonshine's watery beams,
hip of cricket's bone, the lash of film,
aggon a small grey-coated gnat,
if so big as a round little worm from the lazy finger of a maid; ariot is an empty hazel-nut by the joiner squirrel or old grub, ar o' mind the fairies' coachmakers.

this state she gallops night by night
gh lovers' brains, and then they dream of love;
ourtiers' knees, that dream on court'sies night;

ty fingers, who straight dream on bees,
dies' lips, who straight on kisses dream,
of the angry Mab with blisters plagues,
e their breaths with sweetmeats tainted e:
me she gallops o'er a courtier's nose,
en dreams he of smoking out a suit;
me comes she with a tithe-pig's tail
g a parson's nose as a lies asleep, reams he of another benefice:
me she driveth o'er a soldier's neck,
en dreams he of cutting foreign throats, es, ambuscadoes, Spanish blades,
the five-fathom deep; and then anon
in his ear, at which he starts and wakes, ing this frightened swears a prayer or two

That this is very Mab

That plats the manes of horses in the night,
And bakes the elf-locks in foul slutish hairs,
Which once untangled much misfortunate bodes:
This is the bag, when maids lie on their backs,
That presses them and learns them first to bear,
Making them women of good carriage:

This is she—

Rom. Peace, peace, Mercutio, peace! Thou talk'st of nothing:

Mer. True, I talk of dreams, Which are the children of an idle brain, Begot of nothing but vain fantasy, Which is as thin of substance as the air And more inconstant than the wind, who woe! Even now the frozen bosom of the north, And, being angered,uff's away from hence, Turning his face to the dew-dropping south.

Ben. This wind, you talk of, blows us from ourselves:

Supper is done, and we shall come too late.

Rom. I fear, too early: for my mind misgives
Some consequence yet hanging in the stars Shall bitterly begin his fearful date
With this night's revels and expire the term
Of a despised life closed in my breast
By some vile forfeit of untimely death.
But He, that hath the steerage of my course, Direct my sail! On, lusty gentlemen.

Ben. Strike, drum.

Scene V. A hall in Capulet's house.

Musicians waiting. Enter Servingmen, with napkins.

First Serv. Where's Potpan, that he helps not to take away? He shift a trencher; he scrape a trencher!

Sec. Serv. When good manners shall lie all in one or two men's hands and they unwashed too, 'tis a foul thing.

First Serv. Away with the joint-stools, remove the court-cupboard, look to the plate. Good thou, save me a piece of marchpane; and, as thou lov'st me, let the porter let in Susan Grindstone and Nell. Antony, and Potpan!

Sec. Serv. Ay, boy, ready.

First Serv. You are looked for and called for, asked for and sought for, in the great chamber.

Sec. Serv. We cannot be here and there too. Cheery, boys; be brisk awhile, and the longer liver take all.

Enter Capulet, with Juliet and others of his house, meeting the Guests and Maskers.

Cap. Welcome, gentlemen! ladies that have their toes

Unplugged with corn will have a bout with you. Ah ha, my mistresses! which of you all? Will now deny to dance? she that makes dainty. She, I'll swear, hath corns; am I come near ye now?

Welcome, gentlemen! I have seen the day That I have worn a visor and could tell A whispering tale in a fair lady's ear, Such as would please: 'tis gone, 'tis gone, 'tis gone.

You are welcome, gentlemen! Come, musicians, play.
You are a saucy boy: is 'tis so, indeed?
This trick may chance to scathe you, I fear.

You must contrarily marry: 'tis time.
Well said, my hearts! You are a prince now;
Be quiet, or—more light, more light! For I'll make you quiet. What, cheerly, my heart?

Tyb. Patience performe with willif tongue and meeting.
Maketh no flesh tremble in their different gait; I will withdraw: but this intrusion shall now seem sweet convert to bitter gall.

Rom. [To Juliet] If I profane with my worthiest hand
This holy shrine, the gentle fine is this;
My lips, two blushing pilgrims, ready stand
To smooth that rough touch with a tender hand.

Jul. Good pilgrim, you do wrong your hand much,
Which mannerly devotion shows in this;
For saints have hands that pilgrims' hands enrich,
And palm to palm is holy palmer's kiss.

Rom. Have not saints lips, and holy palmer's?
Jul. Ay, pilgrim, lips that they must with a prayer.
Rom. O, then, dear saint, let lips do what I dare.
They pray, grant thou, lest faith turn to toil.

Jul. Saints do not move, though grand prayers' sake.

Rom. Then move not, while my prayer's in.
I take.
Thus from my lips, by yours, my sin is purg'd.
Jul. Then have my lips the sin that they did took.

Rom. Sin from my lips? O trespass swifter urged!
Give me my sin again.

Nurse. Madam, your mother craves a word with you.

Rom. What is her mother?

Nurse. Marry, bache.

Her mother is the lady of the house,
And a good lady, and a wise and virtuous:
I nursed her daughter, that you talk'd with me,
Tell you, he that can lay hold of her
Shall have the chinks.

Rom. Is she a Capulet?

O dear account! my life is my foe's debt.

Ben. Away, be gone! the sport is at an end.

Rom. Ay, so I fear; the more is my unman.

Cap. Nay, gentlemen, prepare not to be
We have a trilling foolish banquet towards
Is it e'en so? why, then, I thank you all;
I thank you, honest gentlemen; good night
More torches here! Come on then, let's go.

Ah, sirrah, by my fay, it waxes late:
I'll to my rest.

[Exeunt all but Juliet and Nurse.

Jul. Come hither, nurse. What is your business?

Nurse. The son and heir of old Tibério.

Jul. What's he that now is going out of Nurse. Marry, that, I think, be young Fi.

Jul. What's he that follows there, that Nurse. I know not.

Go, ask his name: if he be married, 20
ve is like to be my wedding bed.
ev. His name is Romeo, and a Montague;
v y son of your great enemy.
My only love sprung from my only hate! ly seen unknown, and known too late! i4z
But birth of love it is to me, must love a loathed enemy.
. What's this? what's this?
A rhyme I learn'd even now danced withal. [O'cane calls within 'Juliet.' - Anon, anon! et's away; the strangers all are gone. [Exeunt.

ACT II.

PROLOGUE.

Enter Chorus.
Now old desire doth in his death-bed lie, 26
Oung affection gapes to be his heir; 27
For which love groan'd for and would ender Juliet match'd, is now not fair. 28
meo is beloved and loves again, bewitched by the charm of looks, 29
's foes supposed he must complain, 30
he steal love's sweet bait from fearful
k's; 31
'd a foe, he may not have access 32
athe such vows as lovers use to swear; 33 as much in love, her means much less 34 et her now-beloved any where: 35 ion lends them power, time means, to 36
ng extremities with extreme sweet. [Exit.

1. A lane by the wall of Capulet's orchard.

Enter Romeo.
Can I go forward when my heart is 37
k, dull earth, and find thy centre out. 38 the wall, and leaps down within it. 39 nt Benvenio and Mercutio.
Romeo! my cousin Mercutio! 40
He is wise; 41
my life, hath stol'n him home to bed. 42
he ran this way, and leap'd this orchard ; 43
Mercutio.
Nay, I'll conjure too. 44
humors! madman! passion! lover! 45 ou in the likeness of a sigh: 46
one rhyme, and I am satisfied; 47
' Ay me!' pronounce but 'love' and 48
my gossip Venus one fair word, 49 name for her purblind son and heir, 50 am Cupid, he that shot so trim, 51
Gophetua loved the beggar-maid! 52
't not, he stireth not, he moveth not; 53
'dead, and I must conjure him. 54
'se by Rosaline's bright eyes, 55
gh forehead and her scarlet lip 56 e foot, straight leg and quivering thigh

And the demesnes that there adjacent lie, 20
That in thy likeness thou appear to us! 21
Ben. An if he hear thee, thou wilt anger him. 22
Mer. This cannot anger him: 'twould anger him
To raise a spirit in his mistress' circle 23
Of some strange nature, letting it there stand 24
Till she had laid it and conjured it down; 25
That were some spice: my invocation 26
Is fair and honest, and in his mistress' name 27
I conjure only but to raise up him. 28
Ben. Come, he hath hid himself among these trees, 29
To be consorted with the humorous night: 30
Blind is his love and best befits the dark. 31
Mer. If love be blind, love cannot hit the mark. 32
Now will he sit under a medlar tree, 33
And wish his mistress were that kind of fruit 34
As maids call medlars, when they laugh alone. 35
O, Romeo, that she were, O, that she were 36
An open et cetera, thou a poperin pear! 37
Romeo, good night: I'll to my truckle-bed; 38
This field-bed is too cold for me to sleep: 39
Come, shall we go? 40
Ben. Go, then; for 'tis in vain 41
To seek him here that means not to be found. [Exeunt.

SCENE II. Capulet's orchard.

Enter Romeo.
Rom. He jests at scars that never felt a wound. [Juliet appears above at a window.
But, soft! what light through yonder window breaks? 42
It is the east, and Juliet is the sun. 43
Arise, fair sun, and kill the envious moon, 44
Who is already sick and pale with grief, 45
That thou her maid art far more fair than she: 46
Be not her maid, since she is envious; 47
Her vestal livery is but sick and green 48
And none but fools do wear it; cast it off. 49
It is my lady, O, it is my love! 50
O, that she knew she were! 51
She speaks, yet she says nothing: what of that? 52
Her eye discourses; I will answer it. 53
I am too bold, 'tis not to me she speaks: 54
Two of the fairest stars in all the heaven, 55
Having some business, do entreat her eyes 56
To twinkle in their spheres till they return. 57
What if her eyes were there, they in her head? 58
The brightness of her cheek would shame those stars, 59
As daylight doth a lamp; her eyes in heaven 60
Would through the airy region stream so bright. 61
That birds would sing and think it were not night. 62
See, how she leans her cheek upon her hand! 63
O, that I were a glove upon that hand, 64
That I might touch that cheek! 65
Jul. Ay me!
Rom. She speaks: O, speak again, bright angel! for thou art 66
As glorious to this night, being o'er my head, 67
As is a winged messenger of heaven 68
Unto the white-upturned wondering eyes 69
Of mortals that fall back to gaze on him 70
When he bestrides the lary-pacing clouds
And sails upon the bosom of the air.

Jul. O Romeo, Romeo! wherefore art thou
Romeo?

Deny thy father and refuse thy name;
Or, if thou wilt not, be but sworn my love,
And I'll no longer be a Capulet.

Rom. [Aside] Shall I hear more, or shall I speak at this?

Jul. 'Tis but thy name that is my enemy;
Thou art thyself, though not a Montague.
What's Montague? it is nor hand, nor foot,
Nor arm, nor face, nor any other part
Belonging to a man. O, be some other name!
What's in a name? that which we call a rose
By any other name would smell as sweet;
So Romeo would, were he not Romeo call'd,
Retain that dear perfection which he owes Without that title. Romeo, dodd thy name,
And for that name which is no part of thee
Take all myself.

Rom. I take thee at thy word:
Call me but love, and I'll be new baptized;
Henceforth I never will be Romeo.

Jul. What man art thou that thus bescreed'st in night
So stumbllest on my counsel?

Rom. I know not how to tell thee who I am:
My name, dear saint, is hateful to myself,
Because it is an enemy to thee;
Had I it written, I would tear the word.

Jul. My parks have not yet drunk a hundred words
Of that tongue's utterance, yet I know the sound;
Art thou not Romeo and a Montague?

Rom. Neither, fair saint, if either thee dislike.

Jul. How camest thou hither, tell me, and wherefore?
The orchard walls are high and hard to climb,
And the place death, considering who thou art,
If any of my kinsmen find thee here.

Rom. With love's light wings did I o'er-perch these walls;
For stony limits cannot hold love out,
And what love can do that dares love attempt;
Therefore thy kinsmen are no let to me.

Jul. If they do see thee, they will murder
thee.

Rom. Allack, there lies more peril in thine eye
Than twenty of their swords; look thou but sweet,
And I am proof against their enmity.

Jul. I would not for the world they saw thee
here.

Rom. I have night's cloak to hide me from their sight;
And but thou love me, let them find me here:
My life were better ended by their hate,
Than death prorogued, wanting of thy love.

Jul. By whose direction found'st thou out this place?

Rom. By love, who first did prompt me to inquire;

He lent me counsel and I lent him eyes
I am no pilot; yet, wert thou as far
As that vast shore wash'd with the farthest sea,
I would adventure for such merchandise.

Jul. Thou know'st the mask of night is on my face,
Else would a maiden blush beaptain my cheek

For that which thou hast heard me speak toward I would dwell on form, fain, fain deny
What I have spoke: but farewell compliance
Dost thou love me? I know thou wilt say
And I will take thy word: yet, if thou swe
Thou mayst prove false; at lovers' perfure
They say, Jove laughs. O gentle Romeo,
If thou dost love, pronounce it faithfully:
Or if thou think'st I am too quickly won,
I'll frown and be perverse and say thee na
So thou wilt woo; but else, not for the won.
In truth, fair Montague, I am too fond,
And therefore thou mayst think my company
But trust me, gentleman, I'll prove more tr
Than those that have more cunning to be st
I should have been more strange, I must o
But that thou overheard'st, ere I was are
My true love's passion: therefore pardon
And not impute this yielding to light love,
Which the dark night hath so discovered.

Rom. I stay, by yonder blessed moon I
That tips with silver all these fruit-tree top
Jul. O, swear not by the moon, the stant moon,
That monthly changes in her circled orb,
Lest that thy love prove likewise variable.

Rom. What shall I swear by?

Jul. Do not swear
Or, if thou wilt, swear by thy gracious self
Which is the god of my idolatry,
And I'll believe thee.

Rom. If my heart's dea
Jul. Well, do not swear: although I thee,
I have no joy of this contract to-night:
It is too rash, too unadvised, too sudden;
Too like the lightning, which doth cease
Ere one can say 'It lightens.' Sweet, good,
This bud of love, by summer's ripening breath
May prove a beauteous flower when next we meet.

Good night, good nig;st! as sweet repose
Come to thy heart as that within my breast.

Rom. O, wilt thou leave me so unsat
Jul. What satisfaction canst thou not ight?

Rom. The exchange of thy love's faith for mine.

Jul. I gave thee mine before thou quest it:
And yet I would it were to give again.

Rom. Wouldst thou withdraw it? I purpose, love,

Jul. But to be frank, and give it thee
And yet I wish but for the thing I have;
My bounty is as boundless as the sea,
My love as deep; the more I give to thee
The more I have, for both are infinite.

I hear some noise within; dear love, adie
Anon, good nur e! Sweet Montague,

Rom. Stay but a little, I will come again. [Exi

Rom. O blessed, blessed night! I am in Being in night, all this is but a dream,
Too flattering-sweet to be substantial.

Re-enter Juliet, above.

Jul. Three words, dear Romeo, a night indeed.
ROMEO AND JULIET.

Scene III. Friar Laurence's cell.

Fri. L. The grey-eyed morn smiles on the frowning light, Chequering the eastern clouds with streaks of light,
And flecked darkness like a drunkard reels
From forth day's path and Titan's fiery wheels:
Now, ere the sun advance his burning eye,
The day to cheer and night's dank dew to dry,
I must up-fill this osier cage of ours:
With baleful weeds and precious-juiced flowers.
The earth that's nature's mother is her tomb;
What is her burying grave that is her womb,
And from her womb children of divers kind
We suckling on her natural bosom find,
Many for many virtues excellent,
None but for some and yet all different.
O, mickle is the powerful grace that lies
In herbs, plants, stones, and their true qualities:
For nought so vile that on the earth doth live
But to the earth some special good doth give,
Nor aught so good but strain'd from that fair use
Revolts from true birth, strumming on abuse:
Virtue itself turns vice, being misapplied;
And vice sometimes by action dignified.
Within the infant rind of this small flower
Poison hath residence and medicine power:
For this, being smelt, with that part cheers each part;
Being tasted, slays all senses with the heart.
Two such opposed kings encamp them still
In man as well as herbs, grace and rude will;
And where the worse is predominant,
Full soon the canker death eats up that plant.

Enter Romeo.

Fri. L. Good morrow, father.

Rom. Good morrow, father.

Fri. L. Benedicite!

Rom. What early tongue so sweet saluteth me?

Fri. L. Young son, it argues a distemper'd head
So soon to bid good morn to thy bed:
Care keeps his watch in every old man's eye;
And where care lodges, sleep will never lie;
But where unbruised youth with unstuff'd brain
Doth couch his limbs, there golden sleep doth reign:
Therefore thy earliness doth me assure
Thou art up-roused by some distemper'd"temper; 40
Or if not so, then here I hit it right,
Our Romeo hath not been in bed to-night.

Rom. That last is true; the sweeter rest was mine.

Fri. L. God pardon sin! I wast thou with Rosaline?

Rom. With Rosaline, my ghostly father? no;
I have forgot that name, and that name's woe.

Fri. L. That's my good son: but where hast thou been, then?

Rom. I'll tell thee, ere thou ask it me again.
I have been feasting with mine enemy,
Where on a sudden one hath wounded me,
That's by me wounded: both our remedies
Within thy help and holy physic lies:
I bear no hatred, blessed man, for, lo,
My intercession likewise steads my foe.
Fri. L. Be plain, good son, and homely in thy drift;
Riddling confession finds but riddling shift.
Rom. Then plainly know my heart's dear love is set.
On the fair daughter of rich Capulet:
As mine on hers, so hers is set on mine; 59
And all combined, save what thou must combine
By holy marriage: when and where and how
We met, we woo'd and made exchange of vow,
I'll tell thee as we pass; but this I pray,
That thou consent to marry us to-day.
Fri. L. Holy Saint Francis, what a change is here!
Is Rosaline, whom thou didst love so dear,
So soon forsaken? young men's love then lies
Not truly in their hearts, but in their eyes.
Jesu Maria, what a deal of brine
Hath wash'd thy sallow cheeks for Rosaline! 70
How much salt water thrown away in waste,
The season love, that of it doth not taste!
The sun not yet thy sighs from heaven clears,
Thy old groans ring yet in my ancient ears;
Lo, here upon thy cheek the stain doth sit
Of an old tear that is not wash'd off yet:
If ever thou wast thyself and these woes thine,
Thou and these woes were all for Rosaline:
And art thou changed? pronounce this sentence then,
Women may fall, when there's no strength in men.
Rom. Thou chid'st me oft for loving Rosaline.
Fri. L. For doting, not for loving, pupil mine.
Rom. And bad'st me buy love.
Fri. L. Not in a grave,
To lay one in, another out to have.
Rom. I pray thee, chide not: she whom I love now Doth grace for grace and love for love allow;
The other did not so.
Fri. L. O, she knew well.
Thy love did read by rote and could not spell.
But come, young waverer, come, go with me,
In one respect I'll thy assistant be;
For this alliance may so happy prove,
To turn your households' rancour to pure love.
Rom. O, let us hence; I stand on sudden haste.
Fri. L. Wisely and slow; they stumble that run fast.
[Exeunt.

Scene IV. A street.
Enter Benvenio and Mercutio.

Mer. Where the devil should this Romeo be?
Came he not home to-night?
Ben. Not to his father's; I spoke with his man.
Mer. Ah, that same pale hard-hearted wench, that Rosaline,
Torments him so, that he will sure run mad.
Ben. Tybalt, the kinsman of old Capulet,
Hath sent a letter to his father's house.
Mer. A challenge, on my life,
Ben. Romeo will answer it.
Mer. Any man that can write may answer a letter.
Ben. Nay, he will answer the letter's master, how he dares, being dared.
Mer. Alas, poor Romeo! he is already dead;
stabbed with a white wench's black eye; shot thorough the ear with a love-song; the very pin of his heart cleft with the blind bow-boy's shaft: and is he a man to encounter Tybalt?
Ben. Why, what is Tybalt?
Mer. More than prince of cats, I can tell O, he is the courageous captain of complem-He fights as you sing prick-song, keeps up distance, and proportion; rests me his mer-est, one, two, and the third in your bosom very butcher of a silk button, a duellist, a list; a gentleman of the very first house, or first and second cause: ah, the immortal pung the punto reverso! the hai!

Enter the what?
Mer. The box of such antic, lisping, affa-fantasticoes; these new tuners of accents! Jesu, a very good blade! a very tall man very good whore! Why, is not this a for able thing, grandsire, that we should be af-flicted with these strange flies, these fas mongers, these perdona-mi's, who stand so on the new form, that they cannot sit at eas the old bench? O, their bones, their bones.

Enter Romeo.

Ben. Here comes Romeo, here comes Ro.
Mer. Without his roe, like a dined her O flesh, flesh, how art thou fishified! Now for the numbers that Petrarch flowed in: Let his lady was but a kitchen-wench; marry had a better love to be-thyme her: Didio and Cieopatra a gipsy: Helen and Hero hiding harlots; Thisbe a grey eye or so, but not purpoe. Signior Romeo, bon jour! then French salutation to your French slop. Yo us the counterfeit fairly last night.
Rom. Good morrow to you both. What terfeit did I give you?
Mer. The slip, sir, the slip; can you no ceive?
Rom. Pardon, good Mercutio, my busine great; and in such a case as mine a man stran courtesy.
Mer. That's as much as to say, such a yours contains a man to bow in the hams.
Rom. Meaning, to court'sy.
Mer. Thou hast most kindly hit it.
Rom. A most courteous exposition.
Mer. Nay, I am the very pink of courte
Rom. Pink for flower.
Mer. Right.
Rom. Why, then is my pump well flow
Mer. Well said: follow me this jest no thou hast worn out thy pump, that when the sole of it is worn, the jest may remain all wearing sole singular.
Rom. O single-soled jest, solely singu the singleness!
Mer. Come between us, good Benvenio wits faint.
Rom. Switch and spurs, switch and sp-
Mer. Nay, if thy wits run the wild-goose I'll cry a match.
Mer. Nay, I have done, for thou hast more of the wild in one of thy wits than, I am sure, I have whole five: was I with you there for the g
Rom. Thou wast never with me for an when thou was not there for the goose.
Mer. I will bite thee by the ear for that
Rom. Nay, good goose, bite not.
Thy wit is a very bitter sweeting; it is not sharp sauce.

And is it not well served in to a sweet pie?

O, here's a wit of cheveril, that stretches an inch narrow to an ell broad!

I stretch it out for that word 'broad,'
I added to the goose, proves thee far and a broad goose.

Why, is not this better now than grocer's love? now art thou sociable, now art thou not; now art thou what thou art, by art as is by nature; for this drivelling love is like at natural, that runs lolling up and down to his baulbe in a hole.

Stop there, stop there.

Thou desir' est me to stop in my tale
at the hair.

Thou wouldst else have made thy tale stop.

O, thou art deceived; I would have made it: for I was come to the whole depth of my and meant, indeed, to occupy the argument iger.

Here's goodly gear!

Enter Nurse and Peter.

A sail, a sail!

Two, two; a shirt and a smock.

Peter! 210

Anon!

My fan, Peter.

Good Peter, to hide her face; for her fan's for aught I know.

God ye good morrow, gentlemen.

God ye good den, fair gentlewoman.

Is it good den?

'Tis no less, I tell you, for the bawdy
the dial is now upon the prick of noon. 119
Out upon you! what a man are you!

One, gentlewoman, that God hath made myself to mar.

By my troth, it is well said; 'for him-man,' quoth a? Gentlemen, can any of you where I may find the young Romeo?

I can tell you; but young Romeo will when you have found him than he was you sought him: I am the youngest of that for fault of a worse.

Say you well.

Yea, is the worst well? very well took,
wisely, wisely.

If you be he, sir, I desire some confidthat you.

She will indite him to some supper.

A bawd, a bawd, a bawd! So ho!

What hast thou found?

No hare, sir; unless a hare, sir, in a pie, that is something stale and hoar ere it [Sing.]

An old hare hoar,
And an old hare hoar,
Is very good meat in lent;
But a hare that is hoar
Is too much for a score,
When it hoars ere it be spent, will you come to your father's we'll to thither
I will follow you.

Mer. Farewell, ancient lady; farewell, [singing] 'lady, lady, lady.' 151

[Exeunt Mercutio and Benvolio.

Nurse. Marry, farewell! I pray you, sir, what saucy merchant was this, that was so full of his ropery?

Rom. A gentleman, nurse, that loves to hear himself talk, and will speak more in a minute than he will stand to in a month.

Nurse. An a' speak any thing against me,
I'll take him down, an' a' were lustier than he is, and twenty such Jacks; and if I cannot, I'll find those that shall. Scurvy knave! I am none of his flirt-gills; I am none of his skins-mates.
And thou must stand by too, and suffer every knave to use me at his pleasure.

Peter. I saw no man use you at his pleasure;
if I had, my weapon should quickly have been out, I warrant you: I dare draw as soon as another man, if I see occasion in a good quarrel, and the law on my side.

Nurse. Now, afore God, I am so vexed, that every part about me quivers. Scurvy knave! I pray you, sir, a word: and as I told you, my young lady bade me inquire you out; what she bade me say, I will keep to myself; but first let me tell ye, if ye should lead her into a fool's paradise, as they say, it were a very gross kind of behaviour, as they say: for the gentlewoman is young; and, therefore, if you should deal double with her, truly it were an ill thing to be offered to any gentlewoman, and very rack dealing.

Rom. Nurse, commend me to thy lady and mistress. I protest unto thee—

Nurse. Good heart, and, I faith, I will tell her as much: Lord, Lord, she will be a joyful woman.

What wilt thou tell her, nurse? thou dost not mark me.

Nurse. I will tell her, sir, that you do protest; which, as I take it, is a gentlemanlike offer.

Rom. Did her devise

Some means to come to shift this afternoon;
And there she shall at Friar Laurence' cell
Be shrived and married. Here is for thy pains.

Nurse. No, truly, sir; not a penny.

Rom. Go to; I say you shall.

Nurse. This afternoon, sir? well, she shall be there.

Rom. And stay, good nurse, behind the abbey
wall:
Within this hour my man shall be with thee, 200
And bring thee cords made like a tackled stair;
Which to the high top-gallant of my joy
Must be my convoy in the secret night.
Farewell; be trusty, and I'll quit thy pains:
Farewell; commend me to thy mistress.

Nurse. Now God in heaven bless thee! Hark
you, sir.

Rom. What say'st thou, my dear nurse?

Nurse. Is your man secret? Did you ne'er hear say,
Two may keep counsel, putting one away?

Rom. I warrant thee, my man's as true as steel.

Nurse. Well, sir; my mistress is the sweetest lady—Lord, Lord! when 'twas a little prating thing:—O, there is a nobleman in town, one
Paris, that would fain lay knife aboard; but she, good soul, had as lief see a toad, a very toad, as see him. I anger her sometimes and tell her that Paris is the properer man; but, I'll warrant you, when I say so, she looks as pale as any clout in the versal world. Doth not rosemary and Romeo begin both with a letter?

Rom. Ay, nurse; what of that? both with an R.

Nurse. Ah, mock'er! that's the dog's name; R is for the—No; I know it begins with some other letter—and she hath the prettiest sententious of it, you and rosemary, that it would do you good to hear it.

Rom. Command me to thy lady.

Nurse. Ay, a thousand times. [Exit Romeo.]

Peter!

Pet. Anon!

Nurse. Peter, take my fan, and go before, and apace. [Exit Nurse.]

SCENE V. Capiot's orchard.

Enter JULIET.

JUL. The clock struck nine when I did send the nurse;
In half an hour she promised to return.
Perchance she cannot meet him; that's not so, 250
O, she is laziest! love's heralds should be thoughts,
Which ten times faster glide than the sun's beams,
Driving back shadows over hoving hills:
Therefore do nimble-pinion'd doves draw love,
And therefore hath the wind-swift Cupid wings.
Now is the sun upon the highest hill
Of this day's journey, and from mine till twelve 300
Is three long hours, yet she is not come.
Had she affections and warm youthful blood,
She would be as swift in motion as a bali;
My words would bandy her to my sweet love,
And his to me:
‡But old folks, many feign as they were dead;
Unwieldy, slow, and heavy pale as lead.
O God, she comes!

Enter Nurse and Peter.

O honey nurse, what news?
Hast thou met with him? Send thy man away.

Nurse. Peter, stay at the gate. [Exit Peter.]

JUL. Now, good sweet nurse,—O Lord, why look'st thou sad?

Though news be sad, yet tell them merrily;
If good, thou shaminest the music of sweet news
By playing it to me with so sour a face.

Nurse. I am a-ways, give me leave awhile:
Fie, how my bones ache! what a jaunt have
I had!

JUL. I would thou hast my bones, and I thy news.
Nay, come, I pray thee, speak; good, good nurse, speak.

Nurse. Jesu, what haste? can you not stay as see awhile?
Do you not see that I am out of breath?

JUL. How art thou out of breath, when thou hast breath
To say to me that thou art out of breath?
The excuse that thou dost make in this delay
Is longer than the tale thou dost excuse.
Is thy news good, or bad? answer to that;
Say either, and I'll stay the circumstance;
Let me be satisfied, 'tis good or bad?

Nurse. Well, you have made a simple ch you know not how to choose a man: Romeo not he; though his face be better than any yet his leg excels all men's; and for a hand a foot, and a body, though they be not talked on, yet they are past compare: he i the flower of courtesy, but, I'll warrant his gentle as a lamb. Go thy ways, wench; 450
God. What, have you dined at home?

JUL. No, no; but all this did I know bet
What says he of our marriage? what of that?

Nurse. Lord, how my head aches! w head have I!
It beats as it would fall in twenty pieces.
My back o' t' other side,—O, my back back!
Beshrew, your heart for sending me about,
To catch my death with jaunting up and do

JUL. I' faith, I am sorry that thou art not Sweet, sweet, sweet nurse, tell me, what my love?

Nurse. Your love says, like an honest g man, and a courteous, and a kind, and a some, and, I warrant, a virtuous,—Where is another?

JUL. Where is my mother? why, s within;
Where should she be? How oddly thou rep
'Your love says, like an honest gentleman,
Where is your mother?'

O God's lady dear!
Are you so hot? marry, come up, I trow;
Is this the poultice for my aching bones?
Henceforward do your messages yourself.

JUL. Here's such a coil! come, what Romeo?

Nurse. Have you got leave to go to
to-day?

JUL. Then hie you hence to Friar rence' cell;
There stays a husband to make you a wife:
Now comes the wanton blood up in your c
They'll be in scarlet straight at any news.
Hie you to church; I must another way,
To fetch a ladder, by which your love
Must climb a bird's nest soon when it is da
I am the drudging and toil in your delight,
But you shall bear the burden soon at high
Go; I'll to dinner; hie you to the cell.

JUL. Hie to high fortune! Honest farewell. [Exit.]

SCENE VI. Friar Laurence's cell.

Enter FRIAR LAURENCE and ROMEO.

FRI. L. So smile the heavens upon holy act,
That after hours with sorrow chide us not?
Rom. Amen, amen! but come what sorrow
It cannot countervail the exchange of joy.
That one short minute gives me in her sigh
Do thou but close our hands with holy word
Then love-devouring death do what he dare
It is enough I may but call her mine.

FRI. L. These violent delights have in their triumph die, like fire and powder, so ich as they kiss consume: the sweetest honey athome in his own deliciousness.
in the taste confounds the appetite:
refrain, hasting not: long love doth so;
swift arises as tardy as too slow.

Enter JULIET.
e comes the lady: O, so light a foot
er'e wear out the everlasting flint:
ver may bestride the gossamer illes in the wanton summer air, yet not fall; so light is vanity.
ul. Good even to my ghostly confessor.
rt. L. Romeo shall thank thee, daughter, for us both.
ul. As much to him, else is his thanks too much.

Ah, Juliet, if the measure of thy joy es'p't like mine and that thy skill be more lazon it, then swiften with thy breath beighbour air, and let rich music's tongue old the imagined happiness that both ive in either by this dear encounter.
ul. Conceit, more rich in matter than in words, of his substance, not of ornament:
are but beggars that can count their worth;
your true love is grown to such excess not sum up sum of half my wealth.
ul. L. Come, come with me, and we will make short work;
by your leaves, you shall not stay alone
y church incorporate two in one.

[Exeunt.]

ACT III.

SCENE I. A public place.

Iter MERCUTIO, BENVOLIO, Page, and Servants.

i. I pray thee, good Mercutio, let's retire:
day is hot, the Capulets abroad,
if we meet, we cannot sce a brawl:
now, these hot days, is the mad blood
stirring.

r. Thou art like one of those fellows that he enters the confines of a tavern claps me word upon the table and says 'God send me end of thee!' and by the operation of the d cup draws it on the drawer, when indeed is no need.

ii. Am I like such a fellow?

r. Come, come, thou art as hot a Jack in ood as any in Italy, and as soon moved noody, and as soon moody to be moved.

ii. And what to?

r. Nay, an there were two such, we should one shortly, for one would kill the other.
why, thou wilt quarrel with a man that hair more, or a hair less, in his beard, ou hast: thou wilt quarrel with a man for not, having no other reason but be-ou hast hazel eyes: what eye but such would spy out such a quarrel? Thy is as full of quarrels as an egg is full of and yet thy head hath been beaten as as an egg for quarrelling: thou hast quarrelled with a man for coughing in the street, because he hath wakened thy dog that hath lain asleep in the sun: didst thou not fall out with a for wearing his new doublet before Easter?

other, for thyng his new shoes with old Ib? and yet thou wilt tutor me from quarrelling!

Ben. An I were so apt to quarrel as thou art, any man should buy the fee-simple of my life for an hour and a quarter.

Mer. The fee-simple! O simple!

Ben. By my head, here come the Capulets.

Mer. By my hee, I care not.

Enter TYBALT and others.

Tyb. Follow me close, for I will speak to them.

Gentlemen, good den: a word with one of you.

Mer. And but one word with one of us? cou-pel it with something: make it a word and a blow.

Tyb. You shall find me apt enough to that, sir, an you will give me occasion.

Mer. Could you not take some occasion without giving?

Tyb. Mercutio, thou shalt consort with Romeo,—

Mer. Consort! what, dost thou make us min-lrets? an thou make minstrels of us, look to hear nothing but discords: here's my fiddlecisket; here's that shall make you dance. 'Round, consort!

Ben. We talk here in the public haunt of men:
Either withdraw unto some private place,
And reason coldly of your grievances,
Or else depart; here all eyes gaze on us.

Mer. Men's eyes were made to look, and let them gaze;
I will not budge for no man's pleasure, I.

Enter ROMEO.

Tyb. Well, peace be with you, sir: here comes my man.

Mer. But I'll be hang'd, sir, if he wear your livery:

Marry, go before to field, he'll be your follower;
Your worship in that sense may call him 'man.'

Tyb. Romeo, the hate I bear thee can afford
No better term than this,—thou art a villain.

Rom. Tybalt, the reason that I have to love thee

Doth much excuse the appertaining rage
To such a greeting; villain am I none;
Therefore farewell; I see thou know'st me not.

Tyb. Boy, this shall not excuse the injuries
That thou hast done me; therefore turn and draw.

Rom. I do protest, I never injure thee,
But love thee better than thou canst devise,
Till thou shalt know the reason of my love;
And so, good Capulet,—which name I tender
As dearly as my own,—be satisfied.

Mer. O calm, dishonourable, vile submission!

Alla stoccata carries it away.

[Draws. Tybalt, you rat-catcher, will you walk?

Tyb. What wouldst thou have with me?

Mer. Good king of cats, nothing but one of your nine lives; that I mean to make bold withal, and, as thou shalt use me hereafter, dry-beat the rest of the eight. Will you pluck your sword out of his p riches, with the ears I make haste, lest mine be about your ears ere it be out.

Tyb. I am for you. [Drawing.

Rom. Gentle Mercutio, put thy rapier up.
Mer. Come, sir, your passado. [They fight.
Rom. Draw, Benvolio; beat down their weapons.
Gentlemen, for shame, forbear this outrage! 90
Tybalt, Mercutio, the prince expressly hath Forbidden bandying in Verona streets:
Hold, Tybalt! good Mercutio!
[Tybalt under Romeo’s arm stabs Mercutio,
And flies with his followers.
Mer. I am hurt.
A plague o’ both your houses! I am sped.
Is he gone, and hath nothing?
Ben. What, art thou hurt?
Mer. Ay, ay, a scratch; a scratch; marry,
‘tis enough.
Where is my page? Go, villain, fetch a surgeon. [Exit Page.
Rom. Courage, man; the hurt cannot be much.
Mer. No, ’tis not so deep as a well, nor so wide as a church-door; but ’tis enough, ’twill serve: ask for me to-morrow, and you shall find me a grave man. I am pepered, I warrant, for this world.
A plague o’ both your houses! ’Sounds, a dog, a rat, a mouse, a cat, to scratch a man to death! a braggart, a rogue, a villain, that fights by the book of arithmetic! Why the devil came you between us? I was hurt under your arm.
Rom. I thought all for the best.
Mer. Help me into some house, Benvolio,
Or I shall faint. A plague o’ both your houses!
They have made worms’ meat of me: I have it,
And soundly too; your houses!
[Execut Mercutio and Benvolio.
Rom. This gentleman, the prince’s near ally,
My very friend, hath got his mortal hurt
In my behalf; my reputation stain’d
With Tybalt’s slander,—Tybalt, that an hour
Hath been my kinsman! O sweet Juliet,
Thy beauty hath made me effeminate
And in my temper soften’d valour’s steel!
Re-enter Benvolio.
Ben. O Romeo, Romeo, brave Mercutio’s dead!
That gallant spirit hath aspired the clouds,
Which too untimely here did scorn the earth.
Rom. This day’s black fate on more days doth depend;
This but begins the woe others must end.
Ben. Here comes the furious Tybalt back
again.
Rom. Alive, in triumph! and Mercutio slain!
Away to heaven, respective livery,
And fire-eyed fury be my conduct now!
Re-enter Tybalt.
Now, Tybalt, take the villain back again, 130
That late thou gavest me; for Mercutio’s soul is but a little way above our heads,
Staying for thine to keep him company:
Either thou, or I, or both, must go with him.
Tyb. Thou, wretched boy, that didst consort him here,
Shalt with him hence.
Rom. This shall determine that.
[They fight; Tybalt falls.
Ben. Romeo away, be gone!
The citizens are up, and Tybalt slain.
Stand not amazed: the prince will doom
death,
If thou art taken: hence, be gone, away!
Rom. O, I am fortune’s fool!
Ben. Why dost thou stay?
Enter Citizens, &c.
First Cit. Which way ran he that kill’d Mercutio?
Tybalt, that murderer, which way ran he?
Ben. There lies that Tybalt.
First Cit. Up, sir, go with
I charge thee in the prince’s name, obey.
Enter Prince, attended; Montague, Capulet their Wives, and others.
Prin. Where are the vile beginners of fray?
Ben. O noble prince, I can discover all
The unlucky manage of this fatal brawl!
There lies the man, slain by young Romeo,
That slew thy kinsman, brave Mercutio.
La. Cap. Tybalt, my cousin! O my brother!
O prince! O cousin! husband! O, the blood is spilt
Of my dear kinsman! Prince, as thou art true
For blood of ours, shed blood of Montague.
O cousin, cousin!
Prin. Benvolio, who began this bloody Brawl? Tybalt, here slain, whom Romeo’s did slay?
Romeo that spoke him fair, bade him bethink
How nice the quarrel was, and urged without
Your high displeasure: all this uttered
With gentle breath, calm look, knees hung bow’d,
Could not take truce with the unruly spleen
Of Tybalt deaf to peace, but that he tils
With piercing steel at bold Mercutio’s breast,
Who, all as hot, turns deadly point to point.
And, with a martial scorn, with one hand be Cold death aside, and with the other sends
It back to Tybalt, whose dexterity
Returns it: Romeo he cries aloud, ‘Hold, friends! friends, part!’ and, swifter
his tongue,
His agile arm beats down their fatal points,
And ‘twixt them rushes; underneath whose
An envious thrust from Tybalt hit the life
Of stout Mercutio, and then Tybalt fled;
But by and by comes back to Romeo,
Who had but newly entertain’d revenge,
And to’t they go like lightning, for, ere I
Could draw to part them, was stout Tybalt’s
And, as he fell, did Romeo turn and fly.
This is the truth, or let Benvolio die.
La. Cap. He is a kinsman to the Montagis
Affection makes him false: he speaks not true
Some twenty of them fought in this black streight
And all those twenty could but kill one life.
I beg for justice, which thou, prince, must gi
Romeo slew Tybalt, Romeo must not live.
Prin. Romeo slew him, he slew Mercutio
Who now the price of his dear blood doth owe Mon. Not Romeo, prince, he was Mercutio friend;
His fault concludes but what the law should [Act.
We are undone, lady, we are undone!
Alack the day! he's gone, he's kill'd, he's dead!
Jul. Can heaven be so envious?

Nurse. Romeo can, 40
Though heaven cannot: O Romeo, Romeo!
Who ever would have thought it? Romeo!
Jul. What devil art thou, that dost torment me thus?
This torture in my soul shall be word'd in dismal hell.
Hath Romeo slain himself? say thou but 'I,'
And that bare vowel 'I' shall poison more.
Than the death-darting eye of cockatrice:
I am not I, if there be such an I;
Or those eyes shut, that make thee answer 'I.'
If he be slain, say 'I'; or if not, no: 50
Brief sounds determine of my woe or woe.

Nurse. I saw the wound, I saw it with mine
eyes,—
God save the mark!—here on his manly breast:
A pitiful corse, a bloody piteous corse;
Pale, pale as ashes, all bedaub'd in blood,
All in gore-blood: I swounded at the sight.
Jul. O, break, my heart! poor bankrupt, break at once!
To prison, eyes, ne'er look on liberty!
Vile earth, to earth resign: end motion here;
And thou and Romeo press one heavy bier! 60 Nurse. O Tybalt, Tybalt, the best friend I had!
O courteous Tybalt! honest gentleman!
That ever I should live to see thee dead!
Jul. What storm is this that blows so contrary?
Is Romeo slaughter'd, and is Tybalt dead?
My dear-loved cousin, and my dearest lord!
Then, dreadful trumpet, sound the general doom!
For who is living, if those two are gone?
Nurse. Tybalt is gone, and Romeo banished;
Romeo that kill'd him, he is banished. 70
Jul. O God! did Romeo's hand shed Tybalt's
blood?
Nurse. It did, it did; alas the day, it did!
Jul. O serpent heart, hid with a flowering face!
Did ever dragon keep so fair a cave?
Beautiful tyrant! fiend angelical!
Dove-feather'd raven! wolvish-ravening lamb!
Despised substance of divinest show!
Just opposite to what thou justly seem'st,
A damned saint, an honourable villain!
O nature, what hadst thou to do in hell, 80
When thou didst bow the spirit of a fiend
In mortal paradise of such sweet flesh?
Was ever book containing such vile matter
So fairly bound? O, that deceit should dwell
In such a gorgeous palace!

Nurse. There's no trust,
No faith, no honesty in men; all perjured,
All forsworn, all naught, all dissemblers.
Ah, where's my man? give me some aqua viva:
These griefs, these woes, these sorrows make me old.
Shame come to Romeo!
Jul. Bister'd be thy tongue 90
For such a wish! he was not born to shame:
Upon his brow shame's ashamed to sit;
For 'tis a throne where honour may be crown'd
Sole monarch of the universal earth,
O, what a beast was I to chide at him!
Nurse. Will you speak well of him that kill'd your cousin?
Jul. Shall I speak ill of him that is my husband?
Ah, poor my lord, what tongue shall smooth thy name.
When I, thy three-hours wife, have mangled it?
But, wherefore, villain, didst thou kill my cousin?
That villain cousin would have kill'd my husband:
Back, foolish tears, back to your native spring;
Your tributary drops belong to woe,
Which you, mistaking, offer up to joy.
My husband lives, that Tybalt would have slain;
And Tybalt's dead, that would have slain my husband:
All this is comfort; wherefore weep I then?
Some word there was, worse than Tybalt's death:
That murder'd me: I would forget it fain;
But, O, it presses to my memory,
Like damned guilty deeds to sinners' minds:
'Thybalt is dead, and Romeo—banish'd!'
That 'banish'd', that one word 'banish'd,'
Hath slain ten thousand Tybals. Tybalt's death
Was as the end, if it had ended there:
Or, if sour woe delights in fellowship
And needly will be rank'd with other griefs,
Why follow'd not, when she said 'Tybalt's dead,'
Thy father, or thy mother, nay, or both,
Which modern lamentation might have moved?
But with a rearward following Tybalt's death,
'Romeo is banish'd,' to speak that word,
Is father, mother, Tybalt, Romeo, Juliet,
All slain, all dead. 'Romeo is banish'd!'
There is no end, no limit, measure, bound,
In that word's death; no words can that woe sound.
Where is my father, and my mother, nurse?
Nurse. Weeping and walking over Tybalt's corpse:
Will you go to them? I will bring you thither.
Jul. Wash they his wounds with tears: mine shall be spent,
When theirs are dry, for Romeo's banishment.
Take up those cords: poor ropes, you are beguiled,
Both you and I; for Romeo is exiled:
He made you for a highway to my bed;
But I, a maid, die maiden-widowed.
Come, cords, come, nurse; I'll to my wedding-bed;
And death, not Romeo, take my maidenhead!
Nurse. Hie to your chamber: I'll find Romeo To comfort you: I wot well where he is.
Hark ye, your Romeo will be here at night: 140
I'll to him; he is hid at Laurence' cell.
Jul. O, find him! give this ring to my true knight,
And bid him come to take his last farewell.  [Exeunt.

Scene III. Friar Laurence's cell.

Enter Friar Laurence.

Fri. L. Romeo, come forth; come forth, thou fearful man:
Affliction is enamour'd of thy parts,
And thou art wedded to calamity.

Enter Romeo.

Rom. Father, what news? what is the private doom?
That sorrow craves acquaintance at my hand
That I yet know not?
Fri. L. Too familiar
Is my dear son with such sour company:
I bring thee tidings of the prince's doom.
Rom. What less than dooms-day is the private doom?
Fri. L. A gentler judgement vanish'd his lips,
Not body's death, but body's banishment.
Rom. Ha! banishment! be merciful, 'death;'
For exile hath more terror in his look,
Much more than death: do not say 'banishment.'
Fri. L. Hence from Verona art thou banish'd,
Be patient, for the world is broad and wide.
Rom. There is no world without Verona,
But purgatory, torture, hell itself.
Hence-banish'd is banish'd from the world,
And world's exile is death: then banish'd,
Is death mis-term'd: calling death banishment,
Thou cutt'st my head off with a golden axe,
And smilest upon the stroke that murders me.
Fri. L. O deadly sin! O rude unthankfulness!
Thy fault our law calls death; but the kind pity,
Taking thy part, hath rush'd aside the law,
And turn'd that black word death to banishment.
This is dear mercy, and thou seest it not.
Rom. 'Tis torture, and not mercy: heaven here,
Where Juliet lives; and every cat and dog
And little mouse, every unworthy thing,
Live here in heaven and may look on her;
But Romeo may not: more validity,
More honourable state, more courtship lives
In carrion-flies than Romeo: they may seize
On the white wonder of dear Juliet's hand
And call her immortal blessing from her lips.
Who, even in pure and vestal modesty,
Still blush, as thinking their own kisses sin:
But Romeo may not; he is banish'd:
Flies may do this, but I from this must fly:
They are free men, but I am banish'd.
And say'st thou yet that exile is not death?
Hadst thou no poison mix'd, no sharp-grind knife,
No sudden mean of death, though ne'er so much
But 'banish'd' to kill me—'banish'd'?
O friar, the damned use that word in hell;
Howlings attend it: how hast thou the heart,
Being a divine, a ghostly confessor,
A sin-absolver, and my friend profess'd,
To mangle me with that word 'banish'd?'
Fri. L. Thou fond mad man, hear me speak a word.
Rom. O, thou wilt speak again of banishment,
Fri. L. I'll give thee armour to keep off word;
Adversity's sweet milk, philosophy,
To comfort thee, though thou art banish'd.
Rom. Yet 'banish'd'? Hang up philosophy,
Unless philosophy can make a Juliet,
Displant a town, reverse a prince's doom,
It helps not, it prevails not: talk no more.
[Knocking within.]

L. Arise; one knocks; good Romeo, hide thyself.

N. Not I; unless the breath of heart-sick groans, like, infold me from the search of eyes.

L. Hark, how they knock! Who's there? omeo, arise; wilt be taken. Stay awhile! Stand up;

[Knocking.]

my study. By and by! God's will, semplicity! I come, I come!

[Knocking.]

ocks so hard? whence come you? what's our will?

[Within] Let me come in, and you shall know my errand; from Lady Juliet.

L. Welcome, then.

Enter Nurse.

O holy friar, O tell me, holy friar, is my lady's lord, where's Romeo?

L. There on the ground, with his own arms made drunk.

O, he is even in my mistress' case, her case! O woful sympathy! a predicament! Even so lies she, ring and weeping, weeping and blubbering.

[Knocking.]

up, stand up; stand, an you be a man: let's sake, for her sake, rise and stand; would you fall into so deep an O?

N. Nurse!

Ah sir! ah sir! Well, death's the end all.

Spakest thou of Juliet? how is it with her?

O, she think not an old murderer, have stain'd the childhood of our joy, god removed but little from her own? she? and how doth she? and what says our cancel'd love? O, she says nothing, sir, but weeps d weeps; falls on her bed; and then starts up, balt calls; and then on Romeo cries, down again.

As if that name, the deadly level of a gun, der her; as that name's cursed hand d her kinsman. O, tell me, friar, tell me, vile part of this anatomy name lodge? tell me, that I may suck till mansion. [Drawing his sword.]

Hold thy desperate hand:

Art thou a man? thy form cries out thou art:

Thy tears are womanish; thy wild acts denote

The unreasonable fury of a beast:

Unseemly woman in a seeming man!

Or ill-becoming beast in seeming both!

Thou hast amazed me; by my holy order, I thought thy disposition better temper'd, Hast thou slain Tybalt? wilt thou slay thyself? And slay thy lady too that lives in thee, By doing damned hate upon thyself?

Why rais'st thou on thy birth, the heaven, and earth?

Since birth, and heaven, and earth, all three do meet

In thee at once; which thou at once wouldst lose. Fie, fie, thou shames thy shape, thy love, thy wit;

Which, like a usurer, abound'st in all,

And useth none in that true use indeed

Which should bedeck thy shape, thy love, thy wit: Thy noble shape is but a form of wax,

Digressing from the favour of a man;

Thy dear love sworn but hollow perjury,

Killing that love which thou hast vow'd to cherish;

Thy wit, that ornament to shape and love,

Mis-shapen in the conduct of them both,

Like powder in a skillless soldier's flask,

Set a fire by thine own ignorance,

And thou dismember'd with thine own defence.

What, rouse thee, man! thy Juliet is alive,

For whose dear sake thou wast but lately dead; There art thou happy: Tybalt would kill thee,

But thou slew'st Tybalt; there art thou happy too:

The law that threaten'd death becomes thy friend

And turns it to exile; there art thou happy: A pack of blessings lights upon thy back;

Happiness courts thee in her best array,

But, like a misbehaved and sullen wench,

Thou pou'st upon thy fortune and thy love:

Take heed, take heed, for such die miserable.

Go, get thee to thy love, as was decreed,

Ascend her chamber, hence and comfort her;

But look thou stay not till the watch be set,

For then thou canst not pass to Mantua:

Where thou shalt live, till we can find a time To blaze your marriage, reconcile your friends,

Beg pardon of the prince, and call thee back

With twenty hundred thousand times more joy Than thou went'st forth in lamentation.

Go before, nurse: commend me to thy lady;

And bid her hasten all the house to bed,

Which heavy sorrow makes them apt unto:

Romeo is coming.

Nurse. O Lord, I could have stay'd here all the night

To hear good counsel; O, what learning is! My lord, I'll tell my lady you will come.

Rom. Do so, and bid my sweet prepare to chide.

Nurse. Here, sir, a ring she bid me give you, sir;

Hie you, make haste, for it grows very late.

Unscreened. [Exit.]

Rom. How well my comfort is revived by this!

Fri. L. Go hence; good night; and here stands all your state:

Either be gone before the watch be set,

Or by the break of day disguised from hence:

Sojourn in Mantua; I'll find out your man,
And he shall signify from time to time 170
Every good hap to you that chances here:
Give me thy hand; 'tis late; farewell; good night.
Rom. But that a joy past joy calls out on me,
It were a grief, so brief to part with thee.
Farewell. [Exeunt.

Scene IV. A room in Capulet's house.
Enter Capulet, Lady Capulet, and Paris.
Cap. Things have fall'n out, sir, so unluckily,
That we have had no time to move our daughter:
Look you, she loved her kinsman Tybalt dearly,
And so did I:—Well, we were born to die.
'Tis very late, she'll not come down to-night:
I promise you, but for your company,
I would have been a-bed an hour ago.
Par. These times of woe afford no time to woe.
Madam, good night; commend me to your
daughter.
La. Cap. I will, and know her mind early tomorrow:
To-night she is new'd up to her heaviness.
Cap. Sir Paris, I will make a desperate tender
Of my child's love; I think she will be ruled
In all respects by me; nay, more, I doubt it not.
Wife, go you to her ere you go to bed;
Acquaint her here of my son Paris' love;
And bid her, mark you me, on Wednesday next—
But, soft! what day is this?
Par. Monday, my lord.
Cap. Monday! ha, ha! Well, Wednesday is too soon,
O' Thursday let it be: o' Thursday, tell her,
She shall be married to this noble earl.
Will you be ready! do you like this haste?
We'll keep no great ado,—a friend or two;
For, hark you, Tybalt being slain so late,
It may be thought we held him carelessly,
Being our kinsman, if we revel much;
Therefore we'll have some half a dozen friends,
And there an end. But what say you to Thursday?
Par. My lord, I would that Thursday were to-morrow.
Cap. Well, get you gone: o' Thursday be it,
then.
Go you to Juliet ere you go to bed,
Prepare her, wife, against this wedding-day,
Farewell, my lord. Light to my chamber, ho!
Afore me! it is so very very late,
That we may call it early by and by.
Good night. [Exeunt.

Scene V. Capulet's orchard.
Enter Romeo and Juliet above, at the window.
Jul. Wilt thou be gone? it is not yet near day:
It was the nightingale, and not the lark,
That pierced the fearful hollow of thine ear;
Nightly she sings on yon pomegranate-tree:
Believe me, love, it was the nightingale.
Rom. It was the lark, the herald of the morn,
No nightingale: look, love, what envious streaks
Do lace the severing clouds in yonder east:
Night's candles are burnt out, and jocund day
Stands tip-toe on the misty mountain tops.

I must be gone and live, or stay and die.
Jul. You light is not day-light, I know it.
It is some meteor that the sun exhales,
To be to thee this night a torch-bearer,
And light thee on thy way to Mantua:
Therefore stay yet: thou need'st not to be gone.
Rom. Let me be ta'en, let me be put to death,
I am content, so thou wilt have it so.
I'll say you grey is not the morning's eye,
'Tis but the pale reflex of Cynthia's brow:
Nor that is not the lark, whose notes do bear
The vaulty heaven so high above our heads
I have more care to stay than will to go:
Come, death, and welcome! Juliet wilt it:
How is't, my soul? let's talk; it is not day.
Jul. It is, it is; lie hence, be gone, away
It is the lark that sings so out of tune,
Straining harsh discords and unpleasing shal-
Some say the lark makes sweet division;
This doth not so, for she divideth us:
Some say the lark and loathed toad change
O, now I would they had changed voices too.
Since arm from arm that voice doth us afford
Hunting thee hence with hunt's-up to the dews
O, now be gone; more light and light it groweth.
Rom. More light and light; more dark dark our woes!

Enter Nurse, to the chamber.
Nurse. Madam!
Jul. Nurse?
Nurse. Your lady mother is coming to chamber;
The day is broke; be wary, look about. [Exit Jul. Then, window, let day in, and let out.
Rom. Farewell, farewell! one kiss, and descend.
[He goeth.
Jul. Art thou gone so? love, lord, ay, band, friend!
I must hear from thee every day in the hou
For in a minute there are many days;
O, by this count I shall be much in years
Ere I again behold my Romeo!
Rom. Farewell!
I will omit no opportunity
That may convey my greetings, love, to the Jul. O, think'st thou we shall ever
again?
Rom. I doubt it not; and all these woes serve
For sweet discourses in our time to come.
Jul. O God, I have an ill-divining soul
Methinks I see thee, now thou art below,
As one dead in the bottom of a tomb;
Either my eyesight fails, or thou look'st pale
Rom. And trust me, love, in my eye so do
Dry sorrow drinks our blood. Adieu, adieu!
Jul. O fortune, fortune! all men call fickle:
If thou art fickle, what dost thou with him
That is renown'd for faith? Be fickle, fickle, be to thee this night a torch-bearer,
Then, I hope, thou wilt not keep him long
But send him back.
La. Cap. [Within] Ho, daughter! are you
Jul. Who is't that calls? is it my lady me
Is she not down so late, or up so early?
What unaccustom'd cause procures her hit?
Enter Lady Capulet.

Cap. Why, how now, Juliet!

Madam, I am not well. Evermore weeping for your cousin's death? wilt thou wash him from his grave with tears? thou couldst, thou couldst not make him weep, have done: some grief shows much of ove; such of grief shows still some want of wit. Yet let me weep for such a feeling loss.

Cap. So shall you feel the loss, but not be friend you weep for.

Feeling so the loss, or choose but ever weep the friend.

Cap. Well, girl, thou weep'st not so much his death, the villain lives which slaughter'd him. 80 What villain, madam? Cap. [Aside] Villain and he be many miles under.— ron him! I do, with all my heart; no man like he doth grieve my heart. Cap. That is, because the traitor murderer Ay, madam, from the reach of these my ins: none but I might venge my cousin's death!
ap. We will have vengeance for it, fear ou not: eep no more. I'll send to one in Man: that same banish'd runagate doth live, ve him such an unaccustomed dram, shall soon keep Tybalt company; hope, thou wilt be satisfied. Indeed, I never shall be satisfied Romeo, till I behold him—dead—oor heart so for a kinsman vex'd: if you could find out but a man a poison, I would temper it; me should, upon receipt thereof, ep in quiet. O, how my heart abhors roo him named, and cannot come to him, k the love I bore my cousin s body that hath slaughter'd him! ap. Find thou the means, and I'll find n a man.

I'll tell thee joyful tidings, girl, and joy comes well in such a needy time: they, I beseech your ladyship? ap. Well, well, thou hast a careful child, to put thee from thy heaviness, red out a sudden day of joy, expect'st not nor I look'd not for. Madam, in happy time, what day is that? ap. Marry, my child, early next Thurs-morn, ant, young and noble gentleman, nty Paris, at Saint Peter's Church, ply make thee there a joyful bride. Now, by Saint Peter's Church and Peter

He shall not make me there a joyful bride. I wonder at this haste; that I must wed Ere he, that should be husband, comes to woo. I pray you, tell my lord and father, madam, I will not marry yet; and, when I do, I swear, It shall be Romeo, whom you know I hate, Rather than Paris. These are news indeed! La. Cap. Here comes your father; tell him so yourself, and see how he will take it at your hands.

Enter Capulet and Nurse.

Cap. When the sun sets, the air doth drizzle dew:
But for the sunset of my brother's son It rains downright,
How now! a conduit, girl! what, still in tears? Evermore showering? In one little body Thou counterfeit'st a bark, a sea, a wind; For still thy eyes, which I may call the sea, Do ebb and flow with tears; the bark thy body is, Sailing in this salt flood; the winds, thy sighs; Who, raging with thy tears, and they with them, Without a sudden calm, will overset Thy tempest-tossed body. How now, wife! Have you deliver'd to her our decree?

La. Cap. Ay, sir; but she will none, she gives you thanks.
I would the fool were married to her grave!
ap. Soft! take me with you, take me with you, wife, How! will she none? doth she not give us thanks? Is she not proud? doth she not count her blast, Unworthy as she is, that we have wrought So worthy a gentleman to be her bridgroom? Jul. Not proud, you have; but thankful, that you have: Proud can I never be of what I hate; But thankful even for hate, that is meant love.

Cap. How now, how now, chop-logic! What is this? 'Proud,' and 'I thank you,' and 'I thank you not.' And yet 'not proud,' mistress minion, you, Thank me no thankings, nor proud me no prouds, But fettle your fine joints 'gainst Thursday next, To go with Paris to Saint Peter's Church, Or I will drag thee on a hurdle thither. Out, you green-sickness carrion! out, you baggage!
You tallow-face!

La. Cap. Fie, fie! what, are you mad? Jul. Good father, I beseech you on my knees, Hear me with patience but to speak a word. Hang thee, young baggage! disobedient wretch!

I tell thee what: get thee to church o' Thursday, Or never after look in the face: Speak not, reply not, do not answer me; My fingers itch. Wife, we scarce thought us best

That God had lent us but this only child; But now I see this one is one too much, And that we have a curse in having her: Out on her, hilding! Nurse. God in heaven bless her!
You are to blame, my lord, to rate her so. Cap. And why, my lady wisdom? hold your tongue,
Good prudence; smatter with your gossips, go.

Nurse. I speak no treason.

Nurse. May not one speak?

Cap. Peace, you mumbling fool!

Uter your gravity o'er a gossip's bowl;
For here we need it not.

La. Cap. You are too hot.

Cap. God's bread! it makes me mad:

1Day, night, hour, tide, time, work, play,

Alone, in company, still my care hath been

To have her match'd: and having now provided

A gentleman of noble parentage,

Of fair demeanours, youthful, and nobly train'd,

Stuff'd, as they say, with honourable parts,

Proportion'd as one's thought would wish a man;

And then to have a wretched puling fool,

A whining mammet, in her fortune's tender,

To answer 't I'll not wed; I cannot love,

I am too young; I pray you, pardon me.'

But, an you will not wed, I'll pardon you:

Graze where you will, you shall not house with me:

Look to't, think on't, I do not use to jest.

Thursday is near; lay hand on heart, advise:

An you be mine, I'll give you to my friend;

An you be not, hang, beggar, starve, die in the streets,

For, by my soul, I ne'er acknowledge thee,

Nor what is mine shall never do thee good:

Trust to't, bethink you; I'll not be forsworn.

[Exit.]

JUL. Is there no pity sitting in the clouds,

That send into the bottom of my grief?

O, sweet my mother, cast me not away!

Delay this marriage for a month, a week;

Or, if you do not, make the bridal bed

In that dim monument where Tybalt lies.

La. Cap. Talk not to me, for I'll not speak a word:

Do as thou wilt, for I have done with thee. [Exit.

JUL. O God! — Nurse, how shall this be prevented?

My husband is on earth, my faith in heaven;

How shall that faith return again to earth,

Unless that husband send it me from heaven

By leaving earth? comfort me, counsel me.

Alack, alack, that heaven should practise stratagems

Upon so soft a subject as myself!

What say'st thou hast thou not a word of joy?

Some comfort, nurse.

Nurse. Faith, here it is.

Romeo is banish'd; and all the world to nothing,

That he dares ne'er come back to challenge you;

Or, if he do, it needs must be by stealth.

Then, since the case so stands as now it doth,

I think it best you married with the county.

O, he's a lovely gentleman!

Romeo's a dishclout to him: an eagle, madam,

Hath not so green, so quick, so fair an eye

As Paris hath. Beshrew my very heart,

I think you are happy in this second match,

For it excels your first: or if it did not,

Your first is dead: or 'twere as good he were,

As living here and you no use of him.

Tell! Speakest thou from thy heart?

Nurse. And from my soul too;

Or else beshrew them both.

JUL. Amen!

Nurse. What?

JUL. Well, thou hast comforted me manifold much.

Go in and tell my lady I am gone,

Having displeased my father, to Laurence's to make confession and to be absolved.

Nurse. Marry, I will; and this is wisely done!

JUL. Ancient damnation! O most wicked fiend!

Is it more sin to wish me thus forsworn,

Or to dispair my lord with that same tongue

Which she hath praised him with above compendious many thousand times? Go, counsellor; Thy and my bosom henceforth shall be twain.

I'll to the friar, to know his remedy:

If all else fail, myself have power to die. [Exit.

ACT IV.

SCENE I. Friar Laurence's cell.

Enter Friar Laurence and Paris.

Fri. L. On Thursday, sir? the time is short.

Par. My father Capulet will have it so;

And I am nothing slow to slack his haste.

Fri. L. You say you do not know the heart of mind:

Uneven is the course, I like it not.

Par. Immoderately she weeps for Tybalt's death,

And therefore have I little talk'd of love;

For Venus smiles not in a house of tears.

Now, sir, her father counts it dangerous

That she doth give her sorrow so much sway

And in his wisdom hastens our marriage

To stop the inundation of her tears;

Which, too much minded by herself alone,

May be put from her by society.

Now do you know the reason of this haste.

Fri. L. [Aside] I would I knew not w' shall be slow'd.

Look, sir, here comes the lady towards my cell.

Enter JULIET.

Par. Happy met, my lady and my wife,

JUL. That may be, sir, when I may be a man.

Par. That may be must be, love, on Thursday.

JUL. What must be shall be.

Fri. L. That's a certain

Par. Come you to make confession to this friar?

JUL. To answer that, I, should confess to

Par. Do not deny to him that you love him,

JUL. I will confess to you that I love him

Par. So will ye, I am sure, that you love him.

JUL. If I do so, it will be of more price,

Being spoke behind your back, than to your face.

Par. Poor soul, thy face is much abused

JUL. The tears have got small victory by

For it was bad enough before their spite.

Par. Thou wrongst it, more than tears;

JUL. That is no slander, sir, which is a truth.

And what I spake, I spake it to my face.

Par. Thy face is mine, and thou hast der'd it.
It may be so, for it is not mine own. ou at leisure, holy father, now; all I come to you at evening mass? M. My leisure serves me, pensive daugh-ter, now.

[40]

No warmth, no breath, shall testify thou livest; The roses in thy lips and cheeks shall fade To paly ashes, thy eyes windows fall, Like death, when he shuts up the day of life; Each part, deprived of supple government, Shall, stiff and stark and cold, appear like death: And in this borrow’d likeness of shrunk death Thou shalt continue two and forty hours, And then awake as from a pleasant sleep. Now, when the bridgroom in the morning comes To rouse thee from thy bed, there art thou dead: Then, as the manner of our country is, In thy best robes uncover’d on the bier Thou shalt be borne to that same ancient vault Where all the kindred of the Capulets lie. In the mean time, against thou shalt awake, Shall Romeo by my letters know our drift, And hither shall he come: and he and I Will watch thy waking, and that very night Shall Romeo bear thee hence to Mantua. And this shall free thee from this present shame; If no inconstant toy, nor womanish fear, Abate thy valour in the acting it. Fri. Give me an ear, give me! O, tell not me of fear! Fri. Hold; get you gone, be strong and prosperous In this resolve: I’ll send a friar with speed To Mantua, with my letters to thy lord. Friul. Love give me strength! and strength shall help afford. Farewell, dear father! [Exeunt.

SCENE II. Hall in Capulet’s house.

Enter CAPULET, LADY CAPULET, Nurse, and Two Servingmen.

Cap. So many guests invite as here are writ. [Exit First Servant. Sirrah, go hire me twenty cunning cooks.

Sec. Serv. You shall have none ill, sir; for I’ll try if they can lick their fingers.

Cap. How canst thou try them so? Sec. Serv. Marry, sir, ‘tis an ill cook that cannot lick his own fingers: therefore he that cannot lick his fingers goes not with me.

Cap. Go, be gone. [Exit Sec. Servant. We shall be much unfurnished for this time. What, is my daughter gone to Friar Laurence? Nurse. Ay, forsooth.

Cap. Well, he may chance to do some good on her: A peevish self-will’d harlotry it is.

Nurse. See where she comes from shrift with merry look.

Enter JULIET.

Cap. How now, my headstrong! where have you been gadding?

Jul. Where have I learned me to repel the sin Of disobedient opposition To you and your behests, and am enjoin’d By holy Laurence to fall prostrate here, And beg your pardon: pardon, I beseech you! Henceforward I am ever ruled by you.

Cap. Send for the county; go tell him of this: I’ll have this knot knit up to-morrow morning.

Jul. I met the youthful lord at Laurence’ cell; And gave him what became love I might, Not stepping o’er the bounds of modesty.
Cap. Why, I am glad on‘t; this is well: stand up; this is as‘t should be. Let me see the county; Ay, marry, go, I say, and fetch him hither. 30
Now, afore God! this reverend holy friar, All our whole city is much bound to him.
Jul. Nurse, will you go with me into my closet, To help me sort such needful ornaments As you think fit to furnish me to-morrow?
La. Cap. No, not till Thursday; there is time enough.
Cap. Go, nurse, go with her; we’ll to church to-morrow. [Exeunt Juliet and Nurse.
La. Cap. We shall be short in our provision; ’Tis now near night.
Cap. Tush, I will stir about, And all things shall be well, I warrant thee, wife: Go thou to Juliet, help to deck up her; 47 I’ll not to bed to-night; let me alone; I’ll play the housewife for this once. What, ho! They are all forth. Well, I will walk myself To County Paris, to prepare him up Against to-morrow: my heart is wondrous light, Since this same wayward girl is so claim’d. [Exeunt.

SCENE III. Juliet’s chamber.
Enter Juliet and Nurse.
Jul. Ay, those attires are best: but, gentle nurse, I pray thee, leave me to myself to-night; For I have need of many orisons To move the heavens to smile upon my state, Which, well thou know’st, is cross and full of sin.
Enter Lady Capulet.
La. Cap. What, are you busy, ho? need you my help?
Jul. No, madam; we have call’d such necessaries As beovelful for our state to-morrow; So please you, let me now be left alone, And let the nurse this night sit up with you; For, I am sure, you have your hands full all, In this so sudden business.
La. Cap. Good night; Get thee to bed, and rest; for thou hast need. [Exeunt Lady Capulet and Nurse.
Jul. Farewell! God knows when we shall meet again. I have a faint cold fear thrills through my veins, That almost freezes up the heat of life: I’ll call them back again to comfort me: Nurse! What should she do here? My dismal scene I needs must act alone. Come, vial. What if this mixture do not work at all? Shall I be married then to-morrow morning? No, no: this shall forbid it: lie thou there. [Laying down her dagger.
What if it be a poison, which the friar Subtly hath minister’d to have me dead, Lest in this marriage he should be dishonour’d, Because he married me before to Romeo? I fear it is: and yet, methinks, it should not, For he hath still been tried a lively man. How if, when I am laid into the tomb, I wake before the time that Romeo Come to redeem me? there’s a fearful point!

 Shall I not then, be stifled in the vault, To whose foul mouth no healthsome air breath, And there die strangled ere my Romeo come, Or, if I live, is it not very like The horrible conceit of death and night, Together with the terror of the place,—
As in a vault, an ancient receptacle, Where, for these many hundred years, the Of all my buried ancestors are pack’d: Where bloody Tybalt, yet but green in eart Lies festering in his shroud; where, as thee: At some hours in the night spirits resort;—
20 Alack, alack, is it not like that I, So early waking, what with loathsome smell And shrieks like mandrakes’ torn out of the That living mortals, hearing them, run med O, if I wake, shall I not be distraught, Environed with all these hideous fears? And madly play with my forefathers’ joints And pluck the mangled Tybalt from his sh And, in this rage, with some great kinsman’s As with a club, dash out my desperate bra O, look! methinks I see my cousin’s ghost Seeking out Romeo, that did spit his body Upon a rapier’s point; stay, Tybalt, stay! Romeo, I come! this do I drink to thee.
She falls upon her bed, within the curt.

SCENE IV. Hall in Capulet’s house.
Enter Lady Capulet and Nurse.
La. Cap. Hold, take these keys, and more spices, nurse.
Nurse. They call for dates and spices in pastry.
Enter Capulet.
Cap. Come, stir, stir, stir! the second cold crowd, The curfew-bell hath rung, ’tis three o’clock Look to the baked meats, good Angelica: Spare not for cost.
Nurse. Go, you cot-quean, go, Get you to bed; faith, you’ll be sick to-morrow For this night’s watching.
Cap. No, not a whit: what! I have watch now All night for lesser cause, and ne’er been sic!
La. Cap. Ay, you have been a mouse in your time; But I will watch you from such watching! [Exeunt Lady Capulet and Nurse.
Cap. A jealous-hood, a jealous-hood!
Enter three or four Serving men, with spits and baskets.

What’s there?
First Serv. Things for the cook, sir; know not what.
Cap. Make haste, make haste. [Exit Serv.] Sirrah, fetch drier logs: Call Peter, he will show thee where they are.
See Serv. I have a head, sir, that will fin logs, And never trouble Peter for the matter.
Cap. Mass, and well said: a merry wench Thou shalt be logger-head. Good faith, ’tis The county will be here with music straight.
o he said he would: I hear him near.

[Music within.

Re-enter Nurse.

sken Juliet, go and trim her up;
and chat with Paris: hie, make haste;
; the bridgroom he is come already;
haste, I say. [Exeunt.

Scene V. Juliet's chamber.

Enter Nurse.

Mistress! what, mistress! Juliet! fast, I warrant her, she:
lamb! why, lady! fie, you slug-a-bed!
love, I say! madam! sweet-heart! why, bride,
not a word! you take your pennyworths now:
for a week; for the next night, I warrant, Court's Paris hath set up his rest, shall rest but little. God forgive me, and amen, how sound is she asleep?
needs wake her. Madam, madam, madam!
the county take you in your bed:
fright you up, i' faith. Will it not be?
Undraws the curtains.
dress’d! and in your clothes! and down again!
needs wake you: Lady! lady! lady! alas!
Help! help! my lady's dead!
ill-a-day, that ever I was born!
aqua vitae, ho! My lord! my lady!

Enter Lady Capulet.

Cap. What noise is here?

Cap. What is the matter?

Cap. Look, look! O heavy day!

Cap. O me, O me! My child, my only life, look up, or I will die with thee!
help! Call help.

Enter Capulet.

Cap. For shame, bring Juliet forth; her lord

come.

Cap. She's dead, deceased, she's dead;

tack the day!

Cap. Alack the day, she's dead, she's dead,

Ha! let me see her: out, alas! she's old;
loid is settled, and her joints are stiff;
these lips have long been separated:
lies on her like an untimely frost
the sweetest flower of all the field.

Cap. O lamentable day!

Cap. O woful time! 30

Death, that hath ta’n her hence to make my tongue, and will not let me speak.

Friar Laurence and Paris, with Musicians.

L. Come, is the bride ready to go to church?

Go to ready, but never to return.

the night before thy wedding-day
Death lain with thy wife. There she lies,

Flower as she was, deflowered by him.
Death is my son-in-law, Death is my heir;
My daughter he hath wedded: I will die,
And leave him all; life, living, all is Death's. 40

Par. Have I thought long to see this morning's face.
And doth it give me such a sight as this?

La. Cap. Accursed, unhappy, wretched, hateful day!

Most miserable hour that e'er time saw
In lasting labour of his pilgrimage!
But one, poor one, one poor and loving child,
But one thing to rejoice and solace in,
And cruel death hath catch'd it from my sight!

Nurse. O woe! O woful, woful day!

Most lamentable day, most woful day,
That ever, ever, I did yet behold!
O day! O day! O day! O hateful day!

Never was seen so black a day as this:
O woful day, O woful day!

Par. Beguiled, divorced, wronged, spited, slain,

Most detestable death, by thee beguiled,
By cruel cruel thee quite overthrown!

O love! O life! not life, but love in death!

Cap. Despised, distressed, hated, martyr'd, kill'd!

Uncomfortable time, why camest thou now 60
To murder, murder our solemnity?
O child! O child! my soul, and not my child!
Dead art thou! Alack! my child is dead;
And with my child my joys are buried.

Fri. L. Peace, ho, for shame! confusion's cure lives not
In these confusions. Heaven and yourself
Had part in this fair maid; now heaven hath all,
And all the better is it for the maid:
Your part in her you could not keep from death,
But heaven keeps his part in eternal life.

The most you sought was her promotion;
For 'twas your heaven she should be advanced:
And weep ye now, seeing she is advanced
Above the clouds, as high as heaven itself?
O, in this love, you love your child so ill,
That you run mad, seeing that she is well:
She's not well married that lives married long;
But she's best married that died married young.
Dry up your tears, and stick your rosemary
On this fair corse; and, as the custom is,
In all her best array bear her to church:
For though fond nature bids us all lament,
Yet nature's tears are reason's merriment,

Cap. All things that we ordained festival,

Turn from their office to black funeral;
Our instruments to melancholy bells,
Our wedding cheer to a sad burial feast,
Our solemn hymns to sullen dirges change,
Our bridal flowers serve for a buried corse,
And all things change them to the contrary.

Fri. L. Sir, go you in; and, madam, go with him;

And go, Sir Paris; every one prepare
To follow this fair corse unto her grave:
The heavens do lour upon you for some ill;
Move them no more by crossing their high will.

First Mun. Faith, we may put up our pipes, and be gone.
Strange dream, that gives a dead man leave to think!—
And breathed such life with kisses in my lip?
That I revived, and was an emperor.
Ah me! how sweet is love itself possess'd, When but love's shadows are so rich in joy! 110

Enter BALTHASAR, booted.

News from Verona!—How now, Balthasar!
Dost thou not bring me letters from the friar?
How doth my lady? Is my father well?
How fares my Juliet? that I ask again;
For nothing can be ill, if she be well.

Bal. Then she is well, and nothing can harm her.
Her body sleeps in Capel's monument, And her immortal part with angels lives.
I saw her laid low in her kindred's vault, And presently took post to tell it you: O, petition me for bringing these ill news, Since you did leave it for my office, sir.

Rom. Is it even so? then I defy you, sir;
Thou know'st my lodging: get me ink and pen;
And hire post-horses; I will hence to-night.

Bal. I do beseech you, sir, have patience;
Your looks are pale and wild, and do import Some misadventure.

Rom. Tush, thou art deceived: Leave me, and do the thing I bid thee do. Hast thou no letters to me from the friar?
Bal. No, my good lord.
Rom. No matter: get thee And hire those horses; I'll be with thee str.

[Exit Bal.

Well, Juliet, I will lie with thee to-night.
Let's see for means: O, mischief, thou art gay!
To enter in the thoughts of desperate men!
I do remember an apothecary,—
And hereabouts he dwells,—which I late In tatter'd weeds, with overwhelming brow Culling of simples; meagre were his looks, Sharp misery had worn him to the bones: And in his needy shop a torture hung, An alligator stuff'd, and other skins Of ill-shaped fishes; and about his shelves A beggarly account of empty boxes, Green earthen pots, bladders and musty se Remnants of packthread and old cakes of re Were thinly scatter'd, to make up a show. Noting this penury, to myself I said 'An if a man did need a poison now, Whose sale is present death in Mantua, Here lives a caitiff wretch would sell it him O, this same thought did but forerun my n And this same needy man must sell it me. As I remember, this should be the house. Being holiday, the beggar's shop is shut. What, ho! I apothecary!

Enter Apothecary.

Ap. Who calls so loud? 139
Rom. Come hither, man. I see that thee poor:
Hold, there is forty ducats: let me have A dram of poison, such soon-speeding gear As will disperse itself through all the veins That the life-weary taker may fall dead And that the trunk may be discharged of t
Scene III. A churchyard; in it a tomb belonging to the Capulets.

Enter Paris, and his Page bearing flowers and a torch.

Par. Give me thy torch, boy: hence, and stand aloof:
Yet put it out, for I would not be seen.
Under yond yew-trees lay thee all along,
Holding thine ear close to the hollow ground;
So shall no foot upon the churchyard tread,
Being loose, unfirm, with digging up of graves,
But thou shalt hear it: whistle then to me,
As signal that thou hear'st something approach.
Give me those flowers. Do as I bid thee, go.

Page. [Aside] I am almost afraid to stand alone.
Here in the churchyard; yet I will adventure.

Par. Sweet flower, with flowers thy bridal bed I strew,—
O woe! thy canopy is dust and stones:—
Which with sweet water nightly I will dew,
Or, wanting that, with tears distill'd by moans:
The obsequies that I for thee will keep Nightly shall be to strew thy grave and weep.
[The Page whistles.
The boy gives warning something doth approach.
What cursed foot wonders this way to-night, el
To cross my obsequies and true love's rite? 20
What, with a torch! muzzle me, night, awhile.
[Retires.

Enter Romeo and Balthasar, with a torch, mattock, &c.

Rom. Give me that mattock and the wrenching iron.
Hold, take this letter; early in the morning
See thou deliver it to my lord and father.
Give me the light: upon thy life, I charge thee,
Whate'er thou hear'st or seest, stand all aloof,
And do not interrupt my pace in my course.
Why I descend into this bed of death,
Is partly to behold my lady's face:—
But chiefly to take thence from her dead finger
A precious ring, a ring that I must use
In dear employment: therefore hence, be gone:
But if thou, jealous, dost return to pry
In what I further shall intend to do,
By heaven, I will tear thee joint by joint
And strew this hungry churchyard with thy limbs:
The time and my intents are savage-wild,
More fierce and more inexorable far
Than emptyigers or the roaring sea. 39

Bal. I will be gone, sir, and not trouble you.

Rom. So shalt thou see me friendship. Take thou that:
Live, and be prosperous: and farewell, good fellow.

Bal. [Aside] For all this same, I'll hide me hercaboat:
His looks I fear, and his intents I doubt.
[Retires.

Rom. Thou detestable maw, thou womb of death,
Gorged with the dearest morsel of the earth,
Thus I enforce thy rotten jaws to open,

[Exit.}
And, in despite, I'll cram thee with more food!

Par. This is that banish'd haughty Montague,
That murder'd my love's cousin, with which grief,
It is supposed, the fair creature died;
And here is come to do some villainous shame
To the dead bodies: I will apprehend him.

[Comes forward.]

Stop thy unhallow'd toil, vile Montague! Can vengeance be pursued further than death? Condemned villain, I do apprehend thee:
Obey, and go with me; for thou must die.

Romeo. I must indeed; and therefore came I hither.

Good gentle youth, tempt not a desperate man; Fly hence, and leave me: think upon these gone; Let them affright thee. I beseech thee, youth, Put not another sin upon my head, By urging me to fury: O, be gone! By heaven, I love thee better than myself; For I come hither arm'd against myself: Stay not, be gone; live, and hereafter say, A madman's mercy bade thee run away.

Par. I do defy thy conjurations, And apprehend thee for a felon here.

Romeo. Why, wilt thou provoke me? then have at thee, boy! [They fight. 70]

Page. O Lord, they fight! I will go call the watch.

[Exit.]

Par. O, I am slain! [Falls.] If thou be merciful, Open the tomb, lay me with Juliet. [Dies.]

Romeo. In faith, I will. Let me peruse this face.

Mercutio's kinsman, noble County Paris! What said my man, when my betossed soul Did not attend him as we rode? I think He told me Paris should have married Juliet:
Said he not so? or did I dream it so?
Or am I mad, hearing him talk of Juliet?
To think it was so? O, give me thy hand, One writ with me in sour misfortune's book! I'll bury thee in a triumphant grave; A grave? O, no! a lantern, a chastened youth, For here was Juliet, and her beauty makes This vault a feasting presence full of light. Death, lie thou there, by a dead man interred. [Laying Paris in the tomb.]

How oft when men are at the point of death Have they been merry! which their keepers call A lightening before death: O, how may I 90
Call this a lightening? O my love! my wife! Death, that hath suck'd the honey of thy breath, Hath no power yet upon thy beauty:
Thou art not conquer'd: beauty's ensign yet Is crimson in thy lips and in thy cheeks, And death's pale flag is not advanced there. Tybalt, liest thou there in thy bloody sheet? O, what more favour can I do to thee, Than with that hand that cut thy youth in twain To sunder his that was thine enemy? 100
Forgive me, cousin! Ah, dear Juliet, Why art thou yet so fair? shall I believe That unsubstantial death is amorous, And that the lean abhorred monster keeps These here in dark to be his paramour? For fear of that, I still will stay with thee:
And never from this palace of dim night

Depart again: here, here will I remain With worms that are thy chamber-maids; O, Will I set up my everlasting rest And shake the yoke of inauspicious stars From this world-wearied flesh. Eyes, look last! Arms, take your last embracement! and, lips, O The doors of breath, seal with a righteous kis A dateless bargain to engrossing death! Come, bitter conduit, come, resolute guide! Thou desperate pilot, now at once run on To the dashing rocks thy sea-sick weary bark! Here's to my love! [Drinks.] O true appary! Thy drugs are quick. Thus with a kiss I di Enter, at the other end of the churchyard, Fri. L. Saint Francis be my speed! he to-night Have my old feet stumbled at graves! V them. Bal. Here's one, a friend, and one that k you well.

Fri. L. Bliss be upon you! Tell me, my friend, What torch is yond, that vainly lends his lig To grubs and eyeless skulls? as I discern, It burneth in the Capels' monument. Bal. 'Tis doth so holy sir; and there master, One that you love.

Bal. I dare no My master knows not but I am gone hence And fearfully did menace me with death, If I did stay to look on his intents.

Fri. L. Stay, then; I'll go alone. Fear me not. O, much I fear some ill unlucky thing. Bal. As I did sleep under this yew-tree I dreamt my master and another fought, And that my master slew him.

Fri. L. Romeo! [Adv.]

Alack, alack, what blood is this, which stain The stony entrance of this sepulchre? What mean these masterless and gory swor To lie discolor'd by this place of peace? Romeo O, pale! Who else? what, Paris And sleep'd in blood? Ah, what an unkind Is guilty of this lamentable chance! The lady stirs. [Juliet enters.]

Jul. O comfortable friar! where is my k You, master, you, I do remember well where I should be, And there I am. Where is my Romeo? [Noise within.]

Fri. L. I hear some noise. Lady, come that nest Of death, contagion, and unnatural sleep: A greater power than we can contradict Hath thwarted our intents. Come, come, Thy husband in thy bosom there lies dead.
Paris too. Come, I'll dispose of thee among a sisterhood of holy nuns: not to question, for the watch is coming; a good Juliet [Noise again], I dare no longer stay.

[juliet] Go, get thee hence, for I will not stay. [Exit Fri. L. [Exit Fri. R.]

It's here? a cup, closed in true love's hand? I, even, hath been his timeless end: url! drunk all, and let it not friend so prove me after? I will kiss thy lips; if some poison yet doth hang on them, make me die with a restorative. [Kisses him. lips are warm.

[watch] [Within] Lead, boy: what way? Yea, noise? then I'll be brief. O happy dagger! [Snatching Romeo's dagger, is thy sheath [Stabs herself.]; there rust, and let me die. [Falls on Romeo's body, and dies.

Enter Watch, with the Page of Paris. This is the place; there, where the torch doth burn. [watch] The ground is bloody; search about the churchyard:

some of you, who'eer you find attach. [friar] A sight! here lies the county slain; Juliet bleeding, warm, and newly dead, here hath lain these two days buried. all the prince: run to the Capulet's: up the Montagues: some others search: ee the ground whereon these woes do lie; he true ground of all these piteous woes 180 annot without circumstance descry.

Enter some of the Watch, with Balthasar.

[watch] Here's Romeo's man; we found him in the churchyard.

[watch] Hold him in safety, till the prince come hither.

Enter others of the Watch, with Friar Laurence.

[watch] Here is a friar, that trembles, sighs, and weeps:

look this mattock and this spade from him, was coming from this churchyard side.

[watch] A great suspicion: stay the friar too.

Enter the Prince and Attendants.

[page] What misadventure is so early up, calls our person from our morning's rest?

[capulet, lady capulet, and others] What should it be, that they so shriek abroad?

[capulet] The people in the street cry Romeo, Juliet, and some Paris; and all run, open outcry, toward our monument.

[page] What fear is this which startles in our ears?

[watch] Sovereign, here lies the County Paris slain;romeo dead; and Juliet, dead before, and new kill'd.

Prince. Search, seek, and know how this foul murder comes.

First Watch. Here is a friar, and slaughter'd Romeo's man; With instruments upon them, fit to open These dead men's tombs.

Cap. O heavens! O wife, look how our daughter bleeds! This dagger hath mista'en,—for, lo, his house is empty on the back of Montague,— And it mis-sheathed in my daughter's bosom!

La. Cap. O me! this sight of death is as a bell, That warns my old age to a sepulchre.

Enter Montague and others.

Prince. Come, Montague; for thou art earlyup, To see thy son and heir more early down.

Mon. Alas, my liege, my wife is dead to-night; Grief of my son's exile hath stopp'd her breath; What further woe conspires against mine age?

Prince. Look, and thou shalt see.

Mon. O thou untaught! what manners is in this, To press before thy father to a grave?

Prince. Seal up the mouth of outrage for a while, Till we can clear these ambiguities, And know their spring, their head, their true descent; And then will I be general of your woes.

And lead you even to death: meantime forbear, And let mischance be slave to patience. Bring forth the parties of suspicion.

Fri. L. I am the greatest, able to do least, Yet most suspected, as the time and place Doth make against me, of this direful murder; And here I stand, both to impeach and purge Myself condemned and myself excused.

Prince. Then say at once what thou dost know in this.

Fri. L. I will be brief, for my short date of breath

Is not so long as is a tedious tale;

Romeo, there dead, was husband to that Juliet; And she, there dead, that Romeo's faithful wife: I married them; and their stol'n marriage-day Was Tybalt's dooms-day, whose untimely death Banish'd the new-made bridegroom from this city, For whom, and not for Tybalt, Juliet pined. You, to remove that siege of grief from her, Betroth'd and would have married her perforce To County Paris: then comes she to me,

And, with wild looks, bid me devise some mean To rid her from this second marriage, Or in my cell there would she kill herself. Then gave I her, so tutor'd by my art, A sleeping potion; which so took effect As I intended, for it wrougfh on her The form of death: meantime I writ to Romeo, That he should hither come as this dire night, To help to take her from her borrow'd grave, Being the time the potion's force should cease. But he which bore my letter, Friar John,

Was stay'd by accident, and yesternight Return'd my letter back. Then all alone At the prefixed hour of her waking, Came I to take her from her kindred's vault;
Meaning to keep her closely at my cell,
Till I conveniently could send to Romeo:
But when I came, some minute ere the time
Of her awaking, here untimely lay
The noble Paris and true Romeo dead.
She wakes; and I entreated her come forth, 260
And bear this work of heaven with patience:
But then a noise did scare me from the tomb;
And she, too desperate, would not go with me,
But, as it seems, did violence on herself.
All this I know; and to the marriage
Her nurse is privy; and, if aught in this Miscarried by my fault, let my old life
Be sacrificed, some hour before his time,
Unto the rigour of severest law.
Prince. We still have known thee for a 270 holy man.
Where's Romeo's man? what can he say in this?
Bal. I brought my master news of Juliet's
death:
And then in post he came from Mantua
To this same place, to this same monument.
This letter he early bid me give his father,
And threaten'd me with death, going in the vault,
If I departed not and left him there.
Prince. Give me the letter; I will look on it.
Where is the county's page, that raised the watch?
Sirrah, what made your master in this place? 280 Page. He came with flowers to strew his lady's grave;
And bid me stand aloof, and so I did:

Anon comes one with light to ope the tomb;
And by and by my master drew on him;
And then I ran away to call the watch.
Prince. This letter doth make good the fri
words,
Their course of love, the tidings of her death:
And here he writes that he did buy a poison
Of a poor 'pochecary, and therewithal
Came to this vault to die, and lies with Juliet.
Where be these enemies? Capulet! More
See, what a scourge is laid upon your hate,
That heaven finds means to kill your joys with
love.
And I for winking at your discords too
Have lost a brace of kinsmen: all are punish'd.
Cap. O brother Montague, give me thy hand
This is my daughter's jointure, for no more
Can I demand.
Mon. But I can give thee more:
For I will raise her statue in pure gold;
That while Verona by that name is known,
There shall no figure at such rate be set
As that of true and faithful Juliet.
Cap. As rich shall Romeo's by his lady's li
Poor sacrifices of our enmity!
Prince. A glooming peace this morning it brings;
The sun, for sorrow, will not show his head
Go hence, to have more talk of these sad thin
Some shall be pardon'd, and some punished
For never was a story of more woe
Than this of Juliet and her Romeo. [Exeunt.

Enter Poet, Painter, Jeweller, Merchant, and others, at several doors.

Poet. Good day, sir.

[To a Merchant.] I am glad you're well.

Merchant. I have not seen you long: how goes the world?

Poet. It wears, sir, as it grows.

Merchant. Ay, that's well known: that particular rarity? what strange, a manifold record not matches? See, of bounty! all these spirits thy power conjured to attend. I know the merchant.

Poet. I know them both; 'tis other's a jeweller.

Merchant. O, 'tis a worthy lord.

Poet. Nay, that's most fix'd.

Merchant. A most incomparable man, breathed, as it were, to untirable and continue goodness:

Poet. I have a jewel here—

Merchant. O, pray, let's see it: for the Lord Timon, sir?

Poet. If he will touch the estimate: but, for that—

[Reciting to himself] 'When we for recompense have praised the vile, as the glory in that happy verse apply sings the good.'

'Tis a good form.

[Looking at the jewel.]

Merchant. And rich: here is a water, look ye.

Poet. You are rapt, sir, in some work, some education:

Merchant. A great lord.

Poet. A thing slipp'd idly from me. so easy is a gum, which ooze whereas 'tis nourish'd: the fire 'tis the flint not till it be struck; our gentle flame ces itself and like the current flies sound it chafes. What have you there?

PHRYNIA, TIMANDRA, mistressesses to Alcibiades.

Cupid and Amazons in the mask.

Other Lords, Senators, Officers, Soldiers, Banditti, and Attendants.

Scene: Athens, and the neighbouring woods.

Pain. A picture, sir. When comes your book forth?

Poet. Upon the heels of my presentment, sir.

Let's see your piece.

Pain. 'Tis a good piece.

Poet. So 'tis: this comes off well and excellent.

Pain. Indifferent.

Poet. Admirable: how this grace 30

Speaks his own standing! what a mental power

This eye shoots forth! how big imagination

Moves in this lip! to the dumbness of the gesture

One might interpret.

Pain. It is a pretty mocking of the life.

Here is a touch; 'tis good!

Poet. I will say of it,

It tutors nature: artificial strive

Lives in these touches, livelier than life.

Enter certain Senators, and pass over.

Pain. How this lord is follow'd!

Poet. The senators of Athens: happy man!

Pain. Look, more!

Poet. You see this confluence, this great flood of visitors.

I have, in this rough work, shaped out a man,

Whom this beneath world deth embrace and hug

With amplest entertainment: my free drift

Halts not particularly, but moves itself

In a wide sea of wax: no levell'd malice

Infests one comma in the course I hold;

But flies an eagle flight, bold and forth on,

Leaving no tract behind.

Pain. How shall I understand you?

Poet. I will unbolt to you.

You see how all conditions, how all minds,

As well of glib and slippery creatures as

Of grave and austere quality, tender down

Their services to Lord Timon: his large fortune

Upon his good and gracious nature hanging

Subdues and properties to his love and tendance

All sorts of hearts; yea, from the glass-faced flatterer

To Apemantus, that few things loves better

Than to abhor himself; even he drops down

60
The knee before him and returns in peace
Most rich in Timon's nod.

_Pain._

I saw them speak together.

_Poet._

Sir, I have upon a high and pleasant hill
Feign'd Fortune to be throned: the base o' the mot
Is rank'd with all deserts, all kind of natures,
That labour on the bosom of this sphere
To propagate their states: amongst them all,
Whose eyes are on this sovereign lady fix'd,
One do I personate of Lord Timon's frame,
Whom Fortune with her ivory hand wafts to her;
Whose present graces to present slaves and servants
Translates his rivals.

_Pain._

'Tis conceived to scope.
This throne, this Fortune, and this hill, methinks,
With one man beckon'd from the rest below,
Bow'd his head against the steepy mount
To climb his happiness, would be well express'd
In our condition.

_Poet._

Nay, sir, but hear me on.
All those which were his fellows but of late,
Some better than his value, on the moment
Follow his strides, his hobbies fill with tendance,
Rain sacrificial whisperings in his ear,
Make sacred even his stirrup, and through him
Drink the free air.

_Pain._

Ay, marry, what of these?

_Poet._

When Fortune in her shift and change of mood
Spurns down her late beloved, all his dependants
Which labour'd after him to the mountain's top
Even on their knees and hands, let him slip down,
Not one accompanying his declining foot.

_Pain._

'Tis common:
A thousand moral paintings I can show
That shall demonstrate these quick blows of Fortune's
More pregnantly than words. Yet you do well
To show Lord Timon that mean eyes have seen
The foot above the head.

_Tim._

_Tim._

_Enter Lord Timon, addressing himself courteously to every suitor; a Messenger from Ventidius talking with him;
Lucilius and other servants following.

Mess._

Ay, my good lord: five talents is his debt,
His means most short, his creditors most strait:
Your honourable letter he desires
To those have shut him up; which failing,
Perishes his comfort.

_Tim._

Noble Ventidius! Well;
I am not of that feather to shake off
My friend when he must need me. I do know
him
A gentleman that well deserves a help:
Which he shall have: I'll pay the debt, and free
him.

_Mess._

Your lordship ever binds him.

_Tim._

Commend me to him: I will send his ransom;
And being enfranchised, bid him come to me.
'Tis not enough to help the feeble up,
But to support him after. Fare you well.

_Mess._

All happiness to your honour! _[Exit._

Enter an old Athenian.

_Old Ath._

Lord Timon, hear me speak.

_Tim._

Freely, good father.

_Old Ath._

Thou hast a servant named Lucilius?

_Tim._

I have so: what of him?

_Old Ath._

Most noble Timon, call the

Tim._

Attends he here, or no? Lucilius!

Luc._

Here, at your lordship's service.

_Old Ath._

This fellow here, Lord Timon,
thy creature,
By night frequent's my house. I am a man
That from my first have been inclined to thri
And my estate deserves an heir more raised
Than one which holds a trencher.

_Tim._

Well; what further?

_Old Ath._

One only daughter have I, no

On whom I may confer what I have got:
The maid is fair, 'o' the youngest for a bride,
And I have bred her at my dearest cost
In qualities of the best. This man of thine
Attempts her love: I prithee, noble lord,
Join with me to forbid him her resort;
My name have spoke in vain.

_Tim._

The man is honest.

_Old Ath._

Therefore he will be, Timon:
His honesty rewards him in itself;
It must not bear my daughter.

_Tim._

Does she love him?

_Old Ath._

She is young and apt:
Our own precedent passions do instruct us
What levity's in youth.

_Tim._

_[To Lucilius]_ Love you the maid?

Luc._

Ay, my good lord, and she accepts

_Old Ath._

If in her marriage my consent

I call the gods to witness, I will choose
Mine heir from forth the beggars of the world
And dispossess her all.

_Tim._

How shall she be endow'd
If she be mated with an equal husband?

_Old Ath._

Three talents on the present

_Tim._

This gentleman of mine hath served long;
To build his fortune I will strain a little,
For 'tis a bond in men. Give him thy daugh-
What you bestow, in him I'll counterpart,
And make him weigh with her.

_Old Ath._

Most noble lord,

_Poet._

Paw me to this your honour, she is his.

_Tim._

My hand to thee; mine honour or promise.

_Luc._

Humbly I thank your lordship: a

That state or fortune fall into my keeping,
Which is not owed to you!

_Exeunt Lucilius and Old Athenian._

_Poet._

Vouchsafe my labour, and long live

_Tim._

I thank you; you shall hear from Go not away. What have you there, my frien-

_Paint._

A piece of painting, which I do beseech
Your lordship to accept.

_Tim._

Painting is welcome.
ince dishonour traffics with man's nature, but outside: these pencil'd figures are such as they give out. I like your work; you shall find I like it: wait attendance 161 on me further from me.

The gods preserve ye!

Well fare you, gentleman: give me your hand;

What, my lord! I dispair?

A mere satiety of commendations, would pay you for 't as 'tis extoll'd, old uncle me quite.

My lord, 'tis rated of like value differing in the owners 170

ezized by their masters: believe 't, dear lord, end the jewel by the wearing it.

Well mock'd.

No, my good lord; he speaks the common tongue, all men speak with him.

Look, who comes here: will you be hid?

Enter APEMANUS.

We'll bear, with your lordship.

He'll spare none.

Good morrow to thee, gentle Apeamanus! 170

Till I be gentle, stay thou for thy good morrow; thou art Timon's dog, and these knaves onest.

Why dost thou call them knaves? thou now'st them not.

Are they not Athenians?

Yes.

Then I repent not.

You know me, Apeamanus?

Thou know'st I do: I call'd thee by name.

Thou art proud, Apeamanus.

Of nothing so much as that I am not mon.

Whiter art going?

To knock out an honest Athenian's

That's a deed thou'll die for.

Right, if doing nothing be death by

How likest thou this picture, Apeamanus-

The best, for the innocence.

Wrought he not well that painted it? 200

He wrought better that made it; and yet he's but a filthy piece of work.

You're a dog.

Thy mother's of my generation: what's

't be a dog?

Will dine with me, Apeamanus?

No: I eat not lords.

An thou shouldst, thou 'lst anger ladies.

O, they eat lords; so they come by allies.

That's a lascivious apprehension.

So thou apprehendest it: take it for

Tim. How dost thou like this jewel, Apeamanus?

Apeam. Not so well as plain-dealing, which will not cost a man a doit.

Tim. What dost thou think 'tis worth?

Apeam. Not worth my thinking. How now, poet!

Poet. How now, philosopher!

Apeam. Thou liest.

Poet. Art not one?

Apeam. Yes.

Poet. Then I lie not.

Apeam. Art not a poet?

Poet. Yes.

Apeam. Then thou liest: look in thy last work, where thou hast feigned him a worthy fellow.

Poet. That's not feigned; he is so.

Apeam. Yes, he is worthy of thee, and to pay thee for thy labour: he that loves to be flattered is worthy o' the flatterer. Heavens, that I were a lord!

Tim. What wouldst do then, Apeamanus?

Apeam. 'Ken as Apeamanus does now; hate a lord with my heart.

Tim. What, thyself?

Apeam. Ay.

Tim. Wherefore?

Apeam. 'Tis that I had no angry wit to be a lord.

Art not thou a merchant?

Mer. Ay, Apeamanus.

Apeam. Traffic confound thee, if the gods will not!

Mer. If traffic do it, the gods do it.

Apeam. Traffic's thy god; and thy god confound thee!

Trumpet sounds. Enter a Messenger.

Tim. What trumpet's that?

Mess. 'Tis Alcibiades, and some twenty horse, All of companionship.

Tim. Pray, entertain them; give them guide to us. 251

[Exeunt some Attendants.

You must needs dine with me: go not you hence Till I have thank'd you: when dinner's done,
Show me this piece. I am joyful of your sights.

Enter ALCIBIADES, with the rest.

Most welcome, sir!

Apeam. So, so, there! Aches contract and starve your supple joints!

That there should be small love 'mongst these sweet knaves,

And all this courtesy! The strain of man's breed out

Into baboon and monkey.

Alcib. Sir, you have saved my longing, and I feed

Most hungerly on your sight.

Tim. Right welcome, sir! Ere we depart, we'll share a bounteous time

In different pleasures. Pray you, let us in.

[Exeunt all except Apeamanus.

Enter two Lords.

First Lord. What time o' day is't, Apeamanus?

Apeam. Time to be honest.

First Lord. That time serves still.

Apeam. The more accursed thou, that still omitt'st it.
Sec. Lord. Thou art going to Lord Timon's feast? Ay, to see meat fill knives and wine heat fools.

Apem. Sec. Lord. Fare thee well, fare thee well. Apem. Thou art a fool to bid me farewell twice. Sec. Lord. Why, Apemantus? Apem. Shouldst have kept one to thyself, for I mean to give thee none. First Lord. Hang thyself! Apem. No, I will do nothing at thy bidding: make thy requests to thy friend. Sec. Lord. Away, unpeaceable dog, or I'll spurn thee hence! 281 Apem. I will fly, like a dog, the heels o' the ass.

First Lord. He's opposite to humanity. Come, shall we in, and taste Lord Timon's bounty? he outgoes The very heart of kindness. Sec. Lord. He pours it out; Plutus, the god of gold, Is but his steward: no meed, but he repays Sevenfold above itself; no gift to him, But breeds the giver a return exceeding All use of quittance. First Lord. The noblest mind he carries That ever govern'd man. Sec. Lord. Long may he live in fortunes! Shall we in? First Lord. I'll keep you company. [Exeunt.

Scene II. A banqueting-room in Timon's house.

Hautboys playing loud music. A great banquet served in; Flavius and others attending; then enter Lord Timon, Alcibiades, Lords, Senators, and Ventidius. Then comes, dropping after all, Apemantus, discontentedly, like himself.

Ven. Most honour'd Timon, It hath pleased the gods to remember my father's age, And call him to long peace. He is gone happy, and has left me rich: Then, as in grateful virtue I am bound To your free heart, I do return those talents, Doubled with thanks and service, from whose help I derived liberty.

Tim. O, by no means, Honest Ventidius; you mistake my love: I gave it freely ever; and there's none Can truly say he gives, if he receives: If our betters play at that game, we must not dare To imitate them; faults that are rich are fair.

Ven. A noble spirit! Nay, my lords, [They all stand ceremoniously looking on Timon.]

Ceremony was but devised at first To set a gloss on faint deeds, hollow welcomes, Recanting goodness, sorry ere 'tis shown; But where there is true friendship, there needs none. Pray, sit; more welcome are ye to my fortunes Than my fortunes to me. [They sit. ]

First Lord. My lord, we always have fess'd it. Apem. Ho, ho, confess'd it! hang'd it, I you not? Tim. O, Apemantus, you are welcome.

You shall not make me welcome: I come to have thee thrust me out of doors. Tim. Fie, thou'rt a churl! ye've got a hun there

Does not become a man; 'tis much to blame. They say, my lords, 'ira furor brevis est;' yond man is ever angry. Go, let him ha table by himself, for he does neither affect pany, nor is he fit for', indeed. Apem. Let me stay at thine apperil, Tim. I come to observe; I give thee warning on'. I take no heed of thee; thou's Athenian, therefore welcome: I myself w have no power; prithee, let my meat make silent.

Apem. I scorn thy meat; 'twould choke for I should ne'er flatter thee. O you gods, a number of men eat Timon, and he sees'em It grizes me to see so many dip their me one man's blood; and all the madness is cheers them up too. I wonder men dare trust themselves with me Menthinks they should invite them without kin Good for their meat, and safer for their lives. There's much example for 't: the fellow that next him now, parts bread with him, pledges breath of him in a divided draught, is the rea man to kill him; 't has been proved. If I a huge man, I should fear to drink at meals; Lest they should spy my windpipe's dange notes: Great men should drink with harness on throats.

Tim. My lord, in heart; and let the hom go round. Sec. Lord. Let it flow this way, my good Apem. Flow this way! A brave fellow keeps his tide well. Those healths will a thee and thy state look ill, Timon. Here's which is too weak to be a sinner, honest w which ne'er left man i' the mire: This and my food are equals; there's no odd Feasts are too proud to give thanks to the go Apemantus grace.

Immortal gods, I crave no pelf; I pray for no man but myself; Grant I may never prove so fond, To trust man on his oath or bond; Or a harlot, for her weeping; Or a dog, that seems a-sleeping; Or a keeper with my freedom; Or my friends, if I should need' em. Amen. So fall to 't: Rich men sin, and I eat root. [Eats and dr

Much good t' dich thy good heart, Apemantus Tim. Captain Alcibiades, your heart's in field now.

Alcib. My heart is ever at your service lord.

Tim. You had rather be at a breakfast enemies than a dinner of friends.
So they were bleeding-new, my lord, 's no meat like 'em: I could wish my best at such a feast.

Would all those flatterers were thine as thou, and then thou mightst kill 'em and eat 'em! 2nd Lord. Might we but have that happy my lord, that thou wouldst use 'em and give to 'em! 2nd Lord. Might we but have that happy

O, no doubt, my good friends, but the themselves have provided that I shall have help from you: how had you been my else? why have you that charitable title thousands, did not you chiefly belong to my I have told more of you to myself than in with modesty speak in your own behalf; as I confirm you. O you gods, think it need we have any friends, if we should have need of 'em? they were the most need-features living, should we ne'er have use for and would most resemble sweet instruments in cases that keep their sounds to them-yes, I have often wished myself poorer, might come nearer to you. We are born benefits: and what better or properer can our own than the riches of our friends? of a precious comfort 'tis, to have so many others, commanding one another's fortunes! 'em made away ere 't can be born! Why, I have often wished myself poorer, might come nearer to you. We are born benefits: and what better or properer can our own than the riches of our friends?

Joy had the like conception in our that instant like a babe sprung up.

Ho, ho! I laugh to think that babe a 2nd Lord. I promise you, my lord, you oved me much. Much!

What means that trump?

Enter a Servant.

How now? 120

Please you, my lord, there are certain post desirous of admittance. Ladies! what are their wills? There comes with them a forerunner, which bears that office, to signify their 125

I pray, let them be admitted.

Enter Cupid.

Hail to thee, worthy Timon, and to all his bounties taste! The five best senses lodge thee their patron; and come freely slate thy plenteous bosom: th' ear, touch and smell, pleased from thy table; now come but to feast thine eyes. They're welcome all; let 'em have kind mittance; make their welcome! [Exit Cupid.

Lord. You see, my lord, how ample are beloved.

Music. Re-enter Cupid, with a mask of Ladies as Amazons, with lutes in their hands, dancing and playing.

Apem. Hoy-day, what a sweep of vanity comes this way! They dance! they are mad women. Like madness is the glory of this life, As this pomp shows to a little oil and root. We make ourselves fools, to dispot ourselves; And spend our flatteries, to drink those men Upon whose age we void it up again, With poisonous spite and envy. Who lives that's not depraved or depraves? Who dies, that bears not one spur to their graves Of their friends' gift? I should fear those that dance before me now Would one day stamp upon me: 'thas been done; Men shut their doors against a setting sun.

The Lords rise from table, with much adoring of Timon; and to show their loves, each singles out an Amazon, and all dance, men with women, a lofty strain or two to the hautboys, and cose.

Tim. You have done our pleasures much grace, fair ladies, Set a fair fashion on our entertainment, Which was not half so beautiful and kind; You have added worth unto 't and lustre, And entertain'd me with mine own device; I am to thank you for 't.

First Lady. My lord, you take us even at the best.

Apem. 'Faith, for the worst is filthy; and would not hold taking, I doubt me. Tim. Ladies, there is an idle banquet attends you:

Please you to dispose yourselves.

All Ladies. Most thankfully, my lord. [Exeunt Cupid and Ladies.

Tim. Flavius.

Flavius. My lord?

Tim. The little casket bring me hither. Flavius. Yes, my lord. More jewels yet! [Aside. There is no crossing him in 's humour; Else I should tell him,—well, 't faith, I should, When all's spent, he'd be cross'd then, an he could. 'Tis pity bounty had not eyes behind, That man might ne'er be wretched for his mind. [Exit.

First Lord. Where be our men? 171

Serv. Here, my lord, in readiness.

Sec. Lord. Our horses!

Re-enter Flavius, with the casket.

Tim. O my friends, I have one word to say to you: look you, my good lord, I must entreat you, honour me so much As to advance this jewel; accept it and wear it, Kind my lord.

First Lord. I am so far already in your gifts,— All. So are we all.

Enter a Servant.

Serv. My lord, there are certain nobles of the senate
Newly alighted, and come to visit you.
Tim. They are fairly welcome.
Flav. I beseech your honour,
Vouchsafe me a word; it does concern you near.
Tim. Near I why then, another time I'll hear thee;
I prithee, let's be provided to show them entertainment.
Flav. [Aside] I scarce know how.

Enter a second Servant.
Sec. Serv. May it please your honour, Lord Lucius,
Out of his free love, hath presented to you
Four milk-white horses, trapp'd in silver.
Tim. I shall accept them fairly; let the presents
Be worthily entertain'd.

Enter a third Servant.
How now! what news?
Third Serv. Please you, my lord, that honourable gentleman, Lord Lucius, entertains your company to-morrow to hunt with him, and has sent your honour two brace of greyhounds.
Tim. I'll hunt with him; and let them be received,
Not without fair reward.
Flav. [Aside] What will this come to?
He commands us to provide, and give great gifts,
And all out of an empty coffers:
Nor will he know his purse, or yield me this,
To show him what a beggar his heart is,
Being of no power to make his wishes good:
His promises fly so beyond his state
That what he speaks is all in debt; he owes
For every word: he is so kind that he now
Pays interest for't; his land's put to their books.
Well, would I were gently put out of office
Before I were forced out!
Happier is he that has no friend to feed
Than such as do e'en enemies exceed.
I bleed inwardly for my lord. [Exit.
Tim. You do yourselves
Much wrong, you bate too much of your own merits:
Here, my lord, a trifle of our love.
Sec. Lord. With more than common thanks I will receive it.
Third Lord. O, he's the very soul of bounty!
Tim. And now I remember, my lord, you gave Good words the other day of a bay coursers
I rode on: it is yours, because you liked it.
Sec. Lord. O, I beseech you, pardon me, my lord, in that.
Tim. You may take my word, my lord; I know,
no man
Can justly praise but what he does affect:
I weigh my friend's affection with mine own;
I'll tell you true. I'll call to you.
All Lords.
Tim. O, none so welcome.
They take all and your several visitsations
So kind to heart, 'tis not enough to give;
Methinks, I could deal kingdoms to my friends,
And ne'er be weary. Alcibiades,
Thou art a soldier, therefore seldom rich;
It comes in charity to thee: for all thy living
Is 'mongst the dead, and all the lands thou hast
Lie in a pitch'd field.
Alcib.
Ay, defiled land, my lord. 231

First Lord. We are so virtuously bound
Tim. Am I to you.
Sec. Lord. So infinitely endear'd—
Tim. All to you. Lights, more lights!
First Lord. The best of happy
Honour and fortunes, keep with you, Lord Tim.
Tim. Ready for his friends. [Exit.
Atem. What a coil's
Serving of becks and jutting-out of buns!
I doubt whether their legs be worth the sum
That are given for 'em. Friendship's full of Methinks, false hearts should never have s legs.
Thus honest fools lay out their wealth on court
Tim. Now, Atemantus, if thou wert not so
I would be good to thee.
Atem. Nay, an you begin to rival on so once, I am sworn not to give regard to Farewell; and come with better music.
Atem. So:
Thou wilt not hear me now; thou shalt not
I'll lock thy heaven from thee.
O, that men's ears should be
To counsel deaf, but not to flattery!

ACT II.

Scene I. A Senator's house.
Enter Senator, with papers in his hand.
Sen. And late, five thousand: to Varro
Isidore
He owes nine thousand; besides my former Which makes it five and twenty. Still in
Of raging waste? It cannot hold; it will n
If I want gold, steal but a beggar's dog,
And give it Timon, why, the dog coins gold;
If I would sell my horses, and buy twenty
Better than he, why, give my horse to Timon
Ask nothing, give it him, it foals me, straig
And able horses. No porter at his gate,
But rather one that smiles and still invites
All that pass by. It cannot hold; no reason
Can found his state in safety. Caphis, ho!
Caphis, I say!

Enter Caphis.
Caph. Here, sir; what is your pleas Sen. Get on your cloak, and haste you to Timon;
Importune him for my moneys; be not cen
With slight denial, nor then silenced when  "Commend me to your master"—and the ca
Plays in the right hand, thus: but tell him
My uses cry to me, I must serve my turn
Out of mine own; his days and times are p
And my reliances on his fraughted dates
Have smit my credit; I love and honour h
But not break my back to heal his fins
Immediate are my needs, and my relief
Must not be toss'd and turn'd to me in war
But find supply immediate. Get you gone
A most importunate aspect,

Apem. Canst not read?

Page. No.

Apem. There will little learning die then, that day thou art hanged. This is to Lord Timon; this to Alcibiades. Go; thou wast born a bastard, and thou die a bawd.

Page. Thou wast whelped a dog, and thou shalt famish a dog’s death. Answer not; I am gone.

[Exit.

Apem. E’en so thou outrunnest grace. Fool, I will go with you to Lord Timon’s.

Fool. Will you leave me there?

[Exeunt Alcibiades and Lords.

[To Flav.] Come hither: pray you, how goes the world, that I am thus encountered’d with shamorous demands of date-broke bonds, and the detention of long-since due debts, against my honour?

Flav. Please you, gentlemen, the time is unagreeable to this business: your importunacy cease till after dinner, that I may make his lordship understand wherefore you are not paid.

Tim. Do so, my friends. See them well entertained.

[Exit.

Flav. Pray, draw near.

Enter APEMANTUS AND FOOL.

Caph. Stay, stay, here comes the fool with Apeamanus: let’s ha’ some sport with ’em.

Var. Serv. Hang him, he’ll abuse us.

Isid. Serv. A plague upon him, dog!

Var. Serv. How dost, fool?

Apem. Dost dialogue with thy shadow?

Var. Serv. I speak not to thee.

Apem. No, ’tis to thyself. [To the Fool] Come away.

Isid. Serv. There’s the fool hangs on your back already.

Apem. No, thou stand’st single, thou’rt not on him yet.

Caph. Where’s the fool now?

Apem. He last asked the question. Poor rogues, and usurers’ men! bawds between gold and want!

All Serv. What are we, Apeamanus?

Apem. Asses.

All Serv. Why?

Apem. That you ask me what you are, and do not know yourselves. Speak to ’em, fool.

Fool. How do you, gentlemen?

All Serv. Gramercies, good fool: how does your mistress?

Fool. She’s en setting on water to scald such chickens as you are. Would we could see you at Corinth!

Apem. Good! gramercy.

[Exit Page.

Fool. Look you, here comes my mistress’ page.

Page. [To the Fool] Why, how now, captain! what do you in this wise company? How dost thou, Apeamanus?

Apem. Would I had a rod in my mouth, that I might answer thee profitably.

Page. Prithée, Apeamanus, read me the superscription of these letters: I know not which is which.

Apem. Canst not read?

Page. No.

Apem. There will little learning die then, that day thou art hanged. This is to Lord Timon; this to Alcibiades. Go; thou wast born a bastard, and thou die a bawd.

Page. Thou wast whelped a dog, and thou shalt famish a dog’s death. Answer not; I am gone. [Exit.

Apem. E’en so thou outrunnest grace. Fool, I will go with you to Lord Timon’s.

Fool. Will you leave me there?
Apem. If Timon stay at home. You three serve three usurers?
All Serv. Ay; would they served us!
Apem. So would I,—as good a trick as ever hangman served thief. 100 Fool. Are you three usurers' men?
All Serv. Ay, fool.
Fool. I think no usurer but has a fool to his servant: my mistress is one, and I am her fool. When men come to borrow of your masters, they approach sadly, and go away merry; but they enter my mistress' house merrily, and go away sadly: the reason of this?
Var. Serv. I could render one. 109
Apem. Do it then, that we may account thee a whore-master and a knave; which notwith- standing, thou shalt be no less esteemed.
Var. Serv. What is a whoremaster, fool?
Fool. A fool in good clothes, and something like thee. 'Tis a spirit: sometime 'tis appears like a lord; sometime like a lawyer; sometime like a philosopher, with two stones more than'th arti- ficial one: he is very often like a knight; and, generally, in all shapes that man goes up and down in from fourscore to thirteen, this spirit walks in.
Var. Serv. Thou art not altogether a fool.
Fool. Nor thou altogether a wise man: as much foolery as I have, so much wit thou lackest.
Apem. That answer might have become Ape- mantus.
All Serv. Aside, aside; here comes Lord Ti- mon.
Re-enter Timon and Flavius.
Apem. Come with me, fool, come.
Fool. I do not always follow lover, elder bro- ther and woman; sometime the philosopher. 131
[Exeunt Ape- mantus and Fool.
Flav. Pray you, walk near: I'll speak with you anon.

Tim. You make me marvel: wherefore ere this time
Had you not fully laid my state before me,
That I might so have rated my expense,
As I had leave of means?
Flav. You would not hear me,
At many leisure I proposed.
Tim. Go to:
Perchance some single vantages you took,
When my indisposition put you back;
And that unaptness made your minister,
Thus to excuse yourself.
Flav. O my good lord,
At many times I brought in my accounts,
Laid them before you; you would throw them off,
And say, you found them in mine honesty.

Within there! Flaminius! Servilius!

Enter Flaminius, Servilius, and other Servants.
Servants. My lord? my lord?
Tim. I will dispatch you severally; y his honour to-day: you, to Sempron commen

Flav. [Aside] Lord Lucius and Luci
Tim. Go you, sir, to the senators—
Of whom, even to the state's best health,
TIMON OF ATHENS.

[Scene I. A room in Lucullus's house.

NIUS. Waiting. Enter a Servant to him.

Serv. I have told my lord of you; he is coming soon to you.

NIUS. I thank you, sir.

Enter Lucullus.

LUCULLUS. Here's my lord.

[Aside] One of Lord Timon's men? a warrant. Why, this hits right; I dreamt ver basin and ever to-night. Flaminius, Flaminius; you are very respectively wel-in. Fill me some wine. [Exit Servant.]

Flam. His health is well, sir.

Lucullus. I am right glad that his health is well, sir: and what hast thou there under thy cloak, pretty Flaminius?

Flam. 'Faith, nothing but an empty box, sir; which, in my lord's behalf, I come to entertain your honour to supply; who, having great and instant occasion to use fifty talents, hath sent to your lordship to furnish him, nothing doubting your present assistance therein.

Lucullus. La, la, la! 'nothing doubting,' says he? Alas, good lord! a noble gentleman 'tis, if he would not keep so good a house. Many a time and often I ha' dined with him, and told him on't, and come again to supper to him, of purpose to have him spend less, and yet he would embrace no counsel, take no warning by my coming. Every man has his fault, and honesty is his: I ha' told him on't, but I could ne'er get him from't.

Re-enter Servant, with wine.

Serv. Please your lordship, here is the wine.

Lucullus. Flaminius, I have noted thee always wise. Here's to thee.

Flam. Your lordship speaks your pleasure.

Lucullus. I have observed thee always for a towadly prompt spirit—give thee thy due—and one that knows what belongs to reason; and cannot use the time well, if the time use thee well: good parts in thee. [To Serv.] Get thee gone, sirrah [Exit Serv.]. Draw nearer, honest Flaminius. Thy lord's a bountiful gentleman: but thou art wise; and thou knowest well enough, although thou comest to me, that this is no time to lend money, especially upon bare friendship, without security. Here's three solidares for thee: good boy, wink at me, and say thou sawest me not. Fare thee well.

Flam. Is't possible the world should so much differ? And we alive that lived? Fly, damned baseness, To him that worships thee! [Throwing the money back.]

Lucullus. Ha! now I see thou art a fool, and fit for thy master. [Exit.]

Flam. May these add to the number that may scalch thee.

Let molten coin be thy damnation, Thou disease of a friend, and not himself! Has friendship such a faint and milky heart, It turns in less than two nights? O you gods, I feel my master's passion! this slave, Unto his honour, has my lord's meat in him: Go Why should it thrive and turn to nutriment, When he is turn'd to poison? O, may diseases only work upon't! And, when he's sick to death, let not that part of nature Which my lord paid for, be of any power To expel sickness, but prolong his hour! [Exit.

Scene II. A public place.

Enter Lucius, with three Strangers.

Lucius. Who, the Lord Timon? he is my very good friend, and an honourable gentleman.

First Stranger. We know him for no less, though we are but strangers to him. But I can tell you one thing, my lord, and which I hear from common rumours: now Lord Timon's happy hours are done and past, and his estate shrinks from him.

Luc. Fie, no, do not believe it; he cannot want for money.

Sec. Stran. But believe you this, my lord, that, not long ago, one of his men was with the Lord Lucullus to borrow so many talents, nay, urged extremely for't and showed what necessity belonged to't, and yet was denied.

Luc. How!

Sec. Stran. I tell you, denied, my lord.

Luc. What a strange case was that! now, before the gods, I am ashamed on't. Denied that honourable man! there was very little honour showed in't. For my own part, I must needs confess, I have received some small kindnesses from him, as money, plate, jewels and such-like trifles, nothing comparing to his; yet, had he mistook him and sent to me, I should ne'er have denied his occasion so many talents.

Enter Servilius.

Ser. See, by good hap, yonder's my lord; I have sweat to see his honour. My honoured lord.—

Luc. Servilius! you are kindly met, sir. Fare thee well: commend me to thy honourable virtuous lord, my very exquisite friend.

Ser. May it please your honour, my lord hath sent—

Luc. Ha! what has he sent? I am so much endeared to that lord: he's ever sending: how shall I thank him, thickest thou? And what has he sent now?

Ser. Has only sent his present occasion now, my lord; requesting your lordship to supply his instant use with so many talents.

Luc. I know his lordship is but merry with me;‡

He cannot want fifty five hundred talents.

Ser. But in the mean time he wants less, my lord.

If his occasion were not virtuous,

I should not urge it half so faithfully.

Luc. Dost thou speak seriously, Servilius?

Ser. Upon my soul, 'tis true, sir.

Luc. What a wicked beast was I to dismiss myself against such a good time, when I might ha' shown myself honourable! how unlucky it happened, that I should purchase the day before for a little part, and undo a great deal of honour! Servilius, now, before the gods, I am not able to do,—the more beast, I say:—I was sending to use Lord Timon myself, these gentlemen can witness; but I would not, for the wealth of Athens, I had done't now. Commend me bountifully to his good lordship; and I hope his honour will conceive the fairest of me, because I have no power to be kind: and tell him this from me, I count it one of my greatest afflictions, say; that I cannot pleasure such an honourable gentleman. Good Servilius, will you befriended me so far, as to use mine own words to him?

Ser. Yes, sir, I shall.

Luc. I'll look you out a good turn, Servilius.

[Exit Servilius.

True, as you said, Timon is shrunk indeed;

And he that's once denied will hardly speak.

First Stran. Do you observe this, Host.

Sec. Stran. Ay, too we.

First Stran. Why, this is the world's and just of the same piece

Is every flatterer's spirit. Who can call him

His friend that dips in the same dish? for, I

My knowing, Timon has been this lord's fat

And kept his credit with his purse.

Supported his estate: nay, Timon's money

Has paid his men their wages: he ne'er de-

But Timon's silver treads upon his lip;

And yet—O, see the monstrousness of man

When he looks out in an ungrateful shape-

He does deny him, in respect of his,

What charitable men afford to beggars.

Third Stran. Religion groans at it.

First Stran. For mine own

I never tasted Timon in my life,

Nor came any of his bounties over me,

To mark me for his friend; yet, I protest,

For his right noble mind, illustrious virtue

And honourable carriage,

Had his necessity made use of me,

I would have put my wealth into donation,

And the best half should have return'd to his

So much I love his heart: but, I perceive,

Men must learn now with pity to dispense

For policy sits above conscience.

[Exeunt.

Scene III. A room in Sempronius' house.

Enter Sempronius, and a Servant of Timon.

Sem. Must he needs trouble me in 't,— above all others?

He might have tried Lord Lucius or Lucullus

And now Ventidius is wealthy too,

Whom he redeem'd from prison: all these

Owe their estates unto him.

Serv. My lord,

They have all been touch'd and found base:

They have all denied him.

Sem. How! have they denied

Has Ventidius and Lucullus denied him?

And does he send to me? Three! hum! it Shows but little love or judgement in him

Must I be his last refuge? His friends

Are physicians,

†Thrive, give him over: must I take the upon me?

Has much disgraced me in 't; I'm angry

That might have known my place: I see no

for't,

But his occasions might have wou'd me first.

For, in my conscience, I was the first man

That e'er received gift from him:

And does he think so backwardly of me now

That I'll require it last? No:

So it may prove an argument of laughter

To the rest, and 'mongst lords I be thought

I'd rather than the worth of three times the sum

Had sent to me first, but for my mind's sake

I'd such a courage to do him good.

And return,

And with their faint reply this answer join,

Who bates mine honour shall not know my
TIMON OF ATHENS. 751

TIMON. Excellent! Your lordship's a goodly
The devil knew not what he did when de man politic; he crossed himself by 't: cannot think but, in the end, the villains will set him clear. How fairly this lord to appear foul! I takes virtuous copies to be, like those that under hot ardent zeal set whole realms on fire:

as my lord's best hope; now all are fled, nly the gods: now his friends are dead, that were n'er acquainted with their wards a bounteous year, must be employ'd 49 guard sure their master. 40

'tis all a liberal course allows;

not keep his wealth must keep his house. [Exit.

IV. The same. A hall in Timon's house.
two Servants of VARRO, and the Servant ius, meeting Titus, Hortensius, and Servants of Timon's creditors, waiting coming out.

Var. Serv. Well met; good morrow, Titus and Hortensius. The like to you, kind Varro. Lucius! do we meet together? Serv. Ay, and I think sinness does command us all; for mine sy. So is theirs and ours.

Enter Philotus.

Serv. And Sir Philotus too!

Good day at once. Serv. Welcome, good brother. o you think the hour? Labouring for nine. Serv. So much? Is not my lord seen yet? Serv. Not yet. I wonder on't; he was wont to shine at ven. 10 Serv. Ay, but the days are wax'd shorter in him; Ist consider that a prodigal course he's; but not, like his, recoverable. is deepest winter in Lord Timon's purse; one may reach deep enough, and yet tise, I am of your fear for that. I'll show you how to observe a strange ent. rd sends now for money.

Most true, he does. And he wears jewels now of Timon's gift, ch I wait for money. 20

It is against my heart. Serv. Mark, how strange it shows, n this pay more than he owes: n as if your lord should wear rich jewels, id for money for 'em.

I'm weary of this charge, the gods can tness; my lord hath spent of Timon's wealth, w ingratitude makes it worse than stealth.

First Var. Serv. Yes, mine's three thousand crowns: what's yours?

Luc. Serv. Five thousand mine.

First Var. Serv. 'Tis much deep: and it should seem by the sun, Your master's confidence was above mine; Else, surely, his had equal'd.

Enter Flaminius.

Tit. One of Lord Timon's men. Luc. Serv. Flaminius! Sir, a word: pray, is my lord ready to come forth?

Flam. No, indeed, he is not. Tit. We attend his lordship; pray, signify so much. Flam. I need not tell him that; he knows you are too diligent. [Exit. 49

Enter Flavius in a cloak, muffled.

Luc. Serv. Ha! is not that his steward muffled so? He goes away in a cloud: call him, call him. Tit. Do you hear, sir? Sec. Var. Serv. By your leave, sir,— Flav. What do ye ask of me, my friend? Tit. We wait for certain money here, sir. Flav. Ay, If money were as certain as your waiting, 'Twere sure enough.

Why then prefer'd you not your sums and bills, When your false masters eat of my lord's meat? 50 Then they could smile and fawn upon his debts And take down the interest into their glutinous maws.

You do yourselves but wrong to stir me up; Let me pass quietly: Believe't, my lord and I have made an end; I have no more to reckon, he to spend. Luc. Serv. Ay, but this answer will not serve. Flav. If 't will not serve, 'tis not so base as you; For you serve knives. [Exit. First Var. Serv. How! what does his cashier'd worship mutter?

61 Sec. Var. Serv. No matter what; he's poor, and that's revenge enough. Who can speak broader than he that has no house to put his head in? such may rail against great buildings.

Enter Servilius.

Tit. O, here's Servilius; now we shall know some answer.

Ser. If I might beseech you, gentlemen, to repair some other hour, I should derive much from't; for, take't of my soul, my lord leans wondrously to discontent: his comfortable tem- per has forsok him; he's much out of health, and keeps his chamber. Luc. Serv. Many do keep their chambers are not sick.

And, if it be so far beyond his health, Methinks he should the sooner pay his debts, And make a clear way to the gods. Ser. Good gods!

Tit. We cannot take this for answer, sir. Flam. [Within] Servilius, help! My lord! my lord!
Enter Timon, in a rage; Flavius following.

Tim. What, are my doors opposed against my passage?

Have I been ever free, and must my house
Be my retentive enemy, my gaol?
The place which I have feasted, does it now,
Like all mankind, show me an iron heart?

Luc. Serv. Put in now, Titius.

Tit. My lord, here is my bill.

Luc. Serv. Here's mine.

Hor. And mine, my lord.

Bath Var. Serv. And ours, my lord.

Phi. All our bills.

Tim. Knock me down with 'em: cleave me to the girdle.

Luc. Serv. Alas, my lord.—

Tim. Cut my heart in sums.

Tit. Mine, fifty talents.

Tim. Tell out my blood.

Luc. Serv. Five thousand crowns, my lord.

Tim. Five thousand drops pays that. What yours—and yours?

First Var. Serv. My lord,—

Sec. Var. Serv. My lord,—

Tim. Tear me, take me, and the gods fall upon you!

[Exeunt.]

Hor. 'Faith, I perceive our masters may throw their caps at their money: these debts may well be called desperate ones, for a madman owes 'em.

[Exeunt.]

Re-enter Timon and Flavius.

Tim. They have e'en put my breath from me, the slaves.

Creditors? devils!

Flav. My dear lord,—

Tim. What if it should be so?

Flav. My lord,—

Tim. I'll have it so. My steward!

Flav. Here, my lord.

Tim. So fitly? Go, bid all my friends again, Lucius, Lucullus, and Sempronius:

All, sirrah, all: I'll once more feast the rascals.

Flav. O my lord, you only speak from your distraught soul; there is not so much left, to furnish out a moderate table.

Tim. Be't not in thy care; go, I charge thee, invite them all: let in the tide of knaves once more; for my cook and I'll provide.

[Exeunt.]

Scene V. The same. The senate-house.

The Senate sitting.

First Sen. My lord, you have my voice to it; the fault's bloody; 'tis necessary he should die:

Nothing emboldens sin so much as mercy.

Sec. Sen. Most true; the law shall bruise him.

Enter Alcibiades, with Attendants.

Alcib. Honour, health, and compassion to the senate!

First Sen. Now, captain?

Alcib. I am an humble suitor to your virtues; for pity is the virtue of the law, and none but tyrants use it cruelly. It pleases time and fortune to lie heavy

Upon a friend of mine, who, in hot blood,

Hath jumped into the law, which is past deep:

To those that, without heed, do plunge into

He is a man, setting his fate aside,

Of comely virtues:

Nor did he soil the fact with cowardice—

An honour in him which bears out his fault—

But with a noble fury and fair spirit,

Seeing his reputation touch'd to death,

He did oppose his foe:

And with such sober and unnoted passion

He did behave his anger, ere 'twas spent,

As if he had but proved an argument.

First Sen. You undergo too strict a para

Striving to make an ugly deed look fair:

Your words have taken such pains as if the bound

To bring manslaughter into form and set reeling

Upon the head of value; which indeed is

Value misbegot and came into the world

When sects and factions were newly born:

He's truly valiant that can wisely suffer

The worst that man can breathe, and make wrongs

His outsides, to wear them like his raiment,

Carelessly,

And never prefer his injuries to his heart,

To bring it into danger.

If wrongs be evils and enforce us kill,

What folly 'tis to hazard life for ill!

Alcib. My lord,—

First Sen. You cannot make gross look clear:

To revenge is no value, but to bear.

Alcib. My lords, then, under favour, please me,

If I speak like a captain.

Why do fond men expose themselves to bat

And not endure all threats? sleep upon 't,

And let the foes quietly cut their throats,

Without repugnancy? if there be

Such valour in the bearing, what make we

Abroad? why then, women are more valiant

That stay at home, if bearing carry it,

And the ass more caption than the lion, the

Loaden with irons wiser than the judge,

If wisdom be in suffering. O my lords,

As you are great, be pitifully good:

Who cannot condemn rashness in cold blood

To kill, I grant, is sin's extremest gust; but, in defence, by mercy, 'tis most just.

To be in anger is impetuous; but who is man that is not angry?

Weigh but the crime with this.

Sec. Sen. You breathe in vain.

Alcib. In vain! his service

At Lacedæmon and Byzantium

Were a sufficient brier for his life.

First Sen. What's that?

Alcib. I say, my lords, he has done fa

And slain in fight many of your enemies:

How full of valour did he bear himself

In the last conflict, and made plebeious w

you are foul, and his drink dangerous.

Sen. He dies.

b. Hard fate! he might have died in war.

his crime he owes the law his life,

let the war receive 't in valiant gore;

as strict, and war is nothing more.

Sen. We are for law; he dies; urge it
more,

ight of our displeasure: friend or brother,
feits his own blood that spills another.

But. Must it be so? it must not be. My lords, see you, know me.

Sen. How!

b. Call me to your remembrances.

d Sen. What!

b. I cannot think but your age has forget and be denied such common grace:

b. Banish me!
your dotage; banish usury,
takes the senate ugly.

Sen. If, after two days' shine, Athens contain thee,

our weighter judgement. And, not to well our spirit,

shall be executed presently.
[Exeunt Senators.

b. Now the gods keep you old enough;

of more than mad: I have kept back their foes,
they have told their money and let out cause worthy my spleen and fury, contented troops, and lay for hearts,

should brook as little wrongs as gods.

[Exit.]

VI. The same. A banqueting-room in Timon's house.

Tables set out: Servants attending.

r divers Lords, Senators and others, at d doors.

Lord. The good time of day to you, sir.

Sec. Lord. I also wish it to you. I think this honourable lord did but try us this other day.

First Lord. Upon that were my thoughts tiring, when we encountered: I hope it is not so low with him as he made it seem in the trial of his several friends.

Sec. Lord. It should not be, by the persuasion of his new feasting.

First Lord. I should think so: he hath sent me an earnest inviting, which many my near occasions did urge me to put off; but he hath conjured me beyond them, and I must needs appear.

Sec. Lord. In like manner was I in debt to my inportunate business, but he would not hear my excuse. I am sorry, when he sent to borrow of me, that my provision was out.

First Lord. I am sick of that grief too, as I understand how all things go.

Sec. Lord. Every man here's so. What would he have borrowed of you?

First Lord. A thousand pieces.

Sec. Lord. A thousand pieces!

First Lord. What of you?

Sec. Lord. He sent to me, sir.—Here he comes.

Enter Timon and Attendants.

Tim. With all my heart, gentlemen both; and how fare you?

First Lord. Ever at the best, hearing well of your lordship.

Sec. Lord. The swallow follows not summer more willing than we your lordship.

Tim. [Aside] Nor more willingly leaves winter; such summer-birds are men. Gentlemen, our dinner will not recompense this long stay:
feast your ears with the music awhile, if they will fare so harshly o' the trumpet's sound; we shall to't presently.

First Lord. I hope it remains not unkindly with your lordship that I returned you an empy messenger.

Tim. O, sir, let it not trouble you.

Sec. Lord. My noble lord,—

Tim. Ah, my good friend, what cheer?

Sec. Lord. My most honourable lord, I am 'en sick of shame, that, when your lordship this other day sent to me, I was so unfortunate a beggar.

Tim. Think not on't, sir.

Sec. Lord. If you had sent but two hours before,—

Tim. Let it not cumber your better remembrance. [The banquet brought in.] Come, bring in all together.

Sec. Lord. All covered dishes!

First Lord. Royal cheer, I warrant you.

Third Lord. Doubt not that, if money and the season can yield it.

First Lord. How do you? What's the news?

Third Lord. Alcibiades is banished: hear you of it?

First and Sec. Lord. Alcibiades banished!

Third Lord. 'Tis so, be sure of it.

First Lord. How! how!

Sec. Lord. I pray you, upon what?

Tim. My worthy friends, will you draw near?

Third Lord. I'll tell you more anon. Here's a noble feast toward.
Sec. Lord. This is the old man still.
Third Lord. Will 't hold? will 't hold? 70
Sec. Lord. It does: but time will—and so—Third Lord. I do conceive.
Tim. Each man to his stoop, with that spar as he would to the lip of his mistress: your diet shall be in all places alike. Make not a city feast of it, to let the meat cool ere we can agree upon the first place: sit, sit. The gods require our thanks.

You great benefactors, sprinkle our society with thankfulness. For, if your own gifts, make yourselves praised; but reserve still to give, lest your deities be despised. Lend to each man enough, that one need not lend to another; for, were your godheads to borrow of men, men would forsake the gods. Make the meat be beloved more than the man that gives it. Let no assembly of twenty be without a score of villains: if there sit twelve women at the table, let a dozen of them be—as they are. ♦ The rest of your fees, O gods—the senators of Athens, together with the common leg of people—what is amiss in them, you gods, make suitable for destruction. For these my present friends, as they are to me nothing, so in nothing bless them, and to nothing are they welcome.

Uncover, dogs, and lap.
[The dishes are uncovered and seen to be full of warm water.

Some speak. What does his lordship mean?
Some other. I know not.
Tim. May you a better feast never behold,
You knot of mouth-friends! smoke and luke-warm water
Is your authorisation. This is Timon's last; 100
Who, stuck and spangled with your flatteries,
Washes it off, and sprinkles in your faces
Your reeking villany.
[Throwing the water in their faces. Live loathed and long,
Most smiling, smooth, detested parasites,
Courteous destroyers, affable wolves, meek bears,
You fools of fortune, treacher-friends, time's flies,
Cap and knee slaves, vapours, and minute-jacks!
Of man and beast the infinite malady
Crust you quite o'er! What, dost thou go?
Soft! take thy physic first—thou too—and thou.
Stay, I will lend thee money, borrow none.

[Throws the dishes at them, and drives them out.

What, all in motion? Henceforth be no feast,
Whereat a villain's not a welcome guest.
Burn, house! sink, Athens! henceforth hated be
Of Timon man and all humanity! [Exit.

Re-enter the Lords, Senators, &c.

First Lord. How now, my lords!
Sec. Lord. Know you the quality of Lord
Timon's fury?
Third Lord. Push! did you see my cap?
Fourth Lord. I have lost my gown. 120
First Lord. He's but a mad lord, and nought but humour sways him. He gave me a jewel th' other day, and now he has beat it out of my hat:
did you see my jewel?
Third Lord. Did you see my cap?
Sec. Lord. Here 'tis.
Fourth Lord. Here lies my gown.

First Lord. Let's make no stay.
Sec. Lord. Lord Timon's mad.
Third Lord. I feel it upon my bones.
Fourth Lord. One day he gives us dimes next day stones. [Exe.

Amen.

SCENE II. Athens. A room in Timon's

Enter Flavius, with two or three Serva

First Serv. Hear you, master steward, w our master?
Are we undone? cast off? nothing remains Flav. Alack, my fellows, what should to
you?
Let me be recorded by the righteous gods,
I am as poor as you.
First Serv. Such a house broke! So noble a master fall'n! All gone! and n
One friend to take his fortune by the arm,
Enter other Servants.

Tim. All broken implements of a ruin'd house.

Ser. Yet do our hearts wear Timon's livery; I see 'by our faces; we are fellows still,

'ting alike in sorrow: leak'd is our dark,

we, poor mates, stand on the dying deck, ring the surges threat: we must all part this sea of air.

Tim. Good fellows all, the latest of my wealth I'll share amongst you.

We never shall meet, for Timon's sake, 's ye be fellows; let's shake our heads, and say, were a knell unto our master's fortunes, have seen better days.' Let each take some; put out all your hands. Not one word more;

part we rich in sorrow, parting poor. (Servants embrace, and part several ways.)

A fierce wretchedness that glory brings us! 30 Would not wish to be from wealth exempt, riches point to misery and contempt? would be so mock'd with glory? or live in a dream of friendship?

ave his pomp and all what state compouns only painted, like his varnish'd friends? honest lord, brought low by his own heart, me by goodness! Strange, unusual blood, a man's worst sin is, he does too much good! 40 then, dares to be half so kind again? county, that makes gods, does still mar men. nearest lord, bless'd, to be most accursed, only to be wretched, thy great fortunes made thy chief afflictions. Alas, kind lord!
flung in rage from this ingrateful seat miserous friends, nor has he with him to y his life, or that which can command it.

allow and inquire him:
ver serve his mind with my best will;
I have gold, I'll be his steward still.

[Exit.]

III. Woods and cave, near the sea-shore. Enter Timon, from the cave.

o. O blessed breeding sun, draw from the earth

Invidious; below thy sister's orb: the air! Twinn'd brothers of one womb, e procreation, residence, and birth, e is divident, touch them with several straits scorns the lesser: not nature, from all sores lay siege, can bear great y contempt of nature. me this beggar, and deny 't that lord; magister shall bear contempt hereditary.

The beggar native honour.

It is the pasture lards the rother's sides, The want that makes him lean. Who dares, who dares, In purity of manhood stand upright, And say 'This man's a flatterer?' if one be, So are they all; for every grise of fortune Is smooth'd by that below: the learned pate Ducks to the golden foil; all is oblique.

There's nothing level in our cursed natures, But direct villany. Therefore, be abhor'd! All feasts, societies, and thrones of men! His semblable, yea, himself, Timon disdains: Destruction fang mankind! Earth, yield me roots! Who seeks for better of thee, sauce his palate With thy most operant poison! What is here? Gold? yellow, glittering, precious gold? No, gods, I am no idle votarist: roots, you clear heavens! Thus much of this will make black white, foul fair, Wrong right, base noble, old young, coward valiant.

Ha, you gods! why this? what this, you gods? Why, this 30 Will lug your priests and servants from your sides, Pluck stout men's pillows from below their heads: This yellow slave Will knit and break religions, bless the accursed, Make the hoar leprosy adored, place thieves And give them title, knee and approbation With senators on the bench: this is it That makes the wappen'd widow wed again; She, whom the spital-house and ulcerous sores Would cast the gorge at, this embalms and spices 40 To the April day again. Come, damned earth, Thou common whored of mankind, that put'st odds Among the rout of nations, I will make thee Do thy right nature. [March afar off.] Ha! a drum? Thou'rt quick, But yet I'll bury thee: thou'lt go, strong thief, When gouty keepers of thee cannot stand. Nay, stay thou out for earnest. [Keeping some gold.]

Enter Alcibiades, with drum and fife, in warlike manner; Phrynia and Timandra.

Alcib. What art thou there? speak.

Tim. A beast, as thou art. The canker gnaw thy heart, For showing me again the eyes of man! 50 Alcib. What is thy name? Is man so hateful to thee, That art thyself a man? Tim. I am Misanthropos, and hate mankind. For thy part, I do wish thou wert a dog, That I might love thee something. Alcib. I know thee well; But in thy fortunes am unlearn'd and strange. Tim. I know thee too; and more than that I know thee, I not desire to know. Follow thy drum; With man's blood paint the ground, guiles, guiles: Religious canons, civil laws are cruel; Then what should war be? This fell whore of thine Hath in her more destruction than thy sword,
For all her cherubin look,

Noble Timon, I will not kiss thee; then the rot returns

To thine own lips again.

How came the noble Timon to this change?

As the moon does, by wanting light to give:

But then renew I could not, like the moon;

There were no suns to borrow of.

Noble Timon,

What friendship may I do thee?

None, but to 70

Maintain my opinion.

What is it, Timon?

Promise me friendship, but perform none: if thou wilt not promise, the gods plague thee, for thou art a man! if thou dost perform, confound thee, for thou art a man!

I have heard in some sort of thy miseries.

Thou saw'st them, when I had prosperity.

I see them now; then was a blessed time.

As thine is now, held with a brace of harlots.

Thee is this the Athenian minion, whom I sows the world 80

Voiced so regardfully?

Art thou Timandra?

Yes,

Be a whore still: they love thee not that use thee;

Give them diseases, leaving with thee their lust.

Make use of thy salt hours: season the slaves for tubs and baths; bring down rose-cheeked youth

To the tub-fast and the diet.

Hang thee, monster!

Pardon him, sweet Timandra; for his wits

Are drown'd and lost in his calamities.

I have but little gold of late, brave Timon, 90

The want whereof doth daily make revolt

In my penurious band: I have heard, and Grieved,

How cursed Athens, mindless of thy worth,

Forgetting thy great deeds, when neighbour states,

But for thy sword and fortune, trod upon them.—

I prithee, beat thy drum, and get thee gone.

I am thy friend, and pity thee, dear Timon.

How dost thou pity him whom thou dost trouble?

I had rather be alone.

Why, fare thee well:

Here is some gold for thee.

Keep it, I cannot eat it. 100

When I have laid proud Athens on a heap,—

Warr'st thou 'gainst Athens?

Ay, Timon, and have cause.

The gods confound them all in thy conquest;

And thee after, when thou hast conquer'd!

Why me, Timon?
TIMON OF ATHENS.

Be thou a flatterer now, and seek to thrive
By that which has undone thee; hinge thy knee,
And let his very breath, whom thou'lt observe,
Blow off thy cap; praise his most vicious strain,
And call it excellent: thou wast told thus;
Thou gavest thine ears like tapsters that bid
welcome.

To knaves and all approachers: 'tis most just
That thou turn rascal; hadst thou wealth again, Rascals should have 't. Do not assume my likeness.

Tim. Were I like thee, I'd throw away myself.

Apem. Thou hast cast away thyself, being like thyself;

A madman so long, now a fool. What, think'st
That the bleak air, thy boisterous chamberlain,
Will put thy shirt on warm? will these moss'd trees,

That have outlived the eagle, page thy heels,
And skip where thou point'st out? will the cold
brook,
Candied with ice, caudle thy morning taste,
To cure thy o'er-night's surfeit? Call the creatures
Whose naked natures live in all the spite

Of wreakful heaven, whose bare unhoused trunks,
To the conflicting elements exposed,

Answer more nature; bid them flatter thee;
O, thou shalt find—

Tim. A fool of thee: depart.

Apem. I love thee better now than o'er I did.

Tim. I hate thee worse.

Apem. Why?

Tim. Thou flatter'st misery.

Apem. I flatter not; but say thou art a callif.

Tim. Why dost thou seek me out?

Apem. To vex thee.

Tim. Always a villain's office or a fool's.

Dost please thyself in 't?

Apem. Ay.

Tim. What! a knave too?

Apem. If thou didst put this sour-cold habit on
To castigate thy pride, 'twere well: but thou
Dost it enforcedly; thou'ldst courtier be again,
Wert thou not beggar. Willing misery

Outlives uncertain pomp, is crown'd before:
The one is filling still, never complete;
The other, at high wish: best state, contentless,
Hath a distracted and most wretched being,

Worse than the worst, content.

Thou shouldst desire to die, being miserable.

Tim. Not by his breath that is more miserable.

Thou art a slave, whom Fortune's tender arm 250

With favour never clasp'd; but bred a dog.

Hast thou, like us from our first swath, proceed

The sweet degrees that this brief world affords
To such as may the passive drugs of it
Freedly command, thou wouldst have plunged thyself.

In general riot; melted down thy youth
In different beds of lust; and never learn'd
The icy precepts of respect, but follow'd
The sugar'd game before thee. But myself,
Who had the world as my confectionary, 260

The mouths, the tongues, the eyes and hearts of men
At duty, more than I could frame employment,

That numberless upon me stuck as leaves
Do on the oak, have with one winter's brush
Fell from their boughs and left me open, bare Forr, by storm that blows: I, to bear this,
That never knew but better, is some burden:
Thy nature did commence in sufferance, time Hath made thee hard in't. Why shouldst thou hate men?

They never flatter'd thee: what hast thou given?
If thou wilt curse, thy father, that poor rag,
Must be thy subject, who in spite put stuff
To some she beggar and compounded thee
Poor rogue hereditary. Hence, be gone!
If thou hadst not been born the worst of men,
Thou hadst not been a knave and flatterer.

Apen. Art thou proud yet?

Apen. I, that I was No prodigal.

Tim. I, that I am one now:
Were all the wealth I have shut up in thee,
I'd give thee leave to hang it. Get them gone.
That the whole life of Athens were in this! 281
Thus would I eat it.

Eating a root.

Apen. Here; I will mend thy feast.

[Offering him a root.

Tim. First mend my company, take away
thyself.

Apen. So I shall mend mine own, by the lack of thine.

Tim. 'Tis not well mended, so it is but botch'd;
If not, I would it were.

Apen. What wouldst thou have to Athens?

Tim. Thee thither in a whirlwind. If thou wilt,
Tell them there I have gold: so, I have so.

Apen. Here is no use for gold.

Tim. For here it sleeps, and does no hired harm.

Apen. Where liest o' nights, Timon?

Tim. Under that's above me.

Where feed'st thou o' days, Apemantus?

Apen. Where my stomach finds meat; or, rather, where I eat it.

Tim. Would poison were obedient and knew my mind!

Apen. Where wouldst thou send it?

Tim. To sauce thy dishes.

Apen. The middle of humanity thou never knewest, but the extremity of both ends: when thou wast in thy gilt and thy perfume, they mocked thee for too much curiousity; in thy rags thou knowest none, but art despised for the contrary. There's a medlar for thee, eat it.

Tim. On what I hate I feed not.

Apen. Dost hate a medlar?

Tim. Ay, though it look like thee.

Apen. An thou hadst hated meddlers sooner, thou shouldst have loved thyself better now.

What man didst thou ever know unfrith that was beloved after his means?

Tim. Who, without those means thou talkest of, didst thou ever know beloved?

Apen. Myself.

Tim. I understand thee; thou hadst some means to keep a dog.

Apen. What things in the world canst thou nearest compare to thy flatterers?

Tim. Women nearest; but men, men are the things themselves. What wouldst thou do with the world, Apemantus, if it lay in thy power?

Apen. Give it the beasts, to be rid of men.

Tim. Wouldst thou have thyself fall in confusion of men, and remain a beast with beasts?

Apen. Ay, Timon.

Tim. A beastly ambition, which the I grant thee t' attain to! If thou werst the lion fox would beguile thee: if thou werst the fox the wolf would eat thee: if thou werst the ox lion would suspect thee, when peradventure were accused by the ass: if thou werst the ass dueness would torment thee, and still thou liv but as a breakfast to the wolf: if thou werst thou shouldst hazard thy life for thy dinner:

by the horse;wert thou a horse, thou would be seized by the leopard: Wert thou a leopard, remotion and thy defence absence. What couldst thou be, that were not subject

Apen. If thou couldst please me with sp thing to me, thou mightst have hit upon it here commonwealth of Athens is become a fore

Tim. How has the ass broke the wall,
thur art out of the city?

Apen. Yonder comes a poet and a pair the plague of company light upon thee! I will catch it and give way: when I know not else to do, I'll see thee again.

Tim. When there is nothing living but thou shalt be welcome. I had rather be a beast than Apemantus.

Apen. Thou art the cap of all the fools them.

Enter Banditti.

First Ban. Where should he have this gold?
some poor fragment, some slender ort of his inder: the mere want of gold, and the fall-rom of his friends, drive him into this melanc-y.

Ban. It is noised he hath a mass of trea-care not for't, he will supply us easily; if wetously reserve it, how shall'st get it?

Ban. True; for he bears it not about him, 'tis hid.

red Ban. Is not this he?

Inditti. Where?

Ban. 'Tis his description.

Inditti. He; I know him.

Inditti. Save thee, Timon.

Now, thieves?

Inditti. Soldiers, not thieves.

Both too; and women's sons.

Inditti. We are not thieves, but men that much do want.

Your greatest want is, you want much meat. Should you want? Behold, the earth hath roots; in this mile break forth a hundred springs; oaks bear mast, the briers scarlet hips; bounteous housewife, nature, on each bush her full mess before you. Want! why want?

Banditti. We cannot live on grass, on berries, water,

N. On the beasts themselves, the birds, and fishes;

must eat men. Yet thanks I must you con you are thieves professed, that you work not for your shapes: for there is boundless theft 430 nited professions. Rascal thieves,

Here's gold. Go, suck the subtle blood o' the grape,

Till the high fever seethe your blood to froth,
And so 'scape hanging: trust not the physician;
His antidotes are poison, and he slays
Moe than you rob: take wealth and lives together;

Do villainy, do, since you protest to do't.

Like workmen, I'll example you with thievish:
The sun's a thief, and with his great attraction
Rob's the vast sea: the moon's an arrant thief, 440
And her pale fire she snatch's from the sun:
The sea's a thief, whose liquid surge resolves
The moon into salt tears: the earth's a thief,
That feeds and breeds by a composture stolen
From general excrement: each thing's a thief:
The laws, your curb and whip, in their rough power
Have uncheck'd theft. Love not yourselves:
Rob one another. There's more gold. Cut throats:
All that you meet are thieves: to Athens go,
Break open shops: nothing can you steal. 450
But thieves do lose it: steal no less for this
I give you; and gold confound you howsoever! Amen.

Third Ban. Has almost charmed me from my profession, by persuading me to it.

First Ban. 'Tis in the malice of mankind that he thus advises us; not to have us thrive in our mystery.

Sec. Ban. I'll believe him as an enemy, and give over my trade. 460

First Ban. Let us first see peace in Athens:
there is no time so miserable but a man may be true. [Exit Banitti.

Enter Flavius.

Flav. O you gods!

Is yond despised and ruinous man my lord?

Full of decay and failing? O monument
And wonder of good deeds evilly bestow'd!

What an alteration of honour
Has desperate want made!

What viler thing upon the earth than friends
Who can bring noblest minds to basest ends!

How rarely does it meet with this time's guise,
When man was wish'd to love his enemies!

Grant I may ever love, and rather woo
Those that would mischief me than those that do!

Has caught me in his eye: I will present
My honest grief unto him; and, as my lord,

Still serve him with my life. My dearest master!

Tim. Away! what art thou?

Flav. Have you forgot me, sir? Tim. Why dost ask that? I have forgot all
men;

Then, if thou grant'st thou'rt a man, I have got thee.

Flav. An honest poor servant of yours.

Tim. Then I know thee not:
I never had honest man about me, I; all
I kept were knaves, to serve in meat to villains.

Flav. The gods are witness,

Ne'er did poor steward wear a truer grief
For his undone lord than mine eyes for you.
TIMON OF ATHENS.

[Act V]

Scene I. The woods. Before Timon's cave.

Enter Poet and Painter; Timon watching from his cave.

Pain. As I took note of the place, it can be far where he abides.

Poet. What's to be thought of him? does rumour hold for true, that he's so full of gold? Pain. Certain: Alcibiades reports it; Pher and Timandra had gold of him: he likewise riched poor straggling soldiers with great quantity: 'tis said he gave unto his steward a million.

Poet. Then this breaking of his has been a try for his friends.

Pain. Nothing else: you shall see him in Athens again, and flourish with the high. Therefore 'tis not amiss we tender our love him, in this supposed distress of his: it will honestly in us; and is very likely to load purposes with which they travail for, if it be a true report that goes of his having.

Poet. What have you now to present unto Pain. Nothing at this time but my visitation only I will promise him an excellent piece.

Poet. I must serve him so too, tell him that's coming toward him.

Pain. Good as the best. Promising is very for o' the time: it opens the eyes of expectation: performance is ever the droller for his and, but in the plainer and simpler kind of ple, the deed of saying is quite out of use. promise is most courtly and fashionable: performance is a kind of will or testament which are a great sickness in his judgement that makes.

[Timon comes from his cave, bel.

Tim. [Aside] Excellent workman! thou dost not paint a man so bad as is thyself.

Poet. I am thinking what I shall say provided for him: it must be a personification himself; a satire against the softness of persons, with a discovery of the infinite flatteries that low youth and opulence.

Tim. [Aside] Must thou needs stand stands villain in thine own work? wilt thou whip own faults in other men? Do so, I have got thee.

Pain. Nay, let's seek him: Then do we sin against our own estate, When we may profit meet, and come too late Pain. True; When the day serves, before black-corner'd Find what thou want'st by free and offer'd d Come.

Tim. [Aside] I'll meet you at the turn. With a god's gold, That he is worshipp'd in a baser temple Than where swine feed! 'Tis thou that rigg'st the bare and plough'st foam, Setting admirable reverence in a slave: To thee be worship! and thy saints for aye Be crown'd with plagues that thee alone owe Fit I meet them.

[Coming forth.

Poet. Hail, worthy Timon!

Pain. Our late noble master

Tim. Have I once lived to see two honest
Each man apart, all single and alone,
Yet an arch-villain keeps him company.
If where thou art two villains shall not be,
Come not near him. If thou wouldst not reside
But where one villain is, then him abandon.
Hence, pack! there's gold; you came for gold,
Ye slaves: [To Painter] You have work'd for me; there's payment for you: hence!
[To Painter] You are an alchemist; make gold of that.
Out, rascal dogs! [Beats them out, and then retires to his cave.

Enter FLAVIUS and two Senators.

Flav. It is in vain that you would speak with Timon;
For he is set so only to himself
That nothing but himself which looks like man
Is friendly with him.

First Sen. Bring us to his cave:
It is our part and promise to the Athenians
To speak with Timon.

Sec. Sen. At all times alike
Men are not still the same: 'twas time and griefs
That framed him thus: too, with his fairer hand,
Offering the fortunes of his former days,
The former man may make him. Bring us to him,
And chance it as it may.

Flav. Here is his cave.
Peace and content be here! Lord Timon! Timon!
Look out, and speak to friends: the Athenians,
By two of their most reverend senate, greet thee:
Speak to them, noble Timon.

TIMON comes from his cave.

Tim. Thou sun, that comfort'st, burn! Speak, and be hang'd:
For each true word, a blister! and each false
Be as a cautering to the root o' the tongue,
Consuming it with speaking!

First Sen. Worthy Timon,— Tim. Of none but such as you, and you of Timon.

First Sen. The senators of Athens greet thee,
Timon.

Tim. I thank them; and would send them back the plague,
Could I but catch it for them.

First Sen. O, forget
What we are sorry for ourselves in thee.
The senators with one consent of love
Entreat thee back to Athens: who have thought
On special dignities, which void lie
For thy best use and wearing.

Sec. Sen. They confess
Toward thee forgetfulness too general, gross:
Which now the public body, which doth seldom
Play the recanter, feeling in itself
A lack of Timon's aid, hath sense withal
Of its own fail, restraining aid to Timon;
And send forth us, to make their sorrow'd render,
Together with a recompense more fruitful
That their offence can weigh down by the dram;
Ay, even such heartfelt, and summis of love and wealth
As shall to thee blot out what wrongs were theirs
And write in thee the figures of their love,
Ever to read them thine.

Tim. You wish me in it:
Surprise me to the very brink of tears:
Lend me a fool's heart and a woman's eyes, 160
And I'll beweep these comforts, worthy senators.
First Sen. Therefore, so please thee to return
with us
And of our Athens, thine and ours, to take
The captainship, thou shalt be met with thanks,
Allow'd with absolute power and thy good name
Live, with authority: so soon we shall drive back
Of Alcibiades the approaches wild,
Who, like a boar too savage, doth root up
His country's peace.
Sec. Sen. And shakes his threatening sword
Against the walls of Athens.
First Sen. Therefore, Timon.— 170
Tim. Well, sir, I will; therefore, I will, sir;
thus:
If Alcibiades kill my countrymen,
Let Alcibiades know this of Timon,
That Timon cares not. But if he seek fair
Athens,
And take our goodly aged men by the beards,
Giving our holy virgins to the stain
Of contumelious, beastly, mad-brain'd war,
Then let him know, and tell him Timon speaks it,
In pity of our aged and our youth.
I cannot choose but tell him, that I care not, 180
And let him take 't at worst; for their knives care
not,
While you have threats to answer: for myself,
There's not a whittle in the unruly camp
But I do prize it at my love before
The reverend'st threat in Athens. So I leave you
To the protection of the prosperous gods,
As thieves to keepers.
Flap. Stay not, all's in vain.
Tim. Why, I was writing of my epitaph;
It will be seen to-morrow: my long sickness
Of health and living now begins to mend, 190
And nothing brings me all things. Go, live still;
Be Alcibiades your plague, you his,
And last so long enough!
First Sen. We speak in vain.
Tim. But yet I love my country, and am not
One that rejoices in the common wreck,
As common bruit doth put it.
First Sen. That's well spoke.
Tim. Command me to my loving country-
men,—
First Sen. These words become your lips as they pass thorough them.
Sec. Sen. And enter in our ears like great triumphers
In their applauding gates.
Tim. Command me to them, 200
And tell them that, to ease them of their griefs,
Their fears of hostile strokes, their aches, losses,
Their pangs of love, with other incident throes
That nature's fragile vessel doth sustain
In life's uncertain voyage, I will some kindness do
them:
I'll teach them to prevent wild Alcibiades' wrath.
First Sen. I like this well; he will return again.
Tim. I have a tree, which grows here in my close,
That mine own use invites me to cut down,
And shortly must I tell it: tell my friends, 210
Tell Athens, in the sequence of degree
From high to low throughout, that whoso please
To stop affliction, let him take his haste,
Come hither, ere my tree hath felt the axe,
And hang himself. I pray you, do my great Flaw. Trouble him no further; thus you shall find him.
Tim. Come not to me again: but say to Ath
Timon hath made his everlasting mansion
Upon the beached verge of the salt flood;
Who once a day with his embossed froth
The turbulent surge shall cover: thither com

What is amiss plague and infection mend!

Scene IV. Before the walls of Athens.

Dumps sound. Enter ALCIBIADÉS with his powers.

Lcib. Sound to this coward and lascivious town terrible approach. [A parley sounded.

Enter Senators on the walls.

Now you have gone on and fill'd the time
All licentious measure, making your wills Scope of justice; till now myself and such Left within the shadow of your power
Saw your hand a wander'd with our traversed arms
Breathed sufferance vainly: now the time is flush,
A crouching marrow in the bearer strong
Of itself. "No more!" now breathless wrong
Sits pant in your great chairs of ease; if Pursy insolence shall break his wind
Fear and horrid flight.

Sen. Noble and young,
A thy first griefs were but a mere conceit,
Hast hadst power or we had cause of fear,
Ent to thee, to give thy rages balm, ipse our ingratitude with loves
e their quantity.

Sen. So did we woo
Formed Timon to our city's love
Imble message and by promised means:
Were not all unkind, nor all deserve
Common stroke of war.

Sen. These walls of ours
Not erected by their hands from whom ave received your griefs; nor are they such
These great towers, trophies and schools
Should fall
Private faults in them.

Sen. Nor are they living
Were the motives that you first went out;
That they wanted cunning, in excess Broke their hearts. March, noble lord, ur city with thy banners spread: 30
Cimination, and a tithed death—
Revenge hunger for that food
A nature loathes—take thou the destined enth,
Y the hazard of the spotted die
E the spotted.

Sen. All have not offended;
But that were, it is not square to take
Use that are, revenges: crimes, like lands,
Not inherited. Then dear countryman,
In thy ranks, but leave without thy rage:
Thy Athenian cradle and those kin
In the cluster of thy wrath must fall
Hose that have offended: like a shepherd,

Approach the fold and cull the infected forth,
But kill not all together.

Sec. Sen. What thou wilt,
Thou rather shalt enforce it with thy smile
Than hew to 't with thy sword.

First Sen. Set but thy foot
Against our rampired gates, and they shall ope;
So thou wilt send thy gentle heart before,
To say thou'lt enter friendly.

Sec. Sen. Throw thy glove,
Or any token of thine honour else,
That thou wilt use the wars as thy redress
And not as our confusion, all thy powers Shall make their harbour in our town, till we Have seal'd thy full desire.

Alcib. Then there's my glove;
Descend, and open your uncharged ports:
Those enemies of Timon's and mine own
Whom you yourselves shall set out for reproof
Fall and no more: and, to atone your fears
With my more noble meaning, not a man
Shall pass his quarter, or offend the stream
Of regular justice in your city's bounds,
But shall be render'd to your public laws
At heaviest answer.

Both. [Reads the epigraph] 'Here lies a wretched corse, of wretched soul bereft:
Seek not my name: a plague consume you wicked
Caitiffs left!
Here lie I, Timon; who, alive, all living men did hate:
Pass by and curse thy fill, but pass and stay not here thy gait.'

These well express in the thy latter spirits:
Though thou abhorrest in us our human griefs,
Scorn'dst our brain's flow and those our droplets which
From niggard nature fall, yet rich conceit
Taught thee to make vast Neptune weep for aye
On thy low grave, on faults forgiven. Dead
Is noble Timon: of whose memory
Hereafter more. Bring me into your city,
And I will use the olive with my sword,
Make war breed peace, make peace stert war,
Make each
Prescribe to other as each other's leech.
Let our drums strike.

[Exeunt.

Flav. But wherefore art not in thy shop to-day?

Why dost thou lead these men about the streets? Com. Truly, sir, to wear out their shoes to get myself into more work. But, indeed, we make holiday, to see Caesar and to rejoice his triumph.

Mar. Wherefore rejoice? What can bring his home?

What tributaries follow him to Rome, to grace in captive bonds his chariot-wheel? You blocks, you stones, you worse than less things!

O you hard hearts, you cruel men of Rome, Knew you not Pompey? Many a time and hour Have you climbed up to walls and battlements, To towers and windows, yes, to chimneys—your infants in your arms, and there have seen The live-long day, with patient expectation To see great Pompey pass the streets of Rome, And when you saw his chariot and his wheel, Have you not made an universal shout, That Tiber trembled underneath her banks, To hear the replication of your sounds Made in her concave shores?

And do you now put on your best attire? And do you now pull out a holiday? And do you now strew flowers in his way That comes in triumph over Pompey's blood Be gone! Run to your houses, fall upon your knees, Pray to the gods to intermit the plague That needs must light on this ingratitude.

SCENE I. Rome. A street.

Enter Flavius, Marullus, and certain

Commoners.

Flav. Hence! home, you idle creatures, get you home; do this a holiday? what! know you not, being mechanical, you ought not walk upon a labouring day without the sign of your profession? speak, what trade art thou? First Com. Why, sir, a carpenter.

Mar. Where is thy leather apron and thy rule? What dost thou with thy best apparel on? You, sir, what trade are you? Sec. Com. Truly, sir, in respect of a fine workman, I am but, as you would say, a cobbler.

Sec. Com. A trade, sir, that, I hope, I may use with a safe conscience; which is, indeed, sir, a member of bad soles.

Mar. What trade, thou knave? thou naughty knave, what trade?

Sec. Com. Nay, I beseech you, sir, be not out with me: yet, if you be out, sir, I can mend you.

Mar. What meanest thou by that? mend me, thou saucy fellow!

Sec. Com. Why, sir, cobble you.

Flav. Thou art a cobbler, art thou?

Sec. Com. Truly, sir, all that I live by is with the awl: I meddle with no tradesman's matters, nor women's matters, but with awl: I am, indeed, sir, a surgeon to old shoes; when they are in great danger, I recover them. As proper men...
I'll leave you.

Cas. Brutus, I do observe you now of late:
I have not from your eyes that gentleness
And show of love as I was wont to have;
You bear too stubborn and too strange a hand
Over your friend that loves you.

Brut. Cassius, be not deceived: if I have veil'd my look,
I turn the trouble of my countenance
Merely upon myself. I vexed am
Of late with passions of some difference,
Conceptions only proper to myself,
Which give some soil perhaps to my behaviours;
But let not therefore my good friends be grievèd—
Among which number, Cassius, be you one—
Nor construe any further my neglect,
Than that poor Brutus, with himself at war,
Forgets the shows of love to other men.

Cas. Then, Brutus, I have much mistook your passion;
By means whereof this breast of mine hath buried
Thoughts of great value, worthy cogitations.

Tell me, good Brutus, can you see your face?

Brut. No, Cassius; for the eyes seem not itself,
But by reflection, by some other things.

Cas. 'Tis just:
And it is very much lamented, Brutus,
That you have no such mirrors as will turn
Your hidden worthiness into your eye,
That you might see your shadow. I have heard,
Where many of the best respect in Rome,
Except immortal Caesar, speaking of Brutus
And groaning underneath this age's yoke,
Have wish'd that noble Brutus had his eyes.

Brut. Into what dangers would you lead me, Cassius,
That you would have me seek into myself
For that which is not in me?

Cas. Therefore, good Brutus, be prepared to hear:
And since you know you cannot see yourself
So well as by reflection, I, your glass,
Will modestly discover to yourself
That of your self which you yet know not of.

And be not jealous on me, gentle Brutus:
Were I a common laughor, or did use
To stale with ordinary oaths my love
To every new protestor; if you know
That I do fawn on men and hug them hard
And after scandal them, or if you know
That I profess myself in banqueting
To all the rout, then hold me dangerous.

[Flourish, and shout.]

Brut. What means this shouting? I do fear, the people
Choose Caesar for their king.

Cas. Ay, do you fear it? I do not.
Then must I think you would not have it so.

Brut. I would not, Cassius; yet I love him well,
But wherefore do you hold me here so long?
What is it that you would impart to me?
If it be aught toward the general good,
Set honour in one eye and death in the other,
And I will look on both indifferently,
For let the gods so speed me as I love
The name of honour more than I fear death.

Cas. I know that virtue to be in you, Brutus,
As well as I do know your outward favour.
When there is in it but one only man,
O, you and I have heard our fathers say,
There was a Brutus once that would have bro
The eternal devil to keep his state in Rome
As easily as a king.

Bru. That you do love me, I am nothing jeal
What you would work to, I have some ai
How I have thought of this and of these time
I shall recount hereafter; for this present,
I would not, so with love I might entreat you
Be any further moved. What you have said
I will consider; what you have to say
I will with patience hear, and find a time

Till then, my noble friend, chew upon this;
Brutus had rather be a villager
Than to repute himself a son of Rome
Under these hard conditions as this time
Is like to lay upon us.

Cas. I am glad that my weak words
Have struck but thus much show of fire
Brutus.

Bru. The games are done and Caesar i

Cas. As they pass by, pluck Casca by the sle
And he will, after his sour fashion, tell you
What hath proceeded worthy note to-day.

Re-enter Caesar and his Train.

Bru. I will do so. But, look you, Cassius
The angry spot doth glow on Caesar's brow,
And all the rest look like a孩童 train:
Calpurnia's cheek is pale; and Cicero
Looks with such ferret and such fiery eyes
As we have seen him in the Capitol,
Being cross'd in conference by some senator

Cas. Casca will tell us what the matter i
Ant. Antonius!

Ant. Caesar?
Cas. Let me have men about me that are Sleek-headed men and such as sleep o' night
Yond Cassius has a lean and hungry look.
He thinks too much: such men are dangero
Fear him not, Caesar; he's not dangero
He is a noble Roman and well given.
Cas. Would he were fatter! But I fea

Yet if my name were liable to fear,
I do not know the man I should avoid

I rather tell thee what is to be fear'd

Julius Caesar.

SE II.

Caesar looks so sad.

Casa. Why, you were with him, were you not?

Cas. I should not then ask Casca what had chanced.

Casa. Why, there was a crown offered him: being offered him, he put it by with the back of hand, thus; and then the people fell a-crying.

Casa. What was the second noise for?

Casa. Why, for that too.

Casa. Was the crown offered him thrice?

Casa. Ay, marry, was’t, and he put it by, every time gentler than other, and at putting-by mine honest neighbours shouted.

Casa. Who offered him the crown?

Casa. Why, Antony.

Casa. Tell us the manner of it, gentle Casca.

Caesar can as well be hanged as tell the er of it: it was mere folly; I did not mark saw Mark Antony offer him a crown:—yet not a crown neither, ’twas one of those coronet,—and, as I told you, he put it by once; but, that, to my thinking, he would fain have had it. Then he offered it to him again; then he by again; but, to my thinking, he was very o’er his fingers off it. And then he offered thrice; he put it the third time by: and he refused it, the rabblement hooted and d clapped their hands and threw up their night-caps and uttered such a deal of breath because Caesar refused the crown had almost choked Caesar; for he swooned down it at: and for mine own part, I not laugh, for fear of opening my lips and bang the bad air.

But, soft, I pray you: what, did Caesar wound?

Caes. He fell down in the market-place, and at mouth, and was speechless.

’Tis very like: he hath the falling sickness.

No, Caesar hath it not; but you and I ansest Casca, we have the falling sickness.

Casa. I cannot not what you mean by that; am sure, Caesar fell down. If the rag-rag did not clap him and hiss him, according pleased and displeased them, as they use to players in the theatre, I am no true man.

Casa. What said he when he came unto himself?

Casa. Marry, before he fell down, when he the common herd was glad he refused him, he plucked me ope his doublet and them his throat to cut. An I had been a any occupation, if I would not have taken word, I would I might go to hell among them. And so he fell. When he came to again, he said, If he had done or said any thing, he desired their wishes to think it infirmity. Three or four wenchens, where cried ’Alas, good soul!’ and forgave him their hearts; but there’s no need to be of them; if Caesar had stabbed their throats, they would have done no less.

And after that, he came, thus sad, away?

Casa. He spake Greek.
Julius Caesar.

Held up his left hand, which did flame and burn
Like twenty torches join’d, and yet his hand,
Not sensible of fire, remain’d unscorch’d.

Besides—I ha’ not since put up my sword—
Against the Capitol I met a lion,
Who glare’d upon me, and went surly by,
Without annoying me: and there were drawn
Upon a heap a hundred ghastly women,
Transform’d with their fear; who swore they saw
Men all in fire walk up and down the streets.
And yesterday the bird of night did sit
Even at noon-day upon the market-place,
Hooting and shrieking. When these prodigies
Do so conjointly meet, let not men say
‘These are their reasons; they are natural;’
For, I believe, they are portentous things
Unto the climate that they point upon.

Cic. Indeed, it is a strange-disposed time:
But men may construe things after their fashion.
Clean from the purpose of the things themselves.

Cassius to the Capitol to-morrow?

Cas. He doth; for he did bid Antoarius
Send word to you he would be there to-morrow.

Cic. Good night then, Casca: this disturbed sky
Is not to walk in.

Casca. Farewell, Cicero. [Exit Cicero.

Enter Cassius.

Cas. Who’s there?

Casca. A Roman.

Cas. Casca, by your voice.

Casca. Your ear is good. Cassius, what night is this?

Cas. A very pleasing night to honest men.

Casca. Who ever knew the heavens menace so?

Cas. Those that have known the earth so full of faults.

For my part, I have walk’d about the streets,
Submitting me unto the perilous night,
And, thus unbraced, Casca, as you see,
Have bared my bosom to the thunder-stone;
And when the cross blue lighting seem’d to open
The breast of heaven, I did present myself
Even in the aim and very flash of it.

Casca. But wherefore did you so much tempt
The heavens?

It is the part of men to fear and tremble,
When the most mighty gods by tokens send
Such dreadful heralds to astonish us.

Cas. You are dull, Casca, and those sparks of life
That should be in a Roman you do want,
Or else you use not. You look pale and gaze
And put on fear and cast yourself in wonder,
To see the strange impatience of the heavens:
But if you would consider the true case
Why all these fires, why all these gliding ghosts,
Why birds and beasts from quality and kind,
Why old men fool and children calculate,
Why all these things change from their ordinance
Their natures and preformed faculties
To monstrous quality,—why, you shall find
That heaven hath infused them with these spirits,
To make them instruments of fear and warning
Unto some a monstrous state.

Now could I, Casca, name to thee a man
Most like this dreadful night,

That thunders, lightens, opens graves, and
As doth the lion in the Capitol,
A man no mightier than thyself, or me
In personal action, yet prodigious grown
And fearful, as these strange eruptions are.

Casca. ’Tis Caesar that you mean; is it?

Cas. Let it be who it is: for Romans now
Have thaws and limbs like to their ancestors.
But, woe the while! our fathers’ minds are
And we are govern’d with our mothers’ spirit.
Our yoke and sufferance show us womanish.

Casca. Indeed, they say the senators to-row
Mean to establish Caesar as a king;
And he shall wear his crown by sea and land
In every place, save here in Italy.

Cas. I know where I will wear this day;
then;

Cassius from bondage will deliver Cassius:
Therein, ye gods, you make the weak most strong.
Therein, ye gods, you tyrants do defeat:
Nor stony tower, nor walls of beaten brass,
Nor strong links of iron
Can be retentive to the strength of spirit;
But life, being weary of these worldly bars,
Never lacks power to dismiss itself.
If I know this, know all the world besides,
That part of tyranny that I do bear.
I can shake off at pleasure.

Thunder.

Cas. So can I:
So every bondman in his own hand bears
The power to cancel his captivity.

Cas. And why should Caesar be a tyrant
Poor man! I know he would not be a wolf,
But that he sees the Romans are but sheep
He were no lion, were not Romans hinds.
Those that with haste will make a mighty
Begin it with weak straws: what trash is R
What rubbish and what offal, when it serve
For the base matter to illuminate
So vile a thing as Caesar? But, O grief,
Where hast thou led me? I perhaps speak
Before a willing bondman; then I know
My answer must be made. But I am arm’d
And dangers are to me indifferent.

Casca. You speak to Casca, and to such
That is no feather-tell-tale. Hold, my hand,
Be factual for redress of all these griefs,
And I will set this foot of mine as far
As who goes farthest.

Cas. There’s a bargain made
Now know you, Cassia, I have moved ahead
Some certain of the noblest-minded Roman.
To undergo with me an enterprise
Of honourable-dangerous consequence;
And I do know, by this, they stay for me
In Pompey’s porch: for now, this fearful
There is no stir or walking in the streets;
And the complexion of the element
In favour’s like the work we have in hand,
Most bloody, fiery, and most terrible.

Casca. Stand close awhile, for here come
In haste.

Cas. ’Tis Cinna; I do know him by his
He is a friend.

Enter Cinna.

Cinna, where haste you so?
Remorse from power: and, to speak truth of Cæsar, I have not known when his affections sway'd;
More than his reason. But 'tis a common proof,
That lowliness is young ambition's ladder,
Whereto the climber-upward turns his face;
But when he once attains the upmost round,
He then unto the ladder turns his back,
Looks in the clouds, scorning the base degrees
By which he did ascend. So Cæsar may.
Then, lest he may, prevent. And, since the quarrel
Will bear no colour for the thing he is,
Fashion it thus; that what he is, augmented,
Would run to these and these extremities:
And therefore think him as a serpent's egg
Which, hatch'd, would, as his kind, grow mischievous,
And kill him in the shell.

Re-enter Lucius.

Luc. The taper burneth in your closet, sir.
Searching the window for a flint, I found
This paper, thus seal'd up; and, I am sure,
It did not lie there when I went to bed.

[Give him the letter.

Bru. Get you to bed again; it is not day.
Is not to-morrow, boy, the Ides of March?

Luc. I know not, sir.

Bru. Look in the calendar, and bring me word.

Luc. I will, sir.

Bru. The exhalations whizzing in the air,
Give so much light that I may read by them.

[Opens the letter and reads.

'Brutus, thou sleep'st: awake, and see thyself.
Shall Rome, &c. Speak, strike, redress!
Brutus, thou sleep'st: awake!'

Such instigations have been often dropp'd
Where I have took them up.

'Shall Rome, &c.' Thus must I piece it out:
Shall Rome stand under one man's awe? What, Rome?

My ancestors did from the streets of Rome
The Tarquin drive, when he was call'd a king.
'Speak, strike, redress!' Am I entreated
To speak and strike? O Rome, I make thee
promise:
If the redress will follow, thou receivest
Thy full petition at the hand of Brutus!

Re-enter Lucius.

Luc. Sir, March is wasted fourteen days.

[Knocking within.

Bru. 'Tis good. Go to the gate; somebody knocks.

[Exit Lucius.

Since Cassius first did wet me against Cæsar,
I have not slept.
Between the acting of a dreadful thing
And the first motion, all the interim is Like a phantasma, or a hideous dream:
The Genius and the mortal instruments
Are then in council; and the state of man,
Like to a little kingdom, suffers then
The nature of an insurrection.

Re-enter Lucius.

Luc. Sir, 'tis your brother Cassius at the door,
Who doth desire to see you.

Bru. Is he alone?
Luc. No, sir, there are none with him.

Bru. Do you know them?

Luc. No, sir; their hats are pluck'd about their ears, and half their faces buried in their cloaks, that by no means I may discover them by any mark of favour.

Bru. Let em enter. [Exit Lucius.]

They are the faction. O conspiracy, shamest thou to show thy dangerous brow by night, when evils are most free? O, then by day where wilt thou find a cavern dark enough to mask thy monstrous visage? Seek none, conspiracy; hide it in smiles and affability: For if thou path, thy native semblance on, not Erebus itself were dim enough to hide thee from prevention.

Enter the conspirators, Cassius, Casca, Decius, Cinna, Metellus Cimber, and Trebonius.

Cas. I think we are too bold upon your rest: Good morrow, Brutus; do we trouble you?

Bru. I have been up this hour, awake all night. Know I these men that come along with you?

Cas. Yes, every man of them, and no man here but honours you; and every one doth wish you had but that opinion of yourself which every noble Roman bears of you. This is Trebonius.

Bru. He is welcome hither. Cas. This, Decius Brutus.

Bru. He is welcome too. Cas. This, Casca; this, Cinna; and this, Metellus Cimber.

Bru. They are all welcome. What watchful cares do interpose themselves betwixt your eyes and night?

Cas. Shall I entreat a word? [Brutus and Cassius whisper.]

Dec. Here lies the east: doth not the day break here?

Casca. No. Cin. O, pardon, sir, it doth; and yon gray lines that fret the clouds are messengers of day.

Casca. You shall confess that you are both deceived. Here, as I point my sword, the sun arises, which is a great way growing on the south, weighing the youthful season of the year. Some two months hence up higher toward the north he first presents his fire; and the high east stands, as the Capitol, directly here.

Bru. Give me your hands all over, one by one. Cas. And let us swear our resolution.

Bru. No, not an oath: if not the face of men, the suffrance of our souls, the time's abuse,—if these be motives weak, break off betimes, and every man hence to his idle bed; so by high-sighted tyranny range on, till each man drop by lottery. But if these, as I am sure they do, bear fire enough to kindle cowards and to steel with valour the melting spirits of women, then, countrymen, what need we any spur but our own cause to prick us to redress? what other bond than secret Romans, that have sworn, will we not, And that's not spurred? and what other oath than honesty to honesty engaged, that this shall be, or we will fall for it? Swear priests and cowards and men cured old feeble carrions and such suffering souls that welcome wrongs: unto bad causes as men doubt; but do not the even virtue of our enterprise, nor the insupportive mettle of our spirits, to think that or our cause or our perfomance did need an oath; when every drop of blood that every Roman bears, and nobly bears, is guilty of a several bastardy, if he do break the smallest particle of any promise that hath pass'd from him.

Cas. But what of Cicero? shall we soon I think he will stand very strong with us.

Casca. Let us not leave him out. Cin. No, by no means. O, let us have him, for his silver will purchase us a good opinion and buy men's voices to commend our deed. It shall be said, his judgement ruled our youth, our youths and wildness shall no whit apper, but all be buried in his gravity.

Bru. O, name him not: let us not break him; for he will never follow any thing that other men begin. Cas. Then leave him out. Casca. Indeed he is not fit. Dec. Shall no man else be touch'd but Caesar? Cas. Decius, well urged: I think it meet, Mark Antony, so well beloved of Caesar, should outlive Caesar: we shall find of his a shrewd contriver; and, you know, his voice, if he improve them, may well stretch it: and we any us all: which to prevent, let Antony and Caesar fall together.

Bru. Our course will seem too bloody Cassius, to out the head off and then hack the limb like wrath in death and envy afterwards for Antony is but a limb of Caesar: let us be sacrificers, but not butchers, Ca. We all stand up against the spirit of Caesar and in the spirit of men there is no blood, O, that we then could come by Caesar's spirit and not dismember Caesar! But, alas, Caesar must bleed for it! and, gentle friar, let's kill him boldly, but not wantonly; let's carve him as a dish fit for the gods, not hew him as a carcass fit for hounds: and let our hearts, as subtle masters do, stir up their servants to an act of rage, and after seem to chide 'em. This shall our purpose necessary and not envious: which so appearing to the common eyes, we shall be call'd purgers, not murderers. And for Mark Antony, think not of him: for he can do no more than Caesar's arm when Caesar's head is off.

Cas. Yet I fear him: for in the ingrafted he bears to Caes
But it is doubtful yet, whether Caesar will come forth to-day, or no; he is superstitious grown of late.

From the main opinion he held once untasy, of dreams and ceremonies: ay be, these apparent prodigies, unaccustomed terror of this night, the persuasion of his augurers, hold him from the Capitol to-day.

Never fear that: if he be so resolved, oversway him: for he loves to hear unicorns may be betray'd with trees, bears with glasses, elephants with holes; with toils and men with flatterers; when I tell him he hates flatterers, says he does, being then most flattered.

Ne works: can give his humour the true bent, I will bring him to the Capitol.

Nay, we will all of us be there to fetch him.

By the eighth hour: is that the uttermost?

Be that the uttermost, and fall not then.

Caesars’s doth bear Caesar hard, rated him for speaking well of Pompey: o'er none of you have thought of him.

Now, good Metellus, go along by him: yes me well, and I have given him reasons; him but hither, and I'll fashion him.

The morning comes upon 's: we'll leave you, Brutus.

Friends, disperse yourselves; but all remember you have said, and show yourselves true Romans.

Good gentlemen, look fresh and merrily: at our looks put on our purposes, as it as our Roman actors do, united spirits and formal constancy: a good morrow to you every one.

[Exeunt all but Brutus.]

Lucius! Fast asleep? It is no matter; the honey-heavy dew of slumber:

Hast no figures nor any fantasies, busy care draws in the brains of men; fore thou sleep'st so sound.

Enter Portia.

Brutus, my lord!

Portia, what mean you? wherefore rise you now?

For your health thus to commit weak condition to the raw cold morning.

Nor for yours neither. You've ungentle, Brutus, rom my bed: and yesternight, at supper, oddly arose, and walk'd about, musing and sighing, with your arms across:

And when I ask'd you what the matter was, you stared upon me with ungentle looks: I urged you further; then you scratch'd your head;

And to impatiently stamp'd with your foot; yet I insisted, yet you answer'd not.

But, with an angry waturfe of your hand, Gave sign for me to leave you: so I did; fearing to strengthen that impatience which seem'd too much enkindled, and withal hoping it was but an effect of humour, which sometime hath his hour with every man.

It will not let you eat, nor talk, nor sleep; And could it work so much upon your shape as it hath much prevail'd on your condition, I should not know you, Brutus. Dear my lord, Make me acquainted with your cause of grief.

Brutus, I am not well in health, and that is all.

Portia. Brutus is wise, and, were he not in health, he would embrace the means to come by it.

Brutus, why, so do. Good Portia, go to bed.

Portia. Is Brutus sick? and is it physical?

To walk unbraced and suck up the humours of the dank morning? what, is Brutus sick, and will he steal out of his wholesome bed, to dare the vile contagion of the night, and tempt the rheumy and unpurged air To add unto his sickness? No, my Brutus; you have some sick offence within your mind, which, by the right and virtue of my place, I ought to know of: and, upon my knees, I charm you, by my once-commended beauty, by all your vows of love and that great vow which did incorporate and make us one, that you unfold to me, yourself, your half, why you are heavy, and what men to-night have had resort to you: for here have been some six or seven, who did hide their faces even from darkness.

Brutus. Kneel not, gentle Portia.

Portia. I should not need, if you were gentle Brutus.

Within the bond of marriage, tell me, Brutus, is it excepted I should know no secrets that appertain to you? I am myself, But, as it were, in sort or limitation, to keep with you at meals, comfort your bed, and talk to you sometimes? Dwell I but in the suburbs of your good pleasure? if it be no more, Portia is Brutus' harlot, not his wife.

Brutus. You are my true and honourable wife, as dear to me as are the ruddy drops that visit my sad heart.

Portia. If this were true, then should I know this secret.

I grant I am a woman; but withal a woman that Lord Brutus talk to wife: I grant I am a woman; but withal a woman well-reputed, Cato's daughter. Think you I am no stronger than my sex, being so father'd and so husbanded? Tell me your counsel, I will not disclose 'em: I have made strong proof of my constancy, giving myself a voluntary wound.

Here, in the thigh: can I bear that with patience, and not my husband's secrets?
Brut. O ye gods,
Rend me worthy of this noble wife!

[Knocking within.

Hark, hark! one knocks: Portia, go in awhile;
And by and by thy bosom shall partake
The secrets of my heart.
All my engagements I will construe to thee,
All the charactery of my sad brows:
Leave me with haste. [Exit Portia.] Lucius, who's that knocks?

Re-enter Lucius with Ligarius.
Luc. Here is a sick man that would speak with you.

Brut. Caius Ligarius, that Metellus spake of.
Boy, stand aside. Caius Ligarius! how?

Lig. Vouchsafe good morrow from a feeble tongue.

Brut. O, what a time have you chose out,
brave Caius,
To wear a kerchief? Would you were not sick!

Lig. I am not sick, if Brutus have in hand
Any exploit worthy the name of honour.

Brut. Such an exploit have I in hand, Ligarius,
Had you a healthful ear to hear of it.

Lig. By all the gods that Romans bow before,
Here discar my sickness! Soul of Rome! 321
Brave son, derived from honourable loins!
Thou, like an exorcist, hast conjured up
My mortified spirit. Now bid me run,
And I will strive with things impossible;
Yea, get the better of them. What's to do?

Brut. A piece of work that will make sick men whole.

Lig. But are not some whole that we must make sick?

Brut. That must we also. What it is, my Caius,
I shall unfold to thee, as we are going
To whom it must be done.

Lig. Set on your foot,
And with a heart new-fired I follow you,
To do I know not what: but it sufficeth
That Brutus leads me on.

Brut. Follow me, then. [Exeunt.

Scene II. Caesar's house.

Thunder and lightning. Enter Caesar, in his night-gown.

Cæs. Nor heaven nor earth have been at peace to-night:
Thrice hath Calpurnia in her sleep cried out,
'Help, ho! they murder Caesar!' Who's within?

Enter a Servant.

Serv. My lord?

Cæs. Go bid the priests do present sacrifice
And bring me their opinions of success.

Serv. I will, my lord. [Exit.

Enter Calpurnia.

Cæs. What mean you, Caesar? think you to walk forth?
You shall not stir out of your house to-day.

Cæs. Caesar shall forth: the things that
All threaten'd me
Ne'er look'd but on my back; when they shall see
The face of Caesar, they are vanished.

Cæs. Caesar, I never stood on ceremonies, Yet now they fright me. There is one with Besides the things that we have heard and Recounts my horrid sights seen by the wa

And graves have yawn'd, and yielded up
dead;
Fierce fiery warriors fought upon the clouds
In ranks and squadrons and right form of war
Which drizzled blood upon the Capitol;
The noise of battle hurled in the air,
Horses did neigh, and dying men did groan
And ghosts did shriek and squeal about streets.
O Caesar! these things are beyond all use,
And I do fear them.

Cæs. What can be avoided
Whose end is purposed by the mighty gods
Yet Caesar shall go forth; for these predi
Are to the world in general as to Caesar.

Cæs. When beggars die, there are no

The heavens themselves blaze forth the de prizes.

Cæs. Cowards die many times before Deaths:
The valiant never taste of death but once.
Of all the wonders that I yet have heard,
It seems to me most strange that men should Seeing that death, a necessary end,
Will come when it will come.

Re-enter Servant.

Serv. They would not have you to stir foot.
Plucking the entrails of an offering forth,
They could not find a heart within the beast.

Cæs. The gods do this in shame of cowa
Cæs. Caesar should be a beast without a heart,
If he should stay at home to-day for fear.
No, Caesar shall not: danger knows full we
That Caesar is more dangerous than he:
We are two lions litter'd in one day,
And I the elder and more terrible:
And Caesar shall go forth.

Cæs. Alas, my lord,
Your wisdom is consumed in confidence.
Do not go forth to-day: call it my fear
That keeps you in the house, and not your We'll send Mark Antony to the senate-house
And he shall say you are not well to-day:
Let me, upon my knee, prevail in this.

Cæs. Mark Antony shall say I am not
And, for thy humour, I will stay at home.

Enter Decius.

Here's Decius Brutus, he shall tell them so.

Dec. Caesar, all hail! good morrow,

Cæs. I come to fetch you to the senate-house.

Cæs. And you are come in very happy ti
To bear my greeting to the senators
And tell them that I will not come to-day:
Cannot, is false, and that I dare not, fals
I will not come to-day: tell them so, Decius.

Cæs. Say he is sick.

Cæs. Shall Caesar send a
Have I in conquest stretch'd mine arm so
I am to blame to be thus waited for. Now, Cinna: now, Metellus: what, Trebonius! I have an hour's task in store for you: Remember that you call on me to-day: Be near me, that I may remember you.

_Treb._ Caesar, I will: [_Aside_] and so near will I be, That your best friends shall wish I had been further.

_Caes._ Good friends, go in, and taste some wine with me; And we, like friends, will straightway go together.

_Brut._ [Aside] That every like is not the same, O Caesar, The heart of Brutus yearns to think upon it! [_Exit._

SCENE III. A street near the Capitol.

_Enter Artemidorus, reading a paper._

_Art._ 'Cæsar, beware of Brutus; take heed of Cassius; come not near Cassa; have an eye to Cinna; trust not Trebonius; mark well Metellus Cimber: Decius Brutus loves thee not: thou hast wronged Caius Ligarius. There is but one mind in all these men, and it is bent against Caesar. If thou beest not immortal, look about you: security gives way to conspiracy. The mighty gods defend thee! Thy lover.

'Artemidorus.'

Here will I stand till Cæsar pass along,
And as a suitor will I give him this,
My heart lampets that virtue cannot live
Out of the teeth of emulation.
If thou read this, O Cæsar, thou mayst live;
If not, the Fates with traitors do contrive. [Exit._

SCENE IV. Another part of the same street, before the house of Brutus.

_Enter Portia and Lucius._

_Por._ I prithee, boy, run to the senate-house;
Stay not to answer me, but get thee gone,
Why dost thou stay?

_Luc._ To know my errand, madam.

_Por._ I would have had thee there, and here again,
Ere I can tell thee what thou shouldest do there.
O constancy, be strong upon my side,
Set a huge mountain 'tween my heart and tongue! I have a man's mind, but a woman's might. How hard it is for women to keep counsel! Art thou here yet?

_Luc._ Madam, what should I do? 10
Run to the Capitol, and nothing else?
And so return to you, and nothing else?

_Por._ Yes, bring me word, boy, if thy lord look well.
For he went sickly forth: and take good note What Caesar doth, what suitors press to him.
Hark, boy! what noise is that?

_Luc._ I hear none, madam.

_Por._ Prithee, listen well; I heard a buzzing rumour, like a fray, And the wind brings it from the Capitol.

_Luc._ Sooth, madam, I hear nothing.
Enter the Soothsayer.

Por. Come hither, fellow: which way hast thou been?
Sooth. At mine own house, good lady.
Por. What's the o'cloclock?
Sooth. About the ninth hour, lady.
Por. Is Caesar yet gone to the Capitol?
Sooth. Madam, not yet: I go to take my stand,
To see him pass on to the Capitol.
Por. Thou hast some suit to Caesar, hast thou not?
Sooth. That I have, lady: if it will please Caesar
To be so good to Caesar as to hear me,
I shall beseech him to befriend himself.
Por. Why, know'st thou any harm's intended Towards him?
Sooth. None that I know will be, much that I fear may chance.
Good morrow to you. Here the street is narrow:
The throng that follows Caesar at the heels,
Of senators, of prelates, common suitors,
Will crowd a feeble man almost to death:
I'II get me to a place more void, and there
Speak to great Caesar as he comes along. [Exit.]
Por. I must go in. Ay me, how weak a thing
The heart of woman is! 'O Brutus, 40
The heavens speed thee in thine enterprise!
Sure, the boy heard me: Brutus hath a suit
That Caesar will not grant. ° O, I grow faint.
Run, Lucius, and commend me to my lord;
Say I am merry to come to me again,
And bring me word what he doth say to thee.
[Exeunt severally.

ACT III.

SCENE I. Rome. Before the Capitol; the Senate sitting above.

A crowd of people; among them ARTEMIDORUS and the Soothsayer. Flourish. Enter CAESAR, BRUTUS, CASSIUS, CASCA, DECIUS, MELLUSUS, TREBONIUS, CINNA, ANTONY, LEPIDUS,
POLIPIUS, PUBLIUS, and others.

Cas. [To the Soothsayer] The idees of March are come.
Sooth. Ay, Caesar; but not gone.
Art. Hail, Caesar! I read this schedule.
Dec. Trebonius doth desire you to o'er-read,
At your best leisure, this his humble suit.
Art. O Caesar, read mine first; for mine's a suit
That touches Caesar nearer: read it, great Caesar.
Cas. What touches us ourself shall be last served.
Art. Delay not, Caesar: read it instantly.
Cas. What, is the fellow mad?
Pub. Sirrah, give place to,

Cas. What, urge you your petitions in the street?

Come to the Capitol.

CAESAR goes up to the Senate-House, the rest following.

Por. I wish your enterprise to-day may thrive.
Cas. What enterprise, Popilius? hated of motion: and that I am he,
me a little show it, even in this:
I was constant Cimber should be banish'd, constant do remain to keep him so.

O Caesar,
Hence! wilt thou lift up Olympus?

Great Caesar,—

Doth not Brutus bootless kneel?

Speak, hands, for me! (Casca First, then the other Conspirators and Marcus Brutus stab Caesar.

Et tu, Brute! Then fall, Caesar! [Dies.

Liberty! Freedom! Tyranny is dead! hence, proclaim, cry it about the streets.

Some to the common pulpits, and cry out, freedom, and enfranchisement! 81

People and senators, be not affrighted; not; stand still: ambition's debt is paid.

Go to the pulpit, Brutus.

Where's Publius?
Here, quite confounded with this mutiny,
Stand fast together, lest some friend of Caesar's

Talk not of standing. Publius, good cheer;
i is no harm intended to your person, 90 to no Roman else: so tell them, Publius.

And leave us, Publius; lest that the people,

Till this age some mischief.
Do so: and let no man abide this deed,
we the doers.

Re-enter Trebonius.

Where is Antony?

Fled to his house amazed:
wives and children stare, cry out and run were doomsday.

Fates, we will know your pleasures:
we shall die, we know; 'tis but the time drawing days out, that men stand upon.

Why, he that cuts off twenty years of life off so many years of fearing death.

Grant that, and then is death a benefit:
e we Caesar's friends, that have abridged im of fearing death. Stoop, Romans, stoop, et us bathe our hands in Caesar's blood elbows, and besmear our swords:
walk we forth, even to the market-place,
waving our red weapons o'er our heads,
all cry 'Peace, freedom and liberty!' 110

Stoop, then, and wash. How many ages this our lofty scene be acted over its unborn and accents yet unknown!
How many times shall Caesar bleed in sport, on Pompey's basis lies along orther than the dust?

So oft as that shall be, en shall the knot of us be call'd then that gave their country liberty.

What, shall we forth?

Ay, every man away:
s shall lead; and we will grace his heels the most boldest and best hearts of Rome.

Enter a Servant.

Thus did Mark Antony bid me fall down;
And, being prostrate, thus he bade me say:
Brutus is noble, wise, valiant, and honest;
Cesar was mighty, bold, royal, and loving;
Say I love Brutus, and I honour him;
Say I fear'd Cesar, honour'd him and loved him.
If Brutus will vouchsafe that Antony
May safely come to him, and be resolved
How Cesar hath deserved to lie in death,
Mark Antony shall not love Cesar dead
So well as Brutus living; but will follow
The fortunes and affairs of noble Brutus.
Thorough the hazards of this untrod state
With all true faith. So says my master Antony.

Thy master is a wise and valiant Roman;
I never thought him worse.
Tell him, so please him come unto this place, 140
He shall be satisfied; and, by my honour,
Depart unto'd.

I'll fetch him presently. [Exit.

I know that we shall have him well to friend.

Cas.
I wish we may: but yet have I a mind
That fears him much; and my misgiving still Falls shrewdly to the purpose.

But here comes Antony.

Re-enter Antony.

Welcome, Mark Antony.

O mighty Cesar! dost thou lie so low?
Are all thy conquests, glories, triumphs, spoils,
Shrunk to this little measure? Fare thee well.
I know not, gentlemen, what you intend,
Who else must be let blood, who else is rank:
If I myself, there is no hour so fit
As Caesar's death hour, nor no instrument
Of half that worth as those your swords, made rich
With the most noble blood of all this world.
I do beseech ye, if you bear me hard,
Now, whilst your purpled hands do reek and smoke,
Fulfil your pleasure. Live a thousand years,
I shall not find myself so apt to die:
No place will please me so, no mean of death,
As here by Caesar, and by you cut off,
The choice and master spirits of this age.

O Antony, beg not your death of us,
Though now we must appear bloody and cruel,
As, by our hands and this our present act,
You see we do, yet see you but our hands
And this the bleeding business they have done:
Our hearts you see not; they are pitiful;
And pity to the general wrong of Rome—
As fire drives out fire, so pity—
Hath done this deed on Caesar. 'For your part,
To you our swords have leaden points, Mark Antony:
Our arms, in strength of malice, and our hearts
Of brothers' temper, do receive you in
With all kind love, good thoughts, and reverence.
Cas.
Your voice shall be as strong as any man's
In the disposing of new dignities.

Only be patient till we have appeased
The multitude, beside themselves with fear, 180
And then we will deliver you the cause,
Why that did love Caesar when I struck him,
Have thus proceeded.

Ant.  I doubt not of your wisdom.
Let each man render me his bloody hand:
First, Marcus Brutus, will I shake with you;
Next, Caius Cassius, do I take your hand;
Now, Decius Brutus, yours; now yours, Me-tellius;
Yours, Cinna; and, my valiant Cassa, yours;
Though last, not least in love, yours, good Trebonius.

Gentlemen all,—alas, what shall I say? 190
My credit now stands on such slippery ground,
That one of two bad ways you must conceive me,
Either a coward or a freer.
That I did love thee, Caesar, O, 'tis true:
If then thy spirit look upon us now,
Shall it not grieve thee dearer than thy death,
To see thy Antony making his peace,
Shaking the bloody fingers of thy foes,
Most noble! in the presence of thy corse?
Had I as many eyes as thou hast wounds,
Weeping as fast as they stream forth thy blood,
It would become me better than to close
In terms of friendship with thine enemies.
Pardon me, Julius! Here wast thou bay'd, brave
hurt:
Here didst thou fall; and here thy hunters stand,
Sign'd in thy spoil, and crimson'd in thy lethe.
O world, thou wast the forest to this hart;
And this, indeed, O world, the heart of thee.
How like a deer, strucken by many princes,
Dost thou here lie?

Cas.  Mark Antony,—

Ant.  Pardon me, Caius Cassius:
The enemies of Caesar shall say this;
Then, in a friend, it is cold modesty.

Cas.  I blame you not for praising Caesar so;
But what compact mean you to have with us?
Will you be prick'd in number of our friends;
Or shall we on, and not depend on you?

Ant.  Therefore I took your hands, but was,
indeed,
Sway'd from the point, by looking down on Caesar.
Friends am I with you all and love you all, 220
Upon this hope, that you shall give me reasons
Why and wherein Caesar was dangerous.

Bru.  Or else were this a savage speculac;
Our reasons are so full of good regard
That were you, Antony, the son of Caesar,
You should be satisfied.

Ant.  That's all I seek:
And am moreover suitor that I may Produce his body to the market-place;
And in the pulpit, as becomes a friend,
Speak in the order of his funeral.

Bru.  You shall, Mark Antony.

Cas.  Brutus, a word with you.

[Aside to Bru.]  You know not what you do: do
Why not consent
That Antony speak in his funeral:
Know you how much the people may be moved
By that which he will utter.

Bru.  By your pardon; I will myself into the pulpit first,
And show the reason of our Caesar's death:
What Antony shall speak, I will protest
He speaks by leave and by permission,
And that we are contented Caesar shall
Have all true rites and lawful ceremonies.
It shall advantage more than do us wrong.
Cas.  I know not what may fall; I like it.

Bru.  Mark Antony, here, take you Cassus body.
You shall not in your funeral speech blame us
But speak all good you can devise of Caesar,
And say you do't by our permission;
Else shall you not have any hand at all
About his funeral: and you shall speak
In the same pulpit whereto I am going,
After my speech is ended.

Ant.  Be it so;
I do desire no more.

Bru.  Prepare the body then, and follow us.

[Exeunt all but Ant.]

Ant.  O, pardon me, thou bleeding earth,
That I am meek and gentle with these butch
Thou art the ruins of the noblest man
That ever lived in the tide of times.
Woe to the hand that shed this costly blood!
Over thy wounds now do I prophesy,—
Which, like dumb mouths, do pipe their ruby
To beg the voice and utterance of my tongue.
A curse shall light upon the † limbs of men;
Domestic fury and fierce civil strife
Shall cumber all the parts of Italy;
Blood and destruction shall be so in use
And dreadful objects so familiar,
That mothers shall but smile when they behold
Their infants quarter'd with the hands of war;
That this foul deed shall smell above the ear
With carrion men, groaning for burial.

Enter a Servant.

You serve Octavius Caesar, do you not?

Serv.  I do, Mark Antony.

Ant.  Caesar did write for him to come to R _
Serv.  He did receive his letters, and is com-
And bid me say to you by word of mouth—
O Caesar!—

[Seeing the body]  Ant.  Thy heart is big, get thee apart and weep, Passion, I see, is catching; for mine eyes,
Seeing those beads of sorrow stand in thine,
Began to water.  Is thy master coming?

Serv.  He lies to-night within seven lea-of Rome.

Ant.  Post back with speed, and tell him hath chanced:
Here is a mourning Rome, a dangerous Rom-
No Rome of safety for Octavius yet;
Hie hence, and tell him so.  Yet, stay awhi,
Thou shalt not back till I have borne this co-
Into the market-place: there shall I try,
In my oration, how the people take
The cruel hands of these bloody men;
According to the which, thou shalt discourse
To young Octavius of the state of things.
Lend me your hand.

[Exeunt with Cas]
SCENE II. The Forum.

Enter Brutus and Cassius, and a throng of Citizens.

Citizens. We will be satisfied; let us be satisfied.

Brut. Then follow me, and give me audience, friends.

Citizens, go you into the other street, I part the numbers.

Cæsar shall be crown’d in Brutus.

First Cit. We’ll bring him to his house with shouts and clamours.

Brut. My countrymen,—

Sec. Cit. Peace, silence! Brutus speaks.

First Cit. Peace, ho! Brut. Good countrymen, let me depart alone, and, for my sake, stay here with Antony: 61 Do grace to Cæsar’s corpse, and grace his speech Tending to Cæsar’s glories; which Mark Antony, by our permission, is allow’d to make. I do entreat you, not a man depart, Save I alone, till Antony have spoke. [Exit. First Cit. Stay, ho! and let us hear Mark Antony.

Third Cit. Let him go up into the public chair; We’ll hear him. Noble Antony, go up.

Ant. For Brutus’ sake, I am beholding to you. [Goes into the pulpit. Fourth Cit. What does he say of Brutus?

Third Cit. He says, for Brutus’ sake, He finds himself beholding to us all.

Fourth Cit. T’were best he speak no harm of Brutus here.

First Cit. This Cæsar was a tyrant.

Third Cit. Nay, that’s certain: We are blest that Rome is rid of him.

Sec. Cit. Peace! let us hear what Antony can say.

Ant. Friends, Romans, countrymen, lend me your ears; I come to bury Cæsar, not to praise him. The evil that men do lives after them; The good is oft interred with their bones; So let it be with Cæsar. The noble Brutus Hath told you Cæsar was ambitious: If it were so, it was a grievous fault, And grievously hath Cæsar answer’d it. Here, under leave of Brutus and the rest— For Brutus is an honourable man; So are they all, all honourable men—Come I to speak in Cæsar’s funeral. He was my friend, faithful and just to me: But Brutus says he was ambitious; And Brutus is an honourable man. He hath brought many captives home to Rome, Whose ransoms did the general coffers fill: Did this in Cæsar seem ambitious? When that the poor have cried, Cæsar hath wept: Ambition should be made of sterner stuff: Yet Brutus says he was ambitious; And Brutus is an honourable man. You all did see that on the Lupercal I thrice presented him a kingly crown, Which he did thrice refuse: was this ambition? Yet Brutus says he was ambitious; And, sure, he is an honourable man. I speak not to disprove what Brutus spoke, But here I am to speak what I do know. You all did love him once, not without cause: What cause withholds you then, to mourn for him? O judgement! thou art fied to brutish beasts, And have men lost their reason. Bear with me;
My heart is in the coffin there with Caesar,
And I must pause till it come back to me.
First Cit. Methinks there is much reason in his sayings.
Sec. Cit. If thou consider rightly of the matter,
Cæsar has had great wrong.
Third Cit. Has he, masters?
I fear there will a worse come in his place.
Fourth Cit. Mark'd ye his words? He would not take the crown;
Therefore 'tis certain he was not ambitious.
First Cit. If it be found so, some will dear abide it.
Sec. Cit. Poor soul! his eyes are red as fire with weeping.
Third Cit. There's not a nobler man in Rome than Antony.
Fourth Cit. Now mark him, he begins again to speak.
Ant. But yesterday the word of Cæsar might
Have stood against the world; now lies he there,
And none so poor to do him reverence.
O masters, if I were disposed to stir,
Your hearts and minds to mutiny and rage,
I should do Brutus wrong, and Cæsius wrong.
When all you know, are honourable men:
I will not do them wrong; I rather choose
To wrong the dead, to wrong myself and you,
Than I will wrong such honourable men.
But here's a parchment with the seal of Cæsar;
I found it in his closet, 'tis his will:
Let but the commons hear this testament—
Which, pardon me, I do not mean to read—
And they would go and kiss dead Cæsar's wounds
And dip their napkins in his sacred blood,
Yea, beg a hair of him for memory,
And, dying, mention it within their wills,
Bequeathing it as a rich legacy
Unto their issue.
Fourth Cit. We'll hear the will: read it,
Mark Antony.
All. The will, the will! we will hear Cæsar's
will.
Ant. Have patience, gentle friends, I must not read it;
It is not meet you know how Cæsar loved you.
You are not wood, you are not stones, but men;
And, being men, hearing the will of Cæsar,
It will inflame you, it will make you mad: 139
'Tis good you know not that you are his heirs;
For, if you should, O, what would come of it!
Fourth Cit. Read the will; we'll hear it,
Antony;
You shall read us the will, Cæsar's will.
Ant. Will you be patient? will you stay awhile?
I have o'er shot myself to tell you of it:
If I err I wrong the honourable men
Whose daggers have stabb'd Cæsar; I do fear it.
Fourth Cit. They were traitors: honourable men!
All. The will! the testament!
Sec. Cit. They were villains, murderers: the will! read the will.
Ant. You will compel me, then, to read the will?
Then make a ring about the corpse of Cæsar,
And let me show you him that made the will.
Shall I descend? and will you give me leave?

Several Cit. Come down.
Sec. Cit. Descend.
Third Cit. You shall have leave.

[Antony comes down.
Fourth Cit. A ring: stand round.
First Cit. Stand from the hearse, stand from the body.
Sec. Cit. Room for Antony, most noble Anto
Ant. Nay, press not upon me; stand far
Several Cit. Stand back; room; bear back Ant. If you have tears, prepare to shed the now.
You all do know this mantle: I remember
The first time ever Cæsar put it on;
'Twas on a summer's evening, in his tent,
That day he overcame the Nervii:
Look, in this place ran Cassius' dagger through
See what a rent the envious Cassca made:
Through this the well-beloved Brutus stabb'd,
And as he pluck'd his cursed steel away,
Mark how the blood of Cæsar follow'd it,
As flourishing out of doors, to be resolved
If Brutus so unkindly knock'd, or no;
For Brutus, as you know, was Cæsar's angel:
Judge, O you gods, how dearly Cæsar loved hi
This was the most unkindest cut of all;
For when the noble Cæsar saw him stab,
Ingratitude, more strong than traitors' arms,
Quite vanquish'd him: then burst his sad
heart;
And, in his mantle muffling up his face,
Even at the base of Pompey's statue,
Which all the while ran blood, great Cæsar fe
O, what a fall was there, my countrymen!
Then I, and you, and all of us fell down,
Whilst bloody treason flourish'd over us.
O, now you weep; and, I perceive, you feel
The dint of pity: these are gracious drops.
Kind souls, what, weep you when you but be
Our Cæsar's vesture wounded? Look you
Here is himself, marr'd, as you see, with traito
First Cit. O piteous spectacle!
Sec. Cit. O noble Caesar!
Third Cit. O woful day!
Fourth Cit. O traitors, villains!
First Cit. O most bloody sight!
Sec. Cit. We will be revenged.
All. Revenge! About! Seek! Burn! Fire!
Kill! Slay! Let not a traitor live!
Ant. Stay, countrymen.
First Cit. Peace there! hear the noble Anto Sec. Cit. We'll hear him, we'll follow him we'll die with him.
Ant. Good friends, sweet friends, let me stir you up.
To such a sudden flood of mutiny.
They that have done this deed are honourable:
What private griefs they have, alas, I know
That made them do it: they are wise and hon able,
And will not doubt, with reasons answer you,
I come not, friends, to steal away your heart
I am no orator, as Brutus is;
But, as you know me all, a plain blunt man,
That love my friend; and that they know
well
That gave me public leave to speak of him:
For I have neither wit, nor words, nor worth
Action, nor utterance, nor the power of spee
And things unlucky charge my fancy;
I have no will to wander forth of doors,
Yet something leads me forth.

Enter Citizens.

First Cit. What is your name?
Sec. Cit. Whither are you going?
Third Cit. Where do you dwell?
Fourth Cit. Are you a married man or a bachelor?
Sec. Cit. Answer every man directly.
First Cit. Ay, and briefly.
Fourth Cit. Ay, and wisely.
Third Cit. Ay, and truly, you were best.

Cin. What is my name? Whither am I going?
Where do I dwell? Am I a married man or a bachelor? Then, to answer every man directly and briefly, wisely and truly: wisely I say, I am a bachelor.

Sec. Cit. That's as much as to say, they are fools that marry: you'll bear me a bang for that,
I fear. Proceed; directly.

Cin. Directly, I am going to Caesar's funeral.
First Cit. As a friend or an enemy?
Cin. As a friend.

Sec. Cit. That matter is answered directly.
Fourth Cit. For your dwelling,—briefly.
Cin. Briefly, I dwell by the Capitol.
Third Cit. Your name, sir, truly.
Cin. Truly, my name is Cinna.
First Cit. Tear him to pieces; he's a conspirator.
Cin. I am Cinna the poet, I am Cinna the poet.

Fourth Cit. Tear him for his bad verses, tear him for his bad verses.

Cin. I am not Cinna the conspirator.
Fourth Cit. It is no matter, his name's Cinna; pluck but his name out of his heart, and turn him going.

Third Cit. Tear him, tear him! Come, brands, ho! fire-brands: to Brutus', to Cassius';
burn all: some to Decius' house, and some to Casca's; some to Ligarius': away, go!

[Exeunt.

ACT IV.

SCENE I. A house in Rome.

ANTONY, OCTAVIUS, and LEPIDUS, seated at a table.

Ant. These many, then, shall die; their names are prick'd.
Okt. Your brother too must die; consent you,
Lepidus?

Lep. I do consent,—

Okt. Prick him down, Antony.

Lep. Upon condition Publius shall not live,
Who is your sister's son, Mark Antony.

Ant. He shall not live; look, with a spot I damn him.

But, Lepidus, go you to Caesar's house;
Petch the will hither, and we shall determine
How to cut off some charge in legacies.

Lep. What, shall I find you here?

Okt. Or here, or at the Capitol.

Ant. This is a slight unmeritable man,
Meet to be sent on errands: is it fit,
The three-fold world divided, he should stand
One of the three to share it?

Br. So you thought him;
And took his voice who should be prickt to die,
In our black sentence and prescription.

Ant. Octavius, I have seen more days than you;
And though we lay these honours on this man,
To ease ourselves of divers slanders loads, 20
He shall but bear them as the ass bears gold,
To groan and sweat under the business,
Either led or driven, as we point the way;
And having brought our treasure where we will,
Then take we down his load, and turn him off,
Like to the empty ass, to shake his ears,
And graze in commons.

Oet. You may do your will;
But he's a tried and valiant soldier.

Ant. So is my horse, Octavius; and for that I do appoint him store of provender:
It is a creature that I teach to fight,
To wind, to stop, to run directly on,
His moral motion govern'd by my spirit.
And, in some taste, is Lepidus but so;
He must be taught and train'd and bid go forth;
A barren-spirited fellow; one that feeds
On objects, oaths and imitations,
Which, out of use and staled by other men,
Begin his fashion: do not talk of him,
But as a property. And now, Octavius, 40
Listen great things:—Brutus and Cassius
Are levying powers: we must straight make head:
Therefore let our alliance be combined,
Our best friends made, our means stretch'd;
And let us presently go sit in council,
How covert matters may be best disclosed,
And open perils surest answered.

Oet. Let us do so: for we are at the stake,
And bay'd about with many enemies;
And some that smile have in their hearts, I fear,
Millions of mischief.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II. Camp near Sardis. Before Brutus's tent.

Drum. Enter Brutus, Lucilius, Licius, and Soldiers; Titiarius and Pindarus meeting them.

Brut. Stand, ho!
Luc. Give the word, ho! and stand.

Brut. What now, Lucilius! Is Cassius near?
Luc. He is at hand; and Pindarus is come To do you salutation from his master.

Brut. He greets me well. Your master, Pindarus,
In his own change, or by ill officers,
Hath given me some worthy cause to wish
Things done, undone: but, if he be at hand,
I shall be satisfied.

Pin. I do not doubt
But that my noble master will appear
Such as he is, full of regard and honour.
Brut. He is not doubted. A word, Lucilius;
How he received you, let me be resolved.

Luc. With courtesy and with respect enough;
But not with such familiar instances,
Nor with such free and friendly conference,
As he hath used of old.

Brut. Thou hast described
A hot friend cooling: ever note, Lucilius,
When love begins to sicken and decay,
It useth an enforced ceremony.
There are no tricks in plain and simple faith;
But hollow men, like horses hot at hand,
Make gallant show and promise of their mettles,
But when they should endure the bloody spur,
Sink in the trial. Comes his army on?

Luc. They mean this night in Sardis to quarter'd;
The greater part, the horse in general,
Are come with Cassius.

Brut. Hark! he is arrived.
[Low march within
March gently on to meet him.

Enter Cassius and his powers.

Cas. Stand, ho!
Brut. Stand, ho! Speak the word along.

Sec. Stand! First Sol. Stand!
Third Sol. Stand!

Cas. Most noble brother, you have done us wrong.
Brut. Judge me, you gods! I wrong my enemies?
And, if not so, how should I wrong a brothe-
Cas. Brutus, this sober form of yours I wrongs;
And when you do them—

Brut. Cassius, be content
Speak your griefs softly: I do know you
Before the eyes of both our armies here,
Which should perceive nothing but love from
Let us not wrangle: bid them move away; Then in my tent, Cassius, enlarge your grief,
And I will give you audience.

Cas. Pindarus, Bid our commanders lead their charges off
A little from this ground.

Brut. Lucilius, do you the like; and let
Come to our tent till we have done our confer-
Let Lucius and Titinius guard our door.

Exeunt.

SCENE III. Brutus's tent.

Enter Brutus and Cassius.

Cas. That you have wrong'd me doth appear in this:
You have condemn'd and noted Lucius Pella;
For taking bribes here of the Sardians;
Wherein my letters, praying on his side,
Because I knew the man, were slighted off.

Brut. You wrong'd yourself to write in such a case.

Cas. In such a time as this it is not meet
That every one offends should bear his count;

Brut. Let me tell you, Cassius, you your
Are much condemn'd to have an itching palm
To sell and mark your offices for gold To undeservers.

Cas. I an itching palm!
You know that you are Brutus that speak thir.
Or, by the gods, this speech were else your Brut. The name of Cassius honours this ruption,
By heaven, I had rather coin my heart,
And drop my blood for drachmas, than to wring
From the hard hands of peasants their vile trash.
By any indirection: I did send
To you for gold to pay my legions,
Which you denied me: was that done, like Cassius?
Should I have answer’d Caius Cassius so?
When Marcus Brutus grows so covetous,
To look such rascal counters from his friends, &
Be ready, gods, with all your thunderbolts;
Dash him to pieces!

Cas. I denied you not.

But you did.

Cas. I did not: he was but a fool that brought
My answer back. Brutus hath rived my heart:
A friend should bear his friend’s infirmities,
But Brutus makes mine greater than they are.

Brut. I do not, till you practise them on me.

Cas. You love me not.

Brut. I do not like your faults.

Cas. A friendly eye could never see such faults.

Brut. A flatterer’s would not, though they do appear as high as high Olympus.

Cas. Come, Antony; and young Octavius, come,
Revenge yourselves alone on Cassius,
For Cassius is awearie of the world:
Hated by one he loves; braved by his brother;
Check’d like a bondman; all his faults observed,
Set in a note-book, learnt’d, and comm’d by rote,
To cast into my teeth. O, I could weep
My spirit from mine eyes! There is my dagger,
And here my naked breast; within, a heart
Dearer than Plutus’ mine, richer than gold:
If that thou be’st a Roman, take it forth;
I, that denied thee gold, will give my heart
Strike, as thou didst at Caesar; for, I know,
When thou didst hate him worst, thou lov’dst him better
Than ever thou lov’dst Cassius.

Brut. Sheathe thy dagger:
Be angry when you will, it shall have scope;
Do what you will, dishonour shall be humour.
O Cassius, you are yoked with a lamb
That carries anger as the flint bears fire;
Who, much enforced, shows a hasty spark,
And straight is cold again.

Cas. Hath Cassius lived
To be but mirth and laughter to his Brutus,
When grief, and blood ill-temper’d, vexeth him?

Brut. When I spoke that, I was ill-temper’d too.

Cas. Do you confess so much? Give me your hand.

Brut. And my heart too.

Cas. O Brutus!

Brut. What’s the matter?

Cas. Have not you love enough to bear with me,
When that rash humour which my mother gave me
Makes me forgetful?

Brut. Yes, Cassius; and, from henceforth,
When you are over-eas’t with your Brutus,
He’ll think your mother chides, and leave you so.

Poet. [Within] Let me go in to see the generals;
There is some grudge between ‘em, ’tis not meet
They be alone.

Lucil. [Within] You shall not come to them.

Poet. [Within] Nothing but death shall stay me.
Enter Poet, followed by Lucilius, Titinius, and Lucius.

Cas. How now! what's the matter?
Poet. For shame, you generals! what do you mean? 130

Love, and be friends, as two such men should be;
For I have seen more years, I'm sure, than ye.
Cas. Ha, ha! how vilely doth this cynic rhyme!
Bru. Get you hence, sirrah; saucy fellow, hence!
Cas. Bear with him, Brutus; 'tis his fashion.
Bru. I'll know his humour, when he knows his time:
What should the wars do with these jiggling fools?
Companion, hence!
Cas. Away, away, be gone! [Exit Poet.
Bru. Lucilius and Titinius, bid the commanders
Prepare to lodge their companies to-night. 140
Cas. And come yourselves, and bring Messala
Immediately to us.
[Exeunt Lucilius and Titinius.
Bru. Lucius, a bowl of wine! [Exit Lucius.
Cas. I did not think you could have been so angry.
Bru. O Cassius, I am sick of many griefs.
Cas. Of your philosophy you make no use,
If you give place to accidental evils.
Bru. No man bears sorrow better. Portia is dead.
Cas. Ha! Portia!
Bru. She is dead.
Cas. How 'scape I killing when I cross'd you so?
O insupportable and touching loss! 151
Upon what sickness?
Bru. Impatient of my absence,
And grief that young Octavius with Mark Antony
Have made themselves so strong—for with her death
That tidings came:—with this she fell distracted,
And, her attendants absent, swallowed'd fire.
Cas. And died so?
Bru. Even so.
Cas. O ye immortal gods!
Re-enter Lucius, with wine and taper.
Bru. Speak no more of her. Give me a bowl of wine.
In this I bury all unkindness, Cassius.
Cas. My heart is thirsty for that noble pledge.
Fill, Lucius, till the wine o'erswell the cup; 161
I cannot drink too much of Brutus' love.
Bru. Come in, Titinius! [Exit Lucius.
Re-enter Titinius, with Messala.
Welcome, good Messala.
Now sit we close about this taper here,
And call in question our necessities.
Cas. Portia, art thou gone?
Bru. No more, I pray you.
Messala, I have here received letters,
That young Octavius and Mark Antony
Come down upon us with a mighty power,
Bending their expedition toward Philippi. 170
Mes. Myself have letters of the selfsame tenour.
Bru. With what addition?
Mes. That by proscription and bills of outlawry,
Octavius, Antony, and Lepidus,
Have put to death an hundred senators.
Bru. Therein our letters do not well agree:
Mine speak of seventy senators that died
By their proscriptions, Cicero being one.
Cas. Cicero one!
Mes. Cicero is dead,
And by that order of prescription,
Had you your letters from your wife, my lord?
Bru. No, Messala.
Mes. Nor nothing in your letters writ of
Mes. That, methinks, is strange.
Bru. Why ask you? hear you aught of her yours?
Mes. No, my lord.
Bru. Now, as you are a Roman, tell me
Mes. Then like a Roman bear the truth I
For certain she is dead, and by strange means?
Bru. Why, farewell, Portia. We must Messala:
With meditating that she must die once,
I have the patience to endure it now.
Mes. Even so great men great losses shure endure.
Cas. I have as much of this in art as you
But yet my nature could not bear it so.
Bru. Well, to our work alive. What do you think
Of marching to Philippi presently?
Cas. I do not think it good.
Bru. Your reason?
Cas. This
'Tis better that the enemy seek us:
So shall he waste his means, weary his soldiery,
Doing himself offence; whilst we, lying still,
Are full of rest, defence, and nimbleness.
Bru. Good reasons must, of force, give to better.
The people 'twist Philippi and this ground
Do stand but in a forced affection;
For they have grudged us contribution;
The enemy, marching along by them,
By them shall make a fuller number up,
Come on refresh'd, new-added, and encourag'd
From which advantage shall we cut him off,
If at Philippi we do face him there,
These people at our back.
Cas. Hear me, good brother;
Bru. Under your pardon. You must beside,
That we have tried the utmost of our friends
Our legions are brim-full, our cause is ripe:
The enemy increaseth every day;
We, at the height, are ready to decline.
There is a tide in the affairs of men,
Which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune;
Omitted, all the voyage of their life
Is bound in shallows and in miseries.
On such a full sea are we now afloat;
And we must take the current when it serve
Or lose our ventures.
Cas. Then, with your will, go
We'll along ourselves, and meet them at Philippi Bru. The deep of night is crept upon our
And nature must obey necessity;
Which we will riggard with a little rest.
There is no more to say?
No more. Good night.
Early to-morrow we will rise, and hence.
JULIUS CAESAR.

Act III, Scene I

Enter Varro and Cassius.

Varro. Calls my lord?

Cassius. I pray you, sirs, lie in my tent and sleep; ay be I shall raise you by and by business to my brother Cassius.

Enter Varro and Cassius. I was sure your lordship did not give me leave, my lord, an't please you.

Varro. With me, good boy, I am much forgetful.

Cassius. Do hold up thy heavy eyes awhile, touch thy instrument a strain or two?

Varro. Ay, my lord, an't please you.

Cassius. It does, my boy; boldly too much, but thou art willing.

Varro. It is my duty, sir.

Cassius. I should not urge thy duty past thy might; now young bloods look a time of rest.

Varro. I have slept, my lord, already.

Cassius. It was well done; and thou shalt sleep again, not hold thee long; if I do live, be good to thee. [Music, and a song.]

Enter the Ghost of Caesar.

I think it is the weakness of mine eye. That shapes this monstrous apparition. It comes upon me. Art thou any thing? Art thou some god, some angel, or some devil, That makest my blood cold and my hair to stand? Speak to me what thou art. 261

Ghost. Thy evil spirit, Brutus.

Brutus. Why comest thou, Ghost? To tell thee how shalt see me at Philippi.

Ghost. Ay, at Philippi.

Brutus. Why, I shall see thee at Philippi, then. [Exit Ghost.]

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Prepare you, generals; The enemy comes on in gallant show; Their bloody sign of battle is hung out, And something to be done immediately.
Ant. Octavius, lead your battle softly on,
Upon the left hand of the even field.
Oct. Upon the right hand 1; keep thou the left.
Ant. Why do you cross me in this exigent?
Oct. I do not cross you; but I will do so. [March.

Drum. Enter Brutus, Cassius, and their Army; Lucilius, Titinius, Messalas, and others.

Brut. They stand, and would have parley.
Cas. Stand fast, Titinius: we must out and talk.

Oct. Mark Antony, shall we give sign of battle?
Ant. No, Caesar, we will answer on their charge.

Make forth; the generals would have some words.

Oct. Words before blows: is it so, countrymen?

Brut. Not that we love words better, as you do.

Oct. Good words are better than bad strokes, Octavius.

Ant. In your bad strokes, Brutus, you give good words:
Witness the hole you made in Caesar's heart,
Crying 'Long live! hail, Caesar!'

Cas. Antony,
The posture of your blows are yet unknown;
But for your words, they rob the Hybla bees,
And leave them honeyless.

Ant. Not single too.

Bru. O, yes, and soundless too;
For you have stol'n their buzzing, Antony,
And very wisely threat before you stung.

Ant. Villains, you did not so, when your vile daggers
Hacked one another in the sides of Caesar:
You show'd your teeth like apes, and fawn'd like hounds,
And bow'd like bondmen, kissing Caesar's feet;
Whilst damned Casca, like a cur, behind
Struck Caesar on the neck. O you flatterers!

Cas. Flatterers! Now, Brutus, thank your self:
This tongue had not offended so to-day;
If Cassius might have ruled.

Oct. Come, come, the cause: if arguing make us sweat,
The proof of it will turn to redder drops.

Look:

I draw a sword against conspirators;
When think you that the sword goes up again?
Never, till Caesar's three and thirty wounds
Be well avenged; or till another Caesar
Have added slaughter to the sword of traitors.

Bru. Caesar, thou canst not die by traitors' hands.

Unless thou bring'st them with thee.

Oct. So I hope;
I was not born to die on Brutus' sword.

Bru. O, if thou wert the noblest of thy strain,
Young man, thou couldst not die more honourable.

Cas. A peevish schoolboy, worthless of such honour,
Join'd with a masker and a reveller!

Ant. Old Cassius still!
Scene I. Another part of the field.

Alarum. Enter Cassius and Titinius.

CAESAR. [Aside] O Cassius! Cassius, thou art best look'd to. Titinius, look, look, the villains fly! The sun descends. Those my tents where I perceive the fire? They are, my lord.

TITINIUS. Cassius, if thou lov'st me, not thou my horse, and hide thy spurs in him, he does will to me turn'd enemy; and so, when I was marching, and did take it from him.

CAESAR. O Cassius, Brutus gave the word too early; and having some advantage on Octavius, and to him eagerly: his soldiers fell to spoil, the same, by Antony are all enclosed.

Enter Pindarus.

PIAN. [To Brutus, Ant. and Cass.] Fly further off, my lord, fly further off; Antony is in your tents, my lord; therefore, noble Cassius, fly far off. This hill is far enough. Look, look, Titinius; those my tents where I perceive the fire? They are, my lord.

TITINIUS. Cassius, if thou lov'st me, do not thou my horse, and hide thy spurs in him, he will be come to me turn'd enemy; and so, when I was marching, and did take it from him.

CAESAR. I will be here again, even with a thought. [Exit.

TITINIUS. Go, Pindarus, get higher on that hill; I do see this was ever thought; regard Titinius, tell me what thou notest about the field.

[PIAN. ascends the hill.]

day I breathed first: time is come round, where I did begin, there shall I end; the sun is run his compass. Sirrah, what news?

CAESAR. [Aside] O my lord!

PIAN. [Aside] What news?

CAESAR. [Aside] Titinius is enclosed round about my horsemen, that make to him on the spur; and now they are almost on him. Titinius! Now some light. O, he lights 30

PIAN. [Shout.] And, hark! they shout for joy.

CAESAR. Come down, behold no more. I am, to live so long, my best friend ta'en before my face!

Pindarus descends.

In Parthia did I take thee prisoner; and then I swore thee, saving of thy life, that whatsoever I did bid thee do, thou shouldst attempt it. Come now, keep thine oath.

Now be a freeman: and with this good sword, That ran through Caesar's bowels, search this bosom.

Stand not to answer; here, take thou the hilts; and, when my face is cover'd, as 'tis now, Guide thou the sword. [Pindarus stabs him.]

Caesar, thou art revenged, Even with the sword that kill'd thee. [Dies.]

PIAN. So, I am free; yet would not so have been, Durst I have done my will. O Cassius, Far from this country Pindarus shall run, Where never Roman shall take note of him. [Exit.

Re-enter Titinius with Messala.

MES. It is but change, Titinius; for Octavius is overthrown by noble Brutus' power, As Cassius' legions are by Antony.

TITI. These tidings will well comfort Cassius.

MES. Where did you leave him?

TITI. All disconsolate, with Pindarus his bondman, on this hill.

MES. Is not that he that lies upon the ground?

TITI. He lies not like the living. O my heart!

MES. Is not that he?

TITI. No, this was he, Messala, but Cassius is no more. O setting sun, As in thy red rays thou dost sink to-night, So in his red blood Cassius' day is set; The sun of Rome is set! Our day is gone; Clouds, dews, and dangers come; our deeds are done!

Mistrust of my success hath done this deed. Mistrust of good success hath done this deed. O hateful error, melancholy's child, Why dost thou show to the apt thoughts of men The things that are not? O error, soon conceiv'd, Thou never comest unto a happy birth, But kill'st the mother that engender'd thee! What, Pindarus! where art thou, Pindarus?

MES. Seek him, Titinius, whilst I go to meet The noble Brutus, thrusting this report Into his ears; I may say, thrusting it; For piercing steel and darts envenomed Shall be as welcome to the ears of Brutus As tidings of this sight.

TITI. He ye, Messala, and I will seek for Pindarus the while. [Exit Messala.

Why didst thou send me forth, brave Cassius? So Did I not meet thy friends? and did not they Put on my brows this wreath of victory, And bid me give it thee? Didst thou not hear their shouts? Alas, thou hast misconstrued every thing! But, hold thee, take this garland on thy brow; Thy Brutus bid me give it thee, and I Will do his bidding. Brutus, come apace, And see how I regarded Caius Cassius. By your leave, gods:—this is a Roman's part: 89
Come, Cassius' sword, and find Titinius' heart. [Kills himself.

Alarum. Re-enter Messala, with Brutus, young Cato, Strato, Volumnius, and Lucilius.

Bru. Where, where, Messala, doth his body lie? Mes. Lo, yonder, and Titinius mourning it.

Bru. Titinius' face is upward.

Cato. He is slain.

Bru. O Julius Caesar, thou art mighty yet! Thy spirit walks abroad, and turns our swords In our own proper entrails. [Low alarum.

Cato. Brave Titinius!

Look, whether he have not crown'd dead Cassius!

Bru. Are yet two Romans living such as these? The last of all the Romans, fare thee well! It is impossible that ever Rome should breed thy fellow. Friends, I owe more tears To this dead man than you shall see me pay. I shall find time, Cassius, I shall find time. Come, therefore, and to Thasos send his body: His funerals shall not be in our camp, Lest it discomfort us. Lucilius, come; And come, young Cato; let us to the field. Labeo and Flavius, set our battles on: 'Tis three o'clock; and, Romans, yet ere night We shall try fortune in a second fight. [Exeunt.

Scene IV. Another part of the field.

Alarum. Enter fighting, Soldiers of both armies; then Brutus, young Cato, Lucilius, and others.

Bru. Yet, countrymen, o, yet hold up your heads!

Cato. What bastard doth not? Who will go with me?

I will proclaim my name about the field: I am the son of Marcus Cato, ho!

A foe to tyrants, and my country's friend; I am the son of Marcus Cato, ho!

And I am Brutus, Marcus Brutus, I;

Brutus, my country's friend; know me for Brutus! [Exit.

Lucil. O young and noble Cato, art thou down?

Why, now thou diest as bravely as Titinius; To and mayst be honour'd, being Cato's son.

First Sold. Yield, or thou diest.

Lucil. Only I yield to die: There is so much that thou wilt kill me straight; [Offering money.

Kill Brutus, and be honour'd in his death.

First Sold. We must not. A noble prisoner! Sec. Sold. Room, ho! Tell Antony, Brutus is ta'en.

First Sold. I'll tell the news. Here comes the general.

Enter Antony.

Brutus is ta'en, Brutus is ta'en, my lord.

Ant. Where is he?

Lucil. Safe, Antony; Brutus is safe enough: I dare assure thee that no enemy Shall ever take alive the noble Brutus; The gods defend him from so great a shame!

When you do find him, or alive or dead, He will be found like Brutus, like himself. Ant. This is not Brutus, friend; but, But a prize no less in worth: keep this man safe; Give him all kindness; I had rather have Such men my friends than enemies. Go on, And see whether Brutus be alive or dead; And bring us word unto Octavius' tent How every thing is chanced. [Exeunt.

Scene V. Another part of the field.

Enter Brutus, Dardanius, Clitus, Strato, and Volumnius.

Bru. Come, poor remains of friends, rest this rock.

Cl. Statilius show'd the torch-light, but, lord, He came not back: he is or ta'en or slain.

Bru. Sit thee down, Clitus: slaying is word; It is a deed in fashion. Hark thee, Clitus. [Whisp.

Cl. What, I, my lord? No, not for all world.

Bru. Peace then! no words.

Cl. I'll rather kill my- [Whisp.

Bru. Hark thee, Dardanius. [Whisp

Dar. Shall I do such a de [Whisp.

Cl. O Dardanius!

Dar. O Clitus!

Cl. What ill request did Brutus make to the lord. To kill him, Clitus. Look, he meditates Cl. Now is that noble vessel full of grief, That it runs over even at his eyes.

Bru. Come hither, good Volumnius; [Exeunt. this word.

Vol. What says my lord?

Bru. Why, this, Volumnius The ghost of Caesar hath appear'd to me. Two several times by night; at Sardis once, And this last night, here in Philippi fields; I know my hour is come.

Vol. Not so, my lord.

Bru. Nay, I am sure it is, Volumnius. Thou seest the world, Volumnius, how it goes, Our enemies have beat us to the pit; [Low alarum.

It is more worthy to leap in ourselves, Than tarry till they push us. Good Volumnius Thou know'st that we two went to school together: Even for that our love of old, I prithee, Hold thou my sword-hilts, whilst I run on it. Vol. That's not an office for a friend, lord. [Alarum's

Cl. Fly, fly, my lord; there is no tarry here.

Bru. Farewell to you; and you; and Volumnius. Strato, thou hast been all this while asleep; Farewell to thee too, Strato. Countrymen, My heart doth joy that yet in all my life I found no man but he was true to me. I shall have glory by this losing day More than Octavius and Mark Antony By this vile conquest shall attain unto. So fare you well at once; for Brutus' tongue Fly, my lord, fly.

Hence! I will follow.

Fly, fly, fly!

Fellow, wilt thou bestow thy time with me?

Do so, good Messala.

How died my master, Strato?

I held the sword, and he did run on it.

Octavius, then take him to follow thee,

That did the latest service to my master.

This was the noblest Roman of them all:

He only, in a general honest thought

And common good to all, made one of them.

His life was gentle, and the elements

So mix'd in him that Nature might stand up

And say to all the world 'This was a man!'

According to his virtue let us use him,

With all respect and rites of burial.

Within my tent his bones to-night shall lie,

Most like a soldier, order'd honourably.

So call the field to rest; and let's away,

To part the glories of this happy day.

Exeunt. 50—2

ACT I.

SCENE I. A desert place.

Thunder and lightning. Enter three Witches.

First Witch. When shall we three meet again
In thunder, lightning, or in rain?
Second Witch. When the hastyburly's done,
When the battle's lost and won,
Third Witch. That will be ere the set of sun.

First Witch. Where the place?
Second Witch. Upon the heath.
Third Witch. There to meet with Macbeth.

First Witch. I come, Graymalkin!
Second Witch. Paddock calls.
Third Witch. Anon.

All. Fair is foul, and foul is fair:
Hover through the fog and filthy air. [Exeunt.

SCENE II. A camp near Forres.

Alarm within. Enter DUNCAN, MALCOLM, DONALBAIN, LENNOX, with Attendants, meeting a bleeding Sergeant.

Dun. What bloody man is that? He can report,
As seemeth by his plight, of the revolt
The newest state.

Mal. This is the sergeant
Who like a good and hardy soldier fought 'Gainst my captivity. Hail, brave friend! Say to the king the knowledge of the broil
As thou didst leave it.

Serp. Doubtful it stood;
As two spent swimmers, that do cling together
And choke their art. The merciless Macdonwald—Worthy to be a rebel, for to that
The multiplying villanies of nature
Do swarm upon him—from the western isles

Of kerns and gallowglasses is supplied;
And fortune, on his damned quarrel smiling,
Show'd like a rebel's whore: but all's too well
For brave Macbeth—well he deserves that man
Disdaining fortune, with his brandish'd steel
Which smoked with bloody execution,
Like valour's minion carved out his passage
Till he faced the slave;
Till which ne'er shook hands, nor bade farewels
To him,
Till he be seem'd 'm from the nave to the chiel
And fix'd his head upon our battlements.

Dun. O valiant cousin! worthy gentleman,
Ser. As whence the sun 'gins his reflection Shipwrecking storms and direfull thunders have
So from that spring whence comfort seem'd to come Discomfit swells. Mark, king of Scotland, m's
No sooner justice had with valour arm'd
Compell'd these skipping kerns to trust their hand
But the Norweyan lord surveying vantage,
With furbish'd arms and new supplies of me
Began a fresh assault.

Dismay'd not this
Our captains, Macbeth and Banquo?

Ser. Yes; As sparrow eagles, or the hare the lion.
If I say sooth, I must report they were
As cannons overcharg'd with double crack
Doubly redoubled strokes upon the foe:
Except they meant to bathe in reeking wouls
Or memorize another Golgotha,
I cannot tell,
But I am faint, my gashes cry for help.

Dun. So well thy words become thee: wounds;
They smack of honour both. Go get help.

Who comes here? [Exit Sergeant, atté
Enter Ross.

Mac. The worthy thane of Ross.

Len. What a haste looks through his eyes!

So should he look at seems to speak things strange.

Ross. God save the king!

Dun. Whence camest thou, worthy thane?

Ross. From Fife, great king; here the Norwegian banners flout the sky

d fan our people cold. Norway himself, 50 ith terrible numbers, sisted by that most disloyal traitor

e thane of Cawdor, began a dismal conflict;
ll that Bellona's bridegroom, lapp'd in proof,
fronfed him with self-comparisons,
int against point rebellious, arm 'gainst arm,
n his lavish spirit: and, to conclude,
e victory fell on us.

Dun. Great happiness!

Ross. That now

ew, the Norways' king, craves composition;
r would we deign him burial of his men 60 ll he disburled at Saint Colme's inch n thousand dollars to our general use.

Dun. No more than thane of Cawdor shall deceive ar bosom interest: go pronounce his present death, d with his former title greet Macbeth.

Ross. I'll see it done.

Dun. What he hath lost noble Macbeth hath won. [Exeunt.

SCENE III. A heath near Forres.

Thuder. Enter the three Witches.

First Witch. Where hast thou been, sister?

Third Witch. Sister, where thou?

First Witch. A sailor's wife had chestnuts in her lap, munch'd, and munch'd, and munch'd:—

Give me, quoit 1:

point thee, witch! * the rump-fed ronyon cries.

a husband's to Aleppo gone, master o' the Tiger:

in a sieve I'll thatther sail, like a rat without a tail, to,

I'll do, and I'll do.

See, Witch. I'll give thee a wind.

First Witch. Thou'rt kind.

Third Witch. And I another.

First Witch. I myself have all the other,

d the very ports they blow, the quarters that they know he shipman's card.

ill drain him dry as hay:

shall neither night nor day

g upon his penthouse lid;

shall live a man forbid:

ary se'nnights nine times nine ll he dwindle, peak and pine:

ugh his bark cannot be lost,

it shall be tempest-tost.

I know what I I have.

See, Witch. Show me, show me.

First Witch. Here I have a pilot's thumb,

Wreck'd as homeward he did come. [Drum within.

Third Witch. A drum, a drum!

Macbeth doth come.

All. The weird sisters, hand in hand,

Posters of the sea and land,

Thus do go about, about:

Thrice to thine and thrice to mine

And thrice again, to make up nine.

Peace! the charm's wound up.

Enter Macbeth and Banquo.

Macb. So foul and fair a day I have not seen.

Ban. How far is't call'd to Forres? What are these

So wither'd and so wild in their attire,

That look not like the inhabitants o' the earth, 40

And yet are not? Live you? or are you aught

That man may question? You seem to understand me,

By each at once her chappy finger laying

Upon her skinny lips: you should be women,

And yet your beards forbid me to interpret

That you are so.

Macb. Speak, if you can: what are you?

First Witch. All hail, Macbeth! hail to thee, thane of Glamis!

Sec. Witch. All hail, Macbeth! hail to thee,

thane of Cawdor!

Third Witch. All hail, Macbeth, thou shalt be king hereafter!

Ban. Good sir, why do you start; and seem to fear

Things that do sound so fair? I the name of truth,

Are ye fantastical, or that indeed

Which outwardly ye show? My noble partner

You greet with present grace and great prediction

Of noble having and of royal hope,

That he seems rapt withal: to me you speak not.

If you can look into the seeds of time,

And say which grain will grow and which will not,

Speak then to me, who neither beg nor fear 60

Your favours nor your hate.

First Witch. Hail!

Sec. Witch. Hail!

Third Witch. Hail!

First Witch. Lesser than Macbeth, and greater.

Sec. Witch. Not so happy, yet much happier.

Third Witch. Thou shalt get kings, though thou be none:

So all hail, Macbeth and Banquo!

First Witch. Banquo and Macbeth, all hail!

Macb. Stay, you imperfect speakers, tell me

more:

By Sinel's death I know I am thane of Glamis;

But how of Cawdor? the thane of Cawdor lives,

A prosperous gentleman; and to be king

Stands not within the prospect of belief,

No more than to be Cawdor. Say from whence

You owe this strange intelligence? or why

Upon this blasted heath you stop our way

With such prophetic greeting? Speak, I charge

you. [Witches vanish.

Ban. The earth hath bubbles, as the water has,

And these are of them. Whither are they van-ish'd?

Macb. Into the air; and what seem'd corporal melted

As breath into the wind. Would they had stay'd!
Ban. Were such things here as we do speak about?
Or have we eaten on the insane root
That takes the reason prisoner?
Macb. Your children shall be kings.
Ban. You shall be king.
Macb. And thane of Cawdor too: went it not so?
Ban. To the selfsame tune and words. Who's here?

Enter Ross and Angus.
Ross. The king hath happily received, Macbeth,
The news of thy success; and when he reads 90
Thy personal venture in the rebels' fight,
His wonders and his praises do contend
Which should be thine or his: silenced with that,
In viewing o'er the rest of the selfsame day,
He finds thee in the stout Norweyan ranks,
Nothing afraid of what thyself didst make,
Strange images of death. As thick as hail
Came post with post; and every one did bear
Thy praises in his kingdom's great defence,
And pour'd them down before him.
Ang. We are sent 100
To give thee from our royal master thanks;
Only to herald thee into his sight,
Not pay thee.
Ross. And, for an earnest of a greater honour,
He bade me, from him, call thee thane of Caw-dor:
In which addition, hail, most worthy thane!
For it is thine.
Ban. What, can the devil speak true?
Macb. The thane of Cawdor lives: why do you dress me
In borrow'd robes?
Ang. Who was the thane lives yet;
But under heavy judgement bears that life 110
Which he deserves to lose. Whether he was combined
With those of Norway, or did line the rebel
With hidden help and vantage, or that with both
He labour'd in his country's wreck, I know not;
But treasons capital, confess'd and proved,
Have overthrown him.
Macb. [Aside] Glamis, and thane of Cawdor!
The greatest is behind. [To Ross and Angus]
Thanks for your pains.
[To Ban.] Do you not hope your children shall be kings,
When those that gave the thane of Cawdor
to me
Promised no less to them?
Ban. That trusted home 120
Macb. [Aside] Two truths are told,
As happy prologues to the swelling act
Of the imperial theme.—I thank you, gentlemen.
[Aside] This supernatural soliciting
Cannot be ill, cannot be good: if ill,
Why hath it given me earnest of success,
Commencing in a truth? I am thane of Cawd.
If good, why do I yield to that suggestion
Whose horrid image doth unfix my hair
And make my seated heart knock at my ribs,
Against the use of nature? Present fears
Are less than horrible imaginings:
My thought, whose murder yet is but fantastic
Shakes so my single state of man that function
Is smother'd in surmise, and nothing is
But what is not.
Ban. Look, how our partner's rapt.
Macb. [Aside] If chance will have me k i why, chance may crown me,
Without my stir.
Ban. New honours come upon him
Like our strange garments, cleave not to it mould
But with the aid of use.
Macb. [Aside] Come what come may,
Time and the hour runs through the roughest d
Ban. Worthy Macbeth, we stay upon y leisure.
Macb. Give me your favour: my dull br was wrought
With things forgotten. Kind gentlemen, y pains
Are register'd where every day I turn
The leaf to read them. Let us toward the kin Think upon what hath chanced, and, at m
time,
The interim having weigh'd it, let us speak
Our free hearts each to other.
Ban. Very gladly.
Macb. Till then, enough. Come, friends.
[Exeunt.

SCENE IV. Forres. The palace.
Flourish. Enter DUNCAN, MALCOLM, DON
BAIN, LENNOX, and Attendants.
Dun. Is execution done on Cawdor? Are Those in commission yet return'd?
Ban. My liege, they are not yet come back. But I have spo
With one that saw him die: who did report
That very frankly he confess'd his treasons,
Implor'd your highness' pardon and set forth
A deep repentance: nothing in his life
Became him like the leaving it; he died
As one that had been studied in his death
To throw away the dearest thing he owed,
As 'twere a careless trifle.
Dun. There's no art
To find the mind's construction in the face:
He was a gentleman on whom I built
An absolute trust.
Enter MACBETH, BANQUO, ROSS, AND ANGU
[O worthiest cousin!
The sin of my ingratitude even now
Was heavy on me: thou art so far before
That swiftest wing of recompense is slow
To overtake thee. Would thou hadst less served,
That the proportion both of thanks and payment
Might have been mine! only I have left to say,
More is thy due than more than all can pay.
Macb. The service and the loyalty I owe, doing it, pays itself. Your highness' part to receive our duties; and our duties to your throne and state children and servants, which do but what they should, by doing every thing, 40 fe toward your love and honour.

Dun. Welcome hither: we have begun to plant thee, and will labour make thee full of growing. Noble Banquo, that hast no less deserved, nor must be known 30 less to have done so, let me infold thee hold thee to my heart.

Ban. There if I grow, to harvest is your own.

Dun. My plenteous joys, anton in fulness, seek to hide themselves drops of sorrow. Sons, kinsmen, thanes, if you whose places are the nearest, know will establish our estate upon eldest, Malcolm, whom we name hereafter Prince of Cumberland; which honour must unaccompanied invest him only, 40 signs of nobleness, like stars, shall shine all deservers. From hence to Inverness, 45 bid us further to you.

Macc. The rest is labour, which is not used I be myself the harbinger and make joyful hearing of your wife with your approach; humbly take my leave.

Dun. My worthy Caedward! Macc. [Aside] The Prince of Cumberland! that is a step which I must fall down, or else o'erleap, in my way it lies. Stars, hide your fires; 50 not light see my black and deep desires; eye wink at the hand; yet let that be, hich the eye fears, when it is done, to see. [Exit.}

Dun. True, worthy Banquo; he is full so valiant, d in his commendations I am fed; is a banquet to me. Let's after him, lose care is gone before to bid us welcome is a peerless kinsman. [Flourish. Exeunt.]

SCENE V. Inverness. Macbeth's castle.

Enter Lady Macbeth, reading a letter.

Lady M. They met me in the day of success: I have learned by the perfectest report, they were more in them than mortal knowledge. When armed in desire to question them further, they de themselves air, into which they vanished. Is it I stood rapt in the wonder of it, came sives from the king, who all-hailed me "Than Cawdor," by which title, before, these weird ers saluted me, and referred me to the coming time, with "Hail, king that shalt be!" am I have thought good to deliver thee, my west-partner of greatness, that thou mightst not e the dues of rejoicing, by being ignorant of at greatness is promised thee. Lay it to thy 60 rest, and farewell."

To thine, Art, and Cawdor; and shall be at thou art promised: yet do I fear thy nature; is too full o' the milk of human kindness catch the nearest way: thou wouldst be great; not without ambition, but without 20

The illness should attend it; what thou wouldst highly, That wouldst thou holly; wouldst not play false, And yet wouldst wrongly win: thou'dst have, great Glanis, That which cries 'Thus thou must do, if thou have it;' And that which rather thou dost fear to do Than wishest should be undone.' Hic thee hither, That I may pour my spirits in thine ear; And chastise with the valour of my tongue All that impedes thee from the golden round, Which fate and metaphysical aid doth seem 30 To have thee crown'd withal.

Enter a Messenger.

What is your tidings?

Mess. The king comes here to-night.

Lady M. Thou'rt mad to say it: Is not thy master with him? who, were't so, Would have inform'd for preparation.

Mess. So please you, it is true: our thane is coming:

One of my fellows had the speed of him, Which, almost dead for breath, had scarcely more Than would make up his message.

Lady M. Give him tending; He brings great news. [Exit Messenger.]

The raven himself is hoarse That croaks the fatal entrance of Duncan 40 Under my battlements. Come, you spirits That tend on mortal thoughts, unsex me here, And fill me from the crown to the toe top-full Of direst cruelty! make thick my blood: Stop up the access and passage to remorse, That no compunctious visitings of nature Shake my fell purpose, nor keep peace between The effect and it! Come to my woman's breasts, And take my milk for gall, you murdering ministers, Wherever in your sightless substances 50 You wait on nature's mischief! Come, thick night, And pall thee in the dunnest smoke of hell, That my keen knife see not the wound it makes, Nor heaven peep through the blanket of the dark, To cry 'Hold, hold!'

Enter Macbeth.

Great Glanis! worthy Caedward! Greater than both, by the all-hail hereafter! Thy letters have transported me beyond This ignorant present, and I feel now The future in the instant.

Macc. My dearest love, Duncan comes here to-night.

Lady M. And when goes hence? 60 Macc. To-morrow, as he purposes.

Lady M. O, never Shall sun that morrow see! Your face, my thane, is as a book where men May read strange matters. To beguile the time, Look like the time; bear welcome in your eye, Your hand, your tongue: look like the innocent flower, But be the serpent under t. He that's coming Must be provided for; and you shall put This night's great business into my dispatch; Which shall to all our nights and days to come 70 Give solely sovereign sway and masterdom.
Macb. We will speak further.
Lady M. Only look up clear;
To alter favour ever is to fear:
Leave all the rest to me.
[Exeunt.

SCENE VI. Before Macbeth's castle.

Hauteboys and torches. Enter Duncan, Malcolm, Donalbain, Banquo, Lennox, Macduff, Ross, Angus, and Attendants.

Dun. This castle hath a pleasant seat; the air
Nimbly and sweetly recommends itself
Unto our gentle senses.

Ban. This guest of summer,
The temple-haunting martlet, does approve,
By his loved mansionry, that the heaven's breath
Smells wooingly here: no jutty, freize,
Buttress, nor coign of vantage, but this bird
Hath made his pendent bed and procreant cradle:
Where they most breed and haunt, I have observed,
The air is delicate.

Enter Lady Macbeth.

Dun. See, see, our honour'd hostess! to
The love that follows us sometime is our trouble,
Which still we thank as love. Herein I teach you
How you shall bid God 'ild us for your pains,
And thank us for your trouble.

Lady M. All our service In every point twice done and then done double
Were poor and single business to contend
Against those honours deep and broad wherewith
Your majesty loads our house: for those of old,
And the late dignities heap'd up to them,
We rest your hermits.

Dun. Where's the thane of Cawdor? 20
We courted him at the heels, and had a purpose
To be his purveyor: but he rides well;
And his great love, sharp as his spur, hath holp him
To his home before us. Fair and noble hostess,
We are your guest to-night.

Lady M. Your servants ever
Have theirs, themselves and what is theirs, in prompt,
To make their audit at your highness' pleasure,
Still to return your own.

Dun. Give me your hand; Conduct me to mine host: we love him highly,
And shall continue our graces towards him. 30
By your leave, hostess.
[Exeunt.

SCENE VII. Macbeth's castle.

Hauteboys and torches. Enter a Sewer, and divers Servants with dishes and service, and pass over the stage. Then enter Macbeth.

Macb. If it were done when 'tis done, then 'twere well
It were done quickly: if the assassination
Could trommel up the consequence, and catch
With his surcease success; that but this blow
Might be the be-all and the end-all here,
But here, upon this bank and shoal of time,
We'd jump the life to come. But in these cases
We still have judgement here; that we but teach Bloody instructions, which, being taught, return
To plague the inventor: this even-handed justice
Commends the ingredients of our poison'd chalice
To our own lips. He's here in double trust;
First, I am his kinsman and his subject, Strong both against the deed; then, as his ho
Who should against his murderer shut the do Not bear the knife myself. Besides, this Dun Hath borne his faculties so meek, hath been
So clear in his great office, that his virtues
Will plead like angels, trumpet-tongued, again
The deep damnation of his taking-off;
And pity, like a naked new-born babe,
Striding the blast, or heaven's cherubim, hor
Upon the sightless couriers of the air,
Shall blow the horrid deed in every eye,
That tears shall drown the wind. I have no
To prick the sides of my intent, but only Vaulting ambition, which o'erleaps itself
And falls on the other.

Enter Lady Macbeth.

Lady M. How now! what news?
Lady M. He has almost supp'd: why do you left the chamber?

Macb. Hath he ask'd for me?

Lady M. Know you not he has Macb. We will proceed no further in business:
He hath honour'd me of late; and I have but Golden opinions from all sorts of people,
Which would be worn now in their newest gl
Not cast aside so soon.

Lady M. Was the hope drunk
Wherein you dress'd yourself? hath it slept sin
And wakes it now, to look so green and pale
At what it did so freely? From this time
Such I account thy love. To be the same in thine old act and valour
As thou art in desire? Wouldst thou have this Whom thou esteem'st the ornament of life,
And live a coward in thine own esteem,
Letting 'I dare not' wait upon 'I would,' Like the poor cat i' the adage?

Macb. I would, Prithee, peace
I dare do all that may become a man;
Who dares do more is none.

Lady M. What beast was't, that
That made you break this enterprise to me?
When you durst do it, then you were a man;
And, to be more than what you were, you would Be so much more the man. Nor think'st thou Didst then adhere, and yet you would make boast
They have made themselves, and that their ness now
Does unmake you. I have given suck, and k
How tender 'tis to love the babe that milks me;
I would, while it was smiling in my face,
Have pluck'd my nipple from his boneless gums
And dash'd the brains out, had I so sworn as Have done to this.

Macb. If we should fail?
Lady M. We fail! But screw your courage to the sticking-place;
And we'll not fail. When Duncan is asleep—
Whereeto the rather shall his day's hard jour
Soundly invite him—his two chamberlains
Will I with wine and wassail so convince
That memory, the wader of the brain,
Shall be a fume, and the receipt of reason
A limbeck only: when in swinish sleep ir drenched nature lie as in a death, cannot you and I perform upon guarded Duncan? what not upon jeery officers, who shall bear the guilt of this own chamber and used their very daggers, they have done't? I am settled, and bend up a corporal agent to this terrible feat; y, and mock thee with what the false heart doth know.

ACT II.

Scene I. Court of Macbeth's castle.

Or Banquo, and Fleance bearing a torch before him.

I. How goes the night, boy? The moon is down; I have not heard the clock.
I. And she goes down at twelve. I take 't, 'tis later, sir. I hold, take my sword. There's husbandry in heaven; candles are all out. Take thee that too, thy summons likes lead upon me, yet I would not sleep: merciful powers, rain in me the cursed thoughts that nature's way to in repose!

M. and a Servant with a torch.

Give me my sword.

Is there? A friend. What, sir, not yet at rest? The king's a-bed: ah been in unusual pleasure, and forth great largesse to your offices. diamond he greets your wife withal, the name of most kind hostess; and shut up sureless content.

Being unprepared, will became the servant to defect; else should free have wrou't.

All's well. last night of the three weird sisters: so they have show'd some truth.

I think not of them: when we can entreat an hour to serve, would spend it in some words upon that business, would grant the time.

At your kind'st leisure. If you shall cleave to my consent, when 'tis, I'll make honour for you.

So I lose none kicking to augment it, but still keep firm franchise and allegiance clear,

I shall be counsell'd.

Macb. Good repose the while!

Ban. Thanks, sir, the like to you!

[Exit Banquo and Fleance.

Macb. Go bid thy mistress, when my drink is ready, She strike upon the bell. Get thee to bed.

[Exit Servant.

Is this a dagger which I see before me, The handle toward my hand? Come, let me clutch thee. I have thee not, and yet I see thee still. Art thou not, fatal vision, sensible To feeling as to sight? or art thou but A dagger of the mind, a false creation, Proceeding from the heat-oppressed brain? I see thee yet, in form as palpable As this which now I draw. Thou marshall'st me the way that I was going; And such an instrument I was to use. Mine eyes are made the fools o' the other senses, Or else worth all the rest; I see thee still, And on thy blade and dudgeon gouts of blood, Which was not so before. There's no such thing: It is the bloody business which informs Thus to mine eyes. Now o'er the one half-world Nature seems dead, and wicked dreams abuse 50 The curtain'd sleep; witchcraft celebrates Pale Hecate's offerings, and wither'd murder, Alarum'd by his sentinel, the wolf, Whose howl's his watch, thus with his stealthy pace, With Tarquin's ravishing strides, towards his design Moves like a ghost. Thou sure and firm-set earth, Hear not my steps, which way they walk, for fear Thy very stones prince of my whereabouts. And take the present horror from the time, Which now suits with it. While I threat, he lives: 60 Words to the heat of deeds too cold breath gives.

Lady. I go, and it is done; the bell invites me. Hear it not, Duncan: for it is a knell That summons thee to heaven or to hell. [Exit.

Scene II. The same.

Enter Lady Macbeth.

Lady M. That which hath made them drunk hath made me bold; What hath quench'd them hath given me fire. Hark! Peace! It was the owl that shriek'd, the fatal bellman, Which gives the stern'est good-night. He is about it: The doors are open; and the surfeited grooms Do mock their charge with snores: I have drugg'd their possets, That death and nature do contend about them, Whether they live or die.

Macb. [Within] Who's there? what, ho! I am afraid they have awaked, And 'tis not done. The attempt and not the deed Confounds us. Hark! I laid their daggers ready: He could not miss 'em. Had he not resembled My father as he slept, I had done't.
Enter Macbeth.

Macb. I have done the deed. Didst thou not hear a noise?

Lady M. I heard the owl scream and the crickets cry.

Did not you speak?

Macb. When?

Lady M. Now.

Macb. Ay, Mac.

Macb. Hark!

Who lies i' the second chamber?

Lady M. Donalbain.

Mac. This is a sorry sight. [Looking on his hands.

Lady M. A foolish thought, to say a sorry sight.

Macb. There's one did laugh in's sleep, and one cried 'Murder'!

That they did wake each other: I stood and heard them:

But they did say their prayers, and address'd them again to sleep.

Lady M. There are two lodged together.

Macb. One cried 'God bless us!' and 'Amen' the other;

As they had seen me with these hangman's hands. Listening their fear, I could not say 'Amen,'

When they did say 'God bless us!'

Lady M. Consider it not so deeply.

Macb. But wherefore could not I pronounce

'Amen'?

I had most need of blessing, and 'Amen'

Stuck in my throat.

Lady M. These deeds must not be thought

After these ways; so, it will make us mad.

Macb. Methought I heard a voice cry 'Sleep no more!'

Macbeth does murder sleep, the innocent sleep,

Sleep that knits up the ravel'd sleave of care,

The death of each day's life, sore labour's bath,

Balm of hurt minds, great nature's second course,

Chief nourisher in life's feast.—

Lady M. What do you mean?

Macb. Still it cried 'Sleep no more!' to all the house:

'Glamis hath murder'd sleep, and therefore

Cawdor

Shall sleep no more; Macbeth shall sleep no more.'

Lady M. Who was it that thus cried? Why, worthy thane,

You do unbend your noble strength, to think

So brainsickly of things. Go get some water,

And wash this filthy witness from your hand.

Why did you bring these daggers from the place?

They must lie there: go carry them; and smear

The sleepy grooms with blood.

Macb. I am afraid to think what I have done;

Look on 't again I dare not.

Lady M. Infirm of purpose!

Give me the daggers: the sleeping and the dead

Are but as pictures: 'tis the eye of childhood

That fears a painted devil. If he do bleed,

I'll gild the faces of the grooms withal;

For it must seem their guilt.

[Exit. Knocking within.

Whence is that knocking?

How is't with me, when every noise appals me?

What hands are here? ha! they pluck out eyes.

Will all great Neptune's ocean wash this block

Clean from my hand? No, this my hand will ra.

The multitudinous seas incarnadine,

Making the green one red.

Re-enter Lady Macbeth.

Lady M. My hands are of your colour; I

Shame

To wear a heart so white. [Knocking within hear a knocking

At the south entry: retire we to our chamber.

A little water clears us of this deed:

How easy is it, then! Your constancy.

Hath left you unattended. [Knocking within more knocking.

Get on your nightgown, lest occasion call us,

And show us up to be watchers. Be not lost

So poorly in your thoughts. [Knocking within Wake Duncan with thy knocking! I would couldst!

[Exit.

Scene III. The same.

Knocking within. Enter a Porter.

Porter. Here's a knocking indeed! If I were porter of hell-gate, he should have old ning the key. [Knocking within

Who's there, i' the name of Beelzebub? Here's a farmer, that hanged himself on the feet of plenty: come in time; have nap know about you; here you 'll sweat for't. [Knocking within.

Knock, knock! Who's there?

other devil's name? Faith, here's an equiator, that could swear in both the scales ag either scale; who committed treason enough

God's sake, yet could not equivocate to hear

O, come in, equivocator. [Knocking out

Knock, knock, knock! Who's there? For an English tailor come hither, for set out of a French hose: come in, tailor; here may roast your goose. [Knocking within Knock, never at quiet! What are you? But place is too cold for hell. I'll devil-porter further: I had thought to have let in some all professions that go the primrose way to everlasting bonfire. [Knocking within

A anon! I pray you, remember the porter.

[Opens the Enter Macduff and Lennox.

Macd. Was it so late, friend, ere you went to

That you do lie so late?

Port. 'Faith, sir, we were carousing till second cock: and drink, sir, is a great provoke?

Macd. What three things does drink espec

Port. Marry, sir, nose-painting, sleep, and lechery, sir, it provokes, and unprovo-formance: therefore, much drink may be safe be an equivocator with lechery: it makes and it mars him; it sets him on, and it takes off; it persuades him, and dishearts him; n

Enter Macbeth,snoring. Macbeth has awaked him; here he comes.

Enter Macduff.

Macbeth. O gentle lady, 'Tis not for you to hear what I can speak:
The repetition, in a woman's ear, Would murder as it fell.

Enter Banquo.

Lady Macbeth. What's the business, That such a hideous trumpet calls to parley The sleepers of the house? speak, speak!

Macbeth. Our royal master's murder'd!

Lady Macbeth. Woe, alas! What, in our house? Banquo. Too cruel any where. Dear Duff, I prithee, contradict thyself, And say it is not so.

Re-enter Macbeth and Lennox, with Ross.

Macbeth. Had I but died an hour before this chance, I had lived a blessed time; for, from this instant, There's nothing serious in mortality:

Enter Malcolm and Donalbain.

Don. What is amiss?

Macbeth. You are, and do not know: The spring, the head, the fountain of your blood Is stopp'd; the very source of it is stopp'd.

Malcolm. Your royal father's murder'd.

Lennox. Those of his chamber, as it seem'd, had done it:

Their hands and faces were all badged with blood; So were their daggers, which uniwed we found Upon their pillows:

They stared, and were distracted; no man's life Was to be trusted with them.

Macleod. O, yet I do repent me of my fury,

That I did kill them.

Macleod. Wherefore did you so?

Macbeth. Who can be wise, amased, temperate and furious,

Loyal and neutral, in a moment? No man:
The expedition of my violent love

Outrun the pauser, reason. Here lay Duncan, His silver skin laced with his golden blood;

And his gash'st stabs look'd like a breach in nature

For ruin's wasteful entrance: there, the murderers, Steep'd in the colours of their trade, their daggers Unnarrowly breach'd with gore: who could retrain,

That had a heart to love, and in that heart

Courage to make 's love known!

Lady Macbeth. Help me hence, ho! Macbeth. Look to the lady.

Malcolm. [Aside to Don.] Why do we hold our tongues, That most may claim this argument for ours?

Don. [Aside to Malcolm.] What should be spoken here, where our fate,

Hid in an auger-hole, may rush, and seize us?

Let's away;

Our tears are not yet brewd.

Malcolm. [Aside to Don.] Nor our strong sorrow

Upon the foot of motion.
Look to the lady:
[ Lady Macbeth is carried out.
And when we have our naked fruities hid,
That suffer in exposure, let us meet,
And question this most bloody piece of work,
To know it further. Fears and scruples shake us:
In the great hand of God I stand; and thence Against the undivulged pretence I fight
Of treasonable malice.
Macb. And so do I.
All. So all.
Macb. Let’s briefly put on manly readiness,
And meet I the hall together.
All. Well contented.
[Exeunt all but Malcolm and Donalbain.
Macb. What will you do? Let’s not consort with them:
To show an unfelt sorrow is an office
Which the false man does easy. I’ll to England.
Dow. To Ireland, I; our separated fortune Shall keep us both the safer: where we are,
There’s daggers in men’s smiles: the near in blood,
The nearer bloody.
Mal. This murderous shaft that’s shot
Hath not yet lighted, and our safest way
Is to avoid the aim. Therefore, to horse;
And let us not be dainty of leaving-take,
But shift away: there’s warrant in that theft
Which steals itself, when there’s no mercy left.
[Exeunt.

SCENE IV. Outside Macbeth’s castle.

Enter Ross and an old Man.
Old M. Threescore and ten I can remember well:
Within the volume of which time I have seen
Hours dreadful and things strange; but this sore night
Hath trifled former knowings.
Ross. Ah, good father,
Thou seest, the heavens, as troubled with man’s act,
Threaten his bloody stage: by the clock, ’tis day,
And yet dark night strangles the travelling lamp:
Is it night’s predominance, or the day’s shame,
That darkness doth the face of earth entomb,
When living light should kiss it?
Old M. ’Tis unnatural, 10
Even like the deed that’s done. On Tuesday last,
A falcon, towering in her pride of place,
Was by a mousing owl hawk’d at and kill’d.
Ross. And Duncan’s horses—a thing most strange and certain—
Beauteous and swift, the minions of their race,
Turn’d wild in nature, broke their stalls, flung out,
Contending ’gainst obedience, as they would make War with mankind.
Old M. ’Tis said they eat each other.
Ross. They did so, to the amazement of mine eyes
That look’d upon’t. Here comes the good Macduff.

Enter MACDUFF.

How goes the world, sir, now?
Macd. Why, see you not?

Ross. Is’t known who did this more bloody deed?
Macd. Those that Macbeth hath slain.
Ross. Alas, the
What good could they pretend?
Macd. They were subf.
Malcolm and Donalbain, the king’s two son
Are stol’n away and fled; which puts upon Suspicion of the deed.
Ross. ’Gainst nature still!
Thriftless ambition, that wilt ravin up
Thine own life’s means! Then ’tis most like
The sovereignty will fall upon Macbeth.
Macd. He is already named, and go
Scone
To be invested.
Ross. Where is Duncan’s body?
Macd. Carried to Colnekill,
The sacred storehouse of his predecessors,
And guardian of their bones,
Ross. Will you to See
Macd. No, cousin, I’ll to Fife.
Ross. Well, I will Macd. Well, may you see things well there: adieu!
Lest our old robes sit easier than our new!
Ross. Farewell, father.
Old M. God’s benison go with you; and those That would make good of bad, and frie foes!

ACT III.

SCENE I. Forres. The palace.

Enter BANQUO.
Ban. Thou hast it now: king, Ca
Glamis, all,
As the weird women promised, and, I fear,
Thou play’st most foully for ’t: yet it was
It should not stand in thy posterity,
But that myself should be the root and father
Of many kings. If there come truth from th
As upon thee, Macbeth, their speeches shi
Why, by the verities on thee made good,
May they not be my oracles as well,
And set me in up hope? But hush! no mo

Sennet sounded. Enter Macbeth, as Lady Macbeth, as queen, Lennox, Lords, Ladies, and Attendants.
Macb. Here’s our chief guest.
Lady M. If he had been for
It had been as a gap in our great feast,
And all-thing unbecoming.
Macb. To-night we hold a solemn supp
And I’ll request your presence.
Ban. Let your his Command upon me; to the which my duty
Are with a most indissoluble tie
For ever knit.
Macb. Ride you this afternoon?
Ban. Ay, my good lord.
Macb. We should have else desired you
advice,
Which still hath been both grave and pros
In this day’s council; but we’ll take to-mo
Is’t far you ride?
That it was he in the times past which held you
So under fortune, which you thought had been
Our innocent self: this I made good to you
In our last conference, pass'd in probation with you, How you were borne in hand, how cross'd, the instruments,
Who wrought with them, and all things else that might
To half a soul and to a notion crazed
Say 'Thus did Banquo.'

First Mur. You made it known to us.

Macb. I did so, and went further, which is now
Our point of second meeting. Do you find
Your patience so predominant in your nature
That you can let this go? Are you so gospel'd
To pray for this good man and for his issue,
Whose heavy hand hath bow'd you to the grave
And beggar'd yours for ever?

First Mur. We are men, my liege.

Macb. Ay, in the catalogue ye go for men;
As hounds and greyhounds, mongrels, spaniels, curs,
Shoughs, water-rugs and demi-wolves, are clept
All by the name of dogs: the valued file
Distinguishes the swift, the slow, the subtle,
The housekeeper, the hunter, every one
According to the gift which bounteous nature
Hath in him closed; whereby he does receive Particular addition, from the bill
That writes them all alike: and so of men.
Now, if you have a station in the file,
Not i' the worst rank of manhood, say 't;
And I will put that business in your bosoms,
Whose execution takes your enemy off,
Grapples you to the heart and love of us,
Who wear our health but sickly in his life,
Which in his death were perfect.

Sec. Mur. I am one, my liege,
Whom the vile blows and buffets of the world
Have so incensed that I am reckless what
I do to spite the world.

First Mur. And I another
So weary with disasters, tug'd with fortune,
That I would set my life on any chance,
To mend it, or be rid on't.

Macb. Both of you
Know Banquo was your enemy.

Both Mur. True, my lord,

Macb. So is he mine; and in such bloody distance,
That every minute of his being thrusts
Against my near'st of life: and though I could
With barefaced power sweep him from my sight
And bid my will avouch it, yet I must not;
For certain friends that are both his and mine,
Whose loves I may not drop, but wait his fall
Who I myself struck down; and thence it is,
That I to your assistance do make love,
Masking the business from the common eye
For sundry weighty reasons.

Sec. Mur. We shall, my lord,
Perform what you command us.

First Mur. Though our lives—

Macb. Your spirits shine through you. Within this hour at most
I will advise you where to plant yourselves;
Acquaint you with the perfect spy o' the time,
The moment on't; for't must be done to-night,
And something from the palace; always thought
That I require a clearness: and with him—
To leave no rubs nor botches in the work—
Fleance his son, that keeps him company,
Whose absence is no less material to me
Than is his father's, must embrace the fate
Of that dark hour. Resolve yourselves apart:
I'll come to you anon.

Both Mur. We are resolved, my lord.
Mach. I'll call upon you straight: abide within. [Exeunt Murderers. 140

It is concluded. Banquo, thy soul's flight,
If it find heaven, must find it out to-night. [Exit.

SCENE II. The palace.

Enter Lady Macbeth and a Servant.

Lady M. Is Banquo gone from court?
Serv. Ay, madam, but returns again to-night.
Lady M. Say to the king, I would attend his leisure
For a few words.
Serv. Madam, I will. [Exit.
Lady M. Nought's had, all's spent,
Where our desire is got without content:
'Tis safer to be that which we destroy
Than by destruction dwell in doubtful joy.

Enter MACBETH.

How now, my lord! why do you keep alone,
Of sorriest fancies your companions making,
Using those thoughts which should indeed have died
With them they think on? Things without all remedy
Should be without regard: what's done is done.
Mach. We have scotch'd the snake, not kill'd it:
She'll close and be herself, whilst our poor malice
Remains in danger of her former tooth.
But let the frame of things disjoint, both the worlds suffer.
Ere we will eat our meal in fear and sleep
In the affliction of these terrible dreams
That shake us nightly: better be with the dead,
Whom we, to gain our peace, have sent to peace,
Than on the torture of the mind to lie
22 In restless ecstasy. Duncan is in his grave;
After life's fitful fever he sleeps well;
Treason has done his worst: nor steel, nor poison,
Malice domestic, foreign levy, nothing,
Can touch him further.

Lady M. Come on;
Gentle my lord, sleek o'er your rugged looks;
Be bright and jovial among your guests to-night.
Mach. So shall I, love; and so, I pray, be you!
Let your remembrance apply to Banquo;
Present him eminence, both with eye and tongue:
Unsafe the while, that we Must love our honours in these flattering streams,
And make our faces vizards to our hearts,
Disguising what they are.

Lady M. You must leave this.
Mach. O, full of scorpions is my mind, dear wife!
Thou know'st that Banquo, and his Fleance, lives.

Lady M. But in them nature's copy's seen.
Mach. There's comfort yet; they are as able;
Then be thou jocund: ere the bat hath flown
His cloister'd flight, ere to black Hecate's moons
The shard-born beetle with his drowsy hum
Hath rung night's yarning peal, there shall done
A deed of dreadful note.

Lady M. What's to be done?
Mach. Be innocent of the knowledge, de chuck,
Till thou applaud the deed. Come, seeing n
Scarup up the tender eye of pitiful day;
And with thy bloody and invisible hand
Cancel and tear to pieces that great bond Which keeps me pale! Light thickens; and crow
Makes wing to the rooky wood:
Good things of day begin to droop and drow
Whiles night's black agents to their prey rouse.
Thou marvell'st at my words: but hold thee.
Things bad begun make strong themselves by so, prithee, go with me. [Exit.

SCENE III. A park near the palace.

Enter three Murderers.

First Mur. But who did bid thee join with Third Mur. Mac.
Sec. Mur. He needs not our mistrust, he delivers
Our offices and what we have to do
To the direction just.

First Mur. Then stand with us.
The west yet glimmers with some streaks of
Now spurs the lated traveller apace
To gain the timely inn; and near approach
The subject of our watch.

Third Mur. Hark! I hear horses.
Sec. Mur. Then 'tis he: that
That are within the note of expectation
Already are 't the court.

First Mur. His horses go about Third Mur. Almost a mile: but he
So all men do, from hence to the palace gate
Make it their walk.

Sec. Mur. A light, a light!

Enter BANQUO, and FLEANCE with a to.

Third Mur. Stand to't.
Ban. It will be rain to-night.
First Mur.
Lest it come on
[They set upon Ban.
Ban. O, treachery! Fly, good Fleance, fly! fly! Thou mayst revenge. O slave!

[Dies. Fleance ex.

Third Mur. Who did strike out the light?
First Mur. Was't not the Third Mur. There's but one down; this is fled.
Sec. Mur.
We have l
MACBETH.

1. 'Tis true. Well, let's away, and say how much is done.

[Exeunt.

ACT IV. scene i. A hall in the palace.

Enter Banquo, Lady Macbeth, Ross, Lennox, Lords, and attendants.

Ban. You know your own degrees; sit down:
at first
last the hearty welcome.

Ross. Thanks to your majesty.

Ban. Ourself will mingle with society, play the humble host.

Lady Macb. Prithee, let me for you, sir, to all our friends;
your heart speaks they are welcome.

First Murderer appears at the door.

Ban. See, they encounter thee with their hearts' thanks.

Ross. Sure is there o' er there I'll sit i' the midst: ro we in mirth; an' we'll drink a measure.
[Approaching the door.] There's blood upon thy face.

Ban. 'Tis Banquo's then.

Ban. 'Tis better thee without than he within.
dispatch'd?

Lady Macb. My lord, his throat is cut; that I did or him.

Ban. Thou art the one o' the cut-throats:
so he's good
did the like for Fleance: if thou didst it, art the nonpareil.

Most royal sir,

Ross. is 'scape.

Ban. Then comes my fit again: I had else been perfect; as the marble, founded as the rock, ad and general as the casing air:
wh I am cabind, cribb'd, confined, bound in my doubts and fears. But Banquo's safe?

Ban. Ay, my good lord: safe in a ditch he "ides, wenty trenched gashes on his head;
as a death to nature.

Ban. Thanks for that:
the grown serpent lies; the worm that's ture that in time will venom breed, 30 th for the present. Get thee gone: to.

Ross, ourselves, again. [Exit Murderer.

My royal lord,
not give the cheer: the feast is sold of often vouched, while 'tis a-making;
ven with welcome: to feed were best at one;
hence the sauce to meat is ceremony;
g were bare without it.

Ban. Sweet remembrancer!

Good digestion wait on appetite, alih on both!

May't please your highness sit.

[The Ghost of Banquo enters, and sits in Macbeth's place.

Macb. Here had we now our country's honour roof'd,
Wore the graced person of our Banquo present;
Who may I rather challenge for unkindness
Than pity for mischance!

Ross. His absence, sir, Lays blame upon his promise. Please't your

To grace us with your royal company.

Macb. The table's full.

Ross. Here is a place reserved, sir.

Macb. Where?

Ross. Here, my good lord. What is't that moves your highness?

Macb. Which of you have done this?

Lords. What, my good lord?

Macb. Thou canst not say I did it: never shake

Thy gory looks at me.

Ross. Gentlemen, rise: his highness is not well.

Lady Macb. Sit, worthy friends: my lord is often thus,
And hath been from his youth: pray you, keep

The fit is momentary: upon a thought
He will again be well: if much you note him,
You shall offend him and extend his passion:
Feed, and regard him not. Are you a man?

McAb. Ay, and a bold one, that dare look on

Which might appal the devil.

Lady M. O proper stuff! 60
This is the very painting of your fear:
This is the air-drawn dagger which, you said,
Led you to Duncan. O, these flaws and starts,
Impostors to true fear, would well become
A woman's story at a winter's fire,
Authorized by her grandam. Shame itself!
Why do you make such faces? When all's done,
You look but on a stool.

Macb. Prithee, see there! behold! look! lo!
how say you?

Why, what care I? If thou canst nod, speak too.
If channel-houses and our graves must send 71
Those that we bury back, our monuments
Shall be the maws of kites. [Ghost vanishes.

Lady M. What, quite unmann'd in folly? 80
Macb. If I stand here, I saw him.

Lady M. Blood hath been shed ere now, i' the olden time,

Ere human statute purged the gentle weal;
Ay, and since too, murders have been perform'd
Too terrible for the ear: the times have been,
That, when the brains were out, the man would
die,
And there an end; but now they rise again,
With twenty mortal murders on their crowns,
And push us from our stools: this is more strange
Than such a murder is.

Lady M. My worthy lord,
Your noble friends do lack you.

Macb. I do forget.

Do not muse at me, my most worthy friends;
I have a strange infirmity, which is nothing
To those that know me. Come, love and health

Then I'll sit down. Give me some wine; fill full.
I drink to the general joy o' the whole table,
And to our dear friend Banquo, whom we miss;
Would he were here! to all, and him, we thirst,
And all to all.

Lords. Our duties, and the pledge.

Re-enter Ghost.

Macb. Avant! and quit my sight! let the earth hide thee!
Thy bones are marrowless, thy blood is cold;
Thou hast no speculation in those eyes
Which thou dost glare with!

Lady M. Think of this, good peers,
But as a thing of custom: 'tis no other;
Only it spoils the pleasure of the time.

Macb. What man dare, I dare:
Approach thou like the rugged Russian bear, 100
The arm'd rhinoceros, or the Hycran tiger;
Take any shape but that, and my firm nerves
Shall never tremble: or be alive again,
And dare me to the desert with thy sword;
If trembling I inhabit then, protest me
The baby of a girl. Hence, horrible shadow!
Unreal mockery, hence! [Ghost vanishes.

Lady M. I am a man again. Pray you, sit still.

Lady M. You have displaced the mirth, broke the good meeting,
With most admired disorder.

Macb. Can such things be, 120
And overcome us like a summer's cloud, Without our special wonder? You make me strange
Even to the disposition that I owe,
When now I think you can behold such sights,
And keep the natural ruby of your cheeks,
When mine is blanch'd with fear.

Ross. What sights, my lord?

Lady M. I pray you, speak not; he grows worse and worse;
Question enrages him. At once, good night:
Stand not upon the order of your going,
But go at once.

Len. Good night; and better health 120
Attend his majesty! [Exeunt all but Macbeth and Lady M.

Macb. It will have blood; they say, blood will have blood;

Lords have been known to move and trees to speak;
Augurs and understood relations have
By magot-pies and houghs and rooks brought forth
The secret'st man of blood. What is the night?
Lady M. Almost at odds with morning, which is which.

Macb. How say'st thou, that Macduff denies his person
At our great bidding?

Lady M. Did you send to him, sir?

Macb. I hear it by the way; but I will send:
There's not a one of them but in his house 131
I keep a servant fee'd. I will to-morrow,
And betimes I will, to the weird sisters:
More shall they speak; for now I am bent to know,
By the worst means, the worst. For mine own good,
All causes shall give way: I am in blood
Stepp'd in so far that, should I wade no more,

Returning were as tedious as go o'er:
Strange things I have in head, that will to hr
Which must be act'd ere they may be scann Lady M. You lack the season of all nat sleep.

Macb. Come, we'll to sleep. My strange

Is the initiate fear that wants hard use:
We are yet but young in deed.

[Exit.

Scene V. A Heath.

Thunder. Enter the three Witches, meeting HECATE.

First Witch. Why, how now, Hecate look angrily.

Hec. Have I not reason, beldams as you
Saucy and overbold? How did you dare
To trade and traffic with Macbeth
In riddles and affairs of death;
And I, the mistress of your charms,
The close contriver of all harms,
Was never call'd to bear my part,
Or show the glory of our art?
And, which is worse, all you have done
Hath been but for a wayward son,
Spiteful and wrathful, who, as others do,
Loves for his own ends, not for you.
But make amends now: get you gone,
And at the pit of Acheron
Meet me i' the morning: thither he
Will come to know his destiny.
Your vessels and your spells provide,
Your charms and every thing beside.
I am for the air; this night I'll spend Unto a dismal and a fatal end:
Great business must be wrought ere noon:
Upon the corner of the moon
There hangs a vaporous drop profound;
I'll catch it ere it come to ground;
And that distill'd by magic sleights
Shall raise such artificial sprites
As by the strength of their illusion
Shall draw him on to his confusion:
He shall spurn fate, scorn death, and bear
His hopes' b'ove wisdom, grace and fear:
And you all know, security
Is mortals' chiefest enemy.

[Music and a song within: 'Come come away
Hark! I am call'd; my little spirit, see,
Sits in a foggy cloud, and stays for me.

First Witch. Come, let's make haste;
soon be back again.

Scene VI. Forres. The palace.

Enter LENNOX and another Lord.

Len. My former speeches have but h
thoughts,
Which can interpret further: only, I say,
Things have been strangely borne. The gre

it did grieve Macbeth! did he not straight sious rage the two delinquent tears;
they were the slaves of drink and thalls of sleep?
not that nobly done? Ay, and wisely too;
'twould have anger'd any heart alive near the men deny't. So that, I say,

He had Duncan's sons under his key—peace! for from word tones and 'cause he fail'd presence at the tyrant's feast, I hear duff lives in disgrace: sir, can you tell are he bestows himself?

The son of Duncan,
a whom this tyrant holds the due of birth, is in the English court, and is received with the most pious Edward with such grace the malevolence of fortune nothing is from his high respect: thither Macduff me to pray the holy king, upon his aid like Northumberland and warlike Siward:
, by the help of these—with him above
ify the work—we may again to our tables meat, sleep to our nights, rom our feasts and banquetts bloody knives,
ful honour and receive free honours:
which we pine for now: and this report so exasperate the king that he ares for some attempt of war.

Sent he to Macduff?

He did: and with an absolute 'Sir, cloudy messenger turns me his back, hums, as who should say 'You'll rue the clogs me with this answer.'

And that well might se him to a caution, to hold what distance vdom can provide. Some holy angel s the court of England and unfold message ere he come, that a swift blessing soon return to this our suffering country
r a hand accused!

I'll send my prayers with him.

[Exeunt.

ACT IV.

I. A cavern. In the middle, a boiling cauldron.

Thunder. Enter the three Witches.

1st Witch. Thrice the brinded cat hath mew'd.

2nd Witch. Thrice and once the hedge-pig whined.

3rd Witch. Harpier cries 'Tis time, 'tis time.

1st Witch. Round about the cauldron go;
poison'd entrails throw,
that under cold stone and nights has thirty one r'd venom sleeping got,
ou first i' the charmed pot.

All. Double, double toil and trouble; 10
Fire burn, and cauldron bubble.
Sec. Witch. Filet of a fenny snake,
In the cauldron boil and bake;
Eye of newt and toe of frog,
Wool of bat and tongue of dog,
Adder's fork and blind-worm's sting,
Lizard's leg and owllet's wing,
For a charm of powerful trouble,
Like a hell-broth boil and bubble.

All. Double, double toil and trouble; 20
Fire burn and cauldron bubble.
Third Witch. Scale of dragon, tooth of wolf,
Witches' mummy, mau and gulf
Of the ravin'd salt-sea shark,
Root of hemlock digg'd i' the dark,
Liver of blaspemings Jew,
Gall of goat, and slips of yew
Sliver'd in the moon's eclipse,
Nose of Turk and Tartar's lips,
Finger of birth-strangell'd baby,
Ditch-deliver'd by a drab,
Make the greul thick and slab:
Add thereto a tiger's cauldron,
For the ingredients of our cauldron.

All. Double, double toil and trouble;
Fire burn and cauldron bubble.
Sec. Witch. Cool it with a baboon's blood,
Then the charm is firm and good.

Enter Hecate to the other three Witches.

Hec. O, well done! I commend your pains;
And e'ry one shall share I the gains: 40
And now about the cauldron sing,
Live elves and fairies in a ring,
Enchanting all that you put in.

[Music and a song: 'Black spirits,' &c.

Hec. Retires.

Sec. Witch. By the pricking of my thumbs,
Something wicked this way comes.
Open, locks;
Whoever knocks!

Enter Macbeth.

Macb. How now, you secret, black, and midnight hags!
What is't you do?

All. A deed without a name.

Macb. I conjure you, by that which you profess,
Hower ever you come to know it, answer me:
Though you unite the winds and let them fight Against the churches; though the yesty waves
Confound and swallow navigation up;
Though bladed corn be lodged and trees blown down;
Though castles topple on their warders' heads;
Though palaces and pyramids do slope
Their heads to their foundations; though the treasure

Of nature's germens tumble all together,
Even till destruction sicken; answer me
To what I ask you.

First Witch. Speak.

Sec. Witch. Demand.

Third Witch. We'll answer.

First Witch. Say, if thou'rst rather hear it from our mouths,
Or from our masters?

Macb. Call 'em; let me see 'em.

First Witch. Pour in s'ow's blood, that hath eaten her nine farrow; grease that's sweaten From the murderer's gibbet throw Into the flame.

All. Come, high or low; Thyself and office defily show!

Thunder. First Apparition: an armed Head.

Macb. Tell me, thou unknown power,—
First Witch. He knows thy thought; Hear his speech, but say thou nought.

First App. Macbeth! Macbeth! Macbeth! beware Macduff;
Beware the thane of Fife. Dismiss me. Enough. [Descends.

Macb. Whate'er thou art, for thy good caution, thanks;
Thou hast harp'd my fear aright: but one word more.

First Witch. He will not be commanded:
Here's another,
More potent than the first.

Sec. App. Macbeth! Macbeth! Macbeth! Macbeth!

Macb. Had I three ears, I'd hear thee.
Sec. App. Be bloody, bold, and resolute; laugh to scorn
The power of man, for none of woman born So shall harm Macbeth. [Descends.

Macb. Then live, Macduff: what need I fear of thee?
But yet I'll make assurance double sure,
And take a bond of fate: thou shalt not live;
That I may tell pale-hearted fear it lies,
And sleep in spite of thunder.

What is this
That rises like the issue of a king,
And wears upon his baby-brow the round
And top of sovereignty?

All. Listen, but speak not to 't.

Third App. Be lion-mettled, proud; and take no care
Who chafes, who frets, or where conspirers are:
Macbeth shall never vanquish'd be until
Great Birnam wood to high Dunsinane hill Shall come against him. [Descends.

Macb. That will never be:
Who can impress the forest, bid the tree
Unfix his earth-bound root? Sweet bodements! good!

Rebellion's head, rise never till the wood
Of Birnam rise, and our high-placed Macbeth Shall live the lease of nature, pay his breath To time and mortal custom. Yet my heart Throbs to know one thing: tell me, if your art Can tell so much: shall Banquo's issue ever Reign in this kingdom?

All. Seek to know no more.

Macb. I will be satisfied: deny me this, And an eternal curse fall on you! Let me know, Why sinks that cauldron? and what noise is this? [Hautboys.

First Witch. Show!
Sec. Witch. Show!
Third Witch. Show!
All. Show his eyes, and grieve his heart; Come like shadows, so depart!

A show of Eight Kings, the last with a glass on's hand; Banquo's Ghost following.

Macb. Thou art too like the spirit of Ban; down! Thy crown does bear mine eye-balls. And hair, Thou other gold-bound brow, is like the first. A third is like the former. Filthy hags! Why do you show me this? A fourth! Start, e What, will the line stretch out to the crag doom? Another yet! A seventh! I'll see no more; And yet the eighth appears, who bears a glass Which shows me many more; and some I see That two-fold balls and treble sceptres carry. Horrible sight! Now, I see, 'tis true; For the blood-bolter'd Banquo smiles upon us And points at them for his. Apparitions van

What, is this so?

First Witch. Ay, sir, all this is so: but Stands Macbeth thus amazedly.
Come, sisters, cheer we up his sprites, And show the best of our delights: I'll charm the air to give a sound, While you perform your antic round; That this great king may kindly say, Our duties did his welcome pay.

[Music. The Witches dance, and vanish, with He.

Macb. Where are they? Gone? Let this vicious hour Stand aye accused in the calendar! Come in, without there!

Enter Lennox.

Len. What's your grace's Macb. Saw you the weird sisters? No, my
Len. Came they not by you?
Macb. No, indeed, my
Len. Infected be the air whereon they And damn'd all those that trust them! I did The galloping of horse: who was't came by Len. 'Tis two or three, my lord, that you word Macduff is fled to England.

Macb. Fled to England
Len. Ay, my good lord.
Macb. Time, thou anticipatest my dream plots: The flighty purpose never is o'ertook Unless the deed go with it: from this moment The very firstlings of my heart shall be The firstlings of my hand. And even now, To crown my thoughts with acts, be it the done: The castle of Macduff I will surprise; Seize upon Fife: give to the edge o' the sword His wife, his babes, and all unfortunate soul That trace him in his line. No boasting fool;
His deed I'll do before this purpose cool,
It no more sights!—Where are these gentlemen?
One, bring me where they are.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. Fife. Macduff's castle.

Enter Lady Macduff, her Son, and Ross.

L. Macd. What had he done, to make him fly the land?
Ross. You must have patience, madam.
L. Macd. He had none:
A flight was madness: when our actions do not,
Our fears do make us traitors.

Ross. You know not
If it was his wisdom or his fear.
L. Macd. Wisdom! to leave his wife, to leave
His babes,
His mansion and his titles in a place
Whence himself does fly? He loves us not;
Wants the natural touch: for the poor wren,
The most diminutive of birds, will fight,
Ten young ones in her nest, against the owl.
The fear and nothing is the love;
Little is the wisdom, where the flight
Runs against all reason.

Ross. My dearest coz,
Say you, school yourself: but for your husband,
Is noble, wise, judicious, and best knows Fits of the season. I dare not speak much Further;
Cruel are the times, when we are traitors
I do not know ourselves, when we hold rumour
M what we fear, yet know not what we fear,
Float upon a wild and violent sea.

h way and move. I take my leave of you;
I'll not be long but I'll be here again:
As at the worst will cease, or else climb upward
What they were before. My pretty cousin,
Singing upon you!
L. Macd. Father'd he is, and yet he's fatherless.
Ross. I am so much a fool, should I stay longer,
Should be my disgrace and your discomfort:
I may have care at once.

L. Macd. Sirrah, your father's dead; 30
What will you do now? How will you live?
As birds do, mother.
L. Macd. What, with worms and flies?
With what I get, I mean; and so do they.
L. Macd. Poor bird! thou'ldst never fear the net nor lime,
Pitfall nor the gin.
Why should I, mother? Poor birds they are not set for.
Father is not dead, for all your saying.
L. Macd. Yes, he is dead: how wilt thou do
For a father?
Nay, how will you do for a husband?
L. Macd. Why, I can buy me twenty at any market.
Then you'll buy 'em to sell again.
L. Macd. Thou speak'st with all thy wit; and yet,
'T is faith,
Wit enough for thee.
Was my father a traitor, mother?
L. Macd. Ay, that he was.
What is a traitor?
L. Macd. Why, one that swears and lies.

Son. And be all traitors that do so?
L. Macd. Every one that does so is a traitor, and must be hanged.
Son. And must they all be hanged that swear
L. Macd. Every one.
Son. Who must hang them?
L. Macd. Why, the honest men.
Son. Then the liars and swearers are fools,
For there are liars and swearers enow to beat the honest men and hang them up.
L. Macd. Nay, God help thee, poor monkey!
But how wilt thou do for a father?
Son. If he were dead, you'd weep for him:
If you would not, it were a good sign that I should quickly have a new father.
L. Macd. Poor prattler, how thou talk'st!

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Bless you, fair dame! I am not to you known,
Though in your state of honour I am perfect,
I doubt some danger does approach you nearly:
If you will take a homely man's advice,
Be not found here; hence, with your little ones.
To fright you thus, methinks, I am too savage: 70
To do worse to you were fell cruelty,
Which is too nigh your person. Heaven preserve you!
I dare abide no longer.

[Exit. L. Macd. Whither should I fly?
I have done no harm. But I remember now
I am in this earthly world; where to do harm
Is often laudable, to do good sometime.
Accounted dangerous folly: why then, alas,
Do I put up that womanly defence,
To say I have done no harm?

Enter Murderers.

What are these faces?
First Mur. Where is your husband?
L. Macd. I hope, in no place so unsacrilified
Where such as thou mayst find him.
First Mur. He's a traitor.
Son. Thou liest, thou shag-hair'd villain!
First Mur. What, you egg?
L. Macd. Young fry of treachery!
Son. He has kill'd me, mother:
Run away, I pray you!
[Dies.
L. Macd. Lord Lady Macduff, crying 'Murder' [Exeunt Murderers, following her.

SCENE III. England. Before the King's palace.

Enter Malcolm and Macduff.

Mal. Let us seek out some desolate shade,
And there
Weep our sad bosoms empty.

Macd. Let us rather
Hold fast the mortal sword, and like good men
Bestride our downfall'd birthdorn: each new morn
New widows howl, new orphans cry, new sorrow
Strike heaven on the face, that it resounds
As if it felt with Scotland and yell'd out
Like syllable of dolor.
Mal. What I believe I'll wait,
What know believe, and what I can redress,
As I shall find the time to friend, I will.
What you have spoke, it may be so perchance. This tyrant, whose sole name blusters our tongues, Was once thought honest: you have loved him well.

He hath not touch'd you yet. I am young; but something
You may deserve of him through me, and wisdom
To offer up a weak poor innocent lamb
To appease an angry god.

Macc. I am not treacherous.

But Macbeth is.

A good and virtuous nature may recoil
In an imperial charge. But I shall crave your pardon;

That which you are my thoughts cannot transpose:
Angels are bright still, though the brightest fell:
Though all things foul would wear the brows of grace,

Yet grace must still look so.

Macc. I have lost my hopes.

Mai. Perchance even there where I did find my doubts.

Why in that rawness left you wife and child,
Those precious motives, those strong knots of love,
Without leave-taking? I pray you,
Let not my jealousies be your dishonours,
But mine own safeties. You may be rightly just,
Whatever I shall think.

Macc. Bleed, bleed, poor country!
Great tyranny! lay thou thy basis sure,
For goodness dare not check thee: wear thou thy wrongs;
The title is after'd. Fare thee well, lord:
I would not to be villain that thou thinkest
For the whole space that's in the tyrant's grasp,
And the rich East to boot.

Mai. Be not offended:
I speak not as in absolute fear of you.
I think our country sinks beneath the yoke:
It weeps, it bleeds; and each new day a gash
Is added to her wounds: I think withal
There would be hands uplifted in my right;
And here from gracious England have I offer
Of goodly thousands: but, for all this,
When I shall tread upon the tyrant's head,
Or wear it on my sword, yet my poor country
Shall have more vices than it had before,
More suffer and more sundry ways than ever,
By him that shall succeed.

Macc. What should he be?

Mai. It is myself I mean: in whom I know 50
All the particulars of vice so graft'd
That, when they shall be open'd, black Macbeth
Will seem as pure as snow, and the poor state Esteem him as a lamb, being compared
With my confined harms.

Macc. Not in the legions
Of horrid hell can come a devil more damn'd
In evils to top Macbeth.

Mai. I grant him bloody,

Luxurious, avaricious, false, deceitful,
Sudden, malicious, smacking of every sin
That has a name: but there's no bottom, none, 60
In my voluptuousness: your wives, your daughters,
Your matrons and your maids, could not fill up
The cistern of my lust, and my desire
All continent impediments would o'bearear
That did oppose my will: better Macbeth
Than such an one to reign.

Macc. Boundless intemperance
In nature is a tyranny; it hath been
The untimely emptying of the happy throne
And fall of many kings. But fear not yet
To take upon you what is yours: you may Convey your pleasures in a spacious plenty,
And yet seem cold, the time you may so hoo'd
We have willing dames enough; there cannot
That vulture in you, to devour so many
As will to greatness dedicate themselves,
Finding it so inclined.

Mai. With this there grows
In my most ill-composed affection such
A stanchless avarice that, were I king,
I should cut off the nobles for their lands,
Desire his jewels and this other house:
And my more-having would be as a sauce
To make me hunger more: that I should forget Quarrels unjust against the good and loyal,
Destroying them for wealth.

Macc. This avarice
Sticks deeper, grows with more pernicous root
Than summer-seeming lust, and it hath been
The sword of our slain kings: yet do not fear;
Scotland hath foisons to fill up your will,
And your mere own: all these are portable,
With other graces weigh'd.

Mai. But I have none: the king-becoming graces,
As justice, verity, temperance, stableness,
Bounty, perseverance, mercy, lowliness,
Devotion, patience, courage, for to him,
I have no relish of them, but abound
In the division of each several crime,
Acting it many ways. Nay, had I power, I shot
Pour the sweet milk of concord into hell,
Upwar the universal peace, confound
All unity on earth.

Macc. O Scotland, Scotland!

Mai. If such a one be fit to govern, speak
I am as I have spoken.

Macc. Fit to govern!

Mai. No, not to live. O nation miserable,
With an untitled tyrant bloody-scepter'd,
When shall thou see thy wholesome days again?
Since in this our time the truest issue of thy throne
By his own interdiction stands accused,
And does blaspheme his breed? Thy royal fest
Was a most sainted king: the queen that bore thee
Oftener upon her knees than on her feet,
Died every day she lived. Fare thee well!
These evils thou repeat'st upon thyself.
Have banish'd me from Scotland. O my breast,
Thy hope ends here!

Macc. Macduff, this noble passion
Child of integrity, hath from my soul
Wiped the black scruples, reconciled my thought
To thy good truth and honour. Devilish Macbeth
By many of these trains hath sought to win me
Into his power, and modest wisdom plucks me.
From over-creul'd haste: but God above
Deal between thee and me! for even now
I put myself to thy direction, and Unspayc mine own detraction, here abjure
The taints and blame I laid upon myself,
For straoggers to my nature, I am yet
Unknown to woman, never was forsworn,
Scarcey have coveted what was mine own,
At no time broke my faith, would not betray
The devil to his fellow and delight
No less in truth than life: my first false speaking
Was this upon myself: what I am truly,
Is thine and my poor country's to command:
Whither indeed, before thy here-approach,
Old Siward, with ten thousand warlike men,
Stood at a point, was setting forth.
How we'll together; and the chance of goodness
Let our warranted quarrel! Why are you silent?
Mac. Such welcome and unwelcome things at once
Is hard to reconcile.

Enter a Doctor.
Mal. Well; more anon.—Comes the king forth,
I pray you?
Doc. Ay, sir; there are a crew of wretched souls
that stay his cure: their malady convinces he great assay of art; but at his touch—such sanctity hath heaven given his hand—they presently amend.
Mal. I thank you, doctor. [Exit Doctor.
Mac. What's the disease he means?
Mal. 'Tis call'd the evil:
most miraculous work in this good king;
hich often, since my here-remain in England,
have seen him do. How he solicits heaven, myself best knows: but strangely-visited people,
I swoon and ulcerous, pitiful to the eye,
and mere despair of surgery, he cures,
ang a golden stamp about their necks,
and with holy prayers: and 'tis spoken,
the succeeding royalty he leaves in healing benediction. With this strange virtue, hath a heavenly gift of prophecy,
that sundry blessings hang about his throne,
at speak him full of grace.

Enter Ross.
Mac. See, who comes here?
Mal. My countryman; but yet I know him
not.
Mac. My ever-gentle cousin, welcome hither.
Mal. I know him now. Good God, betimes remove the means that makes us strangers!
Sir, amen.
Mac. Stands Scotland where it did?
Ross. Alas, poor country! most afraid to know itself. It cannot call'd our mother, but our grave; where nothing who knows nothing, is once seen to smile;
eer sighs and groans and shrieks that rend the air made, not mark'd; where violent sorrow seems modern ecstasy; the dead man's knell here scarce ask'd for who; and good men's life
here before the flowers in their caps, ng ever they sicken.
Mac. O, relation
nice, and yet too true!
Mal. What's the newest grief?
or. That of an hour's age doth hiss the speaker:

Each minute teems a new one.

Mac. How does my wife?
Ross. Why, well.

A.Mac. And all my children?
Ross. Well too.

Mac. The tyrant has not b batter'd at their peace?
Ross. No; they were well at peace when I did leave 'em.

Mac. Be not a niggard of your speech: how goes't?
Ross. When I came hither to transport the tidings,
Which I have heavily borne, there ran a rumour
Of many worthy fellows that were out;
Which was to my belief witness'd the rather,
For that I saw the tyrant's power a-foot:
Now is the time of help; your eye in Scotland
Would create soldiers, make our women fight,
To doff their dire distresses.

Mal. Be't their comfort
We are coming thither: gracious England hath Lent us good Siward and ten thousand men; 190
An elder and a better soldier none
That Christendom gives out.
Ross. Would I could answer
This comfort with the like! But I have words
That would be how'd out in the desert air,
Where hearing should not latch them.
Mac. What concern they?

The general cause? or is it a fee-grief
Due to some single breath?
Ross. No mind that's honest
But in it shares some woe; though the main part Pertains to you alone.

Mac. If it be mine,
Keep it not from me, quickly let me have it. 200 Ross. Let not your ears despise my tongue for ever,
Which shall possess them with the heaviest sound
That ever yet they heard.

Mac. Hum! I guess at it.
Ross. Your castle is surprised; your wife and babes
Savagely slaughter'd: to relate the manner,
Were, on the quarry of these murder'd deer,
To add the death of you.

Mac. Merciful heaven!
What, man! ne'er pull your hat upon your brows;
Give sorrow words: the grief that does not speak
Whispers the o'er-sought heart and bids it break.
Mac. My children too?
Ross. Wife, children, servants, all 211
That could be found.

Mac. And I must be from thence!
My wife kill'd too?
Ross. I have said.

Mac. Be comforted:
Let's make us medicines of our great revenge,
To cure this deadly grief.
Mac. He has no children. All my pretty ones?
Did you say all? O hell-kite! All?
What, all my pretty chickens and their dam
At one fell swoop?

Mal. Dispute it like a man.
Mac. I shall do so; 220
But I must also feel it as a man:
ACT V.

SCENE I. Dunsinane. Ante-room in the castle.

Enter a Doctor of Physic and a Waiting-Gentlewoman.

Doct. I have two nights watched with you, but can perceive no truth in your report. When was it she last walked?

Gent. Since his majesty went into the field, I have seen her rise from her bed, throw her nightgown upon her, unlock her closet, take forth paper, fold it, write upon't, read it, afterwards seal it, and again return to bed; yet all this while in a most fast sleep.

Doct. A great perturbation in nature, to receive at once the benefit of sleep, and do the effects of watching! In this slumber agitation, besides her walking and other actual performances, what, at any time, have you heard her say?

Gent. That, sir, which I will not report after her.

Doct. You may to me: and 'tis most meet you should.

Gent. Neither to you nor any one; having no witness to confirm my speech.

Enter Lady Macbeth, with a taper.

Lo you, here she comes! This is her very guise; and, upon my life, fast asleep. Observe her; stand close.

Doct. How came she by that light?

Gent. Why, it stood by her; she has light by her continually; 'tis her command.

Doct. You see, her eyes are open.

Gent. Ay, but their sense is shut.

Doct. What is it she does now? Look, how she rubs her hands.

Gent. It is an accustomed action with her, to seem thus washing her hands: I have known her to continue in this a quarter of an hour.

Lady M. Yet here's a spot.

Doct. Hark! she speaks: I will set down what comes from her, to satisfy my remembrance the more strongly.

Lady M. Out, damned spot! out, I say!—One; two: why, then 'tis time to do't.—Hell-murky!—Fie, my lord, fie! a soldier, and afear'd! What need we fear who knows it, when none call our power to account?—Yet who would have thought the old man to have had so much blood in him.

Doct. Do you mark that?

Lady M. The thane of Fife had a wife: who is she now?—What, will these hands ne'er be clean?—No more o' that, my lord, no more!—that you mar all with this starting.

Doct. Go to, go to; you have known what you should not.

Gent. She has spoke what she should not. I am sure of that: heaven knows what she has known.

Lady M. Here's the smell of the blood still on all the perfumes of Arabia will not sweeten that little hand. Oh, oh, oh!

Doct. What a sigh is there! The heart sorely charged.

Gent. I would not have such a heart in bosom for the dignity of the whole body.

Doct. Well, well, well,—

Gent. Pray God it be, sir.

Doct. This disease is beyond my practice yet I have known those which have walked in their sleep who have died holily in their beds.

Lady M. Wash your hands, put on your nightgown; look not so pale. I tell you, again, Banquo's buried; he cannot come on's grave.

Doct. Even so?

Lady M. To bed, to bed! there's knock at the gate: come, come, come, come, give it your hand. What's done cannot be undone. [Exeunt.]

Gent. Directly.

Doct. Foul whisperings are abroad: unnatural deeds Do breed unnatural troubles: infected minds To their deaf pillows will discharge their secret More needs she the divine than the physician. God, God forgive us all! Look after her; Remove from her the means of all annoyance, And still keep eyes upon her. So, good night. My mind she has mated, and amazed my sight I think, but dare not speak.

Gent. Good night, good Doctor.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. The country near Dunsinane.

Drum and colours. Enter Menteith, Caithness, Angus, Lennox, and Soldiers.

Menteith. The English power is near, led on by Malcolm.

His uncle Siward and the good Macduff:
Revenge burn in them; for their dear causes Would to the bleeding and the grim alarm
MACBETH.

Near Birnam wood we call all we well meet them; that way are they coming.

Caith. Who knows if Donalbain be with his brother?

Len. For certain, sir, he is not: I have a file of the gentry: there is Siward's son, and many unrough youths that even now otest their first of manhood.

Ment. What does the tyrant? Caith. Great Dunsinane he strongly fortifies: he say's he's mad; others that lesser hate him call it valiant fury: but, for certain, cannot buckler his distemper'd cause thin the belt of rule.

Ang. Now does he feel secret murders sticking on his hands; minutely revolt upbrain his faith-breach; as he commands move only in command, thing in love: now does he feel his title singing loose about him, like a giant's robe on a dwarfish thief.

Ment. Who then shall blame s'pester'd senses to recoil and start, ten all that is within him does condemn all for being there? Caith. Well, march we on, give obedience where 'tis truly owed: set we the medicine of the sickly weal, d with him pour we in our country's purge ch drop of us. Len. Or so much as it needs, dwe the sovereign flower and drown the weeds. oke we our march towards Birnam. [Exeunt, marching.

Sey. Tis not needed yet. Macb. I'll put it on. Send out more horses; skirr the country round; Hang those that talk of fear. Give me mine armour. How does your patient, doctor? Dol. Not so sick, my lord, As she is troubled with thick-coming fancies, That keep her from her rest. Macb. Cure her of that. Canst thou not minister to a mind diseased, Pluck out the written troubles of the brain And with some sweet oblivions antidote Cleanse the stub'd bosom of that perilous stuff Which weighs upon the heart? Dol. Therein the patient Must minister to himself. Macb. Throw physic to the dogs; I'll none of it. Come, put mine armour on; give me my staff. Seyton, send out. Doctor, the thanes fly from me. Dol. Come, sit, dispatch. If thou couldst, doctor, cast The water of my land, find her disease, And purge it to a sound and pristine health, I would applaud thee to the very echo, That should applaud again. — Pull't off, I say. — What rhubarb, fysing, or what purgative drug, Would scour these English hence? Hear'st thou of them? Dol. Ay, my good lord; your royal preparation Makes us hear something. Macb. Bring it after me. I will not be afraid of death and base, Till Birnam forest come to Dunsinane. Dol. [Aside] Were I from Dunsinane away and clear, Profit again should hardly draw me here. [Exeunt.} Scene IV. Country near Birnam wood.

Drum and colours. Enter Malcolm, old Siward, and his Son, Macduff, Menteith, Caithness, Angus, Lennox, Ross, and Soldiers, marching.

Mal. Cousins, I hope the days are near at hand
That chambers will be safe.

Ment. We doubt it nothing.

Siv. What wood is this before us?

Ment. The wood of Birnam.

Mal. Let every soldier hew him down a bough
And bear’t before him: thereby shall we shadow
The numbers of our host and make discovery
Err in report of us.

Soldiers. It shall be done.

Siv. We learn no other but the confident tyrant Keeps still in Dunsinane, and will endure
Our setting down before’t.

Mal. ’Tis his main hope: 10
For where there is advantage to be given,
Both more and less have given him the revolt,
And none serve with him but constrained things
Whose hearts are absent too.

Macd. Let our just censures Attend the true event, and put we on Industrious soldiership.

Siv. The time approaches
That will with due decision make us know
What we shall say we have and what we owe.
Thoughts speculative their unsure hopes relate,
But certain issue strokes must arbitrate: 20
Towards which advance the war.

[Exeunt, marching.

Scene V. Dunsinane. Within the castle.

Enter Macbeth, Seyton, and Soldiers, with Drum and colours.

Macb. Hang out our banners on the outward walls;
The cry is still 'They come!' our castle's strength
Will laugh a sieve to scorn: here let them lie
Till famine and the ague eat them up;
Were they not forced with those that should be ours,
We might have met them careful, beard to beard,
And beat them backward home.

[An entrance within.

Macb. What is that noise?

Sey. It is the cry of women, my good lord.

[Exit.

Macb. I have almost forgot the taste of fears:
The time has been, my senses would have cool’d
To hear a night-shriek; and my fell of hair
Would at a dismal treatise rouse and stir
As life were in’t: I have supp’d full with horrors;
D ireness, familiar to my slaughterous thoughts,
Cannot once start me.

Re-enter Seyton.

Sey. Wherefore was that cry?

Macb. She should have died hereafter;
There would have been a time for such a woman.
To-morrow, and to-morrow, and to-morrow,
Creeps in this petty pace from day to day
To the last syllable of recorded time,
And all our yesterdays have lighted fools
The way to dusty death. Out, brief candle!
Life’s but a walking shadow, a poor player
That struts and frets his hour upon the stage;
And then is heard no more: it is a tale
Told by an idiot, full of sound and fury, Signifying nothing.

Enter a Messenger.

Thou comest to use thy tongue; thy story quick.

Mess. Gracious my lord, I should report that which I say I saw,
But know not how to do it.

Macb. Well, say, sir.

Mess. As I did stand my watch upon the
I look’d toward Birnam, and anon, methought
The wood began to move.

Macb. Liar and slave!

Mess. Let me endure your wrath, if’t not so.

Macb. Within this three mile may you see it coming
I say, a moving grove.

Mess. If thou speak’st false,
Upon the next tree shalt thou hang alive,
Till famine cling thee: if thy speech be sooth,
I care not if thou dost for me as much
I pull in resolution, and begin
To doubt the equivocation of the fiend.

That lies like truth: 'Fear not, till Birnam wood
Do come to Dunsinane,' and now a wood
Comes toward Dunsinane. Arm, arm, and o’er
If this which he avouches does appear,
There is not flying hence nor tarrying here.
I gin to be aweary of the sun,
And wish the estate o’ the world were now done.

Ring the alarum-bell! Blow, wind! I come, 16
At least we’ll die with harness on our back.

[Exeunt.

Scene VI. Dunsinane. Before the castle.

Drum and colours. Enter Malcolm, old Siward, Macduff, and their Army, with banners.

Mal. Now near enough: your leafy spears
Throw down,
And show like those you are. You, worthy uncle,
Shall, with my cousin, your right-noble son,
Lead our first battle: worthy Macduff and you,
Shall take upon’s what else remains to do,
According to our order.

Siv. Fare you well.

Macd. Do we but find the tyrant’s power to-night,
Let us be beaten, if we cannot fight.

Macb. Make all our trumpets speak; them all breath,
Those clamorous harbingers of blood and des Enter young Siward.

Yo. Siw. What is thy name?

Mac. Thou'lt be afraid to hear it.
Yo. Siw. No; though thou call'st thyself a hotter name than any in hell.

[They fight and young Siward is slain.]

Yo. Siw. Thou liest, abhorred tyrant; with my sword I prove the lie thou speak'st.

Mac. Thou wast born of woman. I swords I smile at, weapons laugh to scorn, and 'd by man's of a woman born.

[Exit.]

Alarums. Enter Malcolm and old Siward.

Yo. Siw. This way the noise is. Tyrant, show thy face! ho! be'st slain and with no stroke of mine, wife and children's ghosts will haunt me still; not strike at wretched kerns, whose arms are hired to bear their staves: either thou, Macbeth, else my sword with an unbatter'd edge beateth again undeserved. There thou shouldst be; this great clatter, one of greatest note bruises. Let me find him, fortune! I more I beg not.

[Exit. Alarums.

Yo. Siw. Enter Malcolm and old Siward.

Yo. Siw. This way my lord; the castle's gently render'd:

'trant's people on both sides do fight;

noble thanes do bravely in the war;

day almost itself professes yours,

little is to do.

fal. We have met with foes it strike beside us.

Yo. Siw. Enter, sir, the castle. [Exeunt. Alarums.

Scene VIII. Another part of the field.

Enter Macbeth.

Macd. Turn, hell-hound, turn! Macd. Of all men else I have avoided thee: But get thee back; my soul is too much charged With blood of thine already.

Macd. I have no words; My voice is in my sword: thon bloody villain Than terms can give thee out! [They fight.]

Mac. Thou lostest labour: As easy mayst thou the intrenchant air With thy keen sword impress as make me bleed: Let fall thy blade on vulnerable crests; I bear a charmed life, which must not yield To one of woman born.

Macd. Despair thy charm; And let the angel whom thou still hast served Tell thee, Macduff was from his mother's womb Untimely ripp'd. Macd. Accursed be that tongue that tells me so, For it hath cow'd my better part of man! And be these juggling fiends no more believed, That palter with us in a double sense; That keep the word of promise to our ear, And break it to our hope. I'll not fight with thee. Macd. Then yield thee, coward, And live to be the show and gaze o' the time: We'll have thee, as our rarer monsters are, Painted upon a pole, and underwrit, 'Here may you see the tyrant.'

Mac. I will not yield, To kiss the ground before young Malcolm's feet, And to be baited with the rabble's curse. Though Birnam wood be come to Dunsinane, 39 And thou opposed, being of no woman born, Yet I will try the last. Before my body I throw my warlike shield. Lay on, Macduff, And damn'd be him that first cries 'Hold, e-nough!' [Exeunt, fighting. Alarums.]

Retreat. Flourish. Enter, with drum and colours, MALCOLM, old SiWARD, ROSS, the other Thanes, and Soldiers.

Mal. I would the friends we miss were safe arrived. Siw. Some must go off: and yet, by these I see, So great a day as this is cheaply bought. Mal. Macduff is missing, and your noble son. Ross. Your son, my lord, has paid a soldier's debt:

He only lived but till he was a man; The which no sooner had his prowess confirm'd In the unshrinking station where he fought, But like a man he died. Siw. Then he is dead? Ross. Ay, and brought off the field: your cause of sorrow Must not be measured by his worth, for then It hath no end.

Siw. Had he his hurts before? Ross. Ay, on the front. Siw. Why then, God's soldier be he! Had I as many sons as I have hairs, I would not wish them to a fairer death: And so, his knell is knoll'd.

Mal. He's worth more sorrow, 50 And that I'll spend for him. Siw. He's worth no more:
They say he parted well, and paid his score:
And so, God be with him! Here comes newer comfort.

Re-enter Macduff, with Macbeth's head.

Macd. Hail, king! for so thou art: behold, where stands
The usurper's cursed head: the time is free:
I see thee compass'd with thy kingdom's pearl,
That speak my salutation in their minds;
Whose voices I desire aloud with mine:
Hail, King of Scotland!

All. Hail, King of Scotland! [Flourish.

Mal. We shall not spend a large expense of time
Before we reckon with your several loves,
And make us even with you. My thanes a kinsmen,
Henceforth be earls, the first that ever Scots
In such an honour named. What's more to d
Which would be planted newly with the time,
As calling home our exiled friends abroad
That fled the snares of watchful tyranny;
Producing forth the cruel ministers
Of this dead butcher and his fiend-like queen,
Who, as 'tis thought, by self and violent hands
Took off her life; this, and what needful else
That calls upon us, by the grace of Grace,
We will perform in measure, time and place;
So, thanks to all at once and to each one,
Whom we invite to see us crown'd at Scone.

[Flourish. Exeunt.]

ACT I.

NE I. Elsinore. A platform before the castle.

SCOSCA at his post. Enter to him BERNARDO.
r. Who's there?
am. Nay, answer me: stand, and unfold yourself.
r. Long live the king!
am. Bernardo?
r. He.
am. You come most carefully upon your hour.
r. 'Tis now struck twelve; get thee to bed, Francisco.
am. For this relief much thanks: 'tis bitter cold, I am sick at heart.
r. Have you had quiet guard?
am. Not a mouse stirring, 10
r. Well, good night.

u do meet Horatio and Marcellus, rivals of my watch, bid them make haste.
am. I think I hear them. Stand, ho! Who's there?

Enter Horatio and Marcellus.
r. Friends to this ground.
ar. And liegenmen to the Dane.
am. Give you good night.
ar. Holla! Bernardo! Say, tis Horatio there?
r. A piece of him.
r. Welcome, Horatio: welcome, good Marcellus.

Mar. What, has this thing appear'd again to-night?
Ber. I have seen nothing.
Mar. Horatio says 'tis but our fantasy, And will not let belief take hold of him Touching this dreaded sight, twice seen of us: Therefore I have entreated him along With us to watch the minutes of this night; That if again this apparition come, He may approve our eyes and speak to it. Hor. Tush, tush, 'twill not appear. Ber. Sit down awhile; 30 And let us once again assail your ears, That are so fortified against our story What we have two nights seen.
Hor. Well, sit we down, And let us hear Bernardo speak of this.
Ber. Last night of all, When yond same star that's westward from the pole Had made his course to illumine that part of heaven Where now it burns, Marcellus and myself, The bell then beating one,—

Enter Ghost.

Mar. Peace, break thee off; look, where it comes again! 40
Ber. In the same figure, like the king that's dead.
Mar. Thou art a scholar; speak to it, Horatio. Ber. Looks it not like the king? mark it, Horatio. Hor. Most like: it harrows me with fear and wonder.
Ber. It would be spoke to.
Mar. Question it, Horatio. Hor. What art thou that usurp'st this time of night, Together with that fair and warlike form In which the majesty of buried Denmark
Did sometimes march? by heaven I charge thee, speak!
\[Mar.\] It is offended.
\[Ber.\] See, it stalks away! so \[Hor.\] Stay! speak, speak! I charge thee, speak!
\[Exit Ghost.\]

\[Mar.\] 'Tis gone, and will not answer.
\[Ber.\] How now, Horatio! you tremble and look pale.
Is not this something more than fantasy? What think you on't?
\[Hor.\] Before my God, I might not this believe Without the sensible and true avouch Of mine own eyes.
\[Mar.\] Is it not like the king?
\[Hor.\] As thou art to thyself:
Such was the very armour he had on
When he the ambitious Norway combated;
So frown'd he once, when, in an angry parle,
He smote the splendid Polacks on the ice.
'Tis strange.
\[Mar.\] Thus twice before, and jump at this dead hour,
With martial stalk hath he gone by our watch.
\[Hor.\] In what particular thought to work I know not;
But in the gross and scope of my opinion,
This bodes some strange eruption to our state.
\[Mar.\] Good now, sit down, and tell me, he that knows.
Why this same strict and most observant watch
So nightly toils the subject of the land,
And why such daily cast of brazen cannon,
And foreign mart for implements of war;
Why such impress of shipwrights, whose sore task
Does not divide the Sunday from the week;
What might be toward, that this sweaty haste
Doth make the night joint-labourer with the day:
Who is 't that can inform me?
\[Hor.\] That can I;
At least, the whisper goes so. Our last king,
Whose image even now appear'd to us,
Was, as you know, by Fortinbras of Norway,
Therto pricked on by a mere emulate pride,
Dare make the combat; in which our valiant Hamlet—
For so this side of our known world esteem'd him—
Did slay this Fortinbras; who, by a seal'd compact,
Well ratified by law and heraldry,
Did forfeit, with his life, all those his lands
Which he stood seiz'd of, to the conqueror:
Against which, a moity competent
Was gaged by our king; which had return'd
To the inheritance of Fortinbras,
Had he been vanquisher; as, by the same covenant,
And carriage of the article design'd,
His fell to Hamlet.
Now, sir, young Fortinbras,  Of unimproved mettle hot and full,  Hath in the skirts of Norway here and there  Shark'd up a list of lawless resolutes,  For food and diet, to some enterprise
That hath a stomach in't: which is no other—
As it doth well appear unto our state—
But to recover of us, by strong hand
And terms compulsory, those foresaid lands
So by his father lost: and this, I take it,
Is the main motive of our preparations,
The source of this our watch and the chief
Of this post-haste and romage in the land.
\[Ber.\] I think it be no other but e'en so:
Well may it sort that this portentious figure
Comes armed through our watch; so like a king
That was and is the question of these wars.
\[Hor.\] A mote it is to trouble the mind's eye:
In the most high and palmy state of Rome,
A little ere the mightiest Julius fell,
The graves stood tenantless and the sheeted
Did squeak and gibber in the Roman street.
As stars with trains of fire and dew of blood
Disasters in the sun; and the moist star
Upon whose influence Neptune's empire sat
Was sick almost to doomsday with eclipse:
And even the like precursor of fierce events,
As harbingers preceding still the fates
And prologue to the omen coming on,
Have heaven and earth together demonstrated
Unto our climatures and countrymen.—
But soft, behold! lo, where it comes again!
\[Re-enter Ghost.\]
I'll cross it, though it blast me.
\[Hor.\] Stay, illustrious!
If thou hast any sound, or use of voice,
Speak to me:
If there be any good thing to be done,
To thee do ease and grace to me,
Speak to me:
\[Cock cries.\]
If thou art privy to thy country's fate,
Which, happily, foreknowing may avoid,
O, speak!
Or if thou hast upbraided in thy life
Extorted treasure in the womb of earth,
For which, they say, you spirits oft walk in Speak of it: stay, and speak!
\[Mar.\] Shall I strike at it with my partizan?
\[Hor.\] Do, if it will not stand.
\[Exit Ghost.\]
\[Hor.\] 'Tis gone!
\[Ber.\] Do we do it wrong, being so majestic,
To offer it the show of violence;
For it is, as the air, invulnerable,
And our vain blows malicious mockery.
\[Ber.\] It was about to speak, when the crew—
\[Hor.\] And then it started like a guilty thing
Upon a fearful summons. I have heard,
The cock, that is the trumpet to the morn,
Doth with his lofty and shrill-sounding throats
Awake the god of day; and, at his warning,
Whether in sea or fire, in earth or air,
The extravagant and erring spirit hies
To his confine; and of the truth herein
This present object made probation.
\[Mar.\] It faded on the crowing of the cock.
Some say that ever 'gainst that season comes Wherein our Saviour's birth is celebrated,
The bird of dawning singeth all night long:
And then, they say, no spirit dares stir abroad;
The trips of darkness are wholesome; then no planets show;
No fairy takes, nor witch hath power to charm
So hallow'd and so gracious is the time.
\[Hor.\] So have I heard and do in part believe,
But, look, the morn, in russet mantle clad,
Walks o'er the dew of yon high eastward hill—
HAMLET.

What wouldst thou have, Laertes?

Laer.

My dread lord, 50
Your leave and favour to return to France;
From whence though willingly I came to Denmark,
To show my duty in your coronation,
Yet now, I must confess, that duty done,
My thoughts and wishes bend again toward France
And bow them to your gracious leave and pardon.

King. Have you your father's leave? What says Polonius?

Pol. He hath, my lord, wrung from me my slow leave
By laboursome petition, and at last
Upon his will I seal'd my hard consent:
I do beseech you, give him leave to go.

King. Take thy fair hour, Laertes; time be thine,
And thy best graces spend it at thy will!
But now, my cousin Hamlet, and my son,—

Ham. [Aside] A little more than kin, and less than kind.

King. How is it that the clouds still hang on you?

Ham. Not so, my lord; I am too much i' the sun.

Queen. Good Hamlet, cast thy nightly colour off,
And let thine eye look like a friend on Denmark.
Do not for ever with thy vailed lids
Seek for thy noble father in the dust:
Thou know'st 'tis common; all that lives must die,
Passing through nature to eternity.

Ham. Ay, madam, it is common.

Queen. If it be,
Why seems it so particular with thee?

Ham. Seems, madam! nay, it is; I know not
'seems.'

Tis not alone my inky cloak, good mother,
Nor customary suits of solemn black,
Nor windy suspension of forced breath,
No, nor the fruitful river in the eye,
Nor the dejected 'haviour of the visage,
Together with all forms, moods, shapes of grief,
That can denote me truly: these indeed seem,
For they are actions that a man might play:
But I have that within which passeth show;
These but the trappings and the suits of woe.

King. 'Tis sweet and commendable in your nature, Hamlet,
To give these mourning duties to your father:
But, you must know, your father lost a father;
That father lost, lost his, and the survivor bound
In filial obligation for some term
To do obsequious sorrow: but to persever
In obstinate condolence is a course
Of impious stubbornness; 'tis unmanly grief;
It shows a will most incorrect to heaven,
A heart unfortified, a mind impatient,
An understanding simple and unschool'd:
For what we know must be and is as common
As any the most vulgar thing to sense,
Why should we in our peevish opposition
Take it to heart? Fie! 'tis a fault to heaven,
A fault against the dead, a fault to nature,
To reason most absurd: whose common theme
Is death of fathers, and who still hath cried,
From the first cough till he that died to-day,
'This must be so.' We pray you, throw to earth
This unprevailing woe, and think of us.
As of a father: for let the world take note,
You are the most immediate to our throne;
And with no less nobility of love
Than that which dearest father bears his son,
Do I impart toward you. For your intent
In going back to school in Wittenberg,
It is most retrograde to our desire:
And we beseech you, bend to you remain
Here, in the cheer and comfort of our eye,
Our chiefest courtier, cousin, and our son.

Queen. Let not thy mother lose her prayers.

Hamlet. I pray thee, stay with us; go not to Wittenberg.

Ham. I shall in all my best obey you, madam.

Queen. Why, 'tis a loving and a fair reply: 130
Be as ourself in Denmark. Madam, come;
This gentle and unforced accord of Hamlet
Sits smiling to my heart: in grace whereof,
No jocund health that Denmark drinks to-day,
But the great cannon to the clouds shall tell,
And the king's rouse the heavens shall burst again,
Re-speaking earthy thunder. Come away.

[Exeunt all but Hamlet.]

Ham. O, that this too solid flesh would melt,
Thaw and resolve itself into a dew! 130
Or that the Everlasting had not fix'd
His canon 'gainst self-slaughter! O God! God!
How weary, stale, flat and unprofitable
Seem to me all the uses of this world!
Fie on't! ah fie! 'tis an unweeded garden,
That grows to seed; things rank and gross in nature
Possess it merely. That it should come to this!
But two months dead: nay, not so much, not two:
So excellent a king: that was, to this,
Hyperion to a satyr: so loving to my mother 140
That he might not beteem the winds of heaven
Visit her face too roughly. Heaven and earth!
Must I remember? why, she would hang on him,
As if increase of appetite had grown
By what it fed on; and yet, within a month—
Let me not think on't—Frazily, thy name is woman!

A little month, or ere those shoes were old
With which she follow'd my poor father's body,
Like Niobe, all tears:—why she, even she— 149
O God! a beast, that wants discourse of reason,
Would have mourn'd longer—married with my

My father's brother, but no more like my father
Than I to Hercules: within a month:
Ere yet the salt of most unrighteous tears
Had left the flushing in her galled eyes,
She married. O, most wicked speed, to post
With such dexterity to inconstant sheets!
It is not nor it cannot come to good:
But break, my heart; for I must hold my tongue.

Enter Horatio, Marcellus, and Bernardo.

Hor. Hail to your lordship!

Ham. I am glad to see you well! 160
Horatio—or I do forget myself.

Hor. The same, my lord, and your poor servant ever.

Ham. Sir, my good friend; I'll change that name with you:
And what make you from Wittenberg, Horatio? Marcellus?
Scene II.

HAMLET.

Let you know of it.

Ham. Indeed, indeed, sirs, but this troubles me. Do you the watch to-night?

Laer. We do, my lord.

Ham. Arm'd, say you?

Laer. Arm'd, my lord.

Ham. From top to toe?

Laer. My lord, from head to foot.

Ham. Then saw you not his face?

Laer. O, yes, my lord; he wore his beard up.

Ham. What, look'd he frowningly?

Laer. A countenance more in sorrow than in anger.

Ham. Pale or red?

Laer. Nay, very pale.

Ham. And fix'd his eyes upon you?

Laer. Most constantly.

Ham. I would I had been there.

Laer. It would have much amazed you.

Ham. Very like, very like. Stay'd it long?

Laer. While one with moderate haste might count a hundred.

Ham. Longer, longer.

Laer. Not when I saw't.

Ham. His beard was grizzled,—no? 240

Laer. It was, as I have seen it in his life, silver'd.

Ham. I will watch to-night; chance 'twill walk again.

Laer. I warrant it will.

Ham. If it assume my noble father's person, speak to it, though hell itself should gape and bid me hold my peace. I pray you all, have hitherto conceal'd this sight; it be tenable in your silence still; whatsoever else shall hap to-night, let it be an understanding, but no tongue: 250

Ham. I require your loves. So, fare you well: in the platform, 'twixt eleven and twelve, visit you.

Laer. Our duty to your honour.

Ham. Your loves, as mine to you: farewell. [Exeunt all but Hamlet.

Laer. Father's spirit in arms! all is not well; sub'th some foul play; whether the night were come? then sit still, my soul! foul deeds will rise, 260 guh all the earth o'erwhelm them, to men's eyes.

Laer. Think it no more: 20

For nature, crescent, does not grow alone
In thews and bulk, but, as this temple waxes,
The inward service of the mind and soul
Grows wide withal. Perhaps he loves you now,
And now no soil nor cautel doth besmirch
The virtue of his will: but you must fear,
His greatness weigh'd, his will is not his own;
For he himself is subject to his birth:
He may not, as unvalued persons do,
Carve for himself; for on his choice depends
The safety and health of this whole state;
And therefore must his choice be circumscribed
Unto the voice and yielding of that body
Whereof he is the head. Then if he says he loves you,
It fits your wisdom so far to believe it
As he in his particular act and place
May give his saying deed; which is no further Than the main voice of Denmark goes withal.
Then weigh what loss your honour may sustain,
If with too credent ear you list his songs, 30
Or lose your heart, or your chaste treasure open
To his unmaster'd importunity.
Fear it, Ophelia, fear it, my dear sister,
And keep you in the rear of your affection,
Out of the shot and danger of desire.
The chariest maid is prodigal enough,
If she unmask her beauty to the moon:
Virtue itself 'scapes not calumnious strokes:
The canker galls the infants of the spring,
Too oft before their buttons be disclosed,
And in the morn and liquid dew of youth
Contagious blamstems are most imminent.
Be wary then; best safety lies in fear:
Youth to itself rebels, though none else near.

Oph. I shall the effect of this good lesson keep,
As watchman to my heart. But, good my brother,
Do not, as some ungracious pastors do,
Show me the steep and thorny way to heaven;
Whiles, like a puff'd and reckless libertine,
Himself the primrose path of dalliance treads,
And recks not his own rede.

Laer. O, fear me not.

I stay too long: but here my father comes.

Enter POLONIUS.

A double blessing is a double grace;
Occasion smiles upon a second leave.

Pol. Yet here, Laertes! aboard, aboard, for shame!
The wind sits in the shoulder of your sail,
And you are stay'd for. There; my blessing with thee!

And these few precepts in thy memory
See thou character. Give thy thoughts no tongue,
Nor any unproportioned thought his act. 60
Be thou familiar, but by no means vulgar.
Those friends thou hast, and their adoption tried,
Grapple them to thy soul with hoops of steel:
But do not dull thy palm with entertainment
Of each new-hatch'd, unfledged comrade. Beware
Of entrance to a quarrel, but being in,
Bear't that the opposed may beware of thee.
Give every man thy ear, but few thy voice:
Take each man's censure, but reserve thy judgment.

Costly thy habit as thy purse can buy,
But not express'd in fancy; rich, not gaudy;
For the apparel oft proclaims the man,
And they in France of the best rank and station
Are of a most select and generous chief in that.
Neither a borrower nor a lender be,
For loan oft loses both itself and friend,
And borrowing dulls the edge of husbandry.
This above all: to thine ownself be true,
And it must follow, as the night the day,
Thou canst not then be false to any man.
Farewell! my blessing season this in thee!

_Laer._ Most humbly do I take my leave, my lord.
_Pol._ The time invites you; go; your servants tend.
_Laer._ Farewell, Ophelia; and remember well
What I have said to you.

_Oph._ Tis in my memory lock'd,
And you yourself shall keep the key of it.

_Laer._ Farewell. [Exit.]

_Pol._ What is't, Ophelia, he hath said to you?

_Oph._ So please you, something touching the Lord Hamlet.

_Pol._ Marry, well bethought:
'Tis told me, he hath very oft of late
Given private time to you; and you yourself
Have of your audience been most free and bounteous:
If it be so, as so 'tis put on me,
And that in way of caution, I must tell you,
You do not understand yourself so clearly
As it behooves my daughter and your honour.
What is between you? give me up the truth.

_Oph._ He hath, my lord, of late made many tenders
Of his affection to me.

_Pol._ Affection! pooh! you speak like a green
girl,
Unsifted in such perilous circumstance.
Do you believe his tenders, as you call them?

_Oph._ I do not know, my lord, what I should think.

_Pol._ Marry, I'll teach you: think yourself a lady;
That you have ta'en these tenders for true pay,
Which are not sterling. Tender yourself more dearly;
Or—not to crack the wind of the poor phrase,
Running it thus—you'll tender me a fool.

_Oph._ My lord, he hath importuned me with love.

In honourable fashion.

_Pol._ Ay, fashion you may call it; go to, go to.

_Oph._ And hath given countenance to his speech, my lord,
With almost all the holy vows of heaven.

_Pol._ Ay, springes to catch woodcocks. I do know,
When the blood burns, how prodigal the soul
Lends the tongue vows: these blazes, daughter,
Giving more light than heat, extinct in both,
Even in their promise, as it is a-making,
You must not take for fire. From this time
Be somewhat scatter of your maiden presence;
Set your entreaties at a higher rate
Than a command to parley. 'For Lord Hamlet,
Believe so much in him, that he is young,
And with a larger tither may he walk
'Tan may be given you: in few, Ophelia,

Do not believe his vows; for they are broke.
Not of that dye which their investments shew;
But mere importators of unholy suits,
Breathing like sanctified and pious bawds,
The better to beguile. This is for all:
I would not, in plain terms, from this time
Have you so slander any moment leisure,
As to give words or talk with the Lord Hamlet.
Look to 't, I charge you: come your ways.

_Oph._ I shall obey, my lord.

_SCENE IV._ The platform.

_Enter Hamlet, Horatio, and Marcell._

_Ham._ The air bites shrewdly; it is very

_Hor._ It is a nipping and an eager air.

_Ham._ What hour now?

_Hor._ I think it lacks of two

_Ham._ No, it is struck.

_Hor._ Indeed? I heard it not: then it is near the season.

Wherein the spirit held his wont to walk.

[A flourish of trumpets, and ordn light off, etc.

What does this mean, my lord?

_Ham._ The king doth wake to-night and to his rouse.

Keeps wassail, and the swaggering up-spr reels;

And, as he drains his draughts of Rhenish do

The kettle-drum and trumpet thus Bray out

The triumph of his pledge.

_Hor._ Is it a custom?

_Ham._ Ay, marry, is't:

But to my mind, though I am native here
And to the manner born, it is a custom
More honour'd in the breach than the observ
This heavy-headed revel east and west
Makes us traduced and tax'd of other nation
They clepe us drunkards, and with swinish pl

Soil our addition; and indeed it takes
From our achievements, though perform'd height,
The pith and marrow of our attribute.
So, oft it chances in particular men,
That for some vicious mole of nature in them
As, in their birth—wherein they are not guilty
Since nature cannot choose his origin—
By the o'er-growth of some complexion,
Oft breaking down the pales and forts of reason
Or by some habit that too much o'er-leavens
The form of plausible manners, that these men
Carrying, I say, the stamp of one defect,
Being nature's livery, or fortune's star,—
Their virtues else—be they as pure as grace;
As infinite as man may undergo—
Shall in the general censure take corruption
From that particular fault: the dram of teale
Doth all the noble substance of a doubt
To his own scandal.

_Hor._ Look, my lord, it comes

_Enter Ghost._

_Ham._ Angels and ministers of grace do us

Be thou a spirit of health or goblin damn'd,
Bring with thee airs from heaven or blasts dell,
Be thy intents wicked or charitable,
HAMLET.

[Scene IV.]

HAMLET. 817

You comest in such a questionable shape
That I will speak to thee: I'll call thee Hamlet,
Over father, royal Dane: O, answer me!
'Tis me not burst in ignorance; but tell
Thy thou canopied hearses, hearsed in death,
Thr burst their cements; why the sepulchre,
Herein we saw thee quietly inter'd,
Thy oped his ponderous and marble jaws,
Cast thee up again. What may this mean,
At thou, dead corse, again in complete steel
Visit'st thus the glimpses of the moon,
Sinking night hideous; and we fools of nature
Horridly to shake our disposition
That thoughts beyond the reaches of our souls
Yet, why is this? wherefore? what should we do?
[Ghost beckons Hamlet.]

For. It beckons you to go away with it,
If some impartialment did desire
You alone.

Look, with what courteous action
It waves you to a more removed ground;
Do not go with it.

No, by no means.

It will not speak; then I will follow it.

Do not, my lord.

Why, what should be the fear?
Thou dost not set my life at a pin's fee;
For, my soul, what can it do to that
An thing immortal as itself?
It waves me forth again; I'll follow it.

What if it tempt you toward the flood,
My lord?
To the dreadful summit of the cliff
It beetles over his base into the sea,
I there assume some other horrible form,
Which might deprive your sovereignty of reason
Draw you into too madness? think of it:
Very place puts toys of desperation,
Hurst more motive, into every brain,
It looks so many fathoms to the sea
I hears it roar beneath.

It waves me still.

O; I'll follow thee.

You shall not go, my lord.

Hold off your hands. 80

Be ruled; you shall not go.

My fate cries out,
I makes each petty artery in this body
Hardy as the Neaman lion's nerve.

I am call'd. Unhand me, gentlemen.
Heaven, I'll make a ghost of him that lets me!
Away! Go on: I'll follow thee.

[Exeunt Ghost and Hamlet.

Or. He waxes desperate with imagination.

Let's follow; 'tis not fit thus to obey
him.

Have after. To what issue will this come?

Something is rotten in the state of Denmark.

Or. Heaven will direct it.

Nay, let's follow him. [Exeunt."

GHOST. 50

I will.

Ghost. My hour is almost come,
When I to sulphurous and tormenting flames
Must render up myself.

Ham. Alas, poor ghost!

Ghost. Pity me not, but lend thy serious hearing
To what I shall unfold.

Ham. Speak: I am bound to hear.

Ghost. So art thou to revenge, when thou shalt hear.

Ham. What?

Ghost. I am thy father's spirit.

Doom'd for a certain term to walk the night,
And for the day confined to fast in fires,
Till the foul crimes done in my days of nature
Are burnt and purged away,

But that I am forbid
To tell the secrets of my prison-house,
I could a tale unfold whose lightest word
Would harrow up thy soul, freeze thy young blood,
Make thy two eyes, like stars, start from their spheres,

Thy knotted and combined locks to part
And each particular hair to stand an end,
Like quills upon the fretful porpentine:
But this eternal blazon must not be
To ears of flesh and blood. List, list, O, list!

If thou didst ever thy dear father love—

Ham. O God!

Ghost. Revenge his foul and most unnatural murder.

Ham. Murder!

Ghost. Murder most foul, as in the best it is;
But this most foul, strange and unnatural.

Ham. Hasten me to know't, that I, with wings as swift
As meditation or the thoughts of love,
May sweep to my revenge.

Ghost. I find thee apt;
And duller shouldst thou be than the fat weed
That roots itself in ease on Lethe wharf,
Wouldst thou not stir in this. Now, Hamlet,

I hear:

'Tis given out that, sleeping in my orchard,
A serpent stung me; so the whole ear of Denmark
Is by a forged process of my death
Rake'dly abused: but know, thou noble youth,
The serpent that did sting thy father's life
Now wears his crown.

Ham. O my prophetic soul! 40

My uncle!

Ghost. Ay, that incestuous, that adulterate

With witchcraft of his wits, with traitorous gifts,—O wicked wit and gifts, that have the power
So to seduce!—won to his shameful lust
The will of my most seeming-virtuous queen:
O Hamlet, what a falling-off was there!
From me, whose love was of that dignity
That it went hand in hand even with the vow
I made to her in marriage, and to decline
Upon a wretch whose natural gifts were poor
To those of mine!
But virtue, as it never will be moved,
Though lewdness court it in a shape of heaven,
So lust, though to a radiant angel link'd,
Will sate itself in a celestial bed,

And prey on garbage.
But, soft! methinks I scent the morning air;
Brief let me be. Sleeping within my orchard,
My custom always of the afternoon,
Upon my secure hour thy uncle stole,
With juice of cursed hebenon in a vial.
And in the porches of my ears did pour
The leprous distillment; whose effect
Holds such an enmity with blood of man
That swift as quicksilver it courses through
The natural gates and alleys of the body,
And with a sudden vigour it doth possess
And curd, like eager droppings into milk,
The thin and wholesome blood: so did it mine;
And a most instant tetter bark'd about,
Most lazar-like, with vile and loathsome crust,
All my smooth body.
Thus was I, sleeping, by a brother's hand
Of life, of crown, of queen, at once dispatch'd:
Cut off even in the blossoms of my sin,
Unhousel'd, disappointed, unanel'd,
No reckoning made, but sent to my account
With all my imperfections on my head:
O, horrible! O, horrible! most horrible!
If thou hast nature in thee, bear it not;
Let not the royal bed of Denmark be
A couch for luxury and damned incest.
But, howsoever thou pursuest this act,
Taint not thy mind, nor let thy soul contrive
Against thy mother aught: leave her to heaven
And to those thorns that in her bosom lodge,
To prick and sting her. Fare thee well at once!
The glow-worm shows the main to be near,
And, to bear a nosegay to his unfeatural fire:
Adieu, adieu! Hamlet, remember me.
[Exit.]

Ham. O all you host of heaven! O earth!
what else?
And shall I couple hell? O, fie! Hold, hold,
my heart;
And you, my sinews, grow not instant old,
But bear me stiffly up. Remember thee!
Ay, thou poor ghost, while memory holds a seat
In this distracted globe. Remember thee!
Yea, from the table of my memory
I'll wipe away all trivial fond records,
All saws of books, all forms, all pressures past,
That youth and observation copied there;
And any commandment all alone shall live
Within the book and volume of my brain,
Unmix'd with baser matter: yes, by heaven!
O most pernicious woman!
O villain, villain, smiling, damned villain!
My tables,—meet it is I set it down,
That one may smile, and smile, and be a villain;
At least I'm sure it may be so in Denmark:
[Writing.]

So, uncle, there you are. Now to my word;
It is 'Adieu, adieu! remember me.'

I have sworn 't.

Mar. [Within] My lord, my lord,— Hor. [Within] Lord Hamlet,—
Ham. So be it!
Hor. [Within] Hillo, ho, ho, my lord!
Ham. Hillo, ho, ho, boy! come, bird, come.

Enter HORATIO and MARCELLUS.

Mar. How'st, my noble lord?
Hor. What news, my lord?

Ham. O, wonderful!
Hor. Good my lord, tell it
Ham. No; you'll reveal it.
Hor. Not I, my lord, by heaven.
Mar. Nor I, my lord.
Ham. How say you, then; would hear man once think it?
But you'll be secret?
Hor.
Mar.
Ham. There's ne'er a villain dwelling in Denmark
But he's an arrant knave.
Hor. There needs no ghost, my lord, or from the grave
To tell us this.

Ham. Why, right; you are i' the right.
And so, without more circumstance at all,
I hold it fit that we shake hands and part:
You, as your business and desire shall point y
For every man has business and desire,
Such as it is; and for mine own poor part,
Look you, I'll go pray.
Hor. These are but wild and whirling wo by my lord.
Ham. I'm sorry they offend you, heartily
Yes, 'faith, heartily.
Hor. There's no offence, my lord.
Ham. Yes, by Saint Patrick, but there
Horatio,
And much offence too. Touching this vision b
It is an honest ghost, that let me tell you:
For your desire to know what is between us,
O'ermaster 't as you may. And now, good frie
As you are friends, scholars and soldiers,
Give me one poor request.
Hor. What's t, my lord? we will.
Ham. Never make known what you have seen to-night.
Hor.
Mar. [Exit.]

Ham. Nay, but swear 't.
Hor. In faith.
My lord, not I.
Mar. Nor I, my lord, in faith.
Ham. Upon my sword.
Mar. We have sworn, my lord, already.
Ham. Indeed, upon my sword, indeed.
Ghost. [Beneath] Swear.
Ham. Ah, ha, boy! say'st thou so? art t
there, truepenny?
Come on—you hear this fellow in the cellar
Consent to swear.
Hor. Propose the oath, my lord.
Ham. Never to speak of this that you have seen,
Swear by my sword.
Ghost. [Beneath] Swear.
Ham. Hic et ubique? then we'll shift ground.
Come hither, gentlemen,
And lay your hands again upon my sword;
Never to speak of this that you have heard,
Swear by my sword.
Ghost. [Beneath] Swear.
Ham. Well said, old mole! canst work i earth so fast?
A worthy pioneer! Once more remove, g friends.
HAMLET.

Hor. O day and night, but this is wondrous strange!

Ham. And therefore as a stranger give it welcome, there are more things in heaven and earth,
Horatio,

than are dreamt of in your philosophy.

I这就 come,
ere, as before, never, so help mercy,
this strange or odd soe'rr I bear myself.
I perchance hereafter shall think meet put an antic disposition on, att you, at such times seeing me, never shall,
itth arms encumber'd thus, or this head-shake,
by pronouncing of some doubtful phrase,
'Well, well, we know,' or 'We could, an if we would.'

'If we list to speak,' or 'There be, an if they might,'
such ambiguous giving out, to note at you know aught of: this not to do, grace and mercy to your most need help you,
war.

GHOST. [Beneath] Swear.

Ham. Rest, rest, perturbed spirit! [They swear.] So, gentlemen, ith all my love I do commend me to you:
d so poor a man as Hamlet is y to, to express his love and friend to you, ning, shall not lack.
their;
dst your fingers on your lips, I pray.
e time is out of joint: O cursed spite,
et ever I was born to set it right!
y, come, let's go together. [Exeunt. 190

ACT II.

SCENE I. A room in Polonius' house.

Enter Polonius and Reynaldo.

Pol. Give him this money and these notes,
Reynaldo.

Rey. I will, my lord.

Pol. You shall do marvellous wisely, good Reynaldo,
for you visit him, to make inquire his behaviour.

Rey. My lord, I did intend it.

Pol. Marry, well said; very well said. Look
you, sir,
quire me first what Danskers are in Paris;
how, and who, and what, and where they keep,
at company, at what expense; and finding this encompassment and drift of question at they do know my son, come you more nearer in your particular demands will touch it:
se, as 'twere, some distant knowledge of
him;
thus, 'I know his father and his friends,
I am part him:' do you mark this, Reynaldo?

Rey. Ay, very well, my lord.

Pol. 'And in part him; but' you may say
'not well:
if 't be he I mean, he's very wild;
lied so and so:' and there put on him at forgeries you please; marry, none so rank may dishonour him; take heed of that;

But, sir, such wanton, wild and usual slips
As are companions noted and most known
To youth and liberty.

Rey. As gaming, my lord.

Pol. Ay, or drinking, fencing, swearing, quarrelling, Drabbing: you may go so far.

Rey. My lord, that would dishonour him.

Pol. 'Faith, no; as you may season it in the charge.

You must not put another scandal on him,
that is open to incontinency;

That's not my meaning: but breathe his faults so quaintly
That they may seem the taints of liberty,
The flash and outbreak of a fiery mind,
A savageness in unreclaimed blood,
Of general assault.

Rey. But, my good lord,—

Pol. Wherefore should you do this?

Rey. Ay, my lord, I would know that.

Pol. Marry, sir, here's my drift;
And, I believe, it is a fetch of wit:
You laying these slight sullies on my son,
As 'twere a thing a little soil'd i' the working,
Mark you,
Your party in converse, him you would sound,
Having ever seen in the prenominate crimes
The youth you breathe of guilty, be assured
He closes with you in this consequence;
'Good sir,' or so, or 'friend,' or 'gentleman,'
According to the phrase or the addition
Of man and country.

Rey. Very good, my lord.

Pol. And then, sir, does he this—he does—what was I about to say? By the mass, I was about to say something: where did I leave? 51 Rey. At 'closes in the consequence,' at 'friend or so,' and 'gentleman.'

Pol. At 'closes in the consequence,' ay, marry:
He closes thus: 'I know the gentleman;
I saw him yesterday, or t'other day,
Or then, or then; with such, or such; and, as you
say,
There was a' gaming: there o'ertook in 'rouse;
There falling out at tennis:' or perchance,
'I saw him enter such a house of sale,'
Videlicit, a brothel, or so forth.

See you now;
Your bait of falsehood takes this carp of truth:
And thus do we of wisdom and of reach,
With windlasses and with assays of bias,
By indirects find directions out:
So by my former lecture and advice,
Shall you my son. You have me, have you not?

Rey. My lord, I have.

Pol. God be wi' you; fare you well.

Rey. Good my lord!

Pol. Observe his inclination in yourself.

Rey. I shall, my lord.

Pol. And let him ply his music.

Rey. Well, my lord.

Pol. Farewell! [Exit Reynaldo.

Enter Ophelia.

How now, Ophelia! what's the matter?

Oph. O, my lord, my lord, I have been so affrighted!
HAMLET.

Pol. With what, 'tis the name of God?

Oph. My lord, as I was sewing in my closet,

Lord Hamlet, with his doublet all unbraced;

No hat upon his head; his stockings foul'd,

Ungarter'd, and down-gyved to his ankle; 80

Pale as his shirt; his knees knocking each other;

And with a look so piteous in purport

As if he had been loosed out of hell

To speak of horrors,—he comes before me.

Pol. Mad for thy love?

Oph. My lord, I do not know;

But truly, I do fear it.

Pol. What said he?

Oph. He took me by the wrist and held me hard;

Then goes he to the length of all his arm;

And, with his other hand thus o'er his brow,

He falls to such perusal of my face

As he would draw it. Long stay'd he so;

At last, a little shaking of mine arm

And thrice his head thus waving up and down,

He rais'd a sigh so piteous and profound

As it did seem to shatter all his bulk

And end his being: that done, he lets me go:

And, with his head over his shoulder turn'd,

He seem'd to find his way without his eyes;

For out o' doors he went without their help,

And, to the last, bended their light on me.

Pol. Come, go with me: I will go seek the king.

This is the very ecstasy of love,

Whose violent property fordoes itself

And leads the will to desperate undertakings

As oft as any passion under heaven

That does afflict our natures. I am sorry.

What have you given him any hard words of late?

Oph. No, my good lord, but, as you did command,

I did repel his letters and denied

His access to me.

Pol. That hath made him mad. I am sorry that with better heed and judgement

I had not quoted him: I fear'd he did but trifle,

And meant to wrench thee; but, beshrew my jealousy!

By heaven, it is as proper to our age

To cast beyond ourselves in our opinions

As it is common for the younger sort

To lack discretion. Come, go we to the king:

This must be known: which, being kept close,

might move

More grief to hide than hate to utter love.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II. A room in the castle.

Enter King, Queen, Rosencrantz, Guilden-stern, and Attendants.

King. Welcome, dear Rosencrantz and Guilden-stern!

Moreover that we much did long to see you,

The need we have to use you did provoke

Our hasty sending. Something have you heard

Of Hamlet's transformation; so call it,

Sith nor the exterior nor the inward man

Resembles that it was. What it should be,

More than his father's death, that thus hath put

him

So much from the understanding of himself,

I cannot dream of: I entreat you both,

That, being of so young days brought up with him

And sit by his youth and havion

That you vouchsafe your rest here in our court

Some little time: so by your companions

To draw him on to pleasures, and to gather,

So much as from occasion you may glean,

Whether aught, to us unknown, afflicts him thou

That, open'd, lies within our remedy.

Queen. Good gentlemen, he hath much talk of

you;

And sure I am two men there are not living

To whom he more adheres. If it will please ye,

To show us so much gentry and good will

As to expend your time with us awhile,

For the supply and profit of our hope,

Your visitation shall receive such thanks

As fits a king's remembrance.

Ros. But we both obey,

And here give up ourselves, in the full bent

To lay our service freely at your feet,

To be commanded.

King. Thanks, Rosencrantz and gentle Guilsencrantz:

And I beseech you instantly to visit

My too much changed son. Go, some of you,

And bring these gentlemen where Hamlet is.

Guil. Heavens make our presence and o practices

Pleasant and helpful to him!

Queen. Ay, amen!

[Exeunt Rosencrantz, Guildenstern, a

some Attendan

Enter Polonius.

Pol. The ambassadors from Norway, my good

lord,

Are joyfully return'd.

King. Thou still hast been the father of go news.

Pol. Have I, my lord? I assure my go liege,

I hold my duty, as I hold my soul,

Both to my God and to my gracious king:

And I do think, or else this brain of mine

Hunts not the trail of policy so sure

As it hath used to do, that I have found

The very cause of Hamlet's lunacy.

King. O, speak of that; that do I long to he

Pol. Give first admittance to the ambassador

My news shall be the fruit to that great feast.

King. Thyself do grace to them, and bri them in.

[Exit Polonius.

Re-enter Polonius, with Voltimand and Cornelius.

Welcome, my good friends.

Say, Voltimand, what from our brother Norw

Voll. Most fair return of greetings and desir pon him first, he sent out to suppress his nephew's levies; which to him appear'd to be a preparation 'gainst the Polack; yet, better look'd into, he truly found was against your highness: whereat grieved, in so his sickness, age and impotence, as falsely borne in hand, sends out arrests a Fortinbras: which he, in brief, obeys; receives rebuke from Norway, and in fine aches now before his uncle never more do give the assay of arms against your majesty. Hereon old Norway, overcome with joy, gives him three thousand crowns in annual fee, and his command to employ those soldiers, levied as before, against the Polack: Thus an entreaty, herein further shown, [Giving a paper. that it might please you to give quiet pass through your dominions for this enterprise, with such regards of safety and allowance as therein are set down. King. It likes us well; at our more consider'd time we'll read, answer, and think upon this business. Elsinore we thank you for your well-look'd labour: to your rest; at night we'll feast together: oost welcome home! [Exeunt Voltimand and Cornelius. Pol. This business is well ended. y liege, and madam, to expostulate hat majesty should be, what duty is, by day is day, night night, and time is time, ere nothing but to waste night, day and time. Wherefore, since brevity is the soul of wit, and tediousness the limbs and outward flourishes, will be brief: your noble son is mad: ad call I it; for, to define true madness, hat is't but to be nothing else but mad? Let let that go. Queen. More matter, with less art. Pol. Madam, I swear I use no art at all. hat he is mad, 'tis true: 'tis true 'tis pity; and pity 'tis 'tis a foolish figure; at farewell it, for I will use no art. ad let us grant him, then; and now remains that we find out the cause of this effect, for either say, the cause of this defect, or this effect defective comes by cause: hus it remains, and the remainder thus. and. have a daughter—have while she is mine—be, in her duty and obedience, mark, ath given me this: now gather, and surprise. [Reads. To the celestial and my soul's idol, the most augustified Ophelia,— hat's an ill phrase, a vile phrase; 'beautified' is vile phrase: but you shall hear. Thus: [Reads. a her excellent white bosom, these, &c. Queen. Came this from Hamlet to her? Pol. Good madam, stay awhile; I will be faithful. [Reads. 'Doubt thou the stars are fire; Doubt that the sun doth move; Doubt truth to be a liar; But never doubt I love. 'O dear Ophelia, I am ill at these numbers; I have not art to reckon my groans: but that I love thee best, O most best, believe it. Adieu. 'Thine evermore, most dear lady, whilst this machine is to him, Hamlet.' This, in obedience, hath my daughter shown me, And more above, hath his solicitings, As they fell out by time, by means and place, All given to mine ear. King. But how hath she Received his love? Pol. What do you think of me? King. As of a man faithful and honourable. Pol. I would fain prove so. But what might you think, When I had seen this hot love on the wing— As I perceived it, I must tell you that, Before my daughter told me—what might you, Or my dear majesty your queen here, think, If I had play'd the desk or table-book, Or given my heart a winking, mute and dumb, Or look'd upon this love with idle sight; What might you think? No, I went round to work, And my young mistress thus I did bespeak: 'Lord Hamlet is a prince, out of thy star; This must not be;' and then I precepts gave her, That she should lock herself from his resort, Admit no messengers, receive no tokens; Which done, she took the fruits of my advice; And he, repulsed—a short tale to make— Fell into a sadness, then into a fast, Thence to a watch, thence into a weakness, Thence to a lightness, and, by this declension, Into the madness wherein now he raves, And all we mourn for time. Do you think 'tis this? Queen. It may be, very likely. Pol. Hath there been such a time—I'd fain know that— That I have positively said 'Tis so,' When it proved otherwise? King. Not that I know. Pol. [Pointing to his head and shoulder] Take this from this, if this be otherwise: If circumstances lead me, I will find Where truth is hid, though it were hid: indeed Within the centre. King. How may we try it further? Pol. You know, sometimes he walks four hours together Here in the lobby. Queen. So he does indeed. Pol. At such a time I'll loose my daughter to him: Be you and I behind an arras then; Mark the encounter: if he love her not And be not from his reason fall thereon, Let me be no assistant for a state, But keep a farm and carters. King. We will try it. Queen. But, look, where sadly the poor wretch a comes reading. Pol. Away, I do beseech you, both away: I'll board him presently. [Exeunt King, Queen, and Attendants. Enter Hamlet, reading. O, give me leave: How does my good Lord Hamlet? Ham. Well, God-a-mercy.
Pol. Do you know me, my lord?
Ham. Excellent well; you are a fishmonger.
Pol. Not I, my lord.
Ham. Then I would you were so honest a man.
Pol. Honest, my lord!
Ham. Ay, sir; to be honest, as this world goes, is to be one man picked out of ten thousand.
Pol. That's very true, my lord. 150
Ham. For if the sun breed maggots in a dead dog, being a god kissing carrion,—Have you a daughter?
Pol. I have my lord.
Ham. Let her not walk i' the sun: conception is a blessing; but not as your daughter may conceive. Friend, look to 't.
Pol. [Aside] How say you by that? Still harping on my daughter: yet he knew me not at first; he said I was a fishmonger: he is far gone, far gone: and truly in my youth I suffered much extremity for love; very near this. I'll speak to him again. What do you read, my lord?
Ham. Words, words, words.
Pol. What is the matter, my lord?
Ham. Between who?
Pol. Mean, the matter that you read, my lord.
Ham. Slanders, sir: for the satirical rogue says here that old men have grey beards, that their faces are wrinkled, their eyes perceiving thick amber and plum-tree gum and that they have a plentiful lack of wit, together with most weak hams: all which, sir, though I most powerfully and potently believe, yet I hold it not honesty to have it thus set down, for yourself, sir, should be old as I am, if like a crab you could go backward.
Pol. [Aside] Though this be madness, yet there is method in 't. Will you walk out of the air, my lord?
Ham. Into my grave. 210
Pol. Indeed, that is out o' the air. [Aside] How pregnant sometimes his replies are! a happiness that often madness hits on, which reason and sanity could not so prosperously be delivered of. I will leave him, and suddenly contrive the means of meeting between him and my daughter.—My honourable lord, I will most humbly take my leave of you.
Ham. You cannot, sir, take from me any thing that I will more willingly part withal: except my life, except my life, except my life. 222
Pol. Fare you well, my lord.
Ham. These tedious old fools!

Enter Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.
Pol. You go to seek the Lord Hamlet; there he is.
Ros. [To Polonius] God save you, sir!
[Exit Polonius.

Guil. My honoured lord!
Ros. My most dear lord!
Ham. My excellent good friends! How dost thou, Guildenstern? Ah, Rosencrantz! Good lads, how do ye both?
Ros. As the indifferent children of the earth.
Guil. Happy, in that we are not over-happy; On fortune's cap we are not the very button.
Ham. Nor the soles of her shoe?
Ros. Nor her, my lord.
Ham. Then you live about her waist, or in the middle of her favours?
the king and queen mould no feather. I have of — but wherefore I I lost all my mirth, as one all custom of exercises; and indeed it so heavily with my disposition that this ony frame, the earth, seems to me a sterile onty, this most excellent canopy, the air,

Ros. I, your brave or'hering firmament, this stiffest roof fretted with golden fire, why, it po no other thing to me than a foul and haent congregation of vapours. What a piece work is a man! how noble in reason! how infi-ience in faculty! in form and moving how ex-# admirable! in action how like an angel!
prehension how like a god! the beauty of world! the paragon of animals! And yet, to what is this quintessence of dust? man delights me: no, nor woman neither, though by your iling you seem to say so.

Ros. My lord, there was no such stuff in my ights.

Ham. Why did you laugh then, when I said an delights not me?—

To think on, my lord, if you delight not in a, what lenten entertainment the players shall give you: we cotred them on the way; if hither are they coming, to offer you service.

Ham. He that plays the king shall be welcome;
royalty shall have tribute of me; the adven-ous knight shall use his foil and target; the shall not sigh gratis; the humorous man ll end his part in peace; the clown shall make see laugh whose lungs are tickled o' the sere;
I, the lady shall say her mind freely, or the n verse shall halt for't. What players are this. Even those you were wont to take delight the tragedians of the city.

Ham. How chances it they travel? their resi-ence, both in reputation and profit, was better by ways.

Ros. I think their inhibition comes by the ams of the late innovation.

Do they hold the same estimation they when I was in the city? are they so fol-

Ros. No, indeed, are they not.

Ham. How comes it? do they grow rusty?—
Ros. Nay, their endeavours keeps in the ied pace: but there is, sir, an aery of chillittle eyases, that cry out on the top of ation, and are most tyrannically clapped for't:
ere are now the fashion, and so berattle the mamon stages—so they call them—that many ing rapiers are afraid of goose-quills and c scarce come thither.

Ham. What, are they children? who main-are 'em? how are they escoted? Will they use the quality no longer than they can sing?
not they say afterwards, if they should grow se themselves to common players—as it is most like, ir means are no better—their writers do them ong, to make them exclain against their own mission?

Ros. 'Faith, there has been much to do on sides; and the nation holds it no sin to tarre
m to controversy: there was, for a while, no ey bid for argument, unless the poet and the year went to cuffs in the question.

Ham. Is't possible?

Guil. O, there has been much throwing about of brains.

Ham. Do the boys carry it away?

Ros. Ay, that they do, my lord; Hercules and his load too.

Ham. It is not very strange; for mine uncle king of Denmark, and those that would make s at him while my father lived, give twenty, forty, fifty, an hundred ducats a-piece for his picture little. 'Sblood, there is something in this more natural, if philosophy could find it out.

Flourish of trumpets within.

Guil. There are the players.

Ham. Gentlemen, you are welcome to Elsa-ore. Your hands, come then: the appurtenace of welcome is fashion and ceremony: let me omply with you in this garb, lest my extent to the players, which, I tell you, must show fairly ward, should more appear like entertainment than yours. You are welcome; but my uncle-father and aunt-mother are deceived.

Guil. In what, my dear lord?

Ham. I am but mad north-north-west: when the wind is southerly I know a hawk from a der.

Enter Polonius.

Pol. Well be with you, gentlemen!

Ham. Hark you, Guildenstern; and you too;
at each ear a hearer; that great baby you see there is not yet out of his swaddling-clouts.

Ros. Happily he's the second time come to them; for they say an old man is twice a child.

Ham. I will prophesy he comes to tell me of the players; mark it. You say right, sir! o'Mon-day morning: 'twas so indeed.

Pol. My lord, I have news to tell you.

Ham. My lord, I have news to tell you.

When Roscius was an actor in Rome,—

Pol. The actors are come hither, my lord.

Ham. Buzz, buzz!

Pol. Upon my honour,—

Ham. Then came each actor on his ass,—

Pol. The best actors in the world, either for tragedy, comedy, history, pastoral, pastoralcomical, history-pastoral, tragical-historical, tragical-comical-historical-pastoral, scene individable, or poem unlimited: Seneca cannot be too heavy, nor Plautus too light. For the law of and the liberty, these are the only men. 42x

Ham. O Jephthah, judge of Israel, what a treasure hadst thou!

Pol. What a treasure had he, my lord?

Ham. Why,

'One fair daughter, and no more,
Which he loved passing well.'—

Pol. [Aside] Still on my daughter.

Ham. Am I not 't the right, old Jephthah?

Pol. If you call me Jephthah, my lord, I have a daughter that I love passing well.

Ham. Nay, that follows not.

Pol. What follows, then, my lord?

Ham. Why

'As by lot, God wot,'—
and then, you know,

'IT came to pass, as most like it was,—'
the first row of the pious chanson will show you more; for look, where my abridgement con-

[Aside]
Enter four or five Players.

You are welcome, masters; welcome, all. I am glad to see thee well. Welcome, good friends. O, my old friend! thy face is valanced since I saw thee last: comest thou to hear me in Denmark? What, my young lady and mistress! By' th' lady, thy ladyship is nearer to heaven than when I saw you last, by the altitude of a chopine. Pray God, your voice, like a piece of uncurrent gold, be not cracked within the ring. Masters, you are all welcome. We'll e'en to't like French falconers, fly at any thing we see: we'll have a speech straight: come, give us a taste of your quality; come, a passionate speech.

First Play. What speech, my lord?

Ham. I heard thee speak me a speech once, but it was never acted; or, if it was, not above once: for the play, I remember, pleased not the million; 'twas caviare to the general: but it was—as I received it, and others, whose judgments in such matters cried in the top of mine—an excellent play, well digested in the scenes, set down with as much modesty as cunning. I remember, one said there were no sallies in the lines to make the matter savoury, nor no matter in the phrase that might indict the author of affecation; but called it an honest method, as wholesome as sweet, and by very much more handsome than fine. One speech in it I could not love: 'twas End of Doe: and thereabout of it especially, where he speaks of Priam's slaughter: if it live in your memory, begin at this line: let me see, let me see—

'The rugged Pyrrhus, like the Hyrcanian beast,'—it is not so: it begins with Pyrrhus:

'The rugged Pyrrhus, he whose sable arms, Black as his purpose, did the night resemble When he lay couched in the ominous horse, Hath now this dread and black complexion smeard With heraldry more dismal: head to foot Now is he total gules; horribly trick'd With blood of fathers, mothers, sons, daughters, Pyrrhus was impast with the parching streets, That lend a tyrannous and damned light To their lord's murderers: roasting in wrath and fire, And thus o'er-sized with coagulate gore, With eyes like carbuncles, the hellish Pyrrhus Old grand sire Priam seek.'s.

So, proceed you.

Pol. 'Torrude, my lord, well spoken, with good accent and good discretion. First Play. 'Anon he finds him Striking too short at Greeks: his antique sword, Rebellious to his arm, lies where it falls. Repugnant to command: unequal mach'd, Pyrrhus at Priam drives; in rage strikes wide; But with the whiff and wind of his fell sword The unnerved father falls. Then senseless Ilion, Seeming to feel this blow, with flaming top Stoops to his base, and with a hideous crash Takes prisoner Pyrrhus: so ear; for, lo! his sword, Which was declining on the milky head Of reverend Priam, seem'd: the air to stick: So, as a painted tyrant, Priamus stood, And like a neutral to his will and matter, Did nothing. But, as we often see, against some storm, A silence in the heavens, the rack stand still, The bold winds speechless and the orb below As hush as death, anon the dreadful thunder Doth rend the region, so, after Pyrrhus' parts Aroused vengeance sets him new a-work; And never did the Cyclops' hammers fall On Mars' armour forged for proof etern With less remorse than Pyrrhus' bleeding swoon Now falls on Priam.

Out, out, thou strumpet, Fortune! All ye gods, In general synod, take away her power; Break all the spokes and stellies from her wheels And bow the round have down the hill heaven, As low as to the fiends!

Pol. This is too long. First Play. 'Tis too long.

Ham. It shall to the barber's, with your beard Frithee, say, on: he's for a jig or a tale of bawdy or sleep: say on: come to Hecuba.

First Play. But who, O, who, that had seen the mobled queen—

Ham. 'The mobled queen?'

Pol. That's good: 'mobled queen' is good.

First Play. Run barefoot up and down theremoing the flames With bisson rheum: a clout upon that head Where late the diadem stood, and for a robe About her lank and all o'er-teemed loins, A blanket, in the alarm of fear caught up! Who this had seen, with tongue in vein steep'd, 'Gainst Fortune's state would reason have pronounced:

But if the gods themselves did see her then When she saw Pyrrhus make malicious spore In mincing with his sword her husband's limb The instant burst of clamour that she made, Unless things mortal move them not at all. Would have made milch the burning eyes heaven, And passion in the gods.'

Pol. Look, whether he has not turned the colour and has tears in his eyes. Pray you, more.

Ham. 'Tis well; I'll have thee speak out at rest soon. Good my lord, will you see the players well bestowed? Do you hear, let the be well used; for they are the abstract and chronicles of the time: after your death you will better have a bad epitaph than their ill report while you live. Pol. My lord, I will use them according their desert.

Ham. God's bodykins, man, much better use every man after his desert, and who should 'scape whipping? Use them after your own honour and dignity: the less they deserve, the more merit is in your bounty. Take them in.

Pol. Come, sirs.

Ham. Follow him, friends: we'll hear a play to-morrow. [Exit Polonius with all the Play but the First.] Dost thou hear me, old friar? can you play the Murder of Gonzago?

First Play. Ay, my lord.

Ham. We'll ha' t to-morrow night. You could, for a need, study a speech of some do
To assume a pleasing shape: yea, and perhaps
Out of my weakness and my melancholy,
As he is very potent with such spirits,
Abuses me to damn me: I'll have grounds
More relative than this: the play's the thing
Wherein I'll catch the conscience of the king.

[Exit.

ACT III.

SCENE I. A room in the castle.

Enter King, Queen, Polonius, Ophelia, Rosencrantz, and Guildenstern.

King. And can you, by no drift of circumstance,
Get from him why he puts on this confusion,
Grating so harshly all his days of quiet
With turbulent and dangerous lunacy?
Ros. He does confess he feels himself distracted;
But from what cause he will by no means speak.
Guil. Nor do we find him forward to be sounded,
But, with a crafty madness, keeps aloof,
When we would bring him on to some confession
Of his true state.
Queen. Did he receive you well?
Ros. Most like a gentleman.
Guil. But with much forcing of his disposition.
Ros. Niggar'd of question; but, of our demands,
Most free in his reply.
Queen. Did you assay him
To any pastime?
Ros. Madam, it so fell out, that certain players
We o'er-raft on the way: of these we told him;
And there did seem in him a kind of joy
To hear of it: they are about the court,
And, as I think, they have already order
This night to play before him.
Pol. "Tis most true:
And he beseech'd me to entreat your majesties
To hear and see the matter.
King. With all my heart; and it doth much content me
To hear him so inclined.
Good gentlemen, give him a further edge,
And drive his purpose on to these delights.
Ros. We shall, my lord.

[Exeunt Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.

King. Sweet Gertrude, leave us two;
For we have closely sent for Hamlet hither,
That he, as 'were by accident, may here
Affront Ophelia:
Her father and myself, lawful espials,
Will so bestow ourselves that, seeing, unseen,
We may of their encounter frankly judge,
And gather by him, as he is behaved,
If 't be the affliction of his love or no
That thus he suffers.
Queen. I shall obey you.
And for your part, Ophelia, I do wish
That your good beauties be the happy cause
Of Hamlet's wildness: so shall I hope your virtues
Will bring him to his wonted way again,
To both your honours.
Oph. Madam, I wish it may. [Exit Queen.

HAMEL'T.

SCENE II.

HAMLET.

To assume a pleasing shape: yea, and perhaps
Out of my weakness and my melancholy,
As he is very potent with such spirits,
Abuses me to damn me: I'll have grounds
More relative than this: the play's the thing
Wherein I'll catch the conscience of the king.
Pol. Ophelia, walk you here. Gracious, so please you.
We will be brief ourselves. [To Ophelia] Read on this book;
That show of such an exercise may colour
Your loneliness. We are oft to blame in this,—
'Tis too much proved—that with devotion's visage
And pious action we do sugar o'er
The devil himself.
King. [Aside] O, 'tis too true!
How smart a lash that speech doth give my conscience!
The harlot's cheek, beautied with plaiting art,
Is not more ugly to the thing that helps it
Than is my deed to my most painted word;
O heavy burthen!
Pol. I hear him coming; let's withdraw, my lord.
[Exeunt King and Polonius.

Enter Hamlet.

Ham. To be, or not to be: that is the question:
Whether 'tis nobler in the mind to suffer
The tempests and arrows of outrageous fortune,
Or to take arms against a sea of troubles,
And by opposing end them? To die: to sleep; 60
No more; and by a sleep to say we end
The heart-ache and the thousand natural shocks
That flesh is heir to, 'tis a consummation
Devoutly to be wished. To die; to sleep;
To sleep: perchance to dream: ay, there's the rub;
For in that sleep of death what dreams may come
When we have shuffled off this mortal coil,
Must give us pause: there's the respect
That makes calamity of so long life;
For who would bear the whips and scorns of time,
The oppressor's wrong, the proud man's contumely,
The pangs of despised love, the law's delay,
The insolence of office and the spurns
That patient merit of the unworthy takes,
When he himself might his quietus make
With a bare bodkin? who would fardels bear,
To grunt and sweat under a weary life,
But that the dread of something after death,
The undiscover'd country from whose bourn
No traveller returns, puzzles the will
And makes us rather bear those ills we have Than fly to others that we know not of?
Thus conscience does make cowards of us all;
And thus the native hue of resolution
Is sicklied o'er with the pale cast of thought,
And enterprises of great pith and moment
With this regard their currents turn awry,
And lose the name of action.—Soft you now!
The fair Ophelia! Nymph, in thy orisons
Be all my sins remember'd.
Oph. Good my lord,
How does your honour for this many a day?
Ham. I humbly yield you; well, well, well.
Oph. My lord, I have remembrances of yours,
That I have longed long to re-deliver;
I pray you, now receive them.
Ham. No, not I; I never gave you aught.
Oph. My honour'd lord, you know right well you did;
And, with them, words of so sweet breath compos'd
As made the things more rich: their perfumes lost
Take these again; for to the noble mind
Rich gifts wax poor when givers prove unkind.
There, my lord.
Ham. Ha, ha! are you honest?
Oph. My lord?
Ham. Are you fair?
Oph. What means your lordship?
Ham. That if you be honest and fair, you honesty should admit no discourse to your beauty
Oph. Could beauty, my lord, have better commerce than with honesty?
Ham. Ay, truly; for the power of beauty
Will sooner transform honesty from what it is to bawd than the force of honesty can transplant beauty into his likeness: this was sometime paradox, but now the time gives it proof. I do love you once.
Oph. [Indeed, my lord, you made me believe so;
but you should not have believed me; for virtue cannot so inoculate our old stock but we shall relish of it: I loved you not.
Oph. I was the more deceived.
Ham. Get thee to a nunnery: why shouldst thou be a breeder of sinners? I am myself in different honest; but yet I could accuse me such things, that it were better my mother had not borne me: I am very proud, revengeful, an bitterious, with more offences at my beck than have thoughts to put them in, imagination to give them shape, or time to act them in. What should such fellows as I do crawling between earth an heaven? We are arrant knaves, all; believe none of us. Go thy ways to a nunnery. Where your father?
Oph. At home, my lord.
Ham. Let the doors be shut upon him, that he may play the fool no where but in's own house.
Farewell.
Oph. O, help him, you sweet heavens!
Ham. If thou dost marry, I'll give thee the plague for thy dowry: be thou as chaste as ice, as pure as snow, thou shalt not escape calumny.
Get thee to a nunnery, go: farewell. Or, if the wilt needs marry, marry a fool; for wise men know well enough what monsters you make them. To a nunnery, go, and quickly to Farewell.
Oph. O heavenly powers, restore him!
Ham. I have heard of your paintings to well enough; God has given you one face, at make you yourselves another: you jig, ye amble, and you lisp, and nick-name God's cre
tures, and make your wantonness your ignorance.
Go to, I'll no more on't; it hath made me mad.
I say, we will have no more marriages: those that are married already, all but one, shall live the rest shall keep as they are. To a nunner
Oph. O, what a noble mind is here o'erthrown!
The courtier's, soldier's, scholar's, eye, tongue;
The expectation and rose of the fair state,
The glass of fashion and the mould of form,
The observed of all observers, quite, quite down
And I, of ladies most deject and wretched,
That suck'd the honey of his music vows, ow see that noble and most sovereign reason, like sweet bells jangled, out of tune and harsh; that unmatch'd form and feature of blown youth; austed with ecstasy: O, woe is me, have seen what I have seen, see what I see!

Re-enter King and Polonius.

King. Love! his affections do not that way tend; or what he spake, though it lack'd form a little, as not like madness. There's something in his soul, er which his melancholy sits on brood; id if I do doubt the hatch and the disclose ill be some danger: which for to prevent, save in quick determination.

Pol. It shall do well: but yet do I believe the origin and commencement of his grief rung from neglected love. How now, Ophelia! u need not tell us what Lord Hamlet said; heard it all. My lord, do as you please; if you hold it fit, after the play his question all alone entertain him show his grief: let her be round with him; I'll be placed, so please you, in the ear all their conference. If she find him not, England send him, or confine him where ur wisdom best shall think.

King. It shall be so: illness in great ones must not unwatch'd go.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II. A hall in the castle.

Enter Hamlet and Players.

Ham. Speak the speech, I pray you, as I anointed it to you, trippingly on the tongue: if you mouth it, as many of your players do, as the town-crier spoke my lines. Nor not saw the air too much with your hand, s but use all; for in the very torrent, set, and, as I may say, the whirlwind of action, you must acquire and beget a temper that may give it smoothness. O, it offends to the soul to hear a robustus periwig-pated o'er a passion to tatters, to very rags, to the ears of the groundlings, who for the most of are capable of nothing but inexplicable mu-shows and noise: I would have such a ow whipped for o'erdoing Termagant: it outwits Heron: pray you, avoid it.

First Play. I warrant your honour.

Ham. Be not too tame neither, but let your discretion be your tutor; suit the action to the word, the word to the action; with this spec-observance, that you o'erstep not the modesty nature: for any thing so overdone is from the pose of playing, whose end, both at the first now, was and is, to hold, as 'twere, the mirror to nature; to show virtue her own feature, ru her own image, and the very age and body of the time his form and pressure. Now this overdone, or come tardy off, though it make the unskillful laugh, cannot but make the judicious grieve; the censure of the which one must in your allowance o'erweigh a whole theatre of others. O, there be players that I have seen play, and heard others praise, and that highly, not to speak it profanely, that, neither having the accent of Christians nor the gait of Christian, pagan, nor man, have so strutt'd and bellow'd that I have thought some of nature's journeymen had made men and not made them well, they imitated humanity so abominably.

First Play. I hope we have reformed that differently with us, sir.

Ham. O, reform it altogether. And let those that play your clowns speak no more than is set down for them; for there be of them that will themselves laugh, to set on some quantity of barren spectators to laugh too; though, in the mean time, some necessary question of the play be then to be considered; that's villainous, and shows a most pitiful ambition in the fool that uses it. Go, make you ready. [Exeunt Players.

Enter Polonius, Rosencrantz, and Guildenstern.

How now, my lord! will the king hear this piece of work?

Pol. And the queen too, and that presently.

Ham. Bid the players make haste. [Exit Polonius.] Will you two help to hasten them?

Ros. We will, my lord.

[Exeunt Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.

Ham. What ho! Horatio!

Enter Horatio.

Hor. Here, sweet lord, at your service.

Ham. Horatio, thou art e'en as just a man As e'er my conversation coped withal.

Hor. O, my dear lord,—

Ham. Nay, do not think I flatter; For what advancement may I hope from thee That no revenue hast but thy good spirits, To feed and clothe thee? Why should the poor be flatter'd?

No, let the candied tongue lick absolute pomp, And crook the pregnant hinges of the knee Where thrift may follow fawning. Dost thou hear?

Since my dear soul was mistress of her choice And could of men distinguish, her election Hath seal'd thee for herself; for thou hast been As one, in suffering all, that suffers nothing, A man that fortune's buffets and rewards Hast ta'en with equal thanks: and blest are those Whose blood and judgement are so well commingled, That they are not a pipe for fortune's finger To sound what stop she please. Give me that man That is not passion's slave, and I will wear him In my heart's core, ay, in my heart of heart, As I do thee.—Something too much of this.— There is a play to-night before the king; One scene of it comes near the circumstance Which I have told thee of my father's death.
I prithee, when thou seest that act afoot,
Even with the very comment of thy soul
Observe mine uncle: if his occulted guilt
Do not itself unkennel in one speech,
It is a damned ghost that we have seen,
And my imaginations are as foul
As Vulcan’s stithy. Give him heedful note;
For I mine eyes will rivet to his face,
And after we will both our judgements join
In censure of his seeming.

Hor. I prithee, well, my lord:
If he steal aught the whilst this play is playing,
And 'scape detecting, I will pay the theft.
Ham. They are coming to the play; I must be idle:
Get you a place.

Danish March. A Flourish. Enter King, Queen,
Polonius, Ophelia, Rosencrantz, Guildenstern, and others.

King. How fares our cousin Hamlet?

Ham. Excellent, i’ faith; of the chameleon’s dish: I cat the air, promise-crammed: you cannot feed capons so.

King. I have nothing with this answer, Hamlet; these words are not mine.

Ham. No, nor mine now. [To Polonius] My lord, you played once i’ the university, you say?
Pol. That did I, my lord; and was accounted a good actor.

Ham. What did you enact?

Pol. I did enact Julius Caesar: I was killed i’ the Capitol: Brutus killed me.

Ham. It was a brute part of him to kill so capital a calf there. Be the players ready?

Ros. Ay, my lord; they stay upon your patience.

Queen. Come hither, my dear Hamlet, sit by me.

Ham. No, good mother, here’s metal more attractive.

Pol. [To the King] O, ho! do you mark that?

Ham. Lady, shall I lie in your lap?
[Lying down on Ophelia’s feet.

Oph. No, my lord.

Ham. I mean, my head upon your lap?

Oph. Nay, my lord.

Ham. Do you think I meant country matters?

Oph. I think nothing, my lord.

Ham. That’s a fair thought to lie between maids’ legs.

Oph. What is, my lord?

Ham. Nothing.

Oph. You are merry, my lord.

Ham. Who, I?

Oph. Ay, my lord.

Ham. O God, your only jig-maker. What should a man do but be merry? for, look you, how cheerfully my mother looks, and my father died within these two hours.

Oph. Nay, ‘tis twice two months, my lord.

Ham. So long? Nay then, let the devil wear black, for I’ll have a suit of sables. O heavens! die two months ago, and not forgotten yet? Then there’s hope a great man’s memory may outlive his life half a year: but, by’r lady, he must build churches, that, or else shall he suffer not thinking on, with the hobby-horse, whose epitaph is ‘For, O, for, O, the hobby-horse forgot.’

Hautboys play. The dumb-show enters.

Enter a King and a Queen very lovingly;
Queen embracing him, and he her. He kneels, and makes show of protestation in him. He takes her up, and declines his headset her neck: lays him down upon a bank of flowers: she, seeing him asleep, leaves him. Anon comes a fellow, takes off his crown, kisses it, and pours poison in the King’s ear and exits. The Queen returns; finds King dead, and makes passionate action. I Poisoner, with some two or three Mutineers in again, seeming to lament with her.
The dead body is carried away. The Poisoner vows the Queen with gifts: she seems both unwilling and unwilling, but in the end accedes his love.

[Exeunt]

Oph. What means this, my lord?

Ham. Marry, this is michting mallecho; means mischief.

Oph. Belike this show imports the argument of the play.

Enter Prologue.

Ham. We shall know by this fellow: players cannot keep counsel; they’ll tell all.

Oph. Will he tell us what this show meant?

Ham. Ay, or any show that you'll show; for he is ashamed to show, he’ll not shame tell you what it means.

Oph. You are naught, you are naught; mark the play.

Pro. For us, and for our tragedy,
Here stooping to your clemency,
We beg your hearing patiently.

Ham. Is this a prologue, or the posy of a ring?

Oph. ’Tis brief, my lord.

Ham. As woman’s love.

Enter two Players, King and Queen.

P. King. Full thirty times hath Phoebus’ chariot gone round.

Neptune, bathe wash and Tellus’ orbred gown.

And thirty dozen moons with borrow’d shee.

About the world have times twelve thirties be.

Since love our hearts and Hymen did our hand.

Unite commutual in most sacred bands.

P. Queen. So many journeys may the sun and moon.

Make us again count o’er ere love be done.

But, woe is me, you are so sick of late,

So far from cheer and from your former state.

That I distrust you. Yet, though I distrust,

Discomfort you, my lord, it nothing must.

For women’s fear and love holds quantity;

In neither aught, or in extremity.

Now, what my love is, proof hath made you

know;

And as my love is sized, my fear is so:

Where love is great, the littlest doubts are

Where little fears grow great, great love grows

there.

P. King. ’Faith, I must leave thee, lady, and shortly too;

My operant powers their functions leave to
And thou shalt live in this fair world behind, Honour'd, beloved: and haply one as kind For shalst thou—

_P. Queen._ O, confound the rest! Such love must needs be treason in my breast: in second husband let me be accurst! 189 None wed the second but who kill'd the first._

_P. Queen._ The instances that second marriage move
Are base respects of thrift, but none of love: a second time I must my husband dead, When second husband kisses me in bed._

_P. King._ I do believe you think what now you speak; But what we do determine oft we break.

_P. Queen._ Purpose is but the slave to memory, Of violent birth, but poor validity: Which now, like fruit unripe, sticks on the tree; But fall, unshaken, when they mellow be. Just necessary 'tis that we forget To pay ourselves what to ourselves is debt: What to ourselves in passion we propose, The passion ending, doth the purpose lose. The violence of either grief or joy

_Teat._ Their own enacts with themselves destroy: Where joy most revels, grief doth most lament; Brief joys, joy grieves, on slender accident.

_P. Queen._ His world is not for aye, nor 'tis not strange That even our loves should with our fortunes change;

_P. Queen._ Or 'tis a question left us yet to prove, Whether love lead fortune, or else fortune love. He great man down, you mark his favourite flies; The poor advanced makes friends of enemies. And hither doth love fortune on tender; Or who not needs shall never lack a friend, And who in want a hollow friend doth try, Directly seasons him his enemy. But, orderly to end where I begun, Your words and fates do so contrary, That our devices still are overthrown; Our thoughts are ours, their ends none of our own:

_P. Queen._ Think thou wilt no second husband wed; But die thy thoughts when thy first lord is dead.

_P. Queen._ Nor earth to me give food, nor

_P. King._ Heavenly light! Port and repose lock from me day and night! O desperation turn my trust and hope! An anchor's cheer in prison be my scope! Each opposite that blanks the face of joy 230 Feet what I would have well and it destroy! With here and hence pursue me lasting strife, If once a widow, ever I be wise.

_P. Queen._ If she should break it now!

_P. King._ 'Tis deeply sworn. Sweet, leave me here awhile; My spirits grow dull, and faint I would beguile The tedious day with sleep._

_P. Queen._ Sleep rock thy brain; and never come mischance between us twain! [Exit._

_P. Queen._ Madam, how like you this play? 239 O. The lady protests too much, methinks.

_P. Queen._ O, but she'll keep her word.

_P. King._ That you heard the argument? Is he no offence in't?

_Ham._ No, no, they do but jest, poison in jest; no offence in't the world.

_King._ What do you call the play?

_Ham._ The Mouse-trap. Marry, how? Tropically. This play is the image of a murder done in Vienna: Gonzago is the duke's name; his wife, Bapista: you shall see anon; 'tis a knavish piece of work: but what of that? your majesty and we that have free souls, it touches us not: let the galled jade wince, our widers are unwrung.

_Enter Lucianus._

This is one Lucianus, nephew to the king._

_Oph._ You are as good as a chorus, my lord._

_Ham._ I could interpret between you and your love, if I could see the puppets dallying._

_Oph._ You are keen, my lord, you are keen._

_Ham._ It would cost you a groaning to take off my edge._

_Oph._ Still better, and worse._

_Ham._ So you must take your husbands. Begin, murderer: pox, leave thy damnable faces, and begin. Come: 'the craking raven doth bellow for revenge.'

_Luc._ Thoughts black, hands apt, drugs fit, and time agreeing;

Confederate season, else no creature seeing; Thou mixture rank, of midnight weeds collected, With Hecate's ban thrice blasted, thrice infected, Thy natural magic and dire property, On wholesome life usurp immediately._

_P. Queen._ Pours the poison into the sleeper's ears._

_Ham._ He poisons him i' the garden for's estate. His name's Gonzago: the story is extant, and writ in choice Italian: you shall see anon how the murderer gets the love of Gonzago's wife._

_Oph._ The king rises._

_Ham._ What, frightened with false fire!_ All._ Give me some light: away! 280

_Luc._ Give me some light: a light! 280

_Ham._ Why, let the stricken deer go weep, The hart ungalled play; For some much watch, while some must sleep._

So runs the world away._

Would not this, sir, and a forest of feathers—if the rest of my fortunes turn Turk with me—with two Provincial roses on my razed shoes, get me a fellowship in a cry of players, sir?_ 290

_Ham._ A whole one, I._

_For thou dost know, O Damon dear, This realm dismantled was._

_Ham._ Of love himself; and now reigns here._

_A very, very—pajock._

_Ham._ You might have rhymed._

_Ham._ O good Horatio, I'll take the ghost's word for a thousand pound. Didst perceive?_ 300

_Hor._ Very well, my lord._

_Ham._ Upon the talk of the poisoning._

_Hor._ I did very well note him._

_Ham._ Ah, ha! Come, some music! come, the recorders! For if the king like not the comedy, Why then, belike, he likes it not, perdy. Come, some music!
Re-enter Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.

Guil. Good my lord, vouchsafe me a word with you.

Ham. Sir, a whole history.

Guil. The king, sir,—

Ham. Ay, sir, what of him?

Guil. Is in his retirement marvellous distempered.

Ham. With drink, sir?

Guil. No, my lord, rather with choler.

Ham. Your wisdom should show itself more richer to signify this to his doctor; for, for me to put him to his purgation would perhaps plunge him into far more choler.

Guil. Good my lord, put your discourse into some frame and start not so wildly from my affair.

Ham. I am tame, sir: pronounce.

Guil. The queen, your mother, in most great affliction of spirit, hath sent me to you.

Ham. You are welcome.

Guil. Nay, good my lord, this courtesy is not of the right breed. If it shall please you to make me a wholesome answer, I will do your mother's commandment: if not, your pardon and my return shall be the end of my business.

Ham. Sir, I cannot.

Guil. What, my lord?

Ham. Make you a wholesome answer; my wit's diseased: but, sir, such answer as I can make, you shall command; or, rather, as you say, my mother; therefore no more, but to the matter: my mother, you say,—

Ros. Then thus she says; your behaviour hath struck her into amazement and admiration.

Ham. O wonderful son, that can so astonish a mother! But is there no sequel at the heels of this mother's admiration? Impact.

Ros. She desires to speak with you in her closet, ere you go to bed.

Ham. We shall obey, were she ten times our mother. Have you any further trade with us?

Ros. My lord, you once did love me.

Ham. So I do still, by these pickers and stealers.

Ros. Good my lord, what is your cause of distemper? you do, surely, bar the door upon your own liberty, if you deny your griefs to your friend.

Ham. Sir, I lack advancement.

Ros. How can that be, when you have the voice of the king himself for your succession in Denmark?

Ham. Ay, but sir, 'While the grass grows,'—the proverb is something musty.

Re-enter Players with recorders.

O, the recorders! let me see one. To withdraw with you:—why do you go about to recover the wind of me, as if you would drive me into a toil?

Guil. O, my lord, if my duty be too bold, my love is too unmannerly.

Ham. I do not well understand that. Will you play upon this pipe?

Guil. My lord, I cannot.

Ham. I pray you.

Guil. Believe me, I cannot.

Ham. I do beseech you.

Ham. I know no touch of it, my lord.
Ham. Now might I do it pat, now he is praying.
And now I'll do't. And so he goes to heaven;
And so am I revenge'd. That would be scannd:
A villain kills my father; and for that,
I, his sole son, do this same villain send
To heaven.
O, this is hire and salary, not revenge.
He took my father grossly, full of bread;
With all his crimes broad blown, as flush as May;
And how his audit stands who knows save heaven?
But in our circumstance and course of thought,
'Tis heavy with him: and am I then revenge'd,
To take him in the purging of his soul,
When he is fit and season'd for his passage?
No!
Up, sword: and know thou a more horrid hent:
When he is drunk asleep, or in his rage,
Or in the incestuous pleasure of his bed;
At gaming, swearing, or about some act
That has no relish of salvation in't;
Then trip him, that his heels may kick at heaven,
And that his soul may be as damned and black
As hell, whereeto it goes. My mother stays:
This physic but prolongs thy sickly days. [Exit.]
King. [Rising] My words fly up, my thoughts remain below:
Words without thoughts never to heaven go.
[Exit.]

Scene IV. The Queen's closet.

Enter Queen and Polonius.

Pol. He will come straight. Look you lay home to him:
Tell him his pranks have been too broad to bear with,
And that your grace hath screen'd and stood betwixt
Much heat and him. I'll sconce me even here.
Pray you, be round with him.

Ham. [Within] Mother, mother, mother! Queen.

Fear me not: withdraw, I hear him coming.
[Polonius hides behind the arras.]

Enter Hamlet.

Ham. Now, mother, what's the matter?
Queen. Hamlet, thou hast thy father much offended.

Ham. Mother, you have my father much offended.

Queen. Come, come, you answer with an idle tongue.

Ham. Go, go, you question with a wicked tongue.

Queen. Why, how now, Hamlet!

Ham. What's the matter now?

Queen. Have you forgot me?

Ham. No, by the rood, not so: You are the queen, your husband's brother's wife;
And—would it were not so!—you are my mother.
HAMLET.

[ACT III]

Queen. Nay, then, I’ll set those to you that can speak.

Ham. Come, come, and sit you down; you shall not budge;
You go not till I set you up a glass
Where you may see the inmost part of you. 20

Queen. What wilt thou do? thou wilt not mur-

Ham. [Drawing] How now! a rat? Dead,

[Makes a pass through the arras.]

Ham. [Drawing] Where is he now? [Falls and dies]

Pol. [Behind] O, I am slain! [Drops and dies]

Ham. O, me, what hast thou done?

Queen. Nay, I know not:

Is it the king?

Queen. O, what a rash and bloody deed is this!

Ham. A bloody deed! almost as bad, good

Pol. As kill a king, and marry with his brother.

Queen. As kill a king!

Ham. Ay, lady, ’twas my word. 30

[Raises up the arras and discovers Polonius.]

Thou wretched, rash, intruding fool, farewell! I Took thee for thy better: take thy fortune;
Thou find’st to be too busy is some danger.
Leave wringing of your hands: peace! sit you down,
And let me wring your heart; for so I shall, If
It be made of penetrable stuff,
If damned custom have not brass’d it so That it is proof and bulwark against sense.

Queen. What have I done, that thou darest wag thy tongue In noise so rude against me?

Ham. Such an act 40

That blurs the grace and blush of modesty, Calls virtue hypocrite, takes off the rose From the fair forehead of an innocent love And sets a bluster there, makes marriage-vows As false as dicsers’ oaths: O, such a deed As from the body of contraction plucks The very soul, and sweet religion makes A rhapsody of words: heaven’s face doth glow; Yea, this solidity and compound mass, With tristful visage, as against the doom, Is thought-sick at the act.

Queen. Ay me, what act, That roars so loud, and thunders in the index? 50

Ham. Look here, upon this picture, and on this,
The counterfeit presentment of two brothers. See, what a grace was seated on this brow; Hyperion’s curls; the front of Jove himself; An eye like Mars, to threaten and command; A station like the herald Mercury New-lighted on a heaven-kissing hill; A combination and a form indeed, Where every god did seem to set his seal, To give the world assurance of a man: This was your husband. Look you now, what follows: Here is your husband; like a mildew’d ear, Blasting his wholesome brother. Have you eyes? Could you on this fair mountain leave to feed, And batten on this moor? Ha! have you eyes? You cannot call it love; for at your age The hey-day in the blood is tame, it’s humble, And waits upon the judgement: and what judg-

Would step from this to this? Sense, sure, yo have, Else could you not have motion; but sure, the case Is apoplex’d; for madness would not err, Nor sense to ecstasy was ne’er so thrall’d But it reserved some quantity of choice, To serve in such a difference. What devil was That thus hath cozen’d you at hoodman-blind? Eyes without feeling, feeling without sight, Ears without hands or eyes, smelling sans all, Or but a sickly part of one true sense Could not so mope. O shame! where is thy blush? Rebellious hell, If thou canst mutine in a matron’s bones, To flaming youth let virtue be as wax, And melt in other fire: proclaim no shame When the compulsive ardour gives the charge, Since frost itself as actively doth burn And reason ponders will.

Queen. O Hamlet, speak no more.

Ham. Thou turnst mine eyes into my very soul; And there I see such black and grained spots As will not leave their tinct.

Queen. Nay, but to live In the rank sweat of an enseamed bed, Stew’d in corruption, honeying and making love Over the nasty sty,— Queen. O, speak to me no more; These words, like daggers, enter in mine ears;

Ham. No more, sweet Hamlet!

A murderer and a villain A slave that is not twentieth part the tithe Of your precedent lord; a vice of kings; A cutpurse of the empire and the rule, That from a shelf the precious diadem stole, And put it in his pocket!

Queen. No more! 20

Ham. A king of shreds and patches,—

Enter Ghost.

Save me, and hover o’er me with your wings, You heavenly guards! What would your gracious figure?

Queen. Alas, he’s mad!

Ham. Do you not come your tardy son chide, That, lapsed in time and passion, lets go by The important acting of your dread command O, say!

Ghost. Do not forget: this visitation Is but to whet thy almost blunted purpose. But, look, amazement on thy mother sits; O, step between her and her fighting soul: Conceit in weakest bodies strongest works: Speak to her, Hamlet.

Ham. How is it with you, lady?

Queen. Alas, how is’t with you, That you do bend your eye on vacancy And with the incorporeal air do hold discourse? Forth at your eyes your spirits wildly peep; And, as the sleeping soldiers in the alarm, Your bedded hair, like life in excrements, Starts up, and stands an end. O gentle son, Upon the heat and flame of thy distemper Sprinkle cool patience. Whereon do you look
HAMLET.

1am. On him, on him! Look you, how pale he glares!

form and cause conjoint'd, preaching to stones, uld make them capable. Do not look upon me;
with this piteous action you convert stern effects: then what I have to do 129
I want true colour; tears perchance for blood.

queen. To whom do you speak this?

am. Do you see nothing there?
queen. Nothing at all; yet all that is I see.

am. Nor did you nothing hear?
queen. No, nothing but ourselves.

am. Why, look you there! look, how it steals away!
father, in his habit as he lived!
, where he goes, even now, out at the portal! [Exit Ghost.

queen. This is the very coinage of your brain:
bedless creation ecstasy
ry cunning in.

am. Ecstasy! 139
pulse, as yours, doth temperately keep time, males as healthful music: it is not madness
I have uttered: bring me to the test, the matter will re-word: which madness ld gammad from. Mother, for love of grace, not that flattering uncion to your soul, not your trespass, but my madness speaks:
Il but skin and film the ulcerous place, rank corruption, mining all within,
is unseen. Confess yourself to heaven;
ent what's past; avoid what is to come; 150
do not spread the compost on the weeds, ake them ranker. Forgive me this my virtue;
the fatness of these pursy times yself of vice must pardon beg, curb and woo for leave to do him good.

O Hamlet, thou hast cleft my heart in twain.

m. O, throw away the worser part of it,
ive the purer with the other half.
igh: but go not to mine uncle's bed;
ne a virtue, if you have it not.

160 monster, custom, who all sense doth eat, habits devil, is angel yet in this;
to the use of actions fair and good wise gives a frisk or livery, aptly put is on. Refrain to-night, hat shall lend a kind of easiness next abstinence: the next more easy;
it almost can change the stamp of nature, either . . . the devil, or throw him out 169 wondrous potency. Once more, good night:
hen you are desirous to be bless'd, sing beg of you. For this same lord, [Pointing to Polonius.]

spent: but heaven hath pleased it so, nish me with this and this with me,
must be their scourge and minister, strew him, and will answer well ath I gave him. So, again, good night.
be cruel, only to be kind:
and begins and worse remains behind.
And more, good lady,

n. What shall I do? 180
ot this, by no means, that I bid you do:
bleat king tempt you again to bed;
want on your cheek; call you his mouse;
t him, for a pair of reechy kisses,

Or puddling in your neck with his damn'd fingers,
Make you to ravel all this matter out,
That I essentially am not in madness,
But mad in craft. 'Twere good you let him know;
For who, that's but a queen, fair, sober, wise, 189
Would from a paddock, from a bat, a gib,
Such dear concernings hide? who would do so?
No, in despite of sense and secrecy,
Unpeg the basket on the house's top,
Let the birds fly, and, like the famous ape,
To try conclusions, in the basket creep,
And break your own neck down.
Queen. Be thou assured, if words be made of breath,
And breath of life, I have no life to breathe
What thou hast said to me.
Ham. I must to England; you know that?
Queen. Alack, 200
I had forgot; 'tis so concluded on.
Ham. There's letters seal'd: and my two schoolfellows,
Whom I will trust as I will adders fang'd,
They bear the mandate; they must swept my way,
And marshal me to knavery. Let it work;
For 'tis the sport to have the enginer
Hoist with his own petar: and 't shall go hard
But I will delve one yard below their mines,
And blow them at the moon: O, 'tis most sweet.

When in one line two crafts directly meet. 210
This man shall set me packing;
I'll lug the guts into the neighbour room.
Mother, good night. Indeed this councillor
Is now most still, most secret and most grave,
Who was in life a foolish prating knave.
Come, sir, to draw toward an end with you.
Good night, mother.

[Exeunt severally; Hamlet dragging in Polonius.

ACT IV.

SCENE I. A room in the castle.

Enter King, Queen, Rosencrantz, and Guildenstern.

King. There's matter in these sighs, these profound heaves:
You must translate: 'tis fit we understand them.
Where is your son?

Queen. Bestow this place on us a little while.

[Exeunt Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.

Ah, my good lord, what have I seen to-night!

King. What, Gertrude? How does Hamlet? Queen. Mad as the sea and wind, when both contend

Which is the mightier: in his lawless fit,
Behind the arras hearing something stir,
Whips out his rapier, cries, 'A rat, a rat!'

And, in this brainish apprehension, kills
The unseen good old man.

King. O heavy deed!

n. What shall I do? 180

n. Not this, by no means, that I bid you do:
bleat king tempt you again to bed;
want on your cheek; call you his mouse;
t him, for a pair of reechy kisses,

Or puddling in your neck with his damn'd fingers,
Make you to ravel all this matter out,
That I essentially am not in madness,
But mad in craft. 'Twere good you let him know;
For who, that's but a queen, fair, sober, wise, 189
Would from a paddock, from a bat, a gib,
Such dear concernings hide? who would do so?
No, in despite of sense and secrecy,
Unpeg the basket on the house's top,
Let the birds fly, and, like the famous ape,
To try conclusions, in the basket creep,
And break your own neck down.
Queen. Be thou assured, if words be made of breath,
And breath of life, I have no life to breathe
What thou hast said to me.
Ham. I must to England; you know that?
Queen. Alack, 200
I had forgot; 'tis so concluded on.
Ham. There's letters seal'd: and my two schoolfellows,
Whom I will trust as I will adders fang'd,
They bear the mandate; they must swept my way,
And marshal me to knavery. Let it work;
For 'tis the sport to have the enginer
Hoist with his own petar: and 't shall go hard
But I will delve one yard below their mines,
And blow them at the moon: O, 'tis most sweet.

When in one line two crafts directly meet. 210
This man shall set me packing;
I'll lug the guts into the neighbour room.

HAMLET.

Scene II. Another room in the castle.

Enter Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.

Ros. What have you done, my lord, with the dead body?

Ham. Compounded it with dust, whereto 'tis kin.

Ros. Tell us where 'tis, that we may take it thence
And bear it to the chapel.

Ham. Do not believe it.

Ros. Believe what?

Ham. That I can keep your counsel and not mine own. Besides, to be demanded of a sponge! what replication should be made by the son of a king?

Ros. Take you me for a sponge, my lord?

Ham. Ay, sir, that soaks up the king's countenance, his rewards, his authorities. But such officers do the king best service in the end: he keeps them, like an ape, in the corner of his jaw; first mouthed, to be last swallowed: when he needs what you have gleaned, it is but squeezing you. And, sponge, you shall be dry again.

Ros. I understand you not, my lord.

Ham. I am glad of it: a knavish speech sleeps in a foolish ear.

Ros. My lord, you must tell us where body is, and go with us to the king:

Ham. The body is with the king, but king is not with the body. The king is a thing

Guil. A thing, my lord!

Ham. Of nothing: bring me to him. If fox, and all after.

Scene III. Another room in the castle.

Enter King, attended.

King. I have sent to seek him, and to find the body.

How dangerous is it that this man goes loose! Yet must not we put the strong law on him:

He's loved of the distracted multitude,

Who like not in their judgement, but their eye

And where 'tis so, the offender's scourge weighs.

But never the offence. To bear all smo and even,

This sudden sending him away must seem

Deliberate pause; diseases desperate grown

By desperate appliance are relieved,

Or not at all.

Enter Rosencrantz.

Ros. Where now! what hath befal'n him?

King. But where is he?

Ros. Without, my lord; guarded, to keep your pleasure.

King. Bring him before us.

Ros. Ho, Guildenstern! bring in my lord.

Enter Hamlet and Guildenstern.

King. Now, Hamlet, where's Polonius?

Ham. At supper.

King. At supper! where?

Ham. Not where he eats, but where he hath eaten: a certain conviction of politic we are e'en at him. Your worm is your only emperor for diet: we fat all creatures else to us, and we fat ourselves for maggots: your king and your lean beggar is but variable service, two dishes, but to one table: that's the end.

King. Alas, alas!

Ham. A man may fish with the worm hath eat of a king, and eat of the fish that fed of that worm.

King. What dost thou mean by this?

Ham. Nothing but to show you how a man may go a progress through the guts of a beggar.

King. Where is Polonius?

Ham. In heaven; send hither to see: if I messenger find him not there, seek him i' other place yourself. But indeed, if you find not within this month, you shall nose him as go up the stairs into the lobby.

King. Go seek him there.

Ham. He will stay till ye come.

King. Hamlet, this deed, for thine own safety—for England?

Ay, Hamlet.

Good.

So is it, if thou knew'st our purposes.

I see a cherub that sees them. But, me; for England! Farewell, dear mother. 5

Thy loving father, Hamlet.

My mother; father and mother is man d wife; man and wife is one flesh; and so, my other. Come, for England! 10

Ham. Follow him at foot; tempt him with speed aboard;
lay it not; I'll have him from me to-night:
way! for every thing is seal'd and done
at else leans on the affair: pray you, make haste.

[Exeunt Rosencrantz and Guildenstern, d, England, if my love thou hold'st at aught—my great power thereof may give thee sense, we yet thy citiace looks raw and red in the Danish sword, and thy free awe ys homage to us—you must not coldly set a sovereign process; which imports at full, letters congruing to that effect,
the present death of Hamlet. Do it, England;
like the hectic in my blood he rages,
d thou must cure me: till I know 'tis done,
I'll, my haps, my joys were ne'er begun. 70

SCENE IV. A plain in Denmark.

Enter Fortinbras, a Captain, and Soldiers, marching.

Go, captain, from me enchant the Danish him that, by his license, Fortinbras ves the conveyance of a promised march his kingdom. You know the rendezvous, that his majesty would aught with us,
shall express our duty in his eye;
let him know so.

I will not, my lord.

Go softly on.

[Exeunt Fortinbras and Soldiers.

HAMLET, ROSENCRANTZ, GUILDENSTERN, and others.

Good sir, whose powers are these?
They are of Norway, sir.
How purposed, sir, I pray you?
Against some part of Poland.
Who commands them, sir?
The nephews to old Norway, Fortinbras.

Go you against the main of Poland, sir,
or some frontier?
Truly to speak, and with no addition,
go to gain a little patch of ground
t hath it in no profit but the name.
say five ducats, five, I would not farm it: 20 shall yield to Norway or the Pole rate, should it be sold in fee.
Why, then the Polack never will defend it.

Cap. Yes, it is already garrison'd.

Ham. Two thousand souls and twenty thousand will not debate the question of this straw:

This is the imposition of much wealth and peace,
That inward breaks, and shows no cause without
Why the man dies. I humbly thank you, sir.

Cap. God be wi' you, sir. 30

[Exit. Ros. Will't please you go, my lord? 30
Ham. I'll be with you straight. Go a little [Exeunt all except Hamlet.

How all occasions do inform against me,
And spur my dull revenge! What is a man,
If his chief good and market of his time
Be but to sleep and feed? a beast, no more.
Sure, he that made us with such large discourse,
Looking before and after, gave us not
That capability and god-like reason
To fust in us unused. Now, whether it be Bestial oblivion, or some craven scruple
Of thinking too precisely on the event,
A thought which, quarter'd, hath but one part

And ever three parts coward, I do not know
Why yet I live to say 'This thing's to do,'
Sith I have cause and will and strength and means
To do't. Examples gross as earth exhort me:
Witness this army of such mass and charge
Led by a delicate and tender prince,
Whose spirit with divine ambition puff'd
Makes mouths at the invisible event,
Exposing what is mortal and une.
To all that fortune, death and danger dare,
Even for an egg-shell. Rightly to be great
Is not to stir without great argument,

Not to find quarell in a straw
When honour's at the stake. How stand I then,
That have a father kill'd, a mother stain'd,
Excitements of my reason and my blood,
And let all sleep? while, to my shame, I see
The imminent death of twenty thousand men, 60
That, for a fantasy and trick of fame,
Go to their graves like beds, fight for a plot
Whereon the numbers cannot try the cause,
Which is not tomb enough and continent
To hide the slain? O, from this time forth,
My thoughts be bloody, or be nothing worth!

[Exit.

SCENE V. Elsinore. A room in the castle.

Enter QUEEN, HORATIO, and a Gentleman.

Queen. I will not speak with her.

Gent. She is importunate, indeed distress'd:

Her mood will needs be pitied.

Queen. What would she have?

Gent. She speaks much of her father; says she hears
There 's tricks i' the world; and mens, and beats
her heart;

Spurns enviously at straws; speaks things in doubt,

That carry but half sense: her speech is nothing,
Yet the unsheathed use of it doth move
The hearers to collection; they aim at it,
And botch the words up fit to their own thoughts;
Which, as her winks, and nods, and gestures yield
them,

Indeed would make one think there might be thought,
Though nothing sure, yet much unhappily.

Hor. 'Twere good she were spoken with; for she may strue

Dangerous conjectures in ill-breeding minds.

Queen. Let her come in. [Exit Horatio.

To my sick soul, as sin's true nature is,
Each toy seems prologue to some great amiss:
So full of artless jealousy is guilt,
It spills itself in fearing to be spilt.

Re-enter Horatio, with Ophelia.

Oph. Where is the beauteous majesty of Denmark?

Queen. How now, Ophelia! [Sings] How should I your true love know
From another one?

By his cockle hat and staff,
And his sandal shoon.

Queen. Alas, sweet lady, what imports this song?

[Sings] He is dead and gone, lady,
He is dead and gone;
At his head a grass-green turf,
At his heels a stone.

Queen. Nay, but, Ophelia,—

Oph. White his shroud as the mountain snow,—

Enter King.

Queen. Alas, look here, my lord.

Oph. [Sings] Larded with sweet flowers;
Which bewept to the grave did go
With true-love showers.

King. How do you, pretty lady?

Oph. Well, God 'ild you! They say the owl
Was a baker's daughter. Lord, we know what we are,
But know not what we may be. God be at your table!

King. Conceit upon her father.

Oph. Pray you, let's have no words of this;
But when they ask you what it means, say you this:

[Sings] To-morrow is Saint Valentine's day,
All in the morning betime,
And I a maid at your window,
To be your Valentine.

Then up he rose, and donn'd his clothes,
And dupp'd the chamber-door;
Let in the maid, that out a maid
Never departed more.

King. Pretty Ophelia!

Oph. Indeed, la, without an oath, I'll make an end on't:

[Sings] By Gis and by Saint Charity,
Alack, and fie for shame!
Young men will do't, if they come to't;
By cock, they are to blame.

Quoth she, before you tumbled me,
You promised me to wed.
So would I ha' done, by yonder sun,
An thou hast not come to my bed.

King. How long hath she been thus?

Oph. I hope all will be well. We must be patient; but I cannot choose but weep, to think they should lay him i' the cold ground. My brother shall know of it: and so I thank you for your good counsel. Come, my coach! Good night, ladies; good night, sweet ladies; good night, good night. [Exit.
HAMLET.

That treason can but peep to what it would, lets little of his will. Tell me, Laertes, why thou art thus incensed? Let him go, Gertrude.

Laer. Where is my father?

King. Dead.

Queen. But not by him.

King. Let him demand his fill.

Laer. How came he dead? I'll not be juggled with:

O hell, allegiance! vows, to the blackest devil! conscience and grace, to the profoundest pit! damnation. To this point I stand, that both the worlds I give to negligence, yet comes what comes; only I'll be revenged out thoroughly for my father.

Who shall stay you? Laer. My will, not all the world; for my means, I'll husband them so well, they shall go far with little.

King. Good Laertes, you desire to know the certainty your dear father's death, 'tis writ in your revenge, at swoopstake, you will draw both friend and foe, nearer and loser?

Laer. None but his enemies.

King. To his good friends thus wise I'll ope my arms; like the kind life-rendering pelican, past them with my blood.

Why, now you speak as a good child and a true gentleman.

I am guiltless of your father's death, I am most sensible in grief for it, as level to your judgement pierce day does to your eye.

[Within] Let her come in.

Laer. How now! what noise is that?

Re-enter Ophelia.

Laer. Eat, dry up my brains! tears seven times salt, out the sense and virtue of mine eye! heaven, thy madness shall be paid by weight, our scale turn the beam. O rose of May! a maid, kind sister, sweet Ophelia! saves! is't possible, a young maid's wits should be as mortal as an old man's life? pure is fine in love, and where 'tis fine, and some precious instance of itself the thing it loves.

[Sings]

They bore him barefaced on the bier; Hey non, nonny, nonny; And in his grave rain'd many a tear— you well, my dove! Hadst thou thy wits, and didst persuade revenge, did not move thus.

[Sings] You must sing a-down a-down, An you call him a-down-a. ow the wheel becomes it! It is the false ward, that stole his master's daughter.

This nothing's more than matter.

There's rosemary, that's for remembrance; pray, love, remember; and there is pansies, that's for thoughts.

Laer. A document in madness, thoughts and remembrance fitted.

Oph. There's fennel for you, and cumbles; there's rue for you; and here's some for me: we may call it herb-grace o' Sundays; O, you must wear your rue with a difference. There's a daisy: I would give you some violets, but they withered all when my father died: they say he made a good end,— [Sings] For bonny sweet Robin is all my joy.

Laer. Thought and affliction, passion, hell itself.

She turns to favour and to prettiness.

Oph. [Sings] And will he not come again?

And will he not come again?

No, no, he is dead; Go to thy death-bed;

He never will come again.

His bear was as white as snow, All flaxen was his poll; He is gone, he is gone, And we cast away moan:

God ha' mercy on his soul!

And of all Christian souls, I pray God. God be wi' yee. [Exit. 200

Laer. Do you see this, O God?

King. Laertes, I must commune with your grief,

Or you deny me right. Go but apart, Make choice of whom your wisest friends you will,

And they shall hear and judge twixt you and me: If by direct or by collateral hand They find us touch'd, we will our kingdom give, Our crown, our life, and all that we call ours, To you in satisfaction; but if not, Be you content to lend your patience to us, And we shall jointly labour with your soul To give it due content.

Laer. Let this be so;

His means of death, his obscure funeral— No trophy, sword, nor hatchment o'er his bones, No noble rite nor formal ostentation— Cry to be heard, as 'twere from heaven to earth, That I must call in question.

King. So you shall;

And where the offence is let the great axe fall. I pray you, go with me. [Exit.]

SCENE VI. Another room in the castle.

Enter Horatio and a Servant.

Hor. What are thy that would speak with me?

Serv. Sailors, sir: they say they have letters for you.

Hor. Let them come in. [Exit Servant. I do not know from what part of the world I should be greeted, if not from Lord Hamlet.

Enter Sailors.

First Sail. God bless you, sir.

Hor. Let him bless thee too.

First Sail. He shall, sir, an't please him. There's a letter for you, sir; it comes from the ambassador that was bound for England; if your name be Horatio, as I am told, you call it.

Hor. [Reads] Horatio, when thou shalt have overlooked this, give these fellows some means to the king; they have letters for him. Ere we were two days old at sea, a pirate of very warlike appointment gave us chase. Finding ourselves too slow of sail, we put on a compelled valour, and in the grapple I boarded them: on the instant they got clear of our ship; so I alone became their prisoner. They have dealt with me like thieves of mercy: but they knew what they did; I am to do a good turn for them. Let the king have the letters I have sent; and repair thou to me with as much speed as thou wouldst fly death. I have words to speak in thine ear will make thee dumb; yet are they much too light for the bore of the matter. These good fellows will bring thee where I am. Rosencrantz and Guildenstern hold their course for England: of them I have much to tell thee. Farewell.

'He that thou knowest thine, Hamlet,'

Come, I will make you way for these your letters;

And do't the speedier, that you may direct me
To him from whom you brought them. [Exeunt.]

SCENE VII. Another room in the castle.

Enter King and Laertes.

King. Now must your conscience my acquittance seal,
And you must put me in your heart for friend, Sith you have heard, and with a knowing ear, That he which hath your noble father slain Pursued my life.

Laer. It well appears: but tell me Why you proceeded not against these feats, So criminal and so capital in nature, As by your wisdom, wisdom, all things else, You mainly were stir'd up.

King. O, for two special reasons;
Which may to you, perhaps, seem much unsinew'd, But yet to me they are strong. The queen his mother Lives almost by his looks; and for myself— My virtue or my plague, be it either which— She's so conjunctive to my life and soul, That, as the star moves not but in his sphere, I could not but by her. The other motive, Why to a public count I might not go, Is the great love the general gender bear him; Who, dipp'd all his faults in their affection, Would, like the spring that turneth wood to stone, Convert his gyves to graces; so that my arrows, Too slightly timber'd for so loud a wind, Would have reverted to my bow again, And not where I had aim'd them.

Laer. And so have I a noble father lost;
A sister driven into desperate terms, Whose worth, if praises may go back again, Stood challenger on mount of all the age.

For her perfections: but my revenge will come.

King. Break not your sleeps for that: you must not think That you are made of stuff so flat and dull That we can let our beard be shook with danger And think it pastime. You shortly shall hear more:

I loved your father, and we love ourself;
And that, I hope, will teach you to imagine—

Enter a Messenger.

How now! what news?

Mess. Letters, my lord, from Hamlet This to your majesty; this to the queen.

King. From Hamlet! who brought them?

Mess. Sailors, my lord, they say; I saw the not: They were given me by Claudio; he receiveth
Of him that brought them.

King. Laertes, you shall hear then Leave us. [Exit Messenger.]

[Reads] 'High and mighty, You shall know am set naked on your kingdom. To-morrow shall I beg leave to see your kingly eyes: wh I shall, first asking your pardon therunto, count the occasion of my sudden and no strange return.

'Hamlet.'

What should this mean? Are all the rest come back?

Or is it some abuse, and no such thing?

Laer. Know you the hand?

King. 'Tis Hamlet's character. 'Naked And in a postscript here, he says 'alone.'

Can you advise me?

Laer. I'm lost in it, my lord. But let I come; It warms the very sickness in my heart, That I shall live and tell him to his teeth, 'Thus didest thou.'

King. If it be so, Laertes—

As how should it be so? how otherwise?—

Will you be ruled by me?

Laer. Ay, my lord;
So you will not o'errule me to a peace.

King. To thine own peace. If he be not turn'd,

As checking at his voyage, and that he means No more to undertake it, I will work him To an exploit, now ripe in my device, Under the which he shall not choose but fall: And for his death no wind of blame shall bear. But even his mother shall uncharge the price And call it accident.

My lord, I will be ruled;

The rather, if you could devise it so That I might be the organ.

King. It falls right.

You have been talk'd of since your travel much And that in Hamlet's hearing, for a quality Wherein, they say, you shine: your sum of parts Did not together pluck such envy from him As did that one, and that, in my regard, Of the unworthiest siege.

Laer. What part is that, my lord?

King. A very riband in the cap of youth, Yet needful too; for youth no less becomes The light and careless livery that it wears Than settled age his sables and his weeds, Importing health and graveness. Two mo since,

Here was a gentleman of Normandy:—

I've seen myself, and served against, the Fre And they can well on horseback: but this ga Had witchcraft in't; he grew unto his seat;
And, for that purpose, I'll anoint my sword.
I bought an unctuous of a mountebank,
So mortal that, but dip a knife in it,
Where it draws blood no cataplasm so rare,
Collected from all simples that have virtue
Under the moon, can save the thing from death
That is but scratch'd withal! I'll touch my point
With this contagion, that, if I gall him slightly,
It may be death.

King. Let's further think of this; 149
Weight what convenience both of time and means
May fit us to our shape; if this should fail,
And that our drift look through our bad performance,
'Twere better not assay'd: therefore this project
Should have a back or second, that might hold,
If this should blast in proof. Soft! let me see:
We'll make a solemn wager on your cunnings:
I ha's:
When in your motion you are hot and dry—
As make your bolts more violent to that end—
And that he calls for drink, I'll have prepared
A chalice for the nonce, whereon but sipping,
If he by chance escape your venom'd stick,
Our purpose may hold there.

Enter Queen.

Queen. How now, sweet queen!

One woe doth tread upon another's heel,
So fast they follow: your sister's drown'd, Laertes.

Laer. Drown'd! O, where?

Queen. There is a willow grows aslant a brook,
That shows his hoar leaves in the glassy stream;
There with fantastic garlands did she come
Of crow-flowers, nettles, daisies, and long purples
That liberal shepherds give a grosser name,
But our cold maids do dead men's fingers call them:
There, on the pendent boughs her coronet weeps
Cambering to hang, an envious sliver broke;
When down her weedy trophies and herself
Fell in the weeping brook. Her clothes spread wide;
And, mermaid-like, awhile they bore her up:
Which time she chanted snatches of old tunes;
As one incapable of her own distress,
Or like a creature native and induned
Unto that element: but long it could not be Till that her garments, heavy with their drink,
Pull'd the poor wretch from her melodious lay
To muddy death.

Laer. Alas, then, she is drown'd?

Queen. Drown'd, drown'd.

Laer. Too much of water hast thou, poor Ophelia,
And therefore I forbid my tears: but yet
It is our trick; nature her custom holds,
Let shame say what it will: when these are gone,
The woman will be out. Adieu, my lord: 150
I have a speech of fire, that fain would blaze,
But that this folly douts it.

[Exit.

King. Let's follow, Gertrude:
How much I had to do to calm his rage!
Now fear I this will give it start again;
Therefore let's follow.

[Exeunt.]
Enter Hamlet and Horatio, at a distance.

First Cl. Cudgel thy brains no more at it, for your dull ass will not mend his pace-beating; and, when you are asked this quest, next, say 'a grave-maker;' the houses that makes last till doomsday. Go, get thee and will not tell him of his action of bust Ham! This fellow might be in's time a buyer of land, with his statutes, his recognize his fines, his double vouchers, his recover this the fine of his fines, and the recovery recoveries, to have his fine pate full of fine will his vouchers vouch him no more of his chases, and double ones too, than the length breath of a pair of indentures! The very ey vancies of his lands will hardly lie in this and must the inheritor himself have no more

Hor. Not a jot more, my lord.

Ham. Is not parchment made of sheep-
HAMLET.

1. Ay, my lord, and of calf-skins too.

2. They're sheep and calves which seek assurance in that. I will speak to this fellow.

3. What grave's this, sirrah?

5. A pit of clay to be made for such a guest is meet.

6. I think it be thine, indeed; for thou art not.

7. Thou dost lie in, to be in and say is thine: 'tis for the dead, not for the quick; refore thou liest.

8. Tis a quick lie, sir; 'twill away anon, from me to you.

9. What man dost thou dig it for?

10. For no man, sir.

11. What woman, then?

12. For none, neither.

13. Who is to be buried in't?

14. One that was a woman, sir; but, her soul, she's dead.

15. How absolute the knave is! we must ask by the card, or equivocation will undo us.

16. the Lord, Horatio, these three years I have en a note of it; the age is grown so picked at the toe of the peasant comes so near the heel the courtier, he galls his kibe. How long hast thou been a grave-breaker?

17. Of all the days! the year, I came at that day that our last king Hamlet overcame the rinbras.

18. How long is that since?

19. Cannot you tell that? every fool tells that: it was the very day that young Hamlet was born; he is mad, and sent into gland.

20. Ay, marry, why was he sent into England?

21. Why, because he was mad: he recovered his wits there; or, if he do not, it's great matter there.

22. Why?

23. 'Twill not be seen in him there; the men are as mad as he.

24. How came he mad?

25. Very strangely, they say.

26. How strangely?

27. Faith, e'en with losing his wits.

28. Upon what ground?

29. Why, here in Denmark: I have a sexton here, man and boy, thirty years.

30. How long will a man lie i' the earth he rot?

31. A fate, if he be not rotten before die—as we have many pocky horses now-a's, that will scarce hold the laying in— he will you some eight year or nine year: a Tanner last you nine year.

32. Why he more than another?

33. Why, sir, his hide is so tanned to his trade, that he will keep out water a great good; and your water is a sore decayer of your reson dead body. Here's a skull now; this it has lain in the earth three and twenty

34. Whose was it?
Shards, flints and pebbles should be thrown on her:
Yet here she is allow'd her virgin crants,
Her maiden strewments and the bringing home
Of bell and burial.

Lae. Must there no more be done?
First Priest. No more be done:
We should profane the service of the dead
To sing a requiem and such rest to her
As to peace-parted souls.

Lae. Lay her: the earth:
And from her fair and unpolluted flesh
May violets spring! I tell thee, churlish priest,
A ministering angel shall my sister be,
When thou liest howling.

Ham. What, the fair Ophelia!
Queen. Sweets to the sweet: farewell!

I hoped thou shouldst have been my Hamlet's wife;
I thought thy bride-bed to have deck'd, sweet maid,
And not have stirr'd thy grave.

Lae. O, treble woe
Fall ten times treble on that cursed head,
Whose wicked deed thy most ingenious sense
Deprived thee of! Hold off the earth awhile,
Till I have caught her once more in mine arms:—

Ham. [Advancing] What is he whose grief
Bears such an emphasis? whose phrase of sorrow
Conjures the wandering stars, and makes them stand
Like wonder-wounded hearers? This is I,

Hamlet the Dane. [Leaps into the grave.

Lae. The devil take thy soul!

Ham. Thou pray'st not well.
I pritchet, take thy fingers from my throat;
For, though I am not splenetic and rash,
Yet have I something in me dangerous,
Which let thy wiseness fear: hold off thy hand.

King. Pluck them asunder.

Queen. Hamlet, Hamlet!

All. Gentlemen,—

Ham. Why, I will fight with him upon this theme Until my eyelids will no longer wag.

Queen. O my son, what theme?

Ham. I loved Ophelia; forty thousand brothers
Could not, with all their quantity of love,
Make up my sum. What wilt thou do for her?

King. O, he is mad, Laertes.
Queen. For love of God, forbear him.

Ham. 'Swounds, show me what thou'lt do:
Woo't weep? woo't fight? woo't fast? woo't
Of thee thyself?
Woo't drink up eisel? eat a crocodile?
I'll do't. Dost thou come here to whine?
To outface me with leaping in her grave?
Be buried quick with her, and so will I:

And, if thou prate of mountains, let them thro
Millions of acres on us, till our ground,
Singeing his pate against the burning zone,
Make Ossa like a wart! Nay, an thou'lt mot
I'll rant as well as thou.

Queen. This is mere madness
And thus awhile the fit will work on him;
Anon, as patient as the female dove,
When that her golden couples are disclosed,
His sense will sit drooping.

Ham. Hear you, sir;
What is the reason that you use me thus?
I loved you ever: but it is no matter;
Let Hercules himself do what he may,
The cat will mew and dog will have his day. [Exit.

King. I pray you, good Horatio, wait up
him.

[To Laertes] Strengthen your patience in last night's speech;
We'll put the matter to the present push.
Good Gertrude, set some watch over your son
This grave shall have a living monument:
An hour of quiet shortly shall we see;
Till then, in patience our proceeding be.

[Exit Horatio.

SCENE II. A hall in the castle.

Enter Hamlet and Horatio.

Ham. So much for this, sir: now shall you see the other:
You do remember all the circumstance?

Hor. Remember it, my lord!

Ham. Sir, in my heart there was a kind fighting,
That would not let me sleep: methought I lay
Worse than the mutines in the bilboes. Rashly
And praised be rashness for it, let us know,
Our indiscretion sometimes serves us well,
When our deep plots do pall: and that shou teach us

There's a divinity that shapes our ends,
Rough-hew them how we will,—

Hor. That is most certain.

Ham. Up from my cabinet,
My sea-gown scarf'd about me, in the dark
Groped I to find out them: had my desire,
Finger'd their packet, and in fine withdrew
To mine own room again; making so bold,
My fears forgetting manners, to unseal
Their grand commission; where I found, in

O royal knavery!—an exact command,
Larded with many several sorts of reasons
Importing Denmark's health and England's to
With, ho! such bugs and goblins in my life,
That, on the supervise, no leisure bated,
No, not to stay the grinding of the axe,
My head should be struck off.

Hor. Is't possible?

Ham. Here's the commission: read it at my leisure.
But wilt thou hear me how I did proceed?

Hor. I beseech you.

Ham. Being thus be-netted round with

Ere I could make a prologue to my brains,
They had begun the play—I sat me down,
Devised a new commission, wrote it fair:
I once did hold it, as our statistio do,
Ay, good my lord.

Ham. I will receive it, sir, with all diligence of spirit. Put your bonnet to his right use; 'tis for the head.

Osr. I thank your lordship, it is very hot.

Ham. No, believe me, 'tis very cold; the wind is northerly.

Osr. It is indifferent cold, my lord, indeed.

Ham. But yet methinks it is very sultry and hot for my complexion.

Osr. Exceedingly, my lord; it is very sultry, as 'twere,—I cannot tell how. But, my lord, his majesty bade me signify to you that he has laid a great wager on your head; sir, this is the matter.

Ham. I beseech you, remember—

[Hamlet moves him to put on his hat.]

Osr. Nay, good my lord; for mine ease, in good faith. Sir, here is newly come to court Laertes; believe me, an absolute gentleman, full of most excellent differences, of very soft society and great showing: indeed, to speak feelingly of him, he is the card or calendar of gentry, for you shall find in him the continent of what part a gentleman would see.

Ham. Sir, his denomination suffers no perturbation in you; though, I know, to divide him inventorially would dizzy the arithmetic of memory, and yet but yawn neither, in respect of his quick sail. But, in the verity of exotomology, I take him to be a soul of great article; and his infusion of such earthy and rareness, as, to make true diction of him, his semblable is his mirror; and who else would trace him, his umbrage, nothing more.

Osr. Your lordship speaks most infallibly of him.

Ham. The concernments, sir? why do we wrap the gentleman in our more rawer breath?

Osr. Sir?

Ham. Is't not possible to understand in another tongue? You will do't, sir, really.

Osr. What imports the nomination of this gentleman?

Ham. Of Laertes?

Osr. His purse is empty already; all's golden words are spent.

Ham. Of him, sir.

Osr. I know you are not ignorant—

Ham. I would you did, sir; yet, in faith, if you did, it would not much approve me. Well, sir?

Osr. You are not ignorant of what excellence Laertes is—

Ham. I dare not confess that, lest I should compare with him in excellence; but, to know a man well, were to know himself.

Osr. I mean, sir, for his weapon; but in the imputation laid on him by them, in his meed he's unfollowed.

Ham. What's his weapon?

Osr. Rapier and dagger.

Ham. That's two of his weapons: but, well.

Osr. The king, sir, hath wagered with him six Barbary horses; against the which he has imposed, as I take it, six French rapiers and shall stand at the king's mess: 'tis a chough; but, as I say, spacious in the possession of dirt.
poniards, with their assigns, as girdle, hangers, and so: three of the carriages, in faith, are very dear to fancy, very responsive to the hits, most delicate carriages, and of very liberal conceit.

Ham. What call you the carriages?

Hor. I knew you must be edified by the margin ere you had done.

Osr. The carriages, sir, are the hangers.

Ham. The phrase would be more german to the matter, if we could carry cannon by our sides: I would it might be hangers till then. But, on: six Barbary horses against six French swords, their assigns, and three liberal-conceited carriages; that's the French bet against the Danish. Why is this 'imposed,' as you call it?

Osr. The king, sir, hath laid, that in a dozen passes between yourself and him, he shall not exceed you three hits; he hath laid on twelve for nine; and it would come to immediate trial, if your lordship would vouchsafe the answer.

Ham. How if I answer 'no'?

Osr. I mean, my lord, the opposition of your person in trial. 179

Ham. Sir, I will walk here in the hall; if it please his majesty, 'tis the breathing time of day with me; let the foils be brought, the gentleman waiting, and the king hold his purpose, I will win for him an I can; if not, I will gain nothing but my shame and the odd hits.

Osr. Shall I re-deliver you e'en so?

Ham. To this effect, sir; after what flourish your nature will.

Osr. I commend my duty to your lordship.

Ham. Yours, yours. [Exit Osr. ] He does well to commend it himself; there are no tongues else for's turn.

Hor. This lapwing runs away with the shell on his head.

Ham. He did comply with his dug, before he sucked it. Thus he— and many more of the same bevy that I know the crossage dotes on— only got the tune of the time and outward habit of encounter; a kind of yesty collection, which carries them through and through the most fford and winnowed opinions; and do but blow them to their trial, the bubbles are out.

Enter a Lord.

Lord. My lord, his majesty commanded him to you by young Osr, who brings back to him, that you attend him in the hall: he sends to know if your pleasure hold to play with Laertes, or that you will take longer time.

Ham. I am constant to my purposes; they follow the king's pleasure; if his fitness speaks, mine is ready; now or whenever, provided I be so able as now. 211

Lord. The king and queen and all are coming down.

Ham. In happy time.

Lord. The queen desires you to use some gentle entertainment to Laertes before you fail to play.

Ham. She well instructs me. [Exit Lord. ]

Hor. You will lose this wager, my lord.

Ham. I do not think so; since he went into France, I have been in continual practice; I shall win at the odds. But thou wouldst not think how ill all's here about my heart: but it is no matter.

Hor. Nay, good my lord,—

Ham. It is but foolery; but it is such a gain-giving, as would perhaps trouble a wiser.

Hor. If your mind dislike any thing, 137

Ham. This is too heavy, let me see another.

Osr. That's the matter, what is 't to leave betimes?

Enter King, Queen, Laertes, Lords, Osr. and Attendants with foils, &c.

King. Come, Hamlet, come, and take hand from me.

[They draw.] You are Laertes' hand into Ham. Give me your pardon, sir: I've you wrong; But pardon't, as you are a gentleman. This presence knows, And you must needs 'ave heard, how I am ish'd With such distraction. What I have done, That might your nature, honour and excep Roughly awake, I here proclaim was mad. Was't Hamlet wrong'd Laertes? Never Ha. If Hamlet from himself be't, or away, And when he's not himself does wrong Laet Then Hamlet does it not, Hamlet denies it. Who does it, then? His madness: 'tis be Hamlet is of the faction that is wrong'd; His madness is poor Hamlet's enemy.

Sir, in this audience, Let my declining from a purposed evil Free me so far in your most generous thoughts That I have shot mine arrow o'er the house And hurt my brother.

Laer. I am satisfied in nature Whose motive, in this case, should stir me To my revenge: but in my terms of honour I stand aloof; and will no reconciliation, Till by some elder masters, of known honor I have a voice and precedent of peace. To keep my name ungored. But till that I do receive your offer'd love like love, And will not wrong it.

Ham. I embrace it freely; And will this brother's wager frankly play. Give us the foils. Come on.

Laer. Come, one for me.

Ham. I'll be your foil, Laertes: in middle Your skill shall, like a star the darkest night Stick fiery off indeed.

Laer. You mock me, sir.

Ham. No, by this hand.

King. Give them the foils, young Osr. Osr. Ham. You know the wager?

Ham. Very well, my lord; Your grace hath laid the odds o' the weaker Be'st. I do not fear it; I have seen you But since he is better'd, we have therefore Laer. This is too heavy, let me see another Ham. This likes me well. These foils all a length? [They prepare to Osr. Ay, my good lord.

Ham. O villany! Ho! let the door be lock'd:
Treachery! Seek it out.

Laer. It is here, Hamlet: Hamlet, thou art slain;
No medicine in the world can do thee good;
In thee there is not half an hour of life;
The treacherous instrument is in thy hand,
Unbated and envenom'd: the foul practice
Hath turn'd itself on me; lo, here I lie,
Never to rise again: thy mother's poison'd:
I can no more: the king, the king's to blame.

Ham. The point's—envenom'd too!
Then, venom, to thy work.

[Stabs the King.

All. Treason! treason!

King. O, yet defend me, friends; I am but hurt.

Ham. Here, thou incestuous, murderous, damned Dane,
Drink off this potion. Is thy union here?
Follow my mother.

[King dies.

Laer. He is justly served;
It is a poison temper'd by himself.

Exchange forgiveness with me, noble Hamlet:
Mine and my father's death come not upon thee,
Nor thine on me!

[Dies.

Ham. Heaven make thee free of it! I follow thee.

I am dead, Horatio. Wretched queen, adieu!
You that look pale and tremble at this chance,
That are but mutes or audience to this act,
Had I but time—as this fell sergeant, death,
Is strict in his arrest—O, I could tell you—
But let it be. Horatio, I am dead;
Thou livest; report me and my cause aright
To the unsatisfied.

Hor. Never believe it.

I am more an antique Roman than a Dane:
Here's yet some liquor left—

Ham. As thou'rt a man, Give me the cup: letgo; by heaven, I'll have't.

O good Horatio, what a wounded name,
Things standing thus unknown, shall live behind me!

If thou didst ever hold me in thy heart,
Absent thee from felicity awhile,
And in this harsh world draw thy breath in pain,
To tell my story.

[March afar off, and shot within.

What warlike noise is this?

Osr. Young Fortinbras, with conquest come from Poland,

To the ambassadors of England gives
This warlike volley.

Ham. O, I die, Horatio;
The potent poison quite o'er-crows my spirit:
I cannot live to hear the news from England;
But I do prophesy the election lights
On Fortinbras: he has my dying voice;
So tell him, with the occurrences, more and less,
Which have solicited. The rest is silence.

Hor. Now cracks a noble heart. Good night, sweet prince;
And flights of angels sing thee to thy rest!
Why does the drum come hither?

[March within.

Enter Fortinbras, the English Ambassadors,

and others.

Fort. Where is this sight?
HAMLET.

Hor. What is it ye would see?

Fort. This quarry cries on havoc. O proud death,

What feast is toward in thine eternal cell,

If aught of woe or wonder, cease your search.

So bloodily hast struck?

First Amb. The sight is dismal;

And our affairs from England come too late:

To tell him his commandment is fulfill'd,

That Rosencrantz and Guildenstern are dead:

Where should we have our thanks?

Hor. Not from his mouth, Had it the ability of life to thank you:

He never gave commandment for their death.

Scene: Britain.

ACT I.

Scene I. King Lear's palace.

Enter Kent, Gloucester, and Edmund.

Kent. I thought the king had more affected Duke of Albany than Cornwall.

Doth. It did always seem so to us: but now, the division of the kingdom, it appears not which of the dukes he values most; for equalities so weighed, that curiosity in neither can make vice of either's moiety.

Kent. Is this not thy son, my lord?

Doth. His breeding, sir, hath been at my charge: I have so often blushed to acknowledge, that now I am brazed to it.

Kent. I cannot conceive you.

Doth. Sir, this young fellow's mother could: creopon she grew round-wombed, and had, red, sir, a son for her cradle ere she had a hand for her bed. Do you smell a fault?

Kent. I cannot wish the fault undone, the sight of it being so proper.

Doth. But I have, sir, a son by order of law, three year elder than this, who yet is no dearer in account: though this knave came something silly into the world, before he was sent for, yet his mother fair; there was good sport at his birth, and the whoreson must be acknowledged, you know this noble gentleman, Edmund?

Doth. No, my lord.

Kent. My lord of Kent: remember him here as my honourable friend.

Doth. My services to your lordship.

Kent. I must love you, and sue to know you ever.

Doth. Sir, I shall study deserving.

Doth. He hath been out nine years, and away shall again. The king is coming.

Enter King Lear, Cornwall, Albany, Kent, Regan, Cordelia, and Attendants.

Lear. Attend the lords of France and Burgundy, Gloucester.

Doth. I shall, my liege.

[Exeunt Gloucester and Edmund.

Lear. Meantime we shall express our darker purpose.
Give me the map there. Know that we have divided In three our kingdom: and 'tis our fast intent To shake all cares and business from our age; and Conferring them on younger strengths, while we Unburthen'd crawl toward death. Our son of Cornwall, And you, our no less loving son of Albany, We have this hour a constant will to publish Our daughters' several dowers, that future strife May be prevented now. The princes, France and Burgundy, Great rivals in our youngest daughter's love, Long in our court have made their amorous sojourn, And here are to be answer'd. Tell me, my daughters,— Since now we will divest us, both of rule, Interest of territory, cares of state,— Which of you shall we say doth love us most? That we our largest bounty may extend Where nature doth with merit challenge. Goneril, Our eldest-born, speak first.

Cor. Sir, I love you more than words can wield the matter; Dearer than eye-sight, space, and liberty; Beyond what can be valued, rich or rare; No less than life, with grace, health, beauty, honour; As much as child e'er loved, or father found; A love that makes breath poor, and speech unable; Beyond all manner of so much I love you.

Lear. Of all these bounds, even from this line to this, With shadowy forests and with champains rich'd, With plenteous rivers and wide-skirted meads, We make thee lady: to thine and Albany's issue Be this perpetual. What says our second daughter, Our dearest Regan, wife to Cornwall? Speak.

Reg. Sir, I am made Of the self-same metal that my sister is, And prize me at her worth. In my true heart
I do invest you jointly with my power, Pre-eminence, and all the large effects That troop with majesty. Ourself, by mont course, With reservation of an hundred knights, By you to be sustaine'd, shall our abode Make with you by due turns. Only we still ret The name, and all the additions to a king; The sway, revenue, execution of the rest, Beloved sons, be yours: which to confirm, This coronet part betwixt you. [Giving the crown] Royal Lear, Whom I have ever honour'd as my king, Loved as my father, as my master follow'd, As my great patron thought on in my prayers Lear. The bow is bent and drawn, make firm the shaft. Kent. Let it fall rather, though the fork inv The region of my heart: be Kent unmanly. When Lear is mad. What wilt thou do, old man? Think'st thou that duty shall have dread to spe When power to flattery bows? To plain honour's bound, When majesty stoops to folly. Reverse thy do And, in thy best consideration, check This hideous rashness: answer my life my judment. Thy youngest daughter does not love thee Lear. Nor are those empty-hearted whose low sound Reverbs no hollowness. Lear. Kent, on thy life, no more To wage against thy enemies; nor fear to lose Thy safety being the motive. Lear. Out of my sight! Kent. See better, Lear; and let me still rem The true blink of thine eye. Lear. Now, by Apollo, Kent. Thou swear'st thy gods in vain. Lear. [Laying his hand on his sword] O, vassall! misconstrued Alb. Dear sir, forbear. Corn. Lear. Kent. Do; Kill thy physician, and the fee bestow Upon thy foul disease. Revoke thy doom: O, whilst I can vent clamour from my throat, I'll tell thee thou dost evil. Lear. Hear me, recreant On thine allegiance, hear me! Since thou hast sought to make us break our vow Which we durst never yet, and with strait pride To come between our sentence and our power Which nor our nature nor our place can bear, Our potency made good, take thy reward. Five days we do allot thee, for provision To shield thee from diseases of the world; And on the sixth to turn thy hated back Upon our kingdom! lo, on the tenth day follow! Thy banish'd trunk be found in our dominion! The moment is thy death. Away! by Jupito This shall not be revoked. Kent. Fare thee well, king: sith thus thou appear, Freedom lives hence, and banishment is here. [To Cornwall] The gods to their dear shelter thee, maid, [Exeunt all but France, Goneril, Regan, and Cordelia.
KING LEAR

France. Bid farewell to your sisters. 270

Cor. The jewels of our father, with wash'd

eyes.

Cordelia leaves you: I know you what you are;
And like a sister am most loath to call

Your faults as they are named. Use well our

father:
To your professed bosoms I commit him:
But yet, alas, stood I within his grace,
I would prefer him to a better place.
So, farewell to you both.

Reg. Prescribe not us our duties.

Gon. Let your study 279

Be to content your lord, who hath received you
At fortune's alms. You have obedience scant,
And well are worth the want that you have wanted.

Cor. Time shall unfold what plaited cunning

hides:
Who cover faults, at last shame them derides.
Well may you prosper!

France. Come, my fair Cordelia.

Gon. Sister, it is not a little I have to say of Hath lost me in your liking.

Better thou

Hadst not been born than not to have pleased me better.

France. Is it but this,—a tardiness in nature
Which often leaves the history unspeak'd
That it intends to do? My lord of Burgundy,
What say you to the lady? Love's not love 241
When it is mingled with regards that stand
Aloof from the entire point. Will you have her?
She is herself a dowry.

Burg. Royal Lear,
Give but that portion which yourself proposed,
And here I take Cordelia by the hand,
Duchess of Burgundy.

Lear. Nothing: I have sworn; I am firm.

Burg. I am sorry, then, you have so lost a

father
That you must lose a husband.

Cor. Peace be with Burgundy! 250
Since that respects of fortune are his love,
I shall not be his wife.

France. Fairest Cordelia, that art most rich, being poor;
Most choice, forsaken; and most loved, despis'd!
This and thy virtues here I seize upon:
Be it lawful I take up what's cast away,
Gods, gods! this strange that from their cold'st neglect

My love should kindle to inflamed respect.
Thy dowerless daughter, king, thrown to my chance,

Is queen of us, of ours, and our fair France: 260
Not all the dukes of waterish Burgundy
Can buy this unprized precious maid of me.
Bid them farewell, Cordelia, though unkind:
Thou losest here, a better where to find.

Lear. Thou hast her, France: let her be thine; for we

Have no such daughter, nor shall ever see
That face of hers again. Therefore be gone
Without our grace, our love, our benison.

Come, noble Burgundy.

[Flourish. Exeunt all but France, Goneril, Regan, and Cordelia.

France. Bid farewell to your sisters. 270

Cor. The jewels of our father, with wash'd

eyes.

Cordelia leaves you: I know you what you are;
And like a sister am most loath to call

Your faults as they are named. Use well our

father:
To your professed bosoms I commit him:
But yet, alas, stood I within his grace,
I would prefer him to a better place.
So, farewell to you both.

Reg. Prescribe not us our duties.

Gon. Let your study 279

Be to content your lord, who hath received you
At fortune's alms. You have obedience scant,
And well are worth the want that you have

wanted.

Cor. Time shall unfold what plaited cunning

hides:
Who cover faults, at last shame them derides.
Well may you prosper!

France. Come, my fair Cordelia.

Gon. Sister, it is not a little I have to say of what most nearly appertain to us both. I think our father will hence to-night.

Reg. That's most certain, and with you; next month with us.

Gon. You see how full of changes his age is; the observation we have made of it hath not been little: he always loved our sister most; and with what poor judgement he hath now cast her off appears too grossly.

Reg. 'Tis the infirmity of his age: yet he hath ever but slenderly known himself.

Gon. The best and soundest of his time hath been but rash; then must we look to receive from his age, not alone the imperfections of long-engraffed condition, but therewithal the unruly waywardness that infirm and cholerick years bring with them.

Reg. Such unconstant starts are we like to have from him as this of Kent's banishment.

Gon. There is further compliment of leave-taking between France and him. Pray you, let's hit together: if our father carry authority with such dispositions as he bears, this last surrender of his will but offend us.

Reg. We shall further think on't.

Gon. We must do something, and 'tis the heat. [Exeunt.

SCENE II. The Earl of Gloucester’s castle.

Enter Edmund, with a letter.

Edm. Thou, nature, art my goddess; to thy law
My services are bound. Wherefore should I Stand in the plague of custom, and permit
The curiosity of nations to deprive me,
For that I am some twelve or fourteen moons
Shines Lag of a brother? Why bastard? wherefore base?
When my dimensions are as well compact,
My mind as generous, and my shape as true,
As honest madam's issue? Why brand they us
With base? with baseness? bastardy? base? base?
Who, in the lusty stealth of nature, take
More composition and fierce quality
Than doth, within a dull, stale, tired bed,
Go to the creating a whole tribe of fops,
Got 'tween asleep and wake? Well, then,
Legitimate Edgar, I must have your land;
Our father's love is to the bastard Edmund
As to the legitimate: fine word,—legitimate!
Well, my legitimate, if this letter speed,
And my invention thrive, Edmund the base
Shall top the legitimate. I grow; I prosper:
Now, gods, stand up for bastards!

Enter Gloucester.

Glou. Kent banish'd thus! and France in choler parted!
And the king gone to-night! subscribed his power!
Confined to exhibition! All this done
Upon the gad! Edmund, how now! what news?
Edm. So please your lordship, none.

Glou. Why so earnestly seek you to put up
My what letter?

Edm. I know no news, my lord.

Glou. What paper were you reading?
KING LEAR.

Edm. Come, come; when saw you my father last?
Edg. Why, the night gone by.
Edm. Spake you with him?
Edg. Ay, two hours together.
Edm. Parted you in good terms? Found you no displeasure in him by word or countenance?
Edg. None at all.
Edm. Bethink yourself wherein you may have offended him: and at my entreaty forbear his presence till some little time hath qualified the heat of his displeasure; which at this instant so rageth in him, that with the mischief of your person it would scarcely allay.
Edg. Some villain hath done me wrong. Edm. That's my fear. I pray you, have a continent forbearance till the speed of his rage goes slower: and, as I say, retire with me to my lodging, from whence I will fitly bring you to hear my lord speak: pray ye, go; there's my key: if you do stir abroad, go armed.
Edg. Armed, brother!
Edm. Brother, I advise you to the best: go armed: I am no honest man if there be any good meaning towards you: I have told you that what I have seen and heard; but faintly, nothing like the image and horror of it: pray you, away.
Edg. Shall I hear from you anon?
Edm. I do serve you in this business.

Enter Edgar.

EDM. This is the excellent foppery of the world, that, when we are sick in fortune,—often surfeit of our own behaviour,—we make guilty our disasters the sun, the moon, and the stars: if we were villains by necessity; foes by hea-

Edg. Who now, brother Edmund! what se-

Edm. I am thinking, brother, of a prediction ad this other day, what should follow these, Edg. Do you busy yourself about that?
Edm. I promise you, the effects he writes of need unhappily; as of unnaturalness between child and the parent; death, death, dishonos of ancient amities; divisions in state, me-

Edg. How long have you been a sectary as-

Edm. There these late eclipses in the sun and moon tend no good to us: though the wisdom of na-

Edm. Enter Edgar, and Oswald, her steward.

Osw. He's coming, madam; I hear him.

Edm. Put on what weary negligence you please, You and your fellows; I'd have it come to question: If he dislike it, let him to our sister, Whose mind and mine, I know, in that are one, Not to be over-ruled. Idle old man, That still would manage those authorities That he hath given away! Now, by my life, Old foils are babes again; and must be used With checks as flatteries,—when they are seen abused.
Remember what I tell you.

Osw. Well, madam.

Edm. And let his knights have colder looks among you;
What grows of it, no matter; advise your fellows so:
I would breed from hence occasions, and I shall,
That I may speak: I'll write straight to my sister,
To hold my very course. Prepare for dinner. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV. A hall in the same.

Enter Kent, disguised.

KENT. If but as well I other accents borrow,
That can my speech defuse, my good intent
May carry through itself to that full issue
For which I razed my likeness. Now, banish'd Kent,
If thou canst serve where thou dost stand con-
demn'd,
So may it come, thy master, whom thou lov'st,
Shall find thee full of labours.

Horns within. Enter Lear, Knights, and Attendants.

LEAR. Let me not stay a jot for dinner; go get it ready. [Exit an Attendant.] How now!
What art thou?
KENT. A man, sir.
LEAR. What dost thou profess? what wouldst thou with us?
KENT. I do profess to be no less than I seem;
to serve him truly that will put me in trust; to love him that is honest; to converse with him that is wise, and says little; to fear judgement;
to fight when I cannot choose; and to eat no fish.
LEAR. What art thou?
KENT. A very honest-hearted fellow, and as poor as the king.
LEAR. If thou be as poor for a subject as he is for a king, thou art poor enough. What wouldst thou?
KENT. Service.
LEAR. Who wouldst thou serve?
KENT. You.
LEAR. Dost thou know me, fellow?
KENT. No, sir; but you have that in your consequence which I would fain call master. 30
LEAR. What's that?
KENT. Authority.
LEAR. What services canst thou do?
KENT. I can keep honest counsel, ride, run, mar a curious tale in telling it, and deliver a plain message bluntly; that which ordinary men are fit for, I am qualified in; and the best of me is diligence.
LEAR. How old art thou?
KENT. Not so young, sir, to love a woman for singing, nor so old to dote on her for any thing:
I have years on my back forty eight.
LEAR. Follow me; thou shalt serve me: if I like thee no worse after dinner, I will not part from thee yet. Dinner, ho, dinner! Where's my knife? my fool? Go you, and call my fool hither. [Exit an Attendant.

Enter Oswald.

You, you, sirrah, where's my daughter?
OSWALD. So please you. 39
LEAR. What says the fellow there? Call the clotpoll back. [Exit a Knight.] Where's my fool, ho? I think the world's asleep.

Re-enter Knight.

How now! where's that mongrel?
KNIGHT. He says, my lord, your daughter
not well.
LEAR. Why came not the slave back to when I called him.
KNIGHT. Sir, he answered me in the round manner, he would not.
LEAR. He would not!
KNIGHT. My lord, I know not what the matter is; but, to my judgement, your highness not entertained with that ceremonious affect as you were wont; there's a great abatement kindness appears as well in the general depre-cants as in the duke himself also and your daugther.
LEAR. Ha! sayest thou so?
KNIGHT. I beseech you, pardon me, my lord, if I be mistaken; for my duty cannot be sil
when I think your highness wronged.
LEAR. Thou but rememberest me of mine o conception: I have perceived a most faint ne of late; which I have rather blamed as mine o jealous curiosity than as a very pretense and po pose of unkindness: I will look further into but where's my fool? I have not seen him two days.
KNIGHT. Since my young lady's going in France, sir, the fool hath much pined away.
LEAR. No more of that; I have noted it w Go you, and tell my daughter I would speak w her. [Exit an Attendant.] Go you, call hit my fool. [Exit an Attendant.

"Re-enter Oswald."

O, you sir, you, come you hither, sir: who an
sir?
OSWALD. My lady's father.
LEAR. 'My lady's father!' my lord's kma
you whoreson dog! you slave! you cur!
OSWALD. I am none of these, my lord; I bes your pardon.
LEAR. Do you bandy looks with me, rascal?
[Striking him.]
OSWALD. I'll not be struck, my lord.
LEAR. Nor tripped neither, you base foot-player.
[Tripping up his heel.]
OSWALD. I thank thee, fellow; thou servest me and I'll love thee.
LEAR. Come, sir, arise, away! I'll teach y differences: away, away! If you will make your lubber's length again, tarry: but away!
to: have you wisdom? so. 40
[Words Oswald.]
LEAR. Now, my friendly knave, I thank th there's earnest of thy service.
[Giving Kent money.

Enter Fool.

FOOL. Let me hire him too: here's my ex comb.
LEAR. How now, my pretty knave! how do
thou?
FOOL. Sirrah, you were best take my cocc

KENT. Why, fool?
FOOL. Why, for taking one's part that's our favour: nay, an thou canst not smile as the s sits, thou 'lt catch cold shortly: there, take fool: why, this fellow has banished two on's daughters, and did the third a blessing against is will; if thou follow him, thou must needs weary coxcomb. How now, nuncle! Would I had no coxcombs and two daughters!

Lear. Why, my boy? 119

Fool. If I gave them all my living, I'd keep my hands myself. There's mine; beg another thy daughters.

Lear. Take heed, sirrah; the whips.

Fool. Truth's a dog must to kennel; he must whipped out, when Lady the brach may stand the fire and stink.

Lear. A pestilent gall me to!

Fool. Sirrah, I'll teach thee a speech.

Lear. Do.

Fool. Mark it, nuncle:

Have more than thou showest,
Speak less than thou knowest,
Lend less than thou owest,
Ride more than thou goest,
Learn more than thou knowest,
Set less than thou showest:
Leave thy drink and thy whore,
And keep in-a-door,
And thou shalt have more
Than two tens to a score.

Kent. This is nothing, fool.

Fool. Then 'tis like the breath of an unfe'd yer; you gave me nothing for't. Can you like no use of nothing, nuncle?

Lear. Why, no, boy; nothing can be made t of nothing.

Fool. [To Kent] Prithee, tell him, so much rent of his land comes to; he will not believe fool.

Lear. A bitter fool!

Fool. Dost thou know the difference, my boy, when a bitter fool and a sweet fool?

Lear. No, lad; teach me.

Fool. That lord that counsel'd thee
To give away thy land,
Come place him here by me,
Do thou for him stand:
The sweet and bitter fool
Will presently appear;
The one in money here,
The other found out there.

Fool. Dost thou call me fool, boy?

All thy other titles thou hast given away;
'thou wast born with,

Kent. This is not altogether fool, my lord.

Fool. No, faith, lords and great men will not me; if I had a monopoly out, they would have t'ont; and laddies too, they will not let me
'el fool to myself; they'll be snatching, me an egg, nuncle, and I'll give thee two

Lear. What two crowns shall they be?

Fool. Why, after I have cut the egg i' the idle, and eat up the meat, the two crowns of idle, and gavest away both parts, thou borest ass on thy back o'er the dirt: thou hadst little in thy bald crown, when thou gavest thy men one away. If I speak like myself in this,
I'm whipped that first finds it so.

Fool. [singing] Fools had ne'er less wit in a year;
For wise men are grown foppish,

They know not how their wits to wear,
Their manners are so aspish.

Lear. When were you wont to be so full of songs, sirrah?

Fool. I have used it, nuncle, ever since thou middest thy daughters thy mothers: for when thou gavest them the rod, and put'st down thine own breeches, [singing] Then they for sudden joy did weep,
And I for sorrow sung,

That such a king should play bo-peep,
And go the fools among.

Prithee, nuncle, keep a schoolmaster that can teach thy fool to lie: I would fain learn to lie.

Lear. An you lie, sirrah, we'll have you whipped.

Fool. I marvel what kin thou and thy daughters are: they'll have me whipped for speaking true, thou'lt have me whipped for lying; and sometimes I am whipped for holding my peace.

I had rather be any kind o' thing than a fool: and yet I would not be thee, nuncle; thou hast pared thy wit o' both sides, and left nothing i' the midle: here comes one o' the parings.

Enter Goneril.

Lear. How now, daughter! what makes that frontlet on? Methinks you are too much of late i'the frown.

Fool. Thou wast a pretty fellow when thou hadst no need to care for her frowning: now thou art an O without a figure: I am better than thou art now; I am a fool, thou art nothing. [To Go.] Yes, forsooth, I will hold my tongue; so your face bids me, though you say nothing. Mum, mum, He that keeps nor crust nor crum,

Weary of all, shall want some.

[Pointing to Lear] That's a sheathed peascod.

Gon. Not only, sir, this your all-licensed fool,
But other of your insolent retainers, 221
Do hourly carp and quarrel; breaking forth
In rank and not-to-be endured riots. Sir,
I had thought, by making this well known unto you,
To have found a safe redress; but now grow fearful,
By what yourself too late have spoke and done,
That you protect this course, and put it on
By your allowance; which if you should, the fault
Would not 'scape censure, nor the redresses sleep,
Which, in the tender of a wholesome weal, 230
Might in their working do you that offence,
Which else were shame, that then necessity
Will call discreet proceeding.

Fool. For, you trow, nuncle,
The hedge-sparrow fed the cuckoo so long,
That it's had it head bit off by it young.

So, out went the candle, and we were left darkling.

Lear. Are you our daughter?

Gon. Come, sir,
I would you would make use of that good wisdom,
Whereof I know you are fraught; and put away
These dispositions, that of late transform you
From what you rightly are.

Fool. May not an ass know when the cart draws the horse? Whoop, Jug! I love thee.

Lear. Doth any here know me? This is not Doth Lear walk thus? speak thus? Where are his eyes? Either his notion weakens, his discernings Are lethargied—Ha! waking? 'tis not so. Who is it that can tell me who I am? 250

Foot. Lear's shadow. Lear. I would learn that; for, by the marks of sovereignty, knowledge, and reason, I should be false persuaded I had daughters. Foot. Which they will make an obedient father. Lear. Your name, fair gentlewoman? Gon. This admiration, sir, is much o' the savour Of other your new pranks. I do beseech you To understand my purposes aight: 260 As you are old and reverend, you should be wise. Here do you keep a hundred knights and squires; Men so disorder'd, so debosh'd and bold, That this our court, infected with their manners, Shows like a riotous inn: epicurism and lust Make it more like a tavern or a brothel Than a graced palace. The shame itself doth speak For instant remedy: be then desired By her, that else will take the thing she begs, A little to disquinty your train: 270 And the remainder, that shall still depend, To be such men as may befit your age, And know themselves and you.

Lear. Darkness and devils! Saddle my horses; call my train together. Degenerate bastard! I'll not trouble thee: Yet have I left a daughter. Gon. You strike my people; and your disorder'd rabble Make servants of their betters.

Enter ALBANY.

Lear. Woe, that too late repent,—[To Alb.] O sir, are you come? Is it your will? Speak, sir. Prepare my horses. Ingratitude, thou marble-hearted fiend, 281 More hideous when thou show'st thee in a child Than the sea-monster! Alb. Pray, sir, be patient. Lear. [To Gon.] Detested kite! thou liest: My train are men of choice and rarest parts, That all particulars of duty know, And in the most exact regard support The worships of their name. O most small fault, How ugly didst thou in Cordelia show! 289 That, like an engine, wrench'd my frame of nature From the fix'd place; drew from me my heart all love, And added to the gall. O Lear, Lear, Lear! Beat at this gate, that let thy folly in, [Striking his head. And thy dear judgement out! Go, go, my people. Alb. My lord, I am guiltless, as I am ignorant Of what hath moved you. Lear. It may be so, my lord. Hear, nature, hear; dear goddess, hear! Suspend thy purpose, if thou didst intend To make this creature fruitful! Into her womb convey sterility! 300 Dry up in her the organs of increase; And from her derogate body never spring A babe to honour her! If she must teem, Create her child of spleen; that it may live, And be a thwart dismated torment to her! Let it stamp wrinkles in her brow of youth; With cadent tears fret channels in her cheeks; Turn all her mother's pains and benefits To laughter and contempt; that she may feel How sharper than a serpent's tooth it is To have a thankless child! Away, away! [Ex Aib. Now, gods that we adore, whereof con this? Gon. Never afflict yourself to know the cause, But let his disposition have that scope That dotage gives it.

Re-enter Lear.

Lear. What, fifty of my followers at a clap Within a fortnight! Alb. What's the matter, sir? Lear. I'll tell thee: [To Gon.] Life a death! I am ashamed That thou hast power to shake my manhood thus That these hot tears, which break from me p force, Should make thee worth them. Blasts and fe Make thee! 319 The untended woundings of a father's curse Pierce every sense about thee! Old fond eye Beweep this cause again, I'll pluck ye out, And cast you, with the waters that you lose, To temper clay. Yea, is it come to this? Let it be so: yet have I left a daughter, Who, I am sure, is kind and comfortable: When she shall hear this of thee, with her nail She'll play thy volvish visage. Thou shalt find That I'll resume the shape which thou dost think I have cast off for ever: thou shalt, I warrant thee. [Exeunt Lear, Kent, and Attendants. Gon. Do you mark that, my lord? Alb. I cannot be so partial, Goneral, To the great love I bear you,— Gon. Pray you, content. What, Oswald, [To the Fool] You, sir, more knave than knave, after your master. Fool. Nuncle Lear, nuncle Lear, tarry, take the fool with thee. A fox, when one has caught her, And such a daughter, Should sure to the slaughter, If my cap would buy a halter: So the fool follows after. [Ex Gon. This man hath had good counsel: hundred knights! 'Tis politic and safe to let him keep At point a hundred knights: yes, that, on ev' dream, Each buzz, each fancy, each complaint, dislikes He may enguarnd his dotage with their powers And hold our lives in mercy. Oswald, I say! Alb. Well, you may fear too far. Gon. Safer than trust too far: Let me still take away the harms I fear, Not fear still to be taken: I know his heart. What he hath utter'd I have writ my sister: If she sustain him and his hundred knights, When I have show'd the unfitness,—

Re-enter Oswald.

How now, Osw What, have you writ that letter to my sister? Osw. Yes, madam.
KING LEAR.

Get. Take you some company, and away to horse: 360 form her full of my particular fear; I thereto add such reasons of your own may compact it more. Get you gone; d hasten your return. [Exit Oswald.] No, no, my lord, is milky gentleness and course of yours ough I condemn not, yet, under pardon, are much more attack'd for want of wisdom an praised for harmful mildness. 44

148. How far your eyes may pierce I cannot tell:
ing to better, oft we mar what's well. 370

149. Nay, then—

150. Well, well; the event. [Exit.]

SCENE V. Court before the same. Enter Lear, Kent, and Fool.

Lear. Go you before to Gloucester with these ers. Acquaint my daughter no further with thing you know than comes from her demand of the letter. If your diligence be not speedy, full be there afore you. Kent. I will not sleep, my lord, till I have vered your letter. [Exit. Fool. If a man's brains were in's heels, were't in danger of kibes? Lear. Ay, boy. Fool. Then, I prithee, be merry; thy wit shall er go slip-shod. Lear. Ha, ha, ha! Fool. Shalt see thy other daughter will use kindly; for though she's as like this as a p's like an apple, yet I can tell what I can tell. Lear. Why, what canst thou tell, my boy? Fool. She will taste as like this as a crab does crab. Thou canst tell why one's nose stands middle on's face? Lear. No. Fool. Why, to keep one's eyes of either side's; that what a man cannot smell out, he may into. Lear. I did her wrong— Fool. Canst tell how an oyster makes his 39

10. No. Fool. Nor I neither; but I can tell why a snail house. Lear. Why? Fool. Why, to put his head in; not to give it y to his daughters, and leave his horns with-a case. Lear. I will forget my nature. So kind a art Be my horses ready? 40 Fool. Thy asses are gone about 'em. The on why the seven stars are no more than seven pretty reason. Lear. Because they are not eight? Fool. Yes, indeed: thou wouldst make a good 41 Lear. To take 't again perforce! Monster attitude! Fool. If thou wert my fool, uncle, I'd have beaten for being old before thy time. Lear. How 's that? Fool. Thou shouldst not have been old till hadst been wise.

Lear. O, let me not be mad, not mad, sweet heaven! 50 Keep me in temper: I would not be mad!

Enter Gentleman.

How now! are the horses ready? Gent. Ready, my lord.

Lear. Come, boy.

Fool. She that's a maid now, and laughs at my departure, Shall not be a maid long, unless things be cut shorter. [Exit.

ACT II.

SCENE I. The Earl of Gloucester's castle. Enter Edmund, and Curan meets him.

Edm. Save thee, Curan. Cur. And you, sir. I have been with your father, and given him notice that the Duke of Cornwall and Regan his duchess will be here with him this night.

Edm. How comes that? Cur. Nay, I know not. You have heard of the news abroad; I mean the whispers of, for they are yet but ear-kissing arguments?

Edm. Not I: pray you, what are they? Cur. Have you heard of no likely wars toward, 'twixt the Dukes of Cornwall and Albany?

Edm. Not a word. Cur. You may do, then, in time. Fare you well, sir. [Exit. Edm. The duke be here to-night? The better! best! This weaves itself perforce into my business. My father hath set guard to take my brother; And I have one thing, of a quasy question, Which I must act: briefness and fortune, work! Brother, a word; descend: brother, I say! 21

Enter Edgar.

My father watches: O sir, fly this place; Intelligence is given where you are and hid; You have now the good advantage of the night: Have you not spoken 'gainst the Duke of Cornwall? He's coming hither; now, i' the night, i' the haste, And Regan with him: have you nothing said Upon his party 'gainst the Duke of Albany? Advise yourself.

Edg. I am sure on't, not a word. Edm. I hear my father coming; pardon me; In cunning I must draw my sword upon you: 32 Draw; seem to defend yourself; now quit you well. Yield: come before my father. Light, ho, here! Fly, brother. Torches, torches! So, farewell. [Exit Edgar. Some blood drawn on me would beget opinion [Wounds his arm. Of my more fierce endeavour: I have seen drunkards Do more than this in sport. Father, father! Stop, stop! No help?

Enter Gloucester, and Servants with torches.

Glou. Now, Edmund, where's the villain?
Edm. Here stood he in the dark, his sharp sword out,
Mumbling of wicked charms, conjuring the moon
To stand auspicious mistress,— Glo. But where is he?
Edm. Look, sir, I bleed.
Glo. Where is the villain, Edmund?
Edm. Fled this way, sir. When by no means he could—
Glo. Pursue him, ho! Go after. [Exeunt some Servants.] By no means what?
Edm. Persuade me to the murder of your lordship;
But that I told him, the revenging gods
'Gainst parricides did all their thunders bend;
Spoke, with how manifold and strong a bond
The child was bound to the father; sir, in fine, 50
Seeing how loathly opposite I stood
To his unnatural purpose, in fell motion,
With his prepared sword, he charges home
My unprovided body, lanced mine arm:
But when he saw my best alarum'd spirits,
Bold in the quarrel's right, roused to the encounter,
Or whether gasted by the noise I made,
Full suddenly he fled.
Glo. Let him fly far:
Not in this land shall he remain uncaught;
And found—dispatch. The noble duke my master,
My worthy arch and patron, comes to-night: 61
By his authority I will proclaim it,
That he which finds him shall deserve our thanks,
Bringing the murderous coward to the stake;
He that conceals him, death.
Edm. When I dissuaded him from his intent,
And found him pight to do it, with curst speech
I threaten'd to discover him: he replied,
'Thou unpossessing bastard! dost thou think,
If I would stand against thee, would the reposal
Of any trust, virtue, or worth in thee?
Make thy words faith'd? No: what I should deny,—
As this I would: ay, though thou didst produce
My very character,—I'd turn it all
To thy suggestion, plot, and damned practice:
And thou must make a dullard of the world,
If they not thought the profits of my death
Were very pregnant and potential spurs
To make thee seek it.'
Glo. Strong and fasten'd villain!
Would he deny his letter? I never got him. 80 [Tucket within.
Hark, the duke's trumpets! I know not why he comes.
All parts I'll bar; the villain shall not scape;
The duke must grant me that: besides, his picture
I will send far and near, that all the kingdom
May have due note of him; and of my land,
Loyal and natural boy, I'll work the means
To make him capable.

Enter CORNWALL, REGAN, and Attendants.
Corn. How now, my noble friend! since I came hither,
Which I can call but now, I have heard strange news.
Reg. If it be true, all vengeance comes too short
Which can pursue the offender. How dost, lord?
Glo. O, madam, my old heart is crack'd, 90
Glo. O, lady, lady, shame would have it he
Reg. Was he not companion with the riot knight?
That tend upon my father?
Glo. I know not, madam: 'tis too bad, bad.
Edm. Yes, madam, he was of that consort.
Reg. No marvel, then, though he were ill felected: 'Tis they have put him on the old man's death
To have the expense and waste of his revenue
I have this present evening from my sister
Been well to sojourn at my house, I'll not be there.
Corn. Nor I, assure thee, Regan.
Edmund; I hear that you have shown your fat
A child-like office.
Edm. 'Twas my duty, sir.
Glo. He did bewray his practice; and ceased
This hurt you see, striving to apprehend him.
Corn. Is he pursued?
Glo. Ay, my good lord.
Corn. If he be taken, he shall never more
Be fear'd of doing harm: make your own purp
How in my strength you please. For you, my mound,
Whose virtue and obedience doth this instant
So much commend itself, you shall be ours:
Natures of such deep trust we shall much need You we first seize on.
Edm. I shall serve you, sir,
Truly, however else.
Glo. For him I thank your grace.
Corn. You know not why we came to you,—
Reg. Thus out of season, threading dark-e night:
Occasions, noble Gloucester, of some poise,
Wherein we must have use of your advice:
Our father he hath writ, so hath our sister,
Of differences, which I least thought it fit
To answer from our home; the several mess ers
From hence attend dispatch. Our good old frien
Lay comforts to your bosom; and bestow
Your needful counsel to our business,
Which craves the instant use.
Glo. I serve you, madam: Your
Your graces are right welcome. [Exeunt.

SCENE II. Before Gloucester's castle.

Enter KENT and OSWALD, severally.

Kent. Ay.
Osw. Where may we set our horses?
Kent. I' the mire.

[Act III.]

Scene III. A wood.

Enter Edgar.

Edg. I heard myself proclaim'd; And by the happy hollow of a tree Escaped the hunt. No port is free; no place, That guard, and most unusual vigilance, Does not attend my taking. While I mean to escape, I will preserve myself; and am on both sides To take the basest and most poorest shape That ever penury, in contempt of man, Brought near to beast: my face I'll grime with filth; Blanket my loins; elf all my hair in knots; And with presented nakedness out-face The winds and persecutions of the sky. The country gives me proof and precedent Of Bedlam beggars, who, with roaring voices, Strike in their mumbled and mortified bare Pins, wooden pricks, nails, sprigs of rosemary And with this horrible object, from low farms, Poor pelting villages, sheep-cotes, and mills, Sometime with lunatic bans, sometime in prayers, Enforce their charity. Poor Turlygod! Poor Tom! That's something yet: Edgar I nothing am.

Scene IV. Before Gloucester's castle. A wood in the stocks.

Enter Lear, Fool, and Gentleman.

Lear. 'Tis strange that they should so deal from home, And not send back my messenger.

Gent. As I learn'd the night before there was no purpose in the Of this remove.

Lear. Hail to thee, noble master! Hal! Makest thou this shame thy pastime?

Kent. No, my lord. Fool. Ha, ha! he wears cruel garters. He are tied by the heads, dogs and bears by the nether-legs, and men by the legs: when a man's over-lusty at legs, then he wears wooden nether-stocks.

Lear. What's he that hath so much thy pleasure? Mistook To set thee here?

Kent. It is both he and she; your son and daughter.

Lear. No.

Kent. Yes.

Lear. No, I say.

Kent. I say, yea.

Lear. No, no, they would not.

Kent. Yes, they have.

Lear. By Jupiter, I swear, no.

Kent. By Juno, I swear, ay.

Lear. They durst not order.

They could not, would not do it; 'tis worse for murder, To do upon respect such violent outrage: Resolve me, with all modest haste, which way Thou mightst deserve, or they impose, this us Coming from us.
KING LEAR.

KENT. My lord, when at their home
I commend your highness' letters to them,
I was risen from the place that show'd duty kneeling, came there in a reeking post, 30
'd in his haste, half breathless, panting forth a General his mistress salutations;
'er letters, spite of interpolation,
'mently they read: on whose contents,
'summon'd their meiny, straight took horse;
manded me to follow, and attend leisure of their service; gave me cold looks:
meeting here the other messenger, welcome, I perceived, had poison'd mine,— the very fellow that of late lay'd so saucily against your highness,— more man than wit about me, drew:
ised the house with loud and coward cries.

But fathers that bear bags

RE-ENTER LEAR, WITH GLOUCESTER.

: Deny to speak with me? They are ck they are weary?

They have travell'd all the night? Mere fetches;
The images of revolt and flying off.
Forth me a better answer.

GLOU. My dear lord,
You know the fiery quality of the duke;
How unremovable and fix'd he is
In his own course.

LEAR. Vengeance! plague! death! confusion!
Fiery? what quality? Why, Gloucester, Gloucester,
I'd speak with the Duke of Cornwall and his wife.

GLOU. Well, my good lord, I have inform'd them so.

LEAR. Inform'd them! Dost thou understand me, man?

GLOU. Ay, my good lord.

LEAR. The king would speak with Cornwall;
the dear father
Would with his daughter speak, commands her service:
Are they inform'd of this? My breath and blood!
Fiery? the fiery duke? Tell the hot duke that—
No, but not yet: may be he is not well:
Infamy doth still neglect all office
Whereeto our health is bound; we are not ourselves.
When nature, being oppress'd, commands the
mind
To suffer with the body: I'll forbear:
Am and fall'n out with my more header will,
To take the indisposed and sickly fit
For the sound man. Death on my state! wherefore
[Looking on Kent.]
Should he sit here? This act persuades me
That this remotion of the duke and her
Is practice only. Give me my servant forth,
Go tell the duke and 's wife I'd speak with them,
Now, presently: bid them come forth and hear
me,
Or at their chamber-door I'll beat the drum
Till it cry sleep to death.

GLOU. I would have all well betwixt you. [Exit.
LEAR. O me, my heart, my rising heart! but,
down!

POOL. Cry to it, uncle, as the cockney did to the eels when she put 'em in the paste alive; she knapped 'em o' the coxcombs with a stick, and cried 'Down, wantons, down!' 'Twas her brother that, in pure kindness to his horse, buttered his hay.

Enter CORNWALL, REGAN, GLOUCESTER, and Servants.

LEAR. Good morrow to you both.
CORN. Hail to your grace! [Kent is set at liberty.
LEAR. Am I glad to see your highness.
LEAR. Regan, I think you are; I know what reason
I have to think so: if thou shouldst not be glad,
I would divorce me from thy mother's tomb,
Sepulchring an adulteress. [To Kent] O, are you free?

Some other time for that. Beloved Regan,
Thy sister's naught: O Regan, she hath tied Sharp-tooth'd unkindness, like a vulture, here:
[Points to his heart.
I can scarce speak to thee; thou'lt not believe
With how depraved a quality—O Regan!

Reg. I pray you, sir, take patience; I have hope

You less know how to value her desert
Than she to scant her duty.

Lear. Say, how is that?

Reg. I cannot think my sister in the least
Would fail her obligation: if, sir, perchance
She have restrain'd the riots of your followers,
'Tis on such ground, and to such wholesome end,
As clears her from all blame.

Lear. My curses on her!

Reg. O, sir, you are old;
Nature in you stands on the very verge
Of her confine: you should be ruled and led
By some discretion, that discerns your state
Better than you yourself. Therefore, I pray you,
That to our sister you do make return;
Say you have wrong'd her, sir.

Lear. Ask her forgiveness?
Do you but mark how this becomes the house:
'Dear daughter, I confess I am old;
Age is unnecessary: on my knees I beg
That you 'vouchsafe me raiment, bed, and food.'

Reg. Good sir, no more; these are unsightly tricks:
Return you to my sister.

Lear. [Rising] Never, Regan:
She hath abated me of half my train;
Look'd black upon me; struck me with her tongue,
Most serpent-like, upon the very heart:
All the stored vengeance of heaven fall
On her ingratitude! Strike her young bones,
You taking airs, with lameness!

Corn. Fie, sir, fie!

Lear. You nimble lightnings, dart your blindness
Into her scornful eyes! Infect her beauty,
You fen-suck'd fogs, drawn by the powerful sun,
To fall and blast her pride!

Reg. O the blest gods! so will you wish on me,
When the rash mood is on.

Lear. No, Regan, thou shalt never have my curse:
Thy tender-hefted nature shall not give Thee o'er to harshness: her eyes are fierce; but thine
Do comfort and not burn. 'Tis not in thee
To grudge my pleasures, to cut off my train,
To bandy hasty words, to scant my sizes,
And in conclusion to oppose the bolt
Against my coming in: thou better know'st
The offices of nature, bond of childhood,
Effects of courtesy, dues of gratitude;
Thy half o' the kingdom hast thou not forgot,
Wherein I thee endow'd.

Reg. Good sir, to the purpose.

Lear. Who put my man i' the stocks?

[Thick within.

Corn. What trumpeter's that?

Reg. I know't, my sister's: this approves her letter,
That she would soon be here.

Enter Oswald.

Lear. This is a slave, whose easy-born pride
Dwells in the fickle grace of her he follows.
O, varlet, from my sight! I,
Corn. What means your grace?

Lear. Who stock'd my servant? Regan have good hope
Thou didst not know on. Who comes I
O heavens,

Enter Goneril.

If you do love old men, if your sweet sway
Allow obedience, if yourselves are old,
Make it your cause; send down, and take part!

Gon. Why not by the hand, sir? How I offended?
All's not offence that indiscretion finds
And dotage terms so.

Lear. O sides, are you too tough
Will you yet hold? How came my man in stocks?
Corn. I set him there, sir: but his own orders Deserved much less advancement.

Lear. You! did y
Reg. I pray you, father, being weak, see
If, till the expiration of your month,
You will return and sojourn with my sister,
Dismissing half your train, come then to me
I am now from home, and out of that provis
Which shall be needful for your entertain'ment.

Lear. Return to her, and fifty men dismiss.
No, rather I abjure all roofs, and choose
To wage against the enmity o' the air:
To be a comrade with the wolf and owl,—
Necessity's sharp pinch! Return with her! Why, the hot-blooded France, that dowserless
Our youngest born, I could as well be brough
To kneel his throne, and, squire-like, peniso
To keep base life afoot. Return with her?
Nor shall I return but to be slave and suptum
To this detested groom. [Pointing at OsI

KING LEAR.

Scene IV.

KING. I dare avouch it, sir: what, fifty followers? not well? What should you need of more? or so many, sith that both charge and danger gain so great a number? How, in one house, did many people, under two commands, dandle? 'Tis hard; almost impossible. Why might not you, my lord, receive attendance on those that she calls servants or from mine? Why not, my lord? If they then chanced to slack you, could control them. If you will come to me,— now I spy a danger,—I entreat you ring but five and twenty: to no more I give place or notice.

AR. I gave you all—

KING. And in good time you gave it. AR. Made you my guardians, my depositaries; kept a reservation to be follow'd in such a number. What, must I come to you five and twenty, Regan? said you so? And speak'ant again, my lord; no more with me.

AR. Those wicked creatures yet do look well-favour'd, others are more wicked; not being the worst in some rank of praise. [To Gon.] I'll go with thee: fifty yet doth double five-and-twenty, thou art twice her love.

AR. Hear me, my lord: need you five and twenty, ten, or five, shall bow in a house where twice so many a command to tend you?

KING. What need one? AR. O, reason not the need: our basest beggars n the poorest thing superfluous: v not nature more than nature needs, l's life's as cheap as beast's: thou art a lady; ly to go warm were gorgeous, 271 nature needs not what thou gorgeous wear'st, h scarcely keeps thee warm. But, for true need,—heavens, give me that patience, patience I need! see me here, you gods, a poor old man, ll of grief as age; wretched in both! ye you that stir these daughters' hearts ust their father, fool me not so much ar it tamely; touch me with noble anger, et not women's weapons, water-drops, 280 my man's cheeks! No, you unnatural hags, have such revenges on you both, all the world shall—I will do such things,— they are, yet I know not; but they shall be errors of the earth. You think I'll weep; 'll not weep: full cause of weeping; but this heart break into a hundred thousand flaws, I'll weep. O fool, I shall go mad!

Exeunt Lear, Gloucester, Kent, and Fool.

Storm and tempest.

Gon. Let us withdraw; 'twill be a storm. 290 Reg. This house is little: the old man and his people Cannot be well bestow'd. Gon. 'Tis his own blame; hath put himself from rest, And must needs taste his folly. Reg. For his particular, I'll receive him gladly, But not one follower. Gon. So am I purposed. Where is my lord of Gloucester? Corn. Follow'd the old man forth: he is return'd.

Re-enter Gloucester.

Glou. The king is in high rage. 300 Corn. Whither is he going? Glou. He calls to horse; but will I know not whither. Corn. 'Tis best to give him way; he leads himself. Gon. My lord, entreat him by no means to stay.

Glou. Alack, the night comes on, and the bleak winds Do sorely ruffle; for many miles about There's scarce a bush.

Reg. O, sir, to wilful men, The injuries that they themselves procure Must be their schoolmasters. Shut up your doors: He is attended with a desperate train: And what they may incense him to, being apt To have his ear abused, wisdom bids fear. 310 Corn. Shut up your doors, my lord; 'tis a wild night: My Regan counsels well: come out o' the storm. [Exeunt.]

ACT III.

Scene I. A heath.

Storm still. Enter Kent and a Gentleman, meeting.

Kent. Who's there, besides foul weather? Gent. One minded like the weather, most unquietly. Kent. I know you. Where's the king? Gent. Contending with the frettful element; Bids the wind blow the earth into the sea, Or swell the curled waters 'bove the main, That things might change or cease; tears his white hair, Which the impetuous blasts, with eyeless rage, Catch in their fury, and make nothing of; Strives in his little world of man to out-scorn 2 The to-and-fro-conflicting wind and rain. This night, wherein the cub-drawn bear would couch, The lion and the belly-pinched wolf Keep their fur dry, unbonneted he runs, And bids what will take all.

Kent. But who is with him? Gent. None but the fool; who labours to out-jest His heart-struck injuries.

Kent. Sir, I do know you; And dare, upon the warrant of my note,
Commend a dear thing to you. There is division,
Although as yet the face of it be cover’d
With mutual cunning, ‘twixt Albany and Cornwall;
Who have—as who have not, that their great stars
Throned and set high?—servants, who seem no less,
Which are to France the spies and speculations
Intelligent of our state; what hath been seen,
Either in sniffs and packings of the dukes,
Or the hard rein which both of them have borne
Against the old kind king; or something deeper,
Whereof perchance these are but furnishings;
But, true it is, from France there comes a power
Into this scatter’d kingdom; who already,
Wise in our negligence, have secret feet
In some of our best ports, and are at point
To show their open banner. Now to you:
If on my credit you dare build so far
To make your speed to Dover, you shall find
Some that will thank you, making just report
Of how unnatural and bemadding sorrow
The king hath cause to plain.
I am a gentleman of blood and breeding;
And, from some knowledge and assurance, offer
This office to you.
Gent. I will talk further with you.
Kent.
For confirmation that I am much more Than my out-wall, open this purse, and take
What it contains. If you shall see Cordelia,—
As fear not but you shall,—show her this ring;
And she will tell you who your fellow is
That yet you do not know. Fie on this storm!
I will go seek the king.
Gent. Give me your hand: have you no more
to say?
Kent. Few words, but, to effect, more than all yet;
That, when we have found the king,—in which your pain
That way, I’ll this,—he that first lights on him
Holla the other. [Exeunt severally.

Scene II. Another part of the heath. Storm still.

Enter Lear and Fool.

Lear. Blow, winds, and crack your cheeks!
rage! bow!
You cataracts and hurricanoes, spout
Till you have drench’d our steeples, drown’d the rocks!
You sulphurous and thought-executing fires,
Vaint-couriers to oak-cleaving thunderbolts,
Sing of my white head! And thou, all-shaking
thunder,
Smite flat the thick rotundity o’ the world!
Crack nature’s moulds, all germens spill at once,
That make ingratitude man!

Fool. O nuncle, court holy-water in a dry house is better than this rain-water out o’ door.
Good nuncle, in, and ask thy daughters’ blessing:
here’s a night pits neither wise man nor fool.

Lear. Rumble thy bellyful! Spit, fire!
sput, rain!
Nor rain, wind, thunder, fire, are my daughters:
I tax not you, you elements, with unkindness;
I never gave you kingdom, call’d you children,
You owe me no subscription: then let fall
Your horrible pleasure; here I stand, your sl.
A poor, infrink, weak, and desipied old man:
But yet I call you servile ministers,
That have with two pernicious daughters join
Your high engender’d battles ’gainst a head
So old and white as this. O! O! ’tis foul!

Fool. He that has a house to put’s heat has a good head-piece.
The cod-piece that will house
Before the head has any,
The head and he shall louse;
So beggars marry many.
The man that makes his toe
What he his heart should make
Shall of a corn cry wee,
And turn his sleep to wake.
For there was never yet fair woman but she mouths in a glass.

Lear. No, I will be the pattern of all patience.
I will say nothing.

Enter Kent.

Kent. Who’s there?

Fool. Marry, here’s grace and a cod-piece that’s a wise man and a fool.

Kent. Alas, sir, are you here? things love night.

Lear. And love not such nights as these; the wrathful
Gallow the very wanderers of the dark,
And make them keep their caves: since I was Such sheets of fire, such bursts of horrid thun
Such groans of roaring wind and rain, I never Remember to have heard: man’s nature ca cary
The affection nor the fear.

Lear. Let the good gods
That keep this dreadful pother o’er our head
Find out their enemies now. Tremble,

wretch,
That hast within thee undivulged crimes,
Unwipp’d of justice: hide thou, thou bloody h
Thou perjured, and thou simular man of virt
That art incestuous: caiffit, to pieces shake,
That under covert and convenient seeming
Hast practis’d on man’s life: close pent-up!
Rive your concealing continents, and cry
These dreadful summoners grace. I am a
More sin’d against than sinning.

Kent. Alack, bare-headed!
Gracious my lord, hard by here is a hol
Some friendship will it lend you ‘gainst tempest:

Repose you there: while I to this hard hou
More harder than the stones whereof’tis rai
Which even but now, demanding after you,
Denied me to come in—return, and force
Their scanted courtesy.

Lear. My wits begin to turn
Come on, my boy: how dost, my boy? art o
I am cold myself. Where’s this straw, my fel.
The art of our necessities is strange,
That can make vile things precious. Come,

A noble
Poor fool and knave, I have one part in my That’s sorry yet for thee.

Fool. [Singing] He that has and a little wit—

With hey, ho, the wind and the rain—

Must make content with his fortunes fit,
For the rain it raineth every day.
Lear. True, my good boy. Come, bring us to this hovel. [Exeunt Lear and Kent.
Fool. This is a brave night to cool a courtisan.
Speak a prophecy ere I go: 80
When priests are more in word than matter;
When brewers mar their malt with water;
When nobles are their tailors' tutors;
No heretics burn'd, but wenches' suitors;
When every case in law is right;
No squire in debt, nor no poor knight;
When slanders do not live in tongues;
Nor cutpurse come not to throats;
When usurers tell their gold i' the field;
And bawds and whores do churches build: 90
Then shall the realm of Albion
Come to great confusion:
Then comes the time, who lives to see't,
That going shall be used with feet.
Lear. Prophecy Merlin shall make; for I live
Before his time.

SCENE III. Gloucester's castle.

Enter Gloucester and Edmund.
Glouce. Alack, alack, Edmund, I like not this natural dealing. When I desired their leave
I might pity them, they took from me the use mine own house; charged me, on pain of their petual displeasure, neither to speak of him, seat for him, nor any way sustain him.
Edm. Most savage and unnatural!
Glouce. Go to; say you nothing. There's a vision betwixt the dukes; and a worse material that: I have received a letter this night:
dangerous to be spoken; I have locked the mer in my closet: these injuries the king now will be revenged home; there's part of a mer already footed: we must incline to the G. I will seek him, and privately relieve him:
you and maintain talk with the duke, that my rity be not of him perceived: if he ask for me, ill, and gone to bed. Though I die for it, less is threatened me, the king my old master be relieved. There is some strange thing Edmund; pray you, be careful. [Exit. At Edmund. This courtesy, forbide thee, shall the duke ently know; and of that letter too:
s seems a fair deserving, and must draw me which my father loses; no less than all;
younger rises when the old doth fall. [Exit.

SCENE IV. The heath. Before a hovel.

Enter Lear, Kent, and Fool.
Kent. Here is the place, my lord; good my lord, enter:
tyranny of the open night's too rough ature to endure. [Storm still.
 Lear. Let me alone.
Kent. Good my lord, enter here.
Lear. Will break my heart?
I had rather break mine own. Good my lord, enter.
Lear. Thou think'st 'tis much that this contensive storm
bes us to the skin: so 'tis to thee;
where the greater malady is fix'd,
The lesser is scarce felt. Thou'ldst shun a bear;
But if thy flight lay toward the raging sea, Thou'ldst meet the bear i' the mouth. When the mind's free.
The body's delicate: the tempest in my mind
Doth from my senses take all feeling else.
Save what beats there. Filial ingratitude!
Is it not as this mouth should tear this hand
For lifting food to't? But I will punish home:
No, I will weep no more. In such a night
To shut me out! Pour on; I will endure.
In such a night as this! O Regan, Goneril!
Your old kind father, whose frank heart gave all,—
O, that way madness lies; let me shun that;
No more of that.
Kent. Good my lord, enter here.
Lear. Prithhee, go in thyself; seek thine own ease:
This tempest will not give me leave to ponder
On things would hurt me more. But I'll go in.
[To the Fool] In, boy; go first. You houseless poverty,—
Nay, get thee in. I'll pray, and then I'll sleep.
[Fool goes in.
Poor naked wretches, where so' er ye are,
That bide the pelting of this pitiless storm,
How shall your houseless heads and unfed sides,
Your loop'd d and window'd raggedness, defend you
From seasons such as these? O, I have ta'en Too little care of this! Take physic, pomp;
Expose thyself to feel what wretches feel,
That thou mayst shake the superflux to them,
And show the heavens more just.
Edg. [Within] Fathom and half, fathom and half! Poor Tom! [The Fool runs out from the hovel.
Fool. Come not in here, nuncle, here's a spirit.
Help me, help me!
Kent. Give me thy hand. Who's there?
Fool. A spirit, a spirit: he says his name's poor Tom.
Kent. What art thou that dost grumble there?
I the straw? Come forth.

Enter Edgar disguised as a madman.
Edg. Away! the foul fiend follows me!
Through the sharp hathorn blows the cold wind.
Hum! I go to thy cold bed, and warm thee.
Lear. Hast thou given all to thy two daughters?
And art thou come to this?
Edg. Who gives any thing to poor Tom?
whom the foul fiend hath led through fire and through flame, and through ford and whirlpool, o'er bog and quagmire; that hath laid knives under his pillow, and halters in his paw; set ratsbane by his porridge: made him proud of heart, to ride on a bay trotting-horse over four-inch'd bridges, to course his own shadow for a traitor.
Bless thy five wits! Tom's a-cold,—O, do de, do de, do de. Bless thee from whirlwinds, star-blasting, and taking! Do poor Tom some charity, whom the foul fiend vexes; there could I have him now,—and there,—and there again, and there.
[Storm still.
Lear. What, have his daughters brought him to this pass?
Couldst thou save nothing? Didst thou give them
all?
Fool. Nay, he reserved a blanket, else we had been all shamed.

Lear. Now, all the plagues that in the pestilential air
Hang fated o'er men's faults light on thy daughters!

Kent. He hath no daughters, sir.

Lear. Death, traitor! nothing could have subdued nature to such a lowness but his unkind daughters.
Is it the fashion, that discarded fathers
Should have thus little mercy on their flesh?
Judicious punishment! 'twas this flesh begot
Those pelican daughters.

Edg. Pillicock sat on Pillicock-hill:
Hallow, hallow, loo, loo!

Fool. This cold night will turn us all to fools and madmen.

Edg. Take heed o' the foul fiend: obey thy parents; keep thy word justly; swear not; commit not with man's sworn spouse; set not thy sweet heart on proud array. Tom's a-cold.

Lear. What hast thou bower? Meditate a serving-man, proud in heart and mind;
that curled my hair; wore gloves in my cap;
served the lust of my mistress' heart, and did the act of darkness with her; swore as many oaths as I spake words, and broke them in the sweet face of heaven; one that slept in the contriving of lust, and waked to do it: wine loved I deeply, dice dearly; and in woman out-paramour'd the Turk:
false of heart, light of ear, bloody of hand;
frog in sloth, fox in stealth, wolf in greediness, dog in madness, lion in prey. Let not the creaking of shoes nor the rustling of silks betray thine poor heart to woman: keep thy foot out of brothels, thy hand out of plackets, thy pen from lenders' books,
and defy the foul fiend.

Still through the hawthorn blows the cold wind:
Says suum, mun, ha, no, nonny.
Dolphin my boy, my boy, sesse! let him trot by.

Lear. Why, thou wert better in thy grave than to answer with thy uncovered body this extremity of the skies. Is man no more than this thing? Consider him well. Thou owest the worm no silk, the beast no hide, the sheep no wool, the cat no perfume. Ha! here's three on 's are sophisticated! Thou art the thing itself: unaccommo-dated man is no more but such a poor, bare, forked animal as thou art. Off, off, you lendings!
come, unbutter me here. [Tearing off his clothes.

Fool. Prithree, nuncle, be contented: 'tis a naughty night to swim in. Now a little fire in a wild field were like an old lecher's heart; a small spark, all the rest on 's body cold. Look, here comes a walking fire.

Enter Gloucester, with a torch.

Edg. This is the foul fiend Fibbertigibbet:
he begins at curfew, and walks till the first cock:
he gives the web and the pin, squints the eye, and makes the hare-lip; mildews the white wheat, and hurts the poor creature of earth.
S. Withold footed thrice the old; he meets the night-mare, and her nine-fold;
Bid her alight,
And her troth plight,
And, araint thee, witch, araint thee!

Kent. How fares your grace?

Lear. What's he? What is you seek?

Glou. What are you there? Your names?

Edg. Poor Tom; that eats the swimming from the toad, the tadpole, the wall-newt and water; that in the fury of his heart, when foul fiend rages, eats cow-dung for sallies; swallo
the old rat and the ditch-dog; drinks the gre mantle of the standing pool; who is whipped for thieving to thievery, and stock-punished, and prisoned; who hath had three suits to his bas six shirts to his horse, horse to ride, and weap to wear;

But mice and rats, and such small deer,
Have been Tom's food for seven long year.

Beware my follower. Peace, Smulkin: pe thou fiend!

Glou. What, hath your grace no better co
pany?

Edg. The prince of darkness is a gentle
Modo, call'd, and Mahu.

Glou. Our flesh and blood is grown so vi
my lord,

That it doth hate what gets it.

Edg. Poor Tom's a-cold.

Glou. Go in with me: my duty cannot suf
To obey in all your daughters' hard command
Though their injunction be to bar my doors,
And live, this tyrannous night take hold upon y
Yet have I ventured to come seek you out,
And bring you where both fire and food is rea

Lear. First let me talk with this philosoph
What is the cause of thunder?

Kent. Good my lord, take his offer; go i the house,

I'll talk a word with this same lean Theban.

What is your study?

Edg. How to prevent the fiend, and to vermin.

Lear. Let me ask you one word in private.

Kent. Importune him once more to go, my
lord;

His wits begin to unsettle.

Glou. Canst thou blame him? [Storm still
His daughters seek his death: ah, that good Ke
He said it would be thus, poor banish'd man!
Thou say'st the king grows mad; I'll tell the
friend,
I am almost mad myself: I had a son,
Now outlaw'd from my blood; he sought my
But lately, very late: I loved him, friend;
No father his son dearer; truth to tell thee,
The grief hath crazed my wits. What a night
this!

I do beseech your grace,—

Lear. O, cry you mercy, noble

Noble philosopher, your company.

Edg. Tom's a-cold.

Glou. In, fellow, there, into the hovel: ke thear warm.

Lear. Come, let's in all.

Kent. This way, my lord.

Lear. With him;

I will keep still with my philosopher.

Kent. Good my lord, soothe him; let take the fellow.

Glou. Take him you on.
KING LEAR.

KENT. Sirrah, come on; go along with us.

LEAR. Come, good Athenian.

GLO. No words, no words; hush.

EDG. Child Rowland to the dark tower came, His word was still,—Fie, foih, and furm, I smell the blood of a British man.

[Exeunt.

SCENE V. Gloucester’s castle.

ENTER CORNWALL and EDMUND.

CORN. I will have my revenge ere I depart this place.

EDM. How, my lord, I may be censured, that urge thus gives way to loyalty, something fears to think of.

CORN. I now perceive, it was not altogether a brother’s evil disposition made him seek his wealth; but a provoking merit, set a-work by a recevable badness in himself.

EDM. How malicious is my fortune, that I repent to be just! This is the latter he cause which approves him an intelligent party to the antagons of France. O heavens! that these were not, or not I the detecor!

CORN. Go with me to the duchess.

EDM. If the matter of this paper be certain, have mighty business in hand.

CORN. True or false, it hath made thee earl of Gloucester. Seek out where thy father is, that may be ready for our apprehension.

[Aside] If I find him comforting the sheath, it will stuff his suspicion more fully. I will drive in my course of loyalty, though the list be sore between that and my blood.

CORN. I will lay trust upon thee; and thou shalt find a dearer father in my love.

[Exeunt.

SCENE VI. A chamber in a farmhouse adjoining the castle.

Enter Gloucester, Lear, Kent, Fool, and Edgar.

O, here is better than the open air; take care, I will piece out the comfort with addition I can: I will not be long from you. All the power of his wits have given him to his impatience: the gods reward your seals!

FRATRETTO calls me; and tells me Nero angler in the lake of darkness. Pry, innocrum and beware the foul fiend.

PRITHIE, nuncle, tell me whether a madman be a gentleman or a yeoman?

A king, a king!

No, he’s a yeoman that has a gentleman son; for he’s a mad yeoman that sees his gentleman before him.

To have a thousand with red burning spits hissing in upon ‘em,

The foul fiend bites my back.

He’s mad that trusts in the tameness of a wolf, a horse’s health, a boy’s love, or a man’s oath.

It shall be done; I will arraign them straight.

[Aside] Come, sit thou here, most learned

[To the Fool] Thou, sapient sir, sit here. Now, you she foxes!

EDG. Look, where he stands and glares! Wantest thou eyes at trial, madam?

LEAR. Come o’er the bourn, Bessy, to me,—

FOOL. Her boat hath a leak. And she must not speak Why she drinks not come over to thee.

EDG. The foul fiend haunts poor Tom in the voice of a nightingale. Hopedance cries in Tom’s belly for two white herring. Croak not, black angel; I have no food for thee.

LEAR. How do you, sir? Stand you not so amazed: Will you lie down and rest upon the cushions?

FOOL. I’ll see their trial first. Bring in the evidence.

[To Edgar] Thou robèd man of justice, take thy place;

[To the Fool] And thou, his yeo-village of equity, Bench by his side: [To Kent] you are o’ the commission,

SIT you too.

EDG. Let us deal justly. Sleepest or wakest thou, jolly shepherd? Thy sheep be in the corn; and for one blast of thy minikin mouth, Thy sheep shall take no harm.

PUR! the cat is gray.

LEAR. Arraign her first; ’tis Goneril. I here take my oath before this honourable assembly, She kissed the poor king her father.

FOOL. Come hither, mistress. Is your name Goneril?

LEAR. She cannot deny it.

FOOL. Cry you mercy, I took you for a joint-stool.

LEAR. And here’s another’s, whose warp’d looks proclaim What store her heart is made on. Stop her there! Arms, arms, sword, fire! Corruption in the place! False justicer, why hast thou let her’scape?

EDG. Bless thy five wits!

LEAR. O pity! Sir, where is the patience now, That you so oft have boasted to retain?

EDG. [Aside] My tears begin to take his part so much, They’ll mar my counterfeiting.

LEAR. The little dogs and all, Tray, Blanch, and Sweet-heart, see, they bark at me.

EDG. Tom will throw his head at them. Avant, you curs! Be thy mouth or black or white, Tooth that poisons if it bite; Mastiff, greyhound, mongrel grim, Hound or spaniel, brach or lyn, Or bobtail like or trundle-tail, Tom will make them weep and wail: For, with throwing thus my head, Dogs leap the hatch, and all are fled.

Do de, de, de. Sessa! Come, march to wakes and fairs and market-towns. Poor Tom, thy horn is dry.

LEAR. Then let them anathematize Regan; see what breeds about her heart. Is there any cause in nature that makes these hard hearts? [To Edgar] You, sir, I entertain for one of my hundred; only I do not like the fashion of your garments;
you will say they are Persian attire; but let them be changed.

Kent. Now, good my lord, lie here and rest awhile.

Lear. Make no noise, make no noise; draw the curtains: so, so, so. We’ll go to supper i’ the morning. So, so, so.

Foot. And I’ll go to bed at noon.

Re-enter Gloucester.

Glou. Come hither, friend: where is the king my master?

Kent. Here, sir; but trouble him not, his wits are gone.

Glou. Good friend, I prithee, take him in thy arms; I have o’erheard a plot of death upon him: There is a litter ready; lay him in it, and drive towards Dover, friend, where thou shalt meet Both welcome and protection. Take up thy master: If thou shouldst daily half an hour, his life, With thine, and all that offer to defend him, Stand in assured loss: take up, take up; And follow me, that will to some provision Give thee quick conduct.

Kent. Oppressed nature sleeps: This rest might yet have balm’d thy broken senses, Which, if convenience will not allow, Stand in hard cure. [To the Foot] Come, help to bear thy master; Thou must not stay behind.

Glou. Come, come, away. [Exeunt all but Edgar.

Edg. When we our betters see bearing our woes,
We scarcely think our miseries our foes.
Who alone suffers suffers most i’ the mind,
Leaving free things and happy shows behind:
But then the mind much suffereth doth o’erskip,
When grief hath mates, and bearing fellowship.
How light and portable my pain seems now,
When that which makes me bend makes the king bow,
He childed as I father’d! Tom, away!
Mark the high noises; and thyself bewray,
When false opinion, whose wrong thought defiles thee,
In thy just proof, repeals and reconciles thee. What will have more to-night, safe scape the king! Lurk, lurk. [Exit.

Scene VII. Gloucester’s castle.

Enter Cornwall, Regan, Goneril, Edmund, and Servants.

Corn. Post speedily to my lord your husband; show him this letter: the army of France is landed. Seek out the villain Gloucester. [Exeunt some of the Servants.

Reg. Hang him instantly.

Gon. Pluck out his eyes.

Corn. Leave him to my displeasure. Edmund, keep you our sister company: the revenges we are bound to take upon your traitorous father are not fit for your beholding. Advise the duke, where you are going, to a most festinate prepara-tion: we are bound to the like. Our posts shall be swift and intelligent betwixt us. Farewell dear sister: farewell, my lord of Gloucester.

Enter Oswald.

How now! where’s the king?

Osw. My lord of Gloucester hath conve

hence:

Some five or six and thirty of his knights,
Hot questers after him, met him at gate; Who, with some other of the lords dependant Are gone with him towards Dover; where I boast To have well-armed friends.

Corn. Get horses for your mistress.

Gon. Farewell, sweet lord, and sister.

Corn. Edmund; farewell.

[Exeunt Goneril, Edmund, and Oswald. G"d seek the traitor Gloucester Pinion him like a thief, bring him before us. Though well we may not pass upon his life Without the form of justice, yet our power Shall do a courtesy to our wrath, which men May blame, but not control. Who’s there? traitor?

Enter Gloucester, brought in by two or th

Reg. Ingrateful fox! ’tis he.

Corn. Bind fast his corky arms.

Glou. What mean your graces? Good friends, consider You are my guests: do me no foul play, frien Glou. Unmerciful lady as you are, I’m noCorn. To this chair bind him. Villain, I shalt find— [Regan plucks his beard.

Glou. By the kind gods, ’tis most ignobly old To pluck me by the beard.

Reg. So white, and such a traitor! Naughtly hair These hairs, which thou dost ravish from my chin, Will quicken, and accuse thee: I am your hand With robbers’ hands my hospitable favours You should not ruffle thus. What will you do Corn. Come, sir, what letters had you from France?

Reg. Be simple answerer, for we know truth.

Corn. And what confederacy have you the traitors Late footed in the kingdom?

Reg. To whose hands have you sent the insidious king?

Speak.

Glou. I have a letter guessingly set down Which came from one that’s of a neutral head And not from one opposed.

Corn. Cuning.

Reg. And false Omn. Where hast thou sent the king?

Glou. To Dover.

Reg. Wherefore to Dover? Wast thou charged at peril— Corn. Wherefore to Dover? Let him answer that.
KING LEAR.

Scene VII.

Glou. I am tied to the stake, and I must stand the course.
Reg. Wherefore to Dover, sir?
Glou. Because I would not see thy cruel nails thrust out his poor old eyes; nor thy fierce sister snip his anointed flesh stick boarish fangs.

Corn. See'st shalt thou never. Fellows, hold the chair.

Glou. He that will think to live till he be old, give me some help! O cruel! O you gods! Go to him now to bid you hold.
Reg. One side will mock another; the other too.

Corn. If you see vengeance,—
First Serv. Hold your hand, my lord: have served you ever since I was a child; if better service have I never done you than now to bid you hold.
Reg. How now, you dog! First Serv. If you did wear a beard upon your chin, I'd shake it on this quarrel. What do you mean?
Corn. My villain! [They draw and fight.
First Serv. Nay, then, come on, and take the chance of anger.
Reg. Give me thy sword. A peasant stand up thus!

[Goes a sword, and runs at him behind.
First Serv. O, I am slain! My lord, you have one eye left.]

Corn. Lest it see more, prevent it. Out, vile jelly! here is thy lustre now?

Glou. All dark and comfortless. Where's my son Edmund?

Reg. Out, treacherous villain! ou call'st on him, that hates thee: it was he made the overture of thy treasons to us; so is too good to pity thee.

Glou. O my fellows! then Edgar was abused.

Reg. And gods, forgive me that, and prosper him! Go thrust him out at gates, and let him smell the way to Dover. [Exit one with Gloucester.]

Reg. How is't, my lord? how look you?

Glou. I have received a hurt; follow me, lady. I must that yeless villain; throw this slave on the dunghill. Regan, I bleed apace: timely comes this hurt; give me your arm.

[Exit Cornwall, led by Regan.
Sec. Serv. Let's follow the old earl, and get the Bedlam.
To lead him where he would: his rougish madness Allows itself to any thing.
Third Serv. Go thou: I'll fetch some flax and whites of eggs.
To apply to his bleeding face. Now, heaven help him! [Exeunt severally.

ACT IV.

Scene I. The heath.

Enter EDGAR.

Edg. Yet better thus, and known to be content'd,
Than still contemn'd and flatter'd. To be worst,
The lowest and most dejected thing of fortune,
Stands still in esperance, lives not in fear:

The lamentable change is from the best;
The worst returns to laughter. Welcome, then,

Thou unsubstantial air that I embrace!

The wretch that thou hast blown unto the worst
Owes nothing to thy blasts. But who comes here?

Enter Gloucester, led by an Old Man.

My father, poorly led? World, world, O world!

But that thy strange mutations make us hate thee,

Life would not yield to age.

Old Man. O, my good lord, I have been your tenant, and your father's tenant, these fourscore years.

Glou. Away, get thee away; good friend, be gone;

Thy comforts can do me no good at all;

Thee they may hurt.

Old Man. Alack, sir, you cannot see your way.

Glou. I have no way, and therefore want no eyes:

I stumbled when I saw: full oft 'tis seen,
Our means secure us, and our mere defects
Form our commodities. O dear son Edgar,

The food of thy abused father's wrath!

Might I but live to see thee in my touch,
I'd say I had eyes again!

Old Man. How now! Who's there?

Edg. [Aside] O gods! Who's it can say 'I am at the worst'?

I am worse than e'er I was.

Old Man. How now? Who's there?

Edg. [Aside] And worse I may be yet: the worst is not

So long as we can say 'This is the worst.'

Old Man. Fellow, where goest?

Glou. Is it a beggar-man?

Old Man. Madman and beggar too.

Glou. He has some reason, else he could not beg.

'The last night's storm I such a fellow saw;
Which made me think a man a worm: my son
Came then into my mind; and yet my mind

Was then scarce friends with him: I have heard

As flies to wanton boys, are we to the gods,

They kill us for their sport.

Edg. [Aside] How should this be?

Bad is the trade that must play fool to sorrow, To angering itself and others,—Bless thee, master! Glou. Is that the naked fellow? Old Man. Ay, my lord.

58—2
KING LEAR.

Scene II. Before the Duke of Albany's palace.

Enter Goneril and Edmund.

Gon. Welcome, my lord! I marvel our mild husband
Not met us on the way.

Enter Oswald.

Osw. Madam, within; but never man so changed.
I told him of the army that was landed;
He smiled at it: I told him you were coming;
His answer was 'The worse.' of Gloucester's treachery:
And of the loyal service of his son,
When I inform'd him, then he call'd me sot,
And told me I had turn'd the wrong side out:

What most he should dislike seems pleasant
him.

What like, offensive.

Gon. [To Edm.] Then shall you go no further.
It is the cowardish terror of his spirit,
That dares not undertake: he'll not feel wrong
Which tie him to an answer. Our wishes
the way
May prove effects. Back, Edmund, to tis brother;
Hasten his musters and conduct his powers:
I must change arms at home, and give the dist
Into my husband's hands. This trusty servant
Shall pass between us: ere long you are li to hear,
If you dare venture in your own behalf,
A mistress's command. Wear this; spare spee

Decline your head; this kiss, if it durst speak,
Would stretch thy spirits up into the air:
Conceive, and fare thee well.

Edm. Yours in the ranks of death.

Gon. My most dear Gloucester.

Enter the Duke of Albany.

Gon. I have been worth the whistle.

Alb. O Goneril.

You are not worth the dust which the ru wind
Blows in your face. I fear your disposition;
That nature, which contains its origin,
Cannot be border'd certain in itself;
She that herself will sliver and disbranch
From her material sap, perforce must wither
And come to deadly use.

Gon. No more; the text is foolish.

Alb. Wisdom and goodness to the vile se

Filths savour but themselves. What have y done?

Tigers, not daughters, what have you perform
A father, and a gracious aged man, Whose reverence even the head-lugg'd be would lick,
Most barbarous, most degenerate! have y maddened.

Could my good brother suffer you to do it?
A man, a prince, by him so benefitted!
If that the heavens do not their visible spirits
Send quickly down to tame these vile offences
It will come,

Humanity must perforce prey on itself,
Like monsters of the deep.

Gon. Milk-liver'd man!

That bear'st a cheek for blows, a head

Wrong:
Who hast not in thy brows an eye discerning
Thine honour from thy suffering; that not know
Fools do those villains pity who are punish'd
Ere they have done their mischief. Where's th

While's thou, a moral fool, sit'st still, and criest
Alack, why does he so?

Alb. See thyself, devil!

Proper deformity seems not in the fiend
O horrid as in woman.

Gon. O vain fool!

Alb. Thou chang'd and self-cover'd thing,
For shame, e-monster not thy feature. Were 't my fitness
O let these hands obey my blood,
They are apt enough to dislocate and tear
My flesh and bones; how'er thou art a fiend,
Woman's shape doth shield thee.

Gon. Marry, thy manhood now—

Enter a Messenger.

Alb. What news?

Mess. O, my good lord, the Duke of Corn-wall's dead;
Ain by his servant, going to put out
His other eye of Gloucester.

Alb. Gloucester's eyes!

Mess. A servant that he bred, thrill'd with remorse,
Pos'd against the act, bending his sword
On his great master; who, theret' enraged,
Sw Tai on him, and amongst them fell'd him dead;
It not without that harmful stroke, which since Athe pluck'd him after.

Alb. This shows you are above,

In justicers, that these our nether crimes
Speedily can venge! But, O poor Gloucester!
Is he his other eye?

Mess. Both, both, my lord. I his letter, madam, craves a speedy answer;
's from your sister.

Gon. [Aside] One way I like this well;
It being widow, and my Gloucester with her,
By all the building in my fancy pluck
Son my hateful life: another way,
On news is not so tart.—'Tll read, and answer.

[Exeunt. 41b. Where was his son when they did take his eyes?

Mess. Come with my lady hither.

Alb. He is not here. 90

Mess. No, my good lord; I met him back
again.

Alb. Knows he the wretchedness?

Mess. Ay, my good lord; 'twas he inform'd against him;
D quit the house on purpose, that their punishment
Ght have the free course.

Gloucester, I live
Thank thee for the love thou show'd'st the king,
D revenge thine eyes. Come hither, friend;
I me what more thou know'st. [Exeunt.

SCENE III. The French camp near Dover.

Enter Kent and a Gentleman.

Kent. Why the King of France is so suddenly
Back know you the reason?

Kent. Something he left imperfect in the state,
Ch since his coming forth is thought of; ch Imports to the kingdom so much fear and danger, that his personal return was most required and necessary.

Kent. Who hath he left behind him general?

Kent. Did your letters pierce the queen to any demonstration of grief?

Kent. Ay, sir; she took them, read them in my presence;
And now and then an ample tear trill'd down
Her delicate cheek: it seem'd she was a queen
Over her passion; who, most rebel-like,
Sought to be king o'er her.

Kent. O, then it moved her.

Kent. Not to a rage: patience and sorrow
Strove
Who should express her goodliest. You have seen
Sunshine and rain at once: her smiles and tears
Were like a better way; those happy smiles, 21
That play'd on her ripe lip, seem'd not to know What guests were in her eyes; which parted thence.
As pearls from diamonds dropp'd. In brief,
Sorrow would be a rarity most beloved,
If all could so become it.

Kent. Made she no verbal question?

Kent. 'Faith, once or twice she heaved the name of 'father;
Panitingly forth, as if it press'd her heart;
Cried 'Sisters! sisters! Shame of ladies! sisters!
Kent! father! sisters! What, i' the storm? i'
the night?
Let pity not be believed!' There she shook
The holy water from her heavenly eyes,
And clamour moisten'd: then away she started
To deal with grief alone.

Kent. It is the stars,
The stars above us, govern our conditions;
Else one self mate and mate could not beget
Such different issues. You spoke not with her since?

Kent. No.

Kent. Was this before the king return'd?

Kent. Well, sir, the poor distressed Lear's i'
the town;
Who sometime, in his better tune, remembers
What we are come about, and by no means
Will yield to see his daughter.

Kent. Why, good sir?

Kent. A sovereign shame so elbows him: his own unkindness,
That stripp'd her from his benediction, turn'd her
To foreign casualties, gave her dear rights
To his dog-hearted daughters, these things sting
His mind so venomously, that burning shame
Dwell'st him from Cordelia.

Kent. Alack, poor gentleman! Kent. Of Albany's and Cornwall's powers you heard not?

Kent. 'Tis so, they are afoot.

Kent. Well, sir, I'll bring you to our master
Lear,
And leave you to attend him: some dear cause
Will in concealment wrap me up awhile;
When I am known aight, you shall not grieve
Lending me this acquaintance. I pray you, go Along with me. [Exeunt.
SCENE IV. The same. A tent.

Enter, with drum and colours, Cordelia, Doctor, and Soldiers.

Cor. Alack, 'tis he: why, he was met even now As mad as the vex’d sea: singing aloud; Crown’d with rank fumiter and furrow-weeds, With bur-docks, hemlock, nettles, cuckoo-flowers, Darnel, and all the idle weeds that grow In our sustaining corn. A century send forth; Search every acre in the high-grown field, And bring him to our eye. [Exit an Officer.]

What can man’s wisdom
In the restoring his bereaved sense?
He that helps him take all my outward worth. 10
Do’t. There is means, madam:
Our foster-nurse of nature is repose,
The which he lacks; that to provoke in him,
Are many simples operative, whose power
Will close the eye of anguish.

Cor. All blest secrets,
All you unpublish’d virtues of the earth,
Spring with my tears! be aldent and remit; In the good man’s distress! Seek, seek for him;
Lest his ungovern’d rage dissolve the life
That wants the means to lead it.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. News, madam: 20
The British powers are marching hitherward.

Cor. ’Tis known before: our preparation stands In expectation of them. O dear father,
It is thy business that I go about;
Therefore great France
My mourning and important tears hath pitied.
No blown ambition doth our arms incite,
But love, dear love, and our aged father’s right: Soon may I hear and see him! [Exit.]

SCENE V. Gloucester’s castle.

Enter Regan and Oswald.

Reg. But are my brother’s powers set forth?
Osw. Ay, madam.
Reg. Himself in person there?
Osw. Madam, with much ado:
Your sister is the better soldier.

Reg. Lord Edmund spake not with your lord at home?
Osw. No, madam.
Reg. What might import my sister’s letter to him?
Osw. I know not, lady.
Reg. ‘Faith, he is posted hence on serious matter.
It was great ignorance, Gloucester’s eyes being out,
To let him live: where he arrives he moves to All hearts against us: Edmund, I think, is gone,
In pity of his misery, to dispatch
His nighted life: moreover, to descry
The strength o’ the enemy.

Osw. I must needs after him, madam, with my letter.
Reg. Our troops set forth to-morrow: stay with us;
The ways are dangerous.

Osw. I may not, madam:
My lady charged my duty in this business.
Reg. Why should she write to Edmund
Might not you
Transport her purposes by word? Belike,
Something—I know not what: I’ll love the much,
Let me unseal the letter.

Osw. Madam, I had rather—
Reg. I know your lady does not love I husband;
I am sure of that: and at her late being here She gave strange oëïllades and most speaking look To noble Edmund. I know you are of her bosom.

Osw. I, madam?
Reg. I speak in understanding; you are, I know’t:
Therefore I do advise you, take this note:
My lord is dead: Edmund and I have talk’d;
And more convenient is he for my hand Than for your lady’s; you may gather more.
If you do find him, pray you, give him this;
And when your mistress hears thus much fr your part,
I pray, desire her call her wisdom to her. So, fare you well.
If you do chance to hear of that blind traitor, Preferment falls on him that cuts him off.

Osw. Would I could meet him, madam! should show
What party I do follow.

Reg. Fare thee well. [Exit.

SCENE VI. Fields near Dover.

Enter Gloucester, and Edgar dressed like a peasant.

Glou. When shall we come to the top of that hill?
Edg. You do climb up it now: look, how labour.

Glou. Methinks the ground is even.

Edg. Horrible ste
Hark, do you hear the sea?

Glou. No, truly.

Edg. Why, then, your other senses are imperfect
By your eyes’ anguish.

Glou. So may it be, indeed:
Methinks thy voice is alter’d: and thou speak In better phrase and matter than thou didst.

Edg. You’re much deceived: in nothing I changed
But in my garments.

Glou. Methinks you’re better spoken.

Edg. Come on, sir; here’s the place: sit still. How fearful
And dizzy’tis, to cast one’s eyes so low! The crows and crows that wing the midway Show scarce so gross as beetles: half way down Hangs one that gathers samphire, dreadful train Methinks he seems no bigger than his head: The fishermen, that walk upon the beach, Appears like mice; and yond tall anchoring be Diminish’d to her cock; her cock, a buoy
Most too small for sight: the murmuring surge That on the unnumber’d idle pebbles chafes, Cannot be heard so high. I’ll look no more: Lest my brain turn, and the deficient sight Enter Lear, fantastically dressed with wild flowers.
The safer sense will ne'er accommodate His master thus.

Lear. No, they cannot touch me for coinage; I am the king himself.

Edg. O thou side-piercing sight!

Lear. Nature's above art in that respect.

There's your press-money. That fellow handles his bow like a crow-keeper: draw me a clothier's yard.
Look, look, a mouse! Peace, peace: this piece of toasted cheese will do't. There's my gauntlet; I'll prove it on a giant. Bring up the brown bills. O, well flown, bird! 'tis the clout, 'tis. the clout: hewgh! Give the word.

Edg. Sweet marjoram.

Lear. Pass.

Glou. I know that voice.

Lear. Ha! Goneral, with a white beard! They flattered me like a dog; and told me I had white hairs in my beard ere the black ones were there. To say 'ay' and 'no' to every thing that I said—'Ay' and 'no' too was no good divinity. When the rain came to wet me once, and the wind to make me chatter: when the thunder would not peace at my bidding; there I found 'em, there I smelt 'em out. Go to, they are not men o' their words; they told me I was every thing; 'tis a lie, I am not age-proof.

Glou. The trick of that voice I do well remember:

Is't not the king?

Lear. Ay, every inch a king:
When I do stare, see how the subject quakes. I pardon that man's life. What was thy cause? Adultery?

Thou shalt not die; die for adultery! No: The wren goes to't, and the small gilded fly Does lecher in my sight.

Let copulation thrive; for Gloucester's bastard son Was kinder to his father than my daughters Got 'tween the lawful sheets.

To't, luxury, poll-mell! for I lack soldiers.
Behold yond simpering dame, Whose face between her fork presages snow; That minces virtue, and does shake the head To hear of pleasure's name;
The fitchew, nor the soiled horse, goes to't With a more riotous appetite.

Down from the waist they are Contours, Though women all above:
But to the girdle do the gods inherit,
Beneath is all the fends';
There's hell, there's darkness, there's the sul dace pit; Burning, scalding, stench, consumption: fie, fie, fie! pah, pah! Give me an ounce of civet, good
Then, kill, kill, kill, kill, kill, kill, kill! 1

Enter a Gentleman, with Attendants.

Gent. O, here he is: lay hand upon his even

The natural fool of fortune. Use me well; I shall have ransom. Let me have surgeon
I am cut to the brains.

Gent. Lear. No seconds? all myself?
Why, this would make a man a man of salt,
To use his eyes for garden water-pots;

Ay, and laying autumn's dust.

Gent. Good sir,—

Lear. I will die bravely, like a bridegroorn

I will be jovial: come, come; I am a king,

KING LEAR.

Scene VI.

KING LEAR.

Far off, methinks, I hear the beaten drum:
Come, father, I'll bestow you with a friend.

[Exeunt.

Scene VII. A tent in the French camp. Lear on a bed asleep; soft music playing; Gentleman, and others attending.

Enter Cordelia, Kent, and Doctor.

Cor. O thou good Kent, how shall I live and work,
To match thy goodness? My life will be too short,
And every measure fail me.

Kent. To be acknowledged, madam, is d'erpaid.
All my reports go with the modest truth;
Nor more nor clipp'd, but so.

Be better suited:
These weeds are memories of those worser hours:
I prithee, put them on.

Kent. Pardon me, dear madam;
Yet to be known shortens my made intent:
My boon I make it, that you know me not Till time and I think meet.

Cor. Then let's be so, my good lord. [To the Doctor] How does the king?

Doct. Madam, sleeps still.

Cor. O you kind gods,
Cure this great breach in his abused nature!
The untuned and jarring senses, O, wind up
Of this child-changed father!

Doct. So please your majesty
That we may wake the king: he hath slept long.
Cor. Be govern'd by your knowledge, and proceed
I the sway of your own will. Is he array'd?

Gent. Ay, madam; in the heaviness of his sleep
We put fresh garments on him.

Doct. Be by, good madam, when we do awake
him;
I doubt not of his temperance.

Cor. Very well.

Doct. Please you, draw near. Louder the music there!

Cor. O my dear father! Restoration hung
Thy medicine on my lips; and let this kiss
Repair those violent harms that my two sisters
Have in thy reverence made!

Kent. Kind and dear princess!

Cor. Had you not been their father, these white flakes
Had challenged pity of them. Was this a face
To be opposed against the warring winds?
To stand against the deep dread-bolted thunder?
In the most terrible and nimble stroke
Of quick, cross lightning? to watch—poor

Perdu!

With this thin helm? Mine enemy's dog?
Though he had bit me, should have stood that night
Against my fire; and wast thou fain, poor father,
To hovel thee with swine, and rogues forlorn,
In short and musty straw? Alack, alack!

Tis wonder that thy life and wits at once Had not concluded all. He wakes; speak to
him.

Doct. Madam, do you; 'tis fittest.
Cor. How does my royal lord? How fares your majesty?
Lear. You do me wrong to take me out of the grave:

Thou art a soul in bliss; but I am bound
Upon a wheel of fire, that mine own tears
Do scald like molten lead.
Cor. Sir, do you know me?
Lear. You are a spirit; I know: when did you die?
Cor. Still, still, far wide! 50
Do't: He's scarce awake; let him alone awhile.
Lear. Where have I been? Where am I? Fair daylight? I am mightily abused. I should 'en die with pity,
To see another thus. I know not what to say.
I will not swear these are my hands: let's see;
I feel this pin prick. Would I were assured
Of my condition!
Cor. O, look upon me, sir,
And hold your hands in benediction o'er me:
No, sir, you must not kneel.
Lear. Pray, do not mock me: I am a very foolish fond old man, 60
Fourscore and upward, not an hour more nor less;
And, to deal plainly, I fear I am not in my perfect mind.
Methinks I should know you, and know this man:
Yet I am doubtful: for I am mainly ignorant
What place this is; and all the skill I have Remembers not these garments; nor I know not Where I did lodge last night. Do not laugh at me:
For, as I am a man, I think this lady
To be my child Cordelia.
Cor. And so I am, I am. 70
Lear. Be your tears wet? yes, 'faith. I pray, weep not;
If you have poison for me, I will drink it.
I know you do not love me; for your sisters
Have, as I do remember, done me wrong:
You have some cause, they have not.
Cor. No cause, no cause.
Lear. Am I in France?
Kent. In your own kingdom, sir.
Lear. Do not abuse me.
Kent. Be comforted, good madam: the great rage,
You see, is kill'd in him: and yet it is danger
To make him even o'er the time he has lost. 80
Desire him to go in; trouble him no more
Till further settling.
Cor. Will 't please your highness walk?
Lear. You must bear with me:
Pray you now, forget and forgive: I am old and foolish.

[Exeunt all but Kent and Gentleman.

Gent. Holds it true, sir, that the Duke of Cornwall was so slain?
Kent. Most certain, sir.
Gent. Who is conductor of his people?
Kent. As 'tis said, the bastard son of Gloucester.
Gent. They say Edgar, his banished son, is with the Earl of Kent in Germany.
Kent. Report is changeable. 'Tis time to look about; the powers of the kingdom approach apace.

ACT V.

SCENE I. The British camp, near Dover

Enter, with drum and colours, EDMUND, REGAN, Gentlemen, and Soldiers.

Edm. Know of the duke if his last purport hold,
Or whether since he is advised by augury To change the course: he's full of alteration
And self-reproving: bring his constant pleasure

[To a Gentleman, who goes o

Reg. Our sister's man is certainly miscarried.
Edm. 'Tis to be doubted, madam.

Now, sweet lady,
Reg. You know the goodness I intend upon you:
Tell me—but truly—but then speak the truth,
Do you not love my sister?
Edm. In honour'd love,
Reg. But have you never found my brother way To the forfended place?
Edm. That thought abuses you.
Reg. I am doubtful that you have been junct And bosom'd with her, as far as we call hers.

Edm. No, by mine honour, madam.
Reg. I never shall endure her: dear my lady Be not familiar with her.
Edm. Fear me not: She and the duke her husband!

Enter, with drum and colours, ALBANY, GONERIL, and Soldiers.

Gon. [Aside] I had rather lose the battle than that sister
Should loosen him and me.

Alb. Our very loving sister, well beloved,
Sir, this I hear; the king is come to his daught With others whom the rigour of our state Forced to cry out. Where I could not be before I never yet was valiant: for this business, It toucheth us, as France invades our land, Not holds the king, with others, whom, I feare Most just and heavy causes make oppose.
Edm. Sir, you speak nobly.
Reg. Why is this reason?
Gon. Combine together 'gainst the enemy
For these domestic and particular broils Are not the question here.
Alb. Let's then determine
With the ancient of war on our proceedings.
Edm. I shall attend you presently at your
Reg. Sister, you'll go with us?
Gon. No.
Reg. 'Tis most convenient; pray you with us.
Gon. [Aside] O, ho, I know the riddle.—I will
As they are going out, enter EDGAR disguised
Edg. If e'er your grace had speech with so poor,
Their going hence, even as their coming hither:
Ripeness is all; come on.
Glo. And that’s true too. [Exeunt.

SCENE III. The British camp near Dover.

Enter, in conquest, with drum and colours,
EDMUND: Lear and Cordelia, prisoners;
Captain, Soldiers, &c.

Edm. Some officers take them away: good guard,

Until their greater pleasures first be known
That are to censure them.

Cor. We are not the first

Who, with best meaning, have incur'd the worst.

For thee, oppressed king, am I cast down;

Myself could else out-frown false fortune’s frown.

Shall we not see these daughters and these sisters?

Lear. No, no, no, no! Come, let’s away to prison:

We two alone will sing like birds i’ the cage:

When thou dost ask me blessing, I’ll kneel down,

And ask of thee forgiveness: so we’ll live, xi

And pray, and sing, and tell old tales, and laugh

At gilded butterflies, and hear poor rogues

Talk of court news; and we’ll talk with them too,

Who loses and who wins; who’s in, who’s out;

And take upon the mystery of things,

As if we were God’s spies: and we’ll wear out,

In a wall’d prison, packs and sects of great ones,

That ebb and flow by the moon.

Edm. Take them away.

Lear. Upon such sacrifices, my Cordelia, 20

The gods themselves throw incense. Have I caught thee?

He that parts us shall bring a brand from heaven,

And fire us hence like foxes. Wipe thine eyes;

The good-years shall devour them, flesh and fell,

Ere they shall make us weep: we’ll see ‘em starve first.

Come. [Exeunt Lear and Cordelia, guarded.

Edm. Come hither, captain; hark.

Take thou this note [giving a paper]; go follow them to prison:

One step I have advanced thee; if thou dost

As this instructs thee, thou dost make thy way

To noble fortunes: know thou this, that men 30

Are as the time is: to be tender-minded

Does not become a sword: thy great employment

Will not bear question; either say thou’lt do’t,

Or thrive by other means.

Capt. I’ll do’t, my lord.

Edm. About it; and write happy when thou hast done.

Mark, I say, instantly; and carry it so

As I have set it down.

Capt. I cannot draw a cart, nor eat dried oats;

If it be man’s work, I’ll do’t. [Exit.

Flourish. Enter ALBANY, GONERIL, REGAN, another Captain, and Soldiers.

Alb. Sir, you have shown to-day your valiant strain,

And fortune led you well: you have the captives

That were the opposites of this day’s strife:

We do require them of you, so to use them

As we shall find their merits and our safety

May equally determine.

Edm. Sir, I thought it fit
To send the old and miserable king
To some retention and appointed guard;
Whose age has charms in it, whose title more,
To pluck the common bosom on his side,
And turn our impress’d lances in our eyes Which do command them. With him I sent the queen:
My reason all the same: and they are ready
To-morrow, or at further space, to appear
Where you shall hold your session. At this time
We sweat and bleed: the friend hath lost his friend:
And the best quarrels, in the heat, are cursed
By those that feel their sharpness:
The question of Cordelia and her father
Requires a fitter place.

Alb. Sir, by your patience,
I hold you but a subject of this war,
Not as a brother.

Reg. That’s as we list to grace him.
Methinks our pleasure might have been demanded,
Ere you had spoke so far. He led our powers;
Bore the commission of my place and person;
The which immediacy may well stand up,
And call itself your brother.

Con. Not so hot:
In his own grace he doth exalt himself,
More than in your addition.

Reg. In my rights,
By me invested, he compeers the best.

Con. That were the most, if he should husband you.

Holla, holla!

That eye that told you so look’d but a-squint.

Reg. Lady, I am not well; else I should answer
From a full-flowing stomach. General,
Take thou my soldiers, prisoners, patrimony;
Dispose of them, of me; the walls are thine:
Witness the world, that I create thee here
My lord and master.

Con. Mean you to enjoy him?

Alb. The let-alone lies not in your good will.

Edm. Nor in thine, lord.

Alb. [To Edmund] Half-blooded fellow, yes. 80

Reg. Let the drum strike, and prove my title thine.

Alb. Stay yet; hear reason. Edmund, I arrest thee
On capital treason; and, in thine attaint, This gilded serpent [pointing to Gons.]. For your claim, fair sister,
I bar it in the interest of my wife;
’Tis she is sub-contracted to this lord,
And I, her husband, contradict thy bans.
If you will marry, make your loves to me,
My lady is bespoken.

Con. An interlude!

Alb. Thou art arm’d, Gloucester: let the trump sound:
If none appear to prove upon thy head
Thy heinous, manifest, and many treasons,
There is my pledge [throwing down a glove];
I’ll prove it on thy heart,
Ere I taste bread, thou art in nothing less
Than I have here proclaimed thee.

Reg. Sick, O, sick!

Con. [Aside] If not, I’ll ne’er trust medicine.

Edm. There’s my exchange [throwing down a glove]: what in the world he is
That names me traitor, villain-like he lies;
Call by thy trumpet: he that dares approach,
On him, on you, who not? I will maintain
My truth and honour firmly.

Alb. A herald, ho!

Edm. A herald, ho, a herald!

Alb. Trust to thy single virtue; for thy soldie
All levied in my name, have in my name
Took their discharge.

Reg. My sickness grows upon me.

Alb. She is not well; convey her to my te

Her. What are you?

Your name, your quality? and why you answer

This present summons?

Edg. I know, my name is lost
By treason’s tooth bare-gnawn and canker-bit
Yet am I noble as the adversary
I come to cope.

Alb. Which is that adversary?

Edg. What’s he that speaks for Edmund I
of Gloucester?

Edm. Himself: what sayst thou to him?

Edg. Draw thy sword
That, if my speech offend a noble heart,
Thy arm may do thee justice: here is mine
Behold, it is the privilege of mine honours,
My oath, and my profession: I protest,
Maugre thy strength, youth, place, and emine:
Despite thy victor sword and fire-new fortune
Thy valour and thy heart, thou art a traitor:
False to thy gods, thy brother, and thy fathe
Conspirant ’gainst this high-illustrious prince
And, from the extremest upward of thy head
To the descent and dust below thy foot,
A most toad-spotted traitor. Say thou: ‘No,’
This sword, this arm, and my best spirits, are
To prove upon thy heart, whereeto I speak,
Thou liest.

Edm. In wisdom I should ask thy name;
But, since thy outside looks so fair and warly
And that thy tongue some say of breeding breach
What safe and nicely I might well delay
By rule of knighthood, I disdain and spurn:
Back do I toss these treasons to thy head;
With the hell-hated lie o’erwhelm thy heart;

Whilst I was big in clamour came there in a man, Who, having seen me in my worst estate, Shunn'd my abhorr'd society; but then, finding Who 'twas that so endur'd, with his strong arms He fasten'd on my neck, and bellow'd out As he'd burst heaven; threw him on my father; Told the most pitious tale of Lear and him That ever ear receiv'd; which in recounting His grief grew puissant, and the strings of life Began to crack: twice then the trumpets sounded, And there I left him tranced.

But who was this?

Enter a Gentleman, with a bloody knife.

What kind of help?

Speak, man.

What means that bloody knife?

'Tis hot, it smokes;

It came even from the heart of—O, she's dead!

Who dead? speak, man.

Your lady, sir, your lady: and her sister By her is poisoned; she hath confess'd it.

I was contrac't to them both: all three

Now marry in an instant.

Here comes Kent. Produce their bodies, bet they alive or dead:

This judgement of the heavens, that makes us tremble.

Touches us not with pity. [Exit Gentleman.

Enter Kent.

O, is this he?

The time will not allow the compliment

Which very manners urges.

I am come

To bid my king and master aye good night:

Is he not here?

Great thing of us forgot!

Speak, Edmund, where's the king? and where's Cordelia?

Seest thou this object, Kent?

The bodies of Goneril and Regan are brought in.

Iack, why thus?

Yet Edmund was beloved:

The one the other poison'd for my sake, And after slew herself.

Even so. Cover their faces.

I pant for life: some good I mean to do, Despite of mine own nature. Quickly send, Be brief in it, to the castle: for my writ Is on the life of Lear and on Cordelia: Nay, send in time.

Run, run, O, run!

To who, my lord? Who hath the office?

Thy token of reprieve.

Well thought on: take my sword, Give it the captain.

Haste thee, for thy life. [Exit Edgar. He hath commission from thy wife and me To hang Cordelia in the prison, and To lay the blame upon her own despair,
That she fordid herself.

Alb. The gods defend her! Bear him hence awhile.

[Edmund is borne off.

Re-enter Lear, with Cordelia dead in his arms; Edgar, Captain, and others following.

Lear. Howl, howl, howl, howl! O, you are men of stones:
Had I your tongues and eyes, I'd use them so
That heaven's vault should crack. She's gone for ever!
I know when one is dead, and when one lives;
She's dead as earth. Lend me a looking-glass;
If that her breath will mist or stain the stone,
Why, then she lives.

Kent. Is this the promised end?

Edg. Or image of that horror?

Alb. Fall, and cease!

Lear. This feather stirs: she lives! if it be so,
It is a chance which does redeem all sorrows
That ever I have felt.

Kent. [Kneeling] O my good master!

Lear. Prithee, away.

Edg. 'Tis noble Kent, your friend.

Lear. A plague upon you, murderers, traitors all!
I might have saved her; now she's gone for ever!
Cordelia, Cordelia! stay a little. Ha!

What is't thou say'st? Her voice was ever soft,
Gentle, and low, an excellent thing in woman.
I kill'd the slave that was a-hanging thee.

Capt. 'Tis true, my lords, he did.

Lear. Did I not, fellow?
I have seen the day, with my good biting falchion
I would have made them skip: I am old now,
And these same crosses spoil me. Who are you?
Mine eyes are not o' the best: I'll tell you straight.

Kent. If fortune brag of two she loved and hated,

One of them we behold.

Lear. This is a dull sight. Are you not Kent?

Kent. The same.

Your servant Kent. Where is your servant Caius?

Lear. He's a good fellow, I can tell you that:
He'll strike, and quickly too: he's dead and rotten.

Kent. No, my good lord; I am the very man,—

Lear. I'll see that straight.

Kent. That, from your first of difference and decay,

Have follow'd your sad steps.

Lear. You are welcome hitherto.

Kent. Nor no man else: all's cheerless, daft and deadly.
Your eldest daughters have fordone themselves
And desperately are dead.

Lear. Ay, so I think.

Alb. He knows not what he says: and vain

That we present us to him.

Edg. Very bootless.

Enter a Captain.

Capt. Edmund is dead, my lord.

Alb. That's but a trifle he tells you lords and noble friends, know our intent.

What comfort to this great decay may come

Shall be applied: for us, we will resign

During the life of this old majesty,

To him our absolute power: [To Edgar and Kent] you, to your rights;

With boot, and such addition as your honours

Have more than merited. All friends shall

The wages of their virtue, and all foes

The cup of their deservings. O, see, see!

Lear. And my poor fool is hang'd! No, no life!

Why should a dog, a horse, a rat, have life,

And thou no breath at all? Thou'lt come no more

Never, never, never, never, never!

Pray you, undo this button; thank you, sir.

Do you see this? Look on her, look, her lips,

Look there, look there!

Edg. He faints! My lord, my lord.

Kent. Break, heart; I prithee, break!

Edg. Look up, my lord.

Kent. Vex not his ghost: O, let him pass

That would upon the rack of this tough world

Stretch him out longer.

Edg. He is gone, indeed.

Kent. The wonder is, he hath endured so long

He but usurp'd his life.

Alb. Bear them from hence. Our present business

Is general woe. [To Kent and Edgar] Friar of my soul, you twain

Rule in this realm, and the gored state susta.

Kent. I have a journey, sir, shortly to go;

My master calls me, I must not stay no.

Alb. The weight of this sad time we must o'er

Speak what we have borne, not what we ought to say.

The oldest hath borne most: we that are young

Shall never see so much, nor live so long.

[Exeunt, with a dead man]
OTHELLO,
THE MOOR OF VENICE.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

DUKE OF VENICE.

BRABANTIO, a senator.

OTHER SENSORS.

GRATIANO, brother to Brabantio.

LODOVICO, kinsman to Brabantio.

OTHELLO, a noble Moor in the service of the Venetian state.

CASSIO, his lieutenant.

IAGO, his ancient.

RODERIGO, a Venetian gentleman.

MONTANO, Othello’s predecessor in the government of Cyprus.

ACT I.

SCENE I. Venice. A street.

Enter Roderigo and Iago.

Rod. Tush! never tell me; I take it much unkindly at thou, Iago, who hast had my purse if the strings were thine, shouldst know of this, Iago: 'Sblood, but you will not hear me: "ver I did dream of such a matter, nor me.

Iago. Thou told'st me thou didst hold him in thy hate.

Iago. Despair me, if I do not. Three great ones of the city, personal suit to make me his lieutenant, capp’d to him; and, by the faith of man, 10 now my price, I am worth no worse a place: he, as loving his own pride and purposes, ides them, with a bombast circumstance cribly stuff’d with epithets of war; 15 in conclusion, suits my mediations: for, 'Certes,' says he, 20 I have already chose my officer.'

Iago. What was he?

sooth, a great arithmetician, Michael Cassio, a Florentine, fellow almost damn’d in a fair wife: it never set a squadron in the field, the division of a battle knows re than a spinner; unless the bookish theorist, erein the toged consuls can propose masterly as he: mere prattle, without practice, lhis soldiership. But he, sir, had the election: 1, of whom his eyes had seen the proof Rhodes, at Cyprus and on other grounds istian and heathen, must be be-lee’d and calm’d 30 debtor and creditor: this counter-caster, in good time, must his lieutenant be, 31 God bless the mark!—his Moorship’s ancient.

 Clown, servant to Othello.

DESDEMONA, daughter to Brabantio and wife to Othello.

EMILIA, wife to Iago.

BIANCA, mistress to Cassio.

Sailor, Messenger, Herald, Officers, Gentlemen, Musicians, and Attendants.

SCENE: Venice: A Sea-port in Cyprus.

Rod. By heaven, I rather would have been his hangman.

Iago. Why, there’s no remedy; 'tis the curse of service, Preferment goes by letter and affection, And not by old gradation, where each second Stood heir to the first. Now, sir, be judge yourself, Whether I in any just term am affined To love the Moor.

Rod. I would not follow him then, 40 Iago. O, sir, content you; I follow him to serve my turn upon him: We cannot all be masters, nor all masters Cannot be truly follow’d. You shall mark Many a duteous and knee-crooking knave, That, doting on his own obsequious bondage, Wears out his time, much like his master’s ass, For nought but provender, and when he’s old, cashier’d:

Whip me such honest knaves. Others there are Who, trimm’d in forms and visages of duty, 50 Keep yet their hearts attending on themselves, And, throwing but shows of service on their lords, Do well thrive by them and when they have lined their coats Do themselves homage: these fellows have some soul;

And such a one do I profess myself. For, sir, It is as sure as you are Roderigo,

Were I the Moor, I would not be Iago:

In following him, I follow but myself;

Heaven is my judge, not I for love and duty, But seeming so, for my peculiar end: 60 For when my outward action doth demonstrate The native act and figure of my heart In compliment extern, 'tis not long after But I will wear my heart upon my sleeve For daws to peck at: I am not what I am.

Rod. What a full fortune does the thick-lips owe,

If he can carry 't thus!

Iago. Call up her father,
Rouse him: make after him, poison his delight,
Proclaim him in the streets; incense her kinsmen,
And, though he in a fertile climate dwell,
Plague him with flies: though that his joy be joy,
Yet throw such changes of vexation on’t,
As it may lose some colour.
Rod. Here is her father’s house; I’ll call aloud.
Iago. Do, with like timorous accent and dire yell
As when, by night and negligence, the fire
Is spied in populous cities.
Rod. What, ho, Brabantio! Signior Brabantio,
ho!
Iago. Awake! what, ho, Brabantio! thieves!
thieves! thieves!
Look to your house, your daughter and your bags!
Thieves! thieves!
Brabantio appears above, at a window.
Bra. What is the reason of this terrible summons?
What is the matter there?
Rod. Signior, is all your family within?
Iago. Are your doors lock’d?
Bra. Why, wherefore ask you this?
Iago. ‘Zounds, sir, you’re robb’d; for shame,
put on your gown;
Your heart is burst, you have lost half your soul;
Even now, now, very now, an old black ram is tipping your white ewe. Arise, arise;
Awake the snorting citizens with the bell,
or else the devil will make a grandsire of you:
Arise, I say.
Bra. What, have you lost your wits?
Rod. Most reverend signior, do you know my voice?
Bra. Not I: what are you?
Rod. My name is Roderigo.
Bra. The worser welcome: I have charged thee not to haunt about my doors:
in honest plainness thou hast heard me say
My daughter is not for thee; and now, in madness,
Being full of supper and distempering draughts,
Upon malicious bravery, dost thou come to start my quiet.
Rod. Sir, sir, sir,—
Bra. But thou must needs be sure
My spirit and my place have in them power
To make this bitter to thee.
Rod. Patience, good sir.
Bra. What tell’st thou me of robbing? this is Venice;
My house is not a grange.
Rod. Most grave Brabantio,
In simple and pure soul I come to you.
Iago. ‘Zounds, sir, you are one of those that will not serve God, if the devil bid you. Because we come to do you service and you think we are ruffians, you’ll have your daughter covered with a Barbary horse; you’ll have your nephews near you; you’ll have coursers for cousins and gennets for Germans.
Bra. What profane wretch art thou?
Iago. I am one, sir, that comes to tell you your daughter and the Moor are now making the beast with two backs.
Bra. Thou art a villain.

Iago. You are—a senator
Bra. This thou shalt answer; I know the Rod. Sir, I will answer anything. But, I see
If’t be your pleasure and most wise consent,
As partly I find it is, that your fair daughter,
At this odd-even and dull watch of the night,
Transported, with no worse nor better guard
But with a knave of common hire, a gondolier,
To the gross claps of a lascivious Moor,—
If this be known to you and your allowance,
We then have done you bold and saucy wrong
But if you know not this, my manners tell me
We have your wrong rebuke. Do not believe
That, from the sense of all civility,
I thus would play and trifle with your reverend
Your daughter, if you have not given her leave
I say again, hath made a gross revolt;
Tying her duty, beauty, wit and fortunes
In an extravagant and wheeling stranger
Of here and every where. Straightforward you do
If she be in her chamber or your house,
Let loose on me the justice of the state
For thus deluding you.
Bra. Strike on the tinder, he Give me a taper! call up all my people!
This accident is not unlike my dream:
Belief of it oppresses me already.
Light, I say! light!
Farewell; for I must leave you.
It seems not meet, nor wholesome to my place
To be produced—as, if I stay, I shall—
Against the Moor: for, I do know, the state,
However this may gall him with some check,
Cannot with safety cast him, for he’s embark’d
With such loud reason to the Cyprus wars,
Which even now stand in act, that, for their so
Another of his fathom they have none,
To lead their business: in which regard,
Though I do hate him as I do hell-pains,
Yet, for necessity of present life,
I must show out a flag and sign of love,
Which is need’d but sign. That you shall sur
find him,
Lead to the Sagittary the raised search;
And there will I be with him. So, farewell.

Enter, below, Brabantio, and Servants with torches.
Bra. It is too true an evil: gone she is;
And what’s to come of my despaired time
Is nought but bitterness. Now, Roderigo,
Where didst thou see her? O unhappy girl!
With the Moor, say’st thou? Who would be
father!
How didst thou know ’twas she? O, she dece past thought! What said she to you? Get no tapers;
Raise all my kindred. Are they married, tell
you?
Rod. Truly, I think they are.
Bra. O heaven! How got she out? O tre of the blood!
Fathers, from hence trust not your daugh minds
OTHELLO

Yes, Holla stand Ancient.

What I put Not r^th. ill lie lat, bad tmtimes here u r iy hall t m.

Scene I. Another street.
Enter Othello, Iago, and Attendants with torches.

Iago. Though in the trade of war I have slain men, do I hold it very stuff o' the conscience do no contrived murder: I lack iniquity sometimes to do me service: nine or ten times had thought to have yerk'd him here under the ribs.

Oth. 'Tis better as it is. Iago. Nay, but he prated, id spoke such scurvy and provoking terms against your honour, with the little godliness I have, hid full hard forbear him. But, I pray you, sir, if you fast married? Be assured of this, at the magnifico is much beloved, id hath in his effect a voice potential double as the duke's: he will divorce you; put upon you what restraint and grievance he law, with all his might to enforce it on, will give him cable.

Oth. Let him do his spite; y services which I have done the signiory all out-tongue his complaints. 'Tis yet to know,—

Bra. Call up my brother. O, would you had her! one way, some another. Do you know where we may apprehend her and the Moor.

Oth. I think I can discover him, if you please o' get good guard and go along with me. Bra. Pray you, lead on. At every house I'll call; may command at most. Get weapons, ho! and raise some special officers of night.

v, good Roderigo: I'll deserve your pains.

[Exeunt.

Scene II. Another street.
Enter Othello, Iago, and Attendants with torches.

Iago. The duke does greet you, general, And he requires your haste-post-haste appearance, Even on the instant.

Oth. What is the matter, think you? Iago. Something from Cyprus, as I may divine: It is a business of some heat; the galleys Have sent a dozen sequent messengers This very night at one another's heels, And many of the consuls, raised and met, Are at the duke's already: you have been hotly call'd for:

When, being not at your lodging to be found, The senate hath sent about three several quests To search you out.

Oth. 'Tis well I am found by you. I will but spend a word here in the house, And go with you. [Exit. Iago. Ancient, what makes he here? Iago. 'Faith, he to-night hath boarded a land carack:

If it prove lawful prize, he's made for ever. Oth. I do not understand.

Iago. He's married.

Oth. To who?

Re-enter Othello.

Iago. Marry, to—Come, captain, will you go?

Oth. Have with you. Iago. Here comes another troop to seek for you. Iago. It is Brabantio, General, be advised; He comes to bad intent.

Enter Brabantio, Roderigo, and Officers with torches and weapons.

Oth. Holla! stand there! Iago. Signior, it is the Moor. Oth. Down with him, thief! [They draw on both sides.

Iago. You, Roderigo! come, sir, I am for you. Oth. Keep up your bright swords, for the dew will rust them.

Good signior, you shall more command with years Than with your weapons.

Bra. O thou foul thief, where hast thou stow'd my daughter? Dam'd as thou art, thou hast enchanted her; For I'll refer me to all things of sense, If she in chains of magic were not bound, Whether a maid so tender, fair and happy, So opposite to marriage that she shunn'd The wealthy curled darlings of our nation, Would ever have, to incur a general mock, Run from her guardage to the sooty bosom Of such a thing as thou, to fear, not to delight. Judge me the world, if 'tis not gross in sense That thou hast practised on her with foul charms, Abused her delicate youth with drugs or minerals That weaken motion: I'll have 't disputed on; 'Tis probable and palpable to thinking I therefore apprehend and do attach thee For an abuser of the world, a practiser Of arts inhibited and out of warrant. Lay hold upon him: if he do resist, Subdue him at his peril.

Oth. Hold your hands, Both you of my inclining, and the rest: Were it my cue to fight, I should have known it Without a prompter. Where will you that I go To answer this your charge?
To prison, till fit time
Of law and course of direct session
Call thee to answer.

Oth. What if I do obey?
How may the duke be therewith satisfied, Whose messengers are here about my side,
Upon some present business of the state
To bring me to him?

First Off. 'Tis true, most worthy signior;
The duke's in council, and your noble self,
I am sure, is sent for.

Bra. How! the duke in council!
In this time of the night! Bring him away:
Mine's not an idle cause: the duke himself, Or any of my brothers of the state,
Cannot but feel this wrong as 'twere their own;
For if such actions may have passage free,
Bond-slaves and pagans shall our statesmen be.

[Exeunt.]

Scene III. A council-chamber.

The Duke and Senators sitting at a table; Officers attending.

Duke. There is no composition in these news
That gives them credit.

First Sen. Indeed, they are disproportion'd;
My letters say a hundred and seven galleys.

Duke. And mine, a hundred and forty.

Sec. Sen. And mine, two hundred:
But though they jump not on a just account,—
As in these cases, where the aim reports,
'Tis oft with difference—yet do they all confirm
A Turkish fleet, and bearing up to Cyprus.

Duke. Nay, it is possible enough to judge:
I do not so secure me in the error,
But the main article I do approve
In fearful sense.

First Off. A messenger from the galleys.

Enter a Sailor.

Duke. Now, what's the business?

Sail. The Turkish preparation makes for Rhodes;
So was I bid report here to the state
By Signior Angelo.

Duke. How say you by this change?

First Sen. This cannot be,
By no assay of reason: 'tis a pageant,
To keep us in false gaze. When we consider
The importancy of Cyprus to the Turk,
And let ourselves again but understand,
That as it more concerns the Turk than Rhodes,
So may he with more facile question bear it,
For that it stands not in such warlike brace,
But altogether lacks the abilities
That Rhodes is dress'd in: if we make thought of this,
We must not think the Turk is so unskilful
To leave that latest which concerns him first,
Neglecting an attempt of ease and gain,
To wake and wage a danger profitless.

Duke. Nay, in all confidence, he's not for Rhodes.

First Off. Here is more news.

Enter a Messenger.

Mest. The Ottomites, reverend and graciously Steering with due course towards the isle Rhodes,
Have there injointed them with an after fleet.

First Sen. Ay, so I thought. How many,
you guess?

Mest. Of thirty sail: and now they do re-stie
Their backward course, bearing with frank a pearance
Their purposes toward Cyprus. Signior Montan
Your trusty and most valiant servitor,
With his free duty recommends you thus,
And prays you to believe him.

Duke. 'Tis certain, then, for Cyprus.

Marcus Luccios, is not he in town?

First Sen. He's now in Florence.

Duke. Write from us to him; post-post-has dispatch.

First Sen. Here comes Brabantio and the valiant Moor.

Enter BRABANTIO, OTHELLO, IAGO, Roderigo, and Officers.

Duke. Valiant Othello, we must straight enploy you
Against the general enemy Ottoman.

[To Brabantio] I did not see you; welcome gentle signior:
We lack'd your counsel and your help to-night.

Bra. So did I yours. Good your grace, publish don me;
Neither my place nor ought I heard of business Hath raised me from my bed, nor doth the general care
Take hold on me, for my particular grief
Is of so flood-gate and o'erbearing nature
That it engulfs and swallows other sorrows
And it is still itself.

Duke. Why, what's the matter?

Bra. My daughter! O, my daughter!

Duke and Sen. Dead? Ay, to m

She was abused, stolen from me, and corrupted
By spells and medicines bought of mountebank.
For nature so preposterously to err,
Being not deficient, blind, or lame of sense,
Sans witchcraft could not.

Duke. Whoe'er he be that in this foul proceeding
Hath thus beguiled your daughter of herself
And you of her, the bloody book of law
You shall yourself read in the bitter letter
After your own sense, yea, though our proper Stood in your action.

Bra. Humbly I thank your grace.
Here is the man, this Moor, whom now, it seems
Your special mandate for the state-affairs
Hath hither brought.

Duke and Sen. We are very sorry for't.

Duke. [To Othello] What, in your own person, can you say to this?

Bra. Nothing, but this is so.

Oth. Most potent, grave, and reverend sen-nors,
My worthy noble and approved good masters,
That I have ta'en away this old man's daughter
It is most true; true, I have married her:
The very head and front of my offending
Hath this extent, no more. Rude am I in my speech.
And little bless'd with the soft phrase of peace:
For since these arms of mine had seven years' pith,
Till now some nine moons wasted, they have used
Their dearest action in the tented field,
And little of this great world can I speak,
More than pertains to feats of broil and battle,
And therefore little shall I grace my cause
In speaking for myself. Yet, by your gracious patience,
I will a round unvarnish'd tale deliver
Of my whole course of love; what drugs, what charms,
What conjuration and what mighty magic,
For such proceeding I am charged withal,
Won his daughter.

Bra. A maiden never bold;
If spirit so still and quiet, that her motion
Hush'd at herself; and she, in spite of nature,
If, years of country, credit, every thing,
To fall in love with what she fear'd to look on!
Tis a judgment main'd and most imperfect
That will confess perfection so could err
Against all rules of nature, and must be driven
To find out practices of cunning hell,
Why this should be. I therefore vouch again
That with some mixtures powerful o'er the blood,
And with some dram conjured to this effect,
I wrought upon her.

Duke. To vouch this, is no proof,
Without more wide and more overt test
Than these thin habits and poor likelihoods
Of modern seeming do prefer against him.

First Sen. But, Othello, speak: the dread
Did you by indirect and forced courses
Abuse and poison this young maid's affections?
Or came it by request and such fair questions
To soul to soul afforded?

Oth. I do beseech you,
End for the lady to the Sagittary,
And let her speak of me before her father:
If you do find me foul in her report,
He trust, the office I do hold of you,
Not only take away, but let your sentence
Von fall upon my life.

Duke. Fetch Desdemona hither. Ancient, conduct them: you best know
The place. [Exeunt Iago and Attendants.
And till she come, as truly as to heaven
do confess the vices of my blood,
Justly to your grave ears I'll present
Now I did thrive in this fair lady's love,
And she in mine.

Duke. Say it, Othello.

Oth. Her father loved me; oft invited me;
Till question'd me the story of my life,
Rom year to year, the battles, sieges, fortunes,
That I have pass'd,
Ran it through, even from my boyish days,
The very moment that he bade me tell it:
In this I spake of most disastrous chances,
Moving accidents by flood and field,
Hair-breadth escapes; the imminent deadly breach,
Being taken by the insolent foe
And sold to slavery, of my redemption thence
And portance in my travels' history:

Wherein of antres vast and deserts idle,
Rough quarries, rocks and hills whose heads touch heaven,
It was my hint to speak,—such was the process;
And of the Cannibals that each other eat,
The Anthropophagi and men whose heads
Do grow beneath their shoulders. This to hear
Would Desdemona seriously incline:
But still the house-affairs would draw her thence:
Which ever as she could with haste dispatch,
She'd come again, and with a greedy ear
Devour up my discourse, which I observing,
Took once a pliant hour, and found good means to draw from her a prayer of earnest heart
That I would all my pilgrimage dilate,
Whereof by parcels she had something heard,
But not intentionally: I did consent,
And often did beguile her of her tears,
When I did speak of some distressful stroke
That my youth suffer'd. My story being done,
She gave me for my pains a world of sights:
She swore, in faith, 'twas strange, 'twas passing strange.

'Twas pitiful, 'twas wondrous pitiful:
She wish'd she had not heard it, yet she wish'd
That heaven had made her such a man: she Thank'd me.
And bade me, if I had a friend that loved her,
I should but teach him how to tell my story,
And that would woo her. Upon this hint I
Spake:
She loved me for the dangers I had pass'd,
And I loved her that she did pity them.
This only is the witchcraft I have used:
Here comes the lady; let her witness it.

Enter Desdemona, Iago, and Attendants.

Duke. I think this tale would win my daughter too.

Good Brabantio,
Take up this mangled matter at the best:
Men do their broken weapons rather use
Than their bare hands.

Enter report. I pray you, hear her speak:
If she confess that she was half the woeer,
Destruction on my head, if my bad blame
Light on the man! Come hither, gentle mistress:
Do you perceive in all this noble company
Where most you owe obedience?

Des. My noble father, do I do perceive here a divided duty:
To you I am bound for life and education;
My life and education both do learn me
How to respect you; you are the lord of duty:
I am hitherto your daughter, but here's my husband,
And so much duty as my mother show'd
To you, preferring you before her father,
So much I challenge that I may profess
Due to the Moor my lord.

Bra. God be wi' you! I have done.
Please it your grace, on to the state-affairs:
I had rather to adopt a child than get it.
Come hither, Moor.

I here do give thee that with all my heart
Which, but thou hast already, with all my heart
I would keep from thee. For your sake, jewel,
I am glad at soul I have no other child;
For thy escape would teach me tyranny,
To hang clogs on them. I have done, my lord.

Duke. Let me speak like yourself, and lay a sentence,

Which, as a grise or step, may help these lovers
Into your favour.
When remedies are past, the griefs are ended
By seeing the worst, which late on hopes depended.
To mourn a mischief that is past and gone
Is the next way to draw new mischief on.
What cannot be preserved when fortune takes Patience her injury a mockery makes.
The robb'd that smiles steals something from the thief;
He robs himself that spends a bootless grief. 209

Bra. So let the Turk of Cyprus us beguile;
We lose it not, so long as we can smile.
He bears the sentence well that nothing bears
But the free comfort which from thee he hears,
But he bears both the sentence and the sorrow
That, to pay grief, must of poor patience borrow.
These sentences, to sugar, or to gall,
Being strong on both sides, are equivocal:
But words are words; I never yet did hear
That the bruised heart was pierced through the ear.
I humbly beseech you, proceed to the affairs
Of state.

Duke. The Turk with a most mighty preparation makes for Cyprus. Othello, the fortitude of the place is best known to you; and though we have there a substitute of most allowed sufficiency, yet opinion, a sovereign mistress of effects, throws a more safer voice on you; you must therefore be content to slubber the gloss of your new fortunes with this more stubborn and boisterous expedition.

Oth. The tyrant custom, most grave senators,
Hath made the flinty and steel couch of war
My thrice-driven bed of down: I do agrinize
A natural and prompt alacrity,
I find no hardness, and do undertake
These present wars against the Ottomites.
Most humbly therefore bending to your state,
I crave fit disposition for my wife,
Due reference of place and exhibition,
With such accommodation and besort
As levels with her breeding.

Duke. If you please, 240

Be't at her father's.

Bra. Nor I.

Des. Nor I; I would not there reside,
To put my father in impatient thoughts
By being in his eye. Most gracious duke,
To my unfoldng lend your prosperous ear;
And let me find a charter in your voice,
To assist my simpleness.

Duke. What would you, Desdemona?

Des. That I did love the Moor to live with
him,
My downright violence and storm of fortunes
May trumpet to the world: my heart's subdued
Even to the very quality of my lord:
I saw Othello's visage in his mind,
And to his honours and his valiant parts
Did I my soul and fortunes consecrate.
So that, dear lords, if I be left behind,
A moth of peace, and he go to the war,
The rites for which I love him are bereft me,
And I a heavy interim shall support
By his dear absence. Let me go with him. 260

Oth. Let her have your voices.

Vouch with me, heaven, I therefore beg it not,
To please the palate of my appetite,
Nor to comply with heat—the young affects
In me defunct—and proper satisfaction,
But to be free and bounteous to her mind;
And heaven defend your good souls, that you think
I will your serious and great business scant
For she is with me: no, when light-wing'd toys
Of feather'd Cupid seal with wanton dullness 270
My speculative and officed instruments,
That my disports corrupt and taint my business,
Let housewives make a skillet of my helm,
And all indign and base adversities
Make head against my estimation!

Duke. Be it as you shall privately determine,
Either for her stay or going: the affair cries haste,
And speed must answer it.

First Sen. You must away to-night.

Oth. With all my heart.

Duke. At nine i' the morning here we'll meet
again.

Othello, leave some officer behind,
And he shall our commission bring to you;
With such things else of quality and respect
As doth import you.

Oth. So please your grace, my ancient
A man he is of honesty and trust:
To his conveyance I assign my wife,
With what else needful your good grace shall think
To be sent after me.

Duke. Let it be so.

Good night to every one. [To Brab. And, noble signior,
If virtue no delighted beauty lack,
Your son-in-law is far more fair than black.

First Sen. Adieu, brave Moor; use Desdemona well.

Bra. Look to her, Moor, if thou hast eye to see;
She has deceived her father, and may thee.

[Exeunt Duke, Senators, Officers, &c.

Oth. My life upon her faith! Honest Iago,
My Desdemona must I leave to thee;
I prithee, let thy wife attend on her;
And bring them after in the best advantage.
Come, Desdemona; I have but an hour
Of love, of worldly matters and direction,
To spend with thee: we must obey the time.

[Exeunt Othello and Desdemona.

Rod. Iago,—

Iago. What say'st thou, noble heart?

Rod. What will I do, thinknest thou?

Iago. Why, go to bed, and sleep.

Rod. I will incontinent drown myself.

Iago. If thou dost, I shall never love the after. Why, thou silly gentleman!

Rod. It is silliness to live when to live is to suffer; and then have we a prescription to die when death is our physician.

Iago. O villainous! I have looked upon the world for four times seven years; and since
I could distinguish betwixt a benefit and an injury,
Iago. Go to; farewell. Do you hear, Rodrigo?
Rod. What say you?
Iago. No more of drowning, do you hear?
Rod. I am changed: I'll go sell all my land.

[Exit.

Iago. Thus do I ever make my fool my pursuè: For I mine own gain'd knowledge should profane, If I would time expend with such a snipe, But for my sport and profit. I hate the Moor; And it is thought abroad, that 'twixt my sheets He has done my office: I know not if it be true; But I, for mere suspicion in that kind, Will do as if for surety. He holds me well;
The better shall my purpose work on him.
Cassio's a proper man: let me see now:
To get his place and to plume up my will
In double knavery—How, how?—Let's see:
After some time, to abuse Othello's ear
That he is too familiar with his wife.
He hath a person and a smooth dispose
To be suspected, framed to make women false.
The Moor is of a free and open nature,
That thinks men honest that but seem to be so,
And will as tenderly be led by the nose
As asses are.
I have't. It is engender'd. Hell and night
Must bring this monstrous birth to the world's light.

ACT II.

SCENE I. A Sea-port in Cyprus. An open place near the quay.

Enter Montano and two Gentlemen.

Mont. What from the cape can you discern at sea?
First Gent. Nothing at all: it is a high-wrought flood:
I cannot, 'twixt the heaven and the main,
Descry a sail.

Mont. Methinks the wind hath spoke aloud at land;
A fuller blast ne'er shook our battlements:
If it hath ruffian'd so upon the sea,
What ribs of oak, when mountains melt on them,
Can hold the mortar? What shall we hear of this?

Sec. Gent. A segregation of the Turkish fleet:
For do but stand upon the foaming shore,
The chidden billow seems to pelt the clouds:
The wind-shaked surge, with high and monstrous mane,
Seems to cast water on the burning bear,
And quench the guards of the ever-fixèd pole:
I never did like molestation view
On the enchaufed flood.

Mont. If that the Turkish fleet
Be not ensheathing and embay'd, they are drown'd:
It is impossible they bear it out.

Enter a third Gentleman.

Third Gent. News, lads! our wars are done.
The desperate tempest hath so bang'd the Turks,
That their designation halts: a noble ship of Venice
Hath seen a grievous wreck and sufferance
On most part of their fleet.
Enter Cassio.

Cas. Thanks, you the valiant of this warlike isle,
That so approve the Moor! O, let the heavens
Give him defence against the elements,
For I have lost him on a dangerous sea.

Mon. Is he well ship'd?

Cas. His bark is stoutly timber'd, and his pilot
Of very expert and approved allowance;
Therefore my hopes, not surfeited to death,
Stand in bold cure.

[A cry within 'A sail, a sail, a sail!']

Enter a fourth Gentleman.

Cas. What noise?

Fourth Gent. The town is empty; on the brow of the sea
Stand ranks of people, and they cry 'A sail!'

Cas. My hopes do shape him for the governor.

Sec. Gent. They do discharge their shot of courtesy:
Our friends at least.

Cas. I pray you, sir, go forth,
And give us truth who 'tis that is arrived.

Sec. Gent. I shall. [Exeunt Cassio and Mon.]

Cas. Most fortunately: he hath achieved a maid
That paragons description and wild fame;
One that excels the quirks of blazoning pens,
And in the essential vesture of creation
Does tire the ingener.

Re-enter second Gentleman.

Sec. Gent. 'Tis one Iago, ancient to the general.
Cas. Has had most favourable and happy speed:
Tempests themselves, high seas and howling winds,
The gutter'd rocks and congregated sands,—
Travers' ensteel'd to clog the guiltless keel,—
As having sense of beauty, do omit

Their mortal natures, letting go safely by
The divine Desdemona.

Mon. What is she?

Cas. She that I spoke of, our great captain's wife,
Left in the conduct of the bold Iago,
Whose footing here anticipates our thoughts
A se'nnight's speed. Great Jove, Othello guard
And swell his sail with thine own powerful breath
That he may bless this bay with his tall ship,
Make love's quick pants in Desdemona's arms,
Give renewed fire to our extinct'd spirits,
And bring all Cyprus comfort!

Enter Desdemona, Emilia, Iago, Roderigo and Attendants.

Des. O, behold,
The riches of the ship is come on shore!
Ye men of Cyprus, let her have your knees.
Hail to thee, lady! and the grace of heaven,
Before, behind thee and on every hand,
Enwheel thee round!

Des. I thank you, valiant Cassio.
What tidings can you tell me of my lord?
Cas. He is not yet arrived: nor know I where
But that he's well and will be shortly here.

Des. O, but I fear—How lost you company?
Cas. The great contention of the sea and skies
Parted our fellowship—But, hark! a sail.

[Within 'A sail, a sail!' Guns heard.

Sec. Gent. They give their greeting to the citadel.

This likewise is a friend.

Cas. See for the news. [Exeunt Gentleman and Des.]
Good ancient, you are welcome. [To Emilia]
Welcome, mistress:
Let it not gall your patience, good Iago,
That I extend my manners; 'tis my breeding
That gives me this bold show of courtesy.

Iago. Sir, would she give you so much of her lips
As of her tongue she oft bestows on me,
You'd have enough.

Des. Iago. Alas, she has no speech.

Iago. In faith, too much:
I find it still, when I have list to sleep:
Marry, before your ladyship, I grant,
She puts her tongue a little in her heart,
And chides with thinking.

Emil. You have little cause to say so.

Iago. Come on, come on; you are picture out of doors,
Bells in your parlours, wild-cats in your kitchen,
Saints in your injuries, devils been offending,
Players in your housewifery, and housewives in your beds.

Des. Iago. O, fie upon thee, slanderer!
Iago. Nay, it is true, or else I am a Turk:
You rise to play and go to bed to work.

Emil. You shall not write my praise.

Iago. No, let me no.

Des. What wouldst thou write of me, if the shouldst praise me?
Iago. O gentle lady, do not put me to't;
For I am nothing, and not critical.

Des. Come on, assay. There's one gone to the harbour?

Iago. Ay, madam.
Othello.

[i.e.]

Des. I am not merry; but I do beguile the thing I am, by seeming otherwise. Come, how wouldst thou praise me? - Iago. I am about it; but indeed my invention comes from my pate as birdlime does from frize; it plucks out brains and all: but my Muse labours, and thus she is deliver'd. - [Aside] If she be fair and wise, and fairness and wit, O, she then is use, the other useth it. - Des. Well praised! How if she be black and witty? - Iago. If she be black, and thereto have a wit, she'll find a white that shall her blackness fit. - Des. Worse and worse. - Emil. How if fair and foolish? - Iago. She never yet was foolish that was fair; for even her folly help'd her to an heir. - Des. These are old fond paradoxes to make fools laugh 't the alehouse. What miserable praise ast thou for that's foul and foolish? - [Aside] Iago. There's none so foul and foolish thereunto, those foul pranks which fair and wise ones do. - Des. O heavy ignorance! thou praisesst the worst best. But what praise couldst thou bestow on a deserving woman indeed, one that, in the bestowal of her merit, did justly put on the vouch I very malice itself? - Iago. She that was ever fair and never proud, had tongue at will and yet was never loud, 160 150 lever lack'd gold and yet went never gay, led from her wish and yet said 'Now I may,' he that being anger'd, her revenge being nigh, e'd her wrong stay and her displeasure fly, he that in wisdom never was so frail to change the old's head for the salmon's tail, he that could think and ne'er disclose her mind, e' suitors following and not look behind, he was a wight, if ever such wight were, - Des. To do what? - Iago. To suckle fools and chronic small beer. - Des. O most lame and impotent conclusion! To do not learn of him, Emilia, though he be thy husband. How say you, Cassio? is he not a 150 160 lost profane and liberal counsellor? - Cas. He speaks home, madam; you may relish him more in the soldier than in the scholar. - Iago. [Aside] He takes her by the palm: ay, all said, whisper: with as little a web as this till I am made great a fly and a dog. Ay, smile pon her, do; I will gibe thee in thine own court-rap. You say true; 'tis so, indeed; if such tricks as these strip you out of your lieutenant, it had been better you had not kissed your three fingers oft, which now again you are most apt to play to sir in. Very good; well kissed! an excellent sporty! 'tis so, indeed. Yet again your fingers your lips? would they were clyster-pipes for our sake! [Trumpet within.] The Moor! I now his trumpet. - [Aside] 'Tis truly so. - Des. Let's meet him and receive him. - Cas. Lo, where he comes! - Enter Othello and Attendants. - Oth. O my fair warrior! - Des. My dear Othello! - Oth. It gives me wonder great as my content see you here before me. O my soul's joy! after every tempest come such calms, feit advantages, though true advantage never present itself; a devilish knave. Besides, the knave is handsome, young, and hath all those requisites in him that folly and green minds look after: a pestilent complete knave; and the woman hath found him already.

Rod. I cannot believe that in her; she's full of most blessed condition.

Iago. Blessed fig's-end! the wine she drinks is made of grapes; if she had been blessed, she would never have loved the Moor. Blessed pudding! Didst thou not see her paddle with the palm of his hand? didst not mark that?

Rod. Yes, that I did; but that was but courtesy.

Iago. Lechery, by this hand; an index and obscure prologue to the history of lust and foul thoughts. They met so near with their lips that their breaths embraced together. Villanous thoughts, Roderigo! when these mutualities so marshal the way, hard at hand comes the master and main exercise, the incorporate conclusion, Pish! But, sir, be you ruled by me: I have brought you from Venice. Watch you to-night; for the command, I'll lay it upon you. Cassio knows you not. I'll not be far from you: do you find some occasion to anger Cassio, either by speaking too loud, or tainting his discipline; or from what other course you please, which the time shall more favourably minister.

Rod. Well.

Iago. Sir, he is rash and very sudden in choler, and happy may strike at you: provoke him, that he may; for even out of that will I cause these of Cyprus to mutiny; whose qualification shall come into no true taste again but by the displasing of Cassio. So shall you have a shorter journey to your desires by the means I shall then have to prefer them; and the impediment most profitably removed, without the which there were no expectation of our prosperity.

Rod. I will do this, if I can bring it to any opportunity.

Iago. I warrant thee. Meet me by and by at the citadel: I must fetch his necessaries ashore.

Farewell.

Rod. Adieu. [Exit.

Iago. That Cassio loves her, I do well believe it:
That she loves him, 'tis apt and of great credit:
The Moor, howbeit that I endure him not,
Is of a constant, loving, noble nature.
And I dare think he'll prove to Desdemona
A most dear husband. Now, I do love her too;
Not out of absolute lust, though peradventure
I stand account for as great a sin,
But partly led to diet my revenge,
For that I do suspect the lusty Moor
Hath leap'd into my seat; the thought whereof
Doth, like a poisonous mineral, gnaw my inwards;
And nothing can or shall content my soul
Till I am even'd with him, wife for wife,
Or failing so, yet that I put the Moor
At least into a jealousy so strong
That judgement cannot cure. Which thing to do,
If this poor trash of Venice, whom I trash
For his quick hunting, stand the putting on,
I'll have our Michael Cassio on the hip,
Abuse him to the Moor in the rank garb—

For I fear Cassio with my night-cap too—
Make the Moor thank me, love me and reward me.
For making him egregiously an ass
And practical upon his peace and quiet
Even to madness. 'Tis here, but yet confused;
Knavey's plain face is never seen till used. [Exit.

Scene II. A street.

Enter a Herald with a proclamation; People following.

Her. It is Othello's pleasure, our noble an valiant general, that, upon certain tidings now arrived, importing the mere perdicion of the Turkish fleet, every man put himself into triumph some to dance, some to make bonfires, each man to what sport and revels his addition leads him to, besides these beneficial news, it is the celo bration of his nuptial. So much was his pleasure should be proclaimed. All offices are open, as there is full liberty of feasting from this preser hour to the bell the have told eleven. Heaven bless the isle of Cyprus and our noble general Othello! [Exeunt.

Scene III. A hall in the castle.

Enter Othello, Desdemona, Cassio, and Attendants.

Oth. Good Michael, look you to the guard to night:
Let's teach ourselves that honourable stop,
Not to outsport discretion.
Cas. Iago hath direction what to do;
But, notwithstanding, with my personal eye
Will I look to't.

Oth. Iago is most honest.
Michael, good night; to-morrow with your ea
liest
Let me have speech with you. [To Desdemona
Come, my dear love,
The refresh'd, made, the fruits are to ensue;
That profit's yet to come 'tween me and you.
Good night. [Exeunt Othello, Desdemona, and Attendant.

Enter Iago.

Cas. Welcome, Iago; we must to the watch Iago. Not this hour, lieutenant; 'tis not y ten o' the clock. Our general cast us thus ear for the love of his Desdemona; who let us n therefore blame; he hath not yet made wa
the night with her; and she is sport for Jove.
Cas. She's a most exquisite lady.
Iago. And, I'll warrant her, full of game.
Cas. Indeed, she's a most fresh and delica creature.
Iago. What an eye she has! methinks sounds a parley of provocation.
Cas. An inviting eye; and yet methinks rig modest.
Iago. And when she speaks, is it not a alarm to love?
Cas. She is indeed perfection.
Iago. Well, happiness to their sheets! Com lieutenant, I have a stoup of wine; and her without are a brace of Cyprus gallants the
He was a wight of high renown
And thou art but of low degree;
'Tis pride that pulls the country down;
Then take thine auld cloak about thee.

Some wine, ho! 39

Cas. Why, this is a more exquisite song than the other.

Iago. Will you hear 't again?

Cas. No; for I hold him to be unworthy of his place that does those things. Well, God's above all; and there be souls must be saved, and there be souls must not be saved.

Iago. It's true, good lieutenant.

Cas. For mine own part,—no offence to the general, nor any man of quality,—I hope to be saved. 111

Iago. And so do I too, lieutenant.

Cas. Ay, but, by your leave, not before me; the lieutenant is to be saved before the ancient. Let's have no more of this; let's to our affairs. — Forgive us our sins!—Gentlemen, let's look to our business. Do not think, gentlemen, I am drunk; this is my ancient; this is my right hand, and this is my left: I am not drunk now; I can stand well enough, and speak well enough. 120

All. Excellent well.

Cas. Why, very well then; you must not think then that I am drunk. [Exit.

Mon. To the platform, masters; come, let's set the watch.

Iago. You see this fellow that is gone before; He is a soldier fit to stand by Cesar And give direction; and do but see his vice; 'Tis to his virtue a just equinox, The one as long as the other; 'tis pity of him. 130 I fear the trust Othello puts him in, On some odd time of his infirmity, Will shake this island.

Mon. But is he often thus?

Iago. 'Tis evermore the prologue to his sleep: He'll watch the horologe a double set, If drink rock not his cradle.

Mon. It were well

The general were put in mind of it.

Perhaps he sees it not; or his good nature
Prizes the virtue that appears in Cassio,
And looks not on his evils: is not this true? 140

Enter Roderigo.

Iago. [Aside to him] How now, Roderigo! I pray you, after the lieutenant; go.

[Exit Roderigo.

Mon. And 'tis great pity that the noble Moor Should hazard such a place as his own second With one of an ingrate infirmity: It were an honest action to say So to the Moor.

Iago. Not I, for this fair island: I do love Cassio well; and would do much To cure him of this evil—But, hark! what noise? [Cry within: 'Help! help!'

Re-enter Cassio, driving in Roderigo.

Cas. You rogue! you rascal!

Mon. What's the matter, lieutenant?

Cas. A knave teach me my duty! 151

I'll beat the knave into a twiggen bottle. Rod. Beat me!
Cas. Dost thou prate, rogue?

[Striking Roderigo.

Mon. Nay, good lieutenant; [Staying him.

I pray you, sir, hold your hand.
Cas. Or I'll knock you o'er the mazzard.

Mon. Come, come, you're drunk.

Cas. Drunk! [They fight.

Nay, good lieutenant,—alas, gentlemen:—Help, ho!—Lieutenant,—sir,—Montano,—sir;—Help, masters!—Here's a goodly watch indeed!

Who's that which rings the bell?—Diablo, ho! The town will rise: God's will, lieutenant, hold! You will be shamed for ever.

Re-enter Othello and Attendants.

Oth. What is the matter here?

Mon. 'Zounds, I bleed still; I am hurt to the death.

Oth. Hold, for your lives!

Iago. Hold, ho! Lieutenant,—sir,—Montano,—gentlemen,

Have you forgot all sense of place and duty?
Hold! the general speaks to you; hold, hold, for shame!

Oth. Why, how now, ho! from whence arisest this?

Are we turn'd Turks, and to ourselves do that Which heaven hath forbid the Otomites? 171

For Christian shame, put by this barbarous brawl:—
He that stirs next to carve for his own rage
Holds his soul light; he dies upon his motion.

Silence that dreadful bell: it frights the isle
From her propriety. What is the matter, masters?
Honest Iago, that look'st dead with grieving,

Speak, who began this? on thy love, I charge thee.

Iago. I do not know: friends all but now, even now,

In quarter, and in terms like bride and groom
Devosting them for bed; and then, but now— 181

As if some planet had unwitted men.

Swords out, and tilting one at other's breast,
In opposition bloody, I cannot speak.

Any beginning to this peevish odds;
And would in action glorious I had lost
Those legs that brought me to a part of it!

Oth. How comes it, Michael, you are thus forgot?

Cas. I pray you, pardon me; I cannot speak.

Oth. Worthy Montano, you were wont be civil;

The gravity and stillness of your youth
The world hath noted, and your name is great
In mouths of wisest censure: what's the matter, That you unlace your reputation thus
And spend your rich opinion for the name
Of a night-brawler? give me answer to it.

Mon. Worthy Othello, I am hurt to danger:
Your officer, Iago, can inform you,—
While I spare speech, which something now offends me,—

Of all that I do know: nor know I ought
By me that's said or done amiss this night;

Unless self-charity be sometimes a vice,

And to defend ourselves it be a sin
When violence assails us.

Oth. Now, by heaven, My blood begins my safer guides to rule;
And passion, having my best judgement collied
Assays to lead the way: if I once stir,
Or do but lift this arm, the best of you Shall sink in my rebuke. Give me to know How this foul rout began, who set it on;
And he that is approved in this offence,
Though he had twinn'd with me, both at a bir:

Shall lose me. What! in a town of war,
Yet wild, the people's hearts brimful of fear,
To manage private and domestic quarrel,
In night, and on the court and guard of safety
'Tis monstrous. Iago, who began 't?

Mon. If partially affined, or leagued in offi

Thou dost deliver more or less than truth,
Thou art no soldier.

Iago. Touch me not so near:

I had rather have this tongue cut from my mouth Than it should do offence to Michael Cassio;

Yet, I persuade myself, to speak the truth
Shall nothing wrong him. Thus it is, general,

Mon. And myself being in speech, In speech,

There comes a fellow crying out for help;
And Cassio following him with determined swif

To execute upon him. Sir, this gentleman
Steps in to Cassio, and entreats his pause:

Myself the crying fellow did pursue

Lost by his glamour—as it so fell out—

The town might fall in fright: he, swift of foot, Outran my purpose; and I return'd the rat

For that I heard the clink and fall of swords,
And Cassio high in oath; which till to-night I ne'er might say before. When I came back For this was brief—I found them close together

Iago. I know, Iago,

Thy honesty and love doth mince this matter,
Making it light to Cassio. Cassio, I love thee,

But never more be officer of mine.

Re-enter Desdemona, attended.

Oth. Look, if my gentle love be not raised up! I'll make thee an example.

Des. What's the matter?

Oth. All's well now, sweeting; come a bed.

Sir, for your hurts, myself will be your surgeon

Lead him off. [To Montano, who is lead

Iago, look with care about the town,
And silence those whom this vile brawl distress,

Come, Desdemona: 'tis the soldiers' life,

To have their balmy slumbers waked with care:

[Exeunt all but Iago and Cassio.

Iago. What, are you hurt, lieutenant?

Cassio. Ay, past all surgery.

Iago. Marry, heaven forbid!

Des. Reputation, reputation, reputation!

Cas. I have lost my reputation! I have lost the Iago. I protest, in the sincerity of love and honest kindness.
Cas. I think it freely; and betimes in the morning I will beseech the virtuous Desdemona to undertake for me; I am desperate of my fortunes if they check me here.
Iago. You are in the right. Good night, lieutenant; I must to the watch.
Cas. Good night, honest Iago. [Exit.]
Iago. And what's he then that says I play the villain?
When this advice is free I give and honest, Probable to thinking and indeed the course To win the Moor again? For 'tis most easy The inclining Desdemona to subdue In any honest suit: she's framed as fruitful As the free elements. And then for her To win the Moor—were't to renounce his baptism, All seals and symbols of redeemed sin, His soul is so enfeeter'd to her love, That she may make, unmake, do what she list, Even as her appetite shall play the god With his weak function. How am I then a villain To counsel Cassio to this parallel course, Directly to his good? Divinity of hell!
When devils will the blacklist sins put on, They do suggest at first with heavenly shows, As I do now: for his honest fool Flies Desdemona to repair his fortunes
And she for him pleads strongly to the Moor, I'll pour this pestilence into his ear, That she repeats him for her body's lust; And by how much she strives to do him good, She shall undo her credit with the Moor. So will I turn her virtue into pitch, And out of her own goodness make the net That shall enmesh them all.

Re-enter Roderigo.

How now, Roderigo! I do follow here in the chase, not like a hound that hunts, but one that fills up the cry. My money is almost spent; I have been to-night exceedingly well cudgelled; and I think the issue will be, I shall have so much experience for my pains, and so, with no money at all and a little more wit, return again to Venice.
Iago. How poor are they that have not patience! What wound did ever heal but by degrees? Thou know'st we work by wit, and not by witchcraft; And wit depends on dilatory time. Doesn't not go well? Cassio hath beaten thee, And thou, by that small hurt, hast cashier'd Cassio: Though other things grow fair against the sun, Yet fruits that blossom first will first be ripe: Content thyself awhile. By the mass, 'tis morning; Pleasure and action make the hours seem short. Retire thee; go where thou art billeted: Away, I say; thou shalt know more hereafter: Nay, get thee gone. [Exit Roderigo.] Two things are to be done: My wife must move for Cassio to her mistress; I'll set her on; Myself the while to draw the Moor apart,
And bring him jump when he may Cassio find Soliciting his wife: ay, that's the way:
Dull not device by coldness and delay. [Exit.

ACT III.

SCENE I. Before the castle.

Enter Cassio and some Musicians.

Cas. Masters, play here; I will content your pains;
Something that's brief; and bid 'Good morrow, general.' [Music.

Enter Clown.

Clo. Why, masters, have your instruments been in Naples, that they speak i' the nose thus?
First Mus. How, sir, how!
Clo. Are these, I pray you, wind-instruments?
First Mus. Ay, marry, are they, sir.
Clo. O, thereby hangs a tail.
First Mus. Whereby hangs a tale, sir? 9
Clo. Marry, sir, by many a wind-instrument that I know. But, masters, here's money for you: and the general so likes your music, that he desires you, for love's sake, to make no more noise with it.
First Mus. Well, sir, we will not.
Clo. If you have any music that may not be heard, to't again: but, as they say, to hear music
the general does not greatly care.
First Mus. We have none such, sir.
Clo. Then put up your pipes in your bag, for I'll away: go; vanish into air; away! 21 [Exit Musicians.
Cas. Dost thou hear, my honest friend? Clo.
No, I hear not your honest friend; I hear you.
Cas. Prithee, keep up thy quillets. There's a poor piece of gold for thee: if the gentlewoman that attends the general's wife be stirring, tell her there's one Cassio entertains her a little favour of speech: wilt thou do this?
Clo. She is stirring, sir; if she will stir lither,
I shall seem to notify unto her.
Cas. Do, good my friend. [Exit Clown.

Enter Iago.

In happy time, Iago.

Iago. You have not been a-bed, then?
Cas. Why, no; the day had broke
Before we parted. I have made bold, Iago,
To send in to your wife: my suit to her
Is, that she will to virtuous Desdemona
Procure me some access.
Iago. I'll send her to you presently;
And I'll devise a mean to draw the Moor
Out of the way, that your converse and business
May be more free. 41
Cas. I humbly thank you for't. [Exit Iago.
I knew
A Florentine more kind and honest.

Enter Emilia.

Emil. Good morrow, good lieutenant: I am sorry
For your displeasure; but all will sure be well.
The general and his wife are talking of it;
And she speaks for you stoutly: the Moor replies,
That he you hurt is of great fame in Cyprus
And great affivity and that in wholesome wise
He might not but refuse you, but he protests
loves you
And needs no other suitor but his likings
To take the safest occasion by the front
To bring you in again.
Cas. Yet, I beseech you,
If you think fit, or that it may be done,
Give me advantage of some brief discourse
With Desdemona alone.
Clo. Pray you, come in:
I will bestow you where you shall have time
To speak your bosom freely.
Cas. I am much bound to you. [Exeunt.

SCENE II. A room in the castle.

Enter Othello, Iago, and Gentlemen.

Oth. These letters give, Iago, to the pilot
And by him do my duties to the senate;
That done, I will be walking on the works;
Repair there to me.
Iago. Well, my good lord, I'll d
Oth. This fortification, gentlemen, shall
't?
Gent. We'll wait upon your lordship. [Exeunt.

SCENE III. The garden of the castle.

Enter Desdemona, Cassio, and Emilia.

Des. Be thou assured, good Cassio, I will
All my abilities in thy behalf.
Emil. Good madam, do: I warrant it grieves my husband,
As if the case were his.
Des. O, that's an honest fellow. Do not do
Cassio,
But I will have my lord and you again
As friendly as you were.
Cas. Bounteous madam,
Whatever shall become of Michael Cassio,
He's never any thing but your true servant.
Des. I know't; I thank you. You do love
lord.
You have known him long; and be you wel sured
He shall in strangeness stand no further off
Than in a politic distance.
Cas. Ay, but, lady,
That policy may either last so long,
Or feed upon such nice and waterish diet,
Or breed itself so out of circumstance,
That, I being absent and my place supplied,
My general will forget my love and service.
Des. Do not doubt that; before Emilia he
I give thee warrant of thy place: assure thee
If I do vow a friendship, I'll perform it.
To the last article: my lord shall never rest;
I'll watch him tame and talk him out of patience.
His bed shall seem a school, his board a shri
I'll intermingle every thing he does
With Cassio's suit: therefore be merry, Cassio.
For thy solicitor shall rather die
Than give thy cause away.
Emil. Madam, here comes my lord.
Cas. Madam, I'll take my leave.
Des. Why, stay, and hear me speak.
Enter Othello and Iago.

Oth. Ha! like not that.

Iago. What dost thou say?

Oth. Nothing, my lord: or— I know not what.

Iago. Was not that Cassio parted from my wife?

Oth. Cassio, my lord! No, sure, I cannot think it, if he would steal away so guilty-like, ing you coming.

Iago. I do believe 'twas he.

Oth. How now, my lord! I've been talking with a suitor here, that languishes in your displeasure. Who is 't you mean?

Iago. Why, your lieutenant, Cassio. Good my lord, have any grace or power to move you, present reconciliation take;

if be not one that truly loves you,

errors in ignorance and not in cunning

you have in an honest face: come, call him back.

Oth. Went he hence now?

Iago. Ay, sooth; so humbled the hath left part of his grief with me, suffer with him. Good love, call him back.

Oth. Not now, sweet Desdemona; some other time.

Iago. But shall 't be shortly?

Oth. The sooner, sweet, for you. Shall 't be to-night at supper?

Iago. No, not to-night.

Oth. To-morrow dinner, then?

Iago. I shall not dine at home; see the captains at the citadel.

Oth. Why, then, to-morrow night; or Tuesday morning;

Tuesday noon, or night; on Wednesday morning: time, the name, the time; but let it not ed three days: in faith, he's penitent:

et, in our common reason—that, they say, the wars must make examples of their best—is not almost a fault

nur a private check. When shall he come?

me, Othello: I wonder in my soul, at you would ask me, that I should deny,

stand so maimering on. What! Michael Cassio, came a-wooing with you, and so many a time,

in I have spoke of you disparingly, has en your part; to have so much to do him in? Trust me, I could do much,— Prithie, no more: let him come when he will;

I'll deny thee nothing.

Iago. Why, this is not a boon;

as I should entreat you wear your gloves,

don nourishing dishes, or keep you warm,

your own person: nay, when I have a suit so me I mean to touch your love indeed,

All be full of poise and difficult weight

And fearful to be granted.

Oth. I will deny thee nothing:

Whereon, I do beseech thee, grant me this,

To leave me but a little to myself.

Oth. Farewell, my Desdemona: I'll come to thee straight.

Iago. Emilia, come. Be as your fancies teach you;

Whate'er you be, I am obedient.

Oth. Excellent wretch! Perdition catch my soul,

But I do love thee! and when I love thee not,

Chaos is come again.

Iago. My noble lord,—

Iago. What dost thou say, Iago?

Iago. Did Michael Cassio, when you woo'd my lady,

Know of your love?

Oth. He did, from first to last: why dost thou ask?

Iago. But for a satisfaction of my thought;

No further harm.

Oth. Why of thy thought, Iago?

Iago. I did not think he had been acquainted with her.

Oth. O, yes; and went between us very oft.

Iago. Indeed!

Oth. Indeed! ay, indeed: discern'st thou in that?

Is he not honest?

Iago. Honest, my lord!

Oth. Honest! ay, honest.

Iago. My lord, for aught I know.

Oth. What dost thou think?

Iago. Think, my lord!

Oth. Think, my lord!

By heaven, he echoes me,

As if there were some monster in his thought

Too hideous to be shown. Thou dost mean something:

I heard thee say even now, thou likedst not that,

When Cassio left my wife: what didst not like?

And when I told thee he was of my counsel

In my whole course of wooing, thou criedst

'Indeed!' And didst contract and pursue thy brow together,

As if thou then hadst shut up in thy brain

Some horrible conceit: if thou dost love me,

Show me thy thought.

Iago. My lord, you know I love you.

Oth. I think thou dost;

And, for I know thou 'rt full of love and honesty,

And weight's thy words before thou givest them

breath,

Therefore these stops of thine fright me the more:

For such things in a false disloyal knife

Are tricks of custom, but in a man that's just

They are close delations, working from the heart

That passion cannot rule.

Iago. For Michael Cassio,

I dare be sworn I think that he is honest.

Oth. I think so too.

Iago. Men should be what they seem;

Or those that be not, would they might seem none.

Oth. Certain, men should be what they seem.

Iago. Why, then, I think Cassio's an honest man.
Oth. Nay, yet there's more in this:
I prithee, speak to me as to thy thinkings,
As thou dost ruminate, and give thy worst of thoughts

The worst of words.

Iago. Good my lord, pardon me:
Though I am bound to every act of duty,
I am not bound to that all slaves are free to.
Utter my thoughts? Why, say they are vile and
false:
As where's that palace whereinto foul things
Sometimes intrude not? who has a breast so pure,
But some uncleanly apprehensions
Keep leets and law-days and in session sit
With meditations lawful?

Oth. Thou dost conspire against thy friend,
Iago,
If thou but think'st him wrong'd and makest his ear
A stranger to thy thoughts.

Iago. Though I chance am vicious in my guess,
As, I confess, it is my nature's plague
To spy into abuses, and oft my jealousy
Shapes faults that are not—that your wisdom yet,
From one that so imperfectly conceits,
Would take no notice, nor build yourself a trouble
Out of his scattering and unsure observance.

It were not for your quiet nor your good,
Not for my mankind, honesty, or wisdom,
To let you know my thoughts.

Oth. What dost thou mean?

Iago. Good name in man and woman, dear my lord,
Is the immediate jewel of their souls:
Who steals my purse steals trash; 'tis something,
nothing;
'Twas mine, 'tis his, and has been slave to thousands;
But he that filches from me my good name
Robbs me of that which not enriches him
And makes me poor indeed.

Oth. By heaven, I'll know thy thoughts.

Iago. Y'cannot, if my heart were in your hand;
Nor shall not, whilst 'tis in my custody.

Oth. Ha!

Iago. O, beware, my lord, of jealousy:
It is the green-eyed monster which doth mock
The meat it feeds on: that cuckold lives in bliss
Who, certain of his fate, loves not his wronger;
But O, what damned minutes tells he o'er
Who dotes, yet doubts, suspects, yet strongly loves!

Oth. O misery!

Iago. Poor and content is rich and rich enough,
But riches faincless is as poor as winter
To him that ever fears he shall be poor.
Good heaven, the souls of all my tribe defend
From jealousy!

Oth. Why, why is this?

Think'st thou I'd make a life of jealousy,
To follow still the changes of the moon
With fresh suspicions? No; to be once in doubt
Is peace to be resolved: exchange me for a goat,
When I shall turn the business of my soul
To such exsufflicate and blown surmises,
Matching thy inference. 'Tis not to make me jealous
To say my wife is fair, feeds well, loves company,
Is free of speech, sings, plays and dances well
Where virtue is, these are more virtuous:
Nor from mine own weak merits will I draw
The smallest fear or doubt of her revolt:
For she has eyes, and choose me. No, Iago;
I'll see before I doubt; when I doubt, prove
And on the proof, there is no more but this,— Away at once with love or jealousy!

Iago. I am glad of it; for now I shall reason
To show the love and duty that I bear you
With franker spirit: therefore, as I am bound Receive it from me. I speak not yet of proo
Look to your wife; observe her well with Ca:
Wear your eye thus, not jealous nor secure:
I would not have your free and noble nature,
Out of self-bounty, be abused: look to't;
I know our country disposition well;
In Venice they do let heaven see the pranks
They dare not show their husbands; their conscience
Is not to leave't undone, but keep't unknown
Oth. Dost thou say so?

Iago. She did deceive her father, marry you;
And when she seem'd to shake and fear you,
She loved them most.

Oth. And so she did.

Iago. Why, go to th' She that, so young, could give out such a sorrow
To seel her father's eyes up close as oak—
He thought 'twas witchcraft—but I am much blamed
I humbly do beseech you of your pardon
For too much loving you.

Oth. I am bound to thee for Iago. I see this hath a little dash'd your sp

Oth. Not a jot, not a jot.

Iago. I faith, I fear it
I hope you will consider what is spoke
Comes from my love. But I do see you're mo
I am to pray you not to strain my speech
To grosser issues nor to larger reach
Than to suspicion.

Oth. I will not.

Should you do so, my lord,
My speech should fall into such vile success
As my thoughts aim not at. Cassio's my wo friend—
My lord, I see you're moved.

Oth. No, not much mo
I do not think but Desdemona's honest.

Iago. Long live she so! and long live yo think so!

Oth. And yet, how nature erring from i Iago. Ay, there's the point: as—to be with you—
Not to affect many proposed matches
Of her own clime, complexion, and degree,
Whereeto we see in all things nature tends—Foh! one may smell in such a will most ran Foul disproportion, thoughts unnatural.
But pardon me; I do not in position
Distinguish speak of her; though I may fear
Her will, recoiling to her better judgement,
May fail to match you with her country for
And happily repent.

Oth. Farewell, farewell;
more thou dost perceive, let me know more; thy wife to observe: leave me, Iago. 240
Oth. Why did I marry? This honest creature doubtless es and knows more, much more, than he unfolds. 250
Iago. [Returning] My lord, I would I might entreat your honour
I scan this thing no further; leave it to time: enough it be fit that Cassio have his place, s, sure, he fills it up with great ability, if, you please to hold him off awhile, you shall by that perceive him and his means: if, your lady strain his entertainment th' any strong or vehement importunity; ich shall be seen in that. In the mean time, me be thought too little in my fears—worthy cause I have to fear am—d hold her free, I do beseech your honour. 270
Oth. Fear not my government.
Iago. I once more take my leave. [Exit.
Iago. This fellow's of exceeding honesty, d knows all qualities, with a learned spirit, 290
Iago. Do not you chide; I have a thing for you.
Iago. A thing for me? it is a common thing—
Emil. Ha!
Iago. To have a foolish wife.
Emil. O, is that all? What will you give me now For that same handkerchief?
Iago. What handkerchief?
Emil. Why, that the Moor first gave to Desdemona:
Iago. That which so often you did bid me steal. 310
Emil. No, 'faith; she let it drop by negligence, And, to the advantage, I, being here, took 't up. Look, here it is.
Iago. A good wench; give it me.
Emil. What will you do with 't, that you have been so earnest To have me fetch it?
Iago. [Snatching it] Why, what's that to you? 320
Emil. If it be not for some purpose of import, Give 't me again: poor lady, she'll run mad When she shall lack it.
Iago. Be not avaricious: I have use for it.
Go, leave me. [Exit Emilia. 330
Oth. I will in Cassio's lodging lose this napkin, And let him find it. Trifles light as air Are to the jealous confirmations strong As proofs of holy writ: this may do something. The Moor already changes with my poison; Dangerous conceits are, in their natures, poisons, Which at the first are scarce found to distaste, But with a little act upon the blood, Burn like the sulphur of sulphur. I did say so: Look, where he comes!

Re-enter Desdemona and Emilia.

Othello.

Not poppy, nor mandrake, nor all the drowsy syrups of the world, Shall ever medicine thee to that sweet sleep Which thou owest to yesterday.
Oth. Ha! ha! false to me?
Iago. Why, how now, general! no more of that.
Oth. Avant! be gone! thou hast set me on the rack: I swear 'tis better to be much abused Than but to know 't a little.
Iago. How now, my lord!
Oth. What sense had I of her stol'n hours of lust? I saw 't not, thought it not, it harm'd not me: I slept the next night well, was free and merry; I found not Cassio's kisses on her lips:
He that is robb'd, not wanting what is stol'n, Let him not know 't, and he's not robb'd at all. 341
Iago. I am sorry to hear this.
Oth. I had been happy, if the general camp, Pioneers and all, had tasted her sweet body, So I had nothing known, O, now, for ever Farewell the tranquil mind! farewell content! Farewell the plumed troop, and the big wars, That make ambition virtue! O, farewell!
Othello. Give me a living reason she's disloyal.

Iago. I do not like the office.

But, sith I am enter'd in this cause so far,

Prick'd to 't by foolish honesty and love,

will go on. I lay with Cassio lately;

And, being troubled with a raging tooth,

I could not sleep.

There are a kind of men so loose of soul,

That in their sleeps will mutter their affairs;

One of this kind is Cassio:

In sleep I heard him say 'Sweet Desdemona,

Let us be wary, let us hide our loves:

And then, sir, would he gripe and wring his hand,

Cry 'O sweet creature!' and then kiss me hard

As if he pluck'd up kisses by the roots

That grew upon my lips; then laid his leg

Over my thigh, and sigh'd, and kiss'd; and then

Cried 'Cursed fate that gave thee to the Moor'

Oth. O monstrous! monstrous!

Iago. Nay, this was but his dream.

Oth. But this denoted a foregone conclusion

'Tis a shrewd doubt, though it be but a dream.

Iago. And this may help to thicken the proofs

That do demonstrate thinly.

Oth. I'II tear her all to pieces.

Iago. Nay, but be wise; yet we see noth done;

She may be honest yet. Tell me but this,

Have you not sometimes seen a handkerchief

Spotted with strawberries in your wife's hand

Oth. I gave her such a one; 'twas my lady's gift.

Iago. I know not that: but such a handkerchief—

I am sure it was your wife's—did I to-day

See Cassio wipe his beard with.

Oth. If it be that—

Iago. If it be that, or any that was hers,

It speaks against her with the other proofs.

Oth. O, that the slave had forty thou's lives!

One is too poor, too weak for my revenge.

Now do I see 'tis true. Look here, Iago;

All my fond love thus do I blow to heaven.

'Tis gone.

Arose, black vengeance, from thy hollow cell

Yield up, O love, thy crown and hearted throne

To tyrannous hate! Swell, bosom, with fraught,

For 'tis of aspies' tongues!

Iago. Yet be content.

Oth. O, blood, blood, blood!

Iago. Patience, I say; your mind peril.

may change.

Oth. Never, Iago. Like to the Pontic sea

Whose icy current and compulsive course

Ne'er feels retiring ebb, but keeps due on

To the Propontic and the Hellespont,

Even so my bloody thoughts, with violent pace

Shall ne'er look back, ne'er ebb to humble low

Till that a capable and wide revenge

Swallow them up. Now, by yond vast heaven,

[Kneels] In the due reverence of a sacred vow

I here engage my words.

Iago.

[Kneels] Witness, you ever-burning lights at How do you, Desdemona?

Des. Well, my good lord.

Oth. Give me your hand: this hand is moist, my lady.

Des. It yet hath felt no age nor known no sorrow.

Oth. This argues fruitfulness and liberal heart:

Hot, hot, and moist: this hand of yours requires
A sequester from liberty, fasting and prayer, 40
Much castigation, exercise devout;
For here's a young and sweating devil here,
That commonly rebels. 'Tis a good hand,
A frank one.

Des. You may, indeed, say so;
For 'twas that hand that gave away my heart.

Oth. A liberal hand: the hearts of old gave hands;
But our new heraldry is hands, not hearts.

Des. I cannot speak of this. Come now, your promise.

Oth. What promise, chuck?

Des. I have sent to bid Cassio come speak with you.

Oth. I have a salt and sorry rheum offends me;
Lend me thy handkerchief. 50

Des. Here, my lord.

Oth. That which I gave you.

Des. I have it not about me.

Oth. Not?

Des. No, indeed, my lord.

Oth. That is a fault.

That handkerchief
Did an Egyptian to my mother give;
She was a charmer, and could almost read
The thoughts of people: she told her, while she kept it,
'Twould make her amiable and subdue my father
Entirely to her love, but if she lost it
Or made a gift of it, my father's eye
Should hold her loathed and his spirits should hunt
After new fancies: she, dying, gave it me;
And bid me, when my fate would have me wive,
To give it her; I did so: and take heed on't;
Make it a darling like your precious eye;
To lose 't or give 't away were such perdition
As nothing else could match.

Des. Is't possible?

Oth. 'Tis true: there's magic in the web of it:
A sibyl, that had number'd in the world
The sun to course two hundred compasses,
In her prophetic fury sew'd the work;
The worms were hallow'd that did breed the silk;
And it was dyed in mummy which the skilful
Conserved of maidens' hearts.

Des. Indeed! is 't true?

Oth. Most veritable; therefore look to't well.

Des. Then would to God that I had never seen 't!

Oth. Ha! wherefore?

Des. Why do you speak so startlingly and rash?

Oth. Is't lost? is it gone? speak, is it out o' the way?

Des. Heaven bless us!

Oth. Say you?

Des. It is not lost; but what an if it were?

Oth. How!

Des. I say, it is not lost.
Oth. Fetch 't, let me see 't.
Des. Why, so I can, sir, but I will not now.

This is a trick to put me from my suit:
Pray you, let Cassio be received again.

Oth. Fetch me the handkerchief: my mind misgives.

Des. Come, come; You'll never meet a more sufficient man.

Oth. The handkerchief!
Des. I pray, talk me of Cassio.

Oth. The handkerchief!
Des. A man that all his time
Hath founded his good fortunes on your love,
Shared dangers with you,—

Oth. The handkerchief.
Des. In sooth, you are to blame.
Oth. Away! [Exit.

Emil. Is this not this man jealous?
Des. Ne'er saw this before.

Sure, there's some wonder in this handkerchief:
I am most unhappy in the loss of it.

Emil. 'Tis not a year or two shows us a man:
They are all but stomachs, and we all but food;
They eat us hungerly, and when they are full,
They belch us. Look you, Cassio and my husband!

Enter Cassio and Iago.

Iago. There is no other way; 'tis she must do't:
And, lo, the happiness! go, and importune her.

Des. How now, good Cassio! what's the news
with you?

Cas. Madam, my former suit: I do beseech you
That by your most virtuous means I may again
Exist, and be a member of his love
Whom I with all the office of my heart
Entirely honour: I would not be delay'd.
If my offence be of such mortal kind
That nor my service past, nor present sorrows,
Not purposed merit in futurity,
Can range me into his love again,
But to know so must be my benefit;
So shall I clothe me in a forced content,
And shut myself up in some other course,
To fortune's alms.

Des. Alas, thrice-gentle Cassio!
My advocacy is not now in tune;
My lord is not my lord; nor should I know him,
Were he in favour as in humour alter'd.
So help me every spirit sanctified,
As I have spoken for you all my best
And stood within the blank of his displeasure
For my free speech! you must awhile be patient:
What I can do I will; and more I will
Than for myself I dare: let that suffice you.

Iago. Is my lord angry?

Emil. He went hence but now,
And certainly in strange unquietness.

Iago. Can he be angry? I have seen the cannon
When it hath blown his ranks into the air,
And, like the devil, from his very arm
Puff'd his own brother:—and can he be angry?
Something of moment then: I will go meet him:
There's matter in't indeed, if he be angry.

Des. I prithee, do so. [Exit Iago.

Either from Venice, or some unhatch'd practice
Made demonstrable here in Cyprus to him,
Hath puddled his clear spirit; and in such case
Men's natures wrangle with inferior things,
Though great ones are their object. 'Tis even a
Our other heathful members even to that sense
Of pain: nay, we must think men are not gods.
Nor of them look for such observances
As fit the bridal. Beshrew me much, Emilia,
I was, unhandsome warrior as I am.
Arraigning his unkindness with my soul;
But now I find I had suborn'd the witness,
And he's indicted falsely.

Emil. Pray heaven it be state-matters, as you think,
And no conception nor any jealous
Concerning you.

Des. Alas the day! I never gave him cause
But jealous souls will not be answer'd:
They are not ever jealous for the cause,
But jealous for they are jealous: 'tis a monster
Begot upon itself, born on itself.

Des. Heaven keep that monster from Othello mind!

Emil. Lady, amen.

Des. I will go seek him. Cassio, walk we about:
If I do find him fit, I'll move your suit
And seek to effect it to my uttermost.

Cas. I humbly thank your ladyship. [Exit Desdemona and Emil.

Enter Bianca.

Bian. Save you, friend Cassio!

Cas. What make you from here?
How is it with you, my most fair Bianca?
I' faith, sweet love, I was coming to your house.

Bian. And I was going to your lodging, Cas.
What, keep a week away? seven days and night?
Eight score eight hours? and lovers' absent hours?
More tedious than the dial eight score times?
O weary reckoning!

Cas. Pardon me, Bianca:
I have this while with ledens thoughts brawled:
But I'll hang, in a more continuance time,
Strike off this score of absence. Sweet Bianca, [Giving her Desdemona's handkerchief.

Take me this work out:

Bian. O Cassio, whence came this?
This is some token from a newer friend:
To the felt absence now I feel a cause:
Isn't come to this? Well, well.

Cas. Go to, woman! Throw your vile guesses in the devil's teeth,
From whence you have them. You are jea
now
That this is from some mistress, some rem brance:
No, in good troth, Bianca.

Bian. Why, whose is it?

* Cas. I know not, sweet: I found it in chamber.

I like the work well: ere it be demanded—
As like enough it will—I'd have it copied:
Take it, and do't; and leave me for this time.

Bian. Leave you! wherefore?

Cas. I do attend here on the general;
And think it no addition, nor my wish,
To have him see me woman'd.
ACT IV.

SCENE I. Cyprus. Before the castle.

Enter Othello and Iago.

Iago. Will you think so?

Oth. Think so, Iago.

Iago. What, o kiss in private?

Oth. An unauthorized kiss.

Iago. Or to be naked with her friend in bed a hour or more, not meaning any harm?

Oth. Naked in bed, Iago, and not mean harm!—Is't hypocrisy against the devil! huy that meanvirtuously, and yet do so, he devil their virtue tempts, and they tempt heaven.

Iago. So they do nothing, 'tis a venial slip; if I give my wife a handkerchief,—

Oth. What then?

Iago. Why, then, 'tis hers, my lord; and, being hers, he may, I think, bestow't on any man.

Oth. She is protectress of her honour too; ay she give that?

Iago. Her honour is an essence that's not seen; ney have it very oft that have it not; it, for the handkerchief,—

Oth. By heaven, I would most gladly have forgot it.

Iago. That's not so good now.

Oth. What, I had said I had seen him do you wrong? 'heard him say,—as knaves be such abroad, he having, by their own importunate suit, voluntary dotage of some mistress, avinced or supplied them, cannot choose t they must blab—

Iago. Hath he said any thing?

Oth. He hath, my lord; but be you well assured, more than he 'll unswear.

Iago. What hath he said?

Oth. 'Faith, that he did—I know not what he did.

Iago. What? what?

Oth. Lie—

Iago. With her?

Oth. With her, on her; what you will.

Iago. Lie with her! lie on her! We say lie on, when they belie her. Lie with her! that's some—Handkerchief—confessions—handkerchief!—To confess, and be hanged for his labour; must, to be hanged, and then to confess.—I mille at it. Nature would not invest herself in such shadowing passion without some instruction. It is not words that shake me thus. Fish! Noses, ears, and lips.—Is't possible?—Confess—handkerchief!—O devil!

Iago. Work on, My medicine, work! Thus credulous fools are caught; And many worthy and chaste dames even thus, All guileless, meet reproach. What, ho! my lord! My lord, I say! Othello!

Enter Cassio.

Cass. What's the matter?

Iago. My lord is fall'n into an epilepsy: This is his second fit; he had one yesterday.

Cass. Rub him about the temples.

Iago. No, forbear; The lethargy must have his quiet course: If not, he foams at mouth and by and by Breaks out to savage madness. Look, he stirs: Do you withdraw yourself a little while, He will recover straight: when he is gone, I would on great occasion speak with you.

[Exit Cassio.

Iago. How is it, general? have you not hurt your head?

Oth. Dost thou mock me?

Iago. I mock you! no, by heaven.

Oth. Would you would bear your fortune like a man! Oth. A horned man's a monster and a beast.

Iago. There's many a beast then in a populous city,

And many a civil monster.

Oth. Did he confess it?

Iago. Good sir, be a man; Think every bearded fellow that's but yoked May draw with you: there's millions now alive That nightly lie in those unproper beds Which they dare swear peculiar: your case is better.

Oth. O, thou art wise; 'tis certain.

Iago. Stand you awhile apart; Confine yourself but in a patient list. Whilst you were here d'ermelwed with your grief——

A passion most unsuiting such a man— Cassio came hither: I shifted him away, And laid good 'scuse upon your ecstasy, Bade him anon return and here speak with me; The which he promised. Do but encave yourself, And mark the fleers, the gibes, and notable scorns, That dwell in every region of his face; For I will make him tell the tale anew, Where, how, how oft, how long ago, and when He hath, and is again to cope your wife: I say, but mark his gesture. Marry, patience; Or I shall say you are all in all in spleen, And nothing of a man.

Oth. Dost thou hear, Iago?

Iago. I will be found most cunning in my patience; But—dost thou hear?—most bloody.

Iago. That's not amiss; But yet keep time in all. Will you withdraw?

[Othello retires.
Now will I question Cassio of Bianca,
A housewife that by selling her desires
Buys herself bread and clothes: it is a creature
That dotes on Cassio; as 'tis the strumpet's plague
To beguile many and be beguiled by one: 99
He, when he hears of her, cannot refrain
From the excess of laughter. Here he comes:

Re-enter Cassio.

As he shall smile, Othello shall go mad:
And his unbookish jealousy must construe
Poor Cassio's smiles, gestures and light behaviour,
Quite in the wrong. How do you now, lieutenant? 110
Cas. The worser that you give me the addition
Whose want even kills me.
Iago. Ply Desdemona well, and you are sure on't.

[Speaking lower] Now, if this suit lay in Bianca's
power,
How quickly should you speed!
Cas. Alas, poor caithiff! 120
Oth. Look, how he laughs already!
Iago. I never knew woman love man so.
Cas. Alas, poor rogue! I think, I faith, she loves me.
Oth. Now he denies it faintly, and laughs it out.
Iago. Do you hear, Cassio?
Oth. Now he importunes him
To tell it o'er: go to; well said, well said.
Iago. She gives it out that you shall marry
her:
Do you intend it?
Cas. Ha, ha, ha!
Oth. Do you triumph, Roman? do you triumph?
Cas. I marry her! what? a customer! Pri-thee, bear some charity to my wit; do not think it so unwholesome. Ha, ha, ha!
Oth. So, so, so, so: they laugh that win.
Iago. 'Faith, the cry goes that you shall marry
her.
Cas. Priethee, say true.
Iago. I am a very villain else.
Oth. Have you scored me? Well.
Cas. This is the monkey's own giving out:
she is persuaded I will marry her, out of her own love and flattery, not out of my promise.
Oth. Iago beckons me; now he begins the story.
Cas. She was here even now; she haunts me in every place. I was the other day talking on the sea-bank with certain Venetians; and thither comes the bauble, and, by this hand, she falls me thus about my neck—
Oth. Crying 'O dear Cassio!' as it were:
his gesture imports it.
Cas. So hangs, and rolls, and weeps upon me;
so hales, and pulls me: ha, ha, ha!
Oth. Now he tells how she plucked him to my chamber. O, I see that nose of yours, but not that dog I shall throw it to.
Cas. Well, I must leave her company.
Iago. 'Before me I look, where she comes.
Cas. 'Tis such another fitchew! marry, a perfumed one.

Enter Bianca.

What do you mean by this haunting of me?

Bian. Let the devil and his dam haunt you
What did you mean by that same handkerchieyou gave me even now? I was a fine fool to takit. I must take out the work?—A likely piece of work, that you should find it in your chamber and not know who left it there! This is some minx's token, and I must take out the work
There; give it your hobby-horse: whereas you had it, I'll take out no work on't.

Oth. How now, my sweet Bianca! how now
how now!
Oth. By heaven, that should be my handkercief!
Bian. An you'll come to supper to-night, yo-may; an you will not, come when you are not prepared for.

[Exit Iago.]

Iago. After her, after her.
Cas. 'Faith, I must; she'll rail in the street
else.
Iago. Will you sup there?
Cas. 'Faith, I intend so.
Iago. Well, I may chance to see you; for weet very fast speak with you.
Cas. Prithree, come; will you?
Iago. Go to; say no more.

[Exit Cassi.]

Oth. [Advancing] How shall I murder him when Iago?
Iago. Did you perceive how he laughed:
his vice?
Oth. O Iago!
Iago. And did you see the handkerchief?
Oth. Was that mine?
Iago. Yours, by this hand: and to see how prizes the foolish woman your wife! she gave him, and he hath given it his whore.
Iago. I would have him nine years a-killin
A fine woman! a fair woman! a sweet woman!
Iago. Nay, you must forget that.
Oth. Ay, let her rot, and perish, and I am damned to-night; for she shall not live: no, my heart is turned to stone; I strike it, and it hurt my hand. O, the world hath not a sweeter creture: she might lie by an emperor's side as companion and task.
Iago. Nay, that's not your way.
Oth. Hang her! I do but say what she is;
delicately with her needle: an admirable music
O! she will sing the savageness out of a bear:
high and plenteous wit and invention—
Iago. She's the worse for all this.
Oth. O, a thousand thousand times; and the so gentle a condition!
Iago. Ay, too gentle.
Oth. Nay, that's certain: but yet the pit of it, Iago! O Iago, the pity of it, Iago!
Iago. If you are so fond over her iniquity, give her patent to offend; for, if it touch not yo,
it comes near nobody.
Oth. I will chop her into messes: cuck
me!
Iago. O, 'tis foul in her.
Oth. With mine officer!
Iago. That's fouler.
Get me some poison, Iago: this night
I'll not expostulate with her, lest her body a beauty unprovidence my mind again: this night Iago. Do it not with poison, strangle her her bed, even the bed she hath contaminated.
Scene I.

Oth. Good, good: the justice of it pleases: very good.

Iago. And for Cassio, let me be his under-taker: you shall hear more by midnight.

Oth. Excellent good. [A trumpet within.] What trumpet is that same?

Iago. Something from Venice, sure. 'Tis Lodovico.

Enter Lodovico, Desdemona, and Attendants.

Lod. Save you, worthy general!

Oth. With all my heart, sir.

Lod. The duke and senators of Venice greet you.

Oth. I kiss the instrument of their pleasures.

[Opens the letter, and reads.]

Des. And what's the news, good cousin Lodovico?

Iago. I am very glad to see you, signior; welcome, Cyprus.

Lod. I thank you. How does Lieutenant Cassio?

Iago. Lives, sir.

Des. Cousin, there's fall'n between him and my lord.

Oth. Are you sure of that?

Des. My lord?

Oth. [Reads] 'This fail you not to do, as you ill.'—

Lod. He did not call; he's busy in the paper. There division 'twixt my lord and Cassio?

Des. A most unhappy one: I would do much to stone them, for the love I bear to Cassio.

Oth. Fire and brimstone! My lord?

Des. Are you wise?

Oth. What, is he angry?

Lod. May the letter moved him; or, as I think, they do command him home, supposing Cassio in his government.

Des. Trust me, I am glad on't.

Oth. Indeed! My lord?

Oth. I am glad to see you mad.

Des. Why, sweet Othello,—

Oth. [Striking her] Devil! I have not deserved this.

Lod. My lord, this would not be believed in Venice, though I should swear I saw't: 'tis very much like her amends; she weeps.

Oth. O devil, devil! that the earth could teem with woman's tears, and drop she falls would prove a crocodile. ut of my sight!

Des. I will not stay to offend you. [Going.]

Lod. Truly, an obedient lady: do beseech your lordship, call her back.

Oth. Mistress!

Des. My lord?

Oth. What would you with her, sir?

Lod. Who, I, my lord?

Oth. Ay; you did wish that I would make her turn:

And turn again; and she can weep, sir, weep; And she's obedient, as you say, obedient, Very obedient. Proceed you in your tears.

Concerning this, sir,—O well-painted passion!—I am commanded home. Get you away: I'll send for you anon. Sir, I obey the mandate, And will return to Venice. Hence, avaunt! [Exit Desdemona.]

Cassio shall have my place. And, sir, to-night, I do entreat that we may sup together;

You are welcome, sir, to Cyprus.—Goats and monkeys! [Exit.]

Lod. Is this the noble Moor whom our full senate

Call all in all sufficient? Is this the nature Whom passion could not shake? whose solid virtue

The shot of accident, nor dart of chance,

Could neither graze nor pierce?

Iago. He is much changed.

Lod. Are his wits safe? is he not light of brain?

Iago. He's that he is: I may not breathe my censure:

What he might be: if what he might he is not, I would to heaven he were!

Lod. What, strike his wife!

Iago. 'Faith, that was not so well; yet would I knew

That stroke would prove the worst!

Lod. Is it his use?

Or did the letters work upon his blood,
And new-create this fault?

Iago. Alas, alas! It is not honesty in me to speak

What I have seen and known. You shall observe him,
And his own courses will denote him so

That I may save my speech: do but go after,
And mark how he continues.

Lod. I am sorry that I am deceived in him. [Exeunt.]

Scene II. A room in the castle.

Enter Othello and Emilia.

Oth. You have seen nothing then?

Emil. Nor ever heard, nor ever did suspect.

Oth. Yes, you have seen Cassio and she together.

Emil. But then I saw no harm, and then I heard

Each syllable that breath made up between them.

Oth. What, did they never whisper?

Emil. Never, my lord.

Oth. Nor send you out o' the way?

Emil. Never.

Oth. To fetch her fan, her gloves, her mask, nor nothing?

Emil. Never, my lord.

Oth. That's strange.

Emil. I durst, my lord, to wager she is honest,

Lay down my soul at stake: if you think other, Remove your thought; it doth abuse your bosom.

If any wretch have put this in your head,
Let heaven requite it with the serpent's curse!

For, if she be not honest, chaste, and true,

There's no man happy; the purest of their wives
Is foul as slander.
Oth. Bid her come hither: go. [Exit Emilia.

She says enough; yet she’s a simple bawd That cannot say as much. This is a subtle where, A closet lock and key of villainous secrets: And yet she’ll kneel and pray; I have seen her do.

Enter Desdemona with Emilia.

Des. My lord, what is your will?

Oth. Pray, chuck, come hither.

Des. What is your pleasure?

Oth. Let me see your eyes;

Look in my face.

Des. What horrible fancy’s this?

Oth. [To Emilia] Some of your function, mistress;

Leave procrants alone and shut the door;

Cough, or cry ‘hem,’ if any body come:

Your mystery; your mystery: nay, dispatch.

[Exit Emilia.

Des. Upon my knees, what doth your speech import?

I understand a fury in your words,

But not the words.

Oth. Why, what art thou?

Des. Your wife, my lord; your true

And loyal wife.

Oth. Come, swear it, damn thyself;

Lest, being like one of heaven, the devils themselves

Should fear to seize thee: therefore be double damn’d:

Swear thou art honest.

Des. Heaven doth truly know it.

Oth. Heaven truly knows that thou art false as hell.

Des. To whom, my lord? with whom? how am I fake?

Oth. O Desdemona! Away! away! away!

Des. Alas the heavy day! Why do you weep?

Am I the motive of these tears, my lord?

If haply you my father do suspect

An instrument of this your calling back,

Lay not your blame on me: if you have lost him,

Why, I have lost him too.

Oth. Had it pleased heaven

To try me with affliction; had they rain’d
All kinds of sores and shames on my bare head,

Steep’d me in poverty to the very lips,

Given to captivity me and my utmost hopes,

I should have found in some place of my soul
A drop of patience: but, alas, to make me

A fixed figure for the time of scorn
To point his slow unmoving finger at!

Yet could I bear that too; well, very well:

But there, where I have Garner’d up my heart,

Where either I must live, or bear no life;

The fountain from which my current runs,

Or else dries up; to be discarded thence!

Or keep it as a cistern for foul toads

To knot and gender in! Turn thy complexion there,

Patience, thou young and rose-lipp’d cherubin,—

Ay, there, look grim as hell!

Des. I hope my noble lord esteems me honest.

Oth. O, ay; as summer flies are in the shambles,

That quicken even with blowing. O thou weed,

Who art so lovely fair and smell’st so sweet

That the sense aches at thee, would thou had never been born!

Des. Alas, what ignorant sin have I committed?

Oth. Was this fair paper, this most good book,

Made to write ‘whore’ upon? What committee

Committed! O thou public commoner!

I should make very forges of my cheeks,

That would to cinders burn up modesty,

Did I but speak thy deeds. What committed!

Heaven stops the nose at it and the moon winks

The bawdy wind that kisses all it meets

Is hush’d within the hollow mine of earth,

And will not hear it. What committed!

Impudent strumpet!

Des. By heaven, you do me wrong

Oth. Are not you a strumpet?

Des. No, as I am a Christia

If to preserve this vessel for my lord

From any other foul unlawful touch

Be not to be a strumpet, I am none.

Oth. What, not a whore?

Des. No, as I shall be save

Oth. Is’t possible?

Des. O, heaven forgive us!

Oth. I cry you mercy, the

I took you for that cunning whore of Venice

That married with Othello. [Raising his voi

You, mistress,

That have the office opposite to Saint Peter,

And keep the gate of hell!

Re-enter Emilia.

We, you, ay, you!

We have done our course; there’s money in your pains;

I pray you, turn the key and keep our counsel.

[Ex

Emil. Alas, what does this gentleman conceive?

How do you, madam? how do you, my go-

lady?

Des. ’Faith, half asleep.

Emil. Good madam, what’s the matter with my lord?

Des. With who?

Emil. Why, with my lord, madam.

Des. Who is thy lord?

Emil. He that is yours, sweet lady.

Des. I have none: do not talk to me, Emilia. I cannot weep; nor answer have I none, But what should go by water. Prithhee, to-night

Lay on my bed my wedding sheets: remember

And call thy husband hither.

Emil. Here’s a change indeed! [Ex

Des. ’Tis meet I should be used so, very me.

How have I been behaved, that he might stick

The smallest opinion on my least misuse?

Re-enter Emilia with Iago.

Iago. What is your pleasure, madam? If it is’t with you?

Des. I cannot tell. Those that do test

young babbles

Do it with gentle means and easy tasks:

He might have chid me so; for, in good faith, I am a child to chiding.

Othello.

Scene II.

Iago. What's the matter, lady?

Desdemona. Alas, Iago, my lord hath so bewhored her, thrown such despite and heavy terms upon her, as true hearts cannot bear.

Iago. Am I that name, Iago?

Desdemona. What name, fair lady?

Iago. Such as she says my lord did say I was. He call'd her whore: a beggar in his drink could not have laid such terms upon his callat.

Iago. Why did he so?

Desdemona. I do not know; I am sure I am none such.

Iago. Do not weep, do not weep. Alas the day!

Desdemona. Hath she forsook so many noble matches, her father and her country and her friends, to be call'd whore? would it not make one weep?

Iago. It is my wretched fortune. Beshrew him for't!

Desdemona. How comes this trick upon him?

Iago. Nay, heaven doth know.

Desdemona. I will be hang'd, if some eternal villain, some busy and insinuating rogue, some coggling, cozening slave, to get some office, have not devised this slander; I'll be hang'd else.

Iago. Fie, there is no such man; it is impossible.

Desdemona. If any such there be, heaven pardon him!

Iago. A halter pardon him! and hell gnaw his bones!

Desdemona. Why should he call her whore? who keeps her company?

Desdemona. Heaven, that such companions thou'lyst unfold, and put in every honest hand a whip to lash the rascals naked through the world even from the east to the west!

Iago. Speak within door.

Desdemona. O, fie upon them! Some such squire he was that turn'd your wit the seamy side without, and made you to suspect me with the Moor.

Iago. You are a fool; go to.

Desdemona. O good Iago, what shall I do to win my lord again?

Iago. Good friend, go to him; for, by this light of heaven, I know not how I lost him. Here I kneel! if ever my will did trespass 'gainst his love, either in discourse of thought or actual deed, or that mine eyes, mine ears, or any sense, delighted them in any other form; or that I do not yet, and ever did, and ever will—though he do shake me off to beggarly divorcement—love him dearly, comfort forewear me! Unkindness may do much: and his unkindness may defeat my life, but never taint my love. I cannot say 'where? It doth abhor me now I speak the word; to do the act that might the addition earn. Not the world's mass of vanity could make me. Iago, I pray you, be content; 'tis but his humour:

The business of the state does him offence, and he does chide with you.

Desdemona. 'Tis but so, I warrant.

Trumpets within. Hark, how these instruments summon to supper! The messengers of Venice stay the meat; go in, and weep not; all things shall be well.

Exit Desdemona and Emilia.

Enter Rodrigo.

Desdemona. How now, Rodrigo?

Rodrigo. I do not find that thou dealest justly with me.

Desdemona. What in the contrary?

Rodrigo. Every day thou dauest me with some device, Iago; and rather, as it seems to me now, keepest from me all convenience than suppliest me with the least advantage of hope. I will indeed no longer endure it, nor am I yet persuaded to put up in peace what already I have foolishly suffered.

Desdemona. Will you hear me, Rodrigo?

Rodrigo. 'Faith, I have heard too much, for your words and performances are no kin together.

Desdemona. You charge me most unjustly.

Rodrigo. With nought but truth. I have wasted myself out of my means. The jewels you have had from me to deliver to Desdemona would half have corrupted a votarist; you have told me she hath received them and returned me expectations and comforts of sudden respect and acquaintance, but I find none.

Desdemona. Well; go to; very well.

Rodrigo. Very well! go to! I cannot go to, man; nor 'tis not very well: nay, I think it is scurvy, and begin to find myself fobbed in it.

Desdemona. Very well.

Rodrigo. I tell you 'tis not very well. I will make myself known to Desdemona; if she will return me my jewels, I will give over my suit and repent my unlawful solicitation; if not, assure yourself I will seek satisfaction of you.

Desdemona. You have said now.

Rodrigo. Ay, and said nothing but what I protest intention of doing.

Desdemona. Why, now I see there's mettle in thee, and even from this instant do build on thee a better opinion than ever before. Give me thy hand, Rodrigo: thou hast taken against me a most just exception; but yet, I protest, I have dealt most directly in thy affairs.

Rodrigo. I hath not appeared.

Desdemona. I grant indeed it hath not appeared, and your suspicion is not without wit and judgment. But, Rodrigo, if thou hast that in thee indeed, which I have greater reason to believe now than ever, I mean purpose, courage and valour, this night show it: if thou the next night following enjoy not Desdemona, take me from this world with treachery and davise engines for my life.

Rodrigo. Well, what is it? is it within reason and compass?

Desdemona. Sir, there is especial commission come from Venice to depute Cassio in Othello's place.

Rodrigo. Is that true? why, then Othello and Desdemona return again to Venice.

Desdemona. O, no; he goes into Mauritania and takes away with him the fair Desdemona, unless his abode be lingered here by some accident:
wherein none can be so determinate as the removing of Cassio.
Rod. How do you mean, removing of him?
Iago. Why, by making him uncapable of Othello's place; knocking out his brains.
Rod. And that you would have me to do?
Iago. Ay, if you dare do yourself a profit and a right. He sups to-night with a harlotry, and thither will I go to him: he knows not yet of his honourable fortune. If you will watch his going'thence, which I will fashion to fall out between twelve and one, you may take him at your pleasure: I will be near to second your attempt, and he shall fall between us. Come, stand not amazed at it, but go along with me; I will show you such a necessity in his death that you shall think yourself bound to put it on him.
It is now high-supper-time, and the night grows to waste; about it.
250 Rod. I will hear further reason for this.
Iago. And you shall be satisfied. [Exeunt.

SCENE III. Another room in the castle.

Enter Othello, Lodovico, Desdemona,
Emilia, and Attendants.

Lod. I do beseech you, sir, trouble yourself
no further.
Oth. O, pardon me; 'twill do me good to walk.
Lod. Madam, good night; I humbly thank your ladyship.
Emil. Your honour is most welcome.
Oth. Will you walk, sir?
O.—Desdemona,—

Des. My lord?
Oth. Get you to bed on the instant; I will be returned forthwith: dismiss your attendant there:
look it be done.
Des. I will, my lord.
[Exeunt Othello, Lodovico, and Attendants.

Emil. How goes it now? he looks gentler than he did.

Des. He says he will return incontinent:
he hath commanded me to go to bed,
and bade me to dismiss you.

Emil. Dismiss me!

Des. It was his bidding: therefore, good Emilia,
Give me my nightly wearing, and adieu;
we must not now displease him.

Emil. I would you had never seen him!

Des. So would not I: my love doth so approve
him;
that even his stubbornness, his checks, his frowns,—

Prithée, unpin me,—have grace and favour in them.

Emil. I have laid those sheets you bade me on the bed.

Des. All's one. Good faith, how foolish are our minds!

If I do die before thee, prithée, shroud me in one of those same sheets.

Emil. Come, come, you talk.

Des. My mother had a maid call'd Barbara:
She was in love, and he she loved proved mad
And did forsake her: she had a song of 'willow';

An old thing 'twas, but it express'd her fortune,
And she died singing it: that song to-night
Will not go from my mind: I have much to do,
But to go hang my head all at one side,
And sing it like poor Barbara. Prithée, disput

Emil. Shall I go fetch your night-gown?

Des. No, unpin me here.

This Lodovico is a proper man.

Emil. A very handsome man.

Des. He speaks well.

Emil. I know a lady in Venice would have walked barefoot to Palestine for a touch of her lips.

Des. [Singing] The poor soul sat sighing by sycamore tree,
Sing all a green willow;
Her hand on her bosom, her head on her knee
Sing willow, willow, willow:
The fresh streams ran by her, and murmured
her moans;
Sing willow, willow, willow;
Her salt tears fell from her, and soften'd th'stones;

—Lay by these:—

[Singing] Sing willow, willow, willow;
Prithée, lie thee; he'll come anon:—

[Singing] Sing all a green willow must be in garland.

Let nobody blame him; his scorn I approve,
Nay, that's not next.—Hark! who is that knocks?

Emil. It's the wind.

Des. [Singing] I call'd my love false love
—and what said he then?
Sing willow, willow, willow:
If I court moe women, you'll couche with me.

So, get thee gone; good night. Mine eyes do itch
Doth that bode weeping?

Emil. It is neither here nor there;

Des. I have heard it said so. O, these men these men!
Dost thou in conscience think,—tell me, Emilia,
That there be women do abuse their husbands
In such gross kind?

Emil. There be some such, no question

Des. Wouldst thou do such a deed for all the world?

Emil. Why, would not you?

Des. No, by this heavenly light
Nor I neither by this heavenly light;
I might do't as well i' the dark.

Des. Wouldst thou do such a deed for all the world?

Emil. The world's a huge thing: it is a great price

For a small vice.

Des. In troth, I think thou wouldst not.

Emil. In troth, I think I should; and undo when I had done. Marry, I would not do such a thing for a joint-ring, nor for measures of law nor for gowns, petticoats, nor caps, nor any petty exhibition; but, for the whole world,—why, who would not make her husband a cuckold to make him a monarch? I should venture purgatory for

Des. Beshrew me, if I would do such a wron
For the whole world.

Emil. Why, the wrong is but a wrong i' the world; and having the world for your labour, 't
I will make proof of thine.

[Drum, and wounds Roderigo.]

Rod. O, I am slain!

[Exeunt.]

Scene III. Othello. Enter Iago and Lodovico and Gratiano.

Iago. Here, stand behind this bulk; straight will he come:

ear thy good rapier bare, and put it home:

lock, quick; fear nothing; I'll beat thy elbow:

makes us, or it mars us; think on that,

d fix most firm thy resolution.

Rod. Be near at hand; I may miscarry in't.

Iago. Here, at thy hand be; hold, and take thy stand.

[Retires.]

Iago. I have no great devotion to the deed;

yet he hath given me satisfying reasons; 9

but a man gone. Forth, my sword: he dies.

Iago. I have rubb'd this young quill almost to the sense, he grows angry. Now, whether he kill

Cassio, or else do kill the other,

ever makes my gain: live Roderigo, calls me to a restitution large gold and jewels that I bobb'd from him, gifts to Desdemona:

must not be: if Cassio do remain,

hath a daily beauty in his life:

it makes me ugly; and, besides, the Moor 20

 unfold me to him; there stand I in much peril;

he must die. But so: I hear him coming.

Enter Cassio.

Iago. I know his gait, 'tis he.—Villain, thou diest!

[Makes a pass at Cassio.]

As that thrust had been mine enemy indeed, that my coat is better than thou know'st:

OTHELLO.

What may you be? are you of good or evil?
Lod. As you shall prove us, praise us.
Iago. Signior Lodovico?
Lod. He, sir.
Iago. I cry you mercy. Here's Cassio hurt by villains.
Gra. Cassio!
Iago. How is't, brother?
Cas. My leg is cut in two.
Iago. Marry, heaven forbid!
Light, gentlemen: I'll bind it with my shirt.

Enter Bianca.

Bian. What is the matter, ho? who is't that cried?
Iago. Who is't that cried!
Bian. O my dear Cassio! my sweet Cassio!
O Cassio, Cassio, Cassio!
Iago. O notable strumpet! Cassio, may you suspect
Who they should be that have thus mangled you?
Cas. No.
Gra. I am sorry to find you thus: I have been to seek you.
Iago. Send me a garter. So, O, for a chair,
To bear him easily hence!
Bian. Alas, he faints! O Cassio, Cassio, Cassio!
Iago. Gentlemen all, I do suspect this trash
To be a party in this injury,
Patience awhile, good Cassio. Come, come;
Lend me a light. Know we this face or no?
Alas, my friend: and my dear countryman
Roderigo! no:—yes, sure:—O heaven! Roderigo.
Gra. What, of Venice?
Iago. Even he, sir: did you know him?
Gra. No.
Iago. Know him! ay.
Gra. Signior Gratiano? I cry you gentle pardon;
These bloody accidents must excuse my manners,
That so neglected you.
Gra. I am glad to see you.
Iago. How do you, Cassio? O, a chair, a chair!
Gra. Roderigo!
Iago. He, he, 'tis he. [A chair brought in.]
O, that's well said; the chair.
Some good man bear him carefully from hence;
I'll fetch the general's surgeon. [To Bianca]
For you, mistress,
Save you your labour. He that lies slain here,
Cassio,
Was my dear friend: what malice was between us?
Cas. None in the world; nor do I know the man.
[Cassio and Roderigo are borne off.
Stay you, good gentlemen. Look you pale, mistress?
Do you perceive the gastness of her eye?
Nay, if you stare, we shall hear more anon.
Behold her well: I pray you, look upon her:
Do you see, gentlemen? nay, guiltiness will speak,
Though tongues were out of use.

Enter Emilia.

Emil. 'Las, what's the matter? what's the matter, husband?

Iago. Cassio hath here been set on in the dark
By Roderigo and fellows that are scape:
He's almost slain, and Roderigo dead.

Emil. Alas, good gentleman! alas, good C- sio!
Iago. This is the fruit of whoring. Prith.
Emil. Go know of Cassio where he supp'd to-night.
[To Bianca] What do you shake at that?
Bian. He supp'd at my house; but I the fore shake not.
Iago. O, did he so? I charge you, go with me.
Emil. Fie, fie upon thee, strumpet!
Bian. I am no strumpet; but of life as hon
As you that thus abuse me.
Emil. As I! foh! fie upon the Iago. Kind gentlewomen, let's g'o see poor C- sio dress'd.

Come, mistress, you must tell's another tale.
Emilia, run you to the citadel,
And tell thy lord and lady what hath happ'ld.
Will you go out? I pray. [Aside] This is night
That either makes me or fordoes me quite.

Scene II. A bedchamber in the castle: Démona in bed asleep: a light burning.

Enter Othello.

Oth. It is the cause, it is the cause, my soul
Let me not name it to you, you chaste stars!—
It is the cause. Yet I'll not shed her blood;
Nor scar that whiter skin of hers than snow,
And smooth as monumental alabaster.
Yet she must die, else she'll betray more men
Put out the light, and then put out the light:
If I quench thee, thou flaming minister,
I can again thy former light restore,
Should I repent me: but once put out thy lig
Thou cunning'st pattern of excelling nature,
I know not where is that Promethean heat
That can thy light relume. When I have plunged
The rose,
I cannot give it vital growth again,
It must needs wither: 'twill smelt it on the tree.
[Kissing]
Ah, balmy breath, that dost almost persuade Justice to break her sword! One more, one more,
See how thou art dead, and I will kill thee,
And love thee after. One more, and this the last.
So sweet was ne'er so fatal. I must weep,
But they are cruel tears: this sorrow's heaven
It strikes where it doth love. She wakes.

Des. Who's there? Othello?

Oth. Ay, Desdemona.

Des. Will you come to bed, my lord?

Oth. Have you pray'd to-night, Desdemona?

Des. Ay, my lord.

Oth. If you bethink yourself of any crime
Unreconciled as yet to heaven and grace,
Solicit for it straight.

Des. Ay, my lord, what do you mean by it?

Oth. Well, do it, and be brief; I will walk
I would not kill thy unprepared spirit;
No; heaven forfend! I would not kill thy son.

Des. Talk you of killing?

Oth. Ay, I do.

Enter Iago.

[Aside] Then hear...
OTHELLO

It is too late. [He stiles her.

Emil. [Within] My lord, my lord! what, ho! my lord, my lord, my lord!

Oth. What noise is this? Not dead? not yet quite dead?

I that am cruel am yet merciful;

I would not have thee linger in thy pain.

Emil. [Within] What, ho! my lord, my lord!

Oth. Who's there?

Emil. [Within] O, good my lord, I would speak a word with you!

Oth. Yes: 'tis Emilia. By and by. She's dead.

'Tis like she comes to speak of Cassio's death.—
The noise was here. Ha! no more moving? Still as the grave. Shall she come in? weren't it good?—

I think she stirs again:—no. What's best to do?

If she come in, she'll sure speak to my wife:

My wife! my wife! what wife? I have no wife.

O, insupportable! O heavy hour! Menthinks it should be now a huge eclipse

Of sun and moon, and that the affrighted globe

Should yawn at alteration.

Emil. [Within] I do beseech you 101

That I may speak with you, O, good my lord! Oth. I had forgot thee: O, come in, Emilia:

Soft: by and by. Let me the curtains draw.

Where art thou?

[Unlocks the door.]

Enter Emilia.

What's the matter with thee now?

Emil. O, my good lord, yonder's foul murderers done!

Oth. What, now?

Emil. But now, my lord.

Oth. It is the very error of the moon;

She comes more nearer earth than she was wont,

And makes men mad. 111

Emil. Cassio, my lord, hath kill'd a young Venetian, Call'd Roderigo.

Oth. Roderigo kill'd!

And Cassio kill'd!

Emil. No, Cassio is not kill'd.

Oth. Not Cassio kill'd! then murder's out of tune,

And sweet revenge grows harsh.

Des. O, falsely, falsely murder'd!

Emil. Alas, what cry is that?

Oth. That! what?

Emil. Out, and alas! that was my lady's voice.

Help! help, ho! help! O lady, speak again! 120

Sweet Desdemona! O sweet mistress, speak!

Des. A guiltless death I die.

Emil. O, who hath done this deed?

Des. Nobody: I myself. Farewell:

Commend me to my kind lord: O, farewell! [Dies.

Oth. Why, how should she be murder'd?

Emil. Alas, who knows?

Oth. You heard her say herself, it was not I;

Emil. She said so: I must needs report the truth.

Oth. She's, like a liar, gone to burning hell:

'Twas I that kill'd her.

Emil. O, the more angel she, 130

And you the blacker devil!
Act IV, Scene 2

Othello. She turn'd to folly, and she was a whore.

Emil. Thou dost belie her, and thou art a devil.

Oth. She was false as water.

Emil. Thou art rash as fire, to say That she was false: O, she was heavenly true!

Oth. Cassio did top her; ask thy husband else.

Oth. I, I, I was damn'd beneath all depth in hell, But that I did proceed upon just grounds

To this extremity. Thy husband knew it all.

Emil. My husband! 140

Oth. Thy husband.

Emil. That she was false to wedlock?

Oth. Ay, with Cassio. Nay, had she been true, If heaven would make me such another world Of one entire and perfect chrysolite, I'd not have sold her for it.

Emil. My husband!

Oth. Ay, 'twas he that told me first:
An honest man he is, and hates the slime
That sticks on filthy deeds.

Emil. My husband! Oth. What needs this iteration, woman? I say thy husband;

Emil. O mistress, villany hath made mocks with love!

My husband say that she was false!

Oth. He, woman; I say thy husband: dost understand the word?

My friend, thy husband, honest, honest Iago.

Emil. If he say so, may his pernicious soul Rot half a grain a day! he lies to the heart:
She was too fond of her most filthy bargain.

Oth. Ha!

Emil. Do thy worst:

This deed of thine is no more worthy heaven 160
Than thou wast worthy her.

Oth. Peace, you were best.

Emil. Thou hast not half that power to do me harm
As I have to be hurt. O gull! O do it!

As ignorant as dirt! thou hast done a deed—
I care not for thy sword: I'll make thee known,
Though I lost twenty lives.—Help! help, ho! help!

The Moor hath kill'd my mistress! Murder! murder!

Enter Montano, Gratiano, Iago, and others.

Mom. What is the matter? How now, general!

Emil. O, are you come, Iago? you have done well,
That men must lay their murders on your neck.

Gra. What is the matter? 171

Emil. Disprove this villain, if thou be'st a man:
He says thou told'st him that his wife was false:
I know thou didst not, thou'rt not such a villain:
Speak, for my heart is full.

Iago. I told him what I thought, and told no more Than what he found himself was apt and true.

Emil. But did you ever tell him she was false?

Iago. I did.

Emil. You told a lie; an odious, damned lie;
Upon my soul, a lie, a wicked lie.

She false with Cassio!—did you say with Cassio?

Iago. With Cassio, mistress. Go to, charm your tongue.

Emil. I will not charm my tongue; I a bound to speak:

My mistress here lies murder'd in her bed,—

All. O heavens forfend!

Emil. And your reports have set the murder o

Oth. Nay, stare not, masters: it is true, indeed.

Gra. 'Tis a strange truth.

Montano. A monstrous act!

Emil. Villainy, villainy, villainy! I think upon't, I think; I smell' t: O villain!

I thought so then:—I'll kill myself for grief:

O villain, villainy!

Iago. What, are you mad? I charge you, go home.

Emil. Good gentlemen, let me have leave to speak:

'Tis proper I obey him, but not now.

Perchance, Iago, I will ne'er go home.

Oth. O! O! O! [He falls on the bed.

Emil. Nay, lay thee down and rest

For thou hast kill'd the sweetest innocent
That ever did lift up eye.

Oth. [Rising] O, she was foul! 2 I scarce did know you, uncle: there lies your niece,

Whose breath, indeed, these hands have new stopt:

I know this act shows horrible and grim.

Gra. Poor Desdemona! I am glad thy father dead:

Thy match was mortal to him, and pure grief
Shore his old thread in twain: did he live now, This sight would make him do a desperate turn Yea, curse his better angel from his side, And fall to reprobation.

Emil. Tis pitiful; but yet Iago knows That she with Cassio hath the act of shame A thousand times committed; Cassio confess'd And she did gratify his amorous works With that recognizance and pledge of love Which I first gave her; I saw it in his hand: It was a handkerchief, an antique token My father gave my mother.

Emil. O heaven! O heavenly powers!

Iago. Come, hold your peace.

Emil. 'Twill out, 'twill out: I peal No, I will speak as liberal as the north:

Let heaven and men and devils, let them all, All, all, cry shame against me, yet I'll speak.

Iago. Be wise, and get you home.

Emil. I will not.

Gra. [Iago offers to stab Emil.]

Iago. Emil. By heaven, I do not, I do not, gen

O murderous coxcomb! what should such a for

Do with so good a woman?

Oth. Are there no stones in her
Otello. That's he that was Otello: here I am.
Lod. Where is that viper? Bring the villain forth.
Otello. I look down towards his feet; but that's a fable.
If that thou be'st a devil, I cannot kill thee.
[Wounds Iago.
Iago. I bleed, sir; but not kill'd.
Otello. I am not sorry neither: I'd have thee live;
For, in my sense, 'tis happiness to die.

Lod. O thou Otello, that wert once so good,
Fall'n in the practice of a damned slave,
What shall be said to thee?

Otello. Why, any thing:
An honourable murderer, if you will;
For nought I did in hate, but all in honour.

Lod. This wretch hath part confess'd his villany;
Did you and he consent in Cassio's death?

Otello. Ay.
Cas. Dear general, I never gave you cause.
Otello. I do believe it, and I ask you pardon.

Lod. Will you, I pray, demand that demi-devil
Why he hath thus ensnared my soul and body?
Iago. Demand me nothing: what you know, you know:
From this time forth I never will speak word.

Lod. What, not to pray?

Otello. Torments will ope your lips.

Lod. Well, thou dost best.

Otello. Sir, you shall understand what hath befall'n,
Which, as I think, you know not. Here is a letter
Found in the pocket of the slain Roderigo;
And here another: the one of them imports
The death of Cassio to be undertook
By Roderigo.

Otello. O villain!
Cas. Most heathenish and most gross!

Lod. Now here's another discontented paper
Found in his pocket too; and this, it seems,
Roderigo meant to have sent this damned villain;
But that belike Iago in the interim
Came in and satisfied him.

Otello. O the pernicious caustic! How came you, Cassio, by that handkerchief
That was my wife's?

Cas. I found it in my chamber:
And he himself confess'd but even now
That there he dropp'd it for a special purpose
Which wont to his design.

Otello. O fool! fool! fool!

Cas. There is besides in Roderigo's letter,
How he upbraiding Iago, that he made
Brave me upon the watch; whereon it came
That I was cast: and even but now he spake,
After long seeming dead, Iago hurt him,
In Iago's name: Iago, Iago, Iago!

Lod. You must forsake this room, and go
with us:
Your power and your command is taken off,
And Cassio rules in Cyprus. For this slave,
If there be any cunning cruelty
That can torment him much and hold him long,
It shall be his. You shall close prisoner rest,
Till that the nature of your fault be known
To the Venetian state. Come, bring him away.
Oth. Soft you; a word or two before you go.
I have done the state some service, and they know't. 339
No more of that. I pray you, in your letters,
When you shall these unlucky deeds relate,
Speak of me as I am: nothing extenuate,
Nor set down aught in malice: then must you speak
Of one that loved not wisely but too well;
Of one not easily jealous, but being wrought
Perplex'd in the extreme; of one whose hand,
Like the base Indian, threw a pearl away
Richer than all his tribe; of one whose subdued eyes,
Albeit unused to the melting mood,
Drop tears as fast as the Arabian trees
Their medicinal gum. Set you down this;
And say besides, that in Aleppo once,
Where a malignant and a turban'd Turk
Beat a Venetian and traduced the state,
I took by the throat the circumcised dog,
And smote him, thus. [Stabs himself]
Lod. O bloody period!
Gra. All that's spoke is marred:
Oth. I kiss'd thee ere I kill'd thee: no weapon but this:
Killing myself, to die upon a kiss.
Cas. This did I fear, but thought he had none.
For he was great of heart.
Lod. [To Iago] O Spartan dog,
More fell than anguish, hunger, or the sea!
Look on the tragic loading of this bed;
This is thy work: the object poisons sight;
Let it be hid. Gratiano, keep the house,
And seize upon the fortunes of the Moor,
For they succeed on you. To you, lord governor
Remains the censure of this hellish villain;
The time, the place, the torture: O, enforce it!
Myself will straight aboard; and to the state 37
This heavy act with heavy heart relate. [Exeunt]
ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ.

MARK ANTONY, OCTAVIUS CAESAR, M. AEMILII LEPIDUS, Sextus Pompeius, Domitius Enobarbus, ventidius, eros, scarus, Dercetas, Demetrius, Philo, Mecenas, Agrippa, Dolabella, Proculeius, Thyrus, Gallus, Menas, Menecrates, Varrius, {friends to Antony.}

CLEOPATRA, queen of Egypt. Octavia, sister to Caesar and wife to Antony. Charmian, {attendants on Cleopatra.} Ira, Officers, Soldiers, Messengers, and other Attendants.

Scene: In several parts of the Roman empire.

ACT I.

GENE I. Alexandria. A room in Cleopatra's palace.

Enter Demetrius and Philo.

Phi. Nay, but this dotage of our general's erstows the measure: those his goodly eyes, that o'er the files and musters of the war have glowed like plated Mars, now bend, now turn, the office and devotion of their view on a tauntly front: his captain's heart, which in the scuffles of great fights hath burst like buckles on his breast, reneges all temper, and is become the bellows and the fan of cool a gipsy's lust.

Owards. Enter Antony, Cleopatra, her ladies, the Train, with Eunuchs fanning her.

Look, where they come: to like but good note, and you shall see in him the triple pillar of the world transfund'd to a strumpet's fool: behold and see.

Cleo. If it be love indeed, tell me how much.
Ant. There's beggary in the love that can be reckon'd.
Cleo. I'll set a bourn how far to be beloved.
Ant. Then must thot needs find out new heaven, new earth.

Enter an Attendant.

Att. News, my good lord, from Rome.

Ant. Grates me: the sum.
Cleo. Nay, hear them, Antony: diva perchanse is angry; or, who knows the scarce-bearded Caesar have not sent the powerful mandate to you, 'Do this, or that, like in that kingdom, and enfranchise that;

Perform', or else we damn thee.'

Ant. How, my love!
Cleo. Perchance! nay, and most like: You must not stay here longer, your disposition Is come from Caesar; therefore hear it, Antony. Where's Fulvia's process? Caesar's I would say? both?
Call in the messengers. As I am Egypt's queen, Thou bluest, Antony; and that blood of thine Is Caesar's hommage: else so thy cheek pays shame.
When shrill-tongued Fulvia scolds. The messengers!

Ant. Let Rome in Tibris melt, and the wide arch Of the ranged empire fall! Here is my space. Kingdoms are clay: our dumpy earth alike Feeds beast as man: the nobleness of life Is to do thus; when such a mutual pair Embracing. And such a twain can do't, in which I bind, On pain of punishment, the world to weet We stand up peerless.

Cleo. Excellent falsehood! Why did he marry Fulvia, and not love her? I'll seem the fool I am not; Antony Will be himself.
Ant. But stir'st by Cleopatra. Now, for the love of Love and her soft hours, Let's not confound the time with conference harsh:
There's not a minute of our lives should stretch Without some pleasure now. What sport to-night?

Cleo. Hear the ambassador.
Att. Fie, wrangling queen! Whom every thing becomes, to chide, to laugh, To weep; whose every passion fully strives To make itself, in thee, fair and admired! No messenger, but thine; and all alone
ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

[ACT II]

To-night we'll wander through the streets and note
The qualities of people. Come, my queen;
Last night you did desire to speak with us.
[Exeunt Ant. and Cleo. with their train.

Dem. Is Caesar with Antonius prized so slight?
Phil. Sir, sometimes, when he is not Antony,
He comes too short of that great property
Which still should go with Antony.

Dem. I am full sorry
That he approves the common liar, who
Thus speaks of him at Rome: but I will hope
Of better deeds to-morrow. Rest you happy!
[Exeunt.

SCENE II. The same. Another room.

Enter CHARMIAN, IRAS, ALEXAS, and a Soothsayer.

Char. Lord Alexis, sweet Alexis, most any thing Alexis, almost most absolute Alexis, where's the soothsayer that you praised so to the queen? O, that I knew this husband, which, you say, must charge his horns with garlands!

Alex. Soothsayer!

Sooth. Your will?

Char. Is this the man? Is't you, sir, that know things?

Sooth. In nature's infinite book of secrecy
A little I can read.

Alex. Show him your hand. 10

[Enter ENOBARBUS.

Eno. Bring in the banquet quickly; wine enough
Cleopatra's health to drink.

Char. Good sir, give me good fortune.

Sooth. I make not, but foresee.

Char. Pray, then, foresee me one.

Sooth. You shall be yet far fairer than you are.

Char. He means in flesh.

Iras. No, you shall paint when you are old.

Char. Wrinkles forbid!

Alex. Vex not his prescience; be attentive.

Char. Hush! 21

Sooth. You shall be more beloving than belov'd.

Char. I had rather heat my liver with drinking.

Alex. Nay, hear him.

Char. Good now, some excellent fortune! Let me be married to three kings in a forenoon, and widow them all: let me have a child at fifty, to whom Herod of Jewry may do homage: find me to marry me with Octavius Caesar, and companion me with my mistresse.

Sooth. You shall outlive the lady whom you serve.

Char. O excellent! I love long life better than figs.

Sooth. You have seen and proved a fairer former fortune
Than that which is to approach.

Char. Then belike my children shall have no names; pri thee, how many boys and wenches must I have?

Sooth. If every of your wishes had a womb, And fertile every wish, a million.

Char. Out, fool! I forgive thee for a witch. 40

Alex. You think none but your sheets are privy to your wishes.

Char. Nay, come, tell Iras hers.

Alex. We'll know all our fortunes.

Eno. Mine, and most of our fortunes, to-night shall be—drunk to bed.

Iras. There's a palm presages chastity, if nothing else.

Char. E'en as the o'erflowing Nilus presages famine.

Iras. Go, you wild bedfellow, you cannot soothsay.

Char. Nay, if an oily palm be not a fruitful prognostication, I cannot scratch mine ear. Pri thee, tell her but a worky-day fortune.

Sooth. Your fortunes are alike.

Iras. But how, but how! I give me particulars.

Sooth. I have said.

Iras. Am I not an inch of fortune better than she?

Char. Well, if you were but an inch of fortune better than I, where would you choose it?

Iras. Not in my husband's nose.

Char. Our worser thoughts heavens mend Alexis,—come, his fortune, his fortune! O, let him marry a woman that cannot go, sweet Isis, beseech thee! and let her die too, and give him a worse! let worse follow worse, till the worst of all follow him laughing to his grave, fifty-fold a cuckold! Good Isis, hear me this prayer, though thou deny me a matter of more weight; good Isis, I beseech thee!

Iras. Amen. Dear goddess, hear that prayer of the people! for, as it is a heart-breaking to see a handsome man loose-wived, so it is a deadly sorrow to behold a foul knife uncuckolded; there fore, dear Isis, keep decorum, and fortune him accordingly!

Char. Amen.

Alex. Lo, now, if it lay in their hands to make me a cuckold, they would make themselves whores, but they 'd do't!

Char. Not he; the queen

[Enter CLEOPATRA.

Cleo. Saw you my lord?

Eno. No, lady.

Cleo. Was he not here?

Char. No, madam.

Cleo. He was disposed to mirth; but on the sudden
A Roman thought hath struck him. Enobarbus.

Eno. Madam?

Cleo. Seek him, and bring him hither. Where's Alexis?

Alex. Here, at your service. My lord approaches.

Cleo. We will not look upon him: go with us.

[Exeunt.

[Enter ANTONY with a Messenger and Attendants.

Mess. Fulvia thy wife first came into the field.

Ant. Against my brother Lucius?

Mess. Ay:

But soon that war had end, and the time's state Made friends of them, joining their force 'gains Caesar;

Whose better issue in the war, from Italy,
ANONY AND CLEOPATRA.

Scene II.

Upon the first encounter, close them.

Ant. When it concerns the fool or coward. On: "hims that are past are done with me. 'Tis thus; who tells me true, though in his tale lie death, hear him as he flatter'd."

Mess. Labienus—his is stiff news—hath, with his Parthian force, extended Asia from Euphrates; his conquering banner shook from Syria to Lydia and to Ionia; whilst—

Ant. Antony, thou wouldst say,—

Mess. O, my lord! Ant. Speak to me home, mince not the general tongue; ame Cleopatra as she is call'd in Rome; all thou in Fulvia's phrase; and taunt my faults with such full license as both truth and malice have power to utter. O, then we bring forth weeds, then our quick minds lie still; and our ills told us as our earning. Fare thee well awhile.

Mess. At your noble pleasure. [Exit. Ant. From Sicyon; ho, the news! Speak there!

First Att. The man from Sicyon,—is there such an one?

Sec. Att. He stays upon your will.

Ant. Let him appear. These strong Egyptian fetters I must break; lose myself in dodging.

Enter another Messenger.

Sec. Mess. Fulvia thy wife is dead.

Ant. Where did she?

Sec. Mess. In Sicyon: length of sickness, with what else more serious porteth thee to know, this bears. [Gives a letter. Ant. Forbear me.

[Exit Sec. Messenger.]

Ant. 's a great spirit gone! Thus did I desire it: at our contempl doth often hurl from us, wish it ours again; the present pleasure, revolution lowering, does become opposite of itself: she's good, being gone: hand could pluck her back that shoved her on. From this enchanting queen break off: thousand harms, more than the ills I know, idleness doth hatch. How now! Enobarbus!

Re-enter ENOBARBUS.

no. What's your pleasure, sir? nt. I must with haste from hence. no. Why, then, we kill all our women: we now mortal an unkindness is to them; if they in our departure, death's the word. re. I must be gone. no. Under a compelling occasion, let women it were pity to cast them away for nothing; gh, between them and a great cause, they should be esteemed nothing. Cleopatra, catching but the least noise of this, dies instantly: I have seen her die twenty times upon far poorer moment: I do think there is mettle in death, which commits some loving act upon her, she hath such a celerity in dying.

Ant. She is cunning past man's thought. Eno. Alack, sir, no; her passions are made of nothing but the finest part of pure love: we cannot call her winds and waters sighs and tears; they are greater storms and tempests than almanacs can report: this cannot be cunning in her: if it be, she makes a shower of rain as well as Jove.

Ant. Would I had never seen her! Eno. O, sir, you had then left unseen a wonderful piece of work; which not to have been blest withal would have discredited your travel. Ant. Fulvia is dead.

Eno. Sir?

Ant. Fulvia is dead.

Eno. Fulvia! Ant. Dead! Eno. Why, sir, give the gods a thankful sacrifice. When it pleaseth their deities to take the wife of a man from him, it shows to man the tailors of the earth: comforting therein, that when old robes are worn out, there are members to make new. If there were no more women but Fulvia, then had you indeed a cut, and the case to be lamented: this grief is crowned with consolation; your old smock brings forth a new petticoat: and indeed the tears live in an onion that should water this sorrow.

Ant. The business she hath broached in the state Cannot endure my absence.

Eno. And the business you have broached here cannot be without you; especially that of Cleopatra's, which wholly depends on your abode.

Ant. No more light answers. Let our officers have notice what we purpose. I shall break The cause of our expedition to the queen, And get her leave to part. For not alone The death of Fulvia, with more urgent touches, Do strongly speak to us; but the letters too Of many our contriving friends in Rome Petition us at home: Sextus Pompeius Hath given the dare to Caesar, and commands The empire of the sea: our slippery people, Whose love is never link'd to the deserer Till his deserts are past, begin to throw Pompey the Great and all his dignities Upon his son: who, high in name and power, Higher than both in blood and life, stands up For the main soldier: whose quality, going on, The sides o' the world may danger: much is breeding, Which, like the courser's hair, hath yet but life, And not a serpent's poison. Say, our pleasure, To such whose place is under us, requires Our quick remove from hence.

Eno. I shall do't. [Exeunt.]

Scene III. The same. Another room.

Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, IRAS, and ALEXAS.

Cleo. Where is he?
I did not see him since.
Cleo. See where he is, who's with him, what he does:
I did not send you: if you find him sad,
Say I am dancing; if in mirth, report
That I am sudden sick: quick, and return.
[Exit Alexas.
Char. Madam, methinks, if you did love him dearly,
You do not hold the method to enforce
The like from him.
Cleo. What should I do, I do not?
Char. In each thing give him way, cross him in nothing.
Cleo. Thou teachest like a fool; the way to lose him.
Char. Tempt him not so too far; I wish, forbear:
In time we hate that which we often fear.
But here comes Antony.

Enter Antony.
Cleo. I am sick and sullen.
Ant. I am sorry to give breathing to my purpose,— Cleo. Help me away, dear Charmian; I shall fall:
It cannot be thus long, the sides of nature
Will you sustain it.
Ant. Now, my dearest queen,—
Cleo. Pray you, stand farther from me.
Ant. What's the matter?
Cleo. I know, by that same eye, there's some good news.
What says the married woman? You may go: 20
Would she had never given you leave to come!
Let her not say 'tis I that keep you here;
I have no power upon you; hers you are.
Ant. The gods best know,—
Cleo. O, never was there queen
So mightily betray'd! yet at the first
I saw the treasons planted.

Ant. Cleopatra,—
Cleo. Why should I think you can be mine and true,
Though you in swearing shake the throned gods,
Who have been false to Fulvia? Riotous madness,
To be entangled with those mouth-made vows, 30
Which break themselves in swearing!
Ant. Most sweet queen,—
Cleo. Nay, pray you, seek no colour for your going,
But bid farewell, and go: when you sued staying,
Then was the time for words: no going then;
Eternity was in our lips and eyes,
Bliss in our brows' bent; none our parts so poor,
But was a race of heaven: they are so still,
Or thou, the greatest soldier of the world,
Art turn'd the greatest liar.
Ant. How now, lady!
Cleo. I would I had thy inches; thou shouldst know
There were a heart in Egypt.
Ant. Hear me, queen:
The strong necessity of time commands
Our services awhile; but my full heart
Remains in use with you. Our Italy
Shines o'er with civil swords: Sextus Pompeius
Makes his approaches to the port of Rome:
Equality of two domestic powers
Breed scrupulous faction: the hated, grown strong,
Are newly grown to love: the condemn'd Pompey
Rich in his father's honour, creeps apiece!
Into the hearts of such as have not thrived
Upon the present state, whose numbers threaten
And quietness, grown sick of rest, would purge
By any desperate change: my more particular,
And that which most with you should safe m going,
Is Fulvia's death.
Cleo. Though age from folly could not give me freedom,
It does from childishness: can Fulvia die?
Ant. She's dead, my queen:
Look here, and at thy sovereign leisure read
The garboils she awaked; at the last, best:
See when and where she died.
Cleo. O most false love
Where be the sacred vials thou shouldst fill
With sorrowful water? Now I see, I see,
In Fulvia's death, how mine received shall be.
Ant. Quarrel no more, but be prepared
know
The purposes I bear; which are, or cease,
As you shall give the advice. By the fire
That quickens Nilus' slime, I go from hence
Thy soldier, servant; making peace or war
As thou affect'st.
Cleo. Cut my lace, Charmian, come
But let it be: I am quickly ill, and well,
So Antony loves.
Ant. My precious queen, forbear;
And give true evidence to his love, which starts
An honourable trial.
Cleo. So Fulvia told me.
I prithee, turn aside and weep for her;
Then bid adieu to me, and say the tears
Belong to Egypt: good now, play one scene
Of excellent dissembling; and let it look Like perfect honour.
Ant. You'll beat my blood: no more.
Cleo. You can do better yet; but this meetly.
Ant. Now, by my sword,—
Cleo. And target. Still he me
But this is not the best. Look, prithee, Ch-mian.
How this Herculane Roman does become
The carriage of his chaise.
Ant. I'll leave you, lady.
Cleo. Courteous lord, one wo
Sir, you and I must part, but that's not it:
Sir, you and I have loved, but there's not it;
That you know well: something it is I would,
O, my oblivion is a very Antony,
And I am all forgotten.
Ant. But that your royalty
Holds idleness your subject, I should take you
For idleness itself.
Cleo. 'Tis sweating labour
To bear such idleness so near the heart
As Cleopatra this. But, sir, forgive me;
Say my becomings kill me, when they do not.
Eye well to you: your honour calls you hence.
Therefore be deaf to my unpitied folly, and all the gods go with you! upon your sword a laurel victory! and smooth success slew'd before your feet!

Ant. Let us go. Come; a separation so abides, and flies, that thou, residing here, go'st yet with me,
and I, hence fleeing, here remain with thee.

[Exeunt.

SCENE IV. Rome. Cæsar's house.

Enter Octavius Cæsar, reading a letter,
Lepidus, and their Train.

Cæs. You may see, Lepidus, and henceforth know, is not Cæsar's natural vice to hate his great competitor: from Alexandria is the news: he fishes, drinks, and wastes e lamps of night in revel; is not more manlike an Cleopatra; nor the queen of Ptolemy womanly than he; hardly gave audience, or uncalled to think he had partners: you shall find there
man who is the abstract of all faults at all men follow.

Lep. I must not think there are to his enow to darken all his goodness:
 faults in him seem as the spots of heaven,
we carry by night's blackness; hereditary,
ther than purchased; what he cannot change,
an what he chooses.

Lep. You are too indulgent. Let us grant, it is not iss to tumble on the bed of Ptolemy; give a kingdom for a mirth; to sit keep the turn of tippling with a slave; reel the streets at noon, and stand the buffet knives that smell of sweat: say this becomes him,— his composure must be rare indeed on these things cannot blemish,—yet must Antony,
way excuse his soils, when we do bear great weight in his lightness. If he fill'd vacency with his voluptuousness, surfeits, and the dryness of his bones,
on him for't: but to confound such time, it drums him from his sport, and speaks as loud
his own state and ours,—'tis to be chid we rate boys, who, being mature in knowlledge,
their experience to their present pleasure,
so rebel to judgement.

Enter a Messenger.

Cleopatra. Here's more news.

Less. Thy biddings have been done; and every hour,
 most noble Cæsar, shalt thou have report
'tis abroad. Pompey is strong at sea;
it appears he is beloved of those only have fear'd Cæsar: to the ports discontents repair, and men's reports him much wrong'd.

Less. I should have known no less.
ath been taught us from the primal state, 41
he which is was wish'd until he were;

And the ebb'd man, ne'er loved till ne'er worth
love,
Comes dear'd by being lack'd. This common body,
Like to a vagabond flag upon the stream,
Goes to and back, lackeying the varying tide,
To rot itself with motion.

Mess. Cæsar, I bring thee word,
Menecrates and Menas, famous pirates,
Make the sea serve them, which they ear and wound
With keels of every kind: many hot inroads
They make in Italy: the borders maritime
Lack blood to think on't, and flush youth revolt:
No vessel can peep forth, but 'tis as soon
Taken as seen; for Pompey's name strikes more Than could his war resisted.

Cæs. Antony,
Leave thy lascivious wassails. When thou once
Was beaten from Modena, where thou slew'st
Hirtius and Pansa, consuls, at thy heel!
Did famine follow; whom thou fought'st against,
Though dauntly brought up, with patience more
Than savages could suffer: thou didst drink
The stale of horses, and the gilded puddle
Which beasts would cough at: thy palate then did deign
The roughest berry on the rudest hedge;
Vea, like the stag, when snow the pasture sheets,
The banks of trees thou browsed'st; on the Alps
It is reported thou didst eat strange flesh,
Which some did die to look on; and all this—
It wounds thine honour that I speak it now—
Was borne so like a soldier, that thy cheek
So much as lank'd not.

Lep. 'Tis pity of him.

Cæs. Let his shames quickly
Drive him to Rome: 'tis time we twain
Did show ourselves' the field; and to that end Assemble we immediate council: Pompey
Thrives in our idleness.

Lep. To-morrow, Cæsar,
I shall be furnish'd to inform you rightly
Both what by sea and land I can be able
To front this present time.

Cæs. Till which encounter,
It is my business too. Farewell.

Lep. Farewell, my lord: what you shall know meanwhile
Of stirs abroad, I shall beseech you, sir,
To let me be partaker.

Cæs. Doubt not, sir;
I knew it for my bond. [Exeunt.

SCENE V. Alexandria. Cleopatra's palace.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Ips, and Mardian.

Cleo. Charmian!
Char. Madam?
Cleo. Ha, ha!

Give me to drink mandragora.
Char. Why, madam?
Cleo. That I might sleep out this great gap of time
My Antony is away.
Char. You think of him too much.
Cleo. O, 'tis treason!
Char. Madam, I trust, not so.

58—2
Cleo. Thou, eunuch Mardian!
Mar. What's your highness' pleasure?
Cleo. Not now to hear thee sing; I take no pleasure
In aught an eunuch has: 'tis well for thee, 10
That, being unseem'd, thy freer thoughts
May not fly forth of Egypt. Hast thou affections?
Mar. Yes, gracious madam.
Cleo. Indeed! 20
Mar. Not in deed, madam; for I can do nothing
But what indeed is honest to be done:
Yet have I fierce affections, and think
What Venus did with Mars.
Cleo. O Charmian,
Where think'st thou he is now? Stands he, or sits he?
Or does he walk? or is he on his horse? 30
O happy horse, to bear the weight of Antony!
Do bravely, horse! for 'tost thou whom thou movest!
The demi-Atlas of this earth, the arm
And burgonet of men. He's speaking now,
Or murmuring 'Where's my serpent of old Nile?'
For so he calls me: now I feed myself
With most delicious poison. Think on me,
That am with Phoebus' amorous pinches black,
And wrinkled deep in time. Broad-fronted Caesar,
When thou wast here above the ground, I was 40
A morsel for a monarch: and great Pompey
Would stand and make his eyes grow in my brow;
There would he anchor his aspect and die
With looking on his life.

Enter ALEXAS.

Alex. Sovereign of Egypt, hail! 50
Cleo. How much unlike art thou Mark Antony?
Yet, coming from him, that great medicine hath
With his touch gildeth thee.
How goes it with my brave Mark Antony?
Alex. Last thing he did, dear queen, 39
He kiss'd,—the last of many doubled kisses,—
This orient pearl. His speech sticks in my heart.
Cleo. Mine ear must pluck it thence.
Alex. 'Good friend, quoth he, Say, the firm Roman to great Egypt sends
This treasure of an oyster; at whose foot,
To mend the petty present, I will piece
Her opulent throne with kingdoms; all the east,
Say thou, shall call her mistress.' So he nodded,
And soberly did mount an arm-gaunt steed,
Who neigh'd so high, that what I would have spoke
Was heardly dumb'd by him.

Cleo. What, was he sad or merry? 50
Alex. Like to the time o' the year between the extremes
Of hot and cold, he was nor sad nor merry.
Cleo. O well-divided disposition! Note him, Note him, good Charmian, 'tis the man; but note him:
He was not sad, for he would shine on those
That make their looks by his; he was not merry,
Which seem'd to tell them his remembrance lay
In Egypt with his joy; but between both:
O heavenly mingle! Be'st thou sad or merry,
The violence of either thee becomes, 60
So does it no man else. Meet'st thou my posts?
Alex. Ay, madam, twenty several messengers
Why do you send so thick?
Cleo. Who's born that dies?
When I forget to send to Antony,
Shall die a beggar. Ink and paper, Charmian.
Welcome, my good Alexas. Did I, Charmian,
Ever love Caesar so?
Char. O that brave Caesar!
Cleo. Be choky with such another empha
Say, the brave Antony,
Char. The valiant Caesar!
Cleo. By Isis, I will give thee bloody teet
If thou with Caesar paragon again
My man of men.
Char. By your most gracious pardon,
I sing but after you.
Cleo. My salad days,
When I was green in judgement: cold in blo
To say as I said then! But, come, away;
Get me ink and paper:
He shall have every day a several greeting,
Or I'll unpeople Egypt.

ACT II.

SCENE I. Messina. Pompey's house.

Enter POMPEY, MENCrates, and MEN in warlike manner.
Pom. If the great gods be just, they assist
The deeds of justest men.
Menc. Know, worthy Pom
That what they do delay, they not deny.
Pom. Whiles we are suitors to their th decays
The thing we sue for.
Menc. We, ignorant of ourselves
Beg often our own harms, which the wise po deny us for our good; so find we profit
By losing of our prayers.
Pom. I shall do well:
The people love me, and the sea is mine;
My powers are creasent, and my auguring;
Says it will come to the fall. Mark Antony
In Egypt sits at dinner, and will make
No wars without doors: Caesar gets money.
He loses hearts; Lepidus flatters both,
Of both is flatt'er'd; but he neither loves,
Nor either cares for him.
Menc. Caesar and Lepidus
Are in the field: a mighty strength they can
Pom. Where have you this? 'tis false.
Menc. From Silvius.
Pom. He dreams: I know they are in togeth
Looking for Antony. But all the charms of Salt Cleopatra, soften thy wani'd lip! Let witchcraft join with beauty, lust with b Tice up the liberate in a field of feasts,

Antony is every hour in Rome

Enter Enobarbus and Lepidus.

ef. Good Enobarbus, 'tis a worthy deed,

Enter Antony and Ventidius.

And yonder, Caesar.

Enter Caesar, Mecenas, and Agrippa.

nt. If we compose well here, to Parthia:

Touch you the sourest points with sweetest terms,
Nor curstness grow to the matter.

'Tis spoken well.

Were we before our armies, and to fight,
I should do thus.

[Flourish.

Cas. Welcome to Rome.

Ant. Thank you.

Cas. Sit.

Ant. Nay, then.

Ant. I learn, you take things ill which are not so,

Or being, concern you not.

Cas. I must be laugh'd at, 30

If, or for nothing a little, I

Should say myself offended, and with you

Chiefly 't the world; more laugh'd at, that I should

Once name you derogately, when to sound your name

It not concern'd me.

Ant. My being in Egypt, Caesar,

What was't to you? 40

Cas. No more than my residing here at Rome

Might be to you in Egypt: yet, if you there

Did practise on my state, your being in Egypt

Might be my question.

Ant. How intend you, practis'd? 50

Cas. You may be pleased to catch at mine intent

By what did here befal me. Your wife and brother

Made wars upon me; and their contestation

Was theme for you, you were the word of war.

Ant. You do mistake your business; my brother never Did urge me in his act: I did inquire it:

And have my learning from some true reports,

That drew their swords with you. Did he not rather

Discredit my authority with yours;

And make the wars alike against my stomach, 50

Having alike your cause? Of this my letters

Before did satisfy you. If you'll patch a quarrel,

As matter while you have not to make it with,

It must not be with this.

Cas. You praise yourself

By laying defects of judgement to me; but

You patch'd up your excuses.

Ant. Not so, not so;

I know you could not lack, I am certain on't,

Very necessity of this thought, that I,

Your partner in the cause 'gainst which he fought,

Could not with graceful eyes attend those wars 60

Which fronted mine own peace. As for my wife,

I would you had her spirit in such another:

The third o' the world is yours; which with a snaffle

You may pace easy, but not such a wife.

Eno. Would we had all such wives, that the men might go to wars with the women!

Ant. So much uncurable, her garboils,

Caesar,

Made out of her impatience, which not wanted

Shrewdness of policy too, I grieving grant

Did you too much disquiet; for that you must

But say, I could not help it.

Cas. I wrote to you

When rioting in Alexandria: you
Did pocket up my letters, and with taunts
Did gibe my missive out of audience.

Ant. Sir,
He fell upon me ere admitted: then
Three kings I had newly feasted, and did want
Of what I was i’ the morning: but next day
I told him of myself; which was as much
As to have ask’d him pardon. Let this fellow
Be nothing of our strife; if we contend,
Out of our question wipe him.

Cas. You have broken
The article of your oath; which you shall never Have tongue to charge me with.

Lep. Soft, Caesar!

Ant. No,
Lepidus, let him speak:
The honour is sacred which he talks on now,
Supposing that I lack’d it. But, on, Caesar;
The article of my oath.

Cas. To lend me arms and aid when I required
The which you both denied.

Ant. Neglected, rather;
And then when poison’d hours had bound me up 90
From mine own knowledge. As nearly as I may,
I’ll play the penitent to you: but mine honesty
Shall not make poor my greatness, nor my power
Work without it. Truth is, that Fulvia,
To have me out of Egypt, made wars here;
For which myself, the ignorant motive, do
So far ask pardon as befits mine honour
To stoop in such a case.

Lep. ’Tis noble spoken.

Mec. If it might please you, to enforce no further
The griefs between ye: to forget them quite 100
Wore to remember that the present need
Speaks to atone you.

Lep. Worthily spoken, Mecenas.

Eno. Or, if you borrow one another’s love
For the instant, you may, when you hear no more Words of Pompey, return it again: you shall Have time to wrangle in when you have nothing else to do.

Ant. Thou art a soldier only; speak no more.

Eno. That truth should be silent I had almost forgot.

Ant. You wrong this presence; therefore Speak no more.

Eno. Go to, then; your considerate stone.

Cas. I do not much dislike the matter, but
The manner of his speech; for’t cannot be
We shall remain in friendship, our conditions
So differing in their acts. Yet, if I knew What hoop should hold us stanch, from edge to edge
O’ the world I would pursue it.

Agr. Speak, Agrippa.

Agr. Thou hast a sister by the mother’s side,
Admired Octavia: great Mark Antony
Is now a widower.

Cas. Say not so, Agrippa;
If Cleopatra heard you, your reproach
Were well deserved of rashness.

Ant. I am not married, Caesar: let me hear Agrippa further speak.

Agr. To hold you in perpetual amity,
To make you brothers, and to knit your hearts
With an unslipping knot, take Antony
Octavia to his wife; whose beauty claims
No worse a husband than the best of men;
Whose virtue and whose general graces speak
That which none else can utter. By this a riage,
All little jealousies, which now seem great,
And all great fears, which now import dangers,

Would then be nothing: truths would be tale
Where now half tales be truths; her love to
Would, each to other and all loves to both,
Draw after her. Pardon what I have spoke;
For ’tis a studied, not a present thought,
By duty ruminated.

Ant. Will Caesar speak?

Cas. Not till he hears how Antony is touch’d
With what is spoke already.

Ant. What power is in Agri

If I would say, ‘Agrippa, be it so,’
To make this good?

Cas. The power of Caesar, and His power unto Octavia.

Ant. May I never
To this good purpose, that so fairly shows,
Dream of importunity? Let me have thy help:
Further this act of grace; and from this hour
The heart of brothers govern in our loves
And sway our great designs!

Cas. There is my ha
A sister I bequeath you, whom no brother
Did in love so dearly: let her live
To join our kingdoms and our hearts; and Fly off our loves again!

Lep. Happily, amen!

Ant. I did not think to draw my s against Pompey;
For he hath laid strange courtesies and great
Of late upon me: I must thank him only,
Lest my remembrance suffer ill report;
At heel of that, defy him.

Lep. Time calls upon’s:
Of us must Pompey presently be sought,
Or else he seeks out us.

Ant. Where lies he?

Cas. About the mount Misenum.

Ant. What is his strength by land?

Cas. Great and increasing: but by sea
He is an absolute master.

Ant. So is the fame.
Would we had spoke together! Haste we f
Yet, ere we put ourselves in arms, dispatch
The business we have talk’d of.

Cas. With most glad h
And do invite you to my sister’s view,
Whither straight I’ll lead you.

Ant. Let us, Lepid
Not lack your company.

Lep. Noble Antony,
Not sickness should detain me.

Mec. Welcome from Egypt, sir.

Eno. Half the heart of Caesar, worthy M mas! My honourable friend, Agrippa!

Agr. Good Enobarbus!

Mec. We have cause to be glad that ma are so well digested. You stayed well by Egypt.
ScENE II.

ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

Eno. Ay, sir; we did sleep day out of counte ence, and made the night light with drinking.

Mer. Eight wild-boars roasted whole at a calfeast, and but twelve persons there; is this talk?

Eno. This was but as a fly by an eagle: we did much more monstrous matter of feast, which ruthlessly desired noting.

Mec. She's a most triumphant lady, if report square to her.

Eno. When she first met Mark Antony, she used up his heart, upon the river of Cydnus.

Agr. There she appeared indeed; or my reter devised well for her.

Eno. I will tell you.

The barge she sat in, like a burnish'd throne,
m'd on the water: the poop was beaten gold;
ople the sails, and so perfumed that winds were love-sick with them; the oars were silver, scheme to the tune of flutes kept stroke, and made a water which they beat to follow faster, 201 most of the strokes. For her own person, she eggar'd all description: she did lie her pavilion—cloth-of-gold of tissue—picturing that Venus where we see fancy outwork nature: on each side her od pretty dimpled boys, like smiling Cupids, ith divers-colour'd fans, whose wind did seem glow the delicate cheeks which they did cool, and what they undid did.

Sooth. O, rare for Antony! 210

Eno. Her gentlewomen, like the Nereides, many mermaids, tender'd her the eyes,
I made their bonds adorning; at the helm emming mermaid steers: the silken tackle ill with the touches of those flower-soft hands, it yarely frame the office. From the barge range invisible perfume hits the sense the adjacent wharfs. The city cast people out upon her; and Antony, rowned the market-place, did sit alone, 220 thing to the air; which, but for vacancy, gone to gaze on Cleopatra too made a gap in nature.

gr. Rare Egyptian!

no. Upon her landing, Antony sent to her,
ited her to supper; she replied,
ould be better he became her guest;
ich she entertained; our courteous Antony,
om ne'er the word of 'No' woman speak,
rberg'd ten times o'er, goes to the feast, his ordinary pays his heart
what his eyes eat only.

Royal wench!

made great Caesar lay his sword to bed:
ough'd her, and she crop'd.

I saw her once
forty paces through the public street;
aving lost her breath, she spoke, and pant,
and she make defect perfection,
 breathless, power breathe forth.

Now Antony must leave her utterly.

Never; he will not:
cannot wither her, nor custom stale finite variety: other women cley appetites they feed: but she makes hungry most she satisfies: for vilest things

Become themselves in her; that the holy priests
Bless her when she is riggish.

Mec. If beauty, wisdom, modesty, can settle
The heart of Antony, Cleopatra is
A blessed lottery to him.

Agr. Let us go.
Good Enobarbus, make yourself my guest
Whilst you abide here.

Eno. Humbly, sir, I thank you. [Exit.

ScENE III. The same. Caesar's house.

Enter Antony, Caesar, Octavia between them, and Attendants.

Ant. The world and my great office will sometimes
Divide me from your bosom.

Oct. All which time
Before the gods my knee shall bow my prayers
To them for you.

Ant. Good night, sir. My Octavia,
Read not my mumbles in the world's report:
I have not kept my square; but that to come Shall all be done by the rule. Good night, dear lady.

Good night, sir.

Cae. Good night. [Exit Caesar and Octavia.

Enter Soothsayer.

Ant. Now, sirrah; do you wish yourself in Egypt?

Sooth. Would I had never come from thence, nor you
This night.

Ant. If you can, your reason?

Sooth. I see it in My motion, have it not in my tongue: but yet
He to Egypt again.

Ant. Say to me,
Whose fortunes shall rise higher, Caesar's or mine?

Sooth. Caesar's.

Therefore, O Antony, stay not by his side:
Let him, that thy spirit which keeps thee, is Noble, courageous, high, unmatchable, 250
Where Caesar's is not; but, near him, thy angel Becomes a fear, as being o'erpower'd: therefore Make space enough between you.

Ant. Speak this no more.

Sooth. To none but thee; no more, but when to thee.

If thou dost play with him at any game,
Thou art sure to lose; and, of that natural luck,
He beats thee 'gainst the odds: thy lustre
When he shines by: I say again, thy spirit
Is all afraid to govern thee near him;
But, he away, 'tis noble.

Ant. Get thee gone: 30

Say to Ventidius I would speak with him:

[Exit Soothsayer.

He shall to Parthia. Be it art or hap,
He hath spoken true: the very dice obey him;
And in our sports my better cunning fails
Under his chance: if we draw lots, he speedeth;
His cocks do win the battle still of mine,
When it is all to nought; and his quails ever
Beat mine, in hoop'd, at odds. I will to Egypt:
And though I make this marriage for my peace,
I the east my pleasure lies.

Enter VENTIDIUS.

O, come, Ventidius, 40
You must to Parthia: your commission’s ready:
Follow me, and receive’t. [Exeunt.

Scene IV. The same. A street.
Enter LEPIDUS, MECENAS, and AGrippa.

Lep. Trouble yourselves no further: pray you, hasten
Your generals’ after.

Agr. Sir, Mark Antony
Will e’en but kiss Octavia, and we’ll follow.

Lep. Till I shall see you in your soldier’s dress,
Which will become you both, farewell.

Mec. We shall,
As I conceive the journey, be at the Mount
Before you, Lepidus.

Lep. Your way is shorter;
My purposes do draw me much about:
You’ll win two days upon me.

Mec. Sir, good success! [Exeunt. 10

Scene V. Alexandria. Cleopatra’s palace.
Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, IRAS, and ALEXAS.

Cleo. Give me some music; music, Moody food
Of us that trade in love.

Attend.

The music, ho!

Enter MARDIAN the Eunuch.

Cleo. Let it alone; let’s to billiards: come, Charman.

Char. My arm is sore; best play with Mardian.

Cleo. As well a woman with an ennuch play’d
As with a woman. Come, you’ll play with me, sir.

Mar. As well as I can, madam.

Cleo. And when good will is show’d, though ’t come too short,
The actor may plead pardon. I’ll none now:
Give me mine angle; we’ll to the river: there,
My music playing far off, I will betray
Tawny-finn’d fishes; my bended hook shall pierce
Their slimy jaws; and, as I draw them up,
I’ll think them every one an Antony,
And say ‘Ah, ha! you’re caught.’

Char. I was merry when you wager’d on your angling: when your dver Did hang a salt-fish on his hook, which he
With fervency drew up.

Cleo. That time,—O times! —
I laugh’d him out of patience; and that night
I laugh’d him into patience: and next morn, ere
The ninth hour, I drunk him to his bed:
Then put my tires and mantles on him, whilst
I wore his sword Philippan.

Enter a Messenger.

O, from Italy!
Ram thou thy fruitful tidings in mine ears,
That long time have been barren.

Mess. Madam, madam,— Cleo. Antonius dead!—If thou say so, villain,
Thou kill’st thy mistress: but well and free,
If thou so yield him, there is gold, and here
My bluest veins to kiss; a hand that kings
Have lipp’d, and trembled kissing.

Mess. First, madam, he is well.
Cleo. Why, there’s more gold
But, sirrah, mark, we use
To say the dead are well: bring it to that,
The gold I give thee will I melt and pour
Down thy ill-uttering throat.

Mess. Good madam, hear me.
Cleo. Well, go to, I will
But there’s no goodness in thy face: if Antony
Be free and healthful,—so tart a favor,
To trumpet such good tidings! If not well,
Thou shouldst come like a Fury crown’d wi’

Not like a formal man.

Cleo. Will’t please you hear me
I have a mind to strike thee ere the

Yet, if thou say Antony lives, is well,
Or friends with Caesar, or not captive to him,
I’ll set thee in a shower of gold, and hail
Rich pearls upon thee.

Mess. Madam, he’s well.
Cleo. Well sa
Mess. And friends with Caesar.

Cleo. Thou’rt an honest man,
Mess. Caesar and he are greater friends th
ever.

Cleo. Make thee a fortune from me.

Mess. But yet, madam,
Cleo. I do not like ‘But yet,’ it does allay
The good precedence; be upon ‘But yet’!
‘But yet’ is as a gaoler to bring forth
Some monstrous, malefactor. Prithee, friend,
Pour out the pack of matter to mine ear,
The good and bad together: he’s friends w
Cesar;
In state of health thou say’st; and thou say free.

Mess. Free, madam! no; I made no su report:
He’s bound unto Octavia.

Cleo. For what good turn?
Mess. For the best turn’t the bed.

Cleo. I am pale, Charmin
Mess. Madam, he’s married to Octavia.

Cleo. The most infectious pestilence up thee! [Strikes him Dow
Mess. Good madam, patience.

Cleo. What say you? Hen
[Strikes him again

Horrible villain! or I’ll spurn thine eyes.
Like balls before me; I’ll unhair thy head: [She hales him up and Dow
Thou shalt be whip’d with wire, and Stewart

Smarting in lingering pickel.

Mess. Gracious madam,
I that do bring the news made not the match.
Cleo. Say ‘tis not so, a province I will give
thee,
And make thy fortunes proud: the blow I hadst
Shall make thy peace for moving me to rage:

ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA. 921

...and I will boot thee with what gift beside thy modesty can beg.

Mess. He's married, madam.

Cleo. Rogue, thou hast lived too long.

[Draws a knife.

Mess. Nay, then I'll run.

Char. Good madam, keep yourself within yourself; he man is innocent.

Cleo. Some innocents'scaped not the thunderbolt. Left Egypt into Nile! and kindly creatures turn all to serpents! Call the slave again: hough I am mad, I will not bite him: call. 80 Char. He is afraid to come.

Cleo. I will not hurt him. [Exit Charmian.

hese hands do lack nobility, that they strike meaner than myself; since I myself have given myself the cause.

Re-enter Charmian and Messenger.

Come hither, sir, though it be honest, it is never good to bring bad news: give to a gracious message a host of tongues: but let ill tidings tell themselves when they be felt.

Mess. I have done my duty.

Cleo. Is he married?

Mess. Cannot hate thee worse than I do, you then say 'Yes.'

Cleo. He's married.

Mess. The gods confound thee! dost thou hold there still?

Mess. Should I lie, madam?

Cleo. O, I would thou didst, half my Egypt were submerged and made eistern for scaled snakes! Go, get thee hence: adst thou Narcissus in thy face, to me how wouldst appear most ugly. He is married?

Mess. I crave your highness's pardon.

Cleo. He is married?

Mess. Take no offence that I would not offend you; I punish me for what you make me do. 100 eens much unequal: he's married to Octavia.

Cleo. O, that his fault should make a knife of thee, that art not what thou'rt sure of! Get thee hence; he merchandise which thou hast brought from Rome are all too dear for me: lie they upon thy hand, and be undone by 'em! [Exit Messenger.

Char. Good your highness, patience.

Cleo. In praising Antony, I have displeased Caesar.

Char. Many times, madam, I am paid for't now, and me from hence: faint! O Iras, Charmian! 'tis no matter. 120 To the fellow, good Alexas: bid him report the feature of Octavia, her years, her inclination, let him not leave me colour of her hair: bring me word quickly.

[Exit Alexas.]

I him for ever go: let him not—Charmian, though he be painted one way like a Gorgon, the other way's a Mars. Did you Alexas?

Cleo. Bring me word how tall she is. Pity me, Charmian, but do not speak to me. Lead me to my chamber. [Exit.}

SCENE VI. Near Misenum.

Flourish. Enter Pompey and Menas at one side, with drum and trumpet; at another, Caesar, Antony, Lepidus, Enobarbus, Macedon, with Soldiers marching.

Pom. Your hostages I have, so have you mine; and we shall talk before we fight.

Cas. Most meet that first we come to words; and therefore have we Our written purposes before us sent; Which, if thou hast consider'd, let us know if 'twill tie up thy discontented sword, and carry back to Sicily much tall youth. That else must perish here.

Pom. To you all three, the senators alone of this great world, Chief factors for the gods, I do not know Wherefore my father should revengers want, Having a son and friends; since Julius Caesar, who at Philippi the good Brutus ghosted, there saw you labouring for him. What was 't That moved pale Cassius to conspire; and what Made the all-honour'd, honest Roman, Brutus, with the arm'd rest, courtiers of beauteous freedom, to drench the Capitol; but that they would have one man but a man? And that is Hath made me rig my navy; at whose burthen the anger'd ocean foams; with which I meant to scourge the ingratitude that despiteful Rome cast on my noble father.

Cas. Take your time.

Ant. Thou canst not fear us, Pompey, with thy sails; we'll speak with thee at sea: at land, thou know'st how much we do o'er-count thee.

Pom. At land, indeed, thou dost o'er-count me of my father's house; but, since the cuckoo builds not for himself, remain in't as thou mayst.

Lep. Be pleased to tell us—For this is from the present—how you take the offers we have sent you.

Cas. There's the point. And which do not be entreated to, but weigh what it is worth embraced.

Ant. And what may follow,

To try a larger fortune.

Pom. You have made me offer of Sicily, Sardinia; and I must Rid all the sea of pirates; then, to send Measures of wheat to Rome; this 'greed upon, To part with unhack'd edges, and bear back Our targes undinted.

Cas. Ant. Lep. That's our offer.

Pom. Know then, I came before you here a man prepared To take this offer; but Mark Antony Put me to some impatience; though I lose
The praise of it by telling, you must know,
When Caesar and your brother were at blows,
Your mother came to Sicily and did find
Her welcome friendly.

Ant. I have heard it, Pompey;
And am well studied for a liberal thanks
Which I do owe you.
Pom. Let me have your hand:
I did not think, sir, to have met you here.

Ant. The beds i’ the east are soft; and thanks
to you,
That call’d me timelier than my purpose hither;
For I have gain’d by’t.

Cæs. Since I saw you last,
There is a change upon you.
Pom. Well, I know not
What counts harsh fortune casts upon my face;
But in my bosom shall she never come,
To make my heart her vassal.

Lep. Well met here.
Pom. I hope so, Lepidus. Thus we are agreed:
I crave our composition may be written,
And seal’d between us.

Caes. That’s the next to do.
Pom. We’ll feast each other ere we part;
and let’s
Draw lots who shall begin.

Ant. That will I, Pompey.
Pom. No, Antony, take the lot: but, first
Or last, your fine Egyptian cookery Shall have the fame. I have heard that Julius Cæsar
Grew fat with feasting there.

Ant. You have heard much.
Pom. I have fair meanings, sir.
Ant. And fair words to them.
Pom. Then so much have I heard:
And I have heard, Apollodorus carried—

Eno. No more of that: he did so.
Pom. What, I pray you?

Eno. A certain queen to Caesar in a mattress.
Pom. I know thee now: how fairest thou, soldier?

Eno. Well;
And well am I like to do: for, I perceive,
Four feasts are toward.
Pom. Let me shake thy hand;
I never hated thee: I have seen thee fight,
When I have envied thy behaviour.

Eno. Sir,
I never loved you much; but I ha’ praised ye,
When you have well deserved ten times as much
As I have said you did.
Pom. Enjoy thy plainness, 80
It nothing ill becomes thee.
Aboard my galley I invite you all:
Will you lead, lords?

Caes. Ant. Lep. Show us the way, sir.
Pom. Come.

[Exeunt all but Menæas and Enoharus.

Men. [Aside] Thy father, Pompey, would ever have made this treaty.—You and I have known, sir.

Eno. At sea, I think.

Men. We have, sir.

Eno. You have done well by water.

Men. And you by land.

Eno. I will praise any man that will praise me; though it cannot be denied what I have do by land.

Men. Nor what I have done by water.

Eno. Yes, something you can deny for yo own safety: you have been a great thief by se

Men. And you by land.

Eno. There I deny my land service. I give me your hand, Menæas: if our eyes h authority, here they might take two thie

kissing.

Men. All men’s faces are true, whatso them their hands are.

Eno. But there is never a fair woman ha true face.

Men. No slander; they steal hearts.

Eno. We came hither to fight with you.

Men. For my part, I am sorry it is turned a drinking. Pompey doth this day laugh aw his fortune.

Eno. If he do, sure, he cannot weep’t be again.

Men. You’ve said, sir. We looked not Mark Antony here: pray you, is he married

Cleopatra?

Eno. Caesar’s sister is called Octavia.

Men. True, sir; she was the wife of Ca
Marcellus.

Eno. But she is now the wife of Marcus Antoni

Men. Pray ye, sir?

Eno. ’Tis true.

Men. Then is Caesar and he for ever knit gather.

Eno. If I were bound to divine of this un
I would not prophesy so.

Men. I think the policy of that purpose m more in the marriage than the love of the part

Eno. I think so too. But you shall find band that seems to tie their friendship toge will be the very stranger of their amity: Octa is of a holy, cold, and still conversation.

Men. Who would not have his wife so?

Eno. Not he that himself is not so; which Mark Antony. He will to his Egyptian o again: then, shall the sighs of Octavia blow fire up in Caesar; and, as I said before, that w it the strength of their amity shall prove the mediator author of their variance. Antony use his affection where it is: he married bu ocasion here.

Men. And thus it may be. Come, sir, w you aboard? I have a health for you.

Eno. I shall take it, sir: we have used threats in Egypt.

Men. Come, let’s away.

[Exeunt.

SCENE VII. On board Pompey’s galley, of Misenium.

Music plays. Enter two or three Servants a banquet.

First Serv. Here they’ll be, man. Some their plants are ill-rooted already; the least w i the world will blow them down.

Sec. Serv. Lepidus is high-coloured.

First Serv. They have made him drink al drink.

Sec. Serv. As they pinch one another by disposition, he cries out ‘No more;’ reconc them to his entreaty, and himself to the drink
Antony and Cleopatra

Scene VII.

First Serv. But it raises the greater war between him and his discretion.

Sec. Serv. Why, this it is to have a name in great men's fellowship: I had as lief have a reed hat will do me no service as a partisan I could do of heave.

First Serv. To be called into a huge sphere, and to be seen to move in 't, are the holes where eyes should be, which pitiful disaster he checks.

1 senet sounded. Enter Caesar, Antony, Lepidus, Pompey, Agrippa, Mecenas, Enobarbus, Menas, with other captains.

Ant. [To Caesar] Thus do they, sir: they take the flow o' the Nile by certain scales i' the pyramid; they know, by the height, the lowness, or the mean, if death or foison follow: the higher Nius swells, he more it promises: as it ebbs, the seedsmen upon the slime and oze scatters his grain, and shortly comes to harvest.

Lep. You've strange serpents there.

Ant. Ay, Lepidus.

Lep. Your serpent of Egypt is bred now of our mud by the operation of your sun: so is your coxcomb.

Ant. They are so.

Pom. Sit,—and some wine! A health to Lepidus!

Lep. I am not so well as I should be, but I'll e'er out.

Eno. Not till you have slept; I fear me you'll e in till then.

Lep. Nay, certainly, I have heard the Ptolemy's pyramids are very goodly things; without contradiction, I have heard that.

Men. [Aside to Pom.] Pompey, a word.

Pom. [Aside to Men.] Say in mine ear: what is it?

Men. [Aside to Pom.] Forsake thy seat, I do beseech thee, captain, and hear me speak a word.

Pom. [Aside to Men.] Forbear me till anon. His wine for Lepidus!

Lep. What manner 's thing is your crocodile? Ant. It is shaped, sir, like itself; and it is as road as it hath breadth: it is just so high as it is, and moves with it own organs: it lives by mort, which nourisheth it; and the elements once out of it, it transmigrates.

Lep. What colour is it of?

Ant. Of it own colour too.

Lep. 'Tis a strange serpent.

Ant. 'Tis so. And the tears of it are wet.

Caes. Will this description satisfy him?

Ant. With the health that Pompey gives him, he is a very epicure.

Pom. [Aside to Men.] I think thou'rt mad. What's the matter? [Rises, and walks aside. Men. I have ever held my cap off to thy fortunes.

Pom. Thou hast served me with much faith. What's else to say?

Be jolly, lords.

Ant. These quick-sands, Lepidus, Keep off them, for you sink.

Men. Wilt thou be lord of all the world?

Pom. [Aside] What say'st thou?

Men. Wilt thou be lord of the whole world? That's twice.

Pom. How should that be?

Men. But entertain it, 69 And, though thou think me poor, I am the man Will give thee all the world.

Pom. Hast thou drunk well?

Men. No, Pompey, I have kept me from the cup. Thou art, if thou darest be, the earthy Jove: What'er the ocean pales, or sky inclins, Is thine, if thou wilt ha' it.

Pom. Show me which way.

Men. These three world-sharers, these competitors, Are in thy vessel: let me cut the cable; And, when we are put off, fall to their throats: All there is thine.

Pom. Ah, this thou should'st have done, And not have spoke on 't! In me 'tis villany; In thee 't had been good service. Thou must know, 'Tis not my profit that does lead mine honour: Mine honour, it. Repent that e'er thy tongue Hath so betray'd thine act: being done unknown, I should have found it afterwards well done; But must condemn it now. Desist, and drink.

Men. [Aside] For this, I'll never follow thy pall'd fortunes more. Who seeks, and will not take when once 'tis offered, Shall never find it more.

Pom. This health to Lepidus! 90

Ant. Bear him ashore. I'll pledge it for him, Pompey.

Eno. Here's to thee, Menas!

Men. Enobarbus, welcome!

Pom. Fill till the cup be hid.

Eno. There's a strong fellow, Menas.

[Pointing to the Attendant who carries off Lepidus. Men. Why?

Eno. A bears the third part of the world, man; see'st not?

Men. The third part, then, is drunk: would it were all, That it might go on wheels!

Eno. Drink thou; increase the reels. 100 Men. Come.

Pom. This is not yet an Alexandrian feast.

Ant. It ripens towards it. Strike the vessels, ho!

Here is to Caesar!

Caes. I could well forbear 't. It's monstrous labour, when I wash my brain, And it grows fouler.

Ant. Be a child o' the time.

Caes. Possess it, I'll make answer: But I had rather fast from all four days Than drink so much in one.

Eno. Ha, my brave emperor! [To Antony. Shall we dance now the Egyptian Bacchanals,
And celebrate our drink!

Pom. Let’s ha’t, good soldier. [Exeunt all but Enobarbus and Menas.]

Ant. Come, let’s all take hands, till that the conquering wine hath steep’d our sense in soft and delicate Lethe.

Eno. All take hands. Make battery to our ears with the loud music: the while I’ll place you: then the boy shall sing; the holding every man shall bear as loud as his strong sides can volley.

[Music plays. Enobarbus places them hand in hand.]

The Song.

Come, thou monarch of the vine,
Plumpy Bacchus with pink eyne!
In thy farts our cares be drown’d,
With thy grapes our hairs be crown’d:
Cup us, till the world go round,
Cup us, till the world go round!

Cæs. What would you more? Pompey, good night. Good brother, let me request you off: our graver business frowns at this levity. Gentle lords, let’s part; you see we have burnt our cheeks: strong Enobarbus is weaker than the wine; and mine own tongue splits what it speaks: the wild disguise hath almost Antick’d us all. What needs more words? Good night.

Good Antony, your hand.

Pom. And shall, sir; give’s your hand.

Ant. You have my father’s house.—But, what? we are friends.

Come, down into the boat.

Eno. [Exeunt all but Enobarbus and Menas.]

Menas. I’ll not on shore.

Men. No, to my cabin. These drums! these trumpets, flutes! what! Let Neptune hear we bid a loud farewell! To these great fellows: sound and be hang’d, sound out! [Sound a flourish, with drums]*

Eno. Ho! says a’. There’s my cap.

Men. Ho! Noble captain, come. [Exeunt.]

ACT III.

SCENE I. A plain in Syria.

Enter Ventidius as it were in triumph, with Silius, and other Romans, Officers, and Soldiers; the dead body of Paccorus borne before him.

Ven. Now, darting Parthia, art thou struck; and now pleased fortune does of Marcus Crassus’ death make me revenger. Bear the king’s son’s body before our army. Thy Paccorus, Orodés, pays this for Marcus Crassus.

Silius. Noble Ventidius, whilst yet with Parthian blood thy sword is warm, the fugitive Parthians follow; spur through Media, Mesopotamia, and the shelters whither the routed fly: so thy grand captain Antony shall set thee on triumphant chariots and put garlands on thy head.

Ven. O Silius, Silius, I have done enough; a lower place, note well, may make too great an act: for learn this, Silius better to leave undone, than by our deed acquire too high a fame when he we serve away.

Cæsar and Antony have ever won More in their officer than person: Sossius, one of my place in Syria, his lieutenant, for quick accumulation of renown, which he achieved by the minute, lost his favour. Who does it the wars more than his captain can becomes his captain’s captain: and ambition, the soldier’s virtue, rather makes choice of less than gain which darkens him. I could do more to do Antonius good, but ‘twould offend him: and in his offence should my performance perish.

Silius. Thou hast, Ventidius, that Without the which a soldier, and his sword, grants scarce distinction. Thou wilt write it

Ven. I’ll humbly signify what in his name, that Magical word of war, we have effected; how, with his banners and his well-paid ranks, the ne’er-yet-beaten horse of Parthia we have jaded out of the field.

Silius. Where is he now?

Ven. He purposeth to Athens: whither, with what haste the weight we must convey with’s will permit, we shall appear before him. On, there; par along! [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. Rome. An ante-chamber in Caesar’s house.

Enter Agrippa at one door, Enobarbus at another.

Agr. What are the brothers parted?

Eno. They have dispatch’d with Pompey, I am gone;
the other they are sealing. Octavia weeps to part from Rome; Cæsar is sad; and Lepidus since Pompey’s feast, as Menas says, is troubled with the green sickness.

Agr. Tis a noble Lepidus. Eno. A very fine one: O, how he loves Caesar!

Agr. Nay, but how dearly he adores Marc Antony!

Eno. Cæsar? Why, he’s the Jupiter of me.

Agr. What’s Antony? The god of Jupiter.

Eno. Spake you of Cæsar? How! the no parell?

Agr. O Antony! O thou Arabian bird!

Eno. Would you praise Caesar, say ‘Cæsar go no further."

Agr. Indeed, he plied them both with excellent praises.

Eno. But he loves Caesar best; yet he loves Antony:

*Ho! hearts, tongues, figures, scribes, bard poets, cannot think, speak, cast, write, sing, number, ho! His love to Antony. But as for Caesar, Kneel down, kneel down, and wonder.

_Agr._ Both he loves.

_Eno._ They are his shards, and he their beetle.
_Trompets within._ So; 20

This is horse. Adieu, noble Agrippa.

_Agr._ Good fortune, worthy soldier; and farewell.

_Enter_ Caesar, Antony, Lepidus, and Octavia._

_Ant._ No further, sir.

_Cas._ You take from me a great part of myself; Jee me well in. Sister, prove such a wife As my thoughts make thee, and as my fairest band Will pass on thy approach. Most noble Antony, Let not the piece of virtue, which is set Betwixt us as the cement of our love, To keep it builded, be the ram to batter the fortress of it; for better might we have loved without this mean, if on both parts this be not cherished.
_Make me not offended in your distrust._

_Cas._ I have said.

_Ant._ You shall not find,

Though you be therein curious, the least cause for what you seem to fear: so, the gods keep you, and make the hearts of Romans serve your ends! We will here part.

_Cas._ Farewell, my dearest sister, fare thee well:

The elements be kind to thee, and make Thy spirits all of comfort! fare thee well.

_Eolf._ My noble brother!

_Ant._ The April's in her eyes: it is love's spring, And these the showers to bring it on. Be cheerful.

_Eolf._ Sir, look well to my husband's house; and—

_Cas._ What, Octavia?

_Cas._ I'll tell you in your ear.

_Ant._ Her tongue will not obey her heart, nor can her heart inform her tongue,—the swan's down- feather, That stands upon the swell at full of tide, and never way inclines.

_Will Caesar weep?_

_Agr._ [Aside to Eno.] He has a cloud in's face.

_Eno._ [Aside to Agr.] He were the worse for that, were he a horse;

So is he, being a man.

_Agr._ [Aside to Eno.] Why, Enobarbus, when Antony found Julius Caesar dead, he cried almost to roaring; and he went when at Philippi he found Brutus slain.

_Eno._ [Aside to Agr.] That year, indeed, he was troubled with a rheum;

What willingly he did confound he wail'd, believe't, till I wept too.

No, sweet Octavia, you shall hear from me still; the time shall not put my thinking on you.

_Come, sir, come;_ 60

'I will wrestle with you in my strength of love: look, here I have you; thus I let you go, and give you to the gods.'

_Cas._ Adieu; be happy!

Scene II. Alexandria. Cleopatra's palace.

_Enter_ Cleopatra, Charmian, Iras, and Alexas._

_Cleo._ Where is the fellow?

_Alex._ Half asleep to come.

_Cleo._ Go to, go to.

Enter the Messenger as before.

_Cleo._ Come hither, sir.

_Alex._ Good majesty, Herod of Jewry dare not look upon you But when you are well pleased.

_Cleo._ That Herod's head I'll have: but how, when Antony is gone Through whom I might command it? Come thou near.

_Mess._ Most gracious majesty,—

_Cleo._ Didst thou behold Octavia?

_Mess._ Ay, dread queen.

_Cleo._ Where?

_Mess._ Madam, in Rome; I look'd her in the face, and saw her led Between her brother and Mark Antony.

_Cleo._ Is she as tall as me?

_Mess._ She is not, madam.

_Cleo._ Didst hear her speak? is she shrill-tongued or low?

_Mess._ Madam, I heard her speak; she is low-voiced.

_Cleo._ That's not so good: he cannot like her long.

_Char._ Like her! O Isis! 'tis impossible.

_Cleo._ I think so, Charmian: dull of tongue, and dwarfish!

What majesty is in her gait? Remember, 20 If 'er thou look'dst on majesty.

_Mess._ She creeps:

Her motion and her station are one; She shows a body rather than a life,
A stature than a breather.

_Cleo._ Is this certain?

_Mess._ Or I have no observance.

_Char._ Three in Egypt Cannot make better note.

_Cleo._ He's very knowing; I do perceive 't: there's nothing in her yet: The fellow has good judgement.

_Char._ Excellent.

_Cleo._ Guess at her years, I prithee.

_Mess._ Madam,

She was a widow,—

_Cleo._ Widow! Charmian, hark. 30

_Mess._ And I do think she's thirty.

_Cleo._ Bear'st thou her face in mind? is't long or round?

_Mess._ Round even to faultlessness.

_Cleo._ For the most part, too, they are foolish that are so.

Her hair, what colour?

_Mess._ Brown, madam: and her forehead As low as she would wish it.
Cleo. There 's gold for thee. Thou must not take my former sharpness ill: I will employ thee back again; I find thee Most fit for business: go make thee ready; 40 Our letters are prepared. [Exit Messenger.
Cleo. Indeed, he is so: I repent me much That so I harried him. Why, methinks, by him, This creature's no such thing.
Char. Nothing, madam.
Cleo. The man hath seen some majesty, and should know.
Char. Hath he seen majesty? Isis else defend, And serving you so long!
Cleo. I have one thing more to ask him yet, good Charmanian: But 'tis no matter; thou shalt bring him to me Where I will write. All may be well enough. 50 Char. I warrant you, madam. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV. Athens. A room in Antony's house.

Enter Antony and Octavia.

Ant. Nay, nay, Oclavia, not only that,— That were excusable, that, and thousands more Of semblable import,—but he hath waged New wars 'gainst Pompey; made his will, and read it To public ear: Spoke scantily of me: when perforce he could not But pay me terms of honour, cold and sickly He vented them; most narrow measure lent me: When the best hint was given him, he not took't, Or did it from his teeth.
Oct. O my good lord, 10 Believe not all; or, if you must believe, Stomach not all. A more unhappy lady, If this division chance, ne'er stood between, Praying for both parts: The good gods will mock me presently, When I shall pray, 'O, bless my lord and husband!'
undo that prayer, by crying out as loud, 'O, bless my brother!' Husband win, win brother, Prays, and destroys the prayer; no midway 'Twixt these extremes at all.
Ant. Gentle Oclavia, 20 Let your best love draw to that point, which seeks Best to preserve it: if I lose mine honour, I lose myself: better I were not yours Than yours so branchless. But, as you requested, Yourself shall go between 's: the mean time, lady, I'll raise the preparation of a war Shall stain your brother: make your soonest haste; So your desires are yours.
Oct. Thanks to my lord.
The jove of power make me most weak, most weak. Your reconciler! Wars 'twixt you twain would be As if the world should cleave, and that slain men 32 Should solder up the rift.
Ant. When it appears to you where this begins, Turn your displeasure that way; for our faults Can never be so equal, that your love Can equally move with them. Provide you going; Choose your own company, and command what cost Your heart has mind to. [Exeunt.

SCENE V. The same. Another room.

Enter Enobarbus and Eros, meeting.

Eno. How now, friend Eros!
Eros. There 's strange news come, sir.
Eno. What, man?
Eros. Caesar and Lepidus have made wars upon Pompey.
Eno. This is old: what is the success?
Eros. Caesar, having made use of him in the wars 'gainst Pompey, presently denied him rivalry; would not let him partake in the glory of the action: and not resting here, accuses him of letters he had formerly wrote to Pompey; upon his own appeal, seizes him: so the poor third is up, till death enlarge his confine.
Eno. Then, world, thou hast a pair of chaps, no more; And throw between them all the food thou hast, They'1l grind the one the other. Where's Antony?
Eros. He's walking in the garden—thus; and spurns The rush that lies before him; cries, 'Fool Lepidus!' And threats the throat of that his officer That murder'd Pompey.
Eno. Our great navy's rigg'd. 20
Eros. For Italy and Caesar. More, Domitius. My lord desires you presently: my news I might have told hereafter.
Eno. 'Twill be naught. But let it be. Bring me to Antony.
Eros. Come, sir. [Exeunt.

SCENE VI. Rome. Caesar's house.

Enter Caesar, Agrippa, and Mecenas.

Cas. Contemning Rome, he has done all this, and more, In Alexandria: here's the manner of't: I, in market-place, on a tribunal silver'd, Cleopatra and himself in chairs of gold Were publicly enthroned: at the feet sat Caesarion, whom they call my father's son, And all the unlawful issue that their lust Since then hath made between them. Unto her He gave the establishment of Egypt; made her Of lower Syria, Cyprus, Lydia, 10 Absolute queen.
Mec. This in the public eye?
Cas. I' the common show-place, where they exercise. His sons he there proclaim'd the kings of kings: Great Media, Parthia, and Armenia, He gave to Alexander; to Ptolemy he assign'd Syria, Cilicia, and Phoenicia: she In the habiliments of the goddess Isis That day appear'd; and oft before gave audience, As 'tis reported, so.
Mec. Let Rome be thus Infor'm'd.
W. Who, queasy with his insolence Already, will their good thoughts call from him.
ACT VI.

ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

Cæs. The people know it; and have now received is accusations.

Agr. Who does he accuse?

Cæs. Cæsar: and that, having in Sicily xus Pompeius spoil'd, we had not rated him is part o' the isle: then do's he say, he lent me me shipping unrestored: lastly, he freis at Lepidus of the triumvirate ould be deposed; and, being, that we detain his revenue.

Agr. Sir, this should be answer'd. 30

Cæs. 'Tis done already, and the messenger gone.
Save told him, Lepidus was grown too cruel;
hat he his high authority abused,
I did deserve his change: for what I have conquer'd,
grant him part; but then, in his Armenia, other of his conquer'd kingdoms, I mand the like.

Cæs. He'll never yield to that.

Cæs. Nor must not then be yielded to in this.

Enter Octavia with her train.

70. Hail, Cæsar, and my lord! hail, most dear Cæsar!

Cæs. That ever I should call thee castaway!

75. You have not call'd me so, nor have you cause.

Cæs. Why have you stol'n upon us thus? You come not
Cæsar's sister: the wife of Antony ould have an army for an usher, and enies of horse to tell of her approach ng ere she did appear; the trees by the way ould have borne men; and expecftion fainted, ing for what it had not; nay, the dust ould have ascended to the roof of heaven, 49 ised by your populous troops: but you are come market-maid to Rome; and have prevented ostentation of our love, which, left unshown, often left unloved: we should have met you sea and land; supplying every stage
th an augmented greeting.

97. Good my lord, come thus was I not constrain'd, but did my free will. My lord, Mark Antony, sing that you prepared for war, accustomed grieved ear withal; whereas, I beg'd
's pardon for return.

Iæs. Which soon he granted, 60
ing an obstruct 'tween his lust and him.

102. Do not say so, my lord.

Iæs. I have eyes upon him,
d his affairs come to me on the wind.
here is he now?

107. My lord, in Athens.

Iæs. No, my most wronged sister; Cleopatra hodden him to her. He hath given his empire
to a whore; who now are levying e kings the earth for war: he hath assembled chus, the king of Libya; Archelaus,
Cappodocia; Philadelphia, king
Phœbogonia; the Thracian king, Adallas; 70
Malchus of Arabia; King of Pont;
ord of Jewry; Mithridates, king Comrene; Polemon and Amyntas, e
kings of Mede and Lycaonia,

With a more larger list of sceptres.

Oct. Ay me, most wretched,
That have my heart parted betwixt two friends
That do afflict each other!

Cæs. Welcome hither:
Your letters did withhold our breaking forth; 79
Till we perceived, both how you were wrong led,
And we in negligent danger. Cheer your heart:
Be you not troubled with the time, which drives
O'er your content these strong necessities;
But let determined things to destiny
Hold unbewail'd their way. Welcome to Rome;
Nothing more dear to me. You are abused
Beyond the mark of thought: and the high gods,
Do you justice, make them ministers
Of us and those that love you. Best of comfort:
And ever welcome to us.

Agr. Welcome, lady.

Mec. Welcome, dear madam.

Each heart in Rome does love and pity you:
Only the adulterous Antony, most large
In his abominations, turns you off;
And gives his potent regiment to a trull,
That noises it against us.

Oct. Is it so, sir?

Cæs. Most certain. Sister, welcome: pray you,
Be ever known to patience: my dear'st sister!

[Exeunt.

SCENE VII. Near Actium. Antony's camp.

Enter Cleopatra and Enobarbus.

Cle. I will be even with thee, doubt it not.

Eno. But why, why, why?

Cle. Thou hast forspoke my being in these wars,
And say'st it is not fit.

Eno. Well, is it, is it?

Cleo. If not denounced against us, why should not we
Be there in person?

Eno. [Aside] Well, I could reply:
If we should serve with horse and mares together,
The horse were merely lost; the mares would bear
A soldier and his horse.

Cleo. What is't you say? 10

Eno. Your presence needs must puzzle Antony:
Take from his heart, take from his brain, from's

What should not then be spared. He is already Traduced for levity; and 'tis said in Rome
That Photinus an eunuch and your maids
Manage this war.

Cleo. Sink Rome, and their tongues rot That speak against us! A charge we bear i' the war,
And, as the president of my kingdom, will Appear there for a man. Speak not against it;
I will not stay behind.

Eno. Nay, I have done. 20

Here comes the emperor.

Enter Antony and Canidius.

Ant. Is it not strange, Canidius, That from Tarentum and Brundusium
He could so quickly cut the Ionian sea,
And take in Toryne? You have heard on't, sweet?

Cleo. Celerity is never more admired
Than by the negligent.
ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA. [Act

Ant. A good rebuke, Which might have well became the best of men, To taunt at slackness. Canidius, we Will fight with him by sea.

Cleo. By sea! what else? Can. Why will my lord do so? Ant. For that he dares us to't. 30

Eno. So hath my lord dared him to single fight. Can. Ay, and to wage this battle at Pharsalia, Where Caesar fought with Pompey: but these offers, Which serve not for his vantage, he shakes off; And so should you.

Eno. Your ships are not well man'd; Your mariners are mullets, reapers, people Ingross'd by swift impress; in Caesar's fleet Are those that often have'gainst Pompey fought: Their ships are yare; yours, heavy: no disgrace Shall fall you for refusing him at sea, 40

Being prepared for land.

Ant. By sea, by sea.

Eno. Most worthy sir, you therein throw away The absolute soldiership you have by land; Distraught your army, which doth most consist Of war-mark'd footmen; leave unexecuted Your own renowned knowledge; quite forego The way which promises assurance; and Give up yourself merely to chance and hazard, From arm security.

Ant. I'll fight at sea.

Cleo. I have sixty sails, Caesar none better. 50

Ant. Our overplus of shipping will we burn; And, with the rest full-man'd, from the head of Actium Beat the approaching Caesar. But if we fail, We then can do't at land.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. The news is true, my lord; he is des- cried:

Cesar has taken Torsyne.

Ant. Can he be there in person? 'tis impossible;

Strange that his power should be. Canidius, Our nineteen legions thou shalt hold by land, And our twelve thousand horse. We'll to our ship: Away, my Theseus!

Enter a Soldier.

Sold. O noble emperor, do not fight by sea; Trust not to rotten planks: do you misdoubt This sword and these my wounds? Let the Egyptians And the Phoenicians go a-ducking: we Have used to conquer, standing on the earth, And fighting foot to foot.

Ant. Well, well; away! [Exeunt Antony, Cleopatra, and Enobarbus. Sold. By Hercules, I think I am the right. Can. Soldier, thou art: but his whole action grows Not in the power on't: so our leader's led, And we are women's men.

Sold. You keep by land

The legions and the horse whole, do you not? Can. Marcus Octavius, Marcus Justeius, Publicola, and Caius, are for sea:

But we keep whole by land. This speed Caesar's Carries beyond belief.

Sold. While he was yet in Rom His power went out in such distractions as Boggled all spies.

Can. Who's his lieutenant, hear ye Sold. They say, one Taurus.

Can. Well I know the man.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. The emperor calls Canidius.

Can. With news the time's with labour, a throses forth,

Each minute, some. [Exeunt

SCENE VIII. A plain near Actium.

Enter Caesar, and Taurus, with his arm marching.

Ces. Taurus! Taur. My lord? Ces. Strike not by land; keep whole: pro- voke not battle, Till we have done at sea. Do not exceed The prescript of this scroll: our fortune lies Upon this jump. [Exeunt SCENE IX. Another part of the plain.

Enter Antony and Enobarbus.

Ant. Set we our squadrons on yond side the hill, In eye of Caesar's battle: from which place We may the number of the ships behold, And so proceed accordingly. [Exeunt

SCENE X. Another part of the plain.

Canidius marcheth with his land army a way over the stage; and Taurus, the lie- tenant of Caesar, the other way. After they going in, is heard the noise of a sea-fight.

A larum. Enter Enobarbus.

Eno. Naught, naught, all naught! I can behold no longer:

The Antoniad, the Egyptian admiral, With all their sixty, fly and turn the rudder: To see't mine eyes are blasted.

Enter Scarus.

Scar. Gods and goddesses, All the whole synod of them! Eno. What's thy passion? Scar. The greater cantle of the world is lost With very ignorance; we have kiss'd away Kingdoms and provinces.

Eno. How appears the fight? Scar. On our side like the token'd pestilent Where death is sure. You ribaudred nag Egypt— Whom leprosy o'er'ertake!—'tis the midst of the fig When vantage like a pair of twins appear’d, Both as the same, or rather ours the elder, The breeze upon her, like a cow in June, Hoists sails and flies.

Eno. That I beheld: Mine eyes did sicken at the sight, and could not Scene X. Antony and Cleopatra.

Indure a further view.

Scar. She once being loof’d, the noble ruin of her magic, Antony, laps on his sea-wing, and, like a doting mallard, leaving the fight in height, flies after her: 21 never saw an action of such shame; experience, manhood, honour, ne’er before had violate so itself.

Eno. Alack, alack!

Enter CANDIDUS.

Can. Our fortune on the sea is out of breath, and sinks most lamentably. Had our general seen what he knew himself, it had gone well: 30 he has given example for our flight, lost grossly, by his own!

Eno. Ay, are you thereabout? I, then, good night indeed.

Can. Toward Peloponnesus are they fled.

Scar. ’Tis easy to’t; and there we will attend what further comes.

Can. To Caesar will I render my legions and my horse: six kings already how me the way of yielding.

Eno. ’Twill yet follow he wounded chance of Antony, though my reason gives me. in the wind against me.

[Exeunt.

Scene XI. Alexandria. Cleopatra’s palace.

Enter Antony with Attendants.

Ant. Hark! the land bids me tread no more upon it: 10 is ashamed to bear me! Friends, come hither: I am so lamented in the world, that I ave lost my way for ever: I have a ship aden with gold; take that, divide it; fly, and make your peace with Caesar.

All. Fly! not we.

Ant. I have fled myself; and have instructed cowards 15 run and show their shoulders. Friends, be gone; have myself resolved upon a course which has no need of you; be gone: y treasure’s in the harbour, take it. O, I follow’d that I blush to look upon; y hairs do mutiny; for the white prove the brown for rashness, and they them or fear and doting. Friends, be gone: you shall ave letters from me to some friends that will keep your way for you. Pray you, look not sad, or make replies of loathness: take the hint hich my despair proclaims; let that be left hich leaves itself: to the sea-side straightway: will possess you of that ship and treasure. 21 I give me, I pray, a little: pray you now: sy, do so; for, indeed, I have lost command, therefore I pray you: I’ll see you by and by.

[Sits down.

Cleopatra, Charmian and Iras; Eros following.

Eros. Nay, gentle madam, to him, comfort him.

Iras. Do, most dear queen.
Which had superfluous kings for messengers
Not many moons gone by.

Enter Euphronius, ambassador from Antony.

Ces. Name, and speak.
Euph. Such as I am, I come from Antony:
I was of late as petty to his ends
As is the morn-dew on the myrtle-leaf
To his grand sea.
Ces. Bet'st thou to declare thine office.
And requires to live in Egypt: which not granted,
He lessens his requests; and to thee sues
To let him breathe between the heavens and earth,
A private man in Athens: this for him.
Next, Cleopatra does confess thy greatness;
Submits her to thy might; and of thee craves
The circle of the Ptolemies for her heirs,
Now hazardous to thy grace.
Ces. For Antony,
I have no ears to his request. The queen
Of audience nor desire shall, so she
From Egypt drive her all-disgraced friend,
Or take his life there: this if she perform,
She shall not sue unheard. So to them both.
Euph. Fortune pursue thee!
Ces. Bring him through the bands.
[Exit Euphronius.]

[To Thyreus] To try thy eloquence, now 'tis time: dispatch;
From Antony win Cleopatra: promise,
And in our name, what she requires; add more,
From thine invention, offers: women are not
In their best fortunes strong; but want will perjure
The ne'er-touch'd vestal: try thy cunning, Thyreus;
Make thine own edict for thy pains, which we
Will answer as a law.
Thyr. Cesar, I go.
Ces. Observe how Antony becomes his flaw,
And what thou think'st his very action speaks
In every power that moves.
Thyr. Cesar, I shall. [Exeunt.

Scene XIII. Alexandria. Cleopatra's palace.

Enter Cleopatra, Enobarbus, Charmian, and Iras.

Cleo. What shall we do, Enobarbus?
Eno. Think, and die.
Cleo. Is Antony or we in fault for this?
Eno. Antony only, that would make his will Lord of his reason. What though you fled
From that great face of war, whose several ranges
Frighted each other? why should he follow?
The itch of his affection should not then
Have nick'd his captainship; at such a point,
When half to half the world opposed, he being
The jmeered question: 'twas a shame no less
Than his loss, to course your flying flags,
And leave his navy gazing.
Cleo. Prithee, peace.
Thyr. The scars upon your honour, therefore, he Does pity, as constrained blemishes,
Not as deserved.
Cleo. He is a god, and knows .
Thyr. What is most right: mine honour was not yielded,
But conquer'd merely.
Eno. [Aside] To be sure of that,
I will ask Antony. Sir, sir, thou art so leaky,
That we must leave thee to thy sinking, for Thy dearest quit thee. [Exit.
Thyr. Shall I say to Caesar
What you require of him? for he partly begs
I'd be desired to give. It much would please him,
That of his fortunes you should make a staff
To lean upon: but it would warm his spirits,
I'd hear from me you had left Antony,
And put yourself under his shrowd,
The universal landlord.
Cleo. What's your name?
Thyr. My name is Thyreus.
Cleo. Most kind messenger,
Say to great Caesar this: in deputation
Kiss his conquering hand: tell him, I am prompt
To lay my crown at's feet, and there to kneel:
'Ell him, from his all-obeying breath I hear
The doom of Egypt.
Thyr. Tis your noblest course.
Wisdom and fortunate combattng together,
If that the former dare but what it can,
Chance may shake it. Give me grace to lay
My duty on your hand.
Cleo. Your Caesar's father oft,
When he hath mused of taking kingdoms in,
estow'd his lips on that unworthy place,
is it rain'd kisses.

Re-enter Antony and Enobarbus.
Ant. Favours, by Jove that thunders!
Thyr. What art thou, fellow?
Ant. One that but performs
The bidding of the fullest man, and worthiest
To have command obey'd.
Eno. [Aside] You will be whipp'd.
Ant. Approach, there! Ah, you kite! Now,
Gods and devils!
Eno. But pity melts from me: of late, when I cried
'Ho!' like boys unto a muss, kings would start forth, nd cry 'Your will?' Have you no ears? I am tony yet.

Enter Attendants.
Ant. Take hence this Jack, and whip him.
Eno. [Aside] 'Tis better playing with a lion's whelp
han with an old one dying.
Ant. Moon and stars!
ship him. Were't twenty of the greatest tribuntaries
that do acknowledge Caesar, should I find them saucy with the hand of she here,—what's her
name,
ce she was Cleopatra? Whip him, fellows, ill, like a boy, you see him cringe his face, too nd whine aloud for mercy: take him hence.
Cleo. Mark Antony!
Ant. Tug him away: being whipp'd, ding him again: this Jack of Caesar's shall Bear us an errand to him.
[Exeunt Attendants with Thyreus.
You were half blasted ere I knew you: ha!
Have I my pillow left unpress'd in Rome,
Forborne the getting of a lawful race,
And by a gem of women, to be abused
By one that looks on feeders?
Cleo. Good my lord,—
Ant. You have been a bogger ever:
But when we in our viciousness grow hard—
O misery on't—the wise gods see our eyes;
In our own filth drop our clear judgements;
make us
Adore our errors; laugh at 's, while we strut
To our confusion.
Cleo. O, is't come to this?
Ant. I found you as a morsel cold upon
Dead Caesar's trencher; nay, you were a fragment
Of Clelius Pompey's; besides that hotter hours, Unregister'd in vulgar fame, you have
Luxuriously pick'd out: for, I am sure,
Though you can guess what temperance should be,
You know not what it is.
Cleo. Wherefore is this?
Ant. To let a fellow that will take rewards
And say 'God quit you!' be familiar with
My playfellow, your hand; this kingly seal
And plighter of high hearts! O, that I were Upon the hill of Basan, to roar
The horned herd! for I have savage cause;
And to proclaim it civilly, were like
A halter'd neck which does the hangman thank
For being yare about him.

Re-enter Attendants with Thyreus.
Is he whipp'd?
First Att. Soundly, my lord.
Ant. Cried he? and begg'd a' pardon?
First Att. He did ask favour.
Ant. If that thy father live, let him repent
Thou wast not made his daughter; and be thou
sorry
To follow Caesar in his triumph, since Thou hast been whipp'd for following him: henceforth
The white hand of a lady fever thee,
Shake thou to look on 't. Get thee back to Caesar.
Tell him thy entertainment: look, thou say
He makes me angry with him; for he seems Proud and disdainful, harping on what I am,
Not what he knew I was: he makes me angry;
And at this time most easy 'tis to do,
When my good stars, that were my former guides,
Have empty left their orbs, and shot their Ice into the abyss of hell. If he mislike
My speech and what is done, tell him he has Hipparchus, my enfranchised bondman, whom
He may at pleasure whip, or hang, or torture,
As he shall like, to quit me: urge it thou:
Hence with thy stripes, begone! [Exit Thyreus.
Cleo. Have you done yet?
Ant. Alack, our terrene moon
Is now eclipsed; and it portends alone
The fall of Antony!
Cleo. I must stay his time.
Ant. To flatter Caesar, would you mingle eyes
With one that ties his points?
Cleo. Not know me yet?
Ant. Cold-hearted toward me?
Cleo. Ah, dear, if I be so, From my cold heart let heaven engender hail, And poison it in the source; and the first stone Drop in my neck: as it determines, so Dissolve my life! The next Cassarion smite! Till by degrees the memory of my womb, Together with my brave Egyptians all, By the discandying of this pellet storm, Lie graveless, till the flies and gnats of Nile Have buried them for prey!

Ant. I am satisfied. Caesar sits down in Alexandria; where I will oppose his fate. Our force by land Hath nobly held; our sever'd navy too Have knit again, and, fleet, threatening most sea-like,

Where hast thou been, my heart? Dost thou hear, lady? If from the field I shall return once more To kiss these lips, I will appear in blood; And my sword will earn our chronicle: There's hope in it yet.

Cleo. That's my brave lord! Ant. I will be treble-swind'd, hearted, breathed, And fight maliciously: for when mine hours Were nice and lucky, men did ransom lives Of me for jests; but now I'll set my teeth, And send to darkness all that stop me. Come, Let's have one other gaudy night: call to me All my sad captains; fill our bowls once more; Let's mock the midnight bell.

Cleo. It is my birth-day: I had thought to have held it poor; but, since my lord Is Antony again, I will be Cleopatra.

Ant. We will yet do well.

Cleo. Call all his noble captains to my lord.

Ant. Do so, we'll speak to them; and to-night I'll force

The wine peep through their scars. Come on, my queen;

There's sap in it yet. The next time I do fight, I'll make death love me; for I will contend Even with his pestilent scythe. [Exit.]

Eno. Now he'll outstare the lightning. To be furious, Is to be frighted out of fear; and in that mood The dove will peck the estridge; and I see still, A diminution in our captain's brain Restores his heart: when valour preys on reason, It eats the sword it fights with. I will seek Some way to leave him. [Exit.

ACT IV.

Enter Caesar, Agrippa, and Mecenas, with his Army; Caesar reading a letter.

Cas. He calls me boy; and chides, as he had power To beat me out of Egypt: my messenger He hath whipp'd with rods; dares me to personal combat.

Cesar to Antony: let the old Russian know I have many other ways to die; meantime Laugh at his challenge.

Mec. Caesar must think,

When one so great begins to rage, he's hunt'd Even to falling. Give him no breath, but now Make boot of his distraction; never anger Made good guard for itself.

Ces. Let our best heads Know, that to-morrow the last of many battles We mean to fight: within our files there are, Of those that served Mark Antony but late, Enough to fetch him in. See it done:

And feast the army; we have store to do't, And they have ear'd the waste. Poor Antony [Exit.

SCENE II. Alexandria. Cleopatra's palace.

Enter Antony, Cleopatra, Enobarbus, Charmian, Iras, Alexas, with others.

Ant. He will not fight with me, Domitius.

Eno. Why should he not?

Ant. He thinks, being twenty times of better fortune, He is twenty men to one.

Eno. To-morrow, soldier, By sea and land I'll fight: or I will live, Or bathe my dying honour in the blood Shall make it live again. Wo'thout fight well

Eno. I'll strike, and cry 'Take all.'

Well said; come or Call forth my household servants: let's to-night Be bounteous at our meal.

Enter three or four Servitors.

Give me thy hand, Thou hast been rightly honest:—so hast thou:—Thou, and thou:—and thou:—you have serve me well, And kings have been your fellows.

Cleo. [Aside to Eno.] What means this?

Eno. [Aside to Cleo.] 'Tis one of those old tricks which sorrow shoots Out of the mind.

Ant. And thou art honest too. I wish I could be made so many men, And all of you clapp'd up together in, An Antony, that I might do you service So good as you have done.

All. The gods forbid!

Ant. Well, my good fellows, wait on me to-night: Scant not my cups; and make as much of me As when mine empire was your fellow too, And suffer'd my command.

Cleo. [Aside to Eno.] What does he mean?

Eno. [Aside to Cleo.] To make his follow weep.

Ant. Tend me to-night; May be it is the period of your duty: Haply you shall not see me more; or if, A mangled shadow: perchance to-morrow You'll serve another master. I look on you As one that takes his leave. Mine honest friend I turn you not away; but, like a master Married to your good service, stay till death: Tend me to-night two hours, I ask no more, And the gods yield you for't!

Eno. Enough that I have served Mark Antony. What mean you, sir, To give them this discomfort? Look, they weep And I, an ass, am onion-eyed: for shame, Transform us not to women.

Ant.  No, no, no! Now the witch take me, if I meant it thus! Grace grow where those drops fall! My hearty friends, You take me in too dolorous a sense; For I spake to you for your comfort; did desire you To burn this night with torches; know, my hearts, I hope well of to-morrow; and will lead you Where rather I’ll expect victorious life Than death and honour. Let’s to supper, come, And drown consideration.  [Exeunt.

SCENE III. The same. Before the palace.

Enter two Soldiers to their guard.

First Sold. Brother, good night: to-morrow is the day.

Sec. Sold. It will determine one way: fare you well.

Heard you of nothing strange about the streets?

First Sold. Nothing. What news?

Sec. Sold. Believe ‘tis but a rumour. Good night to you.

First Sold. Well, sir, good night.

Enter two other Soldiers.

Sec. Sold. Soldiers, have careful watch. Third Sold. And you. Good night, good night.  [They place themselves in every corner of the stage.

Fourth Sold. Here we: and if to-morrow our navy thrive, I have an absolute hope our landmen will stand up.

Third Sold. ‘Tis a brave army, and full of purpose.

[Music of the hautboys as under the stage.

Fourth Sold. Peace! what noise?

First Sold. List, list!

Sec. Sold. Hark!

First Sold. Music ’tis the air.

Third Sold. Under the earth.

Fourth Sold. It signs well, does it not?

Third Sold. No.

First Sold. Peace, I say! What should this mean?

Sec. Sold. ‘Tis the god Hercules, whom Antony loved, now leaves him.

First Sold. Walk; let’s see if other watchmen Jo hear what we do.

Sec. Sold. How now, masters!  [Speaking together] How now! How now! do you hear this?

First Sold. Ay; is’t not strange?

Third Sold. Do you hear, masters? do you hear?

First Sold. Follow the noise so far as we have quarter; let’s see how it will go.

All. Content. ‘Tis strange.  [Exeunt.

SCENE IV. The same. A room in the palace.

Enter Antony and Cleopatra, Charmian, and others attending.

Ant. Eros! mine armour, Eros!

Cleo. Sleep a little.

Ant. No, my chuck. Eros, come; mine armour, Eros!

Enter Eros with armour.

Come, good fellow, put mine iron on: If fortune be not ours to-day, it is Because we brave her: come.

Cleo. Nay, I’ll help too. What’s this for?

Ant. Ah, let be, let be! thou art The armourer of my heart: false, false; this, this.

Cleo. Sooth, la, I’ll help: thus it must be.

Ant. Well, well; We shall thrive now. Seest thou, my good fellow? Go put on thy defences.

Eros. Briefly, sir.

Cleo. Is not this buckled well?

Ant. Rarely, rarely: He that unbucks this, till we do please To daft for our repose, shall hear a storm. Thou funblest, Eros; and my queen’s a squire More tight at this than thou: dispatch. O love, That thou couldst see my wars to-day, and knew’st The royal occupation! thou shouldst see A workman in’t.

Enter an armed Soldier.

Good morrow to thee; welcome: Thou look’st like him that knows a warlike charge: To business that we love we rise betime, And go to’t with delight.

Sold. A thousand, sir, Early though ’t be, have on their riveted trim, And at the port expect you.  [Shout. Trumpets flourish.

Enter Captains and Soldiers.

Capt. The morn is fair. Good morrow, general.

All. Good morrow, general.

Ant. ‘Tis well blown, lads:

This morning, like the spirit of a youth That means to be of note, begins betimes.

So, so; come, give me that: this way; well said.

Fare thee well, dame, whate’er becomes of me:

This is a soldier’s kiss: rebukeable [Kisses her. And worthy shameful check it were, to stand 32 On more mechanic compliment; I’ll leave thee Now, like a man of steel. You that will fight, Follow me close; I’ll bring you to’t. Adieu.  [Exeunt Antony, Eros, Captains, and Soldiers.

Char. Please you, retire to your chamber.

Cleo. Lead me.

He goes forth gallantly. That heand Caesar might Determine this great war in single fight!

Then, Antony,—but now.—Well, on.  [Exeunt.

SCENE V. Alexandria. Antony’s camp.

Trumpets sound. Enter Antony and Eros; a Soldier meeting them.

Sold. The gods make this a happy day to Antony!

Ant. Would thou and those thy scars had once prevail’d To make me fight at land!

Sold. Hadst thou done so, The kings that have revolted, and the soldier
That has this morning left thee, would have still Follow'd thy heels.

Ant. Who's gone this morning?
Sold. Who!

One ever near thee: call for Enobarbus,
He shall not hear thee: or from Caesar's camp
Say 'I am none of thine.'

Ant. What say'st thou?
Sold. Sir, He is with Caesar.

Eros. Sir, his chests and treasure 10
He has not with him.

Ant. Is he gone?
Sold. Most certain.

Ant. Go, Eros, send his treasure after; do it;
Detain no jot, I charge thee: write to him—
I will subscribe—gentle adieu and greetings;
Say that I wish he never find more cause
To change a master. O, my fortunes have Corrupted honest men! Dispatch.—Enobarbus!

[Exeunt.]

SCENE VI. Alexandria. Caesar's camp.

Flourish. Enter Cæsar, Agrippa, with Enobarbus, and others.

Ces. Go forth, Agrippa, and begin the fight:
Our will is Antony be took alive;
Make it so known. [Exeunt all but Enobarbus.

Eno. Alexas did revolt; and went to Jewry on Affairs of Antony; there did persuade Great Herod to incline himself to Caesar,
And leave his master Antony: for this pains
Cæsar hath hang'd him. Candidius and the rest
That fell away have entertainment, but
No honourable trust. I have done ill;
Of which I do accuse myself so sorely,
That I will joy no more.

[Enter a Soldier of Cæsar's.

Sold. Enobarbus, Antony 20
Hath after thee sent all thy treasure, with
His bounty overplus: the messenger
Came on my guard; and at thy tent is now
Unloading of his mules.

Eno. I give it you.
Sold. Mock not, Enobarbus.
I tell you true: best you safed the bringer
Out of the host; I must attend mine office,
Or would have done't myself. Your emperor
Continues still a Jove. [Exeunt.

Eno. I am alone the villain of the earth, 30
And feel I am so most. O Antony,
Thou mine of bounty, how wouldst thou have paid
My better service, when my turpitude

Thou dost so crown with gold! This blows my heart:
If swift thought break it not, a swifter mean Shall outstrike thought: but thought will not, I feel.
I fight against thee! No: I will go seek
Some ditch wherein to die; the foul'st best fits
My latter part of life.  [Exeunt.

SCENE VII. Field of battle between the camps.

Alarum. Drums and trumpets. Enter Agrippa
and others.

Agr. Retire, we have engaged ourselves too far;
Cæsar himself has work, and our oppression
Exceeds what we expected. [Exeunt.

Alarums. Enter Antony, and Scærus wounded.

Scar. O my brave emperor, this is fought indeed!
Had we done so at first, we had driven them home
With clouts about their heads.

Ant. Thou bleed'st apace.

Scar. I had a wound here that was like a 'l
But now 'tis made an H.  [Exeunt.

Agr. They do retire.
Scar. We'll beat 'em into trench-holes: I have yet
Room for six scotches more.  [Exeunt.

Enter Eros.

Eros. They are beaten, sir; and our advantage serves
For a fair victory.

Scar. Let us score their backs,
And snatch 'em up, as we take hares, behind
'Tis sport to maull a runner.

Ant. I will reward thee
Once for thy spritely comfort, and ten-fold
For thy good valour. Come thee on.

Scar. I'll halt after. [Exeunt.

SCENE VIII. Under the walls of Alexandria.

Alarum. Enter Antony, in a march; Scærus with others.

Ant. We have beat him to his camp: run on before,
And let the queen know of our gists. To-morrow
Before the sun shall see 's, we'll spill the blood
That has to-day escaped. I thank you all;
For doughty-handed are you, and have fought
Not as you served the cause, but as 't had been Each man's like mine; you have shown all Hectors.
Enter the city, clip your wives, your friends,
Tell them your feats; whilst they with joyful
tears
Wash the congealment from your wounds, and kiss
The honour'd gashes whole. [To Scærus] Give me thy hand;

Enter Cleopatra, attended.

To this great fairy I'll commend thy acts,
Make her thanks bless thee. [To Cleo.] O thou day o' the world,
Scene VIII.

Antony and Cleopatra.

Cleo. Lord of lords!

First Sold. Let's hear him, for the things he speaks

May concern Caesar.

Third Sold. Let's do so. But he sleeps.

First Sold. Swoons rather; for so bad a prayer

as his

Was never yet for sleep.

Sec. Sold. Go we to him.

Third Sold. Awake, sir, awake; speak to us.

Sec. Sold. Hear you, sir?

First Sold. The hand of death hath fraught

him. [Drums afar off.] Hark! the drums

Demurely wake the sleepers. Let us bear him

To the court of guard; he is of note: our hour

Is fully out.

Third Sold. Come on, then;

He may recover yet. [Exeunt with the body.

Scene X. Between the two camps.

Enter Antony and Scarus, with their Army.

Ant. Their preparation is to-day by sea;

We please them not by land.

Scar. For both, my lord.

Ant. I would they'd fight i' the fire or i' the air;

We'd fight there too. But this it is; our foot

Upon the hills adjoining to the city

Shall stay with us; order for sea is given;

They have put forth the haven;

Where their appointment we may best discover,

And look on their endeavour. [Exeunt.]

Scene IX. Caesar's camp.

Sentinels at their post.

First Sold. If we be not relieved within this e must return to the court of guard: the night shiny; and they say we shall embattel

the second hour i' the morn.

Sec. Sold. This last day was shrewd one to's.

Enter Enobarbus.

Eno. O, bear me witness, night,—

Third Sold. What man is this?

Sec. Sold. Stand close, and list him.

Eno. Be witness to me, O thou blessed moon, men revolting shall upon record ar hatefull memory, poor Enobarbus did lore they face repent!

First Sold. Enobarbus!

Enobarbus! Peace! 10

Eno. O sovereign mistress of true melancholy,

e poisonous damp of night dispone upon me, at life, a very rebel to my will,

give me in thine own particular;

let the world rank me in register master-leaver and a fugitive:

Antony! O Antony! [Dies.

Sec. Sold. Let's speak

To him.

First Sold. Let's hear him, for the things he speaks

May concern Caesar.

Third Sold. Let's do so. But he sleeps.

First Sold. Swoons rather; for so bad a prayer

as his

Was never yet for sleep.

Sec. Sold. Go we to him.

Third Sold. Awake, sir, awake; speak to us.

Sec. Sold. Hear you, sir?

First Sold. The hand of death hath fraught

him. [Drums afar off.] Hark! the drums

Demurely wake the sleepers. Let us bear him

To the court of guard; he is of note: our hour

Is fully out.

Third Sold. Come on, then;

He may recover yet. [Exeunt with the body.

Scene XI. Another part of the same.

Enter Caesar, and his Army.

Cas. But being charged, we will be still by land,

Which, as I take't, we shall; for his best force
Is forth to man his galleys. To the vailes,

And hold our best advantage. [Exeunt.

Scene XII. Another part of the same.

Enter Antony and Scarus.

Ant. Yet they are not join'd: where yond

pine does stand,

I shall discover all: I'll bring thee word

Straight, how 'tis like to go. [Exit.]

Scar. Swallows have built

In Cleopatra's sails their nests: the augurers

Say they know not, they cannot tell; look grimly,

And dare not speak their knowledge. Antony

Is valiant, and dejected; and, by starts,

His fretted fortunes give him hope, and fear,

Of what he has, and has not.

[Alarm afar off, as at a sea-fight.

Re-enter Antony.

Ant. All is lost!

This foul Egyptian hath betrayed me:

My fleet hath yielded to the foe; and yonder

They cast their caps up and carouse together

Like friends long lost, Triple-turn'd where! 'tis thou

Hast sold me to this novice; and my heart

Makes only wars on thee. Bid them all fly;
For when I am revenged upon my charm,
I have done all. Bid them all fly; begone.
[Exit Scarpin.

O sun, thy uprise shall I see no more:
Fortune and Antony part here; even here
Do we shake hands. All come to this? The hearts
That spaniel'd me at heels, to whom I gave Their wishes, do discardy, melt their sweets
On blossoming Caesar; and this pine is bark'd;
That overtopp'd them all. Betray'd I am:
O this false soul of Egypt! this grave charm,—
Whose eye beck'd forth my wars, and call'd them home;
Whose bosom was my crownet, my chief end,—
Like a right gipsy, hath, at fast and loose,
Beguiled me to the very heart of loss.
What, Eros, Eros!

Enter Cleopatra.

Ah, thou spell! Avault! 30
Cleo. Why is my lord enraged against his love?
Ant. Vanish, or I shall give thee thy deserving,
And blemish Caesar's triumph. Let him take thee,
And hoist thee up to the shouting plebeians:
Follow his chariot, like the greatest spot
Of all thy sex; most monster-like, be shown
For poor'st diminutives, for doits: and let Patient Octavia plough thy visage up
With her prepared nails.
[Exit Cleopatra.

'Tis well thou'rt gone,
If it be well to live; but better 'twere
Thou fell'lt into my fury, for one death
Might have prevented many. Eros, ho!
The shirt of Nessus is upon me: teach me,
Alcides, thou mine ancestor, thy rage;
Let me lodge Lichas on the horns of the moon:
And with those hands, that grasp'd the heaviest club,
Subdue my worthiest self. The witch shall die:
To the young Roman boy she hath sold me, and I fall
Under this plot; she dies for't. Eros, ho!
[Exit.

Scene XIII. Alexandria. Cleopatra's palace.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, Iris, and Mardian.

Cleo. Helpme, my women! O, he is more mad
Than Telamon for his shield; the boar of Thessaly
Was never so emboss'd.
Char.
To the monument!
There lock yourself, and send him word you are dead
The soul and body rive not more in parting
Than greatness going off.
Cleo.
To the monument!
Mardian, go tell him I have slain myself;
Say, that the last I spoke was 'Antony,'
And word it, prithee, piteously: hence, Mardian,
And bring me how he takes my death. To the monument!
[Exeunt.

Scene XIV. The same. Another room.

Enter Antony and Eros.

Ant. Eros, thou yet behold'st me?
Eros.
Ay, noble lord.

Ant. Sometime we see a cloud that's dragon ish:
A vapour sometime like a bear or lion,
A tower'd citadel, a pendent rock,
A forked mountain, or blue promontory
With trees upon't, that nod unto the world,
And mock our eyes with air: thou hast seen the signs:
They are black vespers' pageants.

Eros.
Ay, my lord.
Ant. That which is now a horse, even with thought
The rack dislimbs, and makes it indistinct,
As water is in water.
Eros.
It does, my lord.
Ant. My good knave Eros, now thy captain.
Even such a body: here I am Antony;
Yet cannot hold this visible shape, my knave.
I made these wars for Egypt: and the queen,—
Whose heart I thought I had, for she had mine
Which whilst it was mine had annex'd unto't
A million more, now lost,—she, Eros, has Pack'd cards with Caesar, and false-play'd my glory
Unto an enemy's triumph.
Nay, weep not, gentle Eros; there is left us
Ourselves to end ourselves.

Enter Mardian.

O, thy vile lady!
She has robb'd me of my sword.
Mar. No, Antony;
My mistress loved thee, and her fortunes mingle
With thine entirely.
Ant. Hence, saucy eunuch: peace
Mar.
She hath betray'd me and shall die the death.
Ant. Death of one person can be paid but once
And that she has discharged: what thou wouldst
Is done unto thy hand: the last she spoke
Was 'Antony! most noble Antony!'
Then in the midst a tearing gout did break
The name of Antony: it was divided Between her heart and lips: she render'd life,
Thy name so buried in her.
Ant.
Mar.
Dead, then?
Ant. Unarm, Eros; the long day's task is done
And we must sleep. [To Mar.] That thou dost part'st hence safe,
Does pay thy labour richly; go. [Exit Mardian.

Off, pluck off:
The seven-fold shield of Ajax cannot keep
The battery from my heart. O, cleave, my side
Heart, once be stronger than thy continent,
Crack thy frail case! Apace, Eros, apace,
No more a soldier; bruised pieces, go;
You have been nobly borne. From me awhile.
[Exit Eros.

I will o'ertake thee, Cleopatra, and Weep for my pardon. So it must be, for now
All length is torture: since the torch is out,
Lie down, and stay no farther: now all labour
Mars what it does; yea, very force entangles
Itself with strength: seal then, and all is done.
Eros!—I come, my queen:—Eros!—Stay for me
Where souls do cough on flowers, we'll hand hand,
And with our sprightly port make the ghosts gaz
Re-enter Eros.

Eros. What would my lord?

Ant. Since Cleopatra died, have lived in such dishonour, that the gods etest my baseness. I, that with my sword quarter’d the world, and o’er green Neptune’s back, i’th ships made cities, condemn myself to lack he courage of a woman; less noble mind 60 han she which by her death our Caesar tells am conqueror of myself.” Thou art sworn, Eros, hat, when the exigent should come, which now come indeed, when I should see behind me, he inevitable prosecution of disgrace and horror, that, on my command, “I then wouldst kill me; ‘tis the time is come: hou strikest not me, ‘tis Caesar thou defeat’st, ut colour in thy cheek. Eros. The gods withholt me! All I do that which all the Parthian darts, 70 hough enemy, lost aim, and could not. Ant. Eros, o’dst thou be window’d in great Rome and see thy master thus with pleas’d arms, bending down is corrigible shame, whilst the wheel’d seat f fortunate Caesar, drawn before him, branded is baseness that ensued? Eros. I would not see’t.

Ant. Come, then; for with a wound must I be cured.

raw that thy honest sword, which thou hast worn, lost useful for thy country. Eros. O, sir, pardon me! 80 When I did make thee free, sworest thou not then o do this when I bade thee? Do it at once; thy precedent services are all ut accidents unpurposed. Draw, and come. Eros. Turn from me, then, that noble countenance, which the vain the pride of the world whole lies. Ant. Lo thee! [Turning from him. Eros. My sword is drawn. Ant. Then let it do at once.

he thing why thou hast drawn it.

Eros. My dear master, my captain, and my emperor, let me say, 90 ere I strike this bloody stroke, farewell. Ant. ’Tis said, man; and farewell. Eros. Farewell, great chief. Shall I strike now? Ant. Now, Eros.

Eros. Why, there then: thus I do escape the sorrow of Antony’s death. [Kills himself. Ant. Thrice-nobler than myself! hou teachest me, O valiant Eros, what should, and thou couldst not. My queen and Eros have by their brave instruction got upon me nobleness in record: but I will be bridgroom in my death, and run into’t 300 s to a lover’s bed. Come, then; and, Eros, thy master dies thy scholar: to do thus [Falling on his sword.

I learn’d of thee. How! not dead? not dead? The guard, ho! O, dispatch me!

Enter Dercetas and Guard.

First Guard. What’s the noise?

Ant. I have done my work ill, friends: O, make an end.

Of what I have begun.

Sec. Guard. The star is fall’n.

First Guard. And time is at his period.

All. Alas, and woe! Ant. Let him that loves me strike me dead.

First Guard. Not I.

Sec. Guard. Nor I.

Third Guard. Nor any one. [Exeunt Guard.

Der. Thy death and fortunes bid thy followers fly. This sword but shown to Caesar, with this tidings, Shall enter me with him.

Enter Diomedes.

Dio. Where’s Antony?

Der. Here, Diomed there.

Dio. Lives he?

Wilt thou not answer, man? [Exit Dercetas.

Ant. Art thou there, Diomed? Draw thy sword, and give me Sufficing strokes for death.

Dio. Most absolute lord,

My mistress Cleopatra sent me to thee.

Ant. When did she send thee?

Dio. Now, my lord.

Ant. Where is she?

Dio. Lock’d in her monument. She had a prophesying fear Of what hath come to pass: for when she saw— Which never shall be found—you did suspect She had disposed with Caesar, and that your rage Would not be purged, she sent you word she was dead; But, fearing since how it might work, hath sent Me to proclaim the truth; and I am come, I dread, too late.

Ant. Too late, good Diomed: call my guard, I prithee.

Dio. What, ho, the emperor’s guard! The guard, what, ho! Come, your lord calls!

Enter four or five of the Guard of Antony.

Ant. Bear me, good friends, where Cleopatra bides;

’Tis the last service that I shall command you.

First Guard. Woe, woe are we, sir, you may not live to wear All your true followers out.

All. Most heavy day!

Ant. Nay, good my fellows, do not please sharp fate

To grace it with your sorrows: bid that welcome

Which comes to punish us, and we punish it

Seeming to bear it lightly. ’Take me up:
I have led you oft: carry me now, good friends, And have my thanks for all.

[Exeunt, bearing Antony.]
ACT IV.

SCENE XV. The same. A monument.

Enter Cleopatra, and her maids aloft, with Charmian and Iras.

Cleo. O Charmian, I will never go from hence. Charm. Be comforted, dear madam. Cleo. No, I will not: All strange and terrible events are welcome, but comforts we despise; our size of sorrow, Proportion'd to our cause, must be as great As that which makes it.

Enter, below, Antony, borne by the Guard.

Cleo. O sun, Burn the great sphere thou movest in! darkling stand The varying shore o' the world. O Antony, Antony! Antony! Help, Charmian, help, Iras, help: Help, friends below; let's draw him hither. Ant. Peace! Not Caesar's valour hath o'erthrown Antony, But Antony's hath triumph'd on itself. Cleo. So it should be, that none but Antony Should conquer Antony; but woe 'tis so! Ant. I am dying, Egypt, dying: only I here importune death awhile, until Of many thousand kisses the poor last I lay upon thy lips. Cleo. I dare not, dear,— Dear my lord, pardon,—I dare not, lest I be taken: not the imperious show Of the full-fortuned Caesar ever shall Be brooch'd with me; if knife, drugs, serpents, have Edge, sting, or operation, I am safe: Your wife Octavia, with her modest eyes And still accasion, shall acquire no honour Demuring upon me. But come, come, Antony,— Help me, my women,—we must draw thee up: Assist, good friends.

Ant. O, quick, or I am gone. Cleo. Here's sport indeed! How heavy weighs my lord! Our strength is all gone into heaviness, That makes the weight: had I great Juno's power, The strong-wing'd Mercury should fetch thee up, And set thee by Jove's side. Yet come a little,— Wishers were ever fools,—O, come, come, come; [They leave Antony aloft to Cleopatra. And welcome, welcome! I die where thou hast lived: Quicken with kissing: had my lips that power, Thus would I wear them out.

All. A heavy sight! Ant. I am dying, Egypt, dying: Give me some wine, and let me speak a little. Cleo. No, let me speak; and let me rail so high, That the false housewife Fortune break her wheel, Provoked by my offence.

[ACT V.

Enter Caesar, Agrippa, Dolabella, Mechanas, Gallus, Proculeius, and others, to council of war.

Ces. Go to him, Dolabella, bid him yield: Being so frustrate, tell him he mocks
ACT I.

SCENE I. Rome. A room in the monastery.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, and Iras.

Cleo. My desolation does begin to make
Of thy intents desires instruction,
That she preparedly may frame herself
To the way she's forced to.

Ces. Bid her have good heart:
She soon shall know of us, by some of ours,
How honourable and how kindly we Determine for her; for Caesar cannot live
To be ungentle.

Egypt. So the gods preserve thee! [Exit.]

Ces. Come hither, Proculius. Go and say,
We purpose her no shame; give her what comforts
The quality of her passion shall require,
Lest, in her greatness, by some mortal stroke
She do defeat us; for her life in Rome
Would be eternal in our triumph: go,
And with your speediest bring us what she says,
And how you find of her.

Pro. Caesar, I shall. [Exit.

Ces. Gallus, go you along. [Exit Gallus.

Where's Dolabella,
To second Proculius?

All. Dolabella!

Ces. Let him alone, for I remember now
How he's employ'd: he shall in time be ready.
Go with me to my tent; where you shall see
How hardly I was drawn into this war;
How calm and gentle I proceeded still
In all my writings: go with me, and see What I can show in this.

[Exeunt.

SCENE II. Alexandria. A room in the monastery.

Enter Cleopatra, Charmian, and Iras.

Cleo. My desolation does begin to make
A better life. 'Tis paltry to be Caesar;
Not being Fortune, he's but Fortune's knave,
A minister of her will: and it is great
To do that thing that ends all other deeds;
Which shackles accidents and bolt's up change;
Which sleeps, and never palates more the dug,
The beggar's nurse and Caesar's.

Enter, to the gates of the monument, Proculius, Gallus, and Soldiers.

Pro. Caesar sends greeting to the Queen of Egypt;
And bids thee study on what fair demands
Thou mean'st to have him grant thee.

Cleo. What's thy name?

Pro. My name is Proculius.

Cleo. Antony
Did tell me of you, bade me trust you; but I do not greatly care to be deceived,
That have no use for trusting. If your master
Would have a queen his beggar, you must tell him,
That majesty, to keep decorum, must
No less beg than a kingdom: if he please
To give me conquer'd Egypt for my son,
He gives me so much of mine own, as I
Will kneel to him with thanks.

Pro. Be of good cheer;
You're fall'n into a princely hand, fear nothing:
Make your full reference freely to my lord,
Who is so full of grace, that it flows over
On all that need: let me report to him
Your sweet dependency; and you shall find
A conqueror that will pray in aid for kindness,
Where he for grace is kneel'd to.
Pray you, tell him
I am his fortune’s vassal, and I send him
The greatness he has got. I hourly learn
A doctrine of obedience; and would gladly
Look him in the face.

Pro. This I’ll report, dear lady.

Have comfort, for I know your plight is pitied
Of him that caused it.

Gal. You see how easily she may be surprised;

[Here Proculius and two of the Guard ascend the monument by a ladder placed against a window, and, having descended, come behind Cleopatra. Some of the Guard unbar and open the gates.

[To Proculius and the Guard] Guard her till Cæsar come.

Iras. Royal queen!

Char. O Cleopatra! thou art taken, queen.

Cleo. Quick, quick, good hands.

[Drawing a dagger.] Do not yourself such wrong, who are in this Relieved, but not betray’d.

Cleo. What, of death too,
That rids our dogs of languish?

Pro. Cleopatra,
Do not abuse my master’s bounty by
The undoing of yourself: let the world see
His nobleness well acted, which your death
Will never let come forth.

Cleo. Where art thou, death?
Come hither, come! come, come, and take a queen.
Worth many babes and beggars!

Pro. O, temperance, lady!

Cleo. Sir, I will eat no meat, I’ll not drink, sir;
If idle talk will once be necessary,
I’ll not sleep neither: this mortal house I’ll ruin,
O Cæsar what he can.

Know, sir, that I
Will not wait pinion’d at your master’s court;
Nor once be chastised with the sober eye
Of dull Octavia. Shall they hoist me up
And show me to the shining varlety
Of censoring Rome? Rather a ditch in Egypt
Be gentle grave unto me: rather on Nilus’ mud
Lay me stark naked, and let the water-flies Blow me into abhorring! rather make
My country’s high pyramids my gibbet,
And hang me up in chains!

Pro. You do extend These thoughts of horror further than you shall Find cause in Cæsar.

Enter DOLABELLA.

Dol. Proculius,
What thou hast done thy master Cæsar knows,
And he hath sent for thee: for the queen,
I’ll take her to my guard.

Pro. So, Dolabella,
It shall content me best: be gentle to her.

[To Cleo.] To Cæsar I will speak what you shall please,
If you’ll employ me to him.

Cleo. Say, I would die.

[Exeunt Proculius and Soldiers.

Dol. Most noble empress, you have heard of me?

Cleo. I cannot tell.

Dol. Assuredly you know me.

Cleo. No matter, sir, what I have heard known.

You laugh when boys or women tell their dream?

Dol. I understand not, madam.

Cleo. I dream’d there was an Emperor Anto
O, such another sleep, that I might see
But such another man!

Dol. If it might please ye—

Cleo. His face was as the heavens;

therein stuck
A sun and moon, which kept their course, ill lighted
The little O, the earth.

Dol. Most sovereign creature

Cleo. His legs besmirch the ocean: his rear’d
Crested the world: his voice was proportion’d
As all the tuned spheres, and that to friends;
But when he meant to quail and shake the earth
He was as rattling thunder. For his bounty,
There was no winter in’t; an autumn twas
That gave the more by reap’d; his delights
Were dolphin-like: they show’d his back abo
The element they lived in: in his livery
Walk’d crowns and crownets; realms and isles were
As plates dropp’d from his pocket.

Dol. Cleopatra!

Cleo. Think you there was, or might be, s man
As this I dream’d of?

Dol. Gentle madam, no.

Cleo. You lie, up to the hearing of the gods.
But, if there be, or ever were, one such,
It’s past the size of dreaming: nature wants
To vie strange forms with fancy: yet, to imagine
An Antony, were nature’s piece ‘gainst fancy Condemning shadows quite.

Dol. Hear me, good madam. Your loss is as yourself, great; and you bear
As answering to the weight: who would I might no
O’ertake pursued success, but I do feel,
By the rebound of yours, a grief that smites
My very heart at root.

Cleo. I thank you, sir.
Know you what Cæsar means to do with me?

Dol. I am loath to tell you what I would know.

Cleo. Nay, pray you, sir,—

Dol. Though he be honourable.

Cleo. He’ll lead me on, then, in triumph?

Dol. Madam, he will: I know’t.

Flourish, and shout within. ‘Make way for Enter Cæsar, Gallus, Proculius, Menas, Seleucus, and others of his Train.

Cæs. Which is the Queen of Egypt?

Dol. It is the emperor, madam.

Cleopatra knows

Cæs. Arise, you shall not kneel:
I pray you, rise; rise, Egypt.

Cleo. Sir, the gods
Will have it thus; my master and my lord
I must obey.

Cæs. Take to you no hard thoughts:
The record of what injuries you did us,
Though written in our flesh, we shall remember,
As things but done by chance.
ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

Cleo. Sole sir o' the world, canst thou project mine own cause so well as to make it clear; but dost thou confess I have been laden with like frailties which before we have often shamed our sex.

Cas. Cleopatra, know, e will extenuate rather than enforce: you apply yourself to our intents, high towards you are most gentle, you shall find benefit in this change: but if you seek to lay on me a cruelty, by taking Antony's course, you shall bereave yourself my good purposes, and put your children to destruction which I'll guard them from, thereon you rely. I'll take my leave.

Cleo. And may, through all the world: 'tis yours; and we, our scutcheons and your signs of conquest, shall hang in what place you please. Here, my good lord.

Cas. You shall advise me in all for Cleopatra.

Cleo. This is the brief of money, plate, and jewels, I possess'd of: 'tis exactly valued; it petty things admitted. Where's Seleucus?

Sel. Here, madam.

Cleo. This is my treasurer: let him speak, my lord, on his peril, that I have reserved myself nothing. I speak the truth, Seleucus.

Sel. Madam, had rather seal my lips, than, to my peril, speak that which is not.

Cleo. What have I kept back? Enough to purchase what you have made known.

Cas. Nay, blush not, Cleopatra; I approve your wisdom in the deed.

Cleo. See, Caesar! O, behold, my pomp is follow'd! mine will now be yours; and, should we shift estates, yours would be mine. egratitude of this Seleucus does en me make me wild: O slave, of no more trust an love that's hired! What, goest thou back? thou shalt back, I warrant thee; but I'll catch thine eyes, though they had wings: slave, soulless villain, dog! rarely base!

Cleo. Good queen, let us entreat you.

Cleo. O Caesar, what a wounding shame is this, at thou, vouchsafing here to visit me, taking the honour of thy lordliness one so meek, that mine own servant should reel the sum of my disgraces by dition of his envy! Say, good Caesar, at I some lady trifles have reserved, moment toys, things of such dignity we greet modern friends withal; and say, me nobler token I have kept apart: Livia and Octavia, to induce their mediation; must I be unfolded? one that I have bred! The gods! it smites meneath the fall I have. [To Seleucus] Prithee, I shall show the cinders of my spirits

Through the ashes of my chance: wert thou a man, Thou wouldst have mercy on me.

Cas. Forbear, Seleucus. [Exit Seleucus.

Cleo. Be it known, that we, the greatest, are mithought For things that others do; and, when we fail, We answer others' merits in our name, Are therefore to be pitied.

Cas. Cleopatra, Not what you have reserved, nor what acknowledged, Put we i' the roll of conquest: still be 't yours, Bestow it at your pleasure; and believe, Caesar's mercies, that make prize with you Of things that merchants sold. Therefore be cheer'd; Make not your thoughts your prisons: no, dear queen; For we intend so to dispose you as Yourself shall give us counsel. Feed, and sleep: Our care and pity is so much upon you, What we remain your friend; and so, adieu.

Cleo. My master, and my lord!

Cas. Not so. Adieu. [Flourish. Exeunt Caesar and his train.]

Iras. Finish, good lady; the bright day is done, And we are for the dark.

Cleo. Hie thee again;
I have spoke already, and it is provided; Go put it to the haste.

Char. Madam, I will,

Re-enter Dolabella.

Dol. Where is the queen?

Char. Behold, sir. [Exit.]

Dol. Madam, as thereto sworn by your command, Which my love makes religion to obey, I tell you this: Caesar through Syria (attends his journey; and within three days You with your children will be send before; Make your best use of this: I have perform'd Your pleasure and my promise.

Dol. I shall remain your debtor.

Dol. I your servant.

Adieu, good queen; I must attend on Caesar.

Cleo. Farewell, and thanks. [Exit Dolabella.

Iras. Now, Iras, what think'st thou? Thou, an Egyptian puppet, shalt be shown In Rome, as well as I: mechanic slaves With greasy aprons, rules, and hammers, shall Uplift us to the view; in their thick breaths, Rank of gross diet, shall we be enclosed, And forced to drink their vapours.

Iras. The gods forbid!

Cleo. Nay, 'tis most certain, Iras: saucy factors Will catch at us, like strumpets; and scald rhymer Ballad us out o' tune: the quick comedians, Extemporally will stage us, and present.
ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

Our Alexandrian revels; Antony
Shall be brought drunken forth, and I shall see
Some squeaking Cleopatra boy my greatness 220
I' the posture of a whore.

Iras. O the good gods!

Cleo. Nay, that's certain.

Iras. I'll never see 't; for, I am sure, my nails
Are stronger than mine eyes.

Cleo. Why, that's the way
To fool their preparation, and to conquer
Their most absurd intents.

Enter a Guardsman.

Guard. Here is a rural fellow
That will not be denied your highness' presence;
He brings you figs.

Cleo. Let him come in. [Exit Guardsman.

What poor an instrument
May do a noble deed! he brings me liberty.
My resolution's placed, and I have nothing
Of woman in me: now from head to foot
I am marble-constant; now the fleeting moon 240
No planet is of mine.

Re-enter Guardsman, with Clown bringing in a basket.

Guard. This is the man.

Cleo. Avoid, and leave him.

[Exit Guardsman.

Hast thou the pretty worm of Nilus there,
That kills and pains not?

Clown. Truly, I have him: but I would not be the party that should desire you to touch him, for his biting is immortal; those that do die of it do seldom or never recover.

Cleo. Rememberest thou any that have died
on't?

Clown. Very many, men and women too.
I heard of one of them no longer than yesterday:
a very honest woman, but something given to lie:
as a woman should not do, but in the way of honesty:
how she died of the biting of it, what pain she felt:
truly, she makes a very good report of the worm:
but he that will believe all that they say, shall never be saved by half that they do: but this is most fallible, the worm's an odd worm.

Cleo. Get thee hence; farewell.

Clown. I wish you all joy of the worm. [Setting down his basket.

Cleo. Farewell.

Clown. You must think this, look you, that the worm will do his kind.

Cleo. Ay, ay; farewell.

Clown. Look you, the worm is not to be trusted but in the keeping of wise people; for indeed, there is no goodness in the worm.

Cleo. Take thou no care; it shall be heede

Clown. Very good. Give it nothing, I pray you, for it is not worth the feeding.

Cleo. Will it eat me?

Clown. You must not think I am so sim but I know the devil himself will not eat woman: I know that a woman is a dish for gods, if the devil dress her not. But, true these same whoreson devils do the gods great harm in their women; for in every ten that ten make, the devils mar five.

Cleo. Well, get thee gone; farewell.

Clown. Yes, forsooth: I wish you joy of Cleo. [A guardsman, crown &c.

Re-enter IRAS with a robe, crown, &c.

Cleo. Give me my robe, put on my crown
I have
Immortal longings in me: now no more
The juice of Egypt's grape shall moist this lip
Yare, yare, good Iras, quick. Methinks I h
Antony call; I see him rouse himself.

To praise my noble act! I hear him mock
The luck of Caesar, which the gods give men
To excuse their after wrath: husband, I come
Now to that name my courage prove my title:
I am fire and air; my other elements
I give to baser life. So; have you done?
Come then, and take the last warmth of my life.
Farewell, kind Charmian; Iras, long farewell

[Exeunt. Clouds.

Have I the aspic in my lips? Dost fall?
If thou and nature can so gently part,
The stroke of death is as a lover's pinch,
Which hurts, and is desired. Dost thou lie still?
If thou dost vanish, thou tell'st the world
It is not worth leave-taking.

Char. Dissolve, thick cloud, and rain; the may say,
The gods themselves do weep!

Cleo. This proves me bad
If she first meet the curled Antony,
He'll make demand of her, and spend that kiss
Which is my heaven to have. Come, thou mis tal wretch,

[To an asp, which she applies to her breast.

With thy sharp teeth this knot intrinsicate
Of life at once untie: poor venomous fool,
Be angry, and dispatch. O, couldst thou scape
That I might hear thee call great Caesar ass Unkindled!

Char. O eastern star!

Cleo. Peace, peace!

Dost thou not see my baby at my breast,
That sucketh the nurse asleep?

Char. O, break! O, break!

Cleo. As sweet as balm, as soft as air,

[Applying another asp to her arm.

gentle,—

O Antony!—Nay, I will take thee too:—

[Exeunt.

What should I stay—

Char. In this vile world? So, fare thee well.

Now boast thee, death, in thy possession lies
A last unparalleled. Downy windows, close;
And golden Phoebus never be beheld
Of eyes again so royal! Your crown's awry;
I'll mend it, and then play.
Enter the Guard, rushing in.

First Guard. Where is the queen?
Char. Speak softly, wake her not.

First Guard. Caesar hath sent—Char. Too slow a messenger.
[Applies an asp.

come apace, dispatch! I partly feel thee.

First Guard. Approach, ho! All's not well:—
Caesar's beguiled.

Sec. Guard. There's Dolabella sent from Caesar; call him.

First Guard. What work is here! Charmian, is this well done?

Char. It is well done, and fitting for a princess sceded of so many royal kings.
330 soldier!
[Dies.

Re-enter Dolabella.

Dol. How goes it here?

Sec. Guard. All dead.

Dol. Caesar, thy thoughts uch their effects in this; thyself art coming see perform'd the dreaded act which thou sought'st to hinder.

[Within 'A way there, a way for Caesar!'

e-enter Caesar and all his train, marching.

Dol. O sir, you are too sure an augurer;
at you did fear is done.

Ces. Bravest at the last,
I level'd at our purposes, and, being royal,
ok her own way. The manner of their deaths?
nt see them bleed.

Dol. Who was last with them?

First Guard. A simple countryman, that brought her figs:

This was his basket.

Ces. Poison'd, then.

First Guard. O Caesar,
This Charmian lived but now; she stood and spoke:

I found her trimming up the diadem
On her dead mistress; tremulously she stood
And on the sudden dropp'd.

Ces. O noble weakness!
If they had swallow'd poison, 'twould appear
By external swelling: 'tis she looks like sleep,
As she would catch another Antony
350
In her strong toil of grace.

Dol. Here, on her breast,
There is a vent of blood and something blown:
The like is on her arm.

First Guard. This is an aspic's trail: and these fig-leaves
Have slime upon them, such as the aspic leaves
Upon the caves of Nile.

Ces. Most probable
That so she died: for her physician tells me
She hath pursued conclusions infinite
Of easy ways to die. Take up her bed;
And bear her women from the monument:
360
She shall be buried by her Antony:
No grave upon the earth shall clip in it
A pair so famous. High events as these Strike those that make them; and their story is No less in pity than his glory which Brought them to be lamented. Our army shall
In solemn show attend this funeral;
And then to Rome. Come, Dolabella, see
High order in this great solemnity.
[Exeunt.

Apparitions.

SCENE: Britain; Rome.

ACT I.

SCENE I. Britain. The garden of Cymbeline's palace.

Enter two Gentlemen.

First Gent. You do not meet a man but twains; our bloods
No more obey the heavens than our courtiers
Still seem as does the king.

Sec. Gent. But what's the matter?
First Gent. His daughter, and the heir of 's kingdom, whom
He supposed to his wife's sole son—a widow
That late he married—that refer'd herself
Unto a poor but worthy gentleman: she's wedded;
Her husband banish'd; she imprison'd: all
Is outward sorrow; though I think the king
Be touch'd at very heart.

Sec. Gent. None but the king? to
First Gent. He that hath lost her too; so is the queen,
That most desired the match; but not a courtier,
Although they wear their faces to the bent
Of the king's looks, hath a heart that is not Glad at the thing they scowl at.

Sec. Gent. And why so?
First Gent. He that hath miss'd the princess is a thing
Too bad for bad report: and he that hath her—
I mean, that married her, alack, good man!
And therefore banish'd—is a creature such
As, to seek through the regions of the earth
For one his like, there would be something failing
In him that should compare. I do not think So fair an outward and such stuff within Endows a man but he.

Sec. Gent. You speak him far.
First Gent. I do extend him, sir, within himself, Crush him together rather than unfold
His measure duly.

Sec. Gent. What's his name and birth
First Gent. I cannot delve to the root his father,
Was call'd Sicilius, who did join his honour
Against the Romans with Cassibelen,
But had his titles by Tenantius whom
He served with glory and admired success,
So gain'd the sur-addition Leonatus;
And had, besides this gentleman in question,
Two other sons, who in the wars of the time
Died with their swords in hand; for which the father,
Then old and fond of issue, took such sorrow
That he quit being, and his gentle lady,
Big of this gentleman our theme, deceased
As he was born. The king he takes the babe
To his protection, calls him Posthumus Leonatus Breeds him and makes him of his bed-chamber,
Puts to him all the learnings that his time
Could make him the receiver of; which he too
As we do air, fast 'as twas minister'd,
And in's spring became a harvest, lived in course
Which rare it is to do—most praised, most loved
A sample to the youngest, to the more mature
A glass that feated them, and to the graver
A child that guided dotards; to his mistress,
For whom he now is banish'd, her own price
Proclaims how she esteem'd him and his virtue
By her election may be truly read
What kind of man he is.

Sec. Gent. I honour him
Even out of your report. But, pray you, tell me
Is she sole child to the king?

First Gent. His only child.
He had two sons: if this be worth your hearing,
Mark it: the eldest of them at three years old
I' the swathing-clothes the other, from their infancy
Wore to 's stool, and to this hour no guess in knowledge
Which way they went.
Scene I.

Cymbeline.

Sec. Gent. How long is this ago?
First Gent. Some twenty years.
Sec. Gent. That a king's children should be so convey'd, so slackly guarded, and the search so slow, that could not trace them!
First Gent. Howsoever 'tis strange, or that the negligence may well be laugh'd at, 'tis it true, sir.
Sec. Gent. I do well believe you.
First Gent. We must forbear: here comes the gentleman, the queen, and princess. [Exeunt.

Enter Queen, Posthumus, and Imogen.

Queen. No, be assured you shall not find me, daughter, after the slander of most stepmothers, will-eyed unto you: you're my prisoner, but our gaoler shall deliver you the keys that lock up your restraint. For you, Posthumus, o soon as I can win the offended king, will be known your advocate: marry, yet he fire of rage is in him, and 'twere good ou lean'd unto his sentence with what patience our wisdom may inform you.

Post. Please your highness, will from hence to-day.

Queen. You know the peril, 80 If fetch a turn about the garden, pitying he pangs of barr'd affection, though the king ath charged you should not speak together. [Exit.

Imo. O assembling courtesy! How fine this tyrant in tickle where she wounds! My dearest husband, something fear my father's wrath; but nothing—ways reserved my holy duty—what is rage can do on me: you must be gone; ad I shall here abide the hourly shot angry eyes, not comforted to live, 90 that there is this jewel in the world at may I see again.

Post. My queen! my mistress! lady, weep no more, lest I give cause be suspected of more tenderness an doth become a man. I will remain e loyalst husband that did e'er plight troth: residence in Rome at one Philario's, to my father was a friend, to me own but by letter: thither write, my queen, d with mine eyes I'll drink the words you send, ou ink be made of gall.

Re-enter Queen.

Queen. Be brief, I pray you: 101 he king come, I shall incur I know not w much of his displeasure. [Aside] Yet I'll move him walk this way: I never do him wrong, he does buy my injuries, to be friends; 110 dears for my offences. [Exit.

Post. Should we be taking leave long a term as yet we have to live, loathness to depart would grow. Adieu! 120

Queen. Nay, stay a little: you but treading forth to air yourself, parting were too petty. Look here, love; This diamond was my mother's: take it, heart; But keep it till you woo another wife, When Imogen is dead.

Post. How, how! another? You gentle gods, give me but this I have, And sear up my embracings from a next With bonds of death! [Putting on the ring.] Remain, remain thou here While sense can keep it on. And, sweetest, fairest, As I my poor self did exchange for you, To your so infinite loss, so in our trifles 120 I still win of you: for my sake wear this; It is a manacle of love: I'll place it Upon this fairest prisoner.

[Putting a bracelet upon her arm.

Imo. O the gods! 129

When shall we see again?

Enter Cymbeline and Lords.

Post. Alack, the king!

Cym. Thou basest thing, avoid! hence, from my sight!

If after this command thou fraught the court With thy unworthiness, thou diest away: Thou'rt poison to my blood.

Post. The gods protect you! And bless the good remainders of the court! I am gone. [Exit.

Imo. There cannot be a pinch in death 130 More sharp than this.

Cym. O disloyal thing, That shouldst repair my youth, thou heap'st A year's age on me.

Imo. I beseech you, sir, Harm not yourself with your vexation; I am senseless of your wrath; a touch more rare Subdues all pangs, all fears.

Cym. Past grace? obedience? Imo. Past hope, and in despair; that way, past grace.

Cym. That mightst have had the sole son of my queen!

Imo. O blest, that I might not! I chose an eagle, And did avoid a puttock. 140

Cym. Thou took'st a beggar; would'st have made my throne A seat for baseness.

Imo. No; I rather added A lustre to it.

Cym. Thou o vile one!

Imo. Sir, It is your fault that I have loved Posthumus: You bred him as my playfellow, and he is A man worth any woman, overbears me Almost the sum he pays.

Cym. What, art thou mad? Imo. Almost, sir; heaven restore me! Would I were A neat-herd's daughter, and my Leonatus Our neighbour shepherd's son!

Cym. Thou foolish thing! 150

Re-enter Queen.

They were again together: you have done Not after our command. Away with her, And pen her up.

Queen. Beseech your patience. Peace, Dear lady daughter, peace! Sweet sovereign, Leave us to ourselves; and make yourself some comfort.
Out of your best advice.

Cym. Nay, let her languish.
A drop of blood a day; and, being aged,
Die of this folly! [Exit Cymbeline and Lords.

Queen. Fie! you must give way.

Enter Pisanio.

Here is your servant. How now, sir! What news?

Pis. My lord your son drew on my master.

Queen. No harm, I trust, is done?

Pis. There might have been,
But that my master rather play’d than fought
And had no help of anger: they were parted
By gentlemen at hand.

Queen. Imo. Your son’s my father’s friend; he takes his part.
To draw upon an exile! O brave sir!
I would they were in Afric both together;
Myself by with a needle, that I might prick
The goer-back. Why came you from your master?

Pis. On his command; he would not suffer me
To bring him to the haven: left these notes
Of what commands I should be subject to,
When’t pleased you to employ me.

Queen. This hath been
Your faithful servant: I dare lay mine honour
He will remain so.

Pis. I humbly thank your highness.
Queen. Pray, walk awhile.

Imo. About some half-hour hence, I pray you, speak with me: you shall at least Go see my lord aboard: for this time leave me.

[Exeunt.

Scene II. The same. A public place.

Enter Cloten and two Lords.

First Lord. Sir, I would advise you to shift a shirt; the violence of action hath made you reek as a sacrifice: where air comes out, air comes in:
there’s none abroad so wholesome as that you vent.

Clo. If my shirt were bloody, then to shift it.
Have I hurt him?

Sec. Lord. [Aside] No,’t faith; not so much as his patience.

First Lord. Hurt him! his body’s a passable carcass, if he be not hurt: it is a throughfare for steel, if it be not hurt.

Sec. Lord. [Aside] His steel was in debt; it went o’ the backside the town.

Clo. The villain would not stand me.

Sec. Lord. [Aside] No; but he fled forward still, toward your face.

First Lord. Stand you! You have land enough of your own: but he added to your having; gave you some ground.

Sec. Lord. [Aside] As many inches as you have oceans. Puppies!

Clo. I would they had not come between us.

Sec. Lord. [Aside] So would I, till you had measured how long a fool you were upon the ground.
Enter a Lady.
Lady. The queen, madam, Desires your highness' company.

Imo. Those things I bid you do, get them dispatch'd.
I will attend the queen.

Pis. Madam, I shall. [Exeunt. 40

Scene IV. Rome. Philario's house.
Enter Philario, Iachimo, a Frenchman, a Dutchman, and a Spaniard.

Iach. Believe it, sir, I have seen him in Britain: he was then of a crescent note, expected to prove so worthy as since he hath been allowed the name of; but I could then have looked on him without the help of admiration, though the catalogue of his endowments had been tabled by his side and I to peruse him by items.

Phi. You speak of him when he was less furnished than now he is with that which makes him both without and within, 10

French. I have seen him in France: we had very many there could behold the sun with as firm eyes as he.

Iach. This matter of marrying his king's daughter, wherein he must be weighed rather by her value than his own, words him, I doubt not, a great deal from the matter.

French. And then his banishment.

Iach. Ay, and the approbation of those that weep this lamentable divorce under her colours are wonderfully to extend him; be it but to forfify her judgement, which else an easy battery might lay flat, for taking a beggar without less quality. But how comes it he is to sojourn with you? How creeps acquaintance?

Phi. His father and I were soldiers together; to whom I have been often bound for no less than my life. Here comes the Briton: let him be so entertained amongst you as suits, with gentlemen of your knowing, to a stranger of his quality. 30

Enter Posthumus.
I beseech you all, be better known to this gentleman: whom I commend to you as a noble friend of mine: how worthy he is I will leave to appear hereafter, rather than story him in my own hearing.

French. Sir, we have known together in Orleans.

Post. Since when I have been debtor to you or courtesies, which I will be ever to pay and yet 40

Phi. still.

French. Sir, you o'er-rate my poor kindness: I was glad I did lone my countryman and you; but had been pity you should have been put together with so mortal a purpose as then each bore, upon importance of so slight and trivial a nature.

Post. By your pardon, sir, I was then a young ravereller, rather shunned to go even with what I had rather than in my every action to be guided by others' experiences: but upon my mended judgment—if I offend not to say it is mended—my quarrel was not altogether slight.

French. Faith, yes, to be put to the arbitrement of swords, and by such two that would by ill likelihood have confounded one the other, or have fallen both.

Iach. Can we, with manners, ask what was the difference?

French. Safely, I think: 'twas a contention in public, which may, without contradiction, suffer the report. It was much like an argument that fell out last night, where each of us fell in praise of our country mistresses; this gentleman at that time vouching—and upon warrant of bloody affirmation—his to be more fair, virtuous, wise, chaste, constant-qualified and less attemptable than any the rarest of our ladies in France.

Iach. That lady is not now living, or this gentleman's opinion by this worn out.

Post. She holds her virtue still and I my mind.

Iach. You must not so far prefer her 'fore ours of Italy.

Post. Being so far provoked as I was in France, I would abate her nothing, though I profess myself her adorer, not her friend.

Iach. As fair and as good—a kind of hand-in-hand comparison—had been something too fair and too good for any lady in Britain. If she had been before others I have seen, as that diamond of yours outshines many I have beheld, I could not but believe she excelled many: but I have not seen the most precious diamond that is, nor you the lady.

Post. I praised her as I rated her: so do I my stone.

Iach. What do you esteem it at?

Post. More than the world enjoys.

Iach. Either your unparagoned mistress is dead, or she's outprized by a trifle.

Post. You are mistaken: the one may be sold, or given, if there were wealth enough for the purchase, or merit for the gift: the other is not a thing for sale, and only the gift of the gods.

Iach. Which the gods have given you?

Post. Which, by their graces, I will keep.

Iach. You may wear her in title yours: but, you know, strange fowl light upon neighbouring ponds. Your ring may be stolen too: so your brace of unprized estimations; the one is but frail and the other casual; a cunning thief, or a that way accomplished courtier, would hazard the winning both of first and last.

Post. Your Italy contains none so accomplished a courtier to convince the honour of my mistress, if, in the holding or loss of that, you term her frail. I do nothing doubt you have store of thieves; notwithstanding, I fear not my ring.

Phi. Let us leave here, gentlemen.

Post. Sir, with all my heart. This worthy signior, I thank him, makes no stranger of me: we are familiar at first.

Iach. With five times so much conversation, I should get ground of your fair mistress, make her go back, even to the yielding, had I admittance and opportunity to friend.

Post. No, no.

Iach. I dare thereupon pawn the moiety of my estate to your ring; which, in my opinion, o'rvalues it something: but I make my wager rather against your confidence than her reputation: and, to bar your offence herein too, I durst attempt it against any lady in the world.

Post. You are a great deal abused in too bold a persuasion; and I doubt not you sustain what you're worthy of by your attempt.

Iach. What's that?

Post. A repulse: though your attempt, as you call it, deserve more; a punishment too.

Phi. Gentlemen, enough of this: it came in too suddenly: let it die as it was born, and, I pray you, be better acquainted.

Iach. Would I had put my estate and my neighbour's on the approbation of what I have spoke!

Post. What lady would you choose to assault?

Iach. Yours; whom in constancy you think stands so safe. I will lay you ten thousand ducats to your ring, that, commend me to the court where your lady is, with no more advantage than the opportunity of a second conference, and I will bring from thence that honour of hers which you imagine so reserved.

Post. I will wage against your gold, gold to it: my ring I hold dear as my finger; 'tis part of it.

Iach. You are afraid, and therein the wiser. If you buy ladies' flesh at a million a dram, you cannot preserve it from tainting: but I see you have some religion in you, that you fear.

Post. This is but a custom in your tongue; you bear a graver purpose, I hope.

Iach. I am the master of my speeches, and would undergo what's spoken, I swear.

Post. Will you? I shall but lend my diamond till your return: let there be covenants drawn between 's: my mistress exceeds in goodness the huggeness of your unworthy thinking: I dare you to this match: here's my ring.

Phi. I will have it no lay.

Iach. By the gods, it is one. If I bring you no sufficient testimony that I have enjoyed the dearest bodily part of your mistress, my ten thousand ducats are yours; so is your diamond too; if I come off, and leave her in such honour as you have trust in, she your jewel, this your jewel, and my gold are yours: provided I have your commendation for my more free entertainment.

Post. I embrace these conditions; let us have articles betwixt us. Only, thus far you shall answer: if you make your voyage upon her and give me directly to understand you have prevailed, I am no further your enemy; she is not worth our debate: if she remain unsueded, you not making it appear otherwise, for your ill opinion and the assault you have made to her chastity you shall answer me with your sword.

Iach. Your hand; a covenant: we will have these things set down by lawful counsel, and straight away for Britain, lest the bargain should catch cold and starve: I will fetch my gold and have our two wagers recorded.

Post. Agreed.

[Exeunt Posthumus and Iachimo.

French. Will this hold, think you?

Phi. Signior Iachimo will not from it. Pray, let us follow 'em.

Scene V. Britain. A room in Cymbeline's palace.

Enter Queen, Ladies, and Cornelius.

Queen. Whiles yet the dew's on ground, gather those flowers;

Make haste: who has the note of them?

First Lady. I, madam.

Queen. Dispatch. [Exeunt Ladies.

Now, master doctor, have you brought those drugs?

Cor. Pleaseth your highness, ay: here they are, madam: [Presenting a small box.

But I beseech your grace, without offence,— My conscience bids me ask—wherefore you have Commanded of me these most poisonous compounds,

Which are the movers of a languishing death; But though slow, deadly!

Queen. I wonder, doctor, 10 Thou ask'st me such a question. Have I not been Thy pupil long? Hast thou not learned me how To make perfumes? distil? preserve? yea, so That our great king himself doth woo me oft For my confections? Having thus far proceeded,— Unless thou think'st me devilish—is't not meet That I did amplify my judgement in Our conclusions? I will try the forces Of these thy compounds on such creatures as We count not worth the hanging, but none human, To try the vigour of them and apply 21 Allayments to their act, and by them gather Their several virtues and effects.

Cor. Your highness Shall from this practice but make hard your heart: Besides, the seeing these effects will be Both noisome and infectious.

Queen. O, content thee.

Enter Pisanio.

[Aside] Here comes a flattering rascal; upon him Will I first work: he's for his master, And enemy to my son. How now, Pisanio! Doctor, your service for this time is ended; 30 Take your own way.

Cor. [Aside] I do suspect you, madam; But you shall do no harm.

Queen. [To Pisanio] Hark thee, a word. Cor. [Aside] I do not like her. She doth think she has Strange lingering poisons: I do know her spirit, And will not trust one of her malice with A drug of such damn'd nature. Those she has Will stupify and dull the sense awhile; Which first, perchance, she'll prove on cats and dogs, Then afterward up higher: but there is No danger in what show of death it makes, 40 More than the locking up the spirits a time, To be more fresh, reviving. She is fool'd With a most false effect: and I the truer, So to be false with her.

Queen. 41 No further service, doctor, Until I send for thee.

Cor. I humbly take my leave. [Exit. Queen. Weeps she still, say'st thou? Dost thou think in time? She will not quench and let instructions enter Where folly now possesses? Do thou work: When thou shalt bring me word she loves my son, I'll tell thee on the instant thou art then As great as thy master, greater, for His fortunes all lie speechless and his name Is at last grasp: return he cannot, nor Continue where he is; to shift his being
Is to exchange one misery with another,
And every day that comes comes to decay
A day's work in him. What shall thou expect,
To be depended on a thing that leans,
Who cannot be new built, nor has no friends,
So much as but to prop him? [The Queen drops the box: Pisanio takes it up.] Thou takest up
Thou know'st not what; but take it for thy labour:
It is a thing I made, which hath the king
Five times redeem'd from death: I do not know
What is more cordial. Nay, I prithee, take it;
It is an earnest of a further good
That I mean to thee. Tell thy mistress how
The case stands with her; do's as from thyself.
Think what a chance thou changest on, but think
Thou hast thy mistress still, to boot, my son,
Who shall take notice of thee: I'll move the king
To any shape of thy preferment such
As thou'st desire; and then myself, I chiefly,
That set thee on to this desert, am bound
To load thy merit richly. Call my women:
Think on my words. [Exit Pisanio.
A sly and constant knave,
Not to be shaked: the agent for his master
And the remembrancer of her to hold
The hand-fast to her lord. I have given him that Which, if he take, shall quite unpeople her
Of liegers for her sweet, and which she after,
Except she bend her humour, shall be assured
To taste of too.

Re-enter PISANIO and Ladies.
So, so: 'tis well done, well done:
The violets, cowslips, and the primroses,
Bear to my closet. Fare thee well, Pisanio;
Think on my words. [Exit Queen and Ladies.
Pis. And shall do:
But when to my good lord I prove untrue,
I'll choke myself: there's all I'll do for you. [Exit.

SCENE VI. The same. Another room in the palace.

Enter IMOGEN.

Imo. A father cruel, and a step-dame false;
A foolish suitor to a wedded lady,
That hath her husband banish'd; —O, that husband!
My supreme crown of grief! and those repeated
Vexations of it! Had I been thief-stol'n,
As my two brothers, happy! but most miserable
Is the desire that's glorious: blest be those,
How mean soe'er, that have their honest wills,
Which seasons comfort. Who may this be? Pife!

Enter PISANIO and IACHIMO.

Pis. Madam, a noble gentleman of Rome, 10
Comes from my lord with letters.
Iach. Change you, madam? The worthy Leonatus is in safety
And greets your highness dearly.

Imo. [Presents a letter.] Thanks, good sir:
You're kindly welcome. [Received.] All of her that is out of door most rich!
If she be furnish'd with a mind so rare,
She is alone the Arabian bird, and I
Have lost the wager. Boldness be my friend!
Arm me, audacity, from head to foot!
Or, like the Parthian, I shall flying fight; 20
Rather, directly fly.

Imo. [Reads] 'He is one of the noblest note,
To whose kindnesses I am most infinitely tied.
Reflect upon him accordingly, as you value your trust—'

Leonatus.
So far I read aloud:
But even the very middle of my heart
Is warm'd by the rest, and takes it thankfully.
You are as welcome, worthy sir, as I
Have words to bid you, and shall find it so 30
In all that I can do.

Iach. Thanks, fairest lady.
What, are men mad? Hath nature given them eyes
To see this vaulted arch, and the rich crop
Of sea and land, which can distinguish 'twixt
The fiery orbs above and the twinn'd stones
Upon the number'd beach? and can we not Partition make with spectacles so precious 'Twixt fair and foul?

Imo. What makes your admiration?
Iach. It cannot be 't the eye, for apes and monkeys;
'Twixt two such shes would chatter this way and Contemn with mowers the other; nor i' the judgement,
For idiots in this case of favour would
Be wisely definite; nor i' the appetite;
Sluttery to such neat excellence opposed
Should make desire vomit emptiness,
Not so allured to feed.

Imo. What, dear sir, 41
Thus raps you? Are you well?
Iach. Thanks, madam; well. [To Pisanio]
Beseech you, sir, desire
My man's abode where I did leave him: he Is strange and peevish.

Pis. I was going, sir,
To give him welcome. [Exit.

Imo. Continues well my lord? His health, beseech you?

Iach. Well, madam.
Imo. Is he disposed to mirth? I hope he is.

Iach. Exceeding pleasant; none a stranger there
So merry and so gamesome: he is call'd
The Briton reveiller.

Imo. When he was here,
He did incline to sadness, and oft-times
Not knowing why.

Iach. I never saw him sad.
There is a Frenchman his companion,
An eminent monsieur, that, it seems, much loves
A Gallian girl at home; he furnaces
The thick sighs from him, whilst the jolly Briton—
Your lord, I mean—laughs from his free lungs, cries 'O, Can my sides hold, to think that man, who
By history, report, or his own proof,
What woman is, yea, what she cannot choose
But must be, will his free hours languish for,
Assured bondage?

Iamo. Will my lord say so?

Iach. Ay, madam, with his eyes in flood with laughter;
It is a recreation to be by
And hear him mock the Frenchman. But, heavens know,
Some men are much to blame.

Iamo. Not he, I hope.

Iach. Not he; but yet heaven's bounty towards him might Be used more thankfully. In himself, 'tis much;
In you, which I account his beyond all talents, so Whilst I am bound to wonder, I am bound
To pity too.

Iamo. What do you pity, sir?

Iach. Two creatures heartily.

Iamo. Am I one, sir?

You look on me; what reck discern you in me
Deserves your pity?

Iach. Lamentable! What,
To hide me from the radiant sun and solace
I* the dungeon by a snuff?

Iamo. I pray you, sir,
Deliver with more openness your answers
To my demands. Why do you pity me?

Iach. That others do—
I was about to say—enjoy your—but
It is an office of the gods to venge it,
Not mine to speak on't.

Iamo. You do seem to know
Something of me, or what concerns me: pray you,
Sincere estimating things go ill often hurts more
Than to be sure they do; for certainties
Either are past remedies, or, timely knowing,
The remedy then born—discover to me
What both you spur and stop.

Iach. Had I this cheek
To bathe my lips upon; this hand, whose touch,
Whose every touch, would force the feeler's soul
To the oath of loyalty; this object, which Takes prisoner the wild motion of mine eye,
Fixing it only here; should I, damn'd then,
Slaver with lips as common as the stairs
That mount the Capitol; join gripes with hands
Made hard with hourly falsehood—falsehood, as
With labour; then by-peeping in an eye
Base and unlustrous as the smoky light
That's fed with stinking tallow; it were fit
That all the plagues of hell should at one time
Encounter such revolt.

Iamo. My lord, I fear,
Has forgot Britain.

Iach. And himself. Not I,
Inclined to this intelligence, pronounce
The beggary of his change; but 'tis your graces
That from my mutest conscience to my tongue
Charms this report out.

Iamo. Let me hear no more.

Iach. O dearest soul! your cause doth strike
my heart
With pity, that doth make me sick. A lady
So fair, and fasten'd to an empery,
Would make the great'st king double,—to be partner'd
With tomboys hired with that self-exhibition
Which your own coffers yield! with diseased ventures
That play with all infirmities for gold
Which rottenness can lend nature! such boil'd stuff
As well might poison poison! Be revenged;
Or she that bore you was no queen, and you
Recoil from your great stock.

Iamo. Revenged!

Iach. How should I be revenged? If this be true,—
As I have such a heart that both mine ears
Must not in haste abuse—if it be true,
How should I be revenged?

Iach. Should he make me live,
Live, like Diana's priest, betwixt cold sheets,
While he is vauluting variable rumps,
In your despite, upon your purse? Revenge it.
I dedicate myself to your sweet pleasure,
More noble than that runagate to your bed,
And will continue fast to your affection,
Still close as sure.

Iamo. What, ho, Pisanio!

Iach. Let me my service tender on your lips.

Iamo. Away! I do condemn mine ears that have
So long attended thee. If thou wert honourable Thou wouldst have told this tale for virtue, not
For such an end thou seek'st,—as base as strange
Thou wrong'st a gentleman, who is as far
From thy report as thou from honour, and Solicit'st here a lady that disdain's
Thee and the devil alike. What ho, Pisanio!
The king my father shall be made acquainted
Of thy assault: if he shall think it fit,
A saucy stranger in his court to mart
As in a Romish stew and to expound
His beastly mind to us, he hath a court
He little cares for and a daughter who
He not respects at all. What ho, Pisanio!

Iach. O happy Leonatus! I may say:
The credit that thy lady hath of thee
Deserves thy trust, and thy most perfect goodness
Her assured credit. Blessed live you long!
A lady to the worthiest sir that ever
Country call'd his! and you his mistress, only
For the most worthiest fit! Give me your pardon
I have spoke this, to know if your affiance
Were deeply rooted; and shall make your lord,
That which he is, new o'er: and he is one
The true manner'd; such a holy witch
That he enchant'st societies into him;
Half all men's hearts are his.

Iamo. You make amends.

Iach. He sits'tmongst men like a descended god
He hath a kind of honour sets him of,
More than a mortal seeming. Be not angry,
Most mighty princess, that I have adventured
To try your taking of a false report; which hath Honour'd with confirmation your great judgment.
In the election of a sir so rare,
Which you know cannot err: the love I bear him,
Made me to fan you thus, but the gods made you
Unlike all others, chaffless. Pray, your pardon.

Iamo. All's well, sir; take my power i' the court for yours.

Iach. My humble thanks. I had almost forgot
To express your grace but in a small request, and Yet of moment too, for it concerns
Cymbeline.

Your lord; myself and other noble friends
Are partners in the business.

I. Pray, what is't?
Jach. Some dozen Romans of us and your

lord.

The best feather of our wing—have mingled sums
To buy a present for the emperor;
Which I, the factor for the rest, have done
In France: 'tis plate of rare device, and jewels
Of rich and exquisite form; their values great;
And I am something curious, being strange, 191
To have them in safe stowage: may it please you
To take them in protection?

Ino. Willingly:
And pawn mine honour for their safety: since
My lord hath interest in them, I will keep them
In my bedchamber.

Jach. They are in a trunk,
Attended by my men: I will make bold
To send them to you, only for this night;
I must aboard to-morrow.

Ino. O, no, no.
Jach. Yes, I beseech; or I shall short my word
By lengthening my return. From Gallia 201
I cross'd the seas on purpose and on promise
To see your grace.

Ino. I thank you for your pains:
But not away to-morrow!

Jach. O, I must, madam:
Therefore I shall beseech you, if you please
To greet your lord with writing, do't to-night:
I have outstayed my time; which is material
To the tender of our present.

Ino. I will write,
Send your trunk to me; it shall safe be kept, 209
And truly yielded you. You're very welcome.

[Exeunt.

ACT II.

Scene I. Britain. Before Cymbeline's palace.

Enter Cloten and two Lords.

Clo. Was there ever man had such luck!
When I kissed the jack, upon an up-const to be hit away! I had a hundred pound on't; and then a whoreson jackanapes must take me up for wearing; as if I borrowed mine oats of him and might not spend them at my pleasure.

First Lord. What got he by that? You have broke his pate with your bowl.

Sec. Lord. [Aside] If his wit had been like him that broke it, it would have run all out. 10
Clo. When a gentleman is disposed to swear, it is not for any standers-by to curtail his oats,
ha?

Sec. Lord. No, my lord; [Aside] nor crop the ears of them.

Clo. Whoreson dog! I give him satisfaction?
Would he had been one of my rank.

Sec. Lord. [Aside] To have smelt like a fool.
Clo. I am not vexed more at any thing in the earth: a pox on't! I had rather not be so noble as I am; they dare not fight with me, because of my son my mother; every Jack-slave hath his bellow of fighting, and I must go up and down like a cock that nobody can match.

Sec. Lord. [Aside] You are cock and capon and you crow, cock, with your comb on.

Scene II. Imogen's bedchamber in Cymbeline's palace: a trunk in one corner of it.

Imogen in bed, reading; a Lady attending.

Imo. Who's there? my woman Helen?

Lady. Please you, madam.

Imo. What hour is it?

Lady. Almost midnight, madam.

Imo. I have read three hours then; mine eyes are weak:
Fold down the leaf where I have left: to bed:
Take not away the taper, leave it burning;
And if thou canst awake by four o' the clock,
I prithee, call me. Sleep hath seized me wholly.

[Exit Lady.

To your protection I commend me, gods.
From fairies and the tempters of the night
Guard me, beseech ye. 19

[Sleeps. Iachne comes from the trunk.

Iach. The crickets sing, and man's o'er-labour'd sense.
Repairs itself by rest. Our Tarquin thus
Did softly press the rushes, and he wak'd
The chastity he wounded: Cytherea,
How bravely thou becomest thy bed, fresh lily,
And whiter than the sheets! That I might touch!
But kiss; one kiss! Rubies unparagon'd,
How dearly they do't! 'Tis her breathing that Perfumes the chamber thus: the flame of the tapers
Bows toward her, and would under-peep her lids,
To see the enclosed lights, now canopied
Under these windows, white and azure laced.
With blue of heaven's own tint. But my design,
To note the chamber: I will write all down:
Such and such pictures; there the window; such
The adornment of her bed; the arras; figures, Why, such and such; and the contents of the story.
Ah, but some natural notes about her body,
Above ten thousand meaner moveables
Would testify, to enrich mine inventory.
O sleep, thou ape of death, lie dull upon her!
And be her sense but as a monument.
Thus in a chapel lying! Come off, come off:

[Taking off her bracelet.
As slippery as the Gordian knot was hard!
'Tis mine; and this will witness outwardly,
As strongly as the conscience does within,
To the madding of her lord. On her left breast
A mole cinque-spotted, like the crimson drops
I the bottom of a cowslip; here's a voucher,
Stronger than ever law could make: this secret
Will force him think I have pick'd the lock and ta'en
The treasure of her honour. No more. To what end?
Why should I write this down, that's riveted,
Screw'd to my memory? She hath been reading late.
The tale of Tereus; here the leaf's turn'd down
Where Philomel gave up. I have enough:
To the trunk again, and shut the spring of it.
Swift, swift, you dragons of the night, that dawning
May bare the raven's eye! I lodge in fear;
Though this is a heavenly angel, hell is here.

One, two, three; time, time!

[Clock strikes.

Scene III. An ante-chamber adjoining Iomogen's apartments.

Enter Clooten and Lords.

First Lord. Your lordship is the most patient man in loss, the most coldest that ever turned up acc.
Clo. It would make any man cold to lose.
First Lord. But not every man patient after the noble temper of your lordship. You are most hot and furious when you win.
Clo. Winning will put any man into courage.
If I could get this foolish Imogen, I should have gold enough. It's almost morning, is't not?

First Lord. Day, my lord.
Clo. I would this music would come: I am advised to give her music o' mornings; they say it will penetrate.

Enter Musicians.

Come on; tune: if you can penetrate her with your fingering, so; we'll try with tongue too: if none will do, let her remain; but I'll never give over. First, a very excellent good-conceited thing after, a wonderful sweet air, with admirable rich words to it: and then let her consider.

Song.

Hark! hark! the lark at heaven's gate sings,
And Phoebus' gins arise,
His steeds to water at those springs
On chaliced flowers that lies;
And winking Mary-buds begin
To ope their golden eyes:
With every thing that pretty is,
My lady sweet, arise:
Arise, arise.

Clo. So, get you gone. If this penetrate, I will consider your music the better: if it do not it is a vice in her ears, which horse-hairs and calves'-guts, nor the voice of unpaved eunuch to boat, can never amend.

[Exeunt Musicians.

Sec. Lord. Here comes the king.

Clo. I am glad I was up so late; for that's the reason I was up so early: he cannot choose but take this service I have done fatherly.

Enter Cymbeline and Queen.

Good morrow to your majesty and to my gracious mother.

Cym. Attend you here the door of our sten daughter?
Will she not forth?

Clo. I have assailed her with music, but she vouchsafes no notice.

Cym. The exile of her spirit is too new;
She hath not yet forgot him: some more time
Must wear the print of his remembrance out,
And then she's yours.

Que. You are most bound to the king
Who lets go by no vantages that may Prefer you to his daughter. Frame yourself
To orderly soliciting, and be friended
With aptness of the season; make denials
Increase your services; so seem as if You were inspired to do those duties which
You tender to her; that you in all obby her,
Save when command to your dismissal tends,
And therein you are senseless.

Clo. Senseless! not so.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. So like you, sir, ambassadors from
Rome;
The one is Caius Lucius.

Cym. A worthy fellow, yet
Albeit he comes on angry purpose now;
But that's no fault of his: we must receive him
According to the honour of his sender;
And towards himself, his goodness forespent on us;
We must extend our notice. Our dear son,
When you have given good morning to your messengers,
Attend the queen and us; we shall have need
To employ you towards this Roman. Come, on Queen.

[Exeunt all but Clooten.

Clo. If she be up, I'll speak with her; if not,
Ay, I am there. I am Cymbeline. This. That's [Exit You A]. You 'Twill say. Still, your

Enter a Lady.
Lady. Who's there that knocks?
Clo. A gentleman.
Lady. Yes, and a gentlewoman's son.
Lady. That's more than some, whose tailors are as dear as yours, an utterly boast of. What's your lordship's pleasure?
Clo. Your lady's person: is she ready?
Lady. Ay, keep her chamber.

Enter Imogen.

Clo. 'Good morrow, fairest: sister, your sweet hand. [Exit Lady.
Imo. Good morrow, sir. You lay out too much pains or purchasing but trouble: the thanks I give saying you that I am poor of thanks of scarce can spare them.
Clo. Still, I swear I love you.
Imo. If you but said so, 'twere as deep with me:
you swear still, your recompense is still
I regard it not.

This is no answer.
Imo. But that you shall not say I yield being silent, could not speak. I pray you, spare me: 'faith, hall unfold equal discountseyour best kindness: one of your great knowing cold learn, being taught, forborne.
Clo. To leave you in your madness, 'twere my sin:
will not.
Imo. Fools are not mad folks.
Clo. Do you call me fool?
Imo. As I am mad, I do:
you'll be patient: I'll no more be mad:
at cues us both. I am much sorry, sir, put me to forget a lady's manners,
being so verbal: and learn now, for all,
at I, which know my heart, do here pronounce,
the very truth of it, I care not for you,
dan so near the lack of charity—

To accuse myself—I hate you; which I had rather
You than you felt than make't my boast.

Clo. You sin against Obedience, which you owe your father. For
The contract you pretend with that base wretch,
One bred of alms and foster'd with cold dishes,
With scraps o' the court, it is no contract, none:
And though it be allow'd in meaner parties—
Yet who than he more mean?—to knit their souls,
On whom there is no more dependency
But brats and beggars, in self-figured knot;
Yet you are curb'd from that enlargement by
The consequence o' the crown, and must not soil
The precious note of it with a base slave,
A hilding for a livery, a squire's cloth,
A pantler, not so eminent.
Imo. Profane fellow! Wert thou the son of Jupiter and no more
But what thou art besides, thou wert too base
To be his grooms: thou wert dignified enough,
Even to the point of envy, if 'twere made
Comparative for your virtues, to be styled
The under-hangman of his kingdom, and hated
For being prefer'd so well.
Imo. The south-fog rot him! Imo. He never can meet more mischance than come
To be but named of thee. His meanest garment,
That ever hath but clipp'd his body, is dearer
In my respect than all the hairs above thee,
Were they all made such men. How now, Pisano?

Enter Pisano.

Clo. 'His garment!' Now the devil—
Imo. To, Dorothy my woman he thee presently—

Clo. 'His garment!'
Imo. I am sprited with a fool,
Frighted, and anger'd worse: go bid my woman
Search for a jewel that too casually
Hath left mine arm; it was thy master's:'shrew me,
If I would lose it for a revenue
Of any king's in Europe. I do think
I saw it this morning: confident I am
Last night 'twas on mine arm; I kiss'd it:
I hope it be not gone to tell my lord
That I kiss aught but he.

Pis. 'Twill not be lost.
Imo. I hope so: go and search.

[Exit Pisano.

Clo. You have abused me:

'I his meanest garment!'

Imo. Ay, I said so, sir:
If you will make 't an action, call witness to't.

Clo. I will inform your father.

Imo. Your mother too:
She's my good lady, and will conceive, I hope,
But the worst of me. So, I leave you, sir,
To the worst of discontent.

Clo. I'll be revenged: Well.

[Exit.

SCENE IV. Rome. Philario's house.
Enter Posthumus and Philario.

Post. Fear it not, sir: I would I were so sure
To win the king as I am bold her honour
Will remain hers.

Phil. What means do you make to him?
Post. Not any, but abide the change of time,
Quake in the present winter's state and wish
That warmer days would come: in these sar'd hopes,
I barely gratify your love: they failing,
I must die much your debtor.

Phi. Your very goodness and your company
O'er pass all I can do. By this, your king to Hath heard of great Augustus: Caius Lucius
Will do's commission throughly: and I think He'll grant the tribute, send the arrerages;
Or look upon our Romans, whose remembrance
Is yet fresh in their grief.

Post. I do believe,
Statist though I am none, nor like to be,
That this will prove a war; and you shall hear
The legions now in Gallia sooner landed
In our not-fearing Britain than have tidings
Of any penny tribute paid. Our countrymen 20
Are men more order'd than when Julius Cæsar
Smiled at their lack of skill, but found their courage
Worthy his frowning at: their discipline,
Now mingled with their courages, will make known
To their approvers they are people such
That mend upon the world.

Enter IACHIMO.

Phi. See! Iachimo!
Post. The swiftest harts have posted you by land;
And winds all of the corners kiss'd your sails,
To make your vessel nimble.

Phi. Welcome, sir.
Post. I hope the brefness of your answer made
The speediness of your return.

Iach. Your lady 31
Is one of the fairest that I have look'd upon.
Post. And therewithal the best; or let her beauty
Look through a casement to allure false hearts
And be false with them.

Iach. Here are letters for you.
Post. Their tenor good, I trust.

Iach. 'Tis very like.

Phi. Was Caius Lucius in the British court
When you were there?

Iach. He was expected then,
But not approach'd.
Post. All is well yet.
Sparkles this stone as it was wont? or is't not 40
Too dull for your good wearing?

Iach. If I had lost it,
I should have lost the worth of it in gold,
I'll make a journey twice as far, to enjoy
A second night of such sweet shortness which
Was mine in Britain, for the ring is won.
Post. The stone's too hard to come by.

Iach. Not a whit,
Your lady being so easy.
Post. Make not, sir,
Your loss your sport: I hope you know that we Must not continue friends.

Iach. Good sir, we must,
If you keep covenant. Had I not brought
The knowledge of your mistress home, I grant
We were to question further: but I now
Profess myself the winner of her honour,
Together with your ring; and not the wronger
Of her or you, having proceeded but

By both your wills.

Post. If you can make't apparent
That you have tasted her in bed, my hand
And ring is yours: if not, the foul opinion
You had of her pure honour gains or loses
Your sword or mine, or masterless leaves both
To whom shall find them.

Iach. Sir, my circumstances,
Being too near the truth as I will make them,
Must first induce you to believe: whose strong
I will confirm with oath; which, I doubt not,
You'll give me leave to spare, when you shall find
You need it not.

Post. Proceed.

Iach. First, her bedchamber,
Where, I confess, I slept not, but profess
Had that was well worth watching—it was hang'd
With tapestry of silk and silver; the story
Proud Cleopatra, when she met her Roman,
And Cydnus swell'd above the banks, or for
The press of boats or pride: a piece of work
So bravely done, so rich, that it did strive
In manliness and value: which I wonder'd
Could be so rarely and exactly wrought,
Since the true life on't was—

This is true; And this you might have heard of here, by me
Or by some other.

Iach. More particulars
Must justify my knowledge.
Post. So they must,
Or do your honour injury.

Iach. The chimney
Is south the chamber, and the chimney-piece
Chaste Dian bathing: never saw I figures
So likely to report themselves; the cutter
Was as another nature, dumb; outwent her,
Motion and breath left out.

Post. This is a thing
Which you might from relation likewise reap,
Being, as it is, much spoke of.

Iach. The roof o' the chamber
With golden cherubins is fretted: her andiron
I had forgot them—were two winking Cupids
Of silver, each on one foot standing, nicely
Depending on their brands.

Post. This is her honour
Let it be granted you have seen all this—and pray
Be given to your remembrance— the description
Of what is in her chamber nothing saves
The wager you have laid.

Iach. Then, if you can,
[Showing the broad]
Be pale: I beg but leave to air this jewel; so
And now 'tis up again: it must be married
To that your diamond; I'll keep them.

Post. The roof,
The room the charm
May be she pluck'd it off
To send it me.

Iach. She writes so to you, doth she Post. O, no, no, no! 'tis true. Here, take [Shows it]
Cymbeline

Scene IV.

Britain. A hall in Cymbeline's palace.

Enter in state, Cymbeline, Queen, Cloten, and Lords at one door, and at another, Caius Lucius and Attendants.

Cym. Now say, what would Augustus Caesar with us?

Luc. When Julius Caesar, whose remembrance yet

Lives in men's eyes and will to ears and tongues

Be theme and hearing ever, was in this Britain

And conquer'd it, Cassibelan, thine uncle,—

Famous in Caesar's praises, no whit less

Than in his feats deserving it—for him

And his succession granted Rome a tribute,

Yearly three thousand pounds, which by thee

Lately

Is left uncender'd.

Queen. And, to kill the marvel, shall be so ever.

Clo. There be many Caesars, ere such another Julius. Britain is a world by itself; and we will nothing pay

For wearing our own noses.

Queen. That opportunity

Which then they had to take from 's, to resume

must be half-workers? we are all bastards;

And that most venerable man which I

Did call my father, was I know not where

When I was stamp'd. some coiner with his tools

Made me a counterfeit: yet my mother seem'd

The Dian of that time: so doth my wife

The nonparell of this. O, vengeance, vengeance! me of my lawful pleasure she restrain'd

And pray'd me off forbearance; did it with

A pudenty so rosy the sweet view on't

Might well have warm'd old Saturn; that I thought her

As chaste as unsunn'd snow. O, all the devils!

This yellow Iachimo, in an hour,—was't not?

Or less,—at first?—perchance he spoke not, but,

Like a full-acorn'd boar, a German one,

Cried 'O!' and mounted; found no opposition

But what he look'd for should oppose and she Should from encounter guard. Could I find out

The woman's part in me! For there's no motion

That tends to vice in man, but I affirm

It is the woman's part: be it, note it,

The woman's; flattering, hers; deceiving, hers;

Lust and rank thoughts, hers, hers, re venge,

hers;

Ambitions, covetings, change of prides, disdain,

Nice longing, slander's, mutability,

All faults that may be named, nay, that hell

knows,

Why, hers, in part or all; but rather, all;

For even to vice

They are not constant, but are changing still

One vice, but of a minute old, for one

Not half so old as that. I'll write against them,

Detest them, curse them: yet 'tis greater skill

In a true hate, to pray they have their will:

The very devils cannot plague them better.

[Exit.

Scene V. Another room in Philarid's house.

Enter Posthumus.

Is there no way for men to be but women

s a basilisk unto mine eye,

Is me to look on't. Let there be no honour here there is beauty; truth, where semblance;

here there's another man: the vows of women

no more bondage be, to where they are made,

as they are to their virtues; which is nothing, above measure false!

'kst. Have patience, sir, I'll take your ring again; 'tis not yet won:

may be probable she lost it; or knows if one of her women, being corrupted, sth to' it from her?

'kst. Very true;

so, I hope, he came by't. Back my ring:

der to me some corporal sign about her,

ere evident than this; for this was stolen. 120

'kst. By Jupiter, I had it from her arm.

'kst. Hark you, he swears; by Jupiter he swears.

true:—nay, keep the ring:—'tis true: I am sure would not lose it: her attendants are shamed and honourable:—they induced to steal

it!

by a stranger!—No, he hath enjoy'd her:

cognizance of her incontinency his: she hath bought the name of whore thus dearly.

't is not strong enough to be believed one persuaded well of—

'kst. Never talk on't;

hath been coltied by him.

if you seek

further satisfying, under her breast—

thy the pressing—lies a mole, right proud that most delicate lodging: by my life, ss'd it; and it gave me present hunger feed again, though full. You do remember

's stain upon her?

Ay, and it doth confirm other stain, as big as hell can hold,

ere there no more but it.

'kst. Will you hear more?

'kst. Spare your arithmetik: never count the turns;

's, and a million!

'kst. I'll be sworn—

No swearing. You will swear you have not done't, you lie;

I will kill thee, if thou dost deny

't made me cuckold.

'kst. I'll deny nothing.

'kst. O, that I had her here, to tear her limb meal!

'll go there and do't, i' the court, before

'll do something—

Quite besides government of patience! You have won: 150

's follow him, and pervert the present wrath

hath against himself.

With all my heart. [Exit.

V. Another room in Philarid's house.

Enter Posthumus.

Is there no way for men to be but women

Must be half-workers? We are all bastards;

And that most venerable man which I
We have again. Remember, sir, my liege,
The kings your ancestors, together with
The natural bravery of your isle, which stands
As Neptune's park, ribbed and paled in
With rocks unscaleable and roaring waters, 20
With sands that will not bear your enemies' boats, But suck them up to the topmast. A kind of conquest
Cæsar made here; but made not here his brag
Of 'Come' and 'saw' and 'overcame:' with shame—
The first that ever touch'd him—he was carried From off our coast, twice beaten; and his shipping—
Poor ignorant baubles!—on our terrible seas,
Like egg-shells moved upon their surges, crack'd
As easily gainst our rocks: for joy thereof
The famed Cassibelan, who was once at point—
O giglot fortune!—to master Cæsar's sword, 31
Made Lud's town with rejoicing fires bright
And Britons strut with courage.

CLO. Come, there's no more tribute to be paid: our kingdom is stronger than it was at that time; and, as I said, there is no more tribute yet Cæsar, or other of them may have crook'd noses, but to owe such straight arms, none.

CYN. Son, let your mother end.

CLO. We have yet many among us can gripe as hard as Cassibelan: I do not say I am one; but I have a hand. Why tribute? why should we pay tribute? If Caesar can hide the sun from us with a blanket, or put the moon in his pocket, we will pay him tribute for light; else, sir, no more tribute, pray you now.

CYN. You must know,
Till the injurious Romans did extort
This tribute from us, we were free: Caesar's ambition,
Which swell'd so much that it did almost stretch
The sides o' the world, against all colour here
Did put the yoke upon us; which to shake off
Becomes a warlike people, whom we reckon
Ourselves to be.

CLO. and LORDS. We do.

CYN. Say, then, to Caesar,
Our ancestor was that Mulmius which Ordain'd our laws, whose use the sword of Caesar Hath too much mangled; whose repair and franchise
Shall, by the power we hold, be our good deed, Though Rome be therefore angry: Mulmius made our laws,
Who was the first of Britain which did put 60
His brows within a golden crown and call'd
Himself a king.

LUC. I am sorry, Cymbeline,
That I am to pronounce Augustus Cæsar—Cæsar, that hath more kings his servants than Thyself domestic officers—thine enemy;
Receive it from me, then: war and confusion
In Cæsar's name pronounce I 'gainst thee: look
For fury not to be resisted. Thus defied,
I thank thee for myself.

CYN. Thou art welcome, Cauis.
Thy Cæsar knighted me; my youth I spent 70
Much under him; of him I gather'd honour;
Which he to seek of me again, performe,
Justice, whose Hail,
Hail, trudls

Good morrow to the sun. Hail, thou fair heaven!
We house i' the rock, yet use thee not so hardly
As a wonder livers do.

Guil. Hail, heaven!

Avr. Now for our mountain sport: up to yond hill;
Your legs are young; I'll tread these flats. Con-

Cymbeline.

Of courts, of princes, of the tricks in war:
This service is not service, so being done,
But being so allow'd: to apprehend thus,
Draws us a profit from all things we see;
And often, to our comfort, shall we find
The shaded beetle in a safer hold
Than is the full-wing'd eagle. O, this life
Is nobler than attending for a check,
Richer than doing nothing for a bauble,
Prouder than rustling in unpaid-for silk:
Such gain the cap of him that makes 'em fine,
Yet keeps his book uncross'd: no life to ours.

Guil. Out of your proof you speak: we, poor unfledged,
Have never wing'd from view o' the nest, nor know not
What air's from home. Haply this life is best,
If quiet life be best; sweeter to you
That have a sharper known: well corresponding With your stiff age: but unto us it is
A cell of ignorance; travelling a-bed;
A prison for a debtor, that not dares
To strike a limit.

Avr. What should we speak of

When we are old as you? when we shall hear
The rain and wind beat dark December, how,
In this our pinching cave, shall we discourse
The freezing hours away? We have seen nothing;
We are beastly, sublime as the fox for prey,
Like warlike as the wolf for what we eat;
Our valour is to chase what flies; our cage
We make a quire, as doth the prison'd bird,
And sing our bondage freely.

Bel. How you speak!
Did you but know the city's usuries
And felt them knowingly; the art o' the court,
As hard to leave as keep; whose top to climb
Is certain falling, or so slippery that
The fear's as bad as falling: the till o' the war,
A pain that only seems to seek out danger
I' the name of fame and honour; which dies i' the search,
And hath as oft a slanderous epitaph
As record of fair act; nay, many times,
Deth ill deserve by doing well; what's worse,
Must court'sy at the censure:—O boys, this story
The world may read in me: my body's mark'd
With Roman swords, and my report was once
First with the best of note: Cymbeline loved me,
And when a soldier was the theme, my name
Was not far off: then was I a true tree Whose boughs did bend with fruit: but in one night,
A storm or robbery, call it what you will,
Shook down my mellow hangings, nay, my leaves,
And left me bare to weather.
Why tender'st thou that paper to me, with
A look untender? If 't were summer news,
Smile to't before; if wintery, thou need'st
But keep that countenance still. My husband
That drug-dam'd it Italy hath out-crafted him
And he's at some hard point. Speak, man;
May take off some extremity, which to read
Would be even mortal to me.
Pis. Please you, read:
And you shall find me, wretched man, a thin
The most disdain'd of fortune.
Imo. [Reads] 'Thy mistress, Pisano, I played the strumpet in my bed; the testimony whereof lie bleeding in me. I speak not on weak surmises, but from proof as strong as and as certain as I expect my reprobation. That part thou, Pisano, must act for me, if faith be not tainted with the breach of hers:
I thine own hands take away her life: I shall, thee opportunity at Milford-Haven. She my letter for the purpose: where, if thou for strike and to make me certain it is done, thou the pandar to her dishonour and equally to disport.'

Pis. What shall I need to draw my sw the paper
Hath cut her throat already. No, 'tis slandered
Whose edge is sharper than the sword, w
Outvomets all the worms of Nile, whose breed
Rides on the posting winds and doth belie
All corners of the world: kings, queens
States, Maids, matrons, may, the secrets of the grave.
This viperous slander enters. What ch madam?

Imo. False to his bed! What is it to be false
To lie in watch there and to think upon him?
To weep 'twixt clock and clock if sleep can
nature,
To break it with a fearful dream of him
And cry myself awake? that's false to 's heart is it?
Pis. Alas, good lady!

Imo. I false! Thy conscience witness: Iachi
Thou didst accuse him of incontinency;
Thou then look'dst like a villain; now meth
Thy favour's good enough. Some yaj of Italy Whose mother was her painting, hath betroth
him;
Poor I am stable, a garment out of fashion;
And, for I am richer than to hang by the wall,
I must be ripp'd—to pieces with me!—O,
Men's vows are women's traitors! All gen seeming,
By thy revolt, O husband, shall be thought
Put on for villainy; not born where 't grows,
But worn a bait for ladies.
Pis. Good madam, hear

Imo. True honest men being heard, like Aneas,
Were in his time thought false, and Sin
weeping
Did scandal many a holy tear, took pity
From most true wretchedness: so thou, Post

Will lay the leaven on all proper men;
Why, I must die; and if I do not by thy hand, thou art a servant of thy master's. Against self-slaughter here is a prohibition so divine that cravens my weak hand. Come, here's my heart.

Posth. If you'll back to the court—

I. No court, no father; nor no more ado

With that harsh, noble, simple nothing,

That Cloten, whose love-suit hath been to me as fearful as a sieve.

Pis. If not at court,

Then not in Britain must you bide.

I. Where then? Hath Britain all the sun that shines? Day, night,

Are they not but in Britain? I'the world's volume

Our Britain seems as of it, but not in't;

In a great pool a swan's nest: prithee, think There's livers out of Britain.

Pis. I am most glad You think of other place. The ambassador, Lucius the Roman, comes to Milford-Haven To-morrow: now, if you could wear a mind Dark as your fortune is, and but disguise That which, to appear itself, must not yet be But by self-danger, you should tread a course Pretty and full of view; yea, haply, near In the residence of Posthumus; so night at least That though his actions were not visible, yet Report should render him hourly to your ear As truly as he moves.

I. O, for such means! Though peril to my modesty, not death on't, I would adventure.

Pis. Well, then, here's the point You must forget to be a woman; change Command into obedience: feint and niceness— The handmaids of all women, or, more truly, Woman its pretty self—into a waggish courage Read in gibes, quick-answer'd, saucy and As quarrelous as the wascel; nay, you must Forget that rarest treasure of your cheek, Exposing it—but, O, the harder heart! Alack, no remedy!—to the greedy touch Of common-kissing Titan, and forget Your laboursome and dainty trims, wherein You made great Juno angry.

I. Nay, be brief: I see into thy end, and am almost A man already.

Pis. First, make yourself but like one. Fore-thinking this, I have already fit— 'Tis in my cloak-bag—doublet, hat, hose, all That answer to them; would you in their serving, And with what imitation you can borrow From youth of such a season, 'fore noble Lucius Present yourself, desire his service, tell him Wherein you're happy,—which you'll make him know, If that his head have ear in music,—doubtless

But if I were as wise as honest, then

My purpose would prove well. It cannot be

But that my master is abused:

Some villain, ay, and singular in his art,

Hath done you both this cursed injury.

I. Some Roman courtesan.

But do not you yet; for this is not

An idle matter: to the chief of these

Hath done you both this cursed injury.

I. Some Roman courtesan.

Pis. No, on my life, I'll give but notice you are dead and send him Some bloody sign of it; for 'tis commanded I should do so: you shall be miss'd at court, And that will well confirm it.

I. Why, good fellow, I'll give but notice you are dead and send him Some bloody sign of it; for 'tis commanded I should do so: you shall be miss'd at court, And that will well confirm it.

Pis. Why, good fellow, 130

What shall I do the while? where bide? how live?

Or in my life what comfort, when I am Dead to my husband?

I. If you'll back to the court—

And doubling that, most holy. Your means abroad,
You have me, rich; and I will never fail
Beginning nor supplyment.

Imo. Thou art all the comfort
The gods will diet me with. Prithee, away;
There's more to be consider'd; but we'll even
All that good time will give us: this attempt
I am soldier to, and will abide it with
A prince's courage. Away, I prithee.

Piz. Well, madam, we must take a short farewel, Lest, being miss'd, I be suspected of
Your carriage from the court. My noble mistress,
Here is a box; I had it from the queen: 191
What's in't is precious; if you are sick at sea,
Or stomach-qualm'd at land, a dram of this
Will drive away distemper. To some shade,
And fit you to your manhood. May the gods
Direct you to the best!

Imo. Amen: I thank thee. [Exeunt, severally.

Scene V. A room in Cymbeline's palace.

Enter Cymbeline, Queen, Cloten, Lucius, Lords, and Attendants.

Cym. Thus far; and so farewell.

Luc. Thanks, royal sir.

My emperor hath wrote, I must from hence;
And am right sorry that I must report ye
My master's enemy.

Cym. Our subjects, sir,
Will not endure his yoke; and for ourself
To show less sovereignty than they, must needs
Appeare unkinglike.

Luc. So, sir: I desire of you
A conduct over-land to Milford-Haven.
Madam, all joy befal your grace!

Queen. And you!

Cym. My lords, you are appointed for that office;

The due of honour in no point omit.

So farewell, noble Lucius.

Luc. Your hand, my lord.

Clo. Receive it friendly; but from this time

I wear it as your enemy.

Luc. Sir, the event
Is yet to name the winner: fare you well.

Cym. Leave not the worthy Lucius, good my lords,
Till he have cross'd the Severn. Happiness!
[Exeunt Lucius and Lords.

Queen. He goes hence frowning: but it honours us
That we have given him cause.

Clo. 'Tis all the better:
Your valiant Britons have their wishes in it.

Cym. Lucius hath wrote already to the emperor
How it goes here. It fits us therefore ripely
Our chariots and our horsemen be in readiness:
The powers that he already hath in Gallia
Will soon be drawn to head, from whence he moves
His war for Britain.

Queen. 'Tis not sleepy business;
But must be look'd to speedily and strongly.

Cym. Our expectation that it would be thus Hath made us forward. But, my gentle queen,
Where is our daughter? She hath not appear'd
Before the Roman, nor to us hath tender'd
The duty of the day: she looks us like
A thing more made of malice than of duty:
We have noted it. Call her before us; for
We have been too slight in sufferrance.

Queen. Royal sir,
Since the exile of Posthumus, most retired
Hath her life been; the cure whereof, my lord,
'Tis time must do. Beseech your majesty,
Forbear sharp speeches to her: she's a lady
So tender of rebukes that words are strokes
And strokes death to her.

Re-enter Attendant.

Cym. Where is she, sir? How can her contempt be answer'd?

Att. Please you, sir,
Her chambers are all lock'd; and there's no answeer
That will be given to the loudest noise we make.

Queen. My lord, when last I went to visit her
She pray'd me to excuse her keeping close,
Whose duty constrain'd her by her infirmity,
She should that duty leave unpaid to you,
Which daily she was bound to profess: this
She wish'd me to make known; but our great Court Made me to blame in memory.

Her doors lock'd
Not seen of late? Grant, heavens, that which I fear
Prove false! [Exit

Queen. Son, I say, follow the king.

Clo. That man of hers, Pisanio, her old servant
I have not seen these two days.

Queen. Go, look after. [Exit Cloten
Pisanio, thou that stand'st so for Posthumus!
He hath a drug of mine: I pray his absence
Proceed by swallowing that, for he believes
It is a thing most precious. But for her,
Where is she gone? Happly, despair hath seiz'd
her,
Or, wing'd with fervour of her love, she's flown
To her desired Posthumus: gone she is
To death or to dishonour; and my end
Can make good use of either: she being down,
I have the placing of the British crown.

Re-enter Cloten.

How now, my son!

Clo. 'Tis certain she is fled.
Go in and cheer the king: he rages; none
Dare come about him.

Queen. [Aside] All the better: may
This night forestall him of the coming day! [Exit

Clo. I love and hate her: for she's fair and royal,
And that she hath all courtly parts more exquisite
Than lady, ladies, woman; from every one
The best she hath, and she, of all compounded, Outsells them all; I love her therefore: but Disdaining me and throwing favours on
The low Posthumus slander'd so her judgement
That what's else rare is choked; and in that point
I will conclude to hate her, nay, indeed,
To be revenged upon her. For when fools

Shall—
Enter Pisano.

Who is here? What, are you packing, sirrah?
Come hither: ah, you precious pandar! Villain,
Where is thy lady? In a word; or else
That art straightway with the fiends.

Pis. O, good my lord!
Clo. Where is thy lady? or, by Jupiter,
I will not ask again. Close villain,
I'll have this secret from thy heart, or rip Thy heart to find it. Is she with Posthumus?
From whose so many weights of baseness cannot
A dram of worth be drawn.

Pis. Alas, my lord, 89
How can she be with him? When was she miss'd?
He is in Rome.

Clo. Where is she, sir? Come nearer;
No further halting: satisfy me home
What is become of her.

Pis. O, my all-worthy lord!
Clo. All-worthy villain!
Discover where thy mistress is at once,
At the next word: no more of 'worthy lord!'
Speak, or thy silence on the instant
Thy condemnation and thy death.

Then, sir,
This paper is the history of my knowledge 90
Touching her flight. [Presenting a letter.

Clo. Let's see't. I will pursue her
Even to Augustus' throne.

Pis. [Aside] Or this, or perish.
She's far enough; and what he learns by this
May prove his travel, not her danger.

Clo. Hum!

Pis. [Aside] I'll write to my lord she's dead.

O Imogen,
Safe mayst thou wander, safe return again!

Clo. Sirrah, is this letter true?

Pis. Sir, as I think.

Clo. It is Posthumus' hand; I know't.
Sirrah, if thou wouldst not be a villain, but do me rue service, undergo those employments wherein should have cause to use thee with a serious industry, that is, what villain soc'er I bid thee so, to perform it directly and truly, I would think thee an honest man; thou shouldst neither by my means for thy relief nor my voice for thy reform.

Pis. Well, my good lord.

Clo. Wilt thou serve me? for since patiently and constantly thou hast stuck to the bare fortune that beggar Posthumus, thou canst not, in the course of gratitude, but be a diligent follower of mine: wilt thou serve me?

Pis. Sir, I will.

Clo. Give me thy hand; here's my purse.
fast any of thy late master's garments in thy possessions?

Pis. I have, my lord, at my lodging, the same it he wore when he took leave of my lady and mistress.

Clo. The first service thou dost me, fetch that out hither; let it be thy first service;

Pis. I shall, my lord.

Clo. Meet thee at Milford-Haven!—I forgot to ask him one thing; I'll remember anon:— weep there, thou villain Posthumus, will I kill thee. I would these garments were come. She laid upon a time—the bitterness of it I now belch from my heart—that she held the very garment of Posthumus in more respect than my noble and natural person, together with the adornment of my qualities. With that suit upon my back, will I ravish her: first kill him, and in her eyes; there shall she see my valour, which will then be a torrent to her contempt. He on the ground, my speech of insultment ended on his dead body, and when my lust hath dined,—which, as I say, to vex her I will execute in the clothes that she so praised,—to the court I'll knock her back, foot her home again. She hath despised me rejoicing, and I'll be merry in my revenge. 150

Re-enter Pisano, with the clothes.

Be those the garments?

Pis. Ay, my noble lord.

Clo. How long is't since you went to Milford-

Haven?

Pis. She can scarce be there yet.

Clo. Bring this apparel to my chamber: that is the second thing that I have commanded thee:
the third is, that thou wilt be a voluntary muse to my design. Be but duteous, and true preferment shall tender itself to thee. My revenge is now at Milford: would I had wings to follow it!
Come, and be true. [Exit.

Pis. Thou bidst me to my loss: for true to thee
Were to prove false, which I will never be,
To him that is most true. To Milford go,
And find not her whom thou pursuest. Flow, flow,
You heavenly blessings, on her! This fool's speech
Be cross'd with slowness: labour be his need!

[Exit.

Scene VI. Wales. Before the cave of Belarius.

Enter Imogen, in boy's clothes.

Imo. I see a man's life is a tedious one:
I have tired myself, and for two nights together
Have made the ground my bed. I should be sick,
But that my resolution helps me. Milford,
When from the mountain-top Pisano show'd thee,
Thou wast within a ken: O Jove! I think
Foundations fly the wretched; such, I mean,
Where they should be relieved. Two beggars
told me
I could not miss my way; will poor folks lie,
That have afflictions on them, knowing 'tis
A punishment or trial? Yes; no wonder,
When rich ones scarce tell true. To lapse in fulness
Is sorer than to lie for need, and falsehood
Is worse in kings than beggars. My dear lord!
Thou art one o' the false ones. Now I think on
thee,
My hunger's gone; but even before, I was
At point to sink for food. But what is this?
Here is a path to't: 'tis some savage hold:
I were best not call; I dare not call: yet famine,
Ere clean it o'erthrow nature, makes it valiant. 20
Plenty and peace breeds cowards: hardness ever hardiness is mother. Ho! who's here?
If any thing that's civil, speak; if savage,
Take or lend. Ho! No answer? Then I'll enter.
Best draw my sword; and if mine enemy
But fear the sword like me, he'll scarcely look
on't.
Such a foe, good heavens! [Exit, to the cave.
Enter Belarius, Guiderius, and Arviragus.
Bel. You, Polydore, have proved best woodman and
Are master of the feast: Cadwal and I
Will play the cook and servant: 'tis our match:
The sweat of industry would dry and die,
But for the end it works to. Come; our stomachs
Will make what's homely savoury: weariness
Can snore upon the flint, when resty sloth
Finds the down pillow hard. Now peace be here,
Poor house, that keep'st thyself!
Gui. I am thoroughly weary.
Arv. I am weak with till, yet strong in appre-tite.
Gui. There is cold meat in the cave; we'll browse on that,
Whilst what we have kill'd be cook'd.
Bel. [Looking into the cave] Stay; come not in.
But that it eats our victuals, I should think
Here were a fairy: Behold divineness
No elder than a boy!
Re-enter Imogen.
Imo. Good masters, harm me not:
Before I enter'd here, I call'd; and thought
To have begg'd or bought what I have took: good truth,
I have stol'n nought, nor would not, though I had found
Gold strew'd i' the floor. Here's money for my meat:
50 I would have left it on the board so soon
As I had made my meal, and parted
With prayers for the provider.
Gui. Money, youth?
Arv. All gold and silver rather turn to dirt!
As 'tis no better reckond, but of those
Who worship dirty gods.
Imo. I see you're angry:
Know, if you kill me for my fault, I should Have died had I not made it.
Bel. Whither bound?
Imo. To Milford-Haven.
Bel. What's your name?
Imo. Fidele, sir. I have a kinsman who
Is bound for Italy; he embark'd at Milford;
To whom being going, almost spent with hunger,
I am fall'n in this offence.
Bel. Prithce, fair youth,
Think us no churls, nor measure our good minds
By this rude place we live in. Well encounter'd!
'Tis almost night: you shall have better cheer
Ere you depart; and thanks to stay and eat it.
Boys, bid him welcome.
Gui. Were you a woman, youth,
I should woo hard but be your groom. In honesty,
I bid for you as I'd buy.
Arv. I'll make't my comfort
He is a man; I'll love him as my brother;
And such a welcome as I'd give to him
After long absence, such is yours: most welcome
Be sprightly, for you fall 'mongst friends.
Mongst friends.
If brothers. [Aside] Would it had been so, that they
Had been my father's sons! then had my prize
 Been less, and so more equal ballasting
To thee, Posthumus.
Bel. He wrings at some distress.
Arv. Or I, whate'er it be, &
What pain it cost, what danger. Gods!
Bel. Hark, boys [Whispering]
Imo. Great men,
That had a court no bigger than this cave,
That did attend themselves and had the virtue
Which their own conscience seal'd them—laying by
That nothing-gift of differing multitudes—
Could not out-peer these twain. Pardon me
Gods!
I'll change my sex to be companion with them,
Since Leonatus's false
Bel. It shall be so.
Boys, we'll go dress our hunt. Fair youth come in:
Discourse is heavy, fasting; when we have sup'd
We'll mannerly demand thee of thy story,
So far as thou wilt speak it.
Gui. Pray, draw near.
Arv. The night to the owl and morn to the lark less welcome.
Imo. Thanks, sir.
Arv. I pray, draw near.
[Exeunt]
Scene VII. Rome. A public place.
Enter two Senators and Tribunes.
First Sen. This is the tenour of the emperor's writ:
That since the common men are now in action
'Gainst the Pannonians and Dalmatians,
And that the legions now in Gallia are Full bold to undertake our wars against
The fall'n-off Britons, that we do incite
The gentry to this business. He creates
Lucius proconsul: and to you the tribunes,
For this immediate levy, he commends
His absolute commission. Long live Caesar! a First Tri. Is Lucius general of the forces?
See. Sen. Ay
First Tri. Remaining now in Gallia?
First Sen. With those legion:
Which I have spoke of, whereunto your levy
Must be supplyant: the words of your commission
Will tie you to the numbers and the time
Of their dispatch.
First Tri. We will discharge our duty.
[Exeunt]
ACT IV.
Scene I. Wales: near the cave of Belarius.
Enter Cloten.
Clo. I am near to the place where they should meet, if Pisianio have mapped it truly. How f his garments serve me! Why should his mistress, who was made by him that made the tailor, not be fit too? the rather—saving reverence of the word—for 'tis said a woman's fitness comes by fits. Therein I must play the workman. I dare speak it to myself—for it is not vain-glory for a man and his glass to confer in his own chamber—I mean, the lines of my body are as well drawn as his; no less young, more strong, not beneath him in fortunes, beyond him in the advantage of the time, above him in birth, alike conversant in general services, and more remarkable in single oppositions; yet this imperceiverant thing loves him in my despite. What mortality is! Posthumus, thy head, which now is growing upon thy shoulders, shall within this hour be off; thy mistress enforced; thy garments cut to pieces before thy face: and all this done, spurn her home to her father; who may haply be a little angry for my so rough usage; but my mother, having power of testiness, shall turn all into my commendations. My horse is tied up safe; out, sword, and to a sore purpose! Fortune, put them into my hand! This is the very description of their place; and the fellow dares not deceive me. [Exit.

Scene II. Before the cave of Belarius.

Enter, from the cave, Belarius, Guiderius, Arviragus, and Imogen.

Bel. [To Imogen] You are not well: remain here in the cave;
We'll come to you after hunting.
Arv. [To Imogen] Brother, stay here: Are we not brothers?
Imo. So man and man should be;
But clay and clay differs in dignity,
Whose dust is both alike. I am very sick.
Gu. Go you to hunting; I'll abide with him.
Imo. So sick I am not, yet I am not well;
But not so citizen a wan as To seem to die e'er sick: suppose you, leave me; Stick to your journal course; the breach of custom Is breach of all. I am ill, but your being by me Cannot amend me; society is no comfort To one not sociable; I am not very sick, Since I can reason of it. Pray you, trust me here: I'll rob none but myself; and let me die, Stealing so poorly.
Gu. I love thee; I have spoke it: How much the quantity, the weight as much, As I do love my father.
Bel. What! how! how! Arv. If it be sin to say so, sir, I yoke me a my good brother's fault: I know not why love this youth; and I have heard you say, love's reason without reason: the bier at door, And a demand who is it shall die, I'd say My father, not this youth.'
Bel. [Aside] O noble strain! worthiness of nature! breed of greatness! towards father cowards and base things sire base: nature hath meal and bran, contempt and grace: 'tis not their father; yet who this should be, Unmiracle itself, loved before me. It is the ninth hour o' the morning for me.
Arv. Brother, farewell.}

Imo. I wish ye sport.
Imo. [Aside] These are kind creatures. Gods, what lies I have heard! Our courtiers say all's savage but at court: Experience, O, thou disprovet report! The imperious seas breed monsters, for the dish Poor tributary rivers as sweet fish. I am sick still; heart-sick. Pisiano, I'll now taste of thy drug. [Swallow some.
Gu. I could not stir him: He said he was gentle, but unfortunate; Dishonestly afflicted, but yet honest. Arv. Thus did he answer me: yet said, hereafter I might know more.
Bel. To the field, to the field! We'll leave you for this time: go in and rest.
Arv. We'll not be long away.
Bel. Pray, be not sick, Imo. Well or ill, I am bound to you.
Bel. And shalt be ever. [Exit Imogen, to the cave. This youth, how'er distress'd, appears he hath had Good ancestors.
Arv. How angel-like he sings!
Gu. But his neat cookery! he cut our roots In characters, And sauced our broth's, as Juno had been sick And he her dieter. Arv. Nobly he yokes A smiling with a sigh, as if the sigh Was that it was, for not being such a smile: The smile mocking the sigh, that it would sty From so divine a temple, to commix With winds that sailors rail at.
Gu. I do note That grief and patience, rooted in him both, Mingled their spurs together.
Arv. Grow, patience!
Bel. And let the stinking elder, grief, untwine His perishing root with the increasing vine! It is great morning. Come, away! Who's there?

Enter Clooten.
Clo. I cannot find those runagates; that villain Hath mock'd me. I am faint.
Bel. 'Those runagates!' Means he not us? I partly know him: 'tis Clooten, the son o' the queen. I fear some ambush: I saw him not these many years, and yet I know 'tis he. We are held as outlaws; hence! Gu. He is but one: you and my brother search What companies are near: pray you, away; Let me alone with him.

[Exeunt Belarius and Arviragus.

Clo. Soft! What are you? That fly me thus? some villain mountaineers? I have heard of such. What slave art thou?
Gu. A thing More slavish did I ne'er than answering A slave without a knock.
Clo. Thou art a robber, A law-breaker, a villain: yield thee, thief.
Gui. To who? to thee? What art thou? Have not I
An arm as big as thine? a heart as big?
Thy words, I grant, are bigger, for I wear not My dagger in my mouth. Say what thou art,
Why should I yield to thee?

Clo. Thou villain base, so
Know'st me not by my clothes?

Gui. No, nor thy tailor, rascal,
Who is thy grandfather: he made those clothes,
Which, as it seems, make thee.

Clo. Thou precious varlet,
My tailor made them not.

Gui. Hence, then, and thank
The man that gave them thee. Thou art some fool;
I am loath to bear thee.

Clo. Thou injurious thief,
Hear but my name, and tremble.

Gui. What's thy name?

Clo. Cloten, thou villain.

Gui. Cloten, thou double villain, be thy name,
I cannot tremble at it: were it Toad, or Adder,
Spider, 'twould move me sooner.

Clo. To thy further fear,
Nay, to thy mere confusion, thou shalt know
I am son to the queen.

Gui. I am sorry for 't; not seeming
So worthy as thy birth.

Clo. Art not afraid?

Gui. Those that I reverence those I fear, the wise:
At fools I laugh, not fear them.

Clo. When I have slain thee with my proper hand,
I'll follow those that even now fled hence,
And on the gates of Lud's-town set your heads:
Yield, rustic mountaineer. [Exeunt, fighting.]

Re-enter Belarius and Avragus.

Bel. None in the world: you did mistake him, sure.

Bel. I cannot tell: long is it since I saw him,
But time hath nothing blur'd those lines of favour
Which then he wore: the snatches in his voice,
And burst of speaking, were as his: I am absolute
'Twas very Cloten.

Arv. In this place we left them:
I wish my brother make good time with him,
You say he is so fell.

Bel. Being scarce made up,
I mean, to man, he had not apprehension of roaring terrors; for the effect of judgement is oft the cause of fear. But, see, thy brother.

Re-enter Guiderius, with Cloten's head.

Gui. This Cloten was a fool, an empty purse;
There was no money in't: not Hercules
Could have knock'd out his brains, for he had none:
Yet I not doing this, the fool had borne
My head as I do his.

Bel. What hast thou done?

Gui. I am perfect what: cut off one Cloten's head,
Son to the queen, after his own report:
Who call'd me traitor, mountaineer, and swore
With his own single hand he 'ld take us in,
Displace our heads where—thank the gods!—they grow,
And set them on Lud's-town.

Bel. We are all undone.

Gui. Why, worthy father, what have we to lose,
But that he swore to take, our lives? The law.

Bel. Protecs not us: then why should we be tender
To let an arrogant piece of flesh threat us,
Play judge and executioner all himself,
For we do fear the law? What company
Discover you abroad?

Bel. No single soul. Can we set eye on; but in all safe reason
He must have some attendants. Though his humour
Was nothing but mutation, ay, and that
From one bad thing to worse; not frenzy, not Absolute madness could so far have raved
To come alone, either he so undertaking,
Or they so suffering: then on good ground we fear,
If we do fear this body hath a tail
More perilous than the head.

Arv. Let ordinance
Come as the gods foresay it: howsoever,
My brother hath done well.

Bel. I had no mind
To hunt this day: the boy Fidele's sickness
Did make my way long forth.

Gui. With his own sword
Which he did wave against my throat, I have ta'en
His head from him: I'll throw't into the creek
Behind our rock; and let it to the sea,
And tell the fishes he's the queen's son, Cloten:
That's all I reck. [Exit]

Bel. I fear 'twill be revenged:
Would, Polydore, thou hadst not done 't though valour Becomes thee well enough.

Arv. Would I had done 't,
So the revenge alone pursued me! Polydore,
I love thee brotherly, but envy much
Thou hast robb'd me of this deed: I would revenges,
That possible strength might meet, would see us through
And put us to our answer.

Bel. Well, 'tis done:
We'll hunt no more to-day, nor seek for danger
Where there's no profit. I prithee, to our rock
You and Fidele play the cooks: I'll stay
Till hasty Polydore return, and bring him
To dinner presently.

Arv. Poor sick Fidele!
I'd willingly to him: to gain his colour
I'd let a parish of such Clotens blood,
And praise myself for charity. [Exit]

Bel. O thou goddess, if Thou divine Nature, how thou thyself thou blazon'st
In these two princely boys! They are as gentle
As zephyrs blowing below the violet,
Not wagg'd his sweet head; and yet as rough,
Their royal blood encharfed, as the rudest wind,
That by the top doth take the mountain pine,
And make him stoop to the vale. 'Tis wonder
That an invisible instinct should frame them
To royalty unlearn'd, honour untaught,
Civility not seen from other, valor
That wildly grows in them, but yields a crop 180
As if it had been sow'd. Yet still it's strange
What Cloten's being here to us portends,
Or what his death will bring us.

Re-enter Guiderius.

Gui. Where's my brother?
I have sent Cloten's clotpoll down the stream,
In embassy to his mother: his body's hostage
For his return. [Solemn music.]

Bel. My ingenious instrument!
Hark, Polydore, it sounds! But what occasion
Hath Cadwal now to give it motion! Hark!
Gui. Is he at home?

Bel. He went hence even now.

Gui. What does he mean? since death of my dear'st mother
It did not speak before. All solemn things Should answer solemn accidents. The matter?
Triumphs for nothing and lamenting toys
Is jollity for apes and grief for boys.
Is Cadwal mad?

Bel. Look, here he comes,
And brings the dire occasion in his arms
Of what we blame him for.

Re-enter Arviragus, with Imogen, as dead, bearing her in her arms.

Arv. The bird is dead
That we have made so much on. I had rather Have skipp'd from sixteen years of age to sixty,
To have turn'd my jeaping-time into a crutch, 200
Than have seen this

Gui. O sweetest, fairest lily!
My brother wears thee not the one half so well
As when thou gress'th thyself.

Bel. O melancholy!
Who ever yet could sound thy bottom? find
The oozes, to show what coast thy sluggish care Might easliest harbour in? Thou blessed thing!
Jove knows what man thou mightst have made;
but I,
Thou diest, a most rare boy, of melancholy.
How found you him?

Arv. Stark, as you see; 209
Thus smiling, as some fly had tickled slumber,
Not as death's dart, being laugh'd at; his right Cheek
Reposing on a cushion.

Gui. Where?

Arv. O' the floor;
His arms thus leagued: I thought he slept, and put My clouted brogues from off my feet, whose rudeness
Answer'd my steps too loud.

Gui. Why, he but sleeps:
If he be gone, he'll make his grave a bed;
With female fairies will his tomb be haunted,
And worms will not come to thee.

Arv. With fairest flowers

Whilst summer lasts and I live here, Fidele, 219
I'll sweeten thy sad grave: thou shalt not lack
The flower that's like thy face, pale primrose, nor
The azured harebell, like thy veins, no, nor
The leaf of eglandine, whom not to slander,
Out-sweet'en'd not thy breath: the ruddock would,
With charitable bill,—O bill, sore-shaming
Those rich-left heirs that let their fathers lie
Without a monument!—bring thee all this;
Yea, and fur'd moss besides, when flowers are none.

To winter-ground thy corse.

Gui. Prithhee, have done;
And do not play in wench-like words with that
Which is so serious. Let us bury him, 231
And not protract with admiration what
Is now due debt. To the grave!

Arv. Say, where shall's lay him?

Gui. By good Euiphile, our mother.

Arv. Be't so:
And let us, Polydore, though now our voices
Have got the munnish crack, sing him to the ground.
As once our mother: use like note and words,
Save that Euiphile must be Fidele.

Gui. Cadwal,
I cannot sing: I'll weep, and word it with thee;
For notes of sorrow out of tune are worse 241
Than priests and fanes that lie.

Arv. We'll speak it, then.

Bel. Great griefs, I see, medicine the less;
For Cloten
Is quite forgot. He was a queen's son, boys;
And though he came our enemy, remember
He was paid for that: though mean and mighty,
Rotting
Together, have one dust, yet reverence,
That angel of the world, doth make distinction Of place 'tween high and low. Our foe was princely;
And though you took his life, as being our foe,
Yet bury him as a prince.

Gui. Pray you, fetch him hither. 251
Thersites' body is as good as Ajax',
When neither are alive.

Arv. If you'll go fetch him,
We'll say our song the whilst. Brother, begin.

Gui. Nay, Cadwal, we must lay his head to the east;
My father hath a reason for't.

Arv. 'Tis true.

Gui. Come on then, and remove him.

Song.

Gui. Fear no more the heat o' the sun,
Nor the furious winter's rages;
Thou that nightly task hast done, 260
Golden lads and girls all must,
As chimney-sweepers, come to dust.

Arv. Fear no more the frown o' the great;
Thou art past the tyrant's stroke;
Care no more to clothe and eat;
To thee the reed is as the oak:
The sceptre, learning, physic, must
All follow this, and come to dust.
Gui. Fear no more the lightning-flash, 270
Arr. Nor the all-dreaded thunder-stone;
Gui. Fear not slander, censure rash;
Arr. Thou hast finish'd joy and moan:
Both. All lovers young, all lovers must Consign to thee, and come to dust.
Gui. No exorciser harm thee!
Arr. Nor no witchcraft charm thee!
Gui. Ghost unslain forbear thee!
Arr. Nothing ill come near thee!
Both. Quiet consummation have; And renowned be thy grave!

Re-enter Belarius, with the body of Cloten.

Gui. We have done our obsequies: come, lay him down.
Bel. Here's a few flowers; but 'bout midnight, more:
The herbs that have on them cold dew o' the night
Are strewings fitst for graves. Upon their faces.
You were as flowers, now wither'd: even so
These herbets shall, which we upon you strew.
Come on, away: apart upon our knees.
The ground that gave them first has them again:
Their pleasures here are past, so is their pain. 290
[Exeunt Belarius, Guiderius, and Arviragus.
Imo. [Awaking!] Yes, sir, to Milford-Haven; which is the way?—
I thank you.—By yond bush?—Pray, how far that thistle?
'Os pittikins! can it be six mile yet?—
I have gone all night. 'Faith, I'll lie down and sleep.
But, soft! no bedellow — O gods and goddesses! [Seeing the body of Cloten.
These flowers are like the pleasures of the world;
This bloody man, the care on't. I hope I dream;
For so I thought I was a cave-keeper,
And cook to honest creatures: but 'tis not so;
'Twas but a bolt of nothing, shot at nothing, 300
Which the brain makes of fumes: our very eyes
Are sometimes like our judgements, blind. Good faith,
I tremble still with fear: but if there be
Yet left in heaven as small a drop of pity
As a wren's eye, fear'd gods, a part of it!
The dream's here still: even when I wake, it is Without me, as within me; not imagined, felt.
A headless man! The garments of Posthumus!
I know the shape of's leg: this is his hand;
His foot Mercurial; his Martial thigh; 310
The brawns of Hercules: but his Jovial face—
Murder in heaven?—How!—'Tis gone. Pisanio,
All curses madded Hecuba gave the Greeks,
And mine to boot, be darted on thee! Thou,
Conspired with that irregular devil, Cloten,
Hast here cut off my lord. To write and read
Be henceforth treacherous! Damned Pisanio
Hath with his forged letters,—damm'd Pisanio—
From this most bravest vessel of the world
Struck the main-top! O Posthumus! alas, 320
Where is thy head? where's that? Ay me! where's that?
Pisanio might have kill'd thee at the heart,
And left this head on. How should this be? Pisanio?
'Tis he and Cloten: malice and lucre in them

Have laid this woe here. O, 'tis pregnant, pregnant!
The drug he gave me, which he said was precious;
And cordial to me, have I not found it
Murderous to the senses? That confirms it home
This is Pisanio's deed, and Cloten's: O!
Give colour to my pale cheek with thy blood, 330
That we the horrid may seem to those Which chance to find us: O, my lord, my lord!
[Exit.

Enter Lucius, a Captain and other Officers, and a Soothsayer.

Cap. To them the legions garrison'd in Gallia.
After your will, have cross'd the sea, attending
You here at Milford-Haven with your ships:
They are in readiness.

Luc. But what from Rome?
Cap. The senate hath stirr'd up the confederate
And gentlemen of Italy, most willing spirits,
That promise noble service: and they come
Under the conduct of bold Iachimo, 340
Scipio's brother.

Luc. When expect you them?
Cap. With the next benefit o' the wind.

This forwardness makes our hopes fair. Command our present numbers
Be muster'd; bid the captains look to't. Now, sir
What have you dream'd of late of this war's purpose?

Sooth. Last night the very gods show'd me a vision—
I fast and pray'd for their intelligence—thus:
I saw Jove's bird, the Roman eagle, wing'd
From the spongy south to this part of the west,
There vanish'd in the sunbeams: which portends—
Unless my sins abuse my divination—
Success to the Roman host.

Luc. Dream often so,
And never false. Soft, ho! what trunk is here Without his top? The ruin speaks that something
It was a worthy building. How! a page!
Or dead, or this sleeping on him? But dead rather;
For nature doth abhor to make his bed
With the defunct, or sleep upon the dead.
Let's see the boy's face.

Cap. He's alive, my lord.
Luc. He'll then instruct us of this body
Young one,
Inform us of thy fortunes, for it seems
They crave to be demanded. Who is this Thou makest thy bloody pillow? Or who was he
That, otherwise than noble nature did, Hath alter'd that good picture? What's thy interest
In this sad wreck? How came it? Who is it?
What art thou?

Imo. I am nothing: or if not,
Nothing to be worse. This was my master
A very valiant Briton and a good,
That here by mountaineers lies slain. Alas! 370
There is no more such masters: I may wander
From east to occident, cry out for service,
Try many, all good, serve truly, never Find such another master.

Luc. 'Lack, good youth! Thou movest no less with thy complaining than Scene ii.

Cymbeline.

Thy master in bleeding: say his name, good friend.

Imo. Richard du Champ. [Aside] If I do lie
No harm by it, though the gods hear, I hope
They'll pardon it.—Say you, sir?

Luc. Thy name?

Imo. Fidele, sir.

Luc. Thou dost approve thyself the very same:
Thy name well fits thy faith, thy faith thy name.
Wilt take thy chance with me? I will not say
Thou shalt be so well master'd, but, be sure,
No less beloved. The Roman emperor's letters,
Sent by a consul to me, should not sooner
Than thine own worth prefer thee: go with me.

Imo. I'll follow, sir. But first an' please the gods,
I'll hide my master from the flies, as deep
As these poor pickaxes can dig; and when
With wild wood-leaves and weeds I ha' strew'd his grave,

And on it said a century of prayers:
Such as I can, twice o'er, I'll weep and sigh;
And leaving so his service, follow you,
So please you entertain me.

Luc. Ay, good youth;
And rather father thee than master thee.

My friends,
The boy hath taught us many duties: let us
Find out the prettiest daisied plot we can,
And make him with our pikes and partisans
A grave: come, arm him. Boy, he is premier'd
By thee to us, and he shall be interr'd
As soldiers can. Be cheerful; wipe thine eyes:
Some falls are means the happier to arise.

[Exeunt.]

Scene III. A room in Cymbeline's palace.

Enter Cymbeline, Lords, Pisanio, and Attendants.

Cym. Again; and bring me word how 'tis with her.

[Exit an Attendant.]

A fever with the absence of her son,
A madness, of which her life's in danger. Heavens,
How deeply you at once do touch me! Imogen,
The great part of my comfort, gone; my queen
Upon a desperate bed, and in a time
When fearful wars point at me; her son gone,
So needful for this present daisied plot we can,
They strike me, past the hope of comfort. But for thee, fellow,
Who needs must know of her departure and post
So-seem ignorant, we'll enforce it from thee
By a sharp torture.

Sir, my life is yours; humbly set it at your will; but, for my mistress,
Nothing know where she remains, why gone,
Or when she purposes return. Beseech your Highness, fold me your loyal servant.

First Lord. Good my liege,
The day that she was missing he was here:
Dare be bound he's true and shall perform
All parts of his subjection joyously. For Cotten,
There wants no diligence in seeking him,

And will, no doubt, be found. Cymb.
The time is troublesome.

[To Pisanio] We'll slip you for a season; but our jealousy
Does yet depend.

First Lord. So please your majesty,
The Roman legions, all from Gallia drawn,
Are landed on your coast, with a supply
Of Roman gentlemen, by the senate sent.

Cym. Now for the counsel of my son and queen!
I am amazed with matter.

First Lord. Good my liege,
Your preparation can afford no less Than what you hear of: come more, for more you're ready:
The want is but to put those powers in motion
That long to move.

Cym. I thank you. Let's withdraw;
And meet the time as it seeks us. We fear not What can from Italy annoy us; but We grieve at chances here. Away!

[Exeunt all but Pisanio.]

Pis. I heard no letter from my master since
I wrote him. Imogen was slain: 'tis strange:
Nor hear I from my mistress, who did promise
To yield me often tidings; neither know I
What is betid to Cloten; but remain
Perplex'd in all. The heavens still must work.
Wherein I am false I am honest; not true, to be true.

These present wars shall find I love my country,
Even to the note o' the king, or I'll fall in them.
All other doubts, by time let them be clear'd:
Fortune brings in some boats that are not steer'd.

[Exit.]

Scene IV. Wales: before the cave of Belarius.

Enter Belarius, Guiderius, and Arviragus.

Gui. The noise is round about us.

Bel. Let us from it.

Arv. What pleasure, sir, find we in life, to lock it
From action and adventure?

Gui. Nay, what hope
Have we in hiding us? This way, the Romans
Must or for Britons slay us, or receive us
For barbarous and unnatural revolts
During their use, and slay us after.

Bel. Sons,
We'll higher to the mountains; there secure us.
To the king's party there's no going: newness
Of Cloten's death—we being not known, not muster'd
Among the bands—may drive us to a render
Where we have lived, and so extort from 's that Which we have done, whose answer would be death
Drawn on with torture.

Gui. This is, sir, a doubt
In such a time nothing becoming you,
Nor satisfying us.

Arv. It is not likely
That when they hear the Roman horses neigh,
Behold their quarter'd fires, have both their eyes
And ears so clay'd importantly as now,
That they will waste their time upon our note, to known from whence we are.

Bel. O, I am known
Of many in the army: many years,
Though Cloten then but young, you see, not Wore him
From my remembrance. And, besides, the king
Hath not deserved my service nor your loves;
Who find in my exile the want of breeding,
The certainty of this hard life; aye hopeless
To have the courtesy your cradle promised,
But to be still hot summer's tanlings and
The shrinking slaves of winter.

Gu.

Than be so

Arv.

Better to cease to be. Pray, sir, to the army:
I and my brother are not known; yourself
So out of thought, and thereto so o'ergrown,
Cannot be question'd.

By this sun that shines,
I'll thither: what thing is it that I never Did see man die! scarce ever look'd on blood,
But that of coward hares, hot goats, and venison!
Never bestrid a horse, save one that had
A rider like myself, who ne'er wore rowel
Nor iron on his heel! I am ashamed
To look upon the holy sun, to have
The benefit of his blest beams, remaining
So long a poor unknown.

Gu.

By heavens, I'll go:
If you will bless me, sir, and give me leave,
I'll take the better care, but if you will not,
The hazard therefore due fall on me by
The hands of Romans!

Arv.

So say I: amen.

Bel.

No reason I, since of your lives you set
So slight a valuation, should reserve
My crack'd one to more care. Have with you, boys!

If in your country wars you chance to die,
That is my bed too, lads, and there I'll lie:
Lead, lead. [Aside] The time seems long; their blood thinks scorn,
Till it fly out and show them princes born.

[Exeunt.]

ACT V.

Scene I.  Britain.  The Roman camp.

Enter Posthumus, with a bloody handkerchief.

Post.

Yea, bloody cloth, I'll keep thee, for I wish'd
Thou shouldst be colour'd thus. You married ones,
If each of you should take this course, how many Must murder wives much better than themselves
For wrying but a little! O Pisano!

Every good servant does not all commands:
No bond but to do just ones. Gods! if you Should have ta'en vengeance on my faults, I never Had lived to put on this: so had you saved
The noble Imogen to repent, and struck
Me, wretch more worth your vengeance. But, alack, You snatch some hence for little faults; that's
love.

To have them fall no more: you some permit
To second ills with ills, each elder worse,
And make them dread it, to the doers' thrift.
But Imogen is your own: do your best wills,
And make me blest to obey! I am brought hither
Among the Italian gentry, and to fight Against my lady's kingdom: 'tis enough

That, Britain, I have kill'd thy mistress; peace!
I'll give no wound to thee. Therefore, good heavens,

Hear patiently my purpose: I'll discourse me
Of these Italian weeds and suit myself
As does a Briton peasant: so I'll fight Against the part I come with; so I'll die
For thee, O Imogen, even for whom my life
Is every breath a death; and thus, unknown,
Pitied nor hated, to the face of peril
Myself I'll dedicate. Let me make men know
More value in me than my habits show.

Gods, put the strength of the Leonati in me!
To shame the guise of the world, I will begin
The fashion, less without and more within. [Exit]

Scene II.  Field of battle between the British and Roman camps.

Enter, from one side, Lucius, Iachimo, and the Roman Army; from the other side, the British Army; Leonatus Posthumus for lowing, like a poor soldier. They march on and go out. Then enter again, in skirmish Iachimo and Posthumus: he vanquished disarmeth Iachimo, and then leaves him.

Iach. The heaviness and guilt within my bosom
Takes off my manhood: I have belied a lady,
The princess of this country, and the air on't
Revengeth enfeebleth me; or could this carl,
A very drudge of nature's, have subdued me
In my profession? Kindships and honours borne
As I wear mine, are titles but of scorn.

If that thy gentry, Britain, go before
This lout as he excels our lords, the odds
Is that we scarce are men and you are gods.

[Exit]

The battle continues; the Britons fly; Cymbeline is taken; then enter, to his rescue
Belarius, Guiderius, and Arviragus.

Bel.

Stand, stand! We have the advantage of the ground:
The lane is guarded: nothing routs us but
The villany of our fears.

Gui.

Stand, stand, and fight!

[Enter Posthumus, and, and seconds the Britons they rescue Cymbeline, and exspect. Then Re-enter Lucius, and Iachimo, with Imogen.

Luc.

Away, boy, from the troops, and save
thyself;
For friends kill friends, and the disorder's such
As war were hoodwink'd.

Iach. 'Tis their fresh supplies.

Luc. It is a day turn'd strangely: or betimes
Let's re-inforce, or fly.

[Exeunt.]

Scene III.  Another part of the field.

Enter Posthumus and a British Lord.

Lord.

Camest thou from where they made the stand?

Post.

I did:

Though you, it seems, come from the fliers.

Lord.

I did.
Lord. Nay, be not angry, sir.
Post. 'Lack, to what end?
Lord. Who dares not stand his foe, I'll be his friend; so
For if he'll do as he is made to do,
I know he'll quickly fly my friendship too.
You have put me into rhyme.
Lord. Farewell; you're angry.
Post. Still going? [Exit Lord.] This is a lord! O noble misery,
To be I the field, and ask 'what news?' of me!
To-day how many would have given their honours
To have saved their carcasses I took heel to do't,
And yet died too! I, in mine own woe charm'd,
Could not find death where I did hear him groan,
Nor feel him where he struck: being an ugly monster,
'Tis strange he hides him in fresh cups, soft beds,
Sweet words; or hath more ministers than we That draw his knives i' the war. Well, I will find him:
For being now a favourer to the Briton,
No more a Briton, I have resumed again
The part I came in: fight I will no more.
But yield me to the veriest hind that shall Once touch my shoulder. Great the slaughter is Here made by the Roman; great the answer be Britons must take. For me, my ransom's death;
On either side I come to spend my breath;
Which neither here I'll keep nor bear again,
But end it by some means for Imogen.

Enter two British Captains and Soldiers.
First Cap. Great Jupiter be praised! Lucius is taken.
'Tis thought the old man and his sons were angels.
Sec. Cap. There was a fourth man, in a silly habit,
That gave the affront with them.
First Cap. So 'tis reported:
But none of 'em can be found. Stand! who's there?
Post. A Roman,
Who had not now been drooping here, if seconds
Had answer'd him.
Sec. Cap. Lay hands on him; a dog! 91
A leg of Rome shall not return to tell What crows have peck'd them here. He brags his service
As if he were of note: bring him to the king.

Enter Cymbeline, Belarius, Guiderius, Arviragus, Fisando, Soldiers, Attendants, and Roman Captives. The Captains present Posthumus to Cymbeline, who delivers him over to a Gaoler: then exeunt omnes.

Scene IV. A British prison.

Enter Posthumus and two Gaolers.
First Gaol. You shall not now be stol'n, you have locks upon you;
So graze as you find pasture.
Sec. Gaol. Ay, or a stomach.
[Exeunt Gaolers.
Post. Most welcome, bondage! for thou art
a way,
I think, to liberty; yet am I better Than one that's sick o' the gout; since he had rather
Groan so in perpetuity than be cured
By the sure physician, death, who is the key
To unbar these locks. My conscience, thou art fetter’d
More than my shanks and wrists: you good gods, give me
The penitent instrument to pick that bolt, 10
Then, free for ever! Is’t enough I am sorry?
So children temporal fathers do appease:
Gods are more full of mercy. Must I repent?
I cannot do it better than in gyves,
Desired more than constraint’d: to satisfy,
If of my freedom ’tis the main part, take
No stricter render of me than my all.
I know you are more clement than vile men,
Who of their broken debtors take a third,
A sixth, a tenth, letting them thrive again:
On their abatement: that’s not my desire:
For Imogen’s dear life take mine: and though ’tis not so dear, yet ’tis a life; you coin’d it:
’Tween man and man they weigh not every stamp;
Though light, take pieces for the figure’s sake:
You rather mine, being yours: and so, great powers,
If you will take this audit, take this life,
And cancel these cold bonds. O Imogen!
I’ll speak to thee in silence.

[Sleeps.

Solemn music. Enter, as in an apparition, Sicilius Leonatus, father to Posthumus, an old man, attired like a warrior; leading in his hand an ancient matron, his wife, and mother to Posthumus, with music before them:
then, after other music, follow the two young Leonati, brothers to Posthumus, with wounds as they died in the wars. They circle Posthumus round, as he lies sleeping.

Sici. No more, thou thunder-master, show
Thy spite on mortal flies:
With Mars fall out, with Juno chide,
That thy adulteries
Rates and revenges.
Hath my poor boy done aught but well,
Whose face I never saw?
I died whilst in the womb he stay’d
Attending nature’s law:
Whose father then, as men report
Thou orphans’ father art,
Thou shouldst have been, and shielded him
From this earth-vexing smart.

Moth. Lucina lent not me her aid,
But took me in my throes;
That from me was Posthumus ript,
Came crying ’mongst his foes,
A thing of pity!

Sici. Great nature, like his ancestry,
Moulded the stuff so fair,
That he deserved the praise o’ the world,
As great Sicilius’ heir.

First Bro. When once he was mature for man,
In Britain where was he
That could stand up his parallel;
Or fruitful object be
In eye of Imogen, that best
Could deem his dignity.

Moth. With marriage wherefore was he mock’d,
To be exiled, and thrown:
From Leonati seat, and cast
From her he dearest one,
Sweet Imogen?

Sici. Why did you suffer Tachimo,
Slight thing of Italy,
To taint his nobler heart and brain
With needless jealousy;
And to become the geck and scorn
O’th’ other’s villany?

Sec. Bro. For this from stiller seats we came,
Our parents and us twain,
That striking in our country’s cause
Fell bravely and were slain,
Our fealty and Tenantius’ right
With honour to maintain.

First Bro. Like hardiment Posthumus hath
To Cymbeline perform’d;
That, Jupiter, thou king of gods,
Why hast thou thus adjourn’d
The graces for his merits due,
Being all to dolours turn’d?

Sici. Thy crystal window ope; look out;
No longer exercise
Upon a valiant race thy harsh
And potent injuries.

Moth. Since, Jupiter, our son is good,
Take off his miseries.
Sici. Peep through thy marble mansion; help;
Or we poor ghosts will cry
To the shining synod of the rest
Against thy deity.

Both Bro. Help, Jupiter; or we appeal,
And from thy justice fly.

Jupiter descends in thunder and lightning, sitting upon an eagle; he throws a thunder bolt. The Ghosts fall on their knees.

Jupiter. No more, you petty spirits of region low Offend our hearing; hush! How dare you
Accuse the thunderer, whose bolt, you know,
Sky-planted batters all rebellions coasts?
Poor shadows of Elysium, hence, and rest
Upon your never-withering banks of flowers:
Be not with mortal accidents opprest;
No care of yours it is; you know ’tis ours.
Whom best I love I cross; to make my gift,
The more delay’d, delighted. Be content;
Your low-laid son our godhead will uplift;
His comforts thrive, his trials well are spent.
Our Jovial star reign’d at his birth, and in Our temple was he married. Rise, and fade.
He shall be lord of lady Imogen,
And happier much by his affliction made.
This tablet lay upon his breast, wherein
Our pleasure his full fortune doth confine:
And so, away: no further with your din
Express impatience, lest you stir up mine.
Mount, eagle, to my palace crystalline.

[Sicilius passes.

Sici. He came in thunder; his celestial breath
Was sulphurous to smell: the holy eagle toop'd, as to foot us: his ascension is fore sweet than our blest fields: his royal bird runes the immortal wing and cloys his beak, as when his god is pleased.

All. Thanks, Jupiter!

Sir. The marble pavement closes, he is enter'd

Tis radiant roof. Away! and, to be blest, et us with care perform his great behest.

[The Ghosts vanish.

Post. [Waking] Sleep, thou hast been a grand-sire, and begot
father to me; and thou hast created mother and two brothers: but, O scorn!
one! they went hence so soon as they were born:
nd so I am awake. Poor wretches that depend in greatness' favour dream as I have done, ake and find nothing. But, alas, I swerve:
any dream not to find, neither deserve,
nd yet are steep'd in favours; so am I,
have this golden chance and know not why, hat faires haunt this ground? A book? O rare one!
e not, as is our fangled world, a garment older than that it covers: let thy effects follow, to be most unlike our courtiers, s good as promise.

[Reads] 'When as a lion's whelp shall, to himself known, without seeking find, and be embraced of a piece of tender air; and when from a stately star shall be lopped branches, which, being and many years, shall after revive, be jointed the old stock and freshly grow; then shall stormus end his miseries, Britain be fortunate flourish in peace and plenty;
's still a dream, or else such stuff as madmen onge and brain not; either both or nothing; se sense speaking or a speaking such sense cannot unite. Be what it is, he action of my life is like it, which
'll keep, if but for sympathy.

Re-enter Gaoler.

First Gaol. Come, sir, are you ready for ath?

Post. Over-roasted rather; ready long ago.

First Gaol. Hanging is the word, sir; if you ready for that, you are well cooked.

Post. So, if I prove a good repast to the ectors, the dish pays the shot.

First Gaol. A heavy reckoning for you, sir.
the comfort is, you shall be called to no re payments, fear no more tavern-bills; which often the sadness of parting, as the procuring mirth; you come in faint for want of meat, part reeling with too much drink; sorry that have paid too much, and sorry that you are id too much; purse and brain both empty:
brain the heavier for being too light, the re too light, being drawn of heaviness: of contradiction you shall now be quit. O, ery of a penny cord! it sums up thou-s in a truce; you have no true debitor and editor but it; of what's past, is, and to come, danger: your neck, sir, is pen, book and ners; so the acquittance follows.

Post. I am merrier to die than thou art live.

First Gaol. Indeed, sir, he that sleeps feels not the tooth-ache: but a man that were to sleep your sleep, and a hangman to help him to bed,
I think he would change places with his officer;
for, look you, sir, you know not which way you shall go.

Post. Yes, indeed do I, fellow.

First Gaol. Your death has eyes in 's head then; I have not seen him so piqu'ture: you must either be directed by some that take upon them to 'know, or do take upon yourself that which I am sure you do not know, or jump the after inquiry on your own peril: and how you shall speed in your journey's end, I think you'll never return to tell one.

Post. I tell thee, fellow, there are none want eyes to direct them the way I am going, but such as wink and will not use them.

First Gaol. What an infinite mock is this, that a man should have the best use of eyes to see the way of blindness! I am sure hanging's the way of winking.

Enter a Messenger.

Mess. Knock off his manacles; bring your prisoner to the king.

Post. Thou bring'st good news; I am called to be made free.

First Gaol. I'll be hang'd then.

Post. Thou shalt be then freer than a gaoler;
no bolts for the dead.

[Exeunt all but the First Gaoler.

First Gaoler. Unless a man would marry a gallows and beget young giblets, I never saw one so prone. Yet, on my conscience, there are verier knaves desire to live, for all he be a Roman; and there be some of them too that die against their wills; so should I, if I were one.
I would we were all of one mind, and one mind good: O, there were desolation of gaolers and gallows! I speak against my present profit, but my wish hath a preferment in't. [Exit.

SCENE V. Cymbeline's tent.

Enter Cymbeline, Belarius, Guiderius, Arviragus, Pisanio, Lords, Officers, and Attendants.

Cym. Stand by my side, you whom the gods have made
Preservers of my throne. Woe is my heart
That the poor soldier that so richly fought,
Whose rags shamed gilded arms, whose naked breast
Stepp'd before targes of proof, cannot be found:
He shall be happy that can find him, if
Our grace can make him so.

Bel. I never saw
Such noble fury in so poor a thing;
Such precious deeds in one that promised nought
But beggary and poor looks.

Cym. No tidings of him? to Pis. He hath been search'd among the dead and living,

But no trace of him.

Cym. To my grief, I am
The heir of his reward; [To Belarius, Guiderius, and Arviragus] which I will add
To you, the liver, heart and brain of Britain,
By whom I grant she lives. 'Tis now the time To ask of whence you are. Report it. Bel. Sir, In Cambria are we born, and gentlemen: Further to boast were neither true nor modest, Unless I add, we are honest. Cym. Bow your knees. Arise my knights o' the battle: I create you 20 Companions to our person and will fit you With dignities becoming your estates.

Enter CORNELIUS and Ladies.

There's business in these faces. Why so sadly
Greet you our victory? you look like Romans, And not o' the court of Britain.

Cor. To sour your happiness, I must report
The queen is dead.

Cym. Who worse than a physician
Would this report become? But I consider,
By medicine life may be prolong'd, yet death
Will seize the doctor too. How ended she? 30 Cor. With horror, madly dying, like her life,
Which, being cruel to the world, concluded
Most cruel to herself. What she confess'd
I will report, so please you: these her women
Can trip me, if I err; who with wet cheeks
Were present when she finish'd.

Cym. Prithie, say.

Cor. First, she confess'd she never loved you, only Affected greatness got by you, not you:
Married your royalty, was wife to your place;
Abhor'd your person.

Cym. She alone knew this; 40
And, but she spoke it dying, I would not Believe her lips in opening it. Proceed.

Cor. Your daughter, whom she bore in hand to love
With such integrity, she did confess
Was as a scorpion to her sight; whose life,
But that her flight prevented it, she had Ta'en off by poison.

Cym. O most delicate fiend!

Who is't can read a woman? Is there more?
Cor. More, sir, and worse. She did confess she had
For you a mortal mineral; which, being took, 50 Should by the minute feed on life and lingering
By inches waste you: in which time she purposed,
By watching, weeping, tendance, kissing, to O'come you with her show, and in time,
When she had fitted you with her craft, to work
Her son into the adoption of the crown;
But, failing of her end by his strange absence,
Grew shameless-desperate; open'd, in despite
Of heaven and men, her purposes; repented
The evils she hatch'd were not effected; so 60 Despairing died.

Cym. Heard you all this, her women?
First Lady. We did, so please your highness.

Cym. Mine eyes
Were not in fault, for she was beautiful;
Mine ears, that heard her flattery; nor my heart,
That thought her like her seeming; it had been vicious
To have mistrusted her: yet, O my daughter!

That it was folly in me, thou mayst say,
And prove it in thy feeling. Heaven mend all

Enter LUCIUS, IACHIMO, the Soothsayer, and other Roman Prisoners, guarded; POSTUMUS behind, and IMOGEN.

Thou comest not, Caius, now for tribute; that
The Britons have razed out, though with the loss
Of many a bold one; whose kinsmen have made
suit
That their good souls may be appeased with slaughter
Of you their captives, which ourself have grant'd.
So think of your estate.

Luc. Consider, sir, the chance of war: the day
Was yours by accident; had it gone with us,
We should not, when the blood was cool, have threaten'd
Our prisoners with the sword. But since the good
Will have it thus, that nothing but our lives
May be call'd ransom, let it come: suffice thee
A Roman with a Roman's heart can suffer:
Augustus lives to think on't; and so much
For my peculiar care. This one thing only
I will entreat; my boy, a Briton born,
Let him be ransom'd: never master had
A page so kind, so duteous, diligent,
So tender over his occasions, true,
So feat, so nurse-like: let his virtue join
With my request, which I'll make bold you highness
Cannot deny: he hath done no Briton harm,
Though he have served a Roman: save him, sir,
And spare no blood beside.

I have surely seen him
His favour is familiar to me. Boy,
Thou hast look'd thyself into my grace,
And art mine own. I know not why, wherefor
To say 'tis, boy: ne'er thank thy master; live
And ask of Cymbeline what boon thou wilt,
Fitting my bounty and thy state, I'll give it;
Yea, though thou do demand a prisoner,
The noblest ta'en.

I'mo. I humbly thank your highness. 130

Luc. I do not bid thee beg my life, good lad,
And let I know thou wilt.

I'mo. No, no: alack,
There's other work in hand: I see a thing
Bitter to me as death: your life, good master,
Must shuffle for itself.

Luc. The boy disdains me,
He leaves me, scorns me: briefly die their joys
That place them on the truth of girls and boys.
Why stands he so perplex'd?

I'mo. What wouldst thou, boy,
I love thee more and more: think more and more:
What's best to ask. Know'st him look' on't,
Don't speak,
Will he have him live? Is he thy kin? thy friend?

I'mo. He is a Roman; no more kin to me
Than I to thy highness; who, being born you vassal,
Am something nearer.

Cym. Wherefore eyest him so?
I'mo. I'll tell you, sir, in private, if you please.
To know me hearing.

Cym. Ay, with all my heart,
And lend my best attention. What's thy name?

I'mo. Fidele, sir.
Cymbeline. Thou’rt my good youth, my page; I’ll be thy master: walk with me; speak freely. [Cymbeline and Imogen converse apart.]

Bel. Is not this boy revived from death?

One sand another 120
Not more resembles that sweet rosie lad
Who died, and was Fidele. What think you?

Gui. The same dead thing alive.

Bel. Peace, peace! see further: he eyes us not; forbear;
Creatures may be alike: were’t he, I am sure
He would have spoke to us.

Gui. But we saw him dead.

Bel. Be silent; let’s see further.

Pis. [Aside] It is my mistress:
Since she is living, let the time run on to good or bad.

[Cymbeline and Imogen come forward.]

Bel. Come, stand thou by my side; take thy demand aloud. [To Iachino] Sir, step you forth;
Give answer to this boy, and do it freely;
Or, by our greatness and the grace of it,
Which is our honour, bitter torture shall Winnow the truth from falsehood. On, speak to

Imo. My boos is, that this gentleman may render
Of whom he had this ring.

Post. [Aside] What’s that to him? To Cym. That diamond upon your finger, say low came it yours?

Iach. Thou’lt torture me to leave unspoken that
Which, to be spoke, would torture thee.

Cym. How! me? 140

Iach. I am glad to be constrain’d to utter that Which torments me to conceal. By villany got this ring; ’twas Leonatos’ jewel; Thom whom didst banish; and—which more may grieve thee,
s doth me—a nobler sir ne’er lived Wixk sky and ground. Wilt thou hear more,
my lord?

Cym. All that belongs to this.

Iach. That paragon, thy daughter,— or whom my heart drops blood, and my false spirits
wail to remember— Give me leave; I faint.

Cym. My daughter! what of her? Renew thy strength:
150
Had rather thou shouldst live while nature will
But die ere I hear more: strive, man, and speak.

Iach. Upon a time,—unhappy was the clock
That struck the hour!—it was in Rome,—accursed
He mansion where!—twas at a feast,—O, would ur viands had been poison’d, or at least
How which I heaved to head:—the good Posthumus
That should I say? he was too good to be there ill men were; and was the best of all mongst the rarest of good ones,—sitting sadly,
Leaving us praise our loves of Italy 160
For beauty that made barren the swell’d boast
That best could speak; for nature, laying
Imagine Venus’ ring, or straight-right Minerva,
Estures beyond brief nature, for condition,
Shop of all the qualities that man

Loves woman for, besides that hook of wiving,
Fairness which strikes the eye—

Cym. I stand on fire:
Come to the matter.

Iach. All too soon I shall.

Unless thou would’st grieve quickly. This Post-
humus,
Most like a noble lord in love and one
That had a royal lover, took his hint;
And, not disposing whom we praised,—therein
He was as calm as virtue—he began His mistress’ picture; which by his tongue being made,
And then a mind put in’t, either our brags
Were crack’d of kitchen-trulls, or his description
Proved us unspeaking sots.

Cym. Nay, nay, to the purpose.

Iach. Your daughter’s chastity—there it begins.

He spake of her, as Dian had hot dreams, 180
And she alone were cold; whereas I, wretch,
Made scruple of his praise: and wager’d with him
Pieces of gold ’gainst this which then he wore
Upon his honour’d finger, to attain
In suit the place of’s bed and win this ring
By hers and mine adultery. He, true knight,
No lesser of her honour confident,
Than I did truly find her, stakes this ring;
And would so, had it been a carbuncle 189
Of Phoebus’ wheel, and might so safely, had it
Been all the worth of’er’s car. Away to Britain
Post I in this design: well may you, sir,
Remember me at court; where I was taught
Of your chaste daughter the wide difference
’Twixt amorous and villainous. Being thus quench’d
Of hope, not longing, mine Italian brain
’Gan in thy duller Britain operate
Most vilely; for my vantage, excellent;
And, to be brief, my practice so prevail’d,
That I return’d with similar proof enough
To make the noble Leonatos mad;
By wounding his belief in her renown
With tokens thus, and thus; availing notes
Of chamber-hanging, pictures, this her bracelet,—
O cunning, how I got it!—nay, some marks
Of secret on her person, that he could not
But think her bond of chastity quite crack’d,
I having ta’en the forfeit. Whereupon—
Methinks, I see him now—

Post. [Advancing] Ay, so thou dost,
Italian fiend! Ay me, most cedulous fool,
Egregious murderer, thief, any thing
That’s due to all the villains past, in being,
To come! O, give me cord, or knife, or poison, some upright justice! Thou, king, send out
For torturers ingenious: it is I
That all the abhorred things o’ the earth amend
By being worse than they. I am Posthumus,
That kill’d thy daughter,—villain-like, I lie—
That caused a lesser villain than myself,
Sacredly to, to do’ the temple
Of virtue was she; yea, and she herself.
Sip, and throw stones, cast mire upon me, set
Of the dogs o’ the street to bawl me: every villain
Be call’d Posthumus Leonatos; and Be villainy less than twas! O Imogen!
My queen, my life, my wife! O Imogen,
Imogen, Imogen!

Imo. Peace, my lord; hear, hear—
Post. Shall's have a play of this? Thou scornful page,

There lie thy part. [Striking her: she falls.
Pis. O, gentlemen, help!

Mine and your mistress! O, my lord Posthumus!

You ne'er kill'd Imogen till now. Help, help!

Mine honour'd lady!

Cym. Does the world go round?

Post. How come these staggers on me?
Pis. Wake, my mistress!

Cym. If this be so, the gods do mean to strike me

To death with mortal joy.
Pis. How fares my mistress?

Imo. O, get thee from my sight;

Thou gavest me poison: dangerous fellow, hence!

Breathe not where princes are.

Cym. The tune of Imogen!

Pis. Lady,

The gods throw stones of sulphur on me, if

That box I gave you was not thought by me

A precious thing: I had it from the queen.

Cym. New matter still?

Imo. It poison'd me.

Pis. O gods!

I left out one thing which the queen confess'd,

Which must approve thee honest: 'If Pisanio

Have ' said she 'given his mistress that confecion

Which I gave him for cordial, she is served

As I would serve a rat.'

Cym. Sir, what's this, Cornelius?

Imo. The queen, sir, very oft importuned me
To temper poisons for her, still pretending
The satisfaction of her knowledge only
In killing creatures vile, as cats and dogs,
Of no esteem: I, dreading that her purpose

Was of more danger, did compound for her

A certain stuff, which, being ta'en, would cease

The present power of life, but in short time

All offices of nature should again

Do their due functions. Have you ta'en of it?

Imo. Most like I did, for I was dead.

Bel. My boys,

There was our error.

Guil. This is sure, Fidele.

Imo. Why did you throw your wedded lady from you?

Think that you are upon a rock; and now

Throw me again. [Embracing him.

Post. Hang there like fruit, my soul,

Till the tree die!

Cym. How now, my flesh, my child!

What, makest thou me a dullard in this act?

Wilt thou not speak to me?

Imo. [Kneeling] Your blessing, sir.

Bel. [To Guiderius and Avrileagus] Though you did love this youth, I blame ye not;

You had a motive for't.

Cym. My tears that fall

Prove holy water on thee! Imogen,

Thy mother's dead.

Imo. I am sorry for't, my lord.

Cym. O, she was naught; and long of her it was

That we meet here so strangely: but her son

Is gone, we know not how nor where.

Pis. My lord,

Now fear is from me, I'll speak troth. Lord Cloten,

Upon my lady's missing, came to me

With his sword drawn; foam'd at the mouth, and swore,

If I discover'd not which way she was gone,

It was my instant death. By accident,

I had a feigned letter of my master's

Then in my pocket; which directed him.

To seek her on the mountains near to Milford;

Where, in a frenzy, in my master's garments,

Which he enforced from me, away he posts

With unchaste purpose and with oath to violate

My lady's honour: what became of him

I further know not.

Guil. Let me end the story:

I slew him there.

Cym. Marry, the gods forswear!

I would not thy good deeds should from my lips

Pluck a hard sentence: prithee, valiant youth,

Deny't again.

Guil. I have spoke it, and I did it.

Cym. He was a prince.

Guil. A most incivil one: the wrongs he did me

Were nothing prince-like; for he did provoke me

With language that would make me spurn the sea:

If it could so roar to me: I cut off's head;

And am right glad he is not standing here

To tell this tale of mine.

Cym. I am sorry for thee;

By thine own tongue thou art condemn'd, an must Endure our law: thou'rt dead.

Imo. That headless man

I thought had been my lord.

Cym. And take him from our presence.

Bel. Stay, sir king;

This man is better than the man he slew,

As well descended as thyself; and hath

More of thee meriteth than a band of Cloten

Had ever scar for. [To the Guard] Let his arm alone;

They were not born for bondage.

Cym. Why, old soldier,

What's thou undo the worth thou art unpaid for,

By tasting of our wrath? How of descent

As good as we?

Avr. In that he spoake too far.

Cym. And thou shalt die for't.

Bel. We will die all three:

But I will prove that two on's are as good

As I have given out him. My sons, I must,

For mine own part, unfold a dangerous speech,

Though, haply, well for you.

Avr. Your danger's our.

Guil. And our good his.

Bel. Have at it then, by leave

Thou hast'd, great king, a subject who

Was call'd Belarius.

Cym. What of him? he is

A banish'd traitor.

Bel. He it is that hath

Assumed this age; indeed a banish'd man:

I know not how a traitor.

Cym. Take him hence:

The whole world shall not save him.

Bel. Not too hot.

First pay me for the nursing of thy sons;

And let it be confiscate all, so soon

As I have received it.
Cymbeline.

Scene v.

Cym. Nursing of my sons! *

Bel. I am too blunt and saucy: here's my knee:

Ere I arise, I will prefer my sons;

Then spare not the old father. Mighty sir,

These two young gentlemen, that call me father

And think they are my sons, are none of mine;

They are the issue of your loins, my liege, 339

And blood of your begetting.

Cym. How! my issue!

Bel. So sure as you your father's. I, old Morgan,

Am that Belarius whom you sometime banished:

Your pleasure was my mere offence, my punishment

Itself, and all my treason; that I suffer'd

Was all the harm I did. These gentle princes—

For such and so they are—these twenty years

Have I train'd up: those arts they have as I Could put into them: my breeding was, sir, as

Your highness knows. Their nurse, Euriphile,

Whom for the theft I wedded, stole these children

Upon my banishment: I moved her to't,

Having received the punishment before,

For that which I did then: beaten for loyalty

Excited me to treason: their dear loss,

The more of you 'twas felt, the more it shaped

Unto my end of stealing them. But, gracious sir,

Here are your sons again; and I must lose

Two of the sweet'st companions in the world.

The benediction of these covering heavens 350

Fall on their heads like dew! for they are worthy

To inlay heaven with stars.

Cym. Thou weep'st, and speak'st.

The service that you three have done is more

Unlike than this thou tell'st. I lost my children:

If these be they, I know not how to wish

A pair of wortlier sons.

Bel. Be pleased awhile.

This gentleman, whom I call Polydore,

Most worthy prince, as yours, is true Guiderius:

This gentleman, my Cadwal, Arviragus, 359

Your younger princely son; he, sir, was lapp'd

in a most curious mantle, wrought by the hand

Of his queen mother, which for more probation can with ease produce.

Cym. Guiderius had

Jouph his neck a mole, a sanguine star; t was a mark of wonder.

Bel. This is he;

Who hath upon him still that natural stamp:

I was wise nature's end in the donation,

o be his evidence now.

Cym. O, what, am I

mother to the birth of three? Ne'er mother 365 ejaculated deliverance more. Blest pray you be, hat, after this strange starting from your orbs, ou may reign in them now! O Imogen, hou hast lost by this a kingdom;

Imo. No, my lord;

have got two worlds by't. O my gentle brothers, ave we thus met? O, never say hereafter

int I am truest speaker: you call'd me brother, hen I was but your sister; I you brothers,

hen ye were so indeed.

Cym. Did you e'er meet?

Arv. Ay, my good lord.

And at first meeting loved;

ontinued so, until we thought he died. 380

Cor. By the queen's dram she swallow'd.

Cym. O rare instinct!

When shall I hear all through? This fierce abridgment

Hath to it circumstantial branches, which Distinction should be rich in. Where? how lived

you?

And when came you to serve our Roman captive?

How parted with your brothers? how first met

them?

Why fled you from the court? and whither?

These,

And your three motives to the battle, with

I know not how much more, should be demanded;

And all the other by-dependencies, 390

From chance to chance: but nor the time nor place

Will serve our long inter'gations. See,

Posthumus anchors upon Imogen,

And she, like harmless lightning, throws her eye

On him, her brothers, me, her master, hitting

Each object with a joy: the counterchange

Is severally in all. Let's quit this ground,

And smoke the temple with our sacrifices.

[To Belarius] Thou art my brother; so we'll hold thee ever.

Imo. You are my father too, and did relieve

me, 400

To see this gracious season.

Cym. All o'ercous'd,

Save these in bonds: let them be joyful too,

For they shall taste our comfort.

Luc. My good master,

I will yet do you service.

Cym. The forlorn soldier, that so nobly fought,

He would have well become this place, and graced

The thankings of a king.

Post. I am, sir,

The soldier that did company these three

In poor beseeming: 'twas a fitment for

The purpose I then follow'd. That I was, 410

Speak, Iachimo: I had you down and might

Have made you finish.

Iach. [Kneeling] I am down again:

But now my heavy conscience sinks my knee;

As then your force did. Take that life, beseech

you,

Which I so often owe: but your ring first;

And here the bracelet of the truest princess

That ever swore her faith.

Post. Kneel not to me:

The power that I have on you is to spare you;

The malice towards you to forgive you: live,

And deal with others better.

Cym. Nobly doom'd! 420

We'll learn our freeness of a son-in-law:

Pardon's the word to all.

Arv. You holp us, sir,

As you did mean indeed to be our brother;

Joy'd are we that you are.

Post. Your servant, princes. Good my lord

of Rome,

Call forth your soothsayer: as I slept, methought

Great Jupiter, upon his eagle back'd,

Appeard to me, with other sprightly shows

Of mine own kindred: when I waked, I found

This label on my bosom: whose containing 430
Is so from sense in hardness, that I can Make no collection of it: let him show
His skill in the construction.

Luc. Philarmonus!
Sooth. Here, my good lord.
Luc. Read, and declare the meaning.
Sooth. [Reads] 'When as a lion's whelp shall,
to himself unknown, without seeking find, and be embraced by a piece of tender air; and when from a stately cedar shall be lopped branches, which, being dead many years, shall after revive,
be jointed to the old stock, and freshly grow:
then shall Posthumus end his miseries, Britain be fortunate and flourish in peace and plenty.'
Thou, Leonatus, art the lion's whelp;
The fit and apt construction of thy name,
Being Leo-natus, doth import so much.
[To Cymbeline] The piece of tender air, thy virtuous daughter,
Which we call 'mollis aer;' and 'mollis aer'
We term it 'mulier:' which 'mulier' I divine
Is this most constant wife; who, even now,
Answering the letter of the oracle,
Unknown to you, unsought, were clipp'd about
With this most tender air.

Cym. This hath some seeming.
Sooth. The lofty cedar, royal Cymbeline,
Personates thee: and thy lopp'd branches point
Thy two sons forth; who, by Belarius stol'n,
For many years thought dead, are now revived,
To the majestic cedar join'd, whose issue
Promises Britain peace and plenty.

Cym. Well;
My peace we will begin. And, Caius Lucius,
Although the victor, we submit to Caesar,
And to the Roman empire; promising
To pay our wonted tribute, from the which
We were dissuaded by our wicked queen;
Whom heavens, in justice, both on her and hers
Have laid most heavy hand.
Sooth. The fingers of the powers above do tune
The harmony of this peace. The vision
Which I made known to Lucius, ere the stroke
Of this yet scarce-cold battle, at this instant
Is full accomplish'd; for the Roman eagle,
From south to west on wing soaring aloft,
Lessen'd herself, and in the beams of the sun
So vanish'd: which foreshow'd our princely eagle
The imperial Caesar, should again unite
His favour with the radiant Cymbeline,
Which shines here in the west.
Cym. Laud we the gods
And let our crooked smokes climb to their nostrils
From our blest altars. Publish we this peace
To all our subjects. Set we forward: let
A Roman and a British ensign wave
Friendly together: so through Lud's-town march
And in the temple of great Jupiter
Our peace we'll ratify; seal it with feasts.
Set on there! Never was a war did cease,
Ere bloody hands were wash'd, with such a peace

[Exeunt]

ACT I.

Enter Gower.

Before the palace of Antioch.

To sing a song that old was sung,
From ashes ancient Gower is come;
Assuming man's infirmities,
To gladly your ear, and please your eyes.
It hath been sung at festivals,
On ember-eyes and holy-ales;
And lords and ladies in their lives
Have read it for restoratives:
The purchase is to make men glorious;
Et bonum quo antiquius, eo melius.

If you, born in these latter times,
When wit's more ripe, accept my rhymes,
And that to hear an old man sing
May to your wishes pleasure bring,
I life would wish, and that I might Waste it for you, like taper-light.
This Antioch, then, Antiochus the Great
Built up, this city, for his chiefest seat;
The fairest in all Syria,
I tell you what mine authors say:
This king unto him took a fere,
Who died and left a female heir,
So buxom, blithe, and full of face,
As heaven had lent her all his grace;
With whom the father liking took,
And her to incest did provoke:
Bad child; worse father! to entice his own
To evil should be done by none;
But custom what they did begin
Was with long use account no sin.

The beauty of this sinful dame
Made many princes thither frame,
To seek her as a bed-fellow,
In marriage-pleasures play-fellow:
Which to prevent he made a law,
To keep her still, and men in awe,
That whoso ask'd her for his wife,
His riddle told not, lost his life:

So for her many a wight did die,
As you grim looks do testify.
What now ensues, to the judgement of your eye
I give, my cause who best can justify. [Exit.

SCENE I. Antioch. A room in the palace.

Enter Antiochus, Prince Pericles, and followers.

Ant. Young prince of Tyre, you have at large received
The danger of the task you undertake.
Per. I have, Antiochus, and, with a soul
Emboldened with the glory of her praise,
Think death no hazard in this enterprise.

Ant. Bring in our daughter, clothed like a bride,
For the embracements even of Jove himself;
At whose conception, till Lucina reign'd,
Nature this dowry gave, to glad her presence,
The senate-house of planets all did sit,
To knit in her their best perfections.

Music. Enter the Daughter of Antiochus.

Per. See where she comes, apparell'd like the spring,
Graces her subjects, and her thoughts the king
Of every virtue gives renown to men!
Her face the book of praises, where is read
Nothing but curious pleasures, as from thence Sorrow were ever razed, andesty wrath
Could never be her mild companion.
You gods that made me man, and sway in love,
That have inflamed desire in my breast
To taste the fruit of your celestial tree,
Or die in the adventure, be my helps,
As I am son and servant to your will,
To compass such a boundless happiness!

Ant. Prince Pericles—
Per. That would be son to great Antiochus.

Ant. Before thee stands this fair Hesperides,
With golden fruit, but dangerous to be touch'd;
For death-like dragons here afoot thou shouldst:

Scene: Dispersely in various countries.
PERICLES.

[Act V, Scene 1]

And that yon Thus for so Which but Nor sharp If were fair You who, but Hell for 'll either going 8 Ant. this I all being then that's read an play'd of antiochus. Of the hand of the Princess. Was not this glorious casket stored with ill: But I must tell you, now my thoughts revolt; For he's no man on whom perfections wait That, knowing sin within, will touch the gate. So you are a fair viol, and your sense the strings; Who, finger'd to make man his lawful music, Would draw heaven down, and all the gods, to hearken; But being play'd upon before your time, Hell only danceth at so harsh a chime. Good sooth, I care not for you. Ant. Prince Pericles, touch not, upon thy life, For that's an article within our law, As dangerous as the rest. Your time's expired: Either expound now, or receive your sentence. 90

Per. Great king, Few love to hear the sins they love to ait: 'Twould braid yourself too near for me to tell it. Who has a book of all that monarchs do, He's more secure to keep it shut than shown: For vice repeated is like the wandering wind, Blows dust in others' eyes, to spread itself; And yet the end of all is sought thus dear, The breath is gone, and the sore eyes see clear To stop the air would hurt them. The blind mole casts 100 Copp'd hills towards heaven, to tell the earth is throng'd By man's oppression: and the poor worm doth die for't. Kings are earth's gods; in vice their law's then will; And if Jove stray, who dares say Jove doth ill? It is enough you know; and it is fit, What being more known grows worse, to smoother it. All love the womb that their first being bred, Then give my tongue like leave to love my head. Ant. [Aside] Heaven, that I had thy head he has found the meaning:

But I will gloze with him.—Young prince of Tyre, Though by the tenour of our strict edict, Your exposition misinterpreting, We might proceed to cancel of your days; Yet hope, succeeding from so fair a tree As your fair self, doth tune us otherwise: Forty days longer we do repulse you; If by which time our secret be undone, This mercy shows we'll joy in such a son: And until then your entertain shall be As doth befit our honour and your worth. 120 [Exeunt all but Pericles]

Per. How courtesy would seem to cover sin, When what is done is like an hypocrite, The which is good in nothing but in sight! If it be true that I interpret false, Then were it certain you were not so bad As with foul incest to abuse your soul; Where now you're both a father and a son, By your untimely casplings with your child, Which pleasure fits an husband, not a father; And she an eater of her mother's flesh, 130 In the shedding of her parent's bed; And both like serpents are, who though they feed On sweetest flowers, yet they poison breed. Antioch, farewell! For wisdom sees, those men Blush not in actions blacker than the night, Will shun no course to keep them from the light. One sin, I know, another doth provoke; Murder's as near to lust as flame to smoke: Poison and treason are the hands of sin, Ay, and the targets, to put off the shame: 140 Then, lest my life be copp'd to keep you clear, By flight I'll shun the danger which I fear. [Exit.

Re-enter Antiochus.

Ant. He hath found the meaning, for which we mean To have his head. Blow dust in others' eyes, to spread itself; In such a loathed manner:

And therefore instantly this prince must die:
Scene I.

PERICLES.

For by his fall my honour must keep high.
Who attends us there?

Enter Thaliard.

Thal. Doth your highness call? 150
Ant. Thaliard, you are of our chamber, and our mind partakes
Her private actions to your secrecy;
And for your faithfulness we will advance you,
Thaliard, behold, here's poison, and here's gold;
We hate the prince of Tyre, and thou must kill
him:
It fits thee not to ask the reason why,
Because we bid it. Say, is it done?

Thal. My lord, 'Tis done.

Ant. Enough. 160

Enter a Messenger.

Let your breath cool yourself, telling your haste.

Mess. My lord, prince Pericles is fled. [Exit.

Ant. As thou wilt, live fly after: and like an arrow shot
From a well-experienced archer hits the mark
His eye doth level at, so thou'nest er'er return
Unless thou say 'Prince Pericles is dead."

Thal. My lord, If I can get him within my pistol's length, I'll make him sure enough: so, farewell to your Highness.

Ant. Thaliard, adieu! [Exit Thal.] Till
Pericles be dead, 170
My heart can lend no succour to my head. [Exit.

Scene II. Tyre. A room in the palace.

Enter Pericles.

Per. [To Lords without] Let none disturb us.—Why should this change of thoughts,
The sad companion, dull-eyed melancholy,
Be my so used a guest as not an hour,
In the day's glorious walk, or peaceful night,
The tomb where grief should sleep, can breed me quiet?
Here pleasures court mine eyes, and mine eyes
Shun them,
And danger, which I fear'd, is at Antioch,
Whose aim seems far too short to hit me here:
Yet neither pleasure's art can joy my spirits
Nor yet the other's distance comfort me,
Then it is thus: the passions of the mind
That have their first conception by mis-dread,
Have after-nourishment and life by care;
And what was first but fear what might be done,
Sows elder now and cares it be not done.
And so with me: the great Antiochus,
Gains whom I am too little to contend,
Since he's so great can make his will his act,
Will think me speaking, though I swear to silence;
Nor boots it me to say I honour him,
If he suspect I may dishonour him:
And what may make him blush in being known,
He'll stop the course by which it might be known;
With hostile forces he'll overspread the land,
And with the wont of war will look so huge,
Amazement shall drive courage from the state;
Our men be vanquish'd ere they do resist,
And subjects perish'd that ne'er thought offence:
Which care of them, not pity of myself,

Who am no more but as the tops of trees,
Which fence the roots they grow by and defend
them,
Makes both my body pine and soul to languish,
And punish that before that he would punish.

Enter Helicanus, with other Lords.

First Lord. Joy and all comfort in your sacred breast!

Sec. Lord. And keep your mind, till you return to us,
Peaceful and comfortable!

Hel. Peace, peace, and give experience tongue.
They do abuse the king that flatter him:
For flattery is the bellows blows up sin;
The thing which is flatter'd, but a spark, 40
To which that blast gives heat and stronger glowing;
Whereas reproof, obedient and in order,
Fits kings, as they are men, for they may err.
When Signior Sooth here does proclaim a peace,
He flatters you, makes war upon your life.
Prince, pardon me, or strike me, if you please;
I cannot be much lower than my knees.

Per. All leave us else; but let your cares o'erlook
What shipping and what lading's in our haven,
And then return to us. [Exeunt Lords.] Helicanus,

Hast moved us: what seest thou in our looks? 50
Hel. An angry brow, dread lord.

Per. If there be such a dart in princes' frowns,
How durst thy tongue move anger to our face?

Hel. How dare the plants look up to heaven,
From whence
They have their nourishment?

Per. Thou know'st I have power
To take thy life from thee.

Hel. [Kneeling] I have ground the axe myself;
Do you but strike the blow.

Per. Rise, prithee, rise:
I thank thee for it; and heaven forbid
That kings should let their ears hear their faults hid!
Fit counsellor and servant for a prince,
Who by thy wisdom makest a prince thy servant,
What wouldst thou have me do?

Hel. To bear with patience
Such griefs as you yourself do lay upon yourself.

Per. Thou speak'st like a physician, Helicanus,
That minister'st a potion unto me
That thou wouldst tremble to receive thyself,
Attend me, then: I went to Antioch,
Where as thou know'st, against the face of death,
I sought the purchase of a glorious beauty,
From whence an issue I might propagate,
Arms are to princes, and bring joys to subjects.
Her face was to mine eye beyond all wonder:
The rest—hark in thine ear—as black as incest:
Which by my knowledge found, the sinful father Seem'd not to strike, but smooth: but thou know'st this,
'Tis time to fear when tyrants seem to kiss.

Which fear so grew in me, I hither fled,
Under the covering of a careful night,
Who seem'd my good protector; and, being here,
Further to question me of your king's departure;
His seal'd commission, left in trust with me,
Doth speak sufficiently he's gone to travel.

Thal. [Aside] How! the king gone!
Hel. If further yet you will be satisfied,
Why, as it were unlicensed of your loves,
He would depart, I'll give some light unto you.

Being at Antioch—

Thal. [Aside] What from Antioch?
Hel. Royal Antiochus—on what cause I know not—

Took some displeasure at him; at least he judged so:
And doubting lest that he had err'd or sinn'd,
To show his sorrow, he'd correct himself;
So puts himself unto the shipman's toil,
With whom each minute threatens life or death.

Thal. [Aside] Well, I perceive
I shall not be hang'd now, although I would;
But since he's gone, the king's seas must please:
He 'scaped the land, to perish at the sea.
I'll present myself. Peace to the lords of Tyre!
Hel. Lord Thaliard from Antiochus is wel-

Come.

Thal. [Aside] From him I come
With message unto princely Pericles;
But since my landing I have understood
Your lord has betook himself to unknown travels,
My message must return from whence it came.

Hel. We have no reason to desire it,
Commended to our master, not to us:
Yet, ere you shall depart, this we desire,
As friends to Antioch, we may feast in Tyre.

[Exeunt.]

SCENE IV. Tarsus. A room in the Governor's house.

Enter Cleon, the governor of Tarsus, with Dionyza, and others.

Cle. My Dionyza, shall we rest us here,
And by relating tales of others' griefs,
See if twill teach us to forget our own?

Dio. That were to blow at fire in hope to quench it;
For who digs hills because they do aspire
Throws down one mountain to cast up a higher.
O my distressed lord, even such our griefs are;
Here they're but felt, and seen with mischief's eyes,
But like to groves, being topp'd, they higher rise.

Cle. O Dionyza,
Who wanteth food, and will not say he wants it,
Or can conceal his hunger till he famish?
Our tongues and sorrows do sound deep
Our woes into the air; our eyes do weep,
Till tongues fetch breath that may proclaim them louder;
That, if heaven slumber while their creatures want,
They may awake their helps to comfort them.
I'll then discourse our woes, felt several years,
And wanting breath to speak help me with tears.

Dio. I'll do my best, sir.

Cle. This Tarsus, o'er which I have the government,
A city on whom plenty held full hand,
For riches strew'd herself even in the streets:
Scene iv.

PERICLES.

Whose towers bore heads so high they kiss'd the clouds,
And strangers ne'er beheld but wonder'd at;
Whose men and dames so jetted and adorn'd,
Like one another's glass to trim them by:
Their tables were stored full, to gild the sight,
And not so much to feed on as delight;
All poverty was scorn'd, and pride so great,
The name of help grew odious to repeat.

Cle.  But see what heaven can do! By this our change,
These mouths, who but of late, earth, sea, and air,
Were all too little to content and please,
Although they gave their creatures in abundance,
As houses are defiled for want of use,
They are now starved for want of exercise:
Those palates who, not yet two summers younger,
Must have inventions to delight the taste,
Would now be glad of bread, and beg for it:
Those mothers who, to nouse up their babes,
Thought nought too curious, are ready now
To eat those little darlings whom they loved.
So sharp are hunger's teeth, that man and wife
Draw lots who first shall die to lengthen life:
Here stands a lord, and there a lady weeping;
Here many sink, yet those which see them fall
Have scarce strength left to give them burial.
Is not this true?

Dio.  Our cheeks and hollow eyes do witness it.

Cle.  O, let those cities that of plenty's cup
And her prosperities so largely taste,
With their superfluous riots, hear these tears!
The misery of Tarsus may be theirs.

Enter a Lord.

Lord.  Where's the lord governor?

Cle.  Here.

Speak out thy sorrow which thou bring'st in haste,
For comfort is too far for us to expect.

Lord.  We have descried, upon our neighbour-
A portly sail of ships make hitherward.

Cle.  I thought as much.
One sorrow never comes but brings an heir,
That may succeed as his inheritor;
And so in ours: some neighbouring nation,
Taking advantage of our misery,
Hath stuff'd these hollow vessels with their power,
To beat us down, the which are down already:
And make a conquest of unhappy me,
Whereas no glory's got to overcome.

Lord.  That's the least fear; for, by the semblance
Of their white flags display'd, they bring us peace,
And come to us as favourers, not as foes.

Cle.  Thou speak'st like him's untutor'd to repeat.

Who makes the fairest show means most deceit.
But bring they what they will and what they can,
What need we fear?
The ground's the lowest, and we are half way there.
Go tell their general we attend him here,
To know for what he comes, and whence he comes,
And what he comes so hasty.

Lord.  I go, my lord.

[Exit.

Cle.  Welcome is peace, if he on peace consist;
If wars, we are unable to resist.

Enter PERICLES with Attendants.

Per.  Lord governor, for so we hear you are,
Let not our ships and number of our men
Be like a beacon fire to amaze your eyes.
We have heard your miseries as far as Tyre,
And seen the desolation of your streets:
Nor come we to add sorrow to your tears,
But to relieve them of their heavy load;
And these our ships, you happily may think
Are like the Trojan horse was stuff'd within
With bloody veins, expecting overthrow,
Are stored with corn to make your needy bread,
And give them life whom hunger starved half dead.

All.  The gods of Greece protect you!

And we'll pray for you.

Per.  Arise, I pray you, rise:

We do not look for reverence, but for love,
And harhourage for ourself, our ships, and men.

Cle.  The which when any shall not gratify, rot
Or pay you with unthankfulness in thought,
Be it our wives, our children, or ourselves,
The curse of heaven and men succeed their evils!
Till when,—the which I hope shall never be seen,—
Your grace is welcome to our town and us.

Per.  Which welcome we'll accept; feast here awhile,
Until our stars that frown lend us a smile.

[Exeunt.

ACT II.

Enter Gower.

Gow.  Here have you seen a mighty king
His child, I wis, to incest bring;
A better prince and benign lord,
That will prove awful both in deed and word.
Be quiet then as men should be,
Till he hath pass'd necessity.
I'll show you those in troubles reign,
Losing a mite, a mountain gain.
The good in conversation,
To whom I give my benison,
Is still at Tarsus, where each man
Thinks all is writ he spoken can;
And, to remember what he does,
Build his statue to make him glorious:
But tidings to the contrary
Are brought your eyes; what need speak I?

Dumb Show.

Enter at one door PERICLES talking with CLEON; all the train with them. Enter at another door a Gentleman, with a letter to PERICLES; PERICLES shows the letter to CLEON; gives the Messenger a reward, and knights him. Exit PERICLES at one door, and CLEON at another.

Good Helicane, that stay'd at home,
Not to eat honey like a drone
From others' labours; for though he strive
To killen bad, keep good alive;
And to fulfil his prince's desire,
Sends word of all that hap's in Tyre:
How Thaliard came full bent with sin
And had intent to murder him;
And that in Tarsus was not best
Longer for him to make his rest.
He, doing so, put forth to sea,
Where when men been, there's seldom ease;
For now the wind begins to blow;
Thunder above and deeps below
Make such unquiet, that the ship
Should house him safe is wreck'd and split;
And he, good prince, having all lost,
By waves from coast to coast is lost:
All perishen of man, of pelf,
Ne aught escape him but himself;
Till fortune, tired with doing bad,
Threw him ashore, to give him glad:
And here he comes. What shall be next,
Pardon old Gower,—this longs the text.

[Exit.]

SCENE I. Pentapolis. An open place by the sea-side.

Enter PERICLES, wet.

Per. Yet cease your ire, you angry stars of heaven!
Wind, rain, and thunder, remember, earthly man
Is but a substance that must yield to you;
And I, as fits my nature, do obey you;
Alas, the sea hath cast me on the rocks,
Wash'd me from shore to shore, and left me breath
Nothing to think on but ensuing death:
Let it suffice the greatness of your powers
To have bereft a prince of all his fortunes;
And having thrown him from your watery grave,
Here to have death in peace is all he'll crave.

Enter three Fishermen.

First Fish. What, ho, Pilch!
Sec. Fish. Ha, come and bring away the nets!
First Fish. What, Patch-breech, I say!
Third Fish. What say you, master?
First Fish. Look how thou stirrest now! come away, or I'll fetch thee with a wanion.
Third Fish. 'Faith, master, I am thinking of the poor men that were cast away before us even now.

First Fish. Alas, poor souls, it grieved my heart to hear what pitiful cries they made to us to help them, when, well-a-day, we could scarce help ourselves.

Third Fish. Nay, master, said not I as much when I saw the porpus how he bounded and tumbled? they say they're half fish, half flesh: a plague on them, they ne'er come but I look to be washed. Master, I marvel how the fishes live in the sea.

First Fish. Why, as men do a-land; the great ones eat up the little ones: I can compare our rich misers to nothing so fitly as to a whale; a' plays and tumbles, driving the poor fry before him, and at last devours them all at a mouthful: such whales have I heard on 'er land, who never leave gaping till they've swallowed the whole parish, church, steeple, bells, and all.

Sec. Fish. And in the houses of the sea.

First Fish. But, master, if I had been the sexton, I would have been that day in the belfry.

Sec. Fish. Why, man?
Third Fish. Because he should have swallowed me too: and when I had been in his belly, I would have kept such a jangling of the bells, that he should never have left, till he cast bells, steeple, church, and parish, up again. But if the good King Simonides were of my mind,—

Per. [Aside] Simonides!
Third Fish. We would provide the land of these drones, that rob the bee of her honey.
Per. [Aside] How from the finny subject of the sea
These fishers tell the infirmities of men;
And from their watery empire recollect
All that may men approve or men detect!
Peace be at your labour, honest fishermen.
Sec. Fish. Honest! good fellow, what's that?
If it be a day fits you, 'tsearch out of the calendar,
and nobody look after it.
Per. May see the sea hath cast upon your coast.

Sec. Fish. What a drunken knave was the sea to cast thee in our way?
Per. A man whom both the waters and the wind,
In that vast tennis-court, have made the ball
For them to play upon, entreats you pity him;
He asks of you, that never used to beg.

First Fish. No, friend, cannot you beg? Here's them in our country of Greece gets more with begging than we can do with working.

Sec. Fish. Canst thou catch any fishes, then?
Per. I never practised it.

Sec. Fish. Nay, then wilt starve, sure:
for here's nothing to be got now-a-days, unless thou canst fish for't.

Per. What I have been I have forgot to know:
But what I am, want teaches me to think on:
A man throng'd up with cold: my veins are chill,
And have no more of life than may suffice
To give my tongue that heat to ask your help;
Which if you shall refuse, when I am dead,
For that I am a man, pray see me buried.

First Fish. Die, quoth-a? Now gods forbid!
I have known here; come, put it on; keep thee warm. Now, a-farse, a handsome fellow! Come, thou shalt go home, and we'll have fish for holidays, fish for fasting-days, and more or less puddings and flap-jacks, and thou shalt be welcome.

Per. I thank you, sir.

Sec. Fish. Hark you, my friend; you said you could not beg.

Per. I did but crave.

Sec. Fish. But crave! Then I'll turn craver and so I shall 'scape whipping.

Per. Why, are all your beggars whipped, then?

Sec. Fish. O, not all, my friend, not all; for if all your beggars were whipped, I would wish no better office than to be beadle. But, master, I'll go draw up the net.

[Exit with Third Fisherman.

Per. [Aside] How well this honest mirth becomes their humour!

First Fish. Hark you, sir, do you know where ye are?

Per. Not well.

First Fish. Why, I'll tell you: this is called Pentapolis, and our king the good Simonides.
Scene [.] PERICLES.

Per. The good King Simonides, do you call him?

First Fish. Ay, sir; and he deserves so to be called for his peaceable reign and good government.

Per. He is a happy king, since he gains from his subjects the name of good by his government. How far is his court distant from this shore? 111

First Fish. Marry, sir, half a day's journey; and I'll tell you, he hath a fair daughter, and tomorrow is her birth-day; and there are princes and knights come from all parts of the world to just and tourney for her love.

Per. Were my fortunes equal to my desires, I could wish to make one there.

First Fish. O, sir, things must be as they may; and what a man cannot get, he may lawfully deal for—his wife's soul. 121

Re-enter Second and Third Fishermen, drawing up a net.

Sec. Fish. Help, master, help! here's a fish hangs in the net, like a poor man's right in the law; 'twill hardly come out. Ha! bots on 't, 'tis come last, and 'tis turned to a rusty armour.

Per. An armour, friends! I pray you, let me see it.

Thanks, fortune, yet, that, after all my crosses, Thou givest me somewhat to repair myself; And though it was mine own, part of my heritage, Which my dead father did bequeath to me. 130

With this strict charge, even as he left his life, 'Keep it, my Pericles; it hath been a shield Twixt me and death;'—and pointed to this brace:

For that it saved me, keep it; in like necessity—
The which the gods protect thee from!—may defend thee.

It kept where I kept, I so dearly loved it; Till the rough seas, that spare not any man, Took it in rage, though calm'd have given't again; I thank thee for't: my shipwreck now's no ill, Since I have here my father's gift in's will. 140

First Fish. What mean you, sir?

Per. To beg of you, kind friends, this coat of worth, For it was sometime target to a king; I know it by this mark. He loved me dearly, And for his sake I wish the having of it; And that you'll guide me to your sovereign's court, Where with it I may appear a gentleman; And that ever my low fortune's better, I'll pay your bounties; till then rest your debtor.

First Fish. Why, wilt thou tourney for the lady?

Per. I'll show the virtue I have borne in arms. First Fish. Why, do 'e take it, and the gods give thee good on't!

Sec. Fish. Ay, but hark you, my friend; 'twas we that made up this garment through the rough seams of the waters: there are certain condiments, certain vails. I hope, sir, if you thrive, you'll remember from whence you had it.

Per. Believe 't, I will. By your furtherance I am clothed in steel; 160 And, spite of all the rapture of the sea, This jewel holds his building on my arm: Unto thy value I will mount myself Upon a courser, whose delightful steps Shall make the gazer joy to see him tread. Only, my friend, I yet am unprovided Of a pair of bases.

Sec. Fish. We'll sure provide: thou shalt have my best gown to make thee a pair; and I'll bring thee to the court myself.

Per. Then honour be but a goal to my will, This day I'll rise, or else add ill to ill. [Exeunt.

Scene II. The same. A public way or platform leading to the lists. A pavilion by the side of it, for the reception of the King, Princess, Lords, &c.

Enter Simonides, Thaisa, Lords, and Attendants.

Sim. Are the knights ready to begin the triumph?

First Lord. They are, my liege; And stay your coming to present themselves.

Sim. Return them, we are ready; and our daughter, In honour of whose birth these triumphs are, Sits here, like beauty's child, whom nature gat For men to see, and seeing wonder at. [Exit a Lord.

Thaisa. It pleaseth you, my royal father, to express My commendations great, whose merit's less.

Sim. It's fit it should be so; for princes are to A model, which heaven makes like to itself: As jewels lose their glory if neglected, So princes their renown if not respected. 'Tis now your honour, daughter, to explain The labour of each knight in his device.

Thaisa. Which, to preserve mine honour, I'll perform.

Enter a Knight; he passes over, and his Squire presents his shield to the Princess.

Sim. Who is the first that doth prefer himself?

Thaisa. A knight of Sparta, my renowned father; And the device he bears upon his shield Is a black Ethiope reaching at the sun; 20 The word, 'Lux tua vita mini.'

Sim. He loves you well that holds his life of you. [The Second Knight passes over.

Thaisa. A prince of Macedon, my royal father; And the device he bears upon his shield Is an arm'd knight that's conquer'd by a lady; The motto thus, in Spanish, 'Piu por dulzura que por fuerza.'

[The Third Knight passes over.

Sim. And what's the third?

Thaisa. The third of Antioch; And his device, a wreath of chivalry; The word, 'Me Pompei proxemit apex.' 30 [The Fourth Knight passes over.

Sim. What is the fourth?

Thaisa. A burning torch that's turned upside down; The word, 'Quod me alt, me extinguuit.'

Sim. Which shows that beauty hath his power and will, Which can as well inflame as it can kill. [The Fifth Knight passes over.

Thaisa. The fifth, an hand environed with clouds, Holding out gold that's by the touchstone tried; The motto thus, 'Sic spectanda fides.'
Pericles. [Act IV.

[The Sixth Knight, Pericles, passes over.

Sim. And what's the sixth and last, the which the knight himself With such a graceful courtesy deliver'd? 41

Thai. He seems to be a stranger; but his present is A wither'd branch, that's only green at top;
The motto, 'In hac spe vivo'.

Sim. A pretty moral;
From the dejected state wherein he is,
He hopes by you his fortunes yet may flourish.

First Lord. He had need mean better than his outward show
Can any way speak in his just commend;
For by his rusty outside he appears To have practis'd more the whipspool than the lance.

Sec. Lord. He well may be a stranger, for he comes To an honour'd triumph strangely furnished.

Third Lord. And on set purpose let his armour rust
Until this day, to scour it in the dust.

Sim. Opinion's but a fool, that makes us scan
The outward habit by the inward man.
But stay, the knights are coming: we will withdraw
Into the gallery.

[Exeunt.

[Great shouts within, and all cry 'The mean knight!'

Scene III. The same. A hall of state: a banquet prepared.

Enter Simonides, Thaisa, Lords, Attendants, and Knights, from tilting.

Sim. Knights, To say you're welcome were superfluous.
To place upon the volume of your deeds, As in a title-page, your worth in arms, Were more than you expect, or more than's fit, Since every worth in show commend's itself. Prepare for mirth, for mirth becomes a feast: You are princes and my guests.

Thai. But you, my knight and guest;
To whom this wreath of victory I give,
And crown you king of this day's happiness.

Per. 'Tis more by fortune, lady, than by merit.

Sim. Call it by what you will, the day is yours;
And here, I hope, is none that envies it.
In framing an artist, art hath thus decreed,
To make some good, but others to exceed;
And you are her labour'd scholar. Come, queen o'th feast,—
For, daughter, so you are,—here take your place: Marshal the rest, as they deserve their grace.

Knights. We are honour'd much by good Simonides.

Sim. Your presence glads our days: honour we love;
For who hates honour hates the gods above.

Marshall. Sir, wonder is your place.

Per. Some other is more fit.

First Knight. Contend not, sir; for we are gentlemen
That neither in our hearts nor outward eyes Envy the great nor do the low despise.

Per. You are right courteous knights.

Sim. Sit, sir, sit.

Per. By Jove, I wonder, that is king of thoughts,
These cates resist me, she but thought upon.

Thai. By Juno, that is queen of marriage, 30
All viands that I eat do seem unsavoury,
Wishing him my meat. Sure, he's a gallant gentleman.

Sim. He's but a country gentleman;
Has done no more than other knights have done;
Has broken a staff or so; so let it pass.

Thai. To me he seems like diamond to glass.

Per. You king's to me like to my father's picture,
Which tells me in that glory once he was:
Had princes sit, like stars, about his throne,
And he the sun, for them to reverence:
None that beheld him, but, like lesser lights,
Did vail their crowns to his supremacy:
Where now his son's like a glow-worm in the night,
The which hath fire in darkness, none in light:
When as I see that Time's the king of men,
He's both their parent, and he is their grave,
And gives them what he will, not what they crave.

Sim. What, are you merry, knights?

Knights. Who can be other in this royal presence?

Sim. Here, with a cup that's stored unto the grim—
As you do love, fill to your mistress' lips,—
We drink this health to you.

Knights. We thank your grace.

Sim. Yet pause awhile:

You knight doth sit too melancholy,
As if the entertainment in our court
Had not a show might countervail his worth.
Note it not you, Thaisa?

Thai. What is it To me, my father?

Sim. O, attend, my daughter: Princes in this should live like gods above, Who freely give to every one that comes To honour them;
And princes not doing so are like to gnats, Which make a sound, but kill'd are wonder'd at.
Therefore to make his entrance more sweet, Here, say we drink this standing-bowl of wine to him.

Thai. Alas, my father, it befits not me Unto a stranger knight to be so bold:
He may my proffer take for an offence,
Since men take women's gifts for impudence.

Sim. How!

Do as I bid you, or you'll move me else.

Thai. [Aside] Now, by the gods, he could not please me better.

Sim. And furthermore tell him, we desire to know of him,
Of whence he is, his name and parentage.

Thai. The king my father, sir, has drunk to you.

Per. I thank him.

Thai. Wishing it so much blood unto your life.

Per. I thank both him and you, and pledge him freely.

Thai. And further he desires to know of you,
Of whence you are, your name and parentage.

Per. A gentleman of Tyre; my name, Pericles;

My education been in arts and arms;
Who, looking for adventures in the world,
Was by the rough seas reft of ships and men,
And after shipwreck driven upon this shore:
That he thanks your grace; names himself Pericles,
A gentleman of Tyre,
Who only by misfortune of the seas
Bereft of ships and men, cast on this shore.

Sirm. Now, by the gods, I pity his misfortune,
And will awake him from his melancholy.
Come, gentlemen, we sit too long on trifles,
And waste the time, which looks for other revels.
Even in your armours, as you are address'd,
Will very well become a soldier's dance.
I will not have excuse, with saying this
Loud music is too harsh for ladies' heads,
Since they love men in arms as well as in beds.

[The Knights dance.

So, this was well ask'd, 'twas so well perform'd.
Come, sir;
Here is a lady that wants breathing too:
And I have heard, you knights of Tyre
Are excellent in making ladies trip;
And that their measure are as excellent.
Per. In those that practise them they are, my lord.
Sim. O, that's as much as you would be denied Of your fair courtesy.

[The Knights and Ladies dance.

Unclasp, unclasp:
Thanks, gentlemen, to all; all have done well,
[To Per.] But you the best. Pages and lights, to conduct
These knights unto their several lodgings!

[To Per.] Yours, sir,

We have given order to be next our own.
Per. I am at your grace's pleasure.

Sim. Princes, it is too late to talk of love;
And that's the mark I know you level at:
Therefore each one betake him to his rest;
To-morrow all for speeding do their best.

[Exeunt.

SCENE IV. Tyre. A room in the Governor's house.

Enter Helicanus and Escanes.

Hel. No, Escanes, know this of me,
Antiochus from incest live not free;
For which, the most high gods not minding longer To withhold the vengeance that they had in store,
Due to this heinous capital offence.
Even in the height and pride of all his glory,
When he was seated in a chariot
Of anestimable value, and his daughter with him,
A fire from heaven came and shrivell'd up
Their bodies, even to loathing; for they so stunk,
That all those eyes adored them ere their fall
Scorn now their hand should give them burial.
Esca. 'Twas very strange.
Hel. And yet but justice; for though
This king were great, his greatness was no guard
To bar heaven's shaft, but sin had his reward.
Esca. 'Tis very true.

Enter two or three Lords.

First Lord. See, not a man in private conference
Or council has respect with him but he.

Sec. Lord. It shall no longer grieve without reproof.

Third Lord. And cursed be he that will not second it.

First Lord. Follow me, then. Lord Helicanus, a word.

Hel. With me? and welcome! happy day, my lords.

First Lord. Know that our griefs are risen to the top.
And now at length they overflow their banks.

Hel. Your griefs! for what? wrong not your prince you love.

First Lord. Wrong not yourself, then, noble Helicanus;
But if the prince do live, let us salute him,
Or know what ground's made happy by his breath.
If in the world he live, we'll seek him out;
If in his grave he rest, we'll find him there;
And be resolved he lives to govern us,
Or dead, give's cause to mourn his funeral,
And leave us to our free election.

Sec. Lord. Whose death indeed's the strongest in our censure;
And knowing this kingdom is without a head,—
Like goodly buildings left without a roof
Soon fall to ruin,—your noble self,
That best know how to rule and how to reign,
We thus submit unto,—our sovereign.

All. Live, noble Helicanus!

Hel. For honour's cause, forbear your suffrages:
If that you love Prince Pericles, forbear.
Take I your wish, I leap into the seas,
Where's hourly trouble for a minute's ease.
A twelvemonth longer, let me entreat you to Forbear the absence of your king;
If in which time expired, he not return,
I shall with aged patience bear your yoke.
But if I cannot win you to this love,
Go search like nobles, like noble subjects,
And in your search spend your adventurous worth;
Whom if you find, and win unto return,
You shall like diamonds sit about his crown.

First Lord. To wisdom he's a fool that will not yield;
And since Lord Helicanus enjoineth us,
We with our travels will endeavour us.

Hel. Then you love us, we you, and we'll clap hands:
When peers thus knit, a kingdom ever stands.

[Exeunt.

SCENE V. Pentapolis. A room in the palace.

Enter Simonides, reading a letter, at one door:
The Knights meet him.

First Knight. Good morrow to the good Simonides.

Sim. Knights, from my daughter this I let you know,
That for this twelvemonth she'll not undertake
A married life.
Her reason to herself is only known,
Which yet from her by no means can I get.

Sec. Knight. May we not get access to her,
my lord?

Sim. 'Faith, by no means; she hath so strictly tied PERICLES.

[Act II.

Her to her chamber, that 'tis impossible.
One twelve moons more she'll wear Diana's livery;
This by the eye of Cynthia hath she vow'd,
And on her virgin honour will not break it.

Third Knight. Loath to bid farewell, we take our leaves. [Exeunt Knights.

Sim. So,
They are well dispatch'd; now to my daughter's letter:
She tells me here, she'll wed the stranger knight,
Or never more to view nor day nor light.
'Tis well, mistress; your choice agrees with mine;
I like that well: nay, how absolute she's in,
Not minding whether I dislike or no!
Well, I do commend her choice;
And will no longer have it be delay'd.
Soft! here he comes: I must dissemble it.

Enter Pericles.

Per. All fortune to the good Simonides!
Sim. To you as much, sir! I am beholding to you
For your music this last night: I do
Protest my ears were never better fed
With such delightful pleasing harmony.
Per. It is your grace's pleasure to command;
Not my desert.
Sim. Sir, you are music's master.
Per. The worst of all her scholars, my good lord.
Sim. Let me ask you one thing:
What do you think of my daughter, sir?
Per. A most virtuous princess.
Sim. And she is fair too, is she not?
Per. As a fair day in summer, wondrous fair.
Sim. Sir, my daughter thinks very well of you;
Ay, so well, that you must be her master,
And she will be your scholar: therefore lend to it.
Per. I am unworthy for her schoolmaster.
Sim. She thinks not so; peruse this writing clerk.

Per. [Aside] What's here?
A letter, that she loves the knight of Tyre!
'Tis the king's subtilty to have my life,
O, seek not to entrap me, gracious lord,
A stranger and distressed gentleman,
That never aim'd so high to love your daughter,
But bent all offices to honour her.
Thou hast bewitch'd my daughter, and thou art
A villain.
Per. By the gods, I have not:
Never did thought of mine levy offence;
Nor never did my actions yet commence
A deed might gain her love or your displeasure.
Sim. Traitor, thou liest.
Per. Traitor!
Sim. Ay, traitor.
Per. Even in his throat—unless it be the king—
That calls me traitor, I return the lie.
Sim. [Aside] Now, by the gods, I do applaud his courage.
Per. My actions are as noble as my thoughts,
That never relish'd of a base descent.
I came unto your court for honour's cause,
And not to be a rebel to her state;
And he that otherwise accounts of me,

This sword shall prove he's honour's enemy.
Sim. No?
Here comes my daughter, she can witness it.

Enter Thaisa.

Per. Then, as you are as virtuous as fair,
Resolve your angry father, if my tongue
Did e'er solicit, or my hand subscribe
To any syllable that made love to you.

That. Why, sir, say if you had,
Who takes offence at that would make me glad?
Sim. Yea, mistress, are you so peremptory?
[Aside] I am glad on't with all my heart.—
I'll tune you; I'll bring you in subjection.
Will you, not having my consent,
Bestow your love and your affections
Upon a stranger? [Aside] who, for aught I know,
May be, nor can I think the contrary,
As great in blood as I myself.—

Therefore hear you, mistress; either frame
Your will to mine,—and you, sir, hear you,
Either aided by me, or I will make you—
Man and wife:
Nor, come, your hands and lips must seal it too:
And being join'd, I'll thus your hopes destroy;
And for a further grief,—God give you joy!—
What, are you both pleased?

That. Yes, if you love me, sir.
Per. Even as my life my blood that fosters it.
Sim. What, are you both agreed?
Both. Yes, if it please your majesty.
Sim. It pleaseth me so well, that I will see you wed;
And then with what haste you can get you to bed.
[Exeunt.

ACT III.

Enter Gower.

Gow. Now sleep yslaked hath the rout;
No din but snores the house about,
Made louder by the o'er-fed breast
Of this most pompous marriage-feast.
The cat, with eyne of burning coal,
Now couches fore the mouse's hole;
And crickets sing at the oven's mouth,
E'er the blither for their drouth.
Hymen hath brought the bride to bed,
Where, by the loss of maidenhead,
A babe is moulded. Be attend,
And time that is so briefly spent
With your fine fancies quaintly echo;
What's dumb in show I'll plain with speech.

Dumb Show.

Enter, Pericles and Simonides, at one door, with Attendants; a Messenger meets them, kneels, and gives Pericles a letter: Pericles shows it Simonides; the Lords kneel to him. Then enter Thaisa with child, with Lychorida a nurse. The King shows her the letter; she rejoices; she and Pericles take leave of her father, and depart with Lychorida and their Attendants. Then exit Simonides and the rest.

By many a derr and painful perch
Of Pericles the careful search,
PERICLES.

By the four opposing coigns,
Which the world together joins,
Is made with all due diligence
That horse and sail and high expense
Can stead the quest. At last from Tyre,
Fame answering the most strange inquire,
To the court of King Simonides
Are letters brought, the tenour these:
Antiochus and his daughter dead:
The men of Tyre on the head
Of Helicanus would set on
The crown of Tyre, but he will none:
The mutiny he there hastes t' oppress;
Says to 'em, if King Pericles
Come not home in twelve six moons,
He, obedient to their dooms,
Will take the crown. The sum of this,
Brought hither to Pentapolis,
Y-ravished the regions round,
And every one with claps can sound,
‘Our heir-apparent is a king!’
Who dreamd, who thought of such a thing?”
Brief, he must hence depart to Tyre:
His queen with child makes her desire—
Which who shall cross?—along to go:
Omit we all their dole and woes:
Lychorida, her nurse, she takes,
And so to sea. Their vessel shakes
On Neptune's billow; half the flood
Hath their keel cut; but fortune's mood
Varies again; the grisled north
Disgorges such a tempest forth,
That, as a duck for life that dives,
So up and down the poor ship drives:
The lady shrieks, and well-a-near
Does fall in travail with her fear:
And what ensues in this fell storm
Shall for itself itself perform.
I will relate, action may Conveniently the rest convey;
Which might not what by me is told.
In your imagination hold
This stage the ship, upon whose deck
The sea.toSt Pericles appears to speak. [ExiL

Scene I.

Enter Pericles, on shipboard.

Per. Thou god of this great vast, rebuke these surges,
hich wash both heaven and hell; and thou,
that hast
pon the winds command, bind them in brass, aving call'd them from the deep! O, still ly deafening, dreadful thunders; gently quench ly nimble, sulphurous flashes! O, how, Lychorida, how doth my queen? Thou stormest venomously;
lt thou spit all thyself? The seaman's whistle as a whisper in the ears of death, heard. Lychorida!—Lucina, O nest patroness, and midwife gentle those that cry by night, convey thy deity board our dancing boat; make swift the pangs my queen's travails!

Enter Lychorida, with an Infant.

Now, Lychorida!

Lyc. Here is a thing too young for such a place.
Who, if it had conceit, would die, as I Am like to do: take in your arms this piece
Of your dead queen.

Per. How, how, Lychorida!
Lyc. Patience, good sir; do not assist the storm.
Here's all that is left living of your queen,
A little daughter: for the sake of it,
Be manly, and take comfort.

Per. O you gods!
Why do you make us love your goodly gifts,
And snatch them straight away? We here below
Recall not what we give, and therein may Use honour with you.
Lyc. Patience, good sir,
Even for this charge.

Per. Now, mild may be thy life!
For a more blustering birth had never babe:
Quiet and gentle thy conditions! for
Thou art the rudest welcome to this world That ever was prince's child. Happy what follows!

Thou hast as chiding a nativity
As fire, air, water, earth, and heaven can make,
To herald thee from the womb: even at the first
Thy loss is more than can thy portage quit,
With all thou canst find here. Now, the good gods
Throw their best eyes upon't!

Enter two Sailors.

First Sail. What courage, sir? God save you!

Per. Courage enough: I do not fear the flaw;
It hath done to me the worst. Yet, for the love
Of this poor infant, this fresh-new sea-farer,
I would it would be quiet.

First Sail. Slack the bolins there! Thou wilt not, wilt thou? Blow, and split thyself.

Sec. Sail. But sea-room, an the brine and cloudy billow kiss the moon, I care not.

First Sail. Sir, your queen must overboard:
the sea works high, the wind is loud, and will not lie till the ship be cleared of the dead.

Per. That's your superstition.

First Sail. Pardon us, sir: with us at sea it hath been still observed: and we are strong in custom. Therefore briefly yield her; for she must overboard straight.

Per. As you think meet. Most wretched
queen!

Lyc. Here she lies, sir.

Per. A terrible childbed hast thou had, my dear;
No light, no fire: the unfriendly elements
Forgot thee utterly; nor have I time
To give thee hallow'd to thy grave, but straight
Must cast thee, scarcely coffin'd, in the ooze;
Where, for a monument upon thy bones,
And e'er-remaining lamps, the belching whale
And humming water must o'erwhelm thy corpse,
Lying with simple shells. O Lychorida,
Bid Nestor bring me spices, ink and paper,
My casket and my jewels; and bid Nicander
Bring me the satin coffer: lay the babe
Upon the pillow; hie thee, whiles I say
A priestly farewell to her: suddenly, woman.

Sec. Sail. Sir, we have a chest beneath the hatches, caulked and bitumed ready.

Per. I thank thee. Mariner, say what coast is this?

Sec. Sail. We are near Tarsus.

Per. Thither, gentle mariner. Alter thy course for Tyre. When canst thou reach it?

Sec. Sail. By break of day, if the wind cease. Per. O, make for Tarsus! There will I visit Cleon, for the babe Cannot hold out to Tyre: there I’ll leave it so At careful nursing. Go thy ways, good mariner: I’ll bring the body presently. [Exeunt.

Scene II. Ephesus. A room in Cerimon’s house.

Enter Cerimon, with a Servant, and some Persons who have been shipwrecked.

Cer. Philemon, ho!

Enter Philemon.

Phil. Doth my lord call?

Cer. Get fire and meat for these poor men: ’T has been a turbulent and stormy night. Serv. I have been in many; but such a night as this, Till now, I ne’er endured. Cer. Your master will be dead ere you return; There’s nothing can be minister’d to nature That can recover him. [To Philemon] Give this to the pothecary, And tell me how it works. [Exeunt all but Cerimon.

Enter two Gentlemen.

First Gent. Good morrow, 10 Gentlemen.

Cer. Why do you stir so early?

First Gent. Sir, Our lodgings, standing bleak upon the sea, Shook as the earth did quake; The very principals did seem to rend, And all-at-tips: pure surprise and fear Made me to quit the house.

Sec. Gent. That is the cause we trouble you so early;
’Tis not our husbandry.

Cer. O, you say well. 20 First Gent. But I much marvel that your lordship, having Rich tire about you, should at these early hours Shake off the golden slumber of repose. ’Tis most strange, Nature should be so conversant with pain, Being thereto not compell’d!

Cer. I hold it ever, Virtue and cunning were endowments greater Than nobleness and riches: careless heirs May the two latter darken and expend; But immortality attains the former, Making a man a god. ’Tis known, I ever Have studied physic, through which secret art, By turning o’er authorities, I have, Together with my practice, made familiar To me and to my aid the blest infusions

That dwell in vegetives, in metals, stones; And I can speak of the disturbances That nature works, and of her cures; which do give me A more content in course of true delight Than to be thirsty after tolerating honour, Or tie my treasure up in silken bags, To please the fool and death.

Sec. Gent. Your honour has through Ephes pour’d forth Your charity, and hundreds call themselves Your creatures, who by you have been restored And not your knowledge, your personal pain, but even Your purse, still open, hath built Lord Cerimon Such strong renown as time shall ne’er decay.

Enter two or three Servants with a chest.

First Serv. So; lift there.

Cer. What is that?

First Serv. Sir, even no
Did the sea toss upon our shore this chest: ’Tis of some wreck.

Cer. ’Tis set down, let’s look upon
Sec. Gent. ’Tis like a coffin, sir.

Cer. Whate’er it be
’Tis wondrous heavy. Wrench it open straight If the sea’s stomach be o’ercharged with gold, ’Tis a good constraint of fortune it behoves upon Sec. Gent. ’Tis so, my lord.

Cer. How close ’tis caulk’d and bitum’d Did the sea cast it up? First Serv. I never saw so huge a billow, As toss’d it upon shore.

Cer. Wrench it open; Soft! it smells most sweetly in my sense.

Sec. Gent. A delicate odour.

Cer. As ever hit my nostril. So, up with it O you most potent gods! what’s here? a coarse First Gent. Most strange!

Cer. Shrouded in cloth of state; balm’d and entresoured With full bags of spices! a passport too! Apollo, perfect me in the characters!

[Reads from a scrawl.

‘Here I give to understand, If e’er this coffin drive a-land, I, King Pericles, have lost This queen, worth all our mundane cost. Who finds her, give her bursing: She was the daughter of a king: Besides this treasure for a fee, The gods requite his charity!’
If thou livest, Pericles, thou hast a heart That even cracks for woe! This changed to night.

Sec. Gent. Most likely, sir.

Cer. Nay, certainly to-night.

For look how fresh she looks! They were too rough That threw her in the sea. Make a fire within Fetch hither all my boxes in my closet.

[Exit a Servant.

Death may usurp on nature many hours, And yet the fire of life kindle again The o’erpress’d spirits. ’tis heard of an Egyptian That had nine hours lien dead, Who was by good appliance recovered.
Re-enter a Servant, with boxes, napkins, and fire.

Vell said, well said; the fire and cloths. The rough and woeful music that we have, 'Ause it to sound, beseech you. He viol once more: how thou stir'st, thou block! He music there!—I pray you, give her air. Gentlemen, This queen will live; nature awakes; a warmth breathes out of her: she hath not been entranced. Give her a little: see how she gins to blow into life's flower again!

First Gent. The heavens, through you, increase our wonder and set up our fame for ever.

Cer. She is alive! behold, her eyelids, cases to those heavenly jewels which Pericles hath lost, begin to part their fringes of bright gold; he diamonds of a most praised water to appear, to make the world twice rich. Live, and make us weep to hear your fate, fair creature, are as you seem to be. [She moves.

That. O dear Diana, Where am I? Where's my lord? What world is this?

Sec. Gent. Is not this strange?

First Gent. Most rare.

Cer. Hush, my gentle neighbours! Send me your hands; to the next chamber bear her. What! now this matter must be look'd to, or her relapse is mortal. Come, come; [Exeunt, carrying her away.

Scene II. Tarsus. A room in Cleon's house.

Enter PERICLES,CLEON,DIONYZA, and LYCHO-KIDA with MARINA in her arms.

Per. Most honour'd Cleon, I must needs be gone; my twelve months are expired, and Tyrus stands a litigious peace. You, and your lady, ake from my heart all thankfulness! The gods take up the rest upon you! Cle. Your shafts of fortune, though they hurt you mortally, et glance full wanderingly on us. Dion. O your sweet queen! hat the strictest fates had pleased you had brought her hither, have bless'd mine eyes with her!

Per. We cannot but obey her powers above us. Could I rage and roar so doth the sea she lies in, yet the end I just be as 'tis. My gentle babe Marina, whom, or she was born at sea, I have named so, here charge your charity withal, leaving her he infant of your care; beseeching you give her princely training, that she may be answer'd as she is born.

Cle. Fear not, my lord, but think our grace, that fed my country with your corn, or which the people's prayers still fall upon you, not in your child be thought on. If neglection would therein make me vile, the common body, By you relieved, would force me to my duty; But if to that my nature need a spur, The gods revenge it upon me and mine, To the end of generation!

Per. I believe you: Your honour and your goodness teach me to't, Without your vows. Till she be married, madam, By bright Diana, whom we honour, all Unsissar'd shall this hair of mine remain, Though I show ill in't. So I take my leave. Good madam, make me blessed in your care In bringing up my child.

Dion. I have one myself, Who shall not be more dear to my respect Than yours, my lord.

Per. Madam, my thanks and prayers. Cle. We'll bring your grace even to the edge of the shore, Then give you up to the mask'd Neptune and The gentlest winds of heaven.

Per. I will embrace Your offer. Come, dearest madam. O, no tears, Lychorida, no tears: Look to your little mistress, on whose grace you may depend hereafter. Come, my lord. [Exeunt.

Scene IV. Ephesus. A room in Cerimon's house.

Enter CERIMON and THAISA.

Cer. Madam, this letter, and some certain jewels, Lay with you in your coffers: which are now At your command. Know you the character? Tha. It is my lord's. That I was shipp'd at sea, I well remember, Even on my eaning time; but whether there Deliver'd, by the holy gods, I cannot rightly say. But since King Pericles, My wedded lord, I ne'er shall see again, A vestal livery will I take me to, And never more have joy.

Cer. Madam, if this you purpose as ye speak, Diana's temple is not distant far, Where you may abide till your date expire. Moreover, if you please, a niece of mine Shall there attend you.

Tha. My recompense is thanks, that's all; Yet my good will is great, though the gift small. [Exeunt.

ACT IV.

Enter GOWER.

Gow. Imagine Pericles arrived at Tyre, Welcome and settled to his own desire. His woeful queen we leave at Ephesus, Unto Diana there a votaress. Now to Marina bend your mind, Whom our fast-growing scene must find At Tarsus, and by Cleon train'd In music, letters; who hath gain'd Of education all the grace, Which makes her both the heart and place of general wonder. But, alack, That monster envy, of the wrack Of earned praise, Marina's life Seeks to take off by treason's knife.
PERICLES.

ACT IV.

Scene I. Tarsus. An open place near the sea-shore.

Enter Dionyzia and Leonine.

Dion. Thy oath remember; thou hast sworn to do it; 'tis but a blow, which never shall be known. Thou canst not do a thing in the world so soon, to yield thee so much profit. Let not conscience, which is but cold, inflaming love i' th bosom, inflame too nicely; nor let pity, which even women have cast off, melt thee, but be a soldier to thy purpose.

Leon. I will 'tis; but yet she is a goodly creature.

Dion. The fitter, then, the gods should have her. Here she comes weeping for her only mistress' death. Thou art resolved?

Leon. I am resolved.

Enter Marina, with a basket of flowers.

Mar. No, I will rob Tellus of her weed, to strew thy green with flowers: the yellows, blues, the purple violets, and marigolds, shall as a carpet hang upon thy grave. While summer-days do last. Ay me! poor maid, born in a tempest, when my mother died, this world to me is like a lasting storm, whirring me from my friends.

Dion. How now, Marina! why do you kneel alone? How change my daughter is not with you? Do not consume your blood with sorrowing: you have a nurse of me. Lord, how your favour's change. With this unprofitable woe!

Come, give me your flowers, ere the sea mar it. Walk with Leonine; the air is quick there, and it pierces and sharpens the stomach. Come Leonine, take her by the arm, walk with her. Mar. No, I pray you; I'll not bereave you of your servant.

Dion. Come, come; I love the king your father, and yourself, with more than foreign heart. We every day expect him here: when he shall come and find our paragon to all reports thus blasted, he will repent the breadth of his great voyage; blame both my lord and me, that we have taken no care to your best courses. Go, I pray you, walk, and be cheerful once again; reserve that excellent complexion, which did steal the eyes of young and old. Care not for me; I'll go home alone.

Mar. Well, I will go; but yet I have no desire to it.

Dion. Come, come, I know 'tis good for you. Walk half an hour, Leonine, at the least.

Remember what I have said.

Leon. I warrant you, madam.

Dion. I'll leave you, my sweet lady, for while:

Pray, walk softly, do not heat your blood:

What! I must have a care of you.

Mar. My thanks, sweet madam.

[Exit Dionyzia.

Is this wind westerly that blows?

Leon. South-west.

Mar. When I was born, the wind was north.

Leon. Was't so.

Mar. My father, as nurse said, did never fear but cried 'Good seamen!' to the sailors, galling his king's hands, haling ropes; and, clapping to the mast, endured a sea that almost burst the deck.

Leon. When was this?

Mar. When I was born:

Never was waves nor wind more violent;

And from the ladder-tackle washes off a canvas-climber. 'Ha!' says one, 'wilt out!' And with a dropping industry they skip from stem to stern: the boatswain whistle, and the master calls, and trebles their confusion.

Leon. Come, say your prayers.

Mar. What mean you?

Leon. If you require a little space for prayer, I grant it: pray; but be not tedious, for the gods are quick of ear, and I am sworn to do my work with haste.

Mar. Why will you kill me?

Leon. To satisfy my lady.

Mar. Why would she have me kill'd?

Now, as I can remember, by my troth, I never did her hurt in all my life; I never gave her bad word, nor did ill turn to any living creature: believe me, I never kill'd a mouse, nor hurt a fly; I trod upon a worm against my will, but I wept for it. How have I offended,
Scene I.

PERICLES.

Wherein my death might yield her any profit,
Or my life imply her any danger?

Leon. My commission
Is not to reason of the deed, but do it.

Mar. You will not do't for all the world, I hope.

You are well favour'd, and your looks foreshow
You have a gentle heart. I saw you lately,
When you caught hurt in parting two that fought:
Good sooth, it shou'd well in you: do so now:
Your lady seeks my life; come you between, 90
And save poor me, the weaker.

Leon. I am sworn,
And will dispatch.

Enter Pirates.

First Pirate. Hold, villain!

[Leonine runs away.

Sec. Pirate. A prize! a prize!

Third Pirate. Half-part, mates, half-part.

Come, let's have her aboard suddenly.

[Exeunt Pirates with Marina.

Re-enter Leonine.

Leon. These rogueing thieves serve the great pirate Valdes: 9
And they have seized Marina. Let her go:
There's no hope she will return. I'll swear she's dead,
And thrown into the sea. But I'll see further: too
Perhaps they will but please themselves upon her,
Not carry her aboard. If she remain,
Whom they have ravish'd must by me be slain.  [Exit.

Scene II.

Mytilene. A room in a brothel.

Enter Pandar, Bawd, and Boult.

Pand. Boult!

Boult. Sir?

Pand. Search the market narrowly; Mytilene is full of gallants. We lost too much money this marry by being too wenchless.

Bawd. We were never so much out of creatures.
We have but poor three, and they can do no more than they can do; and they with continual action are even as good as rotten.

Pand. Therefore let's have fresh ones, whate'er we pay for them. If there be not a conscience to be used in every trade, we shall never prosper.

Bawd. Thou sayest true: 'tis not our bringing up of poor bastards,—as, I think, I have brought some eleven—

Boult. Ay, to eleven; and brought them down again. But shall I search the market?

Bawd. What else, man? The stuff we have, a strong wind will blow it to pieces, they are so pitifully sodden.

Pand. Thou sayest true: they're too unwholesome, o' conscience. The poor Transylvanian is dead, that lay with the little baggage.

Boult. Ay, she quickly pooped him; she made him roast-meat for worms. But I'll go search the market.  [Exit.

Pand. Three or four thousand chequins were as pretty a proportion to live quietly, and so give over.

Bawd. Why to give over, I pray you? is it a shame to get when we are old?

Pand. O, our credit comes not in like the commodity, nor the commodity wages not with the danger: therefore, if in our youths we could pick up some pretty estate, 'twere not amiss to keep our door hatched. Besides, the sore terms we stand upon with the gods will be strong with us for giving over.

Bawd. Come, other sorts offend as well as we.

Pand. As well as we! ay, and better too; we offend worse. Neither is our profession any trade;
it's no calling. But here comes Boult.

Re-enter Boult, with the Pirates and Marina.

Boult. [To Marina] Come your ways. My masters, you say she's a virgin?

Pand. First Pirate. O, sir, we doubt it not.

Boult. Master, I have gone through for this piece, you see: if you like her, so; if not, I have lost my earnest.

Bawd. Boult, has she any qualities?

Boult. She has a good face, speaks well, and has excellent good clothes: there's no further necessity of qualities can make her be refused.

Bawd. What's her price, Boult?

Boult. I cannot be bated one doit of a thousand pieces.

Pand. Well, follow me, my masters, you shall have your money presently. Wife, take her in; instruct her what she has to do, that she may not be raw in her entertainment.

[Exeunt Pandar and Pirates.

Pand. Boult, take you the marks of her, the colour of her hair, complexion, height, age, with warrant of her virginity; and cry 'He that will give most shall have her first.' Such a maidenhead were no cheap thing, if men were as they have been. Get this done as I command you.

Boult. Performance shall follow.  [Exit.

Mar. Alack! that Leonine was so slack, so slow! He should have struck, not spoke; or that these pirates, Not enough barbarous, had not o'erboard thrown

For to seek my mother!

Bawd. Why lament you, pretty one?

Mar. That I am pretty.

Bawd. Come, the gods have done their part in you.

Mar. I accuse them not.

Bawd. You are light into my hands, where you are like to live.

Mar. The more my fault
To scape his hands where I was like to die. 80

Bawd. Ay, and you shall live in pleasure.

Mar. No.

Bawd. Yes, indeed shall you, and taste gentlemen of all fashions: you shall fare well; you shall have the difference of all complexions. What!
do you stop your ears?

Mar. Are you a woman?

Bawd. What would you have me be, an I be not a woman?

Mar. An honest woman, or not a woman.

Bawd. Marry, why then, getting: I think I shall have something to do with you. Come, you're a young foolish sapling, and must be bowed as I would have you.

Mar. The gods defend me!

Bawd. If it please the gods to defend you by men, then men must comfort you, men must feed you, men must stir you up. Boult's returned.

Re-enter Boult.

Now, sir, hast thou cried her through the market?

Boult. I have cried her almost to the number of her hairs; I have drawn her picture with my voice.

Bawd. And I prithee tell me, how dost thou find the inclination of the people, especially of the younger sort?

Boult. 'Faith, they listened to me as they would have hearkened to their father's testament. There was a Spaniard's mouth so watered, that he went to bed to her very description.

Bawd. We shall have him here to-morrow with his best ruff on.

Boult. To-night, to-night. But, mistress, do you know the French knight that cowers 'tis hams?

Bawd. Who, Monsieur Veroles?

Boult. Ay, he: he offered to cut a caper at the proclamation; but he made a groan at it, and swore he would see her to-morrow.

Bawd. Well, well; as for him, he brought his disease hither: here he does but repair it. I know he will come in our shadow, to scatter his crowns in the sun.

Boult. Well, if we had of every nation a traveller, we should lodge them with this sign.

Bawd. [To Mar.] Pray you, come hither awhile. You have fortunes coming upon you. Mark me: you must seem to do that fearfully which you commit willingly, despise profit where you have most gain. To weep that you live as ye do makes pity in your lovers: seldom but that pity begets you a good opinion, and that opinion a mere profit.

Mar. I understand you not.

Boult. O, take her home, mistress, take her home: these blushes of hers must be quenched with some present practice.

Bawd. Thou sayest true, 'tis faith, so they must; for your bride goes to that with shame which is her way to go with warrant.

Boult. 'Faith, some do, and some do not. But, mistress, if I have bargained for the joint,—

Bawd. Thou maist cut a morsel off the spit.

Boult. I may so.

Bawd. Who should deny it? Come, young one, I like the manner of your garments well.

Boult. Ay, by my faith, they shall not be changed yet.

Bawd. Boult, spend thou that in the town: report what a sojourner we have; you'll lose nothing by custom. When nature framed this piece, she meant thee a good turn; therefore say what a paragon she is, and thou hast the harvest out of thine own report.

Boult. I warrant you, mistress, thunder shall not so awake the beds of eels as my giving out her beauty stir up the lewdly-inclined. I'll bring home some to-night.

Bawd. Come your ways; follow me.

Mar. If fires be hot, knives sharp, or waters deep,

Untied I still my virgin knot will keep. 160

Diana, aid my purpose!

Bawd. What have we to do with Diana? Pray you, will you go with us?

[Exeunt.

SCENE III. Tarsus. A room in Cleon's house.

Enter Cleon and Dionyza.

Dion. Why, are you foolish? Can it be undone?

Cle. O Dionyza, such a piece of slaughter

The sun and moon ne'er look'd upon!

Dion. I think you'll turn a child again.

Cle. Were I chief lord of all this spacious world,

I'd give it to undo the deed. O lady,

Much less in blood than virtue, yet a princess

To equal any single crown of the earth

I' the justice of compare! O villain Leonine!

Whom thou hast poison'd too:

If thou hadst drunk to him, 'twas been a kindness

Beginning well thy fact: what canst thou say

When noble Pericles shall demand his child?

Dion. That she is dead. Nurses are not the fates,

To foster it, nor ever to preserve,

She died at night: I'll say so. Who can cross it?

Unless you play the pious innocent,

And for an honest attribute cry out

'She died by foul play,'

Cle. O, go to. Well, well,

Of all the faults beneath the heavens, the gods

Do like this worst.

Dion. Be one of those that think

The petty wrens of Tarsus will fly hence,

And open this to Pericles. I do shame

To think of what a noble strain you are,

And of how coward a spirit.

Cle. To such proceeding

Who ever but his approbation added,

Though not his prime consent, he did not flow

From honourable sources.

Dion. Be it so, then:

Yet none does know, but you, how she came dead,

Nor none can know, Leonine being gone.

She did detain my child, and stood between

Her and her fortunes: none would look on her,

But cast their gazes on Marina's face;

Whilst ours was blunted at and held a malkin

Not worth the time of day. It pierced me thorough;

And though you call my course unnatural,

You not your child well loving, yet I find

It greets me as an enterprise of kindness

Perform'd to your sole daughter.

Cle. Heavens forgive it!

Dion. And as for Pericles,

What should he say? We wept after her hearse,

And yet we mourn: her monument

Is almost finish'd, and her epitaph

In glittering golden characters express

A general praise to her, and care in us

At whose expense 'tis done.

Cle. Thou art like the harpy,

Which, to betray, dost, with thine angel's face,

Seize with thine eagle's talons.
Dion. You are like one that superstitiously 49
Doth swear to the gods that winter kills the flies:
But yet I know you'll do as I advise. [Exeunt.]

SCENE IV.
Enter Gower, before the monument of MARINA at Tarsus.

Gow. Thus time we waste, and longest leagues make short:
Sail seas in cockles, have an wish but for't;
Making, to take your imagination,
From bourn to bourn, region to region.
By you being pardon'd, we commit no crime
To use one language in each several clime
Where our scenes seem to live. I do beseech you
To learn of me, who stand i' the gaps to teach you,
The stages of our story. Pericles
Is now again thwarting the swallowed seas, 10
Attended on by many a lord and knight,
To see his daughter, all his life's delight.
Old Escanes, whom Helicanus late Advanced in time to great and high estate,
Is left to govern. Bear you in mind,
Old Helicanus goes along behind.
Well-sailing ships and bounteous winds have brought
This king to Tarsus,—think his pilot thought;
So with his steerage shall your thoughts grow on,—
To fetch his daughter home, who first is gone.
Like motes and shadows see them move awhile;
Your ears unto your eyes I'll reconcile.

DUMB SHOW.

Enter PERICLES, at one door, with all his train:
CLEON and DIONYZA, at the other. CLEON shows PERICLES the tomb; solemnly PERICLES makes lamentation, puts on sackcloth, and in a mighty passion departs. Then exeunt CLEON and DIONYZA.

See how belief may suffer by foul show!
This borrow'd passion stands for true old woe;
And Pericles, in sorrow all devour'd,
With sighs shot through, and biggest tears o'er-shower'd,
Leaves Tarsus and again embarks. He swears
Never to wash his face, nor cut his hairs:
He puts on sackcloth, and to sea. He bears
A tempest, which his mortal vessel tears:
And yet he rides it out. Now please you wit
The epitaph is for Marina writ
By wicked Dionyz.

[Reads the inscription on Marina's monument.

The fairest, sweet'est, and best lies here,
Who wither'd in her spring of year.
She was of Tyrus the king's daughter,
On whom foul death hath made this slaughter;
Marina was she call'd; and at her birth,
Thetis, being proud, swallowed some part of the earth:
Therefore the earth, fearing to be o'erflow'd, 40
Hath Thetis' birth-child on the heavens bestow'd:

Wherefore she does, and swears she'll never
stint,
Make raging battery upon shores of flint.'
No visor does become black villany
So well as soft and tender flattery.
Let Pericles believe his daughter's dead,
And bear his courses to be ordered
By Lady Fortune; while our scene must play
His daughter's woe and heavy well-a-day
In her unholy patience. Patience, then, 50
And think you now are all in Mytilene. [Exit.

SCENE V. Mytilene. A street before the brothel.

Enter, from the brothel, two Gentlemen.
First Gent. Did you ever hear the like?
Sec. Gent. No, nor never shall do in such a place as this, she being once gone.
First Gent. But to have divinity preached there! did you ever dream of such a thing?
Sec. Gent. No, no. Come, I am for no more bawdy-houses: shall's go hear the vestibals sing?
First Gent. I'll do any thing now that is virtuous;
but I am out of the road of rutting for ever.
[Exeunt.]

SCENE VI. The same. A room in the brothel.

Enter Pandar, Bawd, and Boul't.

Pand. Well, I had rather than twice the worth of her she had ne'er come here.
Bawd. Fie, fie upon her! she's able to freeze the god Priapus, and undo a whole generation.
We must either get her ravished, or be rid of her.
When she should do for clients her fitment, and do me the kindness of our profession, she has me her quirks, her reasons, her master reasons, her prayers, her knees; that she would make a puritant of the devil, if he should cheapen a kiss of her.
Boul't. 'Faith, I must ravish her, or she'll disfurnish us of all our cavaliers, and make us swearers priests.

Pand. Now, the pox upon her green-sickness for me!
Bawd. 'Faith, there's no way to be rid on't but by the way to the pox. Here comes the Lord Lysimachus disguised.
Boul't. We should have both lord and lown, if the peevish baggage would but give way to customers.

Enter LYSIMACHUS.

Lys. How now! How a dozen of virginites?
Bawd. Now, the gods to-bless your honour!
Boul't. I am glad to see your honour in good health.
Lys. You may so; 'tis the better for you that your ressorters stand upon sound legs. How now!
wholesome iniquity have you that a man may deal withal, and defy the surgeon?
Bawd. We have here one, sir, if she would—but there never came her like in Mytilene. 37
Lys. If she 'ld do the deed of darkness, thou would'st say.
Bawl'd. Your honour knows what 'tis to say well enough.
Lys. Well, call forth, call forth.
Boul't. For flesh and blood, sir, white and red,
PERICLES.

If thou couldst have spoke so well; ne'er dream'd thee couldst.

I did not think that flies I the purer air!

I have not heard thee, thou art a piece of virtue, and I doubt not but thy training hath been noble.

Hold, here's more gold for thee:

Thou hast done thy goodness.

And the gods strengthen thee!

The good gods preserve you.

That I came with no ill intent; for to me The very doors and windows savour vilely.

Fare thee well. Thou art a piece of virtue, and I doubt not but thy training hath been noble. Hold, here's more gold for thee.

A curse upon him, die he like a thief, That robs thee of thy goodness! If thou dost hear from me, it shall be for thy good.

Bawd. Pray you, without any more virginal fencing, will you use him kindly? He will line your apron with gold.

Mar. What he will do graciously, I will thankfully receive.

Lys. Ha' you done?

Bawd. My lord, she's not paced yet: you must take some pains to work her to your manage. Come, we will leave his honour and her together. Go thy ways.

[Exeunt Bawd, Pandar, and Bawt.

Lys. Now, pretty one, how long have you been at this trade?

Mar. What trade, sir?

Lys. Why, I cannot name 't but I shall offend. Mar. I cannot be offended with my trade.

Please you to name it.

Lys. How long have you been of this profession? Mar. E'er since I can remember.

Lys. Did you go to 't so young? Were you a gamester alive or at seven?

Mar. Earlier too, sir, if now I be one.

Lys. Why, the house you dwell in proclaims you to be a creature of sale.

Mar. Do you know this house to be a place of such resort, and will come into 't? I hear say you are of honourable parts, and are the governor of this place.

Lys. Why, hath your principal made known unto you who I am?

Mar. Who is my principal?

Lys. Why, your herb-woman; she that sets seeds and roots of shame and iniquity. O, you have heard something of my power, and so stand aloof for more serious woe. But I protest to thee, pretty one, my authority shall not see thee, or else look friendly upon thee. Come, bring me to some private place: come, come.

Mar. If you were born to honour, show it now; If put upon you, make the judgement good That thought you worthy of it.

Lys. How's this? how's this? Some more; be sage.

Boult. O, sir, I can be modest.

Lys. That dignifies the renown of a bawd, no less than it gives a good report to a number to be chaste. [Exit Boult.

Bawd. Here comes that which grows to the stalk; never plucked yet, I can assure you.

Re-enter Boult with Marina.

Is she not a fair creature?

Lys. 'Faith, she would serve after a long voyage at sea. Well, there's for you: leave us.

Bawd. I beseech your honour, give me leave: a word, and I'll have done presently.

Lys. I beseech you, do.

Bawd. [To Marina] First, I would have you note, this is an honourable man.

Mar. I desire to find him so, that I may worthily note him.

Bawd. Next, he's the governor of this country, and a man whom I am bound to.

Mar. If he govern the country, you are bound to him indeed; but how honourable he is in that, I know not.

Bawd. Pray you, without any more virginal fencing, will you use him kindly? He will line your apron with gold.

Mar. What he will do graciously, I will thankfully receive.

Lys. Ha' you done?

Bawd. My lord, she's not paced yet: you must take some pains to work her to your manage. Come, we will leave his honour and her together. Go thy ways.

[Exeunt Bawd, Pandar, and Bawt.

Lys. Now, pretty one, how long have you been at this trade?

Mar. What trade, sir?

Lys. Why, I cannot name 't but I shall offend. Mar. I cannot be offended with my trade.

Please you to name it.

Lys. How long have you been of this profession? Mar. E'er since I can remember.

Lys. Did you go to 't so young? Were you a gamester alive or at seven?

Mar. Earlier too, sir, if now I be one.

Lys. Why, the house you dwell in proclaims you to be a creature of sale.

Mar. Do you know this house to be a place of such resort, and will come into 't? I hear say you are of honourable parts, and are the governor of this place.

Lys. Why, hath your principal made known unto you who I am?

Mar. Who is my principal?

Lys. Why, your herb-woman; she that sets seeds and roots of shame and iniquity. O, you have heard something of my power, and so stand aloof for more serious woe. But I protest to thee, pretty one, my authority shall not see thee, or else look friendly upon thee. Come, bring me to some private place: come, come.

Mar. If you were born to honour, show it now; If put upon you, make the judgement good That thought you worthy of it.

Lys. How's this? how's this? Some more; be sage.

Boult. I beseech your honour, one piece for me.

Lys. Avaunt, thou damned door-keeper! Your house, but for this virgin that doth prop it, Would sink and overwhelm you. Away! [Exit Boult.

Lys. How's this? We must take another course with you. If your peevish chastity which is not worth a breakfast in the cheapest country under the cope, shall undo a whole household, let me be gelded like a spaniel. Come your ways.

Mar. Whither would you have me?

Boult. I must have your maidenhead taken off, or the common hangman shall execute it. Come your ways. We'll have no more gentle men driven away. Come your ways, I say.

Re-enter Bawd.

Bawd. How now! what's the matter? 14

Boult. Worse and worse, mistress; she has here spoken holy words to the Lord Lysimachus.

Bawd. O abominable!

Boult. She makes our profession as it were stink afore the face of the gods.

Bawd. Marry, hang her up for ever!

Boult. The nobleman would have dealt with her like a nobleman, and she sent him away as cold as a snowball; saying his prayers too.

Bawd. Boult, take her away; use her at the pleasure; crack the glass of her virginity, and make the rest malleable.

Boult. An if she were a thorner piece of ground than she is, she shall be ploughed.

Mar. Hark, hark, you gods!

Bawd. She conjures away with her! Would she had never come within my doors! Marry, hang her up! She's born to undo us. Will you not go the way of women-kind? Marry, come up, my dish of chastity with rosemary and bays.
Scene VI.

PERICLES.

Boult. Come, mistress; come your ways with me.

Mar. Whither wilt thou have me?

Boult. To take from you the jewel you hold so dear.

Mar. Prishee, tell me one thing first.

Boult. Come now, your one thing.

Mar. What canst thou wish thine enemy to be?

Boult. Why, I could wish him to be my master, or rather, my mistress.

170

Mar. Neither of these are so bad as thou art, since they do better thee in their command.

Thou hast'st a place, for which the pained'st fiend Of hell would not in reputation change: Thou art the damned doorkeeper to every Coistril that comesquiring for his Tib; To the choleric fistiny of every rogue Thy ear is liable; thy food is such As hath been belch'd on by infected lungs. 179

Boult. What would you have me do? go to the wars, would you? where a man may serve seven years for the loss of a leg, and have not money enough in the end to buy him a wooden one?

Mar. Do anything but this thou dost. Empty Old receptacles, or common shores, of fish; Serve by indenture to the common hangman: Any of these ways are yet better than this; For thou professest, a baboon, could he speak, Would own a name too dear. O, that the gods Would safely deliver me from this place! 191

Here, here's gold for thee.

If that thy master would gain by me, Proclaim that I can sing, weave, sew, and dance, With other virtues, which I'll keep from boast; And I will undertake all these to teach. I doubt not but this populous city will Yield many scholars.

Boult. But can you teach all this you speak of?

Mar. Prove that I cannot, take me home again, And prostitute me to the basest groom That doth frequent your house.

Boult. Well, I will see what I can do for thee: If I can place thee, I will.

Boult. 'Faith, my acquaintance lies little amongst them. But since my master and mistress have bought you, there's no going but by their consent: therefore I will make them acquainted with your purpose, and I doubt not but I shall find them tractable enough. Come, I'll do for thee what I can; come your ways.

[Exeunt.]

ACT V.

Enter Gower.

Gow. Marina thus the brothel 'scapes, and chances into an honest house, our story says, she sings like one immortal, and she dances as goddess-like to her admired lays; keep clerks she dumbs; and with her needles composes Nature's own shape, of bud, bird, branch, or berry, that even her art sisters the natural roses; her inkle, silk, twin with the rubbed cherry: that pupils lacks she none of noble race,

Who pour their bounty on her; and her gain She gives the cursed bawd. Here we her place: And to her father turn our thoughts again, Where we left him, on the sea. We there him lost;

Whence, driven before the winds, he is arrived Here where his daughter dwells; and on this coast Suppose him now at anchor. The city strived God Neptune's annual feast to keep: from whence Lysimachus our Tyrian ship espies, His banners sable, trimm'd with rich expense; And to him in his barge with fervour hies. In your supposing once more put your sight Of heavy Pericles; think this his bark:

Where what is done in action, more, if might, Shall be discover'd; please you, sit and hark.

Scene I. On board Pericles' ship, off Mytilene.

A close pavilion on deck, with a curtain before it; Pericles within it, reclined on a couch. A barge lying beside the Tyrian vessel.

Enter two Sailors, one belonging to the Tyrian vessel, the other to the barge; to them HELICANUS.

Tyr. Sail. [To the Sailor of Mytilene]

Where is lord Helicanus? he can resolve you.

O, here he is.

Sir, there's a barge put off from Mytilene, And in it is Lysimachus the governor, Who craves to come aboard. What is your will? Hel. That he have his. Call up some gentlemen.

Tyr. Sail. Ho, gentlemen! my lord calls.

Enter two or three Gentlemen.

First Gent. Doth your lordship call?

Hel. Gentlemen, there's some of worth would come aboard:

I pray ye, greet them fairly.

[The Gentlemen and the two Sailors descend, and go on board the barge.]

Enter, from hence, LYSIMACHUS and Lords; with the Gentlemen and the two Sailors.

Tyr. Sail. Sir,

This is the man that can, in aught you would, Resolve you.

Lys. Hail, reverend sir! the gods preserve you!

Hel. And you, sir, to outlive the age I am, And die as I would do.

Lys. You wish me well.

Being on shore, honouring of Neptune's triumphs, Seeing this goodly vessel ride before us, I made to it, to know of whence you are.

Hel. First, what is your place?

Lys. I am the governor of this place you lie before.

Hel. Sir, Our vessel is of Tyre, in it the king:

A man who for this three months hath not spoken To any one, nor taken sustenance

But to prorogue his grief.

Lys. Upon what ground is his distemperature?

Hel. 'Twould be too tedious to repeat;

But the main grief springs from the loss

Of a beloved daughter and a wife.

63-2
PERICLES.

Lys.  May we not see him?

Hel.  You may;

But bootless is your sight: he will not speak
To any.

Lys.  Yet let me obtain my wish.

Hel.  Behold him. [Pericles discovered.] This was a goodly person.

Till the disaster that, one mortal night,

Drove him to this.

Lys.  Sir king, all hail! the gods preserve you!

Hail, royal sir! 40

Hel.  It is in vain; he will not speak to you.

First Lord.  Sir,

We have a maid in Mytilene, I durst wager,
Would win some words of him.

Lys.  'Tis well bethought.

She questionless with her sweet harmony
And other chosen attractions, would allure,
And make a battery through his deafen'd parts,
Which now are midway stopp'd:

She is all happy as the fairest of all,
And, with her fellow maids, is now upon

The leafy shelter that abuts against

The island's side.

[Whispers a Lord, who goes off in the targe of Lysimachus.

Hel.  Sure, all's effectless; yet nothing we'll omit

That bears recovery's name. But, since your kindness

We have stretch'd thus far, let us beseech you
That for our gold we may provision have,

Wherein we are not destitute for want,
But weary for the staleness.

Lys.  O, sir, a courtesy
Which if we should deny, the most just gods

For every graff would send a caterpillar,

And so affict our province. Yet once more

Let me entreat to know at large the cause

Of your king's sorrow.

Hel.  Sir, sir, I will recount it to you:

But, see, I am prevented.

Re-enter, from the barge, Lord, with MARINA, and a young Lady.

Lys.  O, here is

The lady that I sent for. Welcome, fair one!

Is't not a goodly presence?

Hel.  She's a gallant lady.

Lys.  She's such a one, that, were I well assured

Came of a gentle kind and noble stock,

I'd wish no better choice, and think me rarely wed.

Fair one, all goodness that consists in bounty

Expect even here, where is a kingly patient:

If that thy prosperous and artificial feat

Can draw him but to answer thee in aught,

Thy sacred physic shall receive such pay

As thy desires can wish.

Mar.  Sir, I will use

My utmost skill in his recovery,

Provided

That none but I and my companion maid

Be suffer'd to come near him.

Lys.  Come, let us leave her;

And the gods make her prosperous! 80

[Marina sings.

Lys.  Mark'd he your music?

Mar.  No, nor look'd on us.

Lys.  See, she will speak to him.

Mar.  Hail, sir! my lord, lend ear.

Per.  Hum, ha!

Mar.  I am a maid,

My lord, that ne'er before invited eyes,

But have been gaze'd on like a comet: she speaks,

My lord, that may be, hath endured a grief

Might equal yours, if both were justly weigh'd.

Though wayward fortune did malign my state, 90

My derivation was from ancestors

Who stood equivalent with mighty kings:

But time hath root'd out my parentage,

And to the world and awkward casualties

Bound me in servitude. [Aside] I will desist;

But there is something glows upon my cheek,

And whispers in mine ear 'Go not till he speak.'

Per.  My fortunes—parentage—good parentage—

To equal mine!—was it not thus? what say you?

Mar.  I said, my lord, if you did know my parentage,

You would not do me violence.

Per.  I do think so. Pray you, turn your eyes upon me.

You are like something that—What country-

woman?

Here of these shores?

Mar.  No, nor of any shores:

Yet I was mortally brought forth, and am

No other than I appear.

Per.  I am great with woe, and shall deliver

weeping

My dearest wife was like this maid, and such a one

My daughter might have been: my queen's square brows;

Her stature to an inch; as wand-like straight;

As silver-voiced; her eyes as jewel-like

And cas'd as richly; in pace another Juno;

Who starves the ears she feeds, and makes them hungry,

The more she gives them speech. Where do you live?

Mar.  Where I am but a stranger: from the dock

You may discern the place.

Per.  Where were you bred?

And how achieved you these endowments, which

You make more rich to owe?

Mar.  If I should tell my history, it would seem

Like lies disdain'd in the reporting.

Per.  Prithhee, speak: 120

Falseness cannot come from thee; for thou

look'st

Modest as Justice, and thou seem'st a palace

For the crown'd Truth to dwell in: I will believe

thee,

And make my senses credit thy relation

To points that seem impossible: for thou look'st

Like one I loved indeed. What were thy friends?

Didst thou not say, when I did push thee back—

Which was when I perceived thee—that thou camest

From good descending?

Mar.  So indeed I did.

Per.  Report thy parentage. I think thou said'st

Scene 1.

PERICLES

Thee hadst been toss'd from wrong to injury,
And that thou thought'st thy griefs might equal mine,
If both were open. Mar. Some such thing
I said, and said no more but what my thoughts
Did warrant me was likely. Per. Tell thy story;
If thine consider'd prove the thousandth part
Of my endurance, thou art a man, and I
Have suffer'd like a girl: yet thou dost look Like Patience gaz'ning on kings' graves, and smiling
Extemity out of act. What were thy friends? 140
How lost thou them? Thy name, my most kind Recount, I do beseech thee: come, sit by me. Mar. My name is Marina.
Per. O, I am mock'd, and thou by some incensed god sent hither
To make the world to laugh at me. Per. Patience, good sir,
Or here I'll cease. Per. Nay, I'll be patient.
Thou little know'st how thou dost startle me,
To call thyself Marina. Mar. The name
Was given me by one that had some power, 150
My father, and a king. Per. How! a king's daughter?
And call'd Marina? Mar. You said you would believe me;
But, not to be a troubler of your peace,
I will end here. Per. But are you flesh and blood?
Have you a working pulse? and are no fairy?
Motion! Well; speak on. Where were you born?
Per. I was born at sea. Mar. At sea! what mother?
Per. My mother was the daughter of a king;
Who died the minute I was born, 160
As my good nurse Lychorida hath oft Deliver'd weeping. Per. What! stop there a little!
Axed] This is the rarest dream that e'er dull
Sleep did mock sad fools withal: this cannot be:
My daughter's buried. Well: where were you bred?
I'll hear you more, to the bottom of your story,
And never interrupt you. Mar. You scorn: believe me, 'twere best I did give o'er.
Per. I will believe you by the syllable
Of what you shall deliver. Yet, give me leave: 170
How came you in these parts? where were you bred?
Mar. The king my father did in Tarsus leave me:
I'll cruel Cleon, with his wicked wife,
Did seek to murder me: and having wo'd
Villain to attempt it, who having drawn to do't,
Crew of pirates came and rescued me;
Brought me to Mytilene. But, good sir,
Whither will you have me? Why do you weep?
It may be,
You think me an impostor: no, good faith;
I am the daughter to King Pericles,
If good King Pericles be. Per. Ho, Helicanus!
Hel. Calls my lord? Per. Thou art a grave and noble counsellor,
Most wise in general: tell me, if thou canst,
What this maid is, or what is like to be,
That thus hath made me weep? Hel. I know not; but Here is the regent, sir, of Mytilene
Speaks nobly of her. Lys. She would never tell
Her parentage; being demanded that, 190
She would sit still and weep. Per. O Helicanus, strike me, honour'd sir;
Give me a gash, put me to present pain;
Lest this great sea of joys rushing upon me
O'erbear the shores of my mortality,
And drown me with their sweetness. O, come hither,
Thou that beget'st him that did thee beget;
Thou that wast born at sea, buried at Tarsus,
And found at sea again! O Helicanus,
Down on thy knees, thank the holy gods as loud
As thunder threatens us: this is Marina.
What was thy mother's name? tell me but that,
For truth can never be confirm'd enough,
Though doubts did ever sleep. Mar. First, sir, I pray,
What is your title? Per. I am Pericles of Tyre: but tell me now
My drown'd queen's name, as in the rest you said
Thou hast been godlike perfect,
The heir of kingdoms and another like
To Pericles thy father. Mar. Is it no more to be your daughter than
To say my mother's name was Thaisia?
Thaisia was my mother, who did end
The minute I began. Per. Now, blessing on thee! rise; thou art
My child. Give me fresh garments. Mine own, Helicanus;
She is not dead at Tarsus, as she should have been,
By savage Cleon: she shall tell thee all:
When thou shalt kneel, and justify in knowledge
She is thy very princess. Who is this? 220
Hel. Sir, 'tis the governor of Mytilene,
Who, hearing of your melancholy state,
Did come to see you. Per. I embrace you.
Give me my robes. I am wild in my beholding.
O heavens, bless my girl! But, hark, what music?
Tell Helicanus, my Marina, tell him
O'er, point by point, for yet he seems to doubt,
How sure you are my daughter. But, what music?
Hel. My lord, I hear none. Per. None! The music of the spheres! List, my Marina.
Lys. It is not good to cross him; give him way.
Per. Rarest sounds! Do ye not hear?
Scene III. The temple of Diana at Ephesus; Thaisa standing near the altar, as high priestess; a number of Virgins on each side; Cerimon and other inhabitants of Ephesus attending.

Enter PERICLES, with his train; LYSIMACHUS, HELICANUS, MARINA, and a Lady.

Per. Hail, Dian! to perform thy just command,
I here confess myself the king of Tyre;
Who, frighted from my country, did wed
At Pentapolis the fair Thaisa.
At sea in childbed died she, but brought forth
A maid-child call'd Marina; who, O goddess,
Wears yet thy silver livery. She at Tarsus
Was nursed with Cleon; who at fourteen years
He sought to murder: but her better stars
Brought her to Mytilene; 'gainst whose shore
Riding, her fortunes brought the maid aboard us,
Where, by her own most clear remembrance, she Made known herself my daughter.

Thais. Voice and favour! You are, you are—O royal Pericles! [Faints.]
Per. What means the nun? she dies! help, gentlemen!

Cer. Noble sir, if you have told Diana's altar true,
This is your wife.

Per. Reverend appearer, no;
I threw her overboard with these very arms.

Cer. Upon this coast, I warrant you.

Per. 'Tis most certain. 29
Cer. Look to the lady; O, she's but o'erjoy'd.
Early in blustering morn this lady was Thrown upon this shore. I oped the coffin,
Found there rich jewels; recover'd her, and placed her
Here in Diana's temple.

Per. May we see them?
Cer. Great sir, they shall be brought you to your house,
Whither I invite you. Look, Thaisa is recovered.

Thais. O, let me look!

If he be none of mine, my sanctity
Will to my sense bend no licentious ear,
But curb it, spite of seeing. O, my lord,
Are you not Pericles? Like him you spake,
Like him you are: did you not name a tempest,
A birth, and death?

Per. The voice of dead Thaisa!

Thais. That Thaisa am I, supposed dead
And drown'd.

Per. Immortal Dian!

Thais. Now I know you better.

When we with tears parted Pentapolis,
The king my father gave you such a ring.

[Shows a ring.]

Per. This, this: no more, you gods! your present kindness
Makes my past miseries sports: you shall do well,
That on the touching of her lips I may Melt and no more be seen. O, come, be buried
A second time within these arms.

Mar. My heart
Leaps to be gone into my mother's bosom.

[Kneels to Thaisa]
Per. Look, who kneels here! Flesh of thy flesh, Thaisa:
Thy burden at the sea, and call'd Marina
For she was yielded there.
Tha. Blest, and mine own! I know you not.
Per. You have heard me say, when I did fly from Tyre,
I left behind an ancient substitute:
Can you remember what I call'd the man?
I have named him oft.
Tha. Twas Helicanus then.
Per. Still confirmation:
Embrace him, dear Thaisa: this is he.
Now do I long to hear how you were found;
How possibly preserved; and who to thank,
Besides the gods, for this great miracle.
Tha. Lord Cerimon, my lord; this man,
Through whom the gods have shown their power:
That can From first to last resolve you.
Per. Reverend sir,
The gods can have no mortal officer
More like a god than you. Will you deliver
How this dead queen re-lives?
Crr. I will, my lord.
Beseech you, first go with me to my house,
Where shall be shown you all was found with her;
How she came placed here in the temple;
No needful thing omitted.
Per. Pure Dian, bless thee for thy vision! I
Will offer night-oblations to thee. Thaisa;
This prince, the fair-betrothed of your daughter,
Shall marry her at Pentapolis. And now,
This ornament
Makes me look dismal will I clip to form;
And what this fourteen years no razor touch'd,
To grace thy marriage-day, I'll beautify.
Tha. Lord Cerimon hath letters of good credit, sir,
My father's dead.
Per. Heavens make a star of him! Yet there,
my queen,
We'll celebrate their nuptials, and ourselves 80
Will in that kingdom spend our following days:
Our son and daughter shall in Tyrus reign.
Lord Cerimon, we do our longing stay
To hear the rest untold: sir, lead's the way.
[Exit.]

Enter Gower.

Gov. In Antiochus and his daughter you have heard
Of monstrous lust the due and just reward:
In Pericles, his queen and daughter, seen,
Although assail'd with fortune fierce and keen,
Virtue preserved from fell destruction's blast,
Led on by heaven, and crown'd with joy at last:
In Helicanus may you well desery
A figure of truth, of faith, of loyalty:
In reverend Cerimon there well appears
The worth that learned charity aye wears:
For wicked Cleon and his wife, when fame
Hadh spread their cursed deed, and honour'd name
Of Pericles, to rage the city turn,
That him and his they in his palace burn;
The gods for murder seemed so content
To punish them; although not done, but meant.
So, on your patience evermore attending, 100
New joy wait on you! Here our play has ending.
[Exit.]
VENUS AND ADONIS.

‘Vilia miretur vulgus; mihi flavus Apollo
Pocula Castalia plena ministret aqua.’

TO THE
RIGHT HONOURABLE HENRY WROITHESLY,
EARL OF SOUTHAMPTON, AND BARON OF TICHFIELD.

I know not how I shall offend in dedicating my unpolished lines to your lordship, nor how the world will censure me for choosing so strong a prop to support so weak a burden: only, if your honour seem but pleased, I account myself highly praised, and vow to take advantage of all idle hours, till I have honoured you with some graver labour. But if the first heir of my invention prove deformed, I shall be sorry it had so noble a god-father, and never after ear so barren a land, for fear it yield me still so bad a harvest. I leave it to your honourable survey, and your honour to your heart’s content; which I wish may always answer your own wish and the world’s hopeful expectation.

Your honour’s in all duty,
WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE.

Even as the sun with purple-colour’d face
Had ta’en his last leave of the weeping morn,
Rose-cheek’d Adonis hied him to the chase;
Hunting he loved, but love he laugh’d to scorn;
Sick-thoughted Venus makes amain unto him,
And like a bold-faced suitor ’gins to woo him.

’Thrice-fairer than myself,’ thus she began,
‘The field’s chief flower, sweet above compare,
Stain to all nymphs, more lovely than a man,
More white and red than doves or roses are;’
Nature that made thee, with herself at strife,
Saith that the world hath ending with thy life.

‘Vouchsafe, thou wonder, to alight thy steed,
And rein his proud head to the saddle-bow;
If thou wilt deign this favour, for thy meed
A thousand honey secrets shalt thou know:
Here come and sit, where never serpent hisses,
And being set, I’ll smoother thee with kisses;

‘And yet not cloy thy lips with loathed satiety,
But rather furnish them amid their plenty,
Making them red and pale with fresh variety,
Ten kisses short as one, one long as twenty:
A summer’s day will seem an hour but short,
Being wasted in such time-beguiling sport.’

With this she seizeth on his sweating palm,
The precedent of pith and livelihood,
And trembling in her passion, calls it balm,
Earth’s sovereign salve to do a goddess good:
Being so enraged, desire doth lend her force
Courageously to pluck him from his horse.

Over one arm the lusty courser’s rein,
Under her other was the tender boy,

Who blush’d and pouted in a dull disdain,
With leaden appetite, unapt to joy;
She red and hot as coals of glowing fire,
He red for shame, but frosty in desire.

The studded bridle on a ragged bough
Nimbly she fastens:—O, how quick is love!—
The steed is stilled up, and even now
To tie the rider she begins to prove:
Backward she push’d him, as she would be thrust,
And govern’d him in strength, though not in lust.

So soon was she along as he was down,
Each leaning on their elbows and their hips;
Now doth she stroke his cheek, now doth he frown,
And ’gins to chide, but soon she stops his lips;
And kissing speaks, with lustful language broken,
‘If thou wilt chide, thy lips shall never open.’

He burns with bashful shame: she with her tears
Doth quench the maiden burning of his cheeks;
Then with her windy sighs and golden hairs
To fan and blow them dry again she seeks;
He saith she is immodest, blames her ’miss;
What follows more she murders with a kiss.

Even as an empty eagle, sharp by fast,
Tires with her beak on feathers, flesh and bone,
Shaking her wings, devouring all in haste,
Till either gorge be stuff’d or prey be gone;
Even so she kissed his brow, his cheek, his chin,
And where she ends she doth anew begin.

Forced to content, but never to obey,
Panting he lies and breatheth in her face:
VENUS AND ADONIS.

She feedeth on the steam as on a prey,
And calls it heavenly moisture, air of grace;
Wishing her cheeks were gardens full of flowers,
So they were d'ew'd with such distilling showers.

Look, how a bird lies tangled in a net,
So fasten'd in her arms Adonis lies;
Pure shame and awed resistance made him fret,
Which bred more beauty in his angry eyes: 70
Rain added to a river that is rank
Perforce will force it overflow the bank.

Still she entreats, and prettily entreats,
For to a pretty ear she tunes her tale;
Still is he sullen, still he lours and frets,
'Twixt crimson shame and anger ash-y pale;
Being red, she loves him best; and being white,
Her best is better'd with a more delight.

Look how he can, she cannot choose but love;
And by her fair immortal hand she swears,
So from his soft bosom never to remove,
Till he take truce with her contending tears,
Which long have rain'd, making her cheeks all wet;
And one sweet kiss shall pay this countless debt.

Upon this promise did he raise his chin,
Like a dive-dapper peering through a wave,
Who, being look'd on, ducks as quickly in;
So offers he to give what she did crave;
But when her lips were ready for his pay,
He winks, and turns his lips another way. 90

Never did passenger in summer's heat
More thirst for drink than she for this good turn.
Her help she sees, but help she cannot get;
She batters in water, yet her fire must burn:
'0, pity,'gan she cry, 'flint-hearted boy!
'Tis but a kiss I beg; why art thou coy?

I have been woo'd, as I entreat thee now,
Even by the stern and direful god of war,
Whose sinewy neck in battle ne'er did bow
When conquerors where he comes in every jar; 100
Yet hath he been my captive and my slave,
And begg'd for that which thou unask'd shalt have.

Over my altars hath he hung his lance,
His bateen'd shield, his uncontrolled crest,
And for my sake hath learn'd to sport and dance,
To toy, to wanton, daily, smile and jest,
Scorning his churlish drum and ensign red,
Making his arms his field, his tent the bed.

Thus he that overruled I oversway'd,
Leading him prisoner in a red-rose chain: 110
Strong-tempered steel his stronger strength obey'd,
Yet was he servile to my coy disdain.
O, be not proud, nor brag not of thy might,
For mastering her that foil'd the god of fight!

Touch but my lips with those fair lips of thine,—
Though mine be not so fair, yet are they red—
The kiss shall be thine own as well as mine.
What seest thou in the ground? hold up thy head:

Look in mine eye-balls, there thy beauty lies;
Then why not lips on lips, since eyes in eyes?

'Art thou ashamed to kiss? then wink again, 120
And I will wink; so shall the day seem night;
Love keeps his revels where there are but twain;
Be bold to play, our sport is not in sight:
These blue-vein'd violets wherein we lean
Never can blab, nor know not what we mean.

'The tender spring upon thy tempting lip
Shows thee unripe; yet mayst thou well be tasted:
Make use of time, let not advantage slip;
Beauty within itself should not be wasted: 130
Fair flowers that are not gather'd in their prime Rot and consume themselves in little time.

'Were I hard-favour'd, foul, or wrinkled-old,
Ill-nurtured, crooked, churlish, harsh in voice,
O'er-worn, despised, rheumatic and cold,
Thick-sighted, barren, lean and lacking juice,
Then might'st thou pause, for then I were not for thee;
But having no defects, why dost abhor me?

'Thou canst not see one wrinkle in my brow;
Mine eyes are grey and bright and quick in turning;
My beauty as the spring doth yearly grow,
My flesh is soft and plump, my narrow burning;
My smooth moist hand, were it with thy hand felt,
Would in thy palm dissolve, or seem to melt.

'Bid me discourse, I will enchant thine ear,
Or, like a fairy, trip upon the green,
Or, like a nymph, with long dishervell'd hair,
Dance on the sands, and yet no footing seen;
Love is a spirit all compact of fire,
Not gross to sink, but light, and will aspire. 150

Witness this primrose bank whereon I lie;
These forceless flowers like sturdy trees support me;
Two strengthless doves will draw me through the sky,
From morn till night, even where I list to sport me:
Is love so light, sweet boy, and may it be
That thou shouldst think it heavy unto thee?

'Is thine own heart to thine own face affected?
Can thy right hand seize love upon thy left?
Then woo thyself, be of thyself rejected,
Steal thine own freedom and complain on theft.
Narcissus so himself forsook, 161
And died to kiss his shadow in the brook.

'Torches are made to light, jewels to wear,
Dainties to taste, fresh beauty for the use,
Herbs for their smell, and sappy plants to bear:
Things growing to themselves are growth's abuse:
Seeds spring from seeds and beauty breethed beauty;
Thou wast begot; to get it is thy duty.

'Upon the earth's increase why shouldst thou feed,
Unless the earth with thy increase be fed? 170
By law of nature thou art bound to breed,
That thine may live when thou thyself art dead;
And so, in spite of death, thou dost survive,
In that thy likeness still is left alive.

By this the love-sick queen began to sweat,
For where they lay the shadow had forsaken them,
And Titan, tired in the mid-day heat,
With burning eyes did hotly overlook them:
Wishing Adonis had his team to guide,
So he were like him and by Venus' side. 180

And now Adonis, with a lazy spright,
And with a heavy, dark, disliking eye,
His louring brows o'erwhelming his fair sight,
Like misty vapours when they blot the sky,
Souring his cheeks cries 'Fie, no more of love!
The sun doth burn my face; I must remove.'

'Ah, me,' quoth Venus, 'young, and so unkind?
What bare excuses maketh thou to be gone?
I'll sigh celestial breath, whose gentle wind
Shall cool the heat of this descending sun: 190
I'll make a shadow for thee of my hairs;
If they burn too, I'll quench them with my tears.

'The sun that shines from heaven shines but warm,
And, lo, I lie between that sun and thee:
The heat I have from thence doth little harm,
Thine eye darts forth the fire that burneth me;
And were I not immortal, life were done
Between this heavenly and earthly sun.

'Art thou obdurate, flinty, hard as steel,
Nay, more than flint, for stone at rain relenteth?
Art thou a woman's son, and canst not feel
What 'tis to love? how want of love tormenteth?
O, had thy mother borne so hard a mind,
She had not brought forth thee, but died unkind.

'What am I, that thou shouldst content me this?
Or what great danger dwells upon my suit?
What were thy lips the worse for one poor kiss?
Speak, fair; but speak fair words, or else be mute;
Give me some kiss, I'll give it thee again, 209
And one for interest, if thou wilt have twain.

'Fie, lifeless picture, cold and senseless stone,
Well-painted idol, image dull and dead,
Statue contenting but the eye alone.
Thing like a man, but of no woman bred!
Thou art no man, though of a man's complexion,
For men will kiss even by their own direction.'

This said, impatience chokes her pleading tongue,
And swelling passion doth provoke a pause;
Red cheeks and fiery eyes blaze forth her wrong;
Being judge in love, she cannot right her cause:
And now she weeps, and now she fain would speak, 221
And now her sobs do her intenments break.

Sometimes she shakes her head and then her hand,
Now gazeth she on him, now on the ground;
Sometimes her arms infold him like a band:
She would, he will not in her arms be bound;
And when from thence he struggles to be gone,
She locks her lily fingers one in one.

'Fondling,' she saith, 'since I have hemm'd thee here
Within the circuit of this ivory pale,
I'll be a park, and thou shalt be my deer;
Feed where thou wilt, on mountain or in dale:
Graze on my lips; and if those hills be dry,
Stray lower, where the pleasant fountains lie.

'Within this limit is relief enough,
Sweet bottom-grass and high delightful plain,
Round rising hillocks, brakes obscure and rough;
To shelter thee from tempest and from rain:
Then be my deer, since I am such a park; 239
No dog shall rouse thee, though a thousand bark.'

At this Adonis smiles as in disdain,
That in each cheek appears a pretty dimple;
Love made those hollows, if himself were slain,
He might be buried in a tomb so simple;
Foreknowing well, if there he came to lie,
Why, there Love lived and there he could not die.

These lovely caves, these round enchanting pits,
Open'd their mouths to swallow Venus' liking.
Being mad before, how doth she now for wits?
Struck dead at first, what needs a second striking?
Poor queen of love, in thine own law forlorn,
To love a cheek that smiles at thee in scorn!

Now which way shall she turn? what shall she say?
Her words are done, her woes the more increasing;
The time is spent, her object will away,
And from her twining arms doth urge releasing.
'Fifty,' she cries, 'some favour, some remorse!' Away he springs and hasteth to his horse.

But, lo, from forth a copse that neighbours by,
A breeding jennet, lusty, young and proud, 250
Adonis' trampling courser doth espy,
And forth she rushes, snorts and neighs aloud:
The strong-neck'd steed, being tied unto a tree,
Breaketh his reins, and to her straight goes he.

Imperiously he leaps, he neighs, he bounds,
And now his woven girths he breaks asunder;
The bearing earth with his hard hoof he wounds,
Whose hollow wound resounds like heaven's thunder;
The iron bit he crusheth 'tween his teeth,
Controlling what he was consulted with. 270

His ears up-prick'd; his braided hanging mane
Upon his compass'd crest now stand on end;
His nostrils drink the air, and forth again,
As from a furnace, vapours doth he send:
His eye, which scornfully glisters like fire,
Shows his hot courage and his high desire.

Sometime he trots, as if he told the steps,
With gentle majesty and modest pride;
Anon he bears upright, curvets and leaps,
As who should say 'Lo, thus my strength is tried,
And this I do to captivate the eye.' 281
Of the fair breeder that is standing by.

What recketh he his rider's angry stir,
His flattering 'Holla,' or his 'Stand, I say?'
What cares he now for curb or pricking spur?
For rich caparisons or trapping gay?
He sees his love, and nothing else he sees,
For nothing else with his proud sight agrees.
Venus and Adonis

Look, when a painter would surpass the life,
In limning out a well-proportion’d steed,
His art with nature’s workmanship at strife,
As if the dead the living should exceed;
So did this horse excel a common one
In shape, in courage, colour, pace and bone.

Round-hoof’d, short-jointed, fetlocks shag and long,
Broad breast, full eye, small head and nostril wide,
High crest, short ears, straight legs and passing strong,
Thin mane, thick tail, broad buttock, tender hide:
Look, what a horse should have he did not lack,
Save a proud rider on so proud a back.

Sometime he scuds far off and there he stakes;
Anon he starts at stirring of a feather;
To bid the wind a base he now prepares,
And whether he run or fly they know not whether:
For through his mane and tail the high wind sings,
Fanning the hairs, who wave like feather’d wings.

He looks upon his love and neighs unto her;
She answers him as if she knew his mind:
Being proud, as females are, to see him woo her,
She puts on outward strangeness, seems unkind,
Sipurs at his love and scorns the heat he feels,
Beating his kind embracements with her heels.

Then, like a melancholy malcontent,
He veils his tail that, like a falling plume,
Cool shadow to his melting buttock lent:
He stamps and bites the poor flies in his fume.
His love, perceiving how he is enraged,
Grew kinder, and his fury was assuaged.

His testy master goeth about to take him;
When, lo, the unback’d breeder, full of fear,
Jealous of catching, swiftly doth forsake him,
With her he goes, and left Adonis there:
As they were mad, unto the wood they hie them,
Out-stripping crows that strife to over-fly them.

All sworn with chafing, down Adonis sits,
Banning his boisterous and unruly beast:
And now the happy season once more fits,
That love-sick Love by pleading may be blest;
For lovers say, the heart hath trouble wrong
When it is barr’d the aidance of the tongue.

An oven that is stopp’d, or river stay’d,
Burneth more hotly, swelleth with more rage;
So of concealed sorrow may be said;
Free vent of words love’s fire doth assuage:
But when the heart’s attorney once is mute,
The client breaks, as desperate in his suit.

He sees her coming, and begins to glow,
Even as a dying coal revives with wind,
And with his bonnet hides his angry brow;
Looks on the dull earth with disturbed mind,
Taking no notice that she is so nigh,
For all askance he holds her in his eye.

O, what a sight it was, wistly to view
How she came stealing to the wayward boy!

To note the fighting conflict of her hue,
How white and red each other did destroy!
But now her cheek was pale, and by and by
It flash’d forth fire, as lightning from the sky.

Now was she just before him as he sat,
And like a lowly lover down she kneels;
With one fair hand she heave up his hat,
Her other tender hand his fair cheek feels:
His tenderer cheek receives her soft hand’s print,
As apt as new-fall’n snow takes any dint.

O, what a war of looks was then between them!
Her eyes petitioners to his eyes suing:
His eyes saw her eyes as they had not seen them:
Her eyes woo’d still, his eyes disdain’d the wooing:
And all this dumb play had his acts made plain
With teas’d, which, chorus-like, her eyes did rain.

Full gently now she takes him by the hand,
A lily prison’d in a gall of snow,
Or ivory in an alabaster band;
So white a friend engirts so white a foe:
This beauteous combat, wilful and unwilling,
Show’d like two silver doves that sit a-billing,

Once more the engine of her thoughts began:
‘O fairest mover on this mortal round,
Would thou were as I am, and I a man,
My heart all whole as thine, thy heart my wound;
For one sweet look thy help I would assure thee,
Though nothing but my body’s bane would cure thee.’

‘Give me my hand,’ saith he, ‘why dost thou feel it?’
‘Give me my heart,’ saith she, ‘and thou shalt have it;
O, give it me, lest thy hard heart do steel it,
And being steel’d, soft sighs can never grave it:
Then love’s deep groans I never shall regard,
Because Adonis’ heart hath made mine hard.’

‘For shame,’ he cries, ‘let go, and let me go;
My day’s delight is past, my horse is gone,
And tis your fault I am bereft him so;
I pray you hence, and leave me here alone:
For all my mind, my thought, my busy care,
Is how to get my palfrey from the mare.’

Thus she replies: ‘Thy palfrey, as he should,
Welcomes the warm approach of sweet desire:
Affection is a coal that must be cool’d;
Else, suffer’d, it will set the heart on fire:
The sea hath bounds, but deep desire hath none:
Therefore no marvel though thy horse be gone.

‘How like a jade he stood, tied to the tree,
Servilely master’d with a leather rein!
But when he saw his love, his youth’s fair fee,
He held such petty bondage in disdain:
Throwing the base thong from his bending crest,
Enfranchising his mouth, his back, his breast.

Who sees his true-love in her naked bed,
Teaching the sheets a whiter hue than white,
But, when his gluton eye so full hath fed,
His other agents aim at like delight?’
Who is so faint, that dare not be so bold
To touch the fire, the weather being cold?

'Let me excuse thy courser, gentle boy;
And learn of him, I heartily beseech thee,
To take advantage on presented joy;
Though I were dumb, yet his proceedings teach thee;
O, learn to love; the lesson is but plain,
And once made perfect, never lost again,'

'I know not love,' quoth he, 'nor will not know it, Unless it be a boar, and then I chase it.'
'Tis much to borrow, and I will not owe it;
My love to love is love but to disgrace it;
For I have heard it is a life in death,
That laughs and weeps, and all but with a breath.

'Who wears a garment shapeless and unfinished
Who plucks the bud before one leaf put forth?
If springing things be any jot diminish'd,
They wither in their prime, prove nothing worth:
The colt that's back'd and burden'd being young Loseth his pride and never waxeth strong.

'You hurt my hand with wringing; let us part,
And leave this idle theme, this bootless chat:
Remove your siege from my unyielding heart;
To love's alarms it will not ope the gate:
Dismiss your vows, your feigned tears, your flattery:
For where a heart is hard they make no battery.

'What! canst thou talk?' quoth she, 'last thou a tongue?
O, would thou hadst not, or I had no hearing!
Thy mermaid's voice hath done me double wrong;
I had my load before, now press'd with bearing:
Melodious discord, heavenly tune harsh-sounding,
Ear's deep-sweet music, and heart's deep-sore wounding.

'Had I no eyes but ears, my ears would love
That inward beauty and invisible;
Or were I deaf, thy outward parts would move
Each part in me that were but sensible:
Though neither eyes nor ears, to hear nor see,
Yet should I be in love by touching thee.'

'Say, that the sense of feeling were bereft me,
And that I could not see, nor hear, nor touch,
And nothing but the very smell were left me,
Yet would my love to thee be still as much:
For from the stillyre of thy face excelling
Comes breath perfumed that breethed love by smelling.

'But, O, what banquet wert thou to the taste,
Being nurse and feeder of the other four!
Would they not wish the feast might ever last,
And bid Suspicion double-lock the door,
Lest jealousy, that sour unwelcome guest,
Should, by his stealing in, disturb the feast?

Once more the ruby-colour'd portal open'd,
Which to his speech did honey passage yield:
Like a red morn, that ever yet betoken'd
Wreck to the seaman, tempest to the field,
Sorrow to shepherds, woes unto the birds,
Gusts and foul flaws to herdmen and to herds.

This ill presage advisedly she marketh;
Even as the wind is hush'd before it raineth,
Or as the wolf doth grin before he barketh, or as the berry breaks before it stainteth,
or like the deadly bullet of a gun,
His meaning struck her ere his words begun.

And at his look she flatly falleth down,
For looks kill love and love by looks reviveth;
A smile recures the wounding of a frown;
But blessed bankrupt, that by love so thriveth!
The silly boy, believing she is dead,
Claps her pale cheek, till clapping makes it red;
And all amazed brake off his late intent,
For sharply he did think to reprehend her,

Which cunning love did wittily prevent;
Fair fall the wit that can so well defend her!
For on the grass she lies as she was slain,
Till his breath breathed life in her again.

He wrings her nose, he strikes her on the cheeks,
He bends her fingers, holds her pulses hard,
He chafes her lips; a thousand ways he seeks
To mend the hurt that his unkindness mad'd:
He kisses her; and she, by her good will,
Will never rise, so he will kiss her still.

The night of sorrow now is turn'd to day:
Her two blue windows faintly she up-heaveth,
Like the fair sun, when in his fresh array
He cheers the morn and all the earth relieveth;
And as the bright sun glorifies the sky,
So is her face illumined with her eye:
Whose beams upon his hairless face are fix'd,
As if from thence they borrow'd all their shine.
Were never four such lamps together mix'd,
Had not his clouded with his brow's repine;

But hers, which through the crystal tears gave light,
Shone like the moon in water seen by night.

'O, where am I? quoth she, 'in earth or heaven,
Or in the ocean drench'd, or in the fire,
What hour is this? or morn or weary even?
Do I delight to die, or life desire?
But now I lived, and life was death's annoy;
But now I died, and death was lively joy.

'O, thou didst kill me! kill me once again;
Thy eyes' shrewd tutor, that hard heart of thine,
Hath taught them scornful tricks and such disdain
That they have murder'd this poor heart of mine;
And these mine eyes, true leaders to their queen,
But for thy piteous lips no more had seen.

'Long may they kiss each other, for this cure!
O, never let their crimson livres wear!
And as they last, their verdure still endure,
To drive infection from the dangerous year!
That the star-gazers, having writ on death,
May say, the plague is banish'd by thy breath.

'Pure lips, sweet seals in my soft lips imprinted,
What bargains may I make, still to be sealing?
To sell myself I can be well contented,
So thou wilt buy and pay and use good dealing;
Which purchase if thou make, for fear of slips
Set thy seal-manual on my wax-red lips.

'A thousand kisses buys my heart from me;
And pay them at thy leisure, one by one.
What is ten hundred touches unto thee?
Are they not quickly told and quickly gone? 520
Say, for non-payment that the debt should double,
Is twenty hundred kisses such a trouble?'

'Fair queen,' quoth he, 'if any love you owe me,
Measure my strangeness with my unripe years:
Before I know myself, seek not to know me;
No fisher but the ungrown fry forbears:
The mellow plum doth fall, the green sticks fast,
Or being early pluck’d is sour to taste.

'Look, the world’s comforter, with weary gait,
His day’s hot task hath ended in the west: 530
The owl, night’s herald, shrieks, ’Tis very late;
The sheep are gone to fold, birds to their nest,
And coal-black clouds that shadow heaven’s light
Do summon us to part and bid good night.

'Now let me say ’Good night,’’ and so say you;
If you will say so, you shall have a kiss.
'Good night,’ quoth she, and, ere he says ’Adieu,’
The honey fee of parting tender’d is:
Her arms do lend his neck a sweet embrace;
Incorporate then they seem; face grows to face.

Till, breathless, he disjoin’d, and backward drew
The heavenly moisture, that sweet coral mouth,
Whose precious taste her thirsty lips well knew,
Whereon they surfeit, yet complain on drouth:
He with her plenty press’d, she faint with death.
Their lips together glued, fall to the earth.

Now quick desire hath caught the yielding prey,
And glutton-like she feeds, yet never filleth;
Her lips are conquerors, his lips obey,
Paying what ransom the insulter willeth: 550
Whose vulture thought doth pitch the price so high,
That she will draw his lips’ rich treasure dry:
And having felt the sweetness of the spoil,
With blindfold fury she begins to forage;
Her face doth reek and smoke, her blood doth boil,
And careless lust stirs up a desperate courage;
Planting oblivion, beating reason back,
Forgetting shame’s pure blush and honour’s wrack.

Hot, faint, and weary, with her hard embracing,
Like a wild bird being tamed with too much handling, 560
Or as the fleet-foot roe that’s tired with chasing,
Or like the froward infant still’d with dangling;
He now obeys, and now no more resisteth,
While she takes all she can, not all she listeth.

What wax so frozen but dissolves with tempering,
And yields at last to every light impression?

Things out of hope are compass’d oft with venturing,
Chiefly in love, whose leave exceeds commission:
Affection faints not like a pale-faced coward,
But then woss best when most his choice is froward. 570

When he did frown, O, had she then gave over,
Such nectar from his lips she had not suck’d.
Foul words and frowns must not repel a lover;
What though the rose have prickles, yet ’tis pluck’d:
Were beauty under twenty locks kept fast,
Yet love breaks through and picks them all at last.

For pity now she can no more detain him;
The poor fool prays her that he may depart;
She is resolved no longer to restrain him;
Bids him farewell, and look well to her heart, 580
The which, by Cupid’s bow she doth protest,
He carries thence incaged in his breast.

'Sweet boy,’ she says, ’this night I’ll waste in sorrow,
For my sick heart commands mine eyes to watch.
Tell me, Love’s master, shall we meet to-morrow?
Say, shall we? shall we? wilt thou make the match?’
-He tells her, no; to-morrow he intends
To hunt the boar with certain of his friends.

’The boar!’ quoth she; whereat a sudden pale,
Like lawn being spread upon the blushing rose,
Usurps her cheek; she trembles at his tale, 591
And on his neck her yoking arms she throws;
She sinketh down, still hanging by his neck,
He on her belly falls, she on her back.

Now is she in the very lists of love,
Her champion mounted for the hot encounter:
All is imaginary she doth prove,
He will not manage her, although he mount her;
That worse than Tantalus is her annoy,
To clip Elysium and to lack her joy.

Even as poor birds, deceived with painted grapes,
Do surfeit by the eye and pine the maw,
Even so she languisheth in her mischaps,
As those poor birds that helpless berries saw.
The warm effects which she in him finds missing
She seeks to kindle with continual kissing.

But all in vain; good queen, it will not be:
She hath assay’d as much as may be proved;
Her pleading hath deserved a greater fee;
She’s Love, she loves, and yet she is not loved.
’Fie, fie,’ he says, ’you crush me; let me go;
You have no reason to withhold me so.’

’Thou hadst been gone,’ quoth she, ’sweet boy, ere this,
But that thou told’st me thou wouldst hunt the boar.
O, be advised! thou know’st not what it is
With Javelin’s point a churlish swine to gore,
Whose tushes never sheathed he whetteth still,
Like to a mortal butcher bent to kill.

’On his bow-back he hath a battle set
Of bristly pikes, that ever threat his foes; 620
His eyes, like glow-worms, shine when he doth fret:
His snout digs sepulchres where'er he goes;
Being moved, he strikes whate'er is in his way,
And whom he strikes his crooked tusks say.

* His brawny sides, with hairy bristles arm'd,
Are better proof than thy spear's point can enter;
His short thick neck cannot be easily harm'd;
Being irreful, on the lion he will venture:
The thorny brames and embracing bushes,
Are fearful of him, part, through whom he rushes.

*Alas, he nought esteems that face of thine, 631
To which Love's eyes pay tributary gazes;
Nor thy soft hands, sweet lips and crystal eye,
Whose full perfection all the world amazes:
But having thee at vantage,—wondrous dread!—
Would root these beauties as he roots the mead.

'O, let him keep his loathsome cabin still;
Beauty hath nought to do with such foul fiends:
Come not within his danger by thy will;
They that thrive well take counsel of their friends.
When thou didst name the boar, not to dissemble,
I fear'd thy fortune, and my joints did tremble.

'Didst thou not mark my face? was it not white?
Saw'st thou not signs of fear lurk in mine eye?
Grew I not faint, and fell I not downright?
Within my bosom, whereon thou dost lie,
My boding heartbeats, beats, and takes no rest,
But, like an earthquake, shakes thee on my breast.

* For where Love reigns, disturbing Jealousy
Doth call himself Affection's sentinel; 650
Gives false alarms, suggesteth mutiny,
And in a peaceful hour doth cry "Kill, kill!"
Distempering gentle Love in his desire,
As air and water do abate the fire.

'This sour informer, this bate-breeding spy,
This canker that eats up Love's tender spring,
This carry-tale, discriminant Jealousy,
That sometime true news, sometime false doth bring,
Knocks at my heart and whispers in mine ear
That if I love thee, I thy death should fear: 660

*And more than so, presenteth to mine eye
The picture of an angry-chafing boar,
Under whose sharp fangs on his back doth lie
An image like thyself, all stain'd with gore;
Whose blood upon the fresh flowers being shed
Doth make them droop with grief and hang the head.

'What should I do, seeing thee so indeed,
That tremble at the imagination?
The thought of it doth make my faint heart bleed,
And fear doth teach it divination:
I prophesy thy death, my living sorrow,
If thou encounter with the boar to-morrow.

*But if thou needs wilt hunt, be ruled by me;
Uncouple at the timorous flying hare,
Or at the fox which lives by subtlety,
Or at the roe which no encounter dare:
Pursue these fearful creatures o'er the downs,
And on thy well-breath'd horse keep with thy hounds.

*And when thou hast on foot the purblind hare,
Mark the poor wretch, to overshoot his troubles
How he outruns the wind and with what care 681
He cranks and crosses with a thousand doubles:
The many musets through the which he goes
Are like a labyrinth to amaze his foes.

'Sometime he runs among a flock of sheep,
To make the cunning hounds mistake their smell,
And sometime where earth-delving conies keep,
To stop the loud pursuers in their yell.
And sometime sorteth with a herd of deer;
Danger devousht shifts; wit waits on fear: 690

*For there his smell with others being mingled,
The hot scent-snuffing hounds are driven to doubt,
Ceasing their clamorous cry till they have singled
With much ado the cold fault cleanly out;
Then do they spend their mouths: Echo replies,
As if another chase were in the skies.

*By this, poor Wat, far off upon a hill,
Stands on his hinder legs with listening ear,
To hearken if his foes pursue him still:
Anon their loud alarms he doth hear;
And now his grief may be compared well
To one sore sick that hears the passing-bell.

*Then shalt thou see the dew-bedabbled wretch
Turn, and return, indenting with the way;
Each envious brier his weary legs doth scratch,
Each shadow makes him stop, each murmur stay:
For misery is trodden on by many,
And being low never relieved by any.

*Lie quietly, and hear a little more;
Nay, do not struggle, for thou shalt not rise: 710
To make thee hate the hunting of the boar,
Untill thyself thou hear'st me moralize,
Applying this to that, and so to so;
For love can comment upon every woe.

'Where did I leave? 'No matter where,' quoth he,
'Leave me, and then the story aptly ends;
The night is spent.' 'Why, what of that?' quoth she.

'I am,' quoth he, 'expected of my friends;
And now 'tis dark, and going I shall fall.'
'In night,' quoth she, 'desire sees best of all. 720

*But if thou fall, O, then imagine this,
The earth, in love with thee, thy footing trips,
And all is but to rob thee of a kiss.
Rich preys make true men thieves; so do thy lips
Make modest Dion cloudy and forlorn,
Lest she should steal a kiss and die forsworn.

*Now of this dark night I perceive the reason;
Cynthia for shame obscures her silver shine,
Till forging Nature be condemn'd of treason, 739
For stealing moulds from heaven that were divine;
Wherein she framed thee in high heaven's despite,
To shame the sun by day and her by night.
VENUS AND ADONIS.

And therefore hath she bribed the Destinies
To cross the curious workmanship of nature,
To mingle beauty with infirmities.

And pure perfection with impure defecture,
Making it subject to the tyranny
Of mad mischances and much misery;

As burning fevers, agues pale and faint,
Life-poisoning pestilence and frenzy's wood.
The narrow-eating sickness, whose attendant
Disorder breeds by heating of the blood:
Surfeits, imposthumes, grief, and damn'd despair,
Swear Nature's death for framing thee so fair.

And not the least of all these maladies
But in one minute's fight brings beauty under:
Both favour, savour, hue and qualities,
Whereat the impartial gazer late did wonder,
Are on the sudden wasted, thaw'd and done,
As mountain-snow melts with the midday sun.

Therefore, despite of fruitless chastity,
Love-lacking vestals and self-loving nuns,
That on the earth would breed a scarcity
And barren dearth of daughters and of sons,
Be prodigal: the lamp that burns by night
Dries up his oil to lend the world his light.

What is thy body but a swelling grave,
Seeming to bury that posterity
Which by the rights of time thou needs must have,
If thou destroy them not in dark obscurity?
If so, the world will hold thee in disdain,
Sith in thy pride so fair a hope is slain.

So in thyselfst thyself art made away:
A mischief worse than civil home-bred strife,
Or theirs whose desperate hands themselves do slay,
Or butcher-sire that reaves his son of life.
Foul-cancerling rust the hidden treasure frets,
But gold that's put to use more gold begets:

Nay, then, quoth Adon, 'twill fall again
Into your idle over-handled theme.
The kiss I gave you is bestow'd in vain,
And all in vain you strive against the stream:
For, by this black-faced night, desire's soul nurse,
Your treatise makes me like you worse and worse.

If love have lent you twenty thousand tongues,
And every tongue more moving than your own,
Bewitching like the wanton mermaid's songs,
Yet from mine ear the tempting tune is blown:
For now, my heart stands armed in mine ear,
And will not let a false sound enter there.

Lest the deceiving harmony should run
Into the quiet closure of my breast;
And then my little heart were quite undone,
In his bedchamber to be barr'd of rest.
No, lady, no: my heart longs not to groan,
But soundly sleeps, while now it sleeps alone.

What have you urged that I cannot reprove?
The path is smooth that leadeth on to danger:
I hate not love, but your device in love,
That lends embraces unto every stranger.

You do it for increase: O strange excuse,
When reason is the bawd to lust's abuse!

Call it not love, for Love to heaven is fled,
Since sweating Lust on earth usurp'd his name;
Under whose simple semblance he hath fed
Upon fresh beauty, blotting it with blame:
Which the hot tyrant stains and soon bereaves,
As caterpillars do the tender leaves.

Love comforteth like sunshine after rain,
But Lust's effect is tempest after sun:
Love's gentle spring doth always fresh remain,
Lust's winter comes ere summer half be done;
Love surfeits not, Lust like a gluton dies;
Love is all truth, Lust full of forged lies.

'More I could tell, but more I dare not say:
The text is old, the orator too green.
Therefore, in sadness, now I will away;
My face is full of shame, my heart of teen:
Mine ears, that to your wanton talk attended,
Do burn themselves for having so offended.' 610

With this, he breaketh from the sweet embrace,
Of those fair arms which bound him to her breast,
And homeward through the dark ould runs's pace;
Leaves Love upon her back deeply distress'd.
Look, how a bright star shooteth from the sky,
So glides he in the night from Venus' eye;

Which after him she darts, as one on shore
Gazing upon a late-embarked friend,
Till the wild waves will have him seen no more,
Whose ridges with the meeting clouds contend:
So did the merciless and pitchy night
Fold in the object that did feed her sight.

Whereat amazed, as one that unaware
Hath dropp'd a precious jewel in the flood,
Or stonish'd as night-wanderers often are,
Their light blown out in some mistrustful wood,
Even so confounded in the dark she lay,
Having lost the fair discovery of her way.

And now she beats her heart, whereat it groans,
That all the neighbour caves, as seeming troubled,
Make verbal repetition of her moans:
Passion on passion deeply is redoubled:
'Amy! she cries, and twenty times 'Woe, woe!'
And twenty echoes twenty times cry so.

She marking them begins a wailing note
And sings extemporally a woeful ditty:
How love makes young men thrall and old men dote;
How love is wise in folly, foolish-witty:
Her heavy anthem still concludes in woe,
And still the choir of echoes answer so.

Her song was tedious and outwore the night,
For lovers' hours are long, though seeming short:
If pleased themselves, others, they think, delight
In such-like circumstance, with such-like sport:
Their copious stories oftentimes begun
End without audience and are never done.

For who hath she to spend the night withal
But idle sounds resembling parasites,
Like shrill-tongued tapsters answering every call, 850
Soothing the humour of fantastic wits?
She says 'Tis so: they answer all 'Tis so;
And would say after her, if she said 'No'.

Lo, here the gentle lark, weary of rest,
From his moist cabinet mounts up on high,
And wakes the morning, from whose silver breast
The sun ariseth in his majesty;
Who doth the world so gloriously behold
That cedar-tops and hills seem burnish'd gold.

Venus salutes him with this fair good-morrow:
'O thou clear god, and patron of all light, 860
From whom each lamp and shining star doth borrow
The beauteous influence that makes him bright,
There lives a son that suck'd an earthly mother,
May lend thee light, as thou dost lend to other.'

This said, she hasteth to a myrtle grove,
Musing the morning is so much o'erworn,
And yet she hears no tidings of her love;
She hearkens for his hounds and for his horn:
Anon she hears them chant it lustily,
And all in haste she coaeth to the cry.

And as she runs, the bushes in the way
Some catch her by the neck, some kiss her face,
Some twine about her thigh to make her stay:
She wildly breaketh from their strict embrace,
Like a milch doe, whose swelling dugs do ache,
Hasting to feed her fawn hid in some brake.

By this, she hears the hounds are at a bay:
Whereat she starts, like one that spies an adder
Wreathed up in fatal folds just in his way,
The fear whereof doth make him shake and shudder;
Even so the timorous yelping of the hounds
Appals her senses and her spirit confounds.

For now she knows it is no gentle chase,
But the blunt boar, rough bear, or lion proud,
Because the cry remaineth in one place,
Where fearfully the dogs exclaim aloud:
Finding their enemy to be so curst,
They all strain courtesy who shall cope him first.

This dismal cry rings sadly in her ear,
Through which it enters to surprise her heart; 890
Who, overcome by doubt and bloodless fear,
With cold-pale weakness numb each feeling part:
Like soldiers, when their captain once doth yield,
They basely fly and dare not stay the field.

Thus stands she in a trembling ecstacy;
Till, cheering up her senses all dismay'd,
She tells them 'tis a causeless fantasy,
And childish error, that they are afraid;
Bids them leave quaking, bids them fear no more:
899

And with that word she spied the hunted boar,
Whose frothy mouth, bepainted all with red,
Like milk and blood being mingled both together,
A second fear through all her sinews spread.
Which madly hurries her she knows not whither:
This way she runs, and now she will no further,
But back retires to rate the boar for muturer.

A thousand spleens bear her a thousand ways;
She treads the path that she untreads again;
Her more than haste is mated with delays,
Like the proceedings of a drunken brain.
910
Full of respect, yet nought at all respecting;
In hand with all things, nought at all effecting.

Here kenne'd in a brake she finds a hound,
And asks the weary caitiff for his master,
And there another licking of his wound,
'Gainst venom'd sores the only sovereign plaster:
And here she meets another sadly scowling,
To whom she speaks, and he replies with howling.

When he hath ceased his ill-resounding noise,
Another flap-mouth'd mourner, black and grim,
Against the welkin volleys out his voice; 920
Another and another answer him.
Clapping their proud tails to the ground below,
Shaking their scratch'd ears, bleeding as they go.

Look, how the world's poor people are amazed
At apparitions, signs and prodigies,
When men with fearful eyes they long have gazed,
Infusing them with dreadful prophecies;
So she at these sad signs draws up her breath
And sighing it again, exclaims on Death.

'Hard-favour'd tyrant, ugly, meagre, lean,
Hateful divorce of love,—thus chides she Death,— Grirm-grinning ghost, earth's worm, what dost thou mean
To stifle beauty and to steal his breath,
When he who lived, his beauty and set
Gloss on the rose, smell to the violet?

'If he be dead.—O no, it cannot be,
Seeing his beauty, thou shouldst strike at it:—
O yes, it may: thou hast no eyes to see,
But hatefully at random dost thou hit. 940
Thy mark is feeble age, but thy false dart
Mistakes that aim and cleaves an infant's heart.

'Hadst thou but bid beware, then had he spoke,
And, hearing him, thy power had lost his power.
The Destinies will curse thee for this stroke;
They bid thee crop a weed, thou pluck'st a flower:
Love's golden arrow at him should have fled,
And not Death's ebon dart, to strike him dead.

'Dost thou drink tears, that thou provokest such weeping?
What may a heavy groan advantage thee? 950
Why hast thou cast into eternal sleeping
Those eyes that taught all other eyes to see?
Now Nature cares not for thy mortal vigour,
Since her best work is ruin'd with thy rigour.

Here overcome, as one full of despair,
She vail'd her eyelids, who, like sluices, stopp'd
The crystal tide that from her two cheeks fair
In the sweet channel of her bosom dropt;
But through the flood-gates breaks the silvery rain,
And with his strong course opens them again.

O, how her eyes and tears did lend and borrow!
Her eyes seen in the tears, tears in her eye;
Both crystals, where they view'd each other's sorrow,
Sorrow that friendly sighs sought still to dry;
But like a stormy day, now wind, now rain,
Sighs dry her cheeks, tears make them wet again.

Variable passions throng her constant woe,
As striving who should best become her grief;
All entertain'd, each passion labours so,
That every present sorrow seemeth chief.

By this, far off she hears some huntsman hollo;
A nurse's song ne'er pleased her babe so well;
The dire imagination she did follow
This sound of hope doth labour to expel;
For now reviving joy bids her rejoice,
And flatters her it is Adonis' voice.

Whereat her tears began to turn their tide,
Being pris'd in her eye like pearls in glass;
Yet sometimes falls an orient drop beside,
Which her cheek melts, as scorning it should pass,
To wash the foul face of the slutish ground,
Who is but drunken when she seemeth drown'd.

O hard-believing love, how strange it seems
Not to believe, and yet too credulous!
Thy weal and woe are both of them extremes;
Despair and hope makes thee ridiculous;
The one doth flatter thee in thoughts unkindly,
In likely thoughts the other kills thee quickly.

Now she unweaves the web that she hath wrought;
Adonis lives, and Death is not to blame;
It was not she that call'd him all to naught;
Now she adds honours to his hateful name;
She eleps him king of graves and grave for kings,
Imperious supreme of all mortal things.

'No, no,' quoth she, 'sweet Death, I did but jest;
Yet pardon me I felt a kind of fear
When as I met the boar, that bloody beast,
Which knows no pity, but is still severe:
Then, gentle shadow,—truth I must confess,—
I rail'd on thee, fearing my love's decease.

'Tis not my fault: the boar provoked my tongue;
Be wreak'd on him, invisible commander;
'Tis he, foul creature, that hath done thee wrong;
I did but act, he's author of thy slander:
Grief hath two tongues, and never woman yet
Could rule them both without ten women's wit.'

Thus hoping that Adonis is alive,
Her rash suspect she doth extenuate:
And that his beauty may the better thrive,
With Death she humbly doth insinuate;
Tells him of trophies, statues, tombs, and stories
His victories, his triumphs and his glories.

'O Jove,' quoth she, 'how much a fool was I
To be of such a weak and silly mind
To twain his death who lives and must not die
Till mutual overthrow of mortal kind!
For he being dead, with him is beauty slain,
And, beauty dead, black chaos comes again.

'Fie, fie, fond love, thou art so full of fear
As one with treasure laden, hemm'd with thieves;
Trifles, unwitnessed with eye or ear,
Thy coward heart with false bethinking grievances.'

Even at this word she hears a merry horn,
Whereat she leaps that was but late forlorn.

As falcon to the lure, away she flies;
The grass stoops not, she treads on it so light;
And in her haste unfortunately spies
The foul boar's conquest on her fair delight;

Which seen, her eyes, as murder'd with the view,
Like stars ashamed of day, themselves withdrew.

Or, as the snail, whose tender horns being hit,
Shrinks backward in his shelly cave with pain,
And there, all smother'd up, in shade doth sit,
Long after fearing to creep forth again:
So, at his bloody view, her eyes are fled
Into the deep dark cabins of her head.

Where they resign their office and their light
To the disposing of their troubled brain;
Who bids them still consort with ugly night,
And never wound the heart with looks again;
Who, like a king perplexed in his throne,
By their suggestion gives a deadly groan,

Whereat each tributary subject quakes;
As when the wind, imprison'd in the ground,
Struggling for passage, earth's foundation shakes,
Which with cold terror doth men's minds confound.
This mutiny each part doth so surprise
That from their dark beds once more leap her eyes:

And, being open'd, threw unwilling light
Upon the wide wound that the boar had trench'd
In his soft flank; whose wonted lily white
With purple tears, that his wound wept, was drench'd:
No flower was nigh, no grass, herb, leaf, or weed,
But stole his blood and seem'd with him to bleed.

This solemn sympathy poor Venus nooth
Over one shoulder doth she hang her head;
Dumbly she passions, frantically she doteth;
She thinks he could not die, he is not dead:
Her voice is stopt, her joints forget to bow;
Her eyes aremad that they have wept till now.

Upon his hurt she looks so steadfastly,
That her sight dazzling makes the wound seem three;
And then she reprehends her mangling eye,
That makes more gashes where no breach should be:
His face seems twain, each several limb is doubled;
For oft the eye mistakes, the brain being troubled.

'My tongue cannot express my grief for one,
And yet,' quoth she, 'behold two Adons dead!
My sighs are blown away, my salt tears gone,
Mine eyes are turn'd to fire, my heart to lead:
Heavy heart's lead, melt at mine eyes' red fire!
So shall I die by drops of hot desire.

VENUS AND ADONIS.
Venus and Adonis.

Their virtue lost, wherein they late excell'd,
And every beauty rob'd of his effect:
'Tis worth the viewing, that's worthy the viewing,
Whose tongue is music? what canst thou boast
Of things long since, or any thing ensuing?
The flowers are sweet, their colours fresh and trim;
But true-sweet beauty lived and died with him.

Bonnet nor veil henceforth no creature wear!
Nor sun nor wind will ever strive to kiss you:
Having no fair to lose, you need not fear:
The sun doth scorn you and the wind doth kiss you:
But when Adonis lived, sun and sharp air
Lurk'd like two thieves, to rob him of his fair:
And therefore would he put his bonnet on,
Under whose brim the gaudy sun would peep;
The wind would blow it off and, being gone,
Play with his locks: then would Adonis weep;
And straight, in pity of his tender years,
They both would strive who first should dry his tears.

'To see his face the lion walk'd along
Behind some hedge, because he would not fear him;
To recreate himself when he hath sung,
The tiger would be tame and gently hear him:
If he had spoke, the wolf would leave his prey
And never fright the silly lamb that day.

When he beheld his shadow in the brook,
The fishes spread on it their golden gills;
When he was by, the birds such pleasure took,
That some would sing, some other in their bills
Would bring him mulberries and ripe-red cherries;
He fed them with his sight, they him with berries.

But this foul, grim, and urchin-snouted boar,
Whose downward eye still looketh for a grave,
Ne'er saw the beauteous livery that he wore;
Witness the entertainment that he gave:
If he did see his face, why then I know
He thought to kiss him, and hath kiss'd him so.

'Tis true, 'tis true; thus was Adonis slain:
He ran upon the boar with his sharp spear,
Who did not whet his teeth at him again,
But by a kiss thought to persuade him there;
And nuzzling in his flank, the loving swine
Sheathed unaware the tusk in his soft groin.

'Had I been tooth'd like him, I must confess,
With kissing him I should have kill'd him first;
But he is dead, and never did he bless
My youth with his: the more am I accurst.'

'With this, she fellath in the place she stood,
And stains her face with his congealed blood.
She looks upon his lips, and they are pale;
She takes him by the hand, and that is cold;
She whispers in his ears a heavy tale,
As if they heard the woeful words she told:
She lifts the coffer-lids that close his eyes,
Where, lo, two lamps, burnt out, in darkness lies;
Two thousand times, and now no more reflect:

Their virtue lost, wherein they late excell'd,
And every beauty rob'd of his effect:
'Since thou art dead, lo, here I prophesy:
Sorrow on love hereafter shall attend:
It hath wait on with jealousy,
Find sweet beginning, but unsavoury end,
Ne'er settled equally, but high or low,
That all love's pleasure shall not match his wo.

'Shall be fickle, false and full of fraud,
Bud and be blasted in a breathing-while;
The bottom poison, and the top o'erstraw'd
With sweets that shall the truest sight beguile:
The strongest body shall it make most weak,
Strike the wise dum and teach the fool to speak.

'Shall be sparing and too full of riot,
Teaching decrepit age to tread the measures;
The starving ruffian shall it keep in quiet,
Pluck down the rich, enrich the poor with treasures;
It shall be raging-mad and silly-mild,
Make the young old, the old become a child.

'Shall suspect where is no cause of fear;
It shall not fear where it should most mistrust;
It shall be merciful and too severe,
And most deceiving when it seems most just;
Perverse it shall be where it shows most toward,
Put fear to valour, courage to the coward.

'Shall be cause of war and dire events,
And set dissension 'twixt the son and sire;
Subject and servile to all discontents,
As dry combustious matter is to fire:
Sith in his prime Death doth my love destroy,
They that love best their loves shall not enjoy.'

By this, the boy that by her side lay kill'd
Was melted like a vapour from her sight,
And in his blood that on the ground lay spill'd,
A purple flower sprung up, chequer'd with white,
Resembling well his pale cheeks and the blood
Which in round drops upon their whiteness stood.

She bows her head, the new-sprung flower to smell,
Comparing it to her Adonis' breath,
And says, within her bosom it shall dwell,
Since he himself is rest from her by death:
She crops the stalk, and in the breach appears
Green dropping sap, which she compares to tears.

'Poor flower,' quoth she, 'this was thy father's guise—
Sweet issue of a more sweet-smelling sire—
For every little grief to wet his eyes:
To grow unto himself was his desire,
And so 'tis thine; but know, it is as good
To wither in my breast as in his blood.

Here was thy father's bed, here in my breast;
Thou art the next of blood, and 'tis thy right:
Lo, in this hollow cradle take thy rest,
My throbbing heart shall rock thee day and night.
THE RAPE OF LUCRECE.

TO THE

RIGHT HONOURABLE HENRY Wriothesly,

EARL OF SOUTHAMPTON, AND BARON OF TICHFIELD.

The love I dedicate to your lordship is without end; whereof this pamphlet, without beginning, is but a superfluous moiety. The warrant I have of your honourable disposition, not the worth of my untutored lines, makes it assured of acceptance. What I have done is yours; what I have to do is yours; being part in all I have, devoted yours. Were my worth greater, my duty would show greater; meantime, as it is, it is bound to your lordship, to whom I wish long life, still lengthened with all happiness.

Your lordship's in all duty,

WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE.

THE ARGUMENT.

LUCIUS TARQUINIUS, for his excessive pride surnamed Superbus, after he had caused his own father-in-law Servius Tullius to be cruelly murdered, and, contrary to the Roman laws and customs, not requiring or staying for the people's suffrages, had possessed himself of the kingdom, went, accompanied with his sons and other noblemen of Rome, to besiege Ardea. During which siege the principal men of the army meeting one evening at the tent of Sextus Tarquinius, the king's son, in their discourses after supper every one commended the virtues of his own wife; among whom Collatinus extolled the incomparable chastity of his wife Lucretia. In that pleasant humour they all posted to Rome; and intending, by their secret and sudden arrival, to make trial of that which every one had before avouched, only Collatinus finds his wife, though it were late in the night, spinning amongst her maids: the other ladies were all found dancing and revelling, or in several disports. Whereupon the noblemen yielded Collatinus the victory, and his wife the fame. At that time Sextus Tarquinius being inflamed with Lucrece' beauty, yet smothering his passions for the present, departed with the rest back to the camp; from whence he shortly after privily withdrew himself, and was, according to his estate, royally entertained and lodged by Lucrece at Collatium. The same night he treacherously stealth into her chamber, violently ravished her, and early in the morning spedeth away. Lucrece, in this lamentable plight, hastily dispatcheth messengers, one to Rome for her father, another to the camp for Collatine. They came, the one accompanied with Junius Brutus, the other with Publius Valerius; and finding Lucrece attired in mourning habit, demanded the cause of her sorrow. She, first taking an oath of them for her revenge, revealed the actor, and whole manner of his dealing, and withal suddenly stabbed herself. Which done, with one consent they all vowed to root out the whole hated family of the Tarquins; and bearing the dead body to Rome, Brutus acquainted the people with the doer and manner of the vile deed, with a bitter invective against the tyranny of the king: wherewith the people were so moved, that with one consent and a general acclamation the Tarquins were all exiled, and the state government changed from kings to consuls.
In their pure ranks his traitor eye encloses;
Where, lest between them both it should be kill'd,
The coward captive vanquished doth yield
To those two armies that would let him go,
Rather than triumph in so false a foe.

Now thinks he that her husband's shallow tongue,—
The niggard prodigal that praised her so,—
In that high task hath done her beauty wrong, 80
Which far exceeds his barren skill to show:
Therefore that praise which Collatine doth owe
Enchanted Tarquin answers with surmise,
In silent wonder of still-gazing eyes.

This earthily saint, adored by this devil,
Little suspecteth the false worshipper;
For unstain'd thoughts do seldom dream on evil;
Birds never limed no secret bushes fear:
So guiltless she securely gives good cheer
And reverend welcome to her princely guest, 90
Whose inward ill no outward harm express'd:

For that he colour'd with his high estate,
Hiding base sin in plights of majesty;
That nothing in him seem'd inordinate,
Save some too much wonder of his eye,
Which, having all, all could not satisfy;
But, poorly rich, so wanteth in his store,
That, cloy'd with much, he pineth still for more.

But she, that never coped with stranger eyes,
Could pick no meaning from their parling looks
Nor read the subtle-shining secrets
Written in the glassy margins of such books:
She touch'd with unknown baits, nor fear'd no hooks;
Nor could she moralize his wanton sight,
More than his eyes were open'd to the light.

He stories to her ears her husband's fame,
Won in the fields of fruitful Italy;
And decks with praises Collatine's high name,
Made glorious by his manly chivalry
With bruised arms and wreaths of victory:
Her joy with heaved-up hand she doth express,
And, wordless, so greets heaven for his success.

Far from the purpose of his coming hither,
He makes excuses for his being there:
No cloudy show of stormy blustering weather
Doth yet in his fair welkin once appear;
Till sable Night, mother of Dread and Fear,
Upon the world dim darkness doth display,
And in her vaulcy prison stows the Day.

For then is Tarquin brought unto his bed,
Intending weariness with heavy spright;
For, after supper, long he questioned
With modest Lucrece, and wore out the night:
Now leadsen slumber with life's strength doth fight;
And every one to rest themselves betake,
Save thieves, and cares, and troubled minds,
That wake.

As one of which doth Tarquin lie revolving
The sundry dangers of his will's obtaining;
Yet ever to obtain his will resolving,
Though weak-built hopes persuade him to ab-

Despair to gain doth traffic oft for gaining;
And when great treasure is the meed proposed,
Though death be adjunct, there's no death supposed.

Those that much covet are with gain so fond,
For what they have not, that which they possess
They scatter and unlose it from their bond,
And so, by hoping more, they have but less;
Or, gaining more, the profit of excess
Is but to surfeit, and such griefs sustain,
That they prove bankrupt in this poor-rich gain.

The aim of all is but to nurse the life
With honour, wealth, and ease, in waning age;
And in this aim there is such thwarting strife,
That one for all, or all for one we gage:
As life for honour in fell battle's rage;
 Honour for wealth; and oft that wealth doth cost
The death of all, and all together lost.

So that in venturing ill we leave to be
The things we are for that which we expect;
And this ambitious foul infirmity,
In having much, torments us with defect
Of that we have: so then we do neglect
The thing we have; and, all for want of wit,
Make something nothing by augmenting it.

Such hazard now must doting Tarquin make,
Pawning his honour to obtain his lust;
And for himself himself he must forsake:
Then where is truth, if there be no self-trust?
When shall he think to find a stranger just,
When he himself himself confounds, betrays
To slanderous tongues and wretched hiftul days?

Now stole upon the time the dead of night,
When heavy sleep had closed up mortal eyes:
No comfortable star did lend his light,
No noise but owls' and wolves' death-boding cries;
Now serves the season that they may surprise
The silly lambs: pure thoughts are dead and still,
While lust and murder wake to stain and kill.

And now this lustful lord leap'd from his bed,
Throwing his mantle rudely o'er his arm:
Is madly toss'd between desire and dread;
Th' one sweetly flatters, th' other feareth harm;
But honest fear, bewitch'd with lust's foul charm,
Doth too oft betake him to retire,
Beaten away by brain-sick rude desire.

His falcon on a flint he softly smiteh,
That from the cold stone sparks of fire do fly;
Whereat a waxen torch forthwith he lighteth,
Which must be lode-star to his lustful eye;
And to the flame thus speaks advisedly,
'As from this cold flint I enforced this fire,
So Lucrece must I force to my desire.'

Here pale with fear he doth premeditate
The dangers of his loathsome enterprise,
And in his inward mind he doth debate
What following sorrow may on this arise:
Then looking scornfully, he doth despise

His naked armour of still-slaughter'd lust,
And justly thus controls his thoughts unjust:

'Fair torch, burn out thy light, and lend it not
To darken her whose light excelleth thine: 191
And die, unhallow'd thoughts, before you blot
With your uncleanness that which is divine;
Offer pure incense to so pure a shrine:
Let fair humanity abhor the deed
That spots and stains love's modest snow-white weed.

'O shame to knighthood and to shining arms!
O foul dishonour to my household's grave!
O impious act, including all foul harms!
A martial man to be soft fancy's slave!
True valour still a true respect should have;
Then my digression is so vile, so base,
That it will live engraven in my face.

'Yes, though I die, the scandal will survive,
And be an eye-sore in my golden coat;
Some loathsome dash the herald will contrive,
To cipher me how fondly I did dote:
That my posterity, shamed with the note,
Shall curse my bones, and hold it for no sin
To wish that I their father had not been, 210

'What win I, if I gain the thing I seek?
A dream, a breath, a froth of fleeting joy,
Who buys a minute's mirth to wall a week?
Or sells eternity to get a toy?
For one sweet grape who will the vine destroy?
Or what fond beggar, but to touch the crown,
Would with the sceptre straight be strucken
down?

'If Collatinus dream of my intent,
Will he not wake, and in a desperate rage
Post hither, this vile purpose to prevent? 220
This siege that hath engirt his marriage,
This blurt to youth, this sorrow to the sage,
This dying virtue, this surviving shame,
Whose crime will bear an ever-during blame?

'O, what excuse can my invention make,
When thou shalt charge me with so black a deed?
Will not my tongue be mute, my frail joints
shake,
Mine eyes forego their light, my false heart bleed?
The guilt being great, the fear doth still exceed;
And extreme fear can neither fight nor fly; 230
But coward-like with trembling terror die.

'Had Collatinus kill'd my son or sire,
Or lain in ambush to betray my life,
Or were he not my dear friend, this desire
Might have excuse to work upon his wife,
As in revenge or quittal of such strife:
But as he is my kinsman, my dear friend,
The shame and fault finds no excuse nor end.

'Shameful it is; ay, if the fact be known:
Hateful it is; there is no hate in loving:
I'll beg her love; but she is not her own:
The worst is but denial and reproving:
My will is strong, past reason's weak removing.
Who fears a sentence or an old man's saw
Shall by a painted cloth be kept in awe,'
...within his thought those heavens collate; in his eye which looks on her, his soul is livid.

And there are those who dare to view it as the heart.

Urging on, until poor mad Lucrece is taken to the worst part.

And so it happens, as through the best and purest locks, he is driven by desire.

The Roman lord marches to Lucrece's bed.

Then love is not, but hate and woe.

In the midst of the unwise prayer,

And the dove绶内科are not together,

Love and peace be my gods, my guide!

Covers the shame that follows sweet delight.

So, so, quoth he, these last words to the time,

Like little notes that some sweet sound

By means of the sweetest and purest lock.

The men in the halls, in her ear,

The cook with the latest order,

From her heart's deep, deep spring.
LUCRECIA.

But she, sound sleeping, fearing no such thing,
Lies at the mercy of his mortal sting.

Into the chamber wickedly he stalks,
And gazeth on her yet unstained bed.
The curtains being close, about he walks,
Rolling his greedy eyeballs in his head:
By their high treason is his heart misled;
Which gives the watch-word to his hand full soon
To draw the cloud that hides the silver moon.

Look, as the fair and fiery-pointed sun,
Rushing from forth a cloud, bereaves our sight;
Even so, the curtain drawn, his eyes begun
To wink, being blinded with a greater light:
Whether it is that she reflects so bright,
That dazzleth them, or else some shame supposed;
But blind they are, and keep themselves enclosed.

O, had they in that darksome prison died!
Then had they seen the period of their ill; 380
Then Collatine again, by Lucrece' side,
In his clear bed might have reposed still:
But they must ope, this blessed league to kill;
And holy-thoughted Lucrece to their sight
Must sell her joy, her life, her world's delight.

Her lady hand her rosy cheek lies under,
Cozening the pillow of a lawful kiss;
Who, therefore angry, seems to part in sunder,
Swelling on either side to want his bliss;
Between whose hils her head entombed is: 390
Where, like a virtuous monument, she lies,
To be admired of lewd unhallow'd eyes.

Without the bed her other fair hand was,
On the green coverlet; whose perfect white
Show'd like an April daisy on the grass,
With pearly sweat, resembling dew of night.
Her eyes, like marigolds, had sheathed their
light,
And canopied in darkness sweetly lay,
Till they might open to adorn the day.

Her hair, like golden threads, play'd with her breath; 400
O modest wantons! wanton modestly!
Showing life's triumph in the map of death,
And death's dim look in life's mortality:
Each in her sleep themselves so beautify,
As if between them twain there were no strife,
But that life lived in death, and death in life.

Her breasts, like ivory globes circled with blue,
A pair of modest worlds unconquered,
Save of their lord no bearing yoke they knew,
And him by oath they truly honoured. 410
These worlds in Tarquin new ambition bred;
Who, like a foul usurper, went about
From this fair throne to heave the owner out.

What could he see but mightily he noted?
What did he note but strongly he desired?
What he beheld, on that he firmly tasted,
And in his will his wilful eye he tired.
With more than admiration he admired

Her azure veins, her alabaster skin,
Her coral lips, her snow-white dimpled chin.

As the grim lion fawneth o'er his prey,
Sharp hunger by the conquest satisfied,
So o'er this sleeping soul doth Tarquin stay,
His rage of lust by gazing qualified;
Slack'd, not suppress'd; for standing by her side,
His eye, which late this mutiny restrains,
Unto a greater uproar tempts his veins:

And they, like straggling slaves for pillage fighting,
Obdurate vassals fell exploits effecting,
In bloody death and ravishment delighting, 430
Nor children's tears nor mothers' groans respecting,
Swell in their pride, the onset still expecting:
Anon his beating heart, alarum striking,
Gives the hot charge and bids them do their liking.

His drumming heart cheers up his burning eye,
His eye commends the leading to his hand;
His hand, as proud of such a dignity,
Smoking with pride, march'd on to make his stand
On her bare breast, the heart of all her land;
Whose ranks of blue veins, as his hand did scale,
Left their round turrets desitute and pale. 440

They, mustering to the quiet cabinet
Where their dear government and lady lies,
Do tell her she is dreadfully beset,
And fright her with confusion of their cries:
She, much amazed, breaks ope her lock'd-up eyes,
Who, peeping forth this tumult to behold,
Are by his flaming torch dimm'd and con-troll'd.

Imagine her as one in dead of night
From forth dull sleep by dreadful fancy waking,
That thinks she hath beheld some ghastly sprite,
Whose grim aspect sets every joint a-shaking;
What terror 'tis! but she, in worser taking,
From sleep disturbed, headely doth view
The sight which makes supposed terror true.

Wrapp'd and confounded in a thousand fears,
Like to a new-kill'd bird she trembling lies;
She dares not look; yet, winking, there appears
Quick-shifting antics, ugly in her eyes:
Such shadows are the weak brain's forgeries; 460
Who, angry that the eyes fly from their lights,
In darkness daunts them with more dreadful sights.

His hand, that yet remains upon her breast,—
Rude ram, to batter such an ivory wall!—
May feel her heart—poor citizen!—distress'd,
Wounding itself to death, rise up and fall,
Beating her bulk, that his hand shakes withal.
This moves in him more rage and lesser pity,
To make the breach and enter this sweet city.

First, like a trumpet, doth his tongue begin 470
To sound a parley to his heartless foe;
Who o'er the white sheet peers her whiter chin,
The reason of this rash alarm to know,
Which he by dumb demeanour seeks to show;
But she with vehement prayers urgeth still Under what colour he commits this ill.

Thus he replies: 'The colour in thy face,
That even for anger makes the lily pale,
And the red rose blush at her own disgrace,
Shall plead for me and tell my loving tale: 430
Under that colour am I come to see
Thy never-conquer'd fort: the fault is thine,
For those thine eyes betray thee unto mine.

'Thus I forestall thee, if thou mean to chide:
Thy beauty hath ensnared thee to this night,
Where thou with patience must my will abide;
My will that marks thee for my earth's delight,
Which I to conquer sought with all my might;
But as reproof and reason beat it dead,
By thy bright beauty was it newly bred. 490

'I see what crosses my attempt will bring;
I know what thorns the growing rose defends;
I think the honey guarded with a sting:
All this beforehand counsel comprehends:
But will be deaf and hears no heedful friends;
Only he hath an eye to gaze on beauty,
And dothes on what he looks, 'gainst law or duty.

'I have debated, even in my soul,
What wrong, what shame, what sorrow I shall breed;
But nothing can affection's course control,
Or stop the headlong fury of his speed.
I know repentant tears ensue the deed,
Reproach, disdain, and deadly enmity;
Yet strive I to embrace mine infamy.'

This said, he shakes aloft his Roman blade,
Which, like a falcon towering in the skies,
Coucheth the fowl below with his wings' shade,
Whose crooked beak threatens if he mount he dies:
So under his insulging falchion lies
Harmless Lucretia, marking what he tells 570
With trembling fear, as fowl hear falcon's bells.

'Lucretia,' quoth he, 'this night I must enjoy thee:
If thou deny, then force must work my way,
For in thy bed I purpose to destroy thee:
That done, some worthless slave of thine I'll slay,
To kill thine honour with thy life's decay;
And in thy dead arms do I mean to place him,
Swearing I slew him, seeing thee embrace him.

'So thy surviving husband shall remain
The scornful mark of every open eye;
Thy kinsmen hang their heads at this disdain,
Thy issue blurr'd with nameless bastardy:
And thou, the author of their obloquy,
Shalt have thy trespass cited up in rhymes,
And sung by children in succeeding times.

'But if thou yield, I rest thy secret friend:
The fault unknown is as a thought unactued;
A little harm done to a great good end
For lawful policy remains enacted.
The poisonous simple sometimes is compacted
In a pure compound; being so applied,
His venom in effect is purified.

'Then, for thy husband and thy children's sake,
Tender my suit: bequeath not to their lot
The shame that from them no device can take,
The blemish that will never be forgot;
Worse than a slavish wipe or birth-hour's blot:
For marks descried in men's nativity
Are nature's faults, not their own infamy.'

Here with a cockpit's dead-killing eye 540
He rouseth up himself and makes a pause;
While she, the picture of pure piety,
Like a white hind under the grize's sharp claws,
Heads, in a wilderness where are no laws,
To the rough beast that knows no gentle right,
Nor aught obeys but his foul appetite.

But when a black-faced cloud the world doth threat,
In his dim mist the aspiring mountains hiding,
From earth's dark womb some gentle gest doth get,
Which blows these pitchy vapours from their bid-ing,
Hindering their present fall by this dividing;
So his unhallow'd haste her words delays,
And moody Pluto winks while Orpheus plays.

Yet, foul night-waking cat, he doth but daily,
While in his hold-fast foot the weak mouse panteth:
Her sad behaviour feeds his vulture folly,
A swallowing gulf that even in plenty wanteth:
His ear her prayers admits, but his heart grangeth
No penetrable entrance to her plaining:
Tears harden lust, though marble wear with rain-ing. 560

Her pity-pleading eyes are sadly fixed
In the remorseless wrinkles of his face;
Her modest eloquence with sighs is mixed,
Which to her oratory adds more grace.
She puts the period often from his place;
And midst the sentence so her accent breaks,
That twice she doth begin ere once she speaks.

She conjures him by high almighty Jove,
By knighthood, gentry, and sweet friendship's oath,
By her untimely tears, her husband's love, 570
By holy human law, and common troth,
By heaven and earth, and all the power of both,
That to his borrow'd bed he make retire,
And stoop to honour, not to foul desire.

Quoth she, 'Reward not hospitality
With such black payment as thou hast pretended;
Mud not the fountain that gave drink to thee;
Mar not the thing that cannot be amended;
End thy ill aim before thou shoot be ended;
He is no woodman that doth bend his bow 580
To strike a poor unseasonable doe.

'My husband is thy friend: for his sake spare me:
Thyself art mighty: for thine own sake leave me:
Myself a weakening; do not then ensnare me:
Thou look'st not like deceit, do not deceive me.
My sighs, like whirlwinds, labour hence to heave thee:
If ever man were moved with woman's moans,
Be moved with my tears, my sighs, my groans:
All which together, like a troubled ocean,
Beat at thy rocky and wreck-threatening heart,
To soften it with their continual motion:
For true respect will prison false convert,
O, if no harder than a stone thou art,
Melt at my tears, and be compassionate!
Soft pity enters at an iron gate.

In Tarquin's likeness I did entertain thee:
Hast thou not on his shape to do him shame?
To all the host of heaven I complain me,
Thou wrong'st his honour, wound'st his princely name.
Thou art not what thou seem'st; and if the same,
Thou seem'st not what thou art, a god, a king;
For kings like gods should govern every thing.

How will thy shame be seeded in thine age,
When thus thy vices bud before thy spring!
If in thy hope thou darest do such outrage,
What darest thou not when once thou art a king?
O, be remember'd, no outrageous thing
From vassal actors can be wiped away;
Then kings' misdeeds cannot be hid in clay.

This deed will make thee only loved for fear; 610
But happy monarchs still are fear'd for love:
With foul offenders thou performst must bear,
When they in thee the like offences prove
If but for fear of this, thy will will remove;
For princes are the glass, the school, the book,
Where subjects' eyes do learn, do read, do look.

And wilt thou be the school where Lust shall learn?
Must he in thee read lectures of such shame?
Wilt thou be glass wherein it shall discern
Authority for sin, warrant for blame,
To privilege dishonour in thy name?
Thou back'st reproach against long-living laud,
And makest fair reputation but a bawd.

Hast thou command? by him that gave it thee,
From a pure heart command thy rebel will;
Draw not thy sword to guard iniquity,
For it was lent thee all that brood to kill.
Thy princely office how canst thou fulfil,
When, pattern'd by thy fault, foul sin may say,
He learn'd to sin, and thou didst teach the way?

Think but how vile a spectacle it were,
To view thy present trespass in another.
Men's faults do seldom to themselves appear;
Their own transgressions partially they smother:
This guilt would seem death-worthy in thy brother.
O, how are they wrap-p'd in with infamies
That from their own misdeeds askance their eyes!

'To thee, to thee, my heaved-up hands appeal,
Not to seducing lust, thy rash reliever:
I sue for exiled majesty's repeal;
Let him return, and flattering thoughts retire:
His true respect will prison false desire.
And wipe the dim mist from thy doting eye,
That thou shalt see thy state and pity mine.'

'Have done,' quothe he: 'my uncontrolled tide
Turns not, but swells the higher by this let.

Small lights are soon blown out, huge fires abide,
And with the wind in greater fury fret:
The petty streams that pay a daily debt
To their salt sovereign, with their fresh falls' haste
Add to his flow, but alter not his taste.'

'Thou art,' quothe she, 'a sea, a sovereign king;
And, lo, there falls into thy boundless flood
Black lust, dishonour, shame, misgoverning,
Who seek to stain the ocean of thy blood.
If all these petty ills shall change thy good,
Thy sea within a puddle's womb is hearsed,
And not the puddle in thy sea dispersed.

So shall these slaves be king, and thou their slave;
Thou nobly base, they basely dignified;
Thou their fair life, and they thy fouler grave;
Thou loathed in their shame, they in thy pride:
The lesser thing should not the greater hide;
The cedar stoops not to the base shrub's foot,
But low shrubs wither at the cedar's root.

So let thy thoughts, low vassals to thy state—
'No more,' quothe he; 'by heaven, I will not hear thee:
Yield to my love; if not, enforced hate,
Instead of love's coy touch, shall rudely tear thee;
That done, despitefully I mean to bear thee
Unto the base bed of some rascal groom,
To be thy partner in this shameful doom.'

This said, he sets his foot upon the light,
For light and lust are deadly enemies;
Shame folded up in blind concealing night,
When most unseen, then most doth tyrannize.
The wolf hath seized his prey, the poor lamb cries:
Till with her own white fleece her voice contr'voll
Entombs her outcry in her lips' sweet fold:

For with the nightly linen that she wears
He pens her piteous clamours in her head;
Cooling his hot face in the chastest tears
That ever modest eyes with sorrow shed.
O, that prone lust should stain so pure a bed!
The spots whereof could weeping purify,
Her tears should drop on them perpetually.

But she hath lost a dearer thing than life,
And he hath won what he would lose again:
This forced league doth force a further strife;
This momentary joy breeds months of pain;
This hot desire converts to cold disdain:
Pure Chastity is rifled of her store,
And Lust, the thief, far poorer than before.

Look, as the full-fed hound or gorged hawk,
Unapt for tender smell or speedy flight,
Make slow pursuit, or altogether balk
The prey wherein by nature they delight;
So surfeit-taking Tarquin fares this night:
His taste delicious, in digestion souring,
Devours his will, that lived by foul devouring.

O, deeper sin than bottomless conceit
Can comprehend in still imagination!
Drunken Desire must vomit his receipt,
Ere he can see his own abomination.
While Lust is in his pride, no exclamation
Can curb his heat or rein his rash desire,
Till like a jade Self-will himself doth tire.
And then with lank and lean discoulour'd cheek,
With heavy eye, knit brow, and strengthless pace,
Feeble Desire, all recreant, poor, and meek, 710
Like to a bankrupt beggar wails his case:
The flesh being proud, Doth fight with Grace,
For there it revels; and when that decays,
The guilty rebel for remission prays.

So fares it with this faithful lord of Rome,
Who this accomplishment so hotly chased;
For now against himself he sounds this doom,
That through the length of times he stands disgraced:
Besides, his soul's fair temple is defaced;
To whose weak ruins muster troops of cares, 720
To ask the spotted princess how she fares.

She says, her subjects with foul insurrection
Have batter'd down her consecrated wall,
And by their mortal fault brought in subjection
Her immortality, and made her thrall
To living death and pain perpetual:
Which in her presence she controlled still,
But her foresight could not forestall their will.

Even in this thought through the dark night he stealeth,
A captive victor that hath lost in gain;
Bearing away the wound that nothing healeth,
The scar that will, despite of cure, remain;
Leaving his spoil perplex'd in greater pain.
She bears the load of lust he left behind,
And he the burthen of a guilty mind.

He like a thievish dog creeps sadly thence;
She like a weared lamb lies panting there;
He scowls and hates himself for his offence;
She, desperate, with her nails her flesh doth tear;
He faintly flies, sweating with guilty fear; 740
She stays, exclaiming on the direful night:
He runs, and chides his vanish'd, loathed delight.

He thence departs a heavy convertite;
She there remains a hopeless castaway;
He in his speed looks for the morning light;
She prays she never may behold the day.

'For day,' quoth she, 'night's escapes doth open lay,
And my true eyes have never practised how
To cloak offences with a cunning brow.'

'They think not but that every eye can see
The same disgrace which they themselves behold;
And therefore would they still in darkness be,
To have their unseen sin remain untold;
For they their guilt with weeping will unfold,
And grave, like water that doth eat in steel,
Upon my checks what helpless shame I feel.'

Here she exclaims against repose and rest,
And bids her eyes hereafter still be blind.
She wakes her heart by beating on her breast,
And bids it leap from thence, where it may find
Some purer chest to close so pure a mind. 761

Frantic with grief thus breathes she forth her spite
Against the unseen secrecy of night:
'O comfort-killing Night, image of hell!
Dim register and notary of shame!
Black stage for tragedies and murders fell!
Vast sin-concealing chaos! nurse of blame!
Blind muffled bawd! dark harbour for despair!
Grim cave of death! whispering conspirator
With close-tongued treason and the ravisher!

'O hateful, vaporous, and foggy Night!
Since thou art guilty of my curseless crime,
Muster thy mists to meet the eastern light,
Make war against proportion'd course of time;
Or if thou wilt permit the sun to climb
His wonted height, yet ere he go to bed,
Knit poisonous clouds about his golden head.

'With rotten damp ravish the morning air;
Let their exhaled unwholesome breaths make sick
The life of purity, the supreme fair,
Ere he arrive his weary noon-side tide;
And let thy misty vapours march so thick,
That in their smokey ranks his smother'd light
May set at noon and make perpetual night.

'Were Tarquin Night, as he is but Night's child,
The silver-shining queen he would detain;
Her twinkling handmaidens too, by him defiled,
Through Night's black bosom should not peep again;
So should I have co-partners in my pain;
And fellowship in woes doth woe assuage,
As palmers' chat makes short their pilgrimage.

'Where now I have no one to blush with me,
To cross their arms and hang their heads with mine,
To mask their brows and hide their infamy;
But I alone alone must sit and pine.
Seasoning the earth with showers of silver brine,
Mingling my talk with tears, my grief with groans,
Poor wasting monuments of lasting moans.

'O Night, thou furnace of foul-reeking smoke,
Let not the jealous Day behold that face
Which underneath thy black all-hiding cloak
Immodestly lies martyr'd with disgrace!
Keep still possession of thy gloomy place,
That all the faults which in thy reign are made
May likewise be sepulchred in thy shade!

'Make me not object to the tell-tale Day!
The light will show, character'd in my brow,
The story of sweet chastity's decay,
The impious breach of holy wedlock vow:
Yea, the illiterate, that know not how
To cipher what is writ in learned books,
Will quote my loathsome trespass in my looks.

'Make me not object to the tell-tale Day!
The light will show, character'd in my brow,
The story of sweet chastity's decay,
The impious breach of holy wedlock vow:
Yea, the illiterate, that know not how
To cipher what is writ in learned books,
Will quote my loathsome trespass in my looks.

'The nurse, to still her child, will tell my story,
And fright her crying babe with Tarquin's name;
The orator, to deck his oratory,
Will couple my reproach to Tarquin's shame;
Feast-finding minstrels, tuning my defame,
Will tie the hearers to attend each line,
How Tarquin wronged me, I Collatine.
Let my good name, that senseless reputation For Collatine's dear love be kept unspotted: 827
If that be made a theme for disputation, The branches of another root are rotted, And undeserved reproach to him allotted That is as clear from this attaint of mine As I, ere this, was pure to Collatine.

'O unseen shame! invisible disgrace! O unfelt sore! crest-wounding, private scar! Reproach is stamp'd in Collatinius' face, And Tarquin's eye may read the mot afar, 830
How he in peace is wounded, not in war. Alas, how many bear such shameful blows, Which not themselves, but he that gives them knows!

'If, Collatine, thine honour lay in me, From me by strong assault it is bereft. My honey lost, and I, a drone-like bee, Have no perfection of my summer left, But rob'd and ransack'd by injurious theft: In thy weak hive a wandering wasp hath crept, And suck'd the honey which thy chaste bee kept.

'Yet an I guilty of thy honour's wrack; 841
Yet for thy honour did I entertain him; Coming from thee, I could not put him back, For it had been dishonour to disdain him: Besides, of weariness he did complain him, And talk'd of virtue: O unlock'd for evil, When virtue is profaned in such a devil!

'Why should the worm intrude the maiden bud? Or hateful cuckoo hatch in sparrow's nests? Or toads infect fair founts with venom mud? 850
Or tyrant folly lurk in gentle breasts? Or kings be breakers of their own behests? But no perfection is so absolute, That some impurity doth not pollute.

'The aged man that coopers-up his gold Is plagued with cramps and gouts and painful fits; And scarce hath eyes his treasure to behold, But like still-pining Tantalus he sitts, And useless burns the harvest of his wits; Having no other pleasure of his gain 860
But torment that it cannot cure his pain.

'So then he hath it when he cannot use it, And leaves it to be master'd by his young; Who in their pride do presently abuse it: Their father was too weak, and they too strong, To hold their cursed-blessed fortune long. The sweets we wish for turn to loathed ours Even in the moment that we call them ours.

'Unruly blasts wait on the tender spring; Unwholesome weeds take root with precious flowers; 870
The adder hisses where the sweet birds sing; What virtue breeds iniquity devours: Who have no good that we can say is ours, But ill-annexed Opportunity Or kills his life or else his quality.

'O Opportunity, thy guilt is great! 879
'Tis thou that executest the traitor's treason:

Thou set'st the wolf where he the lamb may get; 880
Whoever plots the sin, thou point'st the season;
'Tis thou that spur'st at right, at law, at reason; And in thy shady cell, where none may spy him, Sits Sin, to seize the souls that wander by him.

'Thou makest the vestal violate her oath; Thou blow'st the fire when temperance is thaw'd; Thou smoother'st honesty, thou murder'st truth; Thou foul abetter! thou notorious bawd! Thou plantest scandal and displaceth laud: Thou ravisher, thou traitor, thou false thief, Thy honey turns to gall, thy joy to grief!

'Thy secret pleasure turns to open shame, 890
Thy private feasting to a public fast, Thy smoothing titles to a ragged name, Thy sugar'd tongue to bitter wormwood taste: Thy violent vanities can never last. How comes it then, vile Opportunity, Being so bad, such numbers seek for thee?

'When wilt thou be the humble supplicant's friend, And bring him where his suit may be obtained? 900
When wilt thou sort an hour great strifes to end? Or free that soul which wretchedness hath chain'd? Give physic to the sick, ease to the pain'd; The poor, lame, blind, halt, creep, cry out for thee;
But they ne'er meet with Opportunity.

'The patient dies while the physician sleeps; The orphan pines while the oppressor feeds; Justice is feasting while the widow weeps; Advice is sporting while infection breeds: Thou grant'st no time for charitable deeds: Wrath, envy, treason, rape, and murder's rages, Thy heinous hours wait on them as their pages.

'When Truth and Virtue have to do with thee, A thousand crosses keep them from thy aid: They buy thy help; but Sin ne'er gives a fee, He gratis comes; and thou art well appaid As well to hear as grant what he hath said. My Collatine would else have come to me When Tarquin did, but he was stay'd by thee.

'Guilty thou art of murder and of theft, Guilty of perjury and subornation, Guilty of treason, forgery, and shift, Guilty of incest, that abomination; An accessory by thine inclination To all sins past, and all that are to come, From the creation to the general doom.

'Mis-shapen Time, copesmate of ugly Night, Swift subtle post, carrier of grisly care, Eater of youth, false slave to false delight, Base watch of woes, sin's pack-horse, virtue's snare; Thou nurset all and murder'st all that are: O, hear me then, injurious, shifting Time! 950
Be guilty of my death, since of my crime.

'Why hath thy servant, Opportunity, Betray'd the hours thou gavest me to repose, Cancel'd my fortunes, and enchain'd me To endless date of never-ending woes? Time's office is to fine the hate of foes;
To eat up errors by opinion bred,
Not spend the dowry of a lawful bed.

'Time's glory is to calm contending kings,
To unmask falsehood and bring truth to light, 940
To stamp the seal of time in aged things,
To make the morn and sentinel the night,
To wrong the wronger till he render right,
To ruinate proud buildings with thy hours,
And smear with dust their glittering golden towers;

'To fill with worm-holes stately monuments,
To feed oblivion with decay of things,
To blot old books and alter their contents,
To pluck the quills from ancient ravens' wings,
To dry the old oak's sap and cherish springs, 950
To spoil antiquities of hammer'd steel,
And turn the giddy round of Fortune's wheel;

'To show the beldam daughters of her daughter,
To make the child a man, the man a child,
To slay the tiger that doth live by slaughter,
To tame the unicorn and lion wild,
To mock the subtle in themselves beguiled,
To cheer the ploughman with increaseful crops,
And waste huge stones with little water-drops.

'Why work'st thou mischief in thy pilgrimage,
Unless thou couldst return to make amends? 961
One poor retiring minute in an age
Would purchase thee a thousand thousand friends,
Lending him wit that to bad debtors lends:
O, this dread night, wouldst thou one hour come back,
I could prevent this storm and shun thy wrack!

Thou ceaseless lackey to eternity,
With some mischance cross Tarquin in his flight:
Devise extremes beyond extremity,
To make him curse this cursed crimeful night:
Let ghastly shadows his lewd eyes affright; 971
And the dire thought of his committed evil
Shape every bush a hideous shapeless devil.

'Disturb his hours of rest with restless trances,
Afflict him in his bed with bedrid groans;
Let there bechance him pitiful mischances,
To make him moan; but pity not his moans:
Stone him with harden'd hearts, harder than stones;
And let mild women to him lose their mildness,
Wilder to him than tigers in their wildness. 980

'Let him have time to tear his curled hair,
Let him have time against himself to rave,
Let him have time of Time's help to despair,
Let him have time to live a loathed slave,
Let him have time a beggar's orts to crave,
And time to see one that by alms doth live
Disdain to him disdain'd scraps to give.

'Let him have time to see his friends his foes,
And merry fools to mock at him resort;
Let him have time to mark how slow time goes
In time of sorrow, and how swift and short
His time of folly and his time of sport;
And ever let his unrecalling crime
Have time to wail th' abusing of his time.

'O Time, thou tutor both to good and bad,
Teach me to curse him that thou taught'st this ill!
At his own shadow let the thief run mad,
Himself himself seek every hour to kill!
Such wretched hands such wretched blood should spill;
For who so base would such an office have As slanderous deathman to so base a slave?

'The baser is he, coming from a king,
To shame his hope with deeds degenerate:
The mightier man, the mightier is the thing
That makes him honour'd, or begets him hate;
For greatest scandal waits on greatest state.
The moon being clouded presently is miss'd,
But little stars may hide them when they list.

'The crow may bathe his coal-black wings in mire,
And unperceived fly with the filth away; 1010
But if the like the snow-white swan desire,
The stain upon his silver down will stay.
Poor grooms are sightless night, kings glorious day:
Gnats are unseen where soe'er they fly,
But eagles gazed upon with every eye.

'Out, idle words, servants to shallow fools!
Unprofitable sounds, weak arbitrators!
Busy yourselves in skill-contending schools;
Debate where leisure serves with dull debaters:
To trembling clients be you mediators: 1020
For me, I force not argument a straw,
Since that my case is past the help of law.

'In vain I rail at Opportunity,
At Time, at Tarquin, and uncheerful Night;
In vain I cavil with mine infamy,
In vain I spurn at my confirmd despite:
This helpless smoke of words doth me no right.
The remedy indeed to do me good
Is to let forth my foul-defiled blood.

'Poor hand, why quiver'st thou at this decree?
Honour thyself to rid me of this shame; 1031
For if I die, my honour lives in thee;
But if I live, thou livest in my shame:
Since thou couldst not defend thy loyal dame,
And wast afeard to scratch her wicked foe,
Kill both thyself and her for yielding so.'

This said, from her be-tumbled couch she starteth,
To find some desperate instrument of death:
But this no slaughterhouse no tool impurteth
To make more vent for passage of her breath; 1040
Which, thronging through her lips, so vanishest
As smoke from Ætna, that in air consumes,
Or that which from discharged cannon fumes.

'In vain,' quoth she, 'I live, and seek in vain
Some happy mean to end a hapless life,
I fear'd by Tarquin's falchion to be slain,
Yet for the self-same purpose seek a knife:
But when I fear'd I was a loyal wife:
So am I now: O no, that cannot be;
Of that true type hath Tarquin riled me. 1050

'O, that is gone for which I sought to live,
And therefore now I need not fear to die.
To clear this spot by death, at least I give
A badge of fame to slander's livery;
A dying life to living infamy:
Poor helpless help, the treasure stol'n away,
To burn the guilty casket where it lay!

'Tis double death to drown in ken of shore;
He ten times pines that pines beholding food;
To see the salve doth make the wound ache more:
Great grief grieves most at that would do it good;
Deep woes roll forward like a gentle flood,
Who, being stopp'd, the bounding banks o'er-flow.

Grief dallied with nor law nor limit knows.

You mocking birds,' quoth she, 'your tunes entomb
Within your hollow-swelling feather'd breasts,
And in my hearing be you mute and dumb:
My restless discord loves no stops nor rests;
A woeful hostess brooks not merry guests:
Relish your nimble notes to pleasing ears;
Distresse likes dumps when time is kept with tears.

Come, Philomel, that sing'st of ravishment,
Make thy sad grove in my dishewell'd hair:
As the dank earth weeps at thy languishment,
So I at each sad strain will strain a tear,
And with deep groans the diapsom bear;
For burden-wise I'll hum on Tarquin still,
While thou on Tereus descanst better skill.

And whiles against a thorn thou bear'st thy part,
To keep thy sharp woes waking, wretched I,
To imitate thee well, against my heart
Will fix a sharp knife to affright mine eye;
Who, if it wink, shall thereon fall and die.
These means, as frets upon an instrument,
Shall tune our heart-strings to true languishment.

And for, poor bird, thou sing'st not in the day,
As shaming any eye should thee behold,
Some dark deep desert, seated from the way,
That knows not parching heat nor freezing cold,
Will we find out; and there we will unfold
To creatures stern sad tunes, to change their kinds:
Since men prove beasts, let beasts bear gentle minds.

As the poor frightened deer, that stands at gaze,
Wildly determining which way to fly,
Or one encompass'd with a winding maze,
That cannot tread the way out readily;
So with herself is she in mutiny,
To live or die which of the twain were better,
When life is shamed, and death reproach's debtor.

'To kill myself,' quoth she, 'alack, what were it,
But with my body my poor soul's pollution?
They that lose half with greater patience bear it
Than they whose whole is swallow'd in confusion.
That mother tries a merciless conclusion,
Who, having two sweet babes, when death takes one,
Will slay the other and be nurse to none.

'My body or my soul, which was the dearer,
When the one pure, the other made divine?
Lucrèce.

Whose love of either to myself was nearer,
When both were kept for heaven and Collatine?
Ay me! the bark peel'd from the lofty pine,
His leaves will wither and his sap decay;
So must my soul, her bark being peel'd away.

Her house is sack'd, her quiet interrupted, 1170
Her mansion batter'd by the enemy;
Her sacred temple spotted, spoil'd, corrupted,
Grossly enraged with daring infamy:
Then let it not be call'd impiety,
If in this blemish'd fort I make some hole
Through which I may convey this troubled soul.

Yet die I will not till my Collatine
Have heard the cause of my untimely death;
That he may vow, in that sad hour of mine,
Revenge on him that made me stop my breath.
My stained blood to Tarquin I'll bequeath, 1181
Which by him taint'd shall for him be spent,
And as his due writ in my testament.

My honour I'll bequeath unto the knife
That wounds my body so dishonour'd.
'Tis honour to deprive dishonour'd life;
The one will live, the other being dead;
So of shame's ashes shall my fame be bred;
For in my death I murder shamefull scorn;
My shame so dead, mine honour is new-born.

Dear lord of that dear jewel I have lost, 1191
What legacy shall I bequeath to thee?
My resolution, love, shall be thy boast,
By whose example thou revenged mayst be.
How Tarquin must be used, read it in me:
Myself, thy friend, will kill myself, thy foe,
And for my sake serve thou false Tarquin so.

This brief abridgement of my will I make:
My soul and body to the skies and ground;
My resolution, husband, do thou take; 1200
Mine honour be the knife's that makes my wound;
My shame be his that did my fame confound;
And all my fame that lives disburst be
To those that live, and think no shame of me.

Thou, Collatine, shalt oversee this will;
How was I overseen that thou shalt see it!
My blood shall wash the slander of mine ill;
My life's foul deed, my life's fair end shall free it.
Fear not, fear heart, but stoutly say "So be it;"
Yield to my hand; my hand shall conquer thee:
Thou dead, both die, and both shall victors be.

This plot of death when sadly she had laid,
And wiped the brinish pearl from her bright eyes,
With untuned tongue she horridly calls her maid,
Whose swift obedience to her mistress hies;
For fleet-wing'd duty with thought's feathers flies,
Poor Lucrèce cheeks unto her maid seem so
As winter maids when sun doth melt their snow.

Her mistress she doth give demure good-morrow,
With soft-slow tongue, true mark of modesty,
And sorts a sad look to her lady's sorrow, 1221
For why her face were sorrow's livery
But durst not ask of her audaciously
Why her two suns were cloud-eclipsed so,
Nor why her fair cheeks over-wash'd with woe.

But as the earth doth weep, the sun being set,
Each flower moisten'd like a melting eye;
Even so the maid with swelling drops gun wet
Her circled eyne, enforced by sympathy
Of those fair suns set in her mistress' sky, 1230

Who in a salt-wave ocean quench their light,
Which makes the maid weep like the dewy night.

A pretty while these pretty creatures stand,
Like ivory conduits coral cisterns filling:
One lustily weeps; the other takes in hand
No cause, but company, of her drops spilling:
Their gentle sex to weep are often willing;
Grieving themselves to guess at others' smarts,
And then they drown their eyes or break their hearts.

For men have marble, women waxen, minds, 1240
And therefore are they form'd as marble will;
The weak oppress'd, the impression of strange kinds
Is form'd in them by force, by fraud, or skill:
Then call them not the authors of their ill,
No more than wax shall be accounted evil
Wherein is stamp'd the semblance of a devil.

Their smoothness, like a kindly champaign plain,
Lays open all the little worms that creep;
In men, as in a rough-grown grove, remain
Cave-keeping evils that obscurely sleep: 1250

Through crystal walls each little mote will peep:
Though men can cover crimes with bold stern looks,
Poor women's faces are their own faults' books.

No man inveigh against the wither'd flower,
But chide rough winter that the flower hath kill'd:
Not that devour'd, but that which doth devour,
Is worthy blame. O, let it not be hild
Poor women's faults, that they are so fulfill'd
With men's abuses: those proud lords, to blame,
Make weak-made women tenants to their shame.

The precedent whereof in Lucrèce view, 1261
Assail'd by night with circumstances strong
Of present death, and shame that might ensue
By that her death, to do her husband wrong:
Such danger to resistance did belong,
That dying fear through all her body spread;
And who cannot abuse a body dead?

By this, mild patience bid fair Lucrèce speak
To the poor counterfeit of her complaining:
'My girl,' quoth she, 'on what occasion break
Those tears from thee, that down thy cheeks are raining? 1271
If thou dost weep for grief of my sustaining,
Know, gentle wench, it small avails my mood:
If tears could help, mine own would do me good.

But tell me, girl, when went — and there she stay'd
Till after a deep groan — 'Tarquin from hence!' 1280
'Madam, ere I was up,' replied the maid,
The more to blame my sluggishard negligence;
Yet with the fault I thus far can dispense:
Myself was stirring ere the break of day,
And, ere I rose, was Tarquin gone away.
The homely villain court'sies to her low;
And, blushing on her, with a steadfast eye
Receives the scroll without or yea or no,
And forth with bashful innocence doth hie.
But they whose guilt within their bosoms lie
Imagine every eye beholds their blame;
For Lucrece thought he blush'd to see her shame.

When, silly groom! God wot, it was defect
Of spirit, life, and bold audacity.
Such harmless creatures have a true respect
To talk in deeds, while others saucily
Promise more speed, but do it leisurely:
Even so this pattern of the worn-out age
Paw'd honest looks, but laid no words to gage.

His kindled duty kindled her mistrust,
That two red fires in both their faces blazed;
She thought he blush'd, as knowing Tarquin's lust,
And, blushing with him, wisely on him gazed;
Her earnest eye did make him more amazed:
The more she saw the blood his cheeks replenish'd,
The more she thought he spied in her some blemish.

But long she thinks till he return again,
And yet the duteous vassal scarce is gone.
The weary time she cannot entertain,
For now 'tis stale to sigh, to weep, and groan:
So woe hath wearied woe, moan tired moan,
That she her plaints a little while doth stay,
Pausing for means to mourn some newer way.

At last she calls to mind where hangs a piece
Of skilful painting, made for Priam's Troy;
Before the which is drawn the power of Greece,
For Helen's rape the city to destroy,
Threatening cloud-kissing Ilion with annoy:
Which the conceited painter drew so proud,
As heaven, it seem'd, to kiss the turrets bow'd.

A thousand lamentable objects there,
In scorn of nature, art gave lifeless life:
Many a dry drop seem'd a weeping tear,
Shed for the slaughter'd husband by the wife:
The red blood reck'd, to show the painter's strife;
And dying eyes gleam'd forth their ashy lights,
Like dying coals burnt out in tedious nights.

There might you see the labouring pioneer
Begrimed with sweat, and smeared all with dust;
And from the towers of Troy there would appear
The very eyes of men through loop-holes thrust,
Gazing upon the Greeks with little lust:
Such sweet observance in this work was had,
That one might see those far-off eyes look sad.

In great commanders grace and majesty
You might behold, triumphing in their faces;
In youth, quick bearing and dexterity;
And here and there the painter interfaces
Pale cowards, marching on with trembling paces;
Which heartless peasants did so well resemble;
That one would swear he saw them quake and tremble.

In Ajax and Ulysses, O, what art
Of physiognomy might one behold?
Of what she was no semblance did remain;
Her blue blood changed to black in every vein,
Wanting the spring that those shrunk pipes had fed.
Show'd life imprison'd in a body dead.

On this sad shadow Lucrece spends her eyes,
And shapes her sorrow to the belam'd woes,
Who nothing wants to answer her but cries,
And bitter words to ban her cruel foes:
The painter was no god to lend her those;
And therefore Lucrece swears he did her wrong.
To give her so much grief and not a tongue.

'Poor instrument,' quoth she, 'without a sound,
I'll tune thy woes with my lamenting tongue;
And drop sweet balm in Priam's painted wound,
And rail on Pyrrhus that hath done him wrong;
And with my tears quench Troy that burns so long:
And with my knife scratch out the angry eyes
Of all the Greeks that are thine enemies.'

'Show me the trumpet that began this stir,
That with my nails her beauty I may tear.
Thy heart of lust, fond Paris, did so
This load of wrath that burning Troy doth bear:
Thy eye kindled the fire that burneth here;
And here in Troy, for trespass of thine eye,
The sire, the son, the dame, and daughter die.

'Why should the private pleasure of some one
Become the public plague of many more?
Let sin, alone committed, light alone
Upon his head that hath transgressed so;
Let guiltless souls be free from guilty woe;
For one's offence why should so many fall,
To plague a private sin in general?'

'Lo, here weeps Hecuba, here Priam dies,
Here manly Heclor faints, here Troilus swounds,
Here friend by friend in bloody channel lies,
And friend to friend gives unadvised wounds,
And one man's lust these many lives confounds:
Had doting Priam check'd his son's desire,
Troy had been bright with fame and not with fire.'

Here feelingly she weeps Troy's painted woes:
For sorrow, like a heavy-hanging bell,
Once set on ringing, with his own weight goes;
Then little strength rings out the doleful knell:
So Lucrece, set a-work, sad tales doth tell;
To pencil'd pensiveness and colour'd sorrow:
She lends them words, and she looks doth borrow.

She throws her eyes about the painting round,
And whom she finds forlorn she doth lament.
At last she sees a wretched image bound,
That piteous looks to Phrygian shepherds lent:
His face, though full of cares, yet show'd content;
Onward to Troy with the blunt swains he goes.
So mild, that Patience seem'd to scorn his woes.

In him the painter labour'd with his skill
To hide deceit, and give the harmless show
An humble gait, calm looks, eyes wailing still,
A brow unbent, that seem'd to welcome woe;
Cheeks neither red nor pale, but mingled so.
That blushing red no guilty instance gave,
Nor ashy pale the fear that false hearts have.

But, like a constant and confirmed devil,
He entertain'd a show so seeming just,
And therein so enconced his secret evil,
That jealousy itself could not mistrust
False-creeping craft and perjury should thrust
Into so bright a day such black-faced storms,
Or blot with hell-born sin such saint-like forms.

The well-skil'd workman this mild image drew
For perjur'd Simon, whose enchanting story 1522
The cedrus old Priam after slew;
Whose words like wildfire burnt the shining glory
Of rich-built Ilium, that the skies were sorry,
And little stars shot from their fixed places,
When their glass fell wherein they view'd their faces.

This picture she advisedly perused,
And chid the painter for his wondrous skill,
Saying, some shape in Simon's was abused;
So fair a form lodgeth not a mind so ill: 1530
And still on him she gazed; and gazing still,
Such signs of truth in his plain face she spied,
That she concludes the picture was belied.

"It cannot be," quoth she, "that so much guile!"—
She would have said "can lurk in such a look;"
But Tarquin's shape came in her mind the while,
And from her tongue "can lurk" from 'cannot' took:
"It cannot be" she in that sense forsook,
And turn'd it thus, "It cannot be, I find,
But such a face should bear a wicked mind:"

"For even as subtle Simon here is painted,
So sober-sad, so weary, and so mild,
As if with grief or travail he had fainted,
To me came Tarquin armed; so beguiled
With outward honesty, but yet defiled
With inward vice: as Priam him did cherish,
So did I Tarquin; so my Troy did perish.

"Look, look, how listening Priam wets his eyes,
To see those borrow'd tears that Simon sheds!
Priam, why art thou old and yet not wise? 1550
For every tear he falls a Trojan bleed:"
His eye drops fire, no water thence proceeds;
Those round clear pearls of his, that move thy pity,
Are balls of quenchless fire to burn thy city.

"Such devils steal effects from lightless hell;
For Simon in his fire doth quake with cold,
And in that cold hot-burning fire doth dwell;
These contraries such unity do hold,
Only to flatter fools and make them bold;
So Priam's trust false Simon's tears doth flatter,
That he finds means to burn his Troy with water."

Here, all enraged, such passion her assailst,
That patience is quite beaten from her breast.
She tears the senseless Simon with her nails,
Comparing him to that unhappy guest
Whose deed hath made herself herself detest:
At last she smilingly with this gives o'er:
"Fool, fool!" quoth she, "his wounds will not be sore."

Thus ebbs and flows the current of her sorrow;
And time doth weary time with her complaining.
She looks for night, and then she longs for morrow,
And both she thinks too long with her remaining:
Short time seems long in sorrow's sharp sustaining:
Though woe be heavy, yet it seldom sleeps;
And they that watch see time how slow it creeps.

Which all this time hath overspill'd her thought,
That she with painted images hath spent;
Being from the feeling of her own grief brought
By deep surmise of others' detriment;
Losing her woes in shows of discontent.
It caseth some, though none it ever cured,
To think their dolour others have endured.

But now the mindful messenger, come back,
Brings home his lord and other company:
Who finds his Lucrece clad in mourning black:
And round about her tear-distained eye
Blue circles stream'd, like rainbows in the sky:
These water-galls in her dim element
Foretell new storms to those already spent.

Which when her sad-beholding husband saw,
Amazedly in her sad face he stares: 1591
Her eyes, though sad in tears, look'd red and raw,
Her lively colour kill'd with deadly cares.
He hath no power to ask her how she fares:
Both stood, like old acquaintance in a trance,
Met far from home, wondering each other's chance.

At last he takes her by the bloodless hand,
And thus begins: "What uncouth ill event
Hath thee befall'n, that thou dost trembling stand?
Sweet love, what spite hath thy fair colour spent?
Why art thou thus attired in discontent?
Unmask, dear dear, this moody heaviness,
And tell thy grief, that we may give redress."

Three times with sighs she gives her sorrow fire,
Ere once she can discharge one word of woe:
At length address'd to answer his desire,
She modestly prepares to let them know
Her honour is a 'ta'en prisoner by the foe:
While Collatine and his consorted lords
With sad attention long to hear her words.

And now this pale swan in her watery nest
Begins the sad dirge of her certain ending:
Few words, quoth she, shall fit the trespass best,
Where no excuse can give the fault amending:
In me moe woes than words are now depending:
And my laments would be drawn out too long,
To tell them all with one poor tired tongue.

"Then be this all the task it hath to say:
Dear husband, in the interest of thy bed
A stranger came, and on that pillow lay:
Where thou wast wont to rest thy weary head;
And what wrong else may be imagined:
By foul enforcement might be done to me,
From that, alas, thy Lucrece is not free.

"For in the dreadful dead of dark midnight,
With shining falchion in my chamber came
A creeping creature, with a flaming light,
And softly cried "Awake, thou Roman dame,
And entertain my love; else lasting shame
On thee and thine this night I will inflict, 1630
If thou my love's desire do contradict.

"'For some hard-favour'd gnom of thine," quoth he,
"Unless thou yoke thy liking to my will,
I'll murder straight, and then I'll slay thee
And swear I found you where you did fulfil
The loathsome act of lust, and so did kill
The lechers in their deed: this act will be My fame and thy perpetual infamy."

'With this, I did begin to start and cry;
And then against my heart he sets his sword, 1640
Swearing, unless I took all patiently,
I should not live to speak another word;
So should my shame still rest upon record,
And never be forgot in mighty Rome
'Th' adulterate death of Lucrece and her gnom."

'Mine enemy was strong, my poor self weak,
And far the weaker with so strong a fear!
My bloody judge forbade my tongue to speak;
No rightful plea might plead for justice there:
His scarlet lust came evidence to swear 1650
That my poor beauty had purloin'd his eyes:
And when the judge is robb'd the prisoner dies.

'O, teach me how to make mine own excuse!
Or at the least this refuge let me find;
Though my gross blood be stain'd with this abuse,
Immaculate and spotless is my mind;
That was not forced; that never was inclined
To accessory yeldings, but still pure
Doth in her poison'd closet yet endure.'

Lo, here, the hopeless merchant of this loss, 1660
With head declined, and voice damm'd up with woe,
With sad set eyes, and wretched arms across,
From lips new-waxen pale begins to blow
The grief away that stops his answer so:
But, wretched as he is, he strives in vain:
What he breathes out his breath drinks up again.

As through an arch the violent roaring tide
Outruns the eye that doth behold his haste,
Yet in the eddy boundeth in his pride
Back to the strait that forced him on so fast; 1670
In rage sent out, recall'd in rage, being past:
Even so his sighs, his sorrows, make a saw,
To push grief on, and back the same grief draw.

Which speechless woe of his poor she attendeth,
And his untimely frenzy thus awaketh:
'Dear lord, thy sorrow to my sorrow lendeth
Another power; no flood by raining slaketh.
My woe too sensible thy passion maketh
More feeling-painful: let it then suffice 1679
To drown one woe, one pair of weeping eyes.

And for my sake, when I might charm thee so
For she that was thy Lucrece, now attend me:
Be suddenly revenged on my foe,

Thine, mine, his own: suppose thou dost defend me
From what is past: the help that thou shalt lend me
Comes all too late, yet let the traitor die;
For sparing justice feeds iniquity.

'But ere I name him, you fair lords,' quoth she,
Speaking to those that came with Collatine,
'Shall plight your honourable faiths to me, 1690
With swift pursuit to venge this wrong of mine;
For 'tis a meritorious fair design
To chase injustice with revengeful arms:
Knights, by their oaths, should right poor ladies' harms.'

At this request, with noble disposition
Each present lord began to promise aid,
As bound in knighthood to her imposition,
Longing to hear the hateful foe bewray'd.
But she, that yet her sad task hath not said, 1699
The protestation stops. 'O, speak,' quoth she,
'How may this forced stain be wiped from me?'

'What is the quality of mine offence,
Being constrain'd with dreadful circumstance?
May my pure mind with the foul act dispense,
My low-declined love's sparing honour to advance?
May any terms acquit me from this chance?
The poison'd fountain clears itself again;
And why not I from this compelled stain?'

With this, they all at once began to say,
Her body's stain her mind untainted clears: 1710
While with a joyless smile she turns away
The face, that map which deep impression bears
Of hard misfortune, carved in it with tears.
'No, no,' quoth she, 'no dame, hereafter living,
By my excuse shall claim excuse's giving.'

Here with a sigh, as if her heart would break,
She throws forth Tarquin's name: 'He, he,' she says,
But more than 'he' her poor tongue could not speak;
Till after many accents and delays,
Untimely breathings, sick and short essays, 1720
She utter's this, 'He, he, fair lords,' 'tis he,
That guides this hand to give this wound to me.'

Even here she sheathed in her harmless breast
A harmful knife, that thence her soul unsheathe:
That blow did bal' it from the deep unrest
Of that polluted prison where it breathed:
Her contrite sighs unto the clouds bequeath'd
Her winged sprite, and through her wounds doth fly
Life's last'ing date from cancell'd destiny.

Stone-still, astonish'd with this deadly deed, 1730
Stood Collatine and all his lordly crew;
'Till Lucrece' father, that beholds her bleed,
Himself on her self-slaughter'd body threw;
And from the purple fountain Brutus drew
The murderous knife, and, as it left the place,
Her blood, in poor revenge, held it in chase;

And bubbling from her breast, it doth divide
In two slow rivers, that the crimson blood
Circles her body in on every side,
Who, like a late-sack'd island, vastly stood 1740
Bare and unpeopled in this fearful flood.
Some of her blood still pure and red remain'd,
And some look'd black, and that false Tarquin stain'd.

About the mourning and congealed face
Of that black blood a watery rigol goes,
Which seems to weep upon the tainted place:
And ever since, as pitting Lucrece' woes,
Corrupted blood some watery token shows;
And blood untainted still doth red abide,
Blushing at that pride which is so putrid.

'Yet,' said the child, 'my father's image lies,
Where shall I live now Lucrece is unliv'd?
Thou wast not to this end from me derived.
If children pre-decease progenitors,
We are their offspring, and they none of ours.

'Poor broken glass, I often did behold
In thy sweet semblance my old age new born;
But now that fair fresh mirror, dim and old,
Shows me a bare-boned death by time outworn:
O, from thy cheeks my image thou hast torn,
And shiver'd all the beauty of my glass,
That I no more can see what once I was!

'O time, cease thou thy course and last no longer,
If they surcease to be that should survive.
Shall rotten death make conquest of the stronger
And leave the faltering feeble souls alive?
The old bees die, the young possess their hive:
Then live, sweet Lucrece, live again and see Thy father die, and not thy father thee!'

BRUTUS.

LUCRECE.

By this, starts Collatine as from a dream,
And bids Lucrece give his sorrow place;
And then in key-cold Lucrece' bleeding stream
He falls, and bathes the pale fear in his face,
And counterfeit's to die with her a space;
Till manly shame bids him possess his breath
And live to be revenged on her death.

The deep vexation of his inward soul
Hath served a dumb arrest upon his tongue;
Who, mad that sorrow should his use control,
Or keep him from heart-easing words so long,
Beginning to talk; but through his lips do throng
Weak words, so thick come in his poor heart's aid,
That no man could distinguish what he said.

Yet sometime 'Tarquin' was pronounced plain,
But through his teeth, as if the name he tore.
This windy tempest, till it blow up rain,
Held back his sorrow's tide, to make it more;
At last it rains, and busy winds give o'er:
Then son and father weep with equal strife
Who should weep most, for daughter or for wife.

The one doth call her his, the other his,
Yet neither may possess the claim they lay.
The father says 'She's mine.'
'O, mine she is,'
Replies her husband: 'do not take away
My sorrow's interest; let no mourner say
He weeps for her, for she was only mine,
And only must be wail'd by Collatine.'

'O,' quoth Lucretius, 'I did give that life
Which she too early and too late hath spill'd.'
'Woe, woe,' quoth Collatine, 'she was my wife,
I owed her, and 'tis mine that she hath kill'd.'
'My daughter' and 'my wife' with clamours fill'd
The dispersed air, who, holding Lucrece' life,
Answer'd their cries, 'my daughter' and 'my wife,'
Brutus, who pluck'd the knife from Lucrece' side,
Seeing such emulation in their woe,
Began to clothe his wit in state and pride,
Burying in Lucrece' wound his folly's show.
He with the Romans was esteemed so
As silly-jeering idiots are with kings,
For sportive words and uttering foolish things:

But now he throws that shallow habit by,
Wherein deep policy did him disguise;
And arm'd his long-hid wits advisedly,
To check the tears in Collatinus' eyes.
'Thou wronged lord of Rome,' quoth he, 'arise:
Let my unsounded self, supposed a fool,
Now set thy long-experienced wit to school.

'Why, Collatine, is woe the cure for woe?
Do wounds help wounds, or grief help grievous deeds?
Is it revenge to give thyself a blow
For his foul act by whom thy fair wife bleeds?
Such childish humour from weak minds proceeds:
Thy wretched wife mistook the matter so,
To slay herself, that should have slain her foe.

'Courageous Roman, do not steep thy heart
In such relenting dew of lamentations;
But kneel with me and help to bear thy part,
To rouse our Roman gods with invocations;
That they will suffer these abominations,
Since Rome herself in them doth stand disgraced,
By our strong arms from forth her fair streets chased.

'Now, by the Capitol that we adore,
And by this chaste blood so unjustly stain'd,
By heaven's fair sun that breeds the fat earth's store,
By all our country rights in Rome maintain'd,
And by chaste Lucrece' soul that late complain'd
Her wrongs to us, and by this bloody knife,
We will revenge the death of this true wife,'

This said, he struck his hand upon his breast,
And kiss'd the fatal knife, to end his vow;
And to his protestation urged the rest,
Who, wondering at him, did his words allow:
Then jointly to the ground their knees they bow:
And that deep vow, which Brutus made before,
He doth again repeat, and that they swore.

When they had sworn to this advised doom,
They did conclude to bear dead Lucrece thence:
To show her bleeding body thorough Rome,
And so to publish Tarquin's foul offence;
Which being done with speedy diligence,
The Romans plausibly did give consent
To Tarquin's everlasting banishment.
SONNETS.

TO THE ONLIE BEGETTER OF THESE INSUING SONNETS
MR. W. H. ALL HAPPINESSE
AND THAT ETERNITIE
PROMISED BY OUR EVER-LIVING POET
WISHETH THE WELL-WISHING ADVENTURER IN SETTING FORTH T. T.

I.
From fairest creatures we desire increase,
That thereby beauty's rose might never die,
But as the riper should by time decease,
His tender heir might bear his memory:
But thou, contracted to thine own bright eyes,
Feed'st thy light's flame with self-substantial fuel,
Making a famine where abundance lies,
Thyself thy foe, to thy sweet self too cruel.
Thou that art now the world's fresh ornament
And only herald to the gaudy spring,
Within thine own bud buried thy content
And, tender churl, makest waste in niggarding.
Pity the world, or else this glutton be,
To eat the world's due, by the grave and thee.

II.
When forty winters shall besiege thy brow,
And dig deep trenches in thy beauty's field,
Thy youth's proud livery so gazed on now,
Will be a tatter'd weed of small worth held:
Then being ask'd where all thy beauty lies,
Where all the treasure of thy lusty days,
To say, within thine own deep-sunken eyes,
Were an all-eating shame and thriftless praise.
How much more praise deserv'd thy beauty's use,
If thou couldst answer 'This fair child of mine
Shall sum my count and make my old excuse,'
Proving thy beauty by succession thine!
This were to be new made when thou art old,
And see thy blood warm when thou feel'st it cold.

III.
Look in thy glass, and tell the face thou viewest
Now is the time that face should form another;
Whose fresh repair if now thou not renewest,
Thou dost beguile the world, unblest some mother.
For where is he so fair whose unear'd womb
Disdares the tillage of thy husbandry?
Or who is he so fond will be the tomb
Of his self-love, to stop posterity?

Thou art thy mother's glass, and she in thee
Calls back the lovely April of her prime:
So thou through windows of thine age shalt see
Despite of wrinkles this thy golden time.
But if thou live, remember'd not to be,
Die single, and thine image dies with thee.

IV.
Unthriftiness, why dost thou spend
Upon thyself thy beauty's legacy?
Nature's bequest nothing but doth lend,
And being frank she lends to those are free.
Then, beauteous niggard, why dost thou abuse
The bounteous largess given thee to give?
Profitless usurer, why dost thou use
So great a sum of suns, yet canst not live?
For having traffic with thyself alone,
Thou of thyself thy sweet self dost deceive.
Then how, when nature calls thee to be gone,
What acceptable audit canst thou leave?
Thy unused beauty must be tomb'd with thee,
Which, used, lives th'o' executor to be.

V.
Those hours, that with gentle work did frame
The lovely gaze where every eye doth dwell,
Will play the tyrants to the very same
And that unfair which fairly doth excel;
For never-resting time leads summer on
To hideous winter and confounds him there;
Sap check'd with frost and lusty leaves quite gone,
Beauty o'erthrown and bareness every where:
Then, were not summer's distillation left,
A liquid prisonry in walls of glass,
Beauty's effect with beauty were bereft,
Nor it nor no remembrance what it was;
But flowers distill'd, though they with winter meet,
Leese but their show; their substance still lives sweet.

SONNETS.

VI.
Then let not winter's ragged hand deface
In thee thy summer, ere thou be distill'd:
Make sweet some rial; treasure thou some place
With beauty's treasure, till it be self-kill'd.
That use is not forbidden usury,
Which happies those that pay the willing loan;
That's for thyself to breed another thee,
Or ten times happier, be it ten for one;
Ten times thyself were happier than thou art,
If ten of thine ten times refuged thee:
Then what could death do, if thou shouldst depart,
Leaving thee living in posterity?

Be not self-will'd, for thou art much too fair
To be death's conquest and make worms thine heir.

VII.
Lo! in the orient when the gracious light
Lifts up its burning head, each under eye
Doth homage to his new-appearing sight,
Serving with looks his sacred majesty;
And having clim'd the steep-up heavenly hill,
Resembling strong youth in his middle age,
Yet mortal looks adore his beauty still,
Attending on his golden pilgrimage;
But when from highmost pitch, with weary car,
Like feeble age, he reeleth from the day,
The eyes, 'fore duteous, now converted are
From his low tract and look another way:
So thou, thyself out-going in thy noon,
Unlook'd on diest, unless thou get a son.

Music to hear, why hear'st thou music sadly?
Sweets with sweets war not, joy delights in joy.
Why loveth thou that which thou receivest not gladly,
Or else receivest with pleasure thine annoy?
If the true concord of well-tuned sounds,
By unions married, do offend thine ear,
They do but sweetly chide thee, who confounds
In singleness the parts that thou shouldst bear.
Mark how one string, sweet husband to another,
Strikes each in each by mutual ordering,
Resembling sire and child and happy mother
Who all in one, one pleasing note do sing:
Whose speechless song, being many, seeming one,
Sings this to thee: 'Thou single wilt prove none.'

IX.
Is it for fear to wet a widow's eye
That thou consumest thyself in single life?
Ah! if thou issueless shalt hap to die,
The world will wail thee, like a makeless wife; The world will be thy widow and still weep
That thou no form of thee hast left behind,
When every private widow well may keep
By children's eyes her husband's shape in mind.
Look, what an unthrift in the world doth spend Shirts but his place, for still the world enjoys it;
But beauty's waste hath in the world an end,
And kept unused, the user so destroys it.
No love toward others in that bosom sits
That on himself such murderous shame com- mits.

X.
For shame! deny that thou bear'st love to any,
Who for thyself art so unprov'dient.
Grant, if thou wilt, thou art beloved of many,
But that thou none lov'est is most evident:
For thou art so posses'd with murderous hate
That 'gainst thyself thou stick'st not to conspire,
Seeking that beauteous roof to ruinate
Which to repair should be thy chief desire.
O, change thy thought, that I may change my mind!
Shall hate be fairer lodged than gentle love?
Be, as thy presence, gracious and kind,
Or to thyself at least kind-hearted prove:
Make thee another self, for love of me,
That beauty still may live in thine or thee.

XI.
As fast as thou shalt wane, so fast thou growest
In one of thine, from that which thou departest;
And that fresh blood which youngly thou bestowest
Thou mayst call thine when thou from youth convertest.
Herein lives wisdom, beauty and increase;
Without this, folly, age and cold decay:
If all were minded so, the times should cease
And threescore year would make the world away.
Let those whom Nature hath not made for store,
Harsh featureless and rude, barrenly perish:
Look, whom she best endow'd she gave the more;
Which bounteous gift thou shouldst in bounty cherish;
She carved thee for her seal, and meant thereby
Thou shouldst print more, not let that copy die.

XII.
When I do count the clock that tells the time,
And see the brave day sunk in hideous night;
When I behold the violet past prime,
And sable curls all silver'd o'er with white;
When lofty trees I see barren of leaves
Which erst from heat did canopy the herd,
And summer's green all girded up in sheaves
Borne on the bier with white and bristly beard,
Then of thy beauty do I question make,
That thou among the wastes of time must go,
Since sweets and beauties do themselves forsake
And die as fast as they see others grow;
And nothing 'gainst Time's scythe can make defence
Save breed, to brave him when he takes thee hence.

XIII.
O, that you were yourself! but, love, you are
No longer yours than you yourself here live:
Against this coming end you should prepare,
And your sweet semblance to some other give.
So should that beauty which you hold in lease
Find no determination; then you were Yourself again after yourself's decease,
When your sweet issue your sweet form should bear.
Who lets so fair a house fall to decay,
Which husbandry in honour might uphold
Against the stormy gusts of winter's day
And barren rage of death's eternal cold?
O, none but unufrits! Dear my love, you know
You had a father: let your son say so.
SONNETS.

XIV.
Not from the stars do I my judgement pluck;
And yet methinks I have astronomy,
But not to tell of good or evil luck,
Of plagues, of dears, or seasons' quality;
Nor can I fortunate to brief minutes tell,
Pointing to each his thunder, rain and wind,
Or say with princes if it shall go well,
By oft predict that I in heaven find:
But from thine eyes my knowledge I derive,
And constant stars, in them I read such art
As truth and beauty shall together thrive,
If from thyself to store thou wouldst convert;
Or else of thee this I prognosticate:
Thy end is truth's and beauty's doom and date.

XV.
When I consider every thing that grows
Holds in perfection but a little moment,
That this huge stage presenteth nought but shows
Whereon the stars in secret influence commote;
When I perceive that men as plants increase,
Cheered and check'd even by the self-same sky,
Vaunt in their youthful sap, at height decrease,
And wear their brave state out of memory;
Then the conceit of this inconstant stay
Sets you most rich in youth before my sight,
Where wasteful Time debateth with Decay,
To change your day of youth to sullied night;
And all in war with Time for love of you,
As he takes from you, I engrat you new.

XVI.
But wherefore do not you a mightier way
Make war upon this bloody tyrant, Time?
And fortify yourself in your decay
With means more blessed than my barren rhyme?
Now stand you on the top of happy hours,
And many maiden gardens yet unset
With virtuous wish would bear your living flowers,
Much liker than your painted counterfeit;
So should the lines of life that life repair,
Which this, Time's pencil, or my pupil pen,
Neither in inward worth nor outward fair,
Can make you live yourself in eyes of men.
To give away yourself keeps yourself still,
And you must live, drawn by your own sweet skill.

XVII.
Who will believe my verse in time to come,
If it were fill'd with your most high deserts?
Though yet, heaven knows, it is but as a tomb
Which hides your life and shows not half your parts.
If I could write the beauty of your eyes
And in fresh numbers number all your graces,
The age to come would say 'This poet lies;
Such heavenly touches ne'er touch'd earthly faces.'
So should my papers yellow'd with their age
Be scor'd like old men of less truth than tongue,
And your true rights be term'd a poet's rage
And stretched metre of an antique song:
But were some child of yours alive that time,
You should live twice; in it and in my rhyme.

XVIII.
Shall I compare thee to a summer's day?
Thou art more lovely and more temperate:
Rough winds do shake the darling buds of May,
And summer's lease hath all too short a date;
Sometime too hot the eye of heaven shines,
And often is his gold complexion dimm'd;
And every fair from fair sometime declines,
By chance or nature's changing course untrimm'd;
But thy eternal summer shall not fade,
Nor lose possession of that fair thou owest;
Nor shall Death brag thou wander'st in his shade,
When in eternal lines to time thou growest:
So long as men can breathe or eyes can see,
So long lives this and this gives life to thee.

XIX.
Devouring Time, blunt thou the lion's paws,
And make the earth devour her own sweet brood;
Pluck up the keen teeth from the fierce tiger's jaws,
And burn the long-lived phoenix in her blood;
Make glad and sorry seasons as thou fleets,
And do whatsoever thou wilt, swift-footed Time,
To the wide world and all her fading sweets;
But I forbid thee one most heinous crime;
O, carve not with thy hours my love's fair brow,
Nor draw no lines there with thine antique pen;
Him in thy course untainted do allow
For beauty's pattern to succeeding men.
Yet, do thy worst, old Time: despite thy wrong,
My love shall in my verse ever live young.

XX.
A woman's face with Nature's own hand painted
Hast thou, the master-mistress of my passion;
A woman's gentle heart, but not acquainted
With shifting change, as is false women's fashion;
An eye more bright than theirs, less false in rolling,
Gilding the object whereupon it gazeth;
A man in hue, all 'hues' in his controlling,
Which steals men's eyes and women's souls amazeth.
And for a woman wert thou first created;
Till Nature, as she wrought thee, fell a-doting,
And by addition me of thee defeated,
By adding one thing to my purpose nothing.
But since she prick'd thee out for women's pleasure,
Mine be thy love and thy love's use their treasure.

XXI.
So is it not with me as with that Muse
Stirr'd by a painted beauty to his verse,
Who heaven itself for ornament doth use
And every fair with his fair doth rehearse;
Making a couplement of proud compare,
With sun and moon, with earth and sea's rich gems,
With April's first-born flowers, and all things rare
That heaven's air in this huge rondere hem.
O, let me, true in love, but truly write,
And then believe me, my love is as fair
As any mother's child, though not so bright
As those gold candles fix'd in heaven's air:
Let them say more that like of hearsay well;
I will not praise that purpose not to sell.

XXII.
My glass shall not persuade me I am old,
So long as youth and thou art of one date;
But when in thee time's furrows I behold,
Then look I death my days should expiate.
For all that beauty that doth cover thee
Is but the seenly raiment of my heart,
Which in thy breast doth live, as thine in me:
How can I then be elder than thou art?
O, therefore, love, be of thyself so wary
As I, not for myself, but for thee will;
Bearing thy heart, which I will keep so chary
As tender nurse her babe from faring ill.
Presume not on thy heart when mine is slain;
Thou gavest me thine, not to give back again.

XXIII.

As an unperfect actor on the stage
Who with his fear is put beside his part,
Or some fierce thing replete with too much rage,
Whose strength's abundance weakens his own heart,
So I, for fear of trust, forget to say
The perfect ceremony of love's rite,
And in mine own love's strength seem to decay,
O'ercharged with burden of mine own love's might.
O, let my books be but the eloquence
And dumb presagers of my speaking breast,
Who plead for love and look for recompense
More than that tongue that more hath more express'd.
O, learn to read what silent love hath writ:
To hear with eyes belongs to love's fine wit.

XXIV.

Mine eye hath play'd the painter and hath stell'd
Thy beauty's form in table of my heart;
My body is the frame wherein 'tis held,
And perspective it is best painter's art.
For through the painter must you see his skill,
To find where your true image pictured lies;
Which in my bosom's shop is hanging still,
That hath his windows glazed with thine eyes.
Now see what good turns eyes for eyes have done:
Mine eyes have drawn thy shape, and thine for me
Are windows to my breast, where-through the sun
Delights to peep, to gaze therein on thee;
Yet eyes this cunning want to grace their art;
They draw but what they see, know not the heart.

XXV.

Let those who are in favour with their stars
Of public honour and proud titles boast,
Whilst I, whom fortune of such triumph bars,
Unlook'd for joy in that I honour most.
Great princes' favourites their fair leaves spread
But as the marigold at the sun's eye,
And in themselves their pride lies buried,
For at a frown they in their glory die.
The painful warrior famoused for fight,
After a thousand victories once foill'd
Is from the book of honour razed quite,
And all the rest forgot for which he toil'd:
Then happy I, that love and am beloved
Where I may not remove nor be removed.

XXVI.

Lord of my love, to whom in vassalage
Thy merit hath my duty strongly knit,
To thee I send this written embassage,
To witness duty, not to show my wit:
Duty so great, which wit so poor as mine
May make seem bare, in wanting words to show it,
But that I hope some good conceit of thine
In thy soul's thought, all naked, will bestow it;
Till whatsoever star that guides my moving
Points on me graciously with fair aspect
And puts apparel on my tatter'd loving,
To show me worthy of thy sweet respect:
Then may I dare to boast how I do love thee:
Till then not show my head where thou mayst prove me.

XXVII.

Weary with toil, I haste me to my bed,
The dear repose for limbs with travel tired;
But then begins a journey in my head,
To work my mind, when body's work expires:
For then my thoughts, from far where I abide,
Intend a zealous pilgrimage to thee,
And keep my drooping eyelids open wide,
Looking on darkness which the blind do see;
Save that my soul's imaginary sight
Presents thy shadow to my sightless view,
Which, like a jewel hung in glistening night,
Makes blackness beautify and her old face new.
Lo! thus, by day my limbs, by night my mind,
For thee and for myself no quiet find.

XXVIII.

How can I then return in happy plight,
That am debarr'd the benefit of rest?
When day's oppression is not eased by night,
And night's oppression is not eased by day, oppress'd?
And each, though enemies to either's reign,
Do in consent shake hands to torture me;
The one by toil, the other to complain
How far I toil, still farther off from thee.
I tell the day, to please him thou art bright
And dost him grace when clouds do blot the heaven:
So flatter I the swart-complexion'd night,
When sparkling stars twire not thou gild'st the even.
But day doth daily draw my sorrows longer
And night doth nightly make grief's strength seem stronger.

XXIX.

When, in disgrace with fortune and men's eyes,
I all alone beweep my outcast state
And trouble deaf heaven with my bootless cries
And look upon myself and curse my fate,
Wishing me like to one more rich in hope,
Featured like him, like him with friends possess'd,
Desiring this man's art and that man's scope,
With what I most enjoy contented least;
Yet in these thoughts myself most despising,
Haply I think on thee, and then my state,
Like to the lark at break of day arising
From sullen earth, sings hymns at heaven's gate;
For thy sweet love remember'd such wealth brings
That then I scorn to change my state with kings.

XXX.

When to the sessions of sweet silent thought
I summon up remembrance of things past,
I sigh the lack of many a thing I sought,
And with old woes new wail my dear time's waste:
Then can I drown an eye, unused to flow,
For precious friends hid in death's dateless night,
And weep a fresh love's long since cancell'd woe,
And moan the expense of many a vanish'd sight:
Then can I grieve at grievances foregone,
And heavily from woe to woe tell o'er
The sad account of fore-bemoaned moan,
Which I new pay as if not paid before.
But if the while I think on thee, dear friend,
All losses are restored and sorrows end.

xxx.
Thy bosom is endeared with all hearts,
Which I by lacking have supposed dead,
And there reigns love and all love's loving parts,
And all those friends which I thought buried.
How many a holy and obsequious tear
Hath dear religious love stol'n from mine eye.
As interest of the dead, which now appear
But things removed that hidden in thee lie!
Thou art the grave where buried love doth live,
Hung with the trophies of my lovers gone,
Who all their parts of me to thee did give;
That due of many now is thine alone:
Their images I loved I view in thee,
And thou, all they, hast all the all of me.

xxxii.
If thou survive my well-contented day,
When that churl Death my bones with dust shall cover,
And shalt by fortune once more re-survey
These poor rude lines of thy deceased lover,
Compare them with the bettering of the time,
And though they be outstripp'd by every pen,
Reserve them for my love, not for their rhyme,
Exceeded by the height of happier men.
O, then vouchsafe me but this loving thought:
Had my friend's Muse grown with this growing age,
A dearer birth than this his love had brought,
To march in ranks of better equipage:
But since he died and poets better prove,
Theirs for their style I'll read, his for his love.

xxxiii.
Full many a glorious morning have I seen
Flatter the mountain-tops with sovereign eye,
Kissing with golden face the meadows green,
Gilding pale streams with heavenly alchemy;-
Anon permit the basest clouds to ride
With ugly rack on his celestial face,
And from the forlorn world his visage hide,
Stealing unseen to west with this disgrace:
Even so my sun one early morn did shine
With all-triumphant splendour on my brow;
But out, alack! he was but one hour mine;
The region cloud hath mask'd him from me now.
Yet him for this my love no whit disdained;
Suns of the world may stain when heaven's sun Staineth.

xxxiv.
Why didst thou promise such a beauteous day
And make me travel forth without my cloak,
To let base clouds o'ertake me in my way,
Hiding thy bravery in their rotten smoke?
'Tis not enough that through the cloud thou break,
To dry the rain on my storm-beaten face,
For no man well of such a salve can speak
That heals the wound and cures not the disgrace:
Nor can thy shame give physic to my grief;
Though thou repent, yet I have still the loss:
The offender's sorrow lends but weak relief
To him that bears the strong offence's cross.
Ah! but those tears are pearl which thy love sheds,
And they are rich and ransom all ill deeds.

xxxv.
No more be grieved at that which thou hast done:
Roses have thorns, and silver foundations;
Clouds and eclipses stain both moon and sun,
And loathsome canker lives in sweetest bud.
All men make faults, and even I in this,
Authorizing thy trespass with compare,
Myself corrupting, salving thy amiss,
Excusing thy sins more than thy sins are;
For to thy sensual fault I bring in sense—
Thy adverse party is thy advocate—
And 'gainst myself a lawful plea commences;
Such civil war is in my love and hate
That I an accessory needs must be
To that sweet theft which sourly robs from me.

xxxvi.
Let me confess that we two must be twain,
Although our undivided loves are one:
So shall those blasts that do with me remain
Without thy help by me be borne alone.
In our two loves there is but one respect,
Though in our lives a separable spite,
Which though it alter not love's sole effect,
Yet doth it steal sweet hours from love's delight.
I may not evermore acknowledge thee,
Lest my bewailed guilt should do thee shame,
Nor thou with public kindness honour me,
Unless thou take that honour from thy name:
But do not so; I love thee in such sort
As, thou being mine, mine is thy good report.

xxxvii.
As a decrepit father takes delight
To see his active child do deeds of youth,
So I, made lame by fortune's dearest spite,
Take all my comfort of thy worth and truth.
For whether beauty, birth, or wealth, or wit,
Or any of these all, or all, or more,
Entitled in thy parts do crown'd sit,
I make my love engraven to this store:
So then I am not lame, poor, nor despised,
Whilst that this shadow doth such substance give
That I in thy abundance am sufficed
And by a part of all thy glory live.
Look, what is best, that best I wish in thee:
This wish I have; then ten times happy me!

xxxviii.
How can my Muse want subject to invent,
While thou dost breathe, that pour'st into my verse
Thine own sweet argument, too excellent
For every vulgar paper to rehearse?
O, give thyself the thanks, if aught in me
Worthy perusal stand against thy sight;
For who's so dumb that cannot write to thee,
When thou thyself dost give invention light?
Be thou the tenth Muse, ten times more in worth
Than those old nine which rhymers invoke;
And he that calls on thee, let him bring forth
Eternal numbers to outlive long date.
If my slight Muse do please these curious days,
The pain be mine, but thine shall be the praise.

XXXIX.
O, how thy worth with manners may I sing,
When thou art all the better part of me?
What can mine own praise to mine own self bring?
And is it thine when I praise thee?
Even for this let us divided live,
And our dear love lose name of single one,
That by this separation I may give
That due to thee which thou deservest alone.
O absence, what a torment wouldst thou prove,
Were it not thy sour leisure gave sweet leave
To entertain the time with thoughts of love,
Which time and thoughts so sweetly doth deceive,
And that thou teachest how to make one twain,
By praising him here who doth hence remain!

XL.
Take all my loves, my love, yea, take them all;
What hast thou then more than thou hadst before?
No love, my love, that thou mayst true love call;
All mine was thine before thou hadst this more.
Then if for my love thou my love receivest,
I cannot blame thee for my love thou usest;
But yet be blamed, if thou thyself deceivest
By wilful taste of what thyself refusest.
I do forgive thy robbery, gentle thief,
Although thou steal thee all my poverty;
And yet, love knows, it is a greater grief
To bear love's wrong than hate's known injury.
Libevious grace, in whom all ill well shows,
Kill me with spites; yet we must not be foes.

XLI.
Those pretty wrongs that liberty commits,
When I am sometime absent from thy heart,
Thy beauty and thy years full well betits,
For still temptation follows where thou art.
Gentle thou art and therefore to be won,
Beauteous thou art, therefore to be assailed;
And when a woman woos, what woman's son
Will sourly leave her till she have prevailed?
Ay me! but yet thou mightst my seat forbear,
And chide thy beauty and thy straying youth,
Who lead thee in their riot even there
Where thou art forced to break a twofold truth,
Hers, by thy beauty tempting her to thee,
Thine, by thy beauty being false to me.

XLII.
That thou hast her, it is not all my grief,
And yet it may be said I loved her dearly;
That she hath thee, is of my wailing chief,
A loss in love that touches me more nearly.
Loving offenders, thus I will excuse ye;
Thou dost love her, because thou know'st I love her;
And for my sake even so doth she abuse me,
Suffering my friend for my sake to approve her.
If I lose thee, my loss is my love's gain,
And losing her, my friend hath found that loss;
Both find each other, and I lose both twain,
And both for my sake lay on me this cross;
But here's the joy; my friend and I are one;
Sweet flattery! then she loves but me alone.

XLIIL.
When most I wink, then do mine eyes best see,
For all the day they view things unrespected;
But when I sleep, in dreams they look on thee,
And darkly bright are bright in dark directed.
Then thou, whose shadow shadows doth make bright,
How wouldst thy shadow's form form happy show
To the clear day with thy much clearer light,
When to unseeing eyes thy shade shines so!
How would, I say, mine eyes be blessed made
By looking on thee in the living day,
When in dead night thy fair imperfect shade
Through heavy sleep on sightless eyes doth stay!
All days are nights to see till I see thee,
And nights bright days when dreams do show thee me.

XLIV.
If the dull substance of my flesh were thought,
Injurious distance should not stop my way;
For then despite of space I would be brought,
From limits far remote, where thou dost stay.
No matter then although my foot did stand
Upon the farthest earth removed from thee;
And nimble thought can jump both sea and land
As soon as think the place where he would be.
But, ah! I thought kills me that I am not thought,
To leap large lengths of miles when thou art gone,
But that so much of earth and water wrought
I must attend time's leisure with my moan,
Receiving nought by elements so slow
But heavy tears, badges of either's woe.

XLV.
The other two, slight air and purging fire,
Are both with thee, wherever I abide;
The first my thought, the other my desire,
These present-absent with swift motion slide.
For when these quicker elements are gone
In tender embassy of love to thee,
My life, being made of four, with two alone
Sinks down to death, oppress'd with melancholy;
Until life's composition be recured
By those swift messengers return'd from thee,
Who even but now come back again, assured
Of thy fair health, recounting it to me:
This told, I joy; but then no longer glad,
I send them back again and straight grow sad.

XLVI.
Mine eye and heart are at a mortal war
How to divide the conquest of thy sight;
Mine eye my heart thy picture's sight would bar,
My heart mine eye the freedom of that right.
My heart doth plead that thou in him dost lie,—
A closet never piercèd with crystal eyes—
But the defendant doth that plea deny
And says in him thy fair appearance lies.
To 'cide this title is impaneled
A quest of thoughts, all tenants to the heart,
And by their verdict is determined
The clear eye's moiety and the dear heart's part:
As thus; mine eye's due is thy outward part,
And my heart's right thy inward love of heart.

XLVII.
Betwixt mine eye and heart a league is took,
And each doth good turns now unto the other:
XLVII.

When that mine eye is famish'd for a look,
Or heart in love with sighs himself doth smother,
With my love's picture then my eye doth feast
And to the painted banquet bids my heart;
Another time mine eye is my heart's guest
And in his thoughts of love doth share a part:
So, either by thy picture or my love,
Thyself away present still with me;
For thou not farther than my thoughts canst move,
And I am still with them and they with thee;
Or, if they sleep, thy picture in my sight
Awakes my heart to heart's and eye's delight.

XLIX.

How careful was I, when I took my way,
Each trifle under trust to bars to thrust,
That to my use it might unused stay.

From hands of falsehood, in sure wards of trust!
But thou, to whom my jewels trifles are,
Most worthy comfort, now my greatest grief,
Thou, best of dearest and mine only care,
Art left the prey of every vulgar thief.

Thee have I not lock'd up in any chest,
Save where thou art not, though I feel thou art,
Within the gentle closure of my breast,
From whence at pleasure thou mayst come and part;
And even thence thou wilt be stol'n, I fear,
For truth proves thiefish for a prize so dear.

L.

Against that time, if ever that time come,
When I shall see thee frown on my defects,
When as thy love hath cast his utmost sum,
Call'd to that audit by advised respects;
Against that time when thou shalt strangely pass
And scarcely greet me with that sun, thine eye,
When love, converted from the thing it was,
Shall reasons find of settled gravity,—
Against that time do I enconce me here
Within the knowledge of mine own desert,
And this my hand against myself uprear,
To guard the lawful reasons on thy part:
To leave poor me thou hast the strength of laws,
Since why to love I allege no cause.

LII.

Then should I spur, though mounted on the wind;
In winged speed no motion shall I know;
Then can no horse with my desire keep pace;
Therefore desire, of perfect love being made,
Shall neigh—no dull flesh—in his fiery race;
But love, for love, thus shall excuse my jade;
Since from thee going he went wilful-slow,
Towards thee I'll run, and give him leave to go.

LIII.

Is.

So am I as the rich, whose blessed key
Can bring him to his sweet up-looked treasure,
The which he will not every hour survey,
For blunting the fine point of seldom pleasure.

Therefore are feats so solemn and so rare,
Since, seldom coming, in the long year set,
Like stones of worth they thinly placed are,
Or captain jewels in the carcanet.

So is the time that keeps you as my chest,
Or as the wardrobe which the robe doth hide,
To make some special instant special best,
By new unfolding his imprison'd pride.

Blessed are you, whose worthiness gives scope,
Being had, to triumph, being lack'd, to hope.

LIV.

What is your substance, whereof are you made,
That millions of strange shadows on you tend?
Since every one hath, every one, one shade,
And you, but one, can every shadow lend.

Describe Adonis, and the counterfeit
Is poorly imitated after you:
On Helen's cheek all art of beauty set,
And you in Grecian tires are painted new;
Speak of the spring and poison of the year;
The one doth shadow of your beauty show,
The other as your bounty doth appear;
And you in every blessed shape we know.

In all external grace you have some part,
But you like none, none you, for constant heart.

LV.

O, how much more doth beauty beauteous seem
By that sweet ornament which truth doth give!
The rose looks fair, but fairer we it deem
For that sweet odour which doth in it live.
The canker-blooms have full as deep a dye
As the perfumed tincture of the roses,
Hang on such thorns and play as wantonly
When summer's breath their masked buds disclose:
But, for their virtue only is their show,
They live unwoo'd and unrespected fade,
Die to themselves. Sweet roses do not so;
Of their sweet deaths are sweetest odours made:
And so of you, beauteous and lovely youth,
When that shall fade, my verse distills your truth.

LV.

Not marble, nor the gilded monuments
Of princes, shall outlive this powerful rhyme;
But you shall shine more bright in these contents
Than unswept stone besmeard with sluttish time.
When wasteful war shall statues overturn,
And broils root out the work of masonry,
Nor Mars his sword nor war's quick fire shall burn
The living record of your memory.
SONNETS.

'Gainst death and all-oblivious enmity Shall you pace forth; your praise shall still find room
Even in the eyes of all posterity
That wear this world out to the ending doom.
So, till the judgement that yourself arise,
You live in this, and dwell in lovers' eyes.

LVI.
Sweet love, renew thy force; be it not said
Thy edge should blunter be than appetite,
Which but to-day by feeding is allay'd,
To-morrow sharpen'd in his former might:
So, love, be thou; although to-day thou fill
Thy hungry eyes even till they wink with fullness,
To-morrow see again, and do not kill
The spirit of love with a perpetual dullness.
Let this sad interim like the ocean be
Which parts the shore, where two contracted new Come daily to the banks, that, when they see Return of love, more blest may be the view:
Else call it winter, which being full of care
Makes summer's welcome thrice more wish'd, more rare.

LVII.
Being your slave, what should I do but tend Upon the hours and times of your desire?
I have no precious time at all to spend,
Nor services to do, till you require.
Nor dare I chide the world-without-end hour
Whilst I, my sovereign, watch the clock for you,
Nor think the bitterness of absence sour
When you have bid your servant once adieu;
Nor dare I question with my jealous thought
Where you may be, or your affairs suppose,
But, like a sad slave, stay and think of nought
Save, where you are how happy you make those.
So true a fool is love that in your will,
Though you do any thing, he thinks no ill.

LVIII.
That god forbid that made me first your slave,
I should in thought control your times of pleasure,
Or at your hand the account of hours to crave,
Being your vassal, bound to stay your leisure!
O, let me suffer, being at your beck,
The imprison'd absence of your liberty;
And patience, tame to suffrance, bide each check,
Without accusing you of injury.
Be where you list, your charter is so strong
That you yourself may privilege your time
To what you will; to you it doth belong
Yourself to pardon of self-doing crime.
I am to wait, though waiting so he hell;
Not blame your pleasure, be it ill or well.

LIX.
If there be nothing new, but that which is Hath been before, how are our brains beguiled,
Which, labouring for invention, bear amiss
The second burthen of a former child!
O, that record could with a backward look,
Even of five hundred courses of the sun,
Show me your image in some antique book,
Since mind at first in character was done!
That I might see what the old world could say
To this composed wonder of your frame;
Whether we are mended, or whether better they,
Or whether revolution be the same.
O, sure I am, the wis of former days
To subjects worse have given admiring praise.

LX.
Like as the waves make towards the pebbled shore,
So do our minutes hasten to their end;
Each changing place with that which goes before,
In sequent toil all forwards do contend.
Nativity, once in the main of light,
Crawls to maturity, wherewith being crown'd,
Crooked eclipses gainst his glory fight,
And Time that gave doth now his gift confound.
Time doth transfix the flourish set on youth
And delves the parallels in beauty's brow,
Feeds on the rarities of nature's truth,
And nothing stands but for his scythe to mow:
And yet to times in hope my verse shall stand,
Praising thy worth, despite his cruel hand.

LXI.
Is it thy will thy image should keep open
My heavy eyelids to the weary night?
Dost thou desire my slumber should be broken,
While shadows like to thee do mock my sight?
Is it thy spirit that thou send'st from thee
So far from home into my deeds to pry,
To find out shames and idle hours in me,
The scope and tenour of thy jealousy?
O, no! thy love, though much, is not so great;
It is my love that keeps mine eye awake;
Mine own true love that doth my rest defeat,
To play the watchman ever for thy sake;
For thee watch I whilst thou dost wake elsewhere;
From me far off, with others all too near.

LXII.
Sin of self-love possesseth all mine eye
And all my soul and all my every part;
And for this sin there is no remedy,
It is so grounded inward in my heart,
Methinks no face so gracious is as mine,
No shape so true, no truth of such account;
And for myself mine own worth do define,
As I all other in all worths surmount.
But when my glass shows me myself indeed,
Beautied and chopp'd with tanned antiquity,
Mine own self-love quite contrary I read;
Self so self-loving were iniquity.
'Tis thee, myself, that for myself I praise,
Painting my age with beauty of thy days.

LXIII.
Against my love shall be, as I am now,
With Time's injurious hand crush'd and o'erworn;
When hours have drain'd his blood and fill'd his brow
With lines and wrinkles; when his youthful morn
Hath travell'd on to age's steepy night,
And all those beauties whereof now he's king
Are vanishing or vanish'd out of sight,
Stealing away the treasure of his spring;
For such a time do I now fortify
Against confounding age's cruel knife,
That he shall never cut from memory
My sweet love's beauty, though my lover's life:
His beauty shall in these black lines be seen,
And they shall live, and he in them still green.

LXIV.

When I have seen by Time's fell hand defaced
The rich proud cost of outworn buried age;
When sometime lofty towers I see down-razed
And brass eternal slave to mortal rage;
When I have seen the hungry ocean gain
Advantage on the kingdom of the shore,
And the firm soil win of the watery main,
Increasing store with loss and loss with store;
When I have seen such interchange of state,
Or state itself confounded to decay;
Ruin hath taught me thus to ruminate,
That Time will come and take my love away.
This thought is as a death, which cannot choose
But weep to have that which it fears to lose.

LXV.

Since brass, nor stone, nor earth, nor boundless sea,
But sad mortality o'er-sways their power,
How with this rage shall beauty hold a plea,
Whose action is no stronger than a flower?
O, how shall summer's honey breath hold out
Against the wreckful siege of battering days,
When rocks impregnable are not so stout,
Nor gates of steel so strong, but Time decays?
O fearful meditation! where, alack,
Shall Time's best jewel from Time's chest lie hid?
Or what strong hand can hold his swift foot back?
Or who his spoil of beauty can forbid?
O, none, unless this miracle have might,
That in black ink my love may still shine bright.

LXVI.

Tired with all these, for restful death I cry,
As, to behold desert a beggar born,
And needy nothing trimm'd in jollity,
And purest faith unhappily forsworn,
And gilded honour shamefully misplaced,
And maiden virtue rudely strumpeted,
And right perfection wrongfully disgraced,
And strength by limping sway disabled,
And art made tongue-tied by authority,
And folly doctor-like controlling skill,
And simple truth miscall'd simplicity,
And captive good attending captain ill:
Tired with all these, from these would I be gone,
Save that, to die, I leave my love alone.

LXVII.

Ah! wherefore with infection should he live,
And with his presence grace impiety,
That sin by him advantage should achieve
And lace itself with his society?
Why should false painting imitate his cheek
And steal dead seeing of his living hue?
Why should poor beauty indirectly seek Roses of shadow, since his rose is true?
Why should he live, now Nature bankrupt is,
Beggar'd of blood to blush through lively veins?
For she hath no exchequer now but his,
And, proud of many, live upon his gains.
O, him she stores, to show what wealth she had
In days long since, before these last so bad.

LXVIII.

Thus is his cheek the map of days outworn,
When beauty lived and died as flowers do now,
Before these bastard signs of fair were born,
Or durst inhabit on a living brow;
Before the golden tresses of the dead,
The right of sepulchres, were shorn away,
To live a second life on second head;
Ere beauty's dead fleece made another gay:
In him those holy antique hours are seen,
Without all ornament, itself and true,
Making no summer of another's green,
Robbing no old to dress his beauty new;
And him as for a map doth Nature store,
To show false Art what beauty was of yore.

LXIX.

Those parts of thee that the world's eye doth view
Want nothing that the thought of hearts can mend;
All tongues, the voice of souls, give thee that due,
Uttering bare truth, even so as foes commend.
Thy outward thus with outward praise is crown'd;
But those same tongues that give thee so thine own
In other accents do this praise confound
By seeing farther than the eye hath shown.
They look into the beauty of thy mind,
And that, in guess, they measure by thy deeds:
Then, churls, their thoughts, although their eyes were kind,
To thy fair flower add the rank smell of weeds:
But why thy odour matcheth not thy show,
The solve is this, that thou dost common grow.

LXX.

That thou art blamed shall not be thy defect,
For slander's mark was ever yet the fair;
The ornament of beauty is suspect,
A crow that flies in heaven's sweetest air.
So thou be good, slander doth but approve
Thy worth the greater, being wool'd of time;
For canker vice the sweetest buds doth love,
And thou present'st a pure unstained prime.
Thou hast pass'd by the ambush of young days,
Either not assail'd or victor being charg'd;
Yet this thy praise cannot be so thy praise,
To tie up envy evermore entwined;
If some suspect of ill mask'd not thy show,
Then thou alone kingdoms of hearts shouldst owe.

LXXI.

No longer mourn for me when I am dead
Than you shall hear the surly sullen bell
Give warning to the world that I am fled
From this vile world, with vilest worms to dwell.
Nay, if you read this line, remember not
The hand that writ it; for I love you so
That I in your sweet thoughts would be forgot
If thinking on me then should make you woe.
O, if, I say, you look upon this verse
When I perhaps compounded am with clay,
Do not so much as my poor name rehearse,
But let your love even with my life decay,
Lest the wise world should look into your moan
And mock you with me after I am gone.

LXXII.

O, lest the world should task you to recite
What merit lived in me, that you should love
SONNETS.

After my death, dear love, forget me quite,
For you in me can nothing worthy prove;
Unless you devise some virtuous lie,
To do more for me than mine own desert,
And hang more praise upon deceased I
Than niggard truth would willingly impart:
O, lest your true love may seem false in this,
That you for love speak well of me untrue,
My name be buried where my body is,
And live no more to shame nor me nor you.
For I am shamed by that which I bring forth,
And so should you, to love things nothing worth.

LXXII.

That time of year thou mayst in me behold
When yellow leaves, or none, or few, do hang Upon those boughs which shake against the cold,
Bare ruin’d choirs, where late the sweet birds sang.
In me thou see’st the twilight of such day
As after sunset fadeth in the west,
Which by and by black night doth take away,
Death’s second self, that seals up all in rest.
In me thou see’st the glowing of such fire
That on the ashes of his youth doth lie,
As the death-bed whereon it must expire
Consumed with that which it was nourish’d by.
This thou perceivest, which makes thy love more strong,
To love that well which thou must leave ere long.

LXXIII.

But be contented: when that fell arrest
Without all bail shall carry me away,
My life hath in this line some interest,
Which for memorial still with thee shall stay.
And thou shalt find them, which thou dost review
The very part was consecrate to thee:
The earth can have but earth, which is his due;
My spirit is thine, the better part of me:
So then thou hast but lost the dregs of life,
The prey of worms, my body being dead,
The coward conquest of a wretch’s knife,
Too base of thee to be remember’d.
The worth of that is that which it contains,
And that is this, and this with thee remains.

LXXIV.

So are you to my thoughts as food to life,
Or as sweet-season’d showers are to the ground;
And for the peace of you I hold such store
As ‘twixt a miser and his wealth is found.
Now proud as an enjoyer and anon
Doubting the fitching age will steal his treasure,
Now counting best to be with you alone,
Then better’d that the world may see my pleasure;
Sometime all full with feasting on your sight
And by and by clean starved for a look;
Possessing or pursuing no delight,
Save what is had or must from you be took.
Thus do I pine and surfeit day by day,
Or glutoning on all, or all away.

LXXV.

Why is my verse so barren of new pride,
So far from variation or quick change?
Why with the time do I not glance aside
To new-found methods and to compounds strange?
Why write I still all one, ever the same,
And keep invention in a noted weed,
That every word doth almost tell my name,
Showing their birth and where they did proceed?
O, know, sweet love, I always write of you,
And you and love are still my argument;
So all my best is dressing old words new,
Spending again what is already spent;
For as the sun is daily new and old,
So is my love still telling what is told.

LXXVII.

Thy glass will show thee how thy beauties wear,
Thy dial how thy precious minutes waste;
The vacant leaves thy mind’s imprint will bear,
And of this book this learning mayst thou taste.
The wrinkles which thy glass will truly show
Of mouthed graves will give thee memory;
Thou by thy dial’s shady stealth mayst know
Time’s thievish progress to eternity.
Look, what thy memory can not contain Commit to these waste blanks, and thou shalt find
Those children nursed, deliver’d from thy brain,
To take a new acquaintance of thy mind.
These offices, so oft as thou wilt look,
Shall profit thee and much enrich thy book.

LXXVIII.

So oft have I invoked thee for my Muse
And found such fair assistance in my verse
As every alien pen hath got my use
And under thee their poetry disperse.
Thine eyes that taught the dumb on high to sing
And heavy ignorance aloft to fly
Have added feathers to the learned’s wing
And given grace a double majesty.
Yet be most proud of that which I compile,
Whose influence is thine and born of thee:
In others’ works thou dost but mend the style,
And arts with thy sweet graces graced be;
But thou art all my art and dost advance
As high as learning my rude ignorance.

LXXIX.

Whilst I alone did call upon thy aid,
My verse alone had all thy gentle grace,
But now my gracious numbers are decay’d
And my sick Muse doth give another place.
I grant, sweet love, thy lovely argument
Deserves the travail of a worthier pen,
Yet what of thee thy poet doth invent
He robs thee of and pays it thee again.
He lends thee virtue and he stole that word
From thy behaviour; beauty doth he give
And found it in thy cheek; he can afford
No praise to thee but what in thee doth live.
Then thank him not for that which he doth say,
Since what he owes thee thou thyself dost pay.

LXXX.

O, how I faint when I of you do write,
Knowing a better spirit doth use your name,
And in the praise thereof spends all his might,
To make me tongue-tied, speaking of your fame!
But since your worth, wide as the ocean is,
The humble as the proudest sail doth bear,
My saucy bark inferior far to his
On your broad main doth willingly appear.
SONNETS.

Your shallowest help will hold me up afloat,
Whilst he upon your soundless deep doth ride;
Or, being wreak'd, I am a worthless boat,
He of tall building and of goodly pride:
Then if he thrive and I be cast away,
The worst was this; my love was my decay.

Or I shall live your epitaph to make,
Or you survive when I in earth am rotten;
From hence your memory death cannot take,
Although in me each part will be forgotten.
Your name from hence immortal life shall have,
Though I, once gone, to all the world must die:
The earth can yield me but a common grave,
When you entombed in men's eyes shall lie.
Your monument shall be my gentle verse,
Which eyes not yet created shall o'er-read,
And tongues to be your being shall rehearse
When all the breathers of this world are dead;
You still shall live—such virtue hath my pen—
Where breath most breathes, even in the mouths of men.

I grant thou wert not married to my Muse
And therefore mayst without attain't o'erlook
The dedicated words which writers use
Of their fair subject, blessing every book.
Thou art as fair in knowledge as in hue,
Finding thy worth a limit past my praise,
And therefore art enforced to seek anew
Some fresher stamp of the time-bettering days.
And do so, love; yet when they have devised
What strained touches rhetoric can lend,
Thou truly fair wilt truly sympathiz'd
In true plain words by thy true-telling friend;
And their gross painting might be better used
Where cheeks need blood; in thee it is abused.

I never saw that you did painting need
And therefore to your fair no painting set;
I found, or thought I found, you did exceed
The barren tender of a poet's debt;
And therefore have I slept in your report,
That you yourself being extant well might show
How far a modern quill doth come too short,
Speaking of worth, what worth in you doth grow.
This silence for my sin you did impute,
Which shall be most my glory, being dumb;
For I impair not beauty being mute,
When others would give life and bring a tomb.
There lives more life in one of your fair eyes
Than both your poets can in praise devise.

Who is it that says most? which can say more
Than this rich praise, that you alone are you?
In whose confine immured is the store
Which should example where your equal grew.
Lean penury within that pen doth dwell
That to his subject lends not some small glory;
But he that writes of you, if he can tell
That you are you, so dignifies his story,
Let him but copy what in you is writ,
Not making worse what nature made so clear,
And such a counterpart shall fame his wit,
Making his style admired every where.

You to your beauteous blessings add a curse,
Being fond on praise, which makes your praises worse.

My tongue-tied Muse in manners holds her still,
While comments of your praise, richly compiled,
Reserve their character with golden quill
And precious phrase by all the Muses filed,
I think good thoughts whilst other write good words,
And like unletter'd clerk still cry 'Amen'
To every hymn that able spirit affords
In polish'd form of well-refined pen.
Hearing you praised, I say 'Tis so, 'tis true,
And to the most of praise add something more;
But that is in my thought, whose love to you,
Though words come hindmost, holds his rank before.
Then others for the breath of words respect,
Me for my dumb thoughts, speaking in effect.

Was it the proud full sail of his great verse,
Bound for the prize of all too precious you,
That did my ripe thoughts in my brain inhearse,
Making their tomb the womb wherein they grew?
Was it his spirit, by spirits taught to write,
Above the mortal pitch, that struck me dead?
No, neither he, nor his compers by night,
Giving him aid, my verse astonished.
He, nor that affable familiar ghost
Which nightly gulls him with intelligence,
As victors of my silence cannot boast;
I was not sick of any fear from thence,
But when your countenance fill'd up his line,
Then lack'd I matter; that enfeebled mine.

Farewell! thou art too dear for my possessing,
And like enough thou know'st thy estimate;
The charter of thy worth gives thee releasing;
My bonds in thee are all determinate.
For how do I hold thee but by thy granting?
And for that riches where is my deserving?
The cause of this fair gift in me is wanting,
And so my patent back again is swerving.
Thyself thou gavest, thy own worth then not knowing,
Or me, to whom thou gavest it, else mistaking;
So thy great gift, upon misprision growing,
Comes home again; on better judgement making;
Thus have I had thee, as a dream doth flatter,
In sleep a king, but waking no such matter.

When thou shalt be disposed to set me light
And place my merit in the eye of scorn,
Upon thy side against myself I'll fight
And prove thee virtuous, though thou art forsworn.
With mine own weakness being best acquainted,
Upon thy part I can set down a story
Of faults conceal'd, wherein I am attained,
That thou in losing me shalt win much glory:
And I by this will be a gainer too;
For bending all my loving thoughts on thee,
The injuries that to myself I do,
Doing thee vantage, double-vantage me.
LXXXIX.
Say that thou didst forsake me for some fault,
And I will comment upon that offence;
Speak of my lameness, and I straight will halt,
Against thy reasons making no defence.
Thou canst not, love, disgrace me half so ill,
To set a form upon desired change,
As I'll myself disgrace: knowing thy will,
I will acquaintance strangle and look strange,
Be absent from thy walks, and in my tongue
Thy sweet beloved name no more shall dwell,
Lest I, too much profane, should do it wrong.
And haply of myself I'll vow debate,
For I must ne'er love him whom thou dost hate.

XC.
Then hate me when thou wilt; if ever, now;
Now, while the world is bent my deeds to cross,
Join with the spite of fortune, make me bow,
And do not drop in for an after-loss:
Ah, do not, when my heart hath 'scape this sorrow,
Come not in the rearward of a conquer'd woe;
Give not a windy night a rainy morrow,
To linger out a purpose overthrown.
If thou wilt leave me, do not leave me last,
When other petty griefs have done their spite,
But in the onset come; so shall I taste
At first the very worst of fortune's might,
And other strains of woe, which now seem woe,
Compared with loss of thee will not seem so.

XCI.
Some glory in their birth, some in their skill,
Some in their wealth, some in their bodies' force,
Some in their garments, though new-fangled ill,
Some in their hawks and hounds, some in their horse;
And every humour hath his adjunct pleasure,
Wherein it finds a joy above the rest:
But these particulars are not my measure;
All these I better in one general best.
Thy love is better than high birth to me,
Richer than wealth, prouder than garments' cost,
Of more delight than hawks or horses be;
And having thee, of all men's pride I boast:
Wretched in this alone, that thou mayst take
All this away and me most wretched make.

XCII.
But do thy worst to steal thyself away,
For term of life thou art assured mine,
And life no longer than thy love will stay,
For it depends upon that love of thine.
Then need I not to fear the worst of wrongs,
When in the least of them my life hath end.
I see a better state to me belongs
Than that which on thy humour doth depend:
Thou canst not vex me with inconsistent mind,
Since that my life on thy revolv doth lie.
O, what a happy title do I find,
Happy to have thy love, happy to die!
But what's so blessed-fair that fears no blot?
Thou mayst be false, and yet I know it not.

XCVIII.
So shall I live, supposing thou art true,
Like a deceived husband; so love's face
May still seem fair, though alter'd; new;
Thy looks with me, thy heart in other place;
For there can live no hatred in thine eye,
Therefore in that I cannot know thy change.
In many's looks the false heart's history
Is writ in moods and frowns and wrinkled strange,
But heaven in thy creation did decree
That in thy face sweet love should ever dwell;
Whate'er thy thoughts or thy heart's workings be,
Thy looks should nothing thence but sweetness tell.
How like Eve's apple doth thy beauty grow,
If thy sweet virtue answer not thy show!

XCV.
They that have power to hurt and will do none,
That do not do the thing they most do show,
Who, moving others, are themselves as stone,
Unmoved, cold, and to temptation slow,
They rightly do inherit heaven's graces,
And husband nature's riches from expense;
They are the lords and owners of their faces,
Others but stewards of their excellence.
The summer's flower is to the summer sweet,
Though to itself it only live and die,
But if that flower with base infection meet,
The basest weed outbraves his dignity:
For sweetest things turn sourest by their deeds;
Lilies that fester smell far worse than weeds.

XCVI.
How sweet and lovely dost thou make the shame
Which, like a canker in the fragrant rose,
Doth spot the beauty of thy budding name!
O, in what sweets dost thou thy sins enclose!
That tongue that tells the story of thy days,
Making lascivious comments on thy sport,
Cannot disgrace but in a kind of praise;
Naming thy name blesses an ill report.
O, what a mansion have those vices got
Which for their habitation chose out thee,
Where beauty's veil doth cover every blot,
And all things turn to fair that eyes can see!
Take heed, dear heart, of this large privilege,
The hardest knife ill-used doth lose his edge.

XCVII.
Some say thy fault is youth, some wantonness;
Some say thy grace is youth and gentle sport;
Both grace and faults are loved of more and less;
Thou makest faults graces that to thee resort.
As on the finger of a crowned queen
The basest jewel will be well esteem'd,
So are those errors that in thee are seen
To truths translated and for true things deem'd.
How many lambs might the stern wolf betray,
If like a lamb he could his looks translate!
How many gazers mightst thou lead away,
If thou wouldst use the strength of all thy state!
But do not so; I love thee in such sort
As, thou being mine, mine is thy good report.

XCVIII.
How like a winter hath my absence been
From thee, the pleasure of the fleeting year!

<td>XCVIII.</td>
<td>What freezings have I felt, what dark days seen! What old December's bareness every where! And yet this time removed was summer's time, The seeming autumn, big with rich increase, Bearing the wanton burthen of the prime, Like widow'd wombs after their lords' decease; Yet this abundant issue seem'd to me But hope of orphans and unfather'd fruit; For summer and his pleasures wait on thee, And, thou away, the very birds are mute; Or, if they sing, 'tis with so dull a cheer That leaves look pale, dreading the winter's near.</td>

<td>From you have I been absent in the spring, When proud-pied April dress'd in all his trim Hath put a spirit of youth in every thing, That heavy Saturn laugh'd and leap'd with him. Yet nor the lyes of birds nor the sweet smell Of different flowers in odour and in hue Could make me any summer's story tell, Or from their proud lap pluck them where they grew; Nor did I wonder at the lily's white, Nor praise the deep vermilion in the rose; They were but sweet, but figures of delight, Drawn after you, you pattern of all those. Yet seem'd it winter still, and, you away, As with your shadow I with these did play:</td>

<td>The forward violet thus did I chide: Sweet thief, whence didst thou steal thy sweet That smells, If not from my love's breath? The purple pride Which on thy soft cheek for complexion dwells In my love's veins thou hast too grossly dyed. The lily I condemned for thy hand, And buds of marjoram had stol'n thy hair: The roses fearfully on thorns did stand, One blushing shame, another white despair; A third, nor red nor white, had stol'n of both And to his robbery had annex'd thy breath; But, for his theft, in pride of all his growth A vengeful canker eat him up to death. More flowers I noted, yet I none could see But sweet or colour it had stol'n from thee.</td>

<td>Where art thou, Muse, that thou forget'st so long To speak of that which gives thee all thy might? Spend'st thou thy fury on some worthless song, Darkening thy power to lend base subjects light? Return, forgetful Muse, and straight redeem In gentle numbers time so idly spent; Sing to the ear that doth thy lay esteem And gives thy pen both skill and argument. Rise, resty Muse, my love's sweet face survey, If Time have any wrinkle graven there; If any, be a satire to decay, And make Time's spoils despised everywhere. Give my love fame faster than Time wastes life; So thou prevent'st his scythe and crooked knife.</td>

<td>CI.</td>
<td>Both truth and beauty on my love depends; So dost thou too, and therein dignified. Make answer, Muse: wilt thou not haply say 'Truth needs no colour, with his colour fix'd; Beauty no pencil, beauty's truth to lay; But best is best, if never intermix'd? Because he needs no praise, wilt thou be dumb? Excuse not silence so; for't lies in thee To make him much outlive a gilded tomb, And to be praised of ages yet to be. Then do thy office, Muse; I teach thee how To make him seem long hence as he shows now.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>CII.</td>
<td>My love is strengthen'd, though more weak in seeming; I love not less, though less the show appear; That love is merchandized whose rich esteeming The owner's tongue doth publish every where. Our love was new and then but in the spring When I was wont to greet it with my lays, As Philemon in summer's front doth sing And stops her pipe in growth of riper days: Not that the summer is less pleasant now Than when her mournful hymns did hush the night, But that wild music burthen's every bough And sweets grown common lose their dear delight. Therefore like her I sometime hold my tongue, Because I would not dull you with my song.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>CIV.</td>
<td>Alack, what poverty my Muse brings forth, That having such a scope to show her pride, The argument all bare is of more worth Than when it hath my added praise beside! O, blame me not, if I no more can write! Look in your glass, and there appears a face That over-goes my blunt invention quite, Dulling my lines and doing me disgrace. Were it not sinful then, striving to mend, To mar the subject that before was well? For to no other pass my verses tend Than of your graces and your gifts to tell; And more, much more, than in my verse can sit Your own glass shows you when you look in it.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>CIV.</td>
<td>To me, fair friend, you never can be old, For as you were when first your eye I eyed, Such seems your beauty still. Three winters cold Have from the forests shook three summer's pride. Three beauteous springs to yellow autumn turn'd In process of the seasons have I seen, Three April perfumes in three hot Junes burn'd, Since first I saw you fresh, which yet are green. Ah! yet doth beauty, like a dial-hand, Steal from his figure and no pace perceived; So your sweet hue, which methinks still doth stand, Hath motion and mine eye may be deceived: For fear of which, hear this, thou age unbrid: Ere you were born was beauty's summer dead.</td>

Kind is my love to-day, to-morrow kind,
Still constant in a wondrous excellence;

Therefore my verse to constancy confined,
One thing expressing, leaves out difference.

'Fair, kind, and true' is all my argument,
'Fair, kind, and true' varying to other words;
And in this change is my invention spent,
Three themes in one, which wondrous scope affords.

'Fair, kind, and true,' have often lived alone,
Which three till now never kept seat in one.

CIV.

When in the chronicle of wasted time
I see descriptions of the fairest wights,
And beauty making beautiful old rhyme
In praise of ladies dead and lovely knights,
Then, in the blazon of sweet beauty's best,
Of hand, of foot, of lip, of eye, of brow,
I see their antique pen would have express'd
Even such a beauty as you master now.

So all their praises are but prophecies
Of this our time, all you prefurging;
And, for they look'd but with divining eyes,
They had not skill enough your worth to sing:
For we, which now behold these present days,
Have eyes to wonder, but lack tongues to praise.

CVII.

Not mine own fears, nor the prophetic soul
Of the wide world dreaming on things to come,
Can yet the lease of my true love control,
Supposed as forfeit to a confined doom.

The mortal moon hath her eclipse endured
And the sad augurs mock their own presage;
Uncertainties now crown themselves assured
And peace proclaims olives of endless age.

Now with the drops of this most balmy time
My love looks fresh, and Death to me subscribes,
Since, spite of him, I'll live in this poor rhyme,
While he insults o'er dull and speechless tribes:

And thou in this shalt find thy monument,
When tyrants' crests and tombs of brass are spent.

CVIII.

What's in the brain that ink may characterize
Which hath not figured to thee my true spirit?
What's new to speak, what new to register,
That may express my love or thy dear merit?

Nothing, sweet boy; but yet, like prayers divine,
I must each day say o'er the very same,
Counting no old thing old, thou mine, I thine,
Even as when first I hallow'd thy fair name.

So that eternal love in love's fresh case
Weighs not the dust and injury of age,
Nor gives to necessary wrinkles place,
But makes antiquity for aye his page,

Finding the first conceit of love there bred
Where time and outward form would show it dead.

CIX.

O, never say that I was false of heart,
Though absence seem'd my flame to qualify.
As easy might I from myself depart
As from my soul, which in thy breast doth lie:
That is my home of love: if I have ranged,
Like him that travels I return again,

Just to the time, not with the time exchanged,
So that myself bring water for my stain.

Never believe, though in my nature reign'd
All frailties that besiege all kinds of blood,
That it could so preposterously be stain'd,
To leave for nothing all thy sum of good;

For nothing this wide universe I call,
Save thou, my rose; in it thou art my all.

CX.

Alas, 'tis true I have gone here and there
And made myself a motley to the view,
Gored mine own thoughts, sold cheap what is most dear,
Made old offences of affections new:

Most true it is that I have look'd on truth
Askance and strangely: but, by all above,
These blenchings gave my heart another youth,
And worse essays proved thee my best of love.

Now all is done, have what shall have no end:
Mine appetite I never more will grind
On newer proof, to try an older friend,
A god in love, to whom I am confined.

Then give me welcome, next my heaven the best,
Even to thy pure and most most loving breast.

CXI.

O, for my sake do you with Fortune chide,
The guilty goddess of my harmful deeds,
That did not better for my life provide
Than public means which public manners breeds.

Thence comes it that my name receives a brand,
And almost thence my nature is subdued
To what it works in, like the dyer's hand:
Pity me then and wish I were renew'd;

Whilst, like a willing patient, I will drink
Potions of eisel 'gainst my strong infection;
No bitterness that I will bitter think,
Nor double penance, to correct correction.

Pity me then, dear friend, and I assure ye
Even that your pity is enough to cure me.

CXII.

Your love and pity doth the impression fill
Which vulgar scandal stamp'd upon my brow:
For what care I who calls me well or ill,
So you o'er-green my bad, my good allow?

You are my all the world, and I must strive
To know my shame and praises from your tongue;
None else to me, nor I to none alive,
That my steel'd sense or changes right or wrong.

In so profound abyss I throw all care
Of others' voices, that my adder's sense
To critic and to flatterer stopped are.

Mark how with my neglect I do dispense:
You are so strongly in my purpose bred
That all the world besides methinks are dead.

CXIII.

Since I left you, mine eye is in my mind;
And that which governs me to go about
Doth part his function and is partly blind,
Seems seeing, but effectually is out;

For it no form delivers to the heart
Of bird, of flower, or shape, which it doth latch;
Of his quick objects hath the mind no part,
Nor his own vision holds what it doth catch;
For if it see the rudest or gentlest sight,
The most sweet favour or deformed st creature,
The mountain or the sea, the day or night,
The crow or dove, it shapes them to your feature:
Incaptive of more, replete with you,
My most true mind thus makes mine eye untrue.

CXIV.

Or whether doth my mind, being crown'd with
you,
Drink up the monarch's plague, this flattery?
Or whether shall I say, mine eye saith true,
And that your love taught it this alchemy,
To make of monsters and things indigent
Such cherubins as your sweet self resemble,
Creating every bad a perfect best,
As fast as objects to his beams assemble?
O, 'tis the first; 'tis flattery in my seeing,
And my great mind most kingly drinks it up:
Mine eye well knows what with his gout is 'greeing,
And to his palate doth prepare the cup:
If it be poison'd, 'tis the lesser sin
That mine eye loves it and doth first begin.

CXV.

Those lines that I before have writ do lie,
Even those that said I could not love you dearer:
Yet then my judgement knew no reason why
My most full flame should afterwards burn clearer.
But reckoning time, whose million'd accidents
Creep in 'twixt vows and change decrees of kings,
Tan sacred beauty, blunt the sharpest intents,
Divert strong minds to the course of altering things;
Alas, why, fearing of time's tyranny,
Might I not ther say 'Now I love you best,'
When I was certain o'er certainty,
Crowning the present, doubting of the rest?
Love is a babe; then might I not say so,
To give full growth to that which still doth grow?

CXVI.

Let me not to the marriage of true minds
Admit impediments. Love is not love
Which alters when it alteration finds,
Or bends with the remover to remove:
O, no! it is an ever-fixed mark
That looks on tempests and is never shaken;
It is the star to every wandering bark,
Whose worth's unknown, although his height be taken.
Love's not Time's fool, though rosy lips and cheeks
Within his bending sike's compass come;
Love alters not with his brief hours and weeks,
But bears it out even to the edge of doom.
If this be error and upon me proved,
I never writ, nor no man ever loved.

CXVII.

Accuse me thus: that I have scanted all
Wherein I should your great deserts repay,
Forgot upon your dearest love to call,
Whereeto all bonds do tie me day by day;
That I have frequent been with unknown minds
And given to time your own dear-purchased right;
That I have hoisted sail to all the winds
Which should transport me farthest from your sight.

Book both my wilfulness and errors down
And on just proof surmise accumulate;
Bring me within the level of your frown,
But shoot not at me in your waken'd hate;
Since my appeal says I did strive to prove
The constancy and virtue of your love.

CXVIII.

Like as, to make our appetites more keen,
With eager compounds we our palate urge,
As, to prevent our maladies unseen,
We sicken to shun sickness when we purge,
Even so, being full of your ne'er-cloying sweetness,
To bitter sauces did I frame my feeding
And, sick of welfare, found a kind of meetness
To be diseased ere that there was true needing.
Thus policy in love, to anticipate
The ills that were not, grew to faults assured
And brought to medicine a healthful state
Which, rank of goodness, would by ill be cured;
But thence I learn, and find the lesson true,
Drugs poison him that so fell sick of you.

CXIX.

What potions have I drunk of Siren tears,
Distill'd from limbecks foul as hell within,
Applying fears to hopes and hopes to fears,
Still losing when I saw myself to win!
What wretched errors hath my heart committed,
Whilst it hath thought itself so blessed never!
How have mine eyes out of their spheres been fitted
In the distraction of this madding fever!
O benefit of ill! now I find true
That better is by evil still made better;
And ruin'd love, when it is built anew,
Grows fairer than at first, more strong, far greater.
So I return rebuked to my content
And gain by ill thrice more than I have spent.

CXX.

That you were once unkind befriended me now,
And for that sorrow which I then did feel
Needs must I under my transgression bow,
Unless my nerves were brass or hammer'd steel.
For if you were by my unkindness shaken
As I by yours, you've pass'd a hell of time,
And I, a tyrant, have no leisure taken
To weigh how once I suffer'd in your crime.
O, that our night of woe might have remember'd
My deepest sense, how hard true sorrow hits,
And soon to you, as you to me, then tender'd
The humble salve which wounded bosoms fits!
But that your trespass now becomes a fee;
Mine ransoms yours, and yours must ransom me.

CXXI.

'Tis better to be vile than vile esteem'd,
When not to be receives reproach of being,
And the just pleasure lost which is so deem'd
Not by our feeling but by others' seeing:
For why should others' false adulterate eyes
Give salutation to my sportive blood?
Or on my frailties why are frailer spies,
Which in their wills comit bad what I think good?
No, I am that I am, and they that level
At my abuses reckon up their own:
SONNETS.

I may be straight, though they themselves be bevel;
By their rank thoughts my deeds must not be shown;
Unless this general evil they maintain,
All men are bad, and in their badness reign.

CXXII.

Thy gift, thy tables, are within my brain
Full character'd with lasting memory,
Which shall above that idle rank remain
Beyond all date, even to eternity;
Or at the least, so long as brain and heart
Have faculty by nature to subsist:
Till each to razed oblivion yield his part
Of thee, thy record never can be miss'd.
That poor retention could not so much hold,
Nor need I tallies thy dear love to score;
Therefore to give them from me was I bold,
To trust those tables that receive thee more:
To keep an adjunct to remember thee
Were to import forgetfulness in me.

CXXIII.

No, Time, thou shalt not boast that I do change:
Thy pyramids built up with newer might
To me are nothing novel, nothing strange;
They are but dressings of a former sight.
Our dates are brief, and therefore we admire
What thou dost foist upon us that is old,
And rather make them born to our desire
Than think that we before have heard them told.
Thy registers and thee I both defy,
Not wondering at the present nor the past,
For thy records and what we see doth lie,
Made more or less by thy continual haste.
This I do vow and this shall ever be;
I will be true, despite thy scythe and thee.

CXXIV.

If my dear love were but the child of state,
It might for Fortune's bastard be unfather'd,
As subject to Time's love or to Time's hate,
Weeds among weeds, or flowers with flowers gather'd.
No, it was builded far from accident;
It suffers not in smiling pomp, nor falls
Under the blow of thralled discontent,
Whereeto the inviting time our fashion calls:
It fears not policy, that heretic,
Which works on leases of short-number'd hours,
But all alone stands hugely politic,
That it nor grows with heat nor drowns with showers.
To this I witness call the fools of time,
Which die for goodness, who have lived for crime.

CXXV.

Were 't aught to me I bore the canopy,
With my extern the outward honouring,
or laid great bases for eternity,
Which prove more short than waste or ruin?
Have I not seen dwellers on form and favour
Lose all, and more, by paying too much rent,
For compound sweet forgoing simple savour,
Pitiful thrifters, in their gazing spent?
No, let me be obsequious in thy heart,
And take thou my oblation, poor but free,
Which is not mix'd with seconds, knows no art,
But mutual render, only me for thee.
Hence, thou suborn'd informer! a true soul
When most impeach'd stands least in thy control.

CXXVI.

O thou, my lovely boy, who in thy power
Dost hold Time's fickle glass, his sickle, hour;
Who hast by waning grown, and therein show'st
Thy lovers withering as thy sweet self grow'st;
If Nature, sovereign mistress over wrack,
As thou goest onwards, still will pluck thee back,
She keeps thee to this purpose, that her skill
May time disgrace and wretched minutes kill.
Yet fear her, O thou minion of her pleasure!
She may detain, but not still keep, her treasure:
Her audit, though delay'd, answer'd must be,
And her quietus is to render thee.

CXXVII.

In the old age black was not counted fair,
Or if it were, it bore not beauty's name;
But now is black beauty's successive heir,
And beauty slander'd with a bastard shame:
For since each hand hath put on nature's power,
Fairing the foul with art's false borrow'd face,
Sweet beauty hath no name, no holy bower,
But is profaned, if not lives in disgrace.
Therefore my mistress' brows are raven black,
Her eyes so suited, and they mourners seem
At such who, not born fair, no beauty lack,
Slanderous creation with a false esteem:
Yet so they mourn, becoming of their woe,
That every tongue says beauty should look so.

CXXVIII.

How oft, when thou, my music, music play'st,
Upon that blessed wood whose motion sounds
With thy sweet fingers, when thou gently sway'st
The wiry condur that mine ear confounds,
Do I envy those jacks that nimble leap
To kiss the tender inward of thy hand,
Whilst my poor lips, which should that harvest reap,
At the wood's boldness by thee blushing stand!
To be so tickled, they would change their state
And situation with those dancing chips,
O'er whom thy fingers walk with gentle gait,
Making dead wood more blest than living lips.
Since saucy jacks so happy are in this,
Give them thy fingers, me thy lips to kiss.

CXXIX.

The expense of spirit in a waste of shame
Is lust in action; and till action, lust
Is perjured, murderous, bloody, full of blame,
Savage, extreme, rude, cruel, not to trust,
Enjoy'd no sooner but despisèd straight,
Past reason hunted, and no sooner had
Past reason hated, as a swallow'd bait
On purpose laid to make the taker mad;
Mad in pursuit and in possession so;
Had, having, and in quest to have, extreme;
A bliss in proof, and proved, a very woe;
Before, a joy proposed; behind, a dream.

66—2
SONNETS.

All this the world well knows; yet none knows well
To shun the heaven that leads men to this hell.

CXXX.

My mistress' eyes are nothing like the sun;
Coral is far more red than her lips' red;
If snow be white, why then her breasts are dun;
If hairs be wires, black wires grow on her head.
I have seen roses damask'd, red and white,
But the true rose never did fancy bear;
And in some perfumes is there more delight
Than in the breath that from my mistress reeks.
I love to hear her speak, yet well I know
That music hath a far more pleasing sound;
I grant I never saw a goddess go;
My mistress, when she walks, treads on the ground:
And yet, by heaven, I think my love as rare
As any she belied with false compare.

CXXXI.

Thou art as tyrannous, so as thou art,
As those whose beauties proudly make them cruel;
For well thou know'st to my dear doting heart
Thou art the fairest and most precious jewel.
Yet, in good faith, some say that thee behold
Thy face hath not the power to make love groan:
To say they err I dare not be so bold,
Although I swear it to myself alone.
And, to be sure that is not false I swear,
A thousand groans, but thinking on thy face,
One on another's neck, do witness bear
Thy black is fairest in my judgement's place.
In nothing art thou black save in thy deeds,
And thence this slander, as I think, proceeds.

CXXXII.

Thine eyes I love, and they, as pitying me,
Knowing thy heart torments me with disdain,
Have put on black and loving mourners be,
Looking with pretty ruth upon my pain.
And truly not the morning sun of heaven
Better becomes the grey cheeks of the east,
Nor that full star that ushers in the even Doth half that glory to the sober west,
As those two mourning eyes become thy face:
O, let it then as well beseech thy heart
To mourn for me, since mourning doth thee grace,
And suit thy pity like in every part.
Then will I swear beauty herself is black
And all they foul that thy complexion lack.

CXXXIII.

Beshrew that heart that makes my heart to groan
For that deep wound it gives my friend and me!
Is't not enough to torture me alone,
But slave to slavery my sweet'st friend must be?
Me from myself thy cruel eye hath taken,
And my next self thou harder hast engross'd:
Of him, myself, and thee, I am forsaken;
A torment thrice threefold thus to be cross'd.
Prison my heart in thy steel bosom's ward,
But then my friend's heart let my poor heart bail;
Who'er keeps me, let my heart be his guard;
Thou canst not then use rigour in my gait:
And yet thou wilt; for I, being pent in thee,
Perforce am thine, and all that is in me.

CXXXIV.

So, now I have confess'd that he is thine,
And I myself am mortgaged to thy will,
Myself I'll forfeit, so that other mine
Thou wilt restore, to be my comfort still:
But thou wilt not, nor he will not be free,
For thou art covetous and he is kind;
He learn'd but surety-like to write for me
Under that bond that he as fast doth bind.
The statute of thy beauty thou wilt take,
Thou usurer, that put'st forth all to use,
And sue a friend came debtor for my sake;
So him I lose through my unkind abuse.
Him have I lost; thou hast both him and me:
He pays the whole, and yet am I not free.

CXXXV.

Whoever hath her wish, thou hast thy 'Will,'
And 'Will' to boot, and 'Will' in overplus;
More than enough am I that vex thee still,
To thy sweet will making addition thus,
Wilt thou, whose will is large and spacious,
Not once or twice safe to hide my will in thine?
Shall will in others seem right gracious,
And in my will no fair acceptance shine?
The sea, all water, yet receives rain still
And in abundance addeth to his store;
So thou, being rich in 'Will,' add to thy 'Will'
One will of mine, to make thy large 'Will' more.
Let no unkind, no fair beseechers kill;
Think all but one, and me in that one 'Will.'

CXXXVI.

If thy soul check thee that I come so near,
Swear to thy blind soul that I was thy 'Will,'
And will, thy soul knows, is admitted there;
Thus far for love my love-suit, sweet, full.
'Will' will fulfil the treasure of thy love,
Ay, fill it full with wills, and my will one.
In things of great receipt with ease we prove
Among a number one is reckon'd none:
Then in the number let me pass untold,
Though in thy stores' account I one must be;
For nothing hold me, so it please thee hold
That nothing me, a something sweet to thee:
Make but my name thy love, and love that still,
And then thou lovest me, for my name is 'Will.'

CXXXVII.

Thou blind fool, Love, what dost thou to mine eyes,
That they behold, and see not what they see?
They know what beauty is, see where it lies,
Yet what the best is take the worst to be.
If eyes corrupt by over-partial looks
Be anchor'd in the bay where all men ride,
Why of eyes' falsehood hast thou forged hooks,
Whereunto the judgement of my heart is tied?
Why should my heart think that a several plot
Which my heart knows the wide world's common place?
Or mine eyes seeing this, say this is not,
To put fair truth upon so foul a face?
In things right true my heart and eyes have erred,
And to this false plague are they now transferr'd.

CXXXVIII.

When my love swears that she is made of truth
I do believe her, though I know she lies,
SONNETS.

That she might think me some untutor'd youth,
Unlearned in the world's false subtleties,
Thus vainly thinking that she thinks me young,
Although she knows my days are past the best,
Simply I credit her false-speaking tongue:
On both sides thus is simple truth suppress'd.
But wherefore says she not she is unjust?
And wherefore say not I that I am old?
O, love's best habit is in seeming trust,
And age in love loves not to have years told:
Therefore I lie with her and she with me,
And in our faults by lies we flatter'd be.

CXXIX.
O, call not me to justify the wrong
That th'unkindness lays upon my heart;
Wound me not with thine eye but with thy tongue;
Use power with power and slay me not by art.
Tell me thou lovest elsewhere, but in my sight,
Dear heart, forbear to glance thine eye aside:
What need'st thou wound with cunning when thy might
Is more than my o'er-press'd defence can bide?
Let me excuse thee: ah! my love well knows
Her pretty looks have been mine enemies,
And therefore from my face she turns my foes,
That they elsewhere might dart their injuries:
Yet do not so; but since I am near slain,
Kill me outright with looks and rid my pain.

CXXX.
Be wise as thou art cruel; do not press
My tongue-tied patience with too much disdain;
Lest sorrow lend me words and words express
The manner of my pity-wanting pain.
If I might teach thee wit, better it were,
Though not to love, yet, love, to tell me so;
As testy sick men, when their deaths be near,
No news but health from their physicians know;
For if I should despair, I should grow mad,
And in my madness might speak ill of thee:
Now this ill-wrestling world is grown so bad,
Mad slanderers by mad ears believed be,
That I may not be so, nor thou belied,
Bear thine eyes straight, though thy proud heart go wide.

CXXXI.
In faith, I do not love thee with mine eyes,
For they in thee a thousand errors note;
But 'tis my heart that loves what they despise,
Who in despite of view is pleased to see;
Nor are mine ears with thy tongue's tune delighted,
Nor tender feeling, to base touches prone,
Nor taste, nor smell, desire to be invited
To any sensual feast with thee alone:
But my five wits nor my five senses can
Dissuade one foolish heart from serving thee,
Who leaves unsaw'd the likeness of a man,
Thy proud heart's slave and vassal wretch to be:
Only my plague thus far I count my gain,
That she that makes me sin awards me pain.

CXXXII.
Love is my sin and thy dear virtue hate,
Hate of my sin, grounded on sinful loving:
O, but with mine compare thou thine own state,
And thou shalt find it merits not reproving;
Or, if it do, not from those lips of thine,
That have profan'd their scarlet ornaments
And seal'd false bonds of love as oft as mine,
Robb'd others' beds' revenues of their rents.
Be it lawful I love thee, as thou lov'st those Whom thine eyes woo as mine importune thee:
Root pity in thy heart, that when it grows
Thy pity may deserve to pitied be.
If thou dost seek to have what thou dost hide,
By self-example mayst thou be denied!

CXLIII.
Lo! as a careful housewife runs to catch
One of her feather'd creatures broke away,
Sets down her babe and makes all swift dispatch
In pursuit of the thing she would have stay,
Whilst her neglected child holds her in chase,
Cries to catch her whose busy care is bent
To follow that which flies before her face,
Not prizes her poor infant's discontent;
So runn'st thou after that which flies from thee,
Whilst I thy babe chase thee afar behind;
But if thou catch thy hope, turn back to me,
And play the mother's part, kiss me, be kind:
So will I pray that thou mayst have thy 'Will,'
If thou turn back, and my loud crying still.

CXLIV.
Two loves I have of comfort and despair,
Which like two spirits do suggest me still:
The better angel is a man right fair,
The worser spirit a woman colour'd ill.
To win me soon to hell, my female evil
Tempeth my better angel from my side,
And would corrupt my saint to be a devil,
Wooing his purity with her foul pride.
And whether that my angel be turn'd fiend
Suspect I may, yet not directly tell;
But being both from me, both to each friend,
I guess one angel in another's hell;
Yet this shall I ne'er know, but live in doubt,
Till my bad angel fire my good one out.

CXLV.
Those lips that Love's own hand did make Breathed forth the sound that said 'I hate'
To me that languish'd for her sake;
But when she saw my woeful state,
Straight in her heart did mercy come,
Chiding that tongue that ever sweet
Was used in giving gentle doom,
And taught it thus anew to greet;
'I hate' she alter'd with an end,
That follow'd it as gentle day
Doth follow night, who like a fiend
From heaven to hell is flown away;
'I hate' from hate away she threw,
And saved my life, saying 'not you.'

CXLVI.
Poor soul, the centre of my sinful earth,
...... these rebel powers that thee array,
Why dost thou pine within and suffer dearth,
Painting thy outward walls so costly gay?
Why so large cost, having so short a lease,
Dost thou upon thy fading mansion spend?
Shall worms, inheritors of this excess,
Eat up thy charge? is this thy body's end?
SONNETS.

Then, soul, live thou upon thy servant’s loss,
And let that pine to aggravate thy store;
Buy terms divine in selling hours of dross;
Within be fed, without be rich no more:
So shalt thou feed on Death, that feeds on men,
And Death once dead, there’s no more dying then.

CXVII.

My love is as a fever, longing still
For that which longer nurseth the disease,
Feeding on that which doth preserve the ill,
The uncertain sickly appetite to please,
My reason, the physician to my love,
Angry that his prescriptions are not kept,
Hath left me, and I desperate now approve Desire is death, which physic did except.
Past cure I am, now reason is past care,
And frantic-mad with evermore unrest;
My thoughts and my discourse as madmen’s are,
At random from the truth vainly express’d;
For I have sworne thee fair and thought thee bright,
Who art as black as hell, as dark as night.

CXVIII.

O me, what eyes hath Love put in my head,
Which have no correspondence with true sight!
Or, if they have, where is my judgement fled,
That censureth falsely what they see aright?
If that be fair whereon my false eyes dote,
What means the world to say it is not so?
If it be not, then love doth well denote
Love’s eye is not so true as all men’s ‘No,’
How can it? O, how can Love’s eye be true,
That is so vex’d with watching and with tears?
No marvel then, though I mistake my view;
The sun itself sees not till heaven clears.
O cunning Love! with tears thou keep’st me blind,
Lest eyes well-seeing thy foul faults should find.

CXIX.

Canst thou, O cruel! say I love thee not,
When I against myself with thee partake?
Do I not think on thee, when I forget
Am of myself, all tyrant, for thy sake?
Who hateth thee that I do call my friend?
On whom frown’st thou that I do fawn upon?
Nay, if thou lour’st on me, do I not spend Revenge upon myself with present moan?
What merit do I in myself respect,
That is so proud thy service to despise,
When all my best doth worship thy defect,
Commanded by the motion of thine eyes?
But, love, hate on, for now I know thy mind;
Those that can see thou lovest, and I am blind.

CL.

O, from what power hast thou this powerful might
With insufficiency my heart to sway?
To make me give the lie to my true sight,
And swear that brightness doth not grace the day?
Whence hast thou this becoming of things ill,
That in the very refuse of thy deeds
There is such strength and warrantise of skill
That, in my mind, thy worst all best exceeds?
Who taught thee how to make me love thee more
The more I hear and see just cause of hate?

O, though I love what others do abhor,
With others thou shouldest not abhor my state:
If thy unworthiness raised love in me,
More worthy I to be beloved of thee.

CLI.

Love is too young to know what conscience is;
Yet who knows not conscience is born of love?
Then, gentle cheater, urge not my amiss,
Lest guilty of my faults thy sweet self prove.
For, thou betraying me, I do betray
My nobler part to my gross body’s reason;
My soul doth tell my body that he may Triumph in love; flesh stays no further reason;
But, rising at thy name, doth point out thee
As his triumphant prize. Proud of this pride,
He is contented thy poor drudge to be,
To stand in thy affairs, fall by thy side.
No want of conscience hold it that I call
Her ‘love’ for whose dear love I rise and fall.

CLII.

In loving thee thou know’st I am forsworn,
But thou art twice forsworn, to me love swearing,
In act thy bed-vow broke and new faith torn
In vowing new hate after new love bearing.
But why of two oaths’ breach do I accuse thee,
When I break twenty? I am perjur’d most;
For all my vows are oaths but to misuse thee
And all my honest faith in thee is lost,
For I have sworn deep oaths of thy deep kindness,
Oaths of thy love, thy truth, thy constancy,
And, to enlighten thee, gave eyes to blindness,
Or made them swear against the thing they see;
For I have sworn thee fair; more perjur’d I,
To swear against the truth so foul a lie!

CLIII.

Cupid laid by his brand, and fell asleep:
A maid of Dian’s this advantage found,
And his love-kindling fire did quickly steep
In a cold valley-fountain of that ground;
Which borrow’d from this holy fire of Love
A dateless lively heat, still to endure,
And grew a seething bath, which yet men prove Against my maladies a sovereign cure.
But at my mistress’ eye Love’s brand new-fired,
The boy for trial needs would touch my breast;
I, sick withal, the help of bath desired,
And thither hied, a sad distemper’d guest,
But found no cure: the bath for my help lies
Where Cupid got new fire—my mistress’ eyes.

CLIV.

The little Love-god lying once asleep
Laid by his side his heart-inflaming brand,
Whilst many nymphs that vow’d chaste life to keep
Came tripping by; but in her maiden hand
The fairest votary took up that fire
Which many legions of true hearts had warm’d;
And so the general of hot desire
Was sleeping by a virgin hand disarm’d.
This brand she quenched in a cool well by,
Which from Love’s fire took heat perpetual,
Growing a bath and healthful remedy
For men diseased; but I, my mistress’ thrall,
Came there for cure, and there by that I prove,
Love’s fire heats water, water cools not love.
A LOVER'S COMPLAINT.

From off a hill whose concave womb re-warded
A pleasant story from a sistering vale,
My spirits to attend this double voice accorded,
And down I laid to list the sad-tuned tale;
Ere long espied a fickle maid full pale,
Tearing of papers, breaking rings a-twain,
Storming her world with sorrow's wind and rain.

Upon her head a platted hive of straw,
Which fortified her visage from the sun,
Whereon the thought might think sometime it saw
The carcass of a beauty spent and done: 11
Time had not scythed all that youth begun;
Nor youth all quit; but, spite of heaven's fell rage,
Some beauty peep'd through lattice of sear'd age.

Oft did she heave her napkin to her eyne,
Which on it had conceited characters,
Laudering the silken figures in the brine
That season'd woe had pelleted in tears,
And often reading what contents it bears;
As often shrieking undistinguish'd woe,
In clamours of all size, both high and low.

Sometimes her levell'd eyes their carriage ride,
As they did battery to the spheres intend;
Sometimes diverted their poor balls are tied
To the orbed earth; sometimes they do extend
Their view right on; anon their gazes lend
To every place at once, and, nowhere fix'd,
The mind and sight distractedly commix'd.

Her hair, nor loose nor tied in formal plat,
Proclaim'd in her a careless hand of pride
For some, untuck'd, descended her sheaves hat,
Hanging her pale and pined cheek beside;
Some in her threaden fillet still did ride,
And true to bondage would not break from thence,
Though slackly braided in loose negligence.

A thousand favours from a maund she drew
Of amber, crystal, and of beaded jet,
Which one by one she in a river threw,
Upon whose weeping margent she was set;
Like usury, applying wet to wet,
Or monarch's hands that let not bounty full
Where want cries some, but where excess begs all.

Of folded schedules had she many a one,
Which she perused, sigh'd, tore, and gave the flood;
Crack'd many a ring of posied gold and bone,
Bidding them find their sepulchres in mud;
Found yet more letters sadly penn'd in blood,
With slain silk feat and affectedly
Enswathed, and seal'd to curious secrecy.

These often bathed she in her fluxive eyes,
And often kiss'd, and often 'gan to tear;
Cried 'O false blood, thou register of lies,
What unapproved witness dost thou bear!
Ink would have seem'd more black and damned here!'

This said, in top of rage the lines she rents,
Big discontent so breaking their contents.

A reverend man that grazed his cattle nigh—
Sometimes a blusterer, that the ruffle knew—
Of court, of city, and had let go by
The swiftest hours, observed as they flew—
Towards this afflicted fancy fastly drew,
And, privileged by age, desires to know
In brief the grounds and motives of her woe.

So slides he down upon his grained bat,
And comely-distant sits he by her side;
When he again desires her, being sat,
Her grievance with his hearing to divide:
If that from him there may be aught applied
Which may her suffering ecstasy assuage,
'Tis promised in the charity of age.

'Father,' she says, 'though in me you behold
The injury of many a blasting hour,
Let it not tell your judgement I am old;
Not age, but sorrow, over me hath power:
I might as yet have been a spreading flower,
Fresh to myself, if I had self-applied
Love to myself and to no love beside.

'But, woe is me! too early I attended
A youthful suit—it was to gain my grace—
Of one by nature's outwards so commended,
That maidens' eyes stuck over all his face:
Love lack'd a dwelling, and made him her place;
And when in his fair parts she did abide,
She was new lodged and newly defiled.

'His browny locks did hang in crooked curls;
And every light occasion of the wind'
Upon his lips their silken parcels hurls.
What's sweet to do, to do will apply find;
Each eye that saw him did enchant the mind,
For on his visage was in little drawn
What largeness thinks in Paradise was sown.

'Small show of man was yet upon his chin;
His phoenix down began but to appear
Like unsorn velvet on that terrorskin
Whose bare out-bragg'd the web it seem'd to wear:
Yet show'd his visage by that cost more dear;
And nice affections wavering stood in doubt
If best were as it was, or best without.

'His qualities were beauteous as his form,
For maiden-tongued he was, and thereof free;
Yet, if men moved him, was he such a storm
As oft 'twixt May and April is to see,
When winds breathe sweet, untruly though they be,
His rudeness so with his authorized youth
Did livery falseness in a pride of truth.

'Well could he ride, and often men would say "That horse his mettle from his rider takes:
A Lover's Complaint.

Proud of subject, noble by the sway,
What rounds, what bounds, what course, what cause,
Stop he makes!" And controversy hence a question takes, 110 Whether the horse by him became his deed,
Or he his manage by the well-doing steed.

"But quickly on this side the verdûc went; His real habitude gave life and grace To appertainings and to ornament, Accomplish'd in himself, not in his case: All aids, themselves made fairer by their place, Came for additions; yet their purposed trim Pieced not his grace, but were all graced by him.

"So on the tip of his subduing tongue, All kind of arguments and question deep, All replication prompt, and reason strong, For his advantage still did wake and sleep: To make the weeper laugh, the laughter weep, He had the dialect and different skill, Catching all passions in his craft of will:

"That he did in the general bosom reign Of young, of old; and sexes both enchanted, To dwell with him in thoughts, or to remain In personal duty, following where he haunted: 130 Consents bewitch'd, ere he desire, have granted; And dialogue'd for him what he would say, Ask'd their own wills, and made their wills obey.

"Many there were that did his picture get, To serve their eyes, and in it put their mind; Like fools that in th' imagination set The goodly objects, which abroad they find Of lands and mansions, theirs in thought assign'd: And laboured in moc pleasures to bestow them Than the true gouty landlord which doth owe them: 140

"So many have, that never touch'd his hand, Sweetly supposed them mistress of his heart. My woeful self, that did in freedom stand, And was my own fee-simle, not in part, What with his art in youth, and youth in art, Threw my affections in his charmed power, Reserved the stalk and gave him all my flower.

"Yet did I not, as some my equals did, Demand of him, nor being desired yielded; Finding myself in honour so forbid, With safest distance I mine honour shielded: Experience for me many bulwalks builded Of proofs new-bleeding, which remain'd the foil Of this false jewel, and his amorous spoil.

"But, ah, who ever shunn'd by precedent The destined ill she must herself assay? Or forced examples, 'gainst her own content, To put the by-past perils in her way? Counsel may stop awhile what will not stay; For when we rage, advice is often seen 160 By blunting us to make our wits more keen.

"Nor gives it satisfaction to our blood, That we must curb it upon others' proof; To be forbid the sweets that seem so good, For fear of harms that preach in our behalf. O appetite, from judgement stand aloof!

The one a palate hath that needs will taste, Though Reason weep, and cry "It is thy last!" For further I could say "This man's untruer," And knew the patterns of his foul beguiling; 170 Heard where his plants in others' orchards grew, Saw how deceits were gilded in his smiling; Knew vows were ever brokers to defiling; Thought characters and words merely but art, And bastards of his foul adulterate heart.

"And long upon these terms I held my city, Till thus he gan besiege me: "Gentle maid, Have of my suffering youth some feeling pity, And be not of my holy vows afraid: That's to ye sworn to none was ever said; 180 For feasts of love I have been call'd unto, Till now did ne'er invite, nor never woo.

"All my offences that abroad you see Are errors of the blood, none of the mind; Love made them not; with futre they may be, Where neither party is nor true nor kind: They sought their shame that so their shame did find; And so much less of shame in me remains, By how much of me their reproach contains.

"Among the many that mine eyes have seen, 190 Not one whose flame my heart so much as warm'd, Or my affection put to the smallest teen, Or any of my pleasures ever charm'd: Harm have I done to them, but ne'er was harm'd; Kept hearts in liveries, but mine own was free, And reign'd, commanding in his monarchy.

"Look here, what tributes wounded fancies sent me, Of paled pearls and rubies red as blood; Figuring that they their passions likewise lent me Of grief and blushes, aptly understood In bloodless white and the encrin'd mood; Effects of terror and dear modesty, Encamp'd in hearts, but fighting outwardly. 200

"And, lo, behold these talents of their hair, With twisted metal amorously impleach'd, I have received from many a several fair, Their kind acceptance weepingly beseech'd, With the annexions of fair gems enrich'd, And deep-brain'd sonnets that did amplify Each stone's dear nature, worth, and quality. 210

"The diamond,—why, 'twas beautiful and hard, Whereeto his invised properties did tend; The deep-green emerald, in whose fresh regard Weak sights their sickly radiance do amend; The heaven-hued sapphire and the opal blend With objects manifold: each several stone, With wit well blazon'd, smiled or made some moan.

"Lo, all these trophies of affections hot, Of pensived and subdued desires the tender, Nature hath charged me that I hoard them not, 220 But yield them up where I myself must render, That is, to you, my origin and ender;
A LOVER’S COMPLAINT.

For these, of force, must your oblations be,
Since I their altar, you enpatron me.

"O, then, advance of yours that phraseless hand,
Whose white weighs down the airy scale of praise;
Take all these similes to your own command,
Hallow'd with sighs that burning lungs did raise;
What me your minister, for you obeys,
Works under you; and to your audit comes distinct passions in combined sums.

"Lo, this device was sent me from a nun,
Or sister sanctified, of holiest note;
Which late her noble suit in court did shun,
Whose rarest havings made the blossoms dote;
For she was sought by spirits of richest coat,
But kept cold distance, and did thence remove,
To spend her living in eternal love.

"But, O my sweet, what labour is’t to leave
The thing we have not, mastering what not strives,
Playing the place which did no form receive,
Playing patient sports in unconstrained gyves? She that her fame so to herself contrives,
The scars of battle ’scapeth by the flight,
And makes her absence valiant, not her might.

"O, pardon me, in that my boast is true:
The accident which brought me to her eye
Upon the moment did her force subdue,
And now she would the caged cloister fly:
Religious love put out Religion’s eye:
Not to be tempted, would she be immured,
And now, to temp, all liberty procured.

"How mighty then you are, O, hear me tell!
The broken bosoms that to me belong
Have emptied all their fountains in my well,
And mine I pour your ocean all among;
I strong o’er them, and you o’er me being strong,
Must for your victory us all congest,
As compound love to plysice your cold breast.

"My parts had power to charm a sacred nun,
Who, disciplined, ay, dieted in grace,
Believed her eyes when they to assail begun,
All vows and consecrations giving place:
O most potential love! vow, bond, nor space,
In thee hath neither sting, knot, nor confine,
For thou art all, and all things else thine.

"When thou impressest, what are precepts worth
Of stale example? When thou wilt inflame,
How coldly those impediments stand forth
Of wealth, of filial fear, law, kindred, fame! "Love’s arms are peace,” gainst rule, “gainst sense, “gainst shame,
And sweetens, in the suffering pangs it bears,
The ales of all forces, shocks, and fears.

"Now all these hearts that do on mine depend,
Feeling it break, with bleeding groans they pine;
And suppliant their sighs to you extend,
To leave the battery that you make ‘gainst mine,
Lending soft audience to my sweet design,
And credent soul to that strong-bonded oath
That shall prefer and undertake my truth.”

"This said, his watery eyes he did dismount,
Whose sights till then were level’d on my face;
Each cheek a river running from a fount
With brinish current downward flow’d apace:
O, how the channel to the stream gave grace!
Who glaz’d with crystal gate the glowing roses
That flame through water which their hue encloses.

"O father, what a hell of witchcraft lies
In the small orb of one particular tear!
But with the inundation of the eyes
What rocky heart to water will not wear?
What breast so cold that is not warmed here?
O cleft effect! cold modesty, hot wrath,
Both fire from hence and chill extinture hath.

"For, lo, his passion, but an art of craft,
Even there resolved my reason into tears;
There my white stole of chastity I daft’d,
Shook off my sober guards and civil fears;
Appear to him, as he to me appears,
All melting; though our drops this difference bore,
His poison’d me, and mine did him restore.

"In him a plenteous of subtle matter,
Applied to cautels, all strange forms receives,
Of burning blushes, or of weeping water,
Or swooning paleness; and he takes and leaves,
In either’s aptness, as it best deceives,
To blush at speeches rank, to weep at woes,
Or to turn white and swoon at tragic shows:

"That not a heart which in his level came
Could ’scape the hail of his all-hurtii, aim.
Showing fair nature is both kind and tame;
And, veil’d in them, did win whom he would main:
Against the thing he sought he would exclaim:
When he most burn’d in heart-wish’d luxury,
He preach’d pure maid, and praised cold chastity.

"Thus merely with the garment of a Grace
The naked and concealed fiend he cover’d;
That th’ unexperient gave the tempter place,
Which like a cherubin above them hover’d.
Who, young and simple, would not be so lover’d?
Ay me! I fell; and yet do question make
What I should do again for such a sake.

"O, that infected moisture of his eye,
O, that false fire which in his cheek do glow’d,
O, that forced thunder from his heart did fly,
O, that sad breath his spongy lungs bestow’d,
O, all that borrow’d motion seeming owed,
Would yet again betray the fore-betray’d,
And new pervert a reconciled maid!”
The Passionate Pilgrim.

I.
When my love swears that she is made of truth,
I do believe her, though I know she lies,
That she might think me some untutor'd youth,
Unskilful in the world's false forgeries.
Thus vainly thinking that she thinks me young,
Although I know my years be past the best,
I smiling credit her false-speaking tongue,
Outfacing faults in love with love's ill rest.
But wherefore says my love that she is young?
And wherefore say not I that I am old?
O, love's best habit is a soothing tongue,
And age, in love, loves not to have years told.
Therefore I'll lie with love, and love with me,
Since that our faults in love thus smother'd be.

II.
Two loves I have, of comfort and despair,
That like two spirits do suggest me still;
My better angel is a man right fair,
My worser spirit a woman colour'd ill.
To win me soon to hell, my female evil
Tempteth my better angel from my side;
And would corrupt my saint to be a devil,
Wooing his purity with her false pride.
And whether that my angel be turn'd fiend,
Suspect I may, yet not directly tell:
For being both to me, both to each friend,
I guess one angel in another's hell;
The truth I shall not know, but live in doubt,
Till my bad angel fire my good one out.

III.
Did not the heavenly rhetoric of thine eye,
'Gainst whom the world could not hold argument,
Persuade my heart to this false perjury?
Vows for thee broke deserve not punishment.
A woman I foreswore; but I will prove,
Thou being a goddess, I foreswore not thee:
My vow was earthly, thou a heavenly love;
Thy grace being gain'dcures all disgrace in me.
My vow was breath, and breath a vapour is;
Then, thou fair sun, that on this earth doth shine,
Exhale this vapour vow; in thee it is;
If broken, then it is no fault of mine.
If by me broken, what fool is not so wise
To break an oath, to win a paradise?

IV.
Sweet Cytherea, sitting by a brook
With young Adonis, lovely, fresh, and green,
Did court the lad with many a lovely look,
Such looks as none could look but beauty's queen.
She told him stories to delight his ear;
She show'd him favours to allure his eye;
To win his heart, she touch'd him here and there,—
Touches so soft still conquer chastity.
But whether unripe years did want conceit,
Or he refused to take her figured proffer,
The tender nibbler would not touch the bait,
But smile and jest at every gentle offer:
Then fell she on her back, fair queen, and toward:
He rose and ran away; ah, fool too froward!

V.
If love make me forsworn, how shall I swear to love?
O never faith could hold, if not to beauty vow'd:
Though to myself forsworn, to thee I'll constant prove:
Those thoughts, to me like oaks, to thee like osiers bow'd.
Study his bias leaves, and makes his book thine eyes
Where all those pleasures live that art can comprehend
If knowledge be the mark, to know thee shall suffice:
Well learned is that tongue that well can thee commend:
All ignorant that soul that sees thee without wonder:
Which is to me some praise, that I thy parts admire:
Thine eye Jove's lightning seems, thy voice his dreadful thunder,
Which, not to anger bent, is music and sweet fire.
Celestial as thou art, O do not love that wrong:
To sing heaven's praise with such an earthly tongue.

VI.
Scarse had the sun dried up the dewy morn,
And scarce the hedges gone to the hedge for shade,
When Cytherea, all in love forlorn,
A longing tarriance for Adonis made
Under an osier growing by a brook,
A brook where Adon used to cool his spleen:
Hot was the day; she hotter that did look
For his approach, that often there had been.
Anon he comes, and throws his mantle by,
And stood stark naked on the brook's green brim:
The sun look'd on the world with glorious eye,
Yet not so wistly as this queen on him.
He, spying her, bounced in, whereas he stood:
'O Jove,' quoth she, 'why was not I a flood?'

VII.
Fair is my love, but not so fair as fickle;
Mild as a dove, but neither true nor trusty;
Brighter than glass, and yet, as glass is, brittle;
Softer than wax, and yet, as iron, rusty;
A lily pale, with damask dye to grace her,
None fairer, nor none falser to deface her.
Her lips to mine how often hath she joined,
Between each kiss her oaths of true love swearing!
How many tales to please me hath she coined,
Dreading my love, the loss thereof still fearing!
Yet in the midst of all her pure protestings,
Her faith, her oaths, her tears, and all were jestings.
She burn'd with love, as straw with fire flameth;
She burn'd out love, as soon as straw out-burneth;
She framed the love, and yet she foil'd the framing;
She bade love last, and yet she fell a-turning. 100
Was this a lover, or a lecher whether?
Bad in the best, though excellent in neither.

VIII.
If music and sweet poetry agree,
As they must needs, the sister and the brother,
Then must the love be great 'twixt thee and me,
Because thou lovest the one, and I the other.
Dowland to thee is dear, whose heavenly touch
Upon the lute doth ravish human sense;
Spenser to me, whose deep conceit is such
As, passing all conceit, needs no defence. 120
Thou lovest to hear the sweet melodious sound
That Phoebus' lute, the queen of music, makes;
And I in deep delight am chiefly d'vird
Whenas himself to singing he betakes.
One god is god of both, as poets feign;
One knight loves both, and both in thee remain.

IX.
Fair was the morn when the fair queen of love,

Paler for sorrow than her milk-white dove,
SONNETS TO SUNDRY NOTES OF MUSIC.

[xvi.]
It was a lording's daughter, the fairest one of three,
That liked of her master as well as well might be,
Till looking on an Englishman, the fair'st that eye could see,
Her fancy fell a-turning.
Long was the combat doubtful that love with love did fight,
To leave the master loveless, or kill the gallant knight:
To put in practive either, alas, it was a spite
Unto the silly damsels!
But one must be refused; more mickle was the pain
That nothing could be used to turn them both to gain,
For of the two the trusty knight was wounded with disdain:
Alas, she could not help it!
Thus art with arms contending was victor of the day,
Which by a gift of learning did bear the maid away:
Then, lullaby, the learned man hath got the lady gay;
For now my song is ended.

XVII.
On a day, alack the day!
Love, whose month was ever May,
Spied a blossom passing fair,
Playing in the wanton air:
Through the velvet leaves the wind,
All unseen, gan passage find;
That the lover, sick to death,
Wish'd himself the heaven's breath,
"Air," quoth he, "th' cheeks may blow;
Air, would I might triumph so!
But, alas! my hand hath sworn Ne'er to pluck thee from thy thorn:
Vow, alack! for youth unmeet:
Youth, so apt to pluck a sweet:
Thou for whom love would swear
Juno but an Ethiope were;
And deny himself for love,
Turning mortal for thy love;

[xviii.]
My flocks feed not,
My ewes breed not,
My rams speed not,
All is amiss:

Were I with her, the night would post too soon;
But now are minutes added to the hours;
To spite me now, each minute seems a moon;
Yet not for me, shine sun to succour flowers!
Pack night, peep day; good day, of night now borrow:
Short, night, to-night, and length thyself to-morrow.

Love's denying,
Faith's denying,
Heart's renying,
Causer of this.
All my merry jigs are quite forgot,
All my lady's love is lost, God wot:
Where her faith was firmly fix'd in love,
There a nay is placed without remove.
One silly cross
Wrought all my loss:
O frowning Fortune, cursed, fickle dame!
For now I see
Inconstancy
More in women than in men remain.

In black mourn I,
All fears scorn I,
Love hath forlorn me,
Living in thrall:
Heart is bleeding,
All help needing,
O cruel speeding,
Fraughted with gall.
My shepherd's pipe can sound no deal;
My wether's bell rings doleful knell;
My curtail dog, that wont to have play'd,
Plays not at all, but seems afraid;
My sighs so deep
Procure to weep,
In howling wise, to see my doleful plight.
How sighs resound
Through heartless ground,
Like a thousand vanquish'd men in bloody fight!

Clear wells spring not,
Sweet birds sing not,
Green plants bring not
Forth their dye;
Herds stand weeping,
Flocks all sleeping,
Nymphs back peeping
Fearfully:
All our pleasure known to us poor swains,
All our merry meetings on the plains,
All our evening sport from us is fled,
All our love is lost, for Love is dead.
Farewell, sweet lass,
Thy like ne'er was
For a sweet content, the cause of all my moan:
Poor Corydon
Must live alone;
Other help for him I see that there is none.
When as thine eye hath chose the dame,
And stall'd the deer that thou shouldst strike, 300
Let reason rule things worthy blame,
As well as fancy partial might:
Take counsel of some wiser head,
Neither too young nor yet unwise.

And when thou comest thy tale to tell,
Smooth not thy tongue with filed talk,
Lest she some subtle practice smell,—
A cripple soon can find a halt;—
But plainly say thou lovest her well,
And set thy person forth to sell.

What though her frowning brows be bent,
Her cloudy looks will calm ere night:
And then too late she will repent
That thus dissembled her delight;
And twice desire, ere it be day,
That which with scorn she put away.

What though she strive to try her strength,
And ban and bawl, and say thee nay,
Her feeble force will yield at length,
When craft hath taught her thus to say,
‘Had women been so strong as men,
In faith, you had not had it then.’

And to her will frame all thy ways:
Spare not to spend, and chiefly there
Where thy desert may merit praise,
By ringing in thy lady’s ear:
The strongest castle, tower, and town,
The golden bullet beats it down.

Serve always with assured trust,
And in thy suit be humble true;
Unless thy lady prove unjust,
Press never thou to choose anew:
When time shall serve, be thou not slack
To proffer, though she put thee back.

The wiles and guiles that women work,
Dissembled with an outward show,
The tricks and toys that in them lurk,
The cock that treads them shall not know.
Have you not heard it said full oft,
A woman’s say doth stand for nought?

Think women still to strive with men,
To sin and never for to saint:
There is no heaven, by holy then,
When time with age doth them attain.
Were kisses all the joys in bed,
One woman would another wed.

But, soft! enough, too much, I fear;
Lest that my mistress hear my song,
She will not stick to round me i’ the ear,
To teach my tongue to be so long;
Yet will she blush, here be it said,
To hear her secrets so bewray’d.

Live with me, and be my love,
And we will all the pleasures prove
That hills and valleys, dales and fields,
And all the craggy mountains yields.

There will we sit upon the rocks,
And see the shepherds feed their flocks,
By shallow rivers, by whose falls
Melodious birds sing madrigals.

There will I make thee a bed of roses,
With a thousand fragrant posies,
A cap of flowers, and a kirtle
Embroider’d all with leaves of myrtle.

A belt of straw and ivy buds,
With coral clasps and amber studs;
And if these pleasures may thee move,
Then live with me and be my love.

LOVE’S ANSWER.

If that the world and love were young,
And truth in every shepherd’s tongue,
These pretty pleasures might me move
To live with thee and be thy love.

As it fell upon a day
In the merry month of May,
Sitting in a pleasant shade
Which a grove of myrtles made,
Beasts did leap, and birds did sing,
Trees did grow, and plants did spring;
Every thing did banish mean,
Save the nightingale alone:
She, poor bird, as all forlorn,
Lean’d her breast up-till a thorn,
And there sung the dolefulst ditty,
That to hear it was great pity:
’Tis, fie, fie, fie,’ now would she cry;
’Tereu, tereu!’ by and by;
That to hear her so complain,
Scarce I could from tears refrain;
For her griefs, so lively shown,
Made me think upon mine own.
Ah, thought I, thou morn’st in vain!
None takes pity on thy pain:
Senseless trees they cannot hear thee;
Ruthless beasts they will not cheer thee:
King Pandion he is dead;
All thy friends are lapp’d in lead;
All thy fellow birds do sing,
Careless of thy sorrowing.
Even so, poor bird, like thee,
None alive will pity me.
Wist as fickle Fortune smiled,
Thou and I were both beguiled.
Every one that flatters thee
Is no friend in misery.
Words are easy, like the wind:
Faithful friends are hard to find:
Every man will be thy friend
Whilst thou hast herewith to spend;
But if store of crowns be scant,
No man will supply thy want.
If that one be prodigal,
Bountiful they will him call,
And with such-like flattering,
‘Pity but he were a king.’

THE PHOENIX AND THE TURTLE.

If he be addihto vice, He that is thy friend indeed, Quickly him they will entice; He will help thee in thy need; If to women he be bent, If thou sorrow, he will weep; They have at commandement: If thou wake, he cannot sleep; But if Fortune once do frown, Thus of every grief in heart Then farewell his great renown; He with thee doth bear a part. They that fawn'd on him before These are certain signs to know Use his company no more. Faithful friend from flattering foe.

THE PHOENIX AND THE TURTLE.

Let the bird of loudest lay, Property was thus appalled, On the sole Arabian tree, That the self was not the same; Herald sad and trumpet be, Single nature's double name To whose sound chaste wings obey. Neither two nor one was called

But thou shrieking harbinger, Reason, in itself confounded, Foul precurrer of the fiend, Saw division grow together, Augur of the fever's end, To themselves yet either neither, To this troop come thou not near! Simple were so well compounded,

From this session interdict That it cried, How true a twain Every fowl of tyrant wing, Saw division grow together, Save the eagle, feather'd king: To themselves yet either neither, Keep the obsequy so strict. Simple were so well compounded,

Let the priest in surplice white, That defunctive music can, Be the death-divining swan, Lest the requiem lack his right. That which hath reason, reason none, And thou treble-dated crow, If what parts can so remain. That thy sable gend'rs makest Whereupon it made this threnos With the breath thou givest and takest, To the phoenix and the dove, 'Mongst our mourners shalt thou go. Co-supremes and stars of love, Here the anthem doth commence: As chorus to their tragic scene.

Here the anthem doth commence: Beauty, truth, and rarity, Love and constancy is dead; Grace in all simplicity, Phœnix and the turtle fled Here enclosed in cinders lies. In a mutual flame from hence. Death is now the phoenix' nest; So they loved, as love in twain And the turtle's loyal breast Had the essence but in one; To eternity doth rest, Two distincts, division none; Leaving no posterity: Number there in love was slain. 'Twas not their infirmity, Hearts remote, yet not asunder; It was married chastity. Distance, and no space was seen leaving no posterity: 'Twixt the turtle and his queen: To this urn let those repair But in them it were a wonder. So between them love did shine, That the turtle saw his right To this urn let those repair Flaming in the phoenix' sight; Beauty brag, but 'tis not she; Either was the other's mine. Truth and beauty buried be. For these dead birds sigh a prayer.
